PROCEEDINGS

OF THE

HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY

During the Second Session of the Twenty-Sixth General Assembly

The Evening Telegram, Ltd.

Session 1925

Begun and holden at St. John's in the said Island on Wednesday, the eighteenth day of February, Anno Domini, Nineteen Hundred and Twenty-five, being in the Fifteenth year of the reign of His Majesty our Sovereign Lord George, by the Grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and of the British Dominions beyond the Seas, King, Defender of the Faith, Emperor of India.

WEDNESDAY, Feb. 18th, 1925.

His Excellency having fixed the hour at which he proposed to open the present Session of the Legislative at three of the clock in the afternoon of this Wednesday, the eighteenth day of February inst., the Members of the House of Assembly met in the Assembly Room at a quarter to three of the clock in the afternoon, when Mr. Speaker took the Chair.

Hon. W. S. Monroe and Wm. C. Winsor, Esquire, duly elected Members for the Electoral District of Bonavista, having been sworn by the Commissioners of His Excellency the Governor, were introduced by the Honourables W. J. Higgins and Sir John Crosbie, and took their seats.

At Three of the clock a message from His Excellency, the Governor, was delivered by the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod, commanding the immediate attendance of Mr. Speaker and the House in the Council Chamber.

Whereupon, Mr. Speaker and the House attended His Excellency in the Council Chamber; and being returned to the Assembly Room, Mr. Speaker informed the House that when in attendance upon His Excellency in the Council Chamber, His Excellency had been pleased to make a gracious Speech to both Branches of the Legislature, a copy of which for greater accurcy he had obtained, and then read to the House as follows:

Mr. President and Honourable Gentlemen of the Legislative Council:

Mr. Speaker and Gentlemen of the Honourable House of Assembly:

We meet under more prosperous and gratifying conditions than existed in this Colony when the Legislature was prorogued.

The Codfishery of last year was prosecuted successfully and the products disposed of at the best prices known in the history of the Colony (exclusive of the abnormal war years). Those who engaged in this staple industry of the country reaped a reward which renewed their faith and interest in it.

The construction of great works upon the Humber has proceeded with remarkable speed and success, many men are now engaged in cutting wood for manufacture into pulp and paper, and it is confidently expected that early in the approaching Spring, manufacturing will begin. Negotiations are proceeding, it is understood, for the promotion of a pulp and paper industry on the Gander River, and hope is justly entertained, that construction will commence before we meet again in Session.

Conditions in the Mining industry at Bell Island have not been satisfactory. Disagreements have occurred between the Company and its workmen. Before they arose my Government had felt constrained to make concessions to the Company concerning its contractual obligations in order to procure increased employment for labourers. Arrangements have been made to proceed with work on former conditions, pending a conference between the Company, the miners, and the Government.

My Government recently sent a delegation to Canada to discuss suggestions regarding a settlement, by negotiation, of what is popularly known as the "Labrador Boundary Question." They met representatives of the Dominion of Canada and the Province of Quebec, and discussed with them the economic aspects of the matter, confidentially, frankly and fully, and without prejudice to either party, and the discussion has been continued by correspondence since the return of the delegates. No agreement has been completed, and none may be, but until a tentative arrangement has been made, or the possibility of making one abandoned, it is not deemed expedient to inform you more fully of the proceedings. It is hardly necessary to add, I hope, that the Colony will not be committed by my Government to any settlement of this matter without the prior consent of the Legislature. The gratifying warmth of the reception given to the delegates in Canada testified to the extreme friendliness of Canadians to the people of this Colony.

Following upon the Hague Award, defining the liberty of the inhabitants of the United States to take fish on the Treaty Coast, so called, of Newfoundland, an agreement was made in 1910 for the settlement by arbitration of claims by the United States, based on alleged wrongful acts of the authorities of this Colony in respect of American fishing vessels. Statement and Answer were filed in 1914, but proceedings were interrupted by the Great War. A revised claim was filed on the first of August last, and a final Answer on the 31st January last. It is expected that a hearing by Arbitrators will take place in Washington this year.

A contract has been made for the construction of a Steamer to ply on the Port aux Basques-North Sydney route. It was given to a Company incorporated in Holland, but partly owned and managed by British people. It would have been more agreeable if a contract could properly have been given for construction in a British Shipyard, but the price asked, and the impossibility of getting guarantees for early completion, practically compelled the acceptance of the Contract which has been made.

Unemployment in the Colony has greatly decreased by comparison with all the years since the Great War ceased, and it is not now abnormal. There are many persons who for one reason or another are out of work and it has been suggested that public money should be expended to provide employment. Experience has shown that work at public expense cannot be productively engaged in at this season and my Government has decided therefore not to authorise it at present.

Very disturbing discoveries have been made by a Commission engaged in an enquiry concerning expenditures for charitable institutions and services. Laxness of administration, and imposition by the non-deserving, have been proven, and there is evidence that the homely virtues of self-reliance and self-respect have been diminishing. Public expenditure for the relief of the sick and afflicted is meant for the helpless poor, and the conduct of those who selfishly trade upon this charity is highly reprehensible. Stricter rules and closer observance must be insisted upon. Good results from the enquiry have already been observed.

The services of a Postal Service expert, with great experience in Canada, have been obtained, to aid in a reform in the Postal Service of the Colony, in which conditions have existed of a nature very injurious to public interests. The Service is over-manned and under-worked, and much greater efficiency must be obtained at less cost. It is not possible to reform a Service so demoralized in a short time, but drastic reforms have been proposed, and will be insisted on.

Agricultural interests are having the attention of my Government and it is hoped that a Committee of practical Farmers, now in conference with the Minister, may suggest some wise legislation for the promotion of this important industry.

Mr. Speaker and Gentlemen of the Honourable House of Assembly:

The finances of the Colony are in a highly satisfactory condition. Revenue has increased, and expenditure has decreased, and there will be a surplus of ordinary Revenue over Expenditure on current account in the financial year, 1924-25. Tenders for a Loan of Four Million Dollars ($4,000,000), part of what was authorised last year, have recently been received, and the rates quoted have been most satisfactory. Part of this Loan will be expended in Great Britain for the purchase of rails, and the Imperial Trade Facilities Board has undertaken to pay part of the interest for five years on the amount so expended, with the stipulation that the Loan be raised in England.

The expenditure for many years past have so exceeded the votes made for them as to show that great carelessness, at least, has been displayed by those who prepared the Estimates. The provision you will be asked to make for the coming year will be calculated with great care, and will in the due course be laid before you.

Just prior to the coming into office of my present Government an irregular order was issued purporting to remove Customs duties from gasolene, flour, beef, pork and molasses. My present Government, prudently desiring to amply provide for the Colony's needs, did not feel able to legalize all the reductions which had been announced, but struck off the duty on gasolene and flour. It is pleasant, therefore, to be able now to announce that you will be asked to repeal the duties on beef and pork, and kerosene oil, a most timely reduction when the prices of these articles are increasing.

Owing to the increased cost of shipbuilding, the bounty offered by the Government has not induced the construction of many new vessels, and as a large proportion of our present fishing fleet are in need of repairs, a measure providing a bounty for the encouragement of such repairs will be submitted for your approval.

The taxation of Banks doing business in Newfoundland has been excessive and unfair. You will be asked to reduce it. The successful prosecution of the trade of the Colony depends very largely upon the continuance of adequate banking facilities and the splendid banking institutions in our midst must be fairly treated.

An examination of the Dry Dock in this port, made by an expert engineer, has revealed the need of extensive repairs, and of partial rebuilding, and the cost will be large. Proposals will be made for your consideration.

War time demands led to the enactment of the Business Profits Tax Act, 1917, and the Income Tax Act, 1918; the former has been repealed, the latter amended. Both laws worked great hardships, and have been unsatisfactory in practice. Income Tax returns have not been made by many, under pressure only by others, and payments of assessments have been evaded, delayed or refused in so many cases that unfairness has resulted to the honest observers of the law. It is a form of taxation unsuited to this country. It restrains investment of capital in business, and though apparently paid by the so-called well-to-do, it is passed on to the consumer, when paid by those successful in business, while hampering severely, and sometimes destructively, those who have not prospered. Profits on the business of last year often come to be added to the losses of this. Simplicity of taxation is much to be desired in this Colony, in order to get back, as far as posible, to the good old days of comfort for our people, and therefore a Bill to suspend Income Tax as and from the commencement of 1925 will be introduced. An endeavour will be made to meet the loss to the revenue by the practice of honesty and economy in public expenditure.

Mr. President and Honourable Gentlemen of the Legislative Council:

Mr. Speaker and Gentlemen of the Honourable House of Assembly:

There has been no Redistribution of seats in the Assembly for many years. The constituencies marked out in 1832, upon the grant of representative institutions, have undergone minor changes only. The Census of 1921 revealed inequalities and unfairness, the population of some electoral districts being shown to be half as many for two members as others had for one. A Redistribution Bill has therefore been prepared for your consideration and will be introduced at an early date, so that a measure may be enacted at this Session to go into effect upon the dissolution of this Assembly. It has been vary carefully prepared and will, I believe, be generally acceptable. It divides the Island into thirty-four districts privileged to return one representative each, and three districts to return two men each, and so arranged as to maintain representation of the various interests as formerly. It would be difficult to exaggerate the good results which may be expected to flow from this measure.

You provided generously in your last Session for the construction of roads intended especially to promote tourist traffic and generally to develop the Colony, affording local accommodation incidentally. It was not possible to commence construction last year, but some surveying has been done, a plan for work this year has been made, and construction will be vigorously undertaken as soon as the weather will permit. A Bill will be introduced for the creation of a Highroads Commission, charged with the construction and maintenance of roads considered to be of first importance, designated from time to time for that purpose by the Government, and the Chairmanship of this Commission will be conferred on the Government Engineer, with the object that the methods adopted in roadbuilding will no longer be haphazard and inefficient.

It is obvious that if tourist traffic is to come to this country, revision in Motor Traffic laws is essential, bringing them into harmony with those of the United States and Canada, from which such traffic must come. The need of stricter and fuller laws in this relation has long been evident, and a Bill for this purpose, based upon the latest and completest laws of adjoining countries, will be introduced. It will confer authority over the Motor Traffic upon the Highroads Commission, upon the ground that as that Commission is to control the construction and maintenance of highroads, it must necessarily control motor traffic over them.

It has been usual in newly discovered countries for government to expand upwards, from Settlement, Village, and Town, to State and national organization, and for the practice of the control of local affairs to train the people for participation in the management of matters of concern. Here, it has been otherwise, participation in administration having been but slowly conceded by central authority, and a consequence has been that the general government of the Colony is expected to provide, control and pay for public services which should be instituted, managed and paid for locally. It is proposed, therefore, to ask your consideration of a wide general measure for the incorporation of municipalities, which can from time to time be made applicable to suitable areas by proclamation of the Governor in Council, and thus the feasibility of self-government in such areas will be given a trial under favourable conditions. The residents of the incorporated places will thereby be able to vie with others in making their home towns desirable and attractive.

I commend the duties of the Session to your assiduous care and pray that the guidance of Divine Providence may attend your deliberations.

Hon. the Minister of Finance gave notice that he would on to-morrow move the House nito Committee of the Whole to consider the following resolutions:—

RESOLVED,—That "The Revenue Act, 1905," and the amendments thereto, be further amended by transferring to the free list under Schedule B. the following items, viz:—

"Beef when salted in barrels, including duty on barrels."

"Pork in barrels or half barrels, viz: Mess, Family, Prime, Mess, Rump, Extra Prime, Bean Clear, Butt and Ham, including duty on packages—per brl., Belly, Back or Family Mess or Loin Pork, including duty on packages."

"Kerosene Oil, and the package in which it is imported."

RESOLVED FURTHER,—That the Act 15, Geo. V., Cap. XXI, be amended by adding to Schedule A. thereto the following words:

"Beef when salted in barrels, including duty on barrels."

"Pork in barrels or half barrels, viz: Mess, Family, Prime Mess, Rump, Extra Prime, Bean Clear, Butt and Ham, including duty on packages."

"Belly, Back or Family Mess or Loin Pork, including duty on packages."

"Kerosene Oil and the package in which it is imported."

MR. CAHILL—Mr. Speaker and Honourable Gentlemen of the House of Assembly, I rise for the purpose of proposing that a Committee of this House be appointed to draft an Address in Reply to the Speech from the Throne, but before formally putting this motion I would like to make a few brief comments on a number of important and far-reaching matters which are mentioned in that Speech.

It is a matter of interest to note that in having a winter session the Government are following the precedent and reviving the practice of earlier years when the House of Assembly was always convened in February month. Of late years expediency and opportunism have often dictated otherwise, but the present Government, realizing that a Session of this House in the month of February is in the best interest of the fisheries, of trade, and of the Country generally, have reverted to the old and proper custom.

A successful Codfishery with high prices realized for our staple product makes for the general prosperity of Neewfoundland perhaps more than anything else, and it is a source of very great gratification to the Government, as it must be to those immediately concerned in this industry, and, as a matter of fact, to the Country generally, that last year's fishery was prosecuted so successfully.

Mr. Speaker, the public has recently been made aware that conditions in the mining industry on Bell Island have not been satisfactory. In fact there seems to have been trouble of various kinds between the Company and its workmen ever since the merger some years ago of the two former Companies into one large corporation known as The British Empire Steel Corporation, more familiarly known as "Besco." Newfoundland workmen are undoubtedly amongst the best in the world, competent, adaptable, dependable, not given as a rule to discontent, or strikes, or anything of that kind, and I think it can be depended upon that in any dispute with the Company the interests of the Bell Island miners and workmen will be most carefully guarded and looked after by the present Government. Of course, the legitimate rights of capital and the Company must also be protected, and fair and reasonable devices and regulations cannot be denied or prescribed, no more than excessive or unreasonable demands on the part of the men can be supported, or uncalled for strikes and the introduction of "Red" or Bolshevik methods condoned or allowed. It must simply be remembered that the miners and workmen on Bell Island are not mere slaves, nor can they be treated as such. They are our brother Newfoundlanders, entitled to fair wages for an honest day's work under proper conditions, and to that extent I think they can rest assured that they will be supported to the fullest possible measure by the Government.

Reference was made in the Speech from the Throne to the work of the Delegation sent to Canada in connection with the Labrador boundary. Whlist nothing definite has yet resulted from that mission I am confident that the visit of the Delegates produced many good results and that these results will be made apparent in the near future. Incidentally this visit gave the delegates the opportunity to meet the Prime Minister of Canada and many of his Cabinet Ministers and to take up and discuss with them various matters mutually affecting Canada and Newfoundland. The warmth of the reception tendered by the Canadian people to our Delegates was as much appreciated by them, I am sure, as it has been by those whom they represented on that occasion, namely, the people of Newfoundland.

Mr. Speaker and Gentlemen of the Honourable House of Assembly, after the lapse of some eight months the slogan under which the present Government was elected to power has by no means become with them a dead letter. On the contrary, it is just as much an article of their creed and practice now as formerly. You will rememl er this slogan was "Clean up, keep clean, and a square deal to all," and so far the Government have not failed in one jot or tittle of that promise, nor do they intend to do so in the future. You have read in the daily press of the "clean up" in the Department of Finance and Customs, and of the reforms and improvements instituted by the present Minister, Hon. Sir John C. Crosbie. That these reforms, in conjunction with other things, have already resulted in the pleasing announcement in the Speech from the Throne of a surplus of revenue over expenditure for the present year must be as gratifying to the Minister as it is to the Government, and will be to the public generally. But a clean-up and reorganization was also found to be necessary in another Government department somewhat akin to the Customs, namely, the Postal Service. Many reforms have already been introduced there by the Minister, my colleague for Harbour Main District, the Hon. William Woodford, and at the present time a Postal Service expert from Canada is engaged in a thorough examination of the whole service. His recommendations and suggestions will be faithfully carried out by the Government, and the general public, and the business public in particular, can count upon having within a reasonable time an up-to-date and efficient Postal Service.

Mr. Speaker, as an ordinary layman, unacquainted with farming, it has been a matter of wonder to me for many years why farming has not progressed more favourably and been taken up more extensively in this country. I could never understand, for instance, why it should be necessary for Newfoundland to import such very large stocks of potatoes, turnips and other vegetables from outside the country. I should have thought that this country could produce at least enough of these vegetables to meet the local consumption. The present energetic Minister of Agriculture, Mr. W. J. Walsh, the honourable member for Placentia and St. Mary's, has already outlined many plans for the improvement of Agriculture in Newfoundland, and he is at present in conference with a committee of practical farmers. That many valuable suggestions tending to the improvement of Agriculture in Newfoundland will result from that conference I am supremely confident.

The general public, and the fishermen particularly, will be deeply interested I am sure in the announcement that the Customs' Duties on Beef, Pork and Kerosene Oil are to be repealed during the present session. Last year, owing to the disturbed state of the finances of the country and the fact that every dollar of revenue was needed in order to cover expenditure, the Government, much as they would have liked to, found it impossible to remit the duties on these articles. Now, however, after some eight months of prudent economy and wise administration they happily find themselves able to remit the duties on these commodities. which they gladly do, hoping that this action will be of material help and benefit to the fishermen of the country particularly.

The splendid Banking institutions in our midst, which have proven themselves true friends of the country in times of stress, must be treated in a fair and equitable manner, so that the Banking facilities so necessary for the successful prosecution and development of the general trade of the country may be continued, and even enlarged and expanded. It has therefore been decided to slightly reduc the taxation on Banks doing business in Newfoundland, the Government being fully satisfied after careful inquiry that the taxes as levied at the present time are excessive and unfair.

Mr. Speaker and hon. gentlemen of the House of Assembly, it will be learned with general relief and satisfaction of the intention of the Government to repeal the Income Tax Act. There is no doubt that this tax, whilst apparently fair and just at first sight, was really and in actual fact not at all so. On the contrary, it was altogether unsuitable to Newfoundland. it hampered business and industry, and the peculiar circumstances and conditions are such in this country that of necessity the Act was unfair in its administration. Our friend and esteemed citizen, Capt. A. Kean, will now be able to prosecute this season's Sealfishery with a mind quite happy and contented. Might I here express the sincere hope that he and all the other gallant sealing Captains may return from this year's voyage with bumper trips. May I call attention to the closing sentence of the paragraph dealing with this matter of the Income Tax in the Speech from the Throne, which reads: "An endeavour will be made to meet the loss to the Revenue by the practice of honesty and economy in the public expenditure." I feel that the people of Newfoundland will believe and realize that this is no mere clap-trap nor empty promise, but is an honest declaration of intention on the part of the Government, and one which will be sincerely and consistently carried out.

Mr. Speaker, the present system of distribution of seats in this House of Assembly is antiquated, unfair, cumbersome, and not at all in keeping with the developments and changes of recent years. The present Government, with characteristic courage and disregard of party or practical politics, having in mind only the general good of the whole country, have determined to bring in at this session of the House a Bill dealing with this important matter. It will divide the Island into thirty-four (34) districts returning one representative each and three districts returning two men each. This measure has been given deep attention, and has been very carefully thought out. It will maintain representation of the various interests as formerly, and will I feel sure appeal to the country as an eminently sane and long waited for improvement.

So much for my remarks on matters mentioned in the Speech from the Throne, but before closing I would like to make just one other brief reference. I feel sure that our Honourable friends of the Opposition have learned with interest of, and will properly appreciate, the many important measures, carefully conceived in the best interest of the coutnry, to be introduced by the Government during this Session, and that they, as true Newfoundlanders, genuinely interested in the welfare and prosperity of their native land, will recognize the sincerity of the Government and will give these various measures their hearty support. The Honourable Leader of the Opposition is a gentleman with large and varied interests in the country. I might be permitted to describe him, and it is intended to be complimentary, as a business man first and a poliitcian second. I fully anticipate that the various measures introduced by the Government will appeal to his keen business man's mind, and that they will have his hearty support and the support of the Honourable gentlemen comprising the Opposition party. Needless to say, any reasonable suggestions or constructive criticism from the Honourable the Leader of the Opposition, or from any Honourable Member of his Party, will be heartily welcomed by the Government, and I feel confident that fair comment only, and constructive criticism only, without any reversion to mere party politics, or what may be termed "gallery play," will be furnished by the Honourable Members of the Opposition during the present Session. After all, we are all Newfoundlanders. who should be working and striving to one end, namely, the progress and happiness and prosperity of our native land.

Mr. Speaker, there are a number of important matters referred to in the Speech from the Throne with which I have not dealt. This omission, however, is deliberate, as these particular matters will be referred to by the honourable gentleman who will follow me in seconding the motion I am about to make.

Mr. Speaker, I have very great pleasure in proposing that a Committee of this House be appointed to draft an address in reply to the Speech from the Throne.

MR. W. J. BROWNE—Mr. Speaker, it gives me much pleasure this afternoon to second the motion so ably put by my honourable and learned friend who has just sat down. I feel that I am expressing the thought of every one here, when I compliment him on the able speech which he has given us, in proposing the motion you have heard. I feel Sir, that before I go on to refer to the various maters mentioned in the Gracious Speech with which His Excellency opened the House this afternoon, I should compliment the Hon. Prime Minister and his colleague the Hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries on their re-election for the District of Bonavista last October. I feel sure that to have been returned with an increased majority is not only an indication of the confidence the district places in these representatives, but is an indication of the feeling of encouragement and restored confidence of the country as a whole.

We are pleased to be able to observe that the country at this period of our time as a Government is very much better than it was when we first came into power. The general conditions of the country have been very much ameliorated. Not only have political conditions become stabilised but commercial conditions also seem to be going back to normal. And His Excellency was right in stating that we are now meeting under more prosperous circumstances than when we last prorogued. This prosperity is due to many things. I am not going to minimise the effect which that great industry recently established on the Humber has had on the general prosperity of the country. The Humber has given employment to several thousands of men and it would be absurd to attempt to take away from that industry the many benefits it has conferred. And not only have there been direct benefits to the workmen engaged but there were indirect benefits, because this money put into circulation made the wheels of industry and commerce move. It is likely that an industry of a similar kind on the Gander River may be organised during the coming year. It is a matter for profound hope. If we had industries of this kind, and the more the better, we should be able to provide against the bad years when the fishery fails. The West Coast is benefitting very largely from these industries and I trust that the hon. member for the district of St. George's is encouraging the people of that locality in the development of their agricultural possibilities.

Honourable members who are acquainted with the history of our country will remember how long and how troublesome the dispute regarding our fishery rights has been. It is now a relic of the past ages. But the award of the Hague Arbitration of 1910 ended it forever. But as most Hon. Members must remember there were some minor matters to be settled which were not settled due to the intervention of the war. For example one important matter was the fact that because of the interference of the American Senate in not passing the Bond-Hay Treaty of 1902 the Legislature of Newfoundland introduced a measure which took away from American fishing vessels certain privileges which they had enjoyed under the famous "modus vivendi." That measure was the Foreign Fishing Vessels Act of 1905. The enforcement against America's Bait Act took away many other privileges which they had previously enjoyed. As in both cases wrong was done and as the Hague award admitted certain rights which were taken away by this measure it was only fair and just that the Americans should receive some compensation for what they had lost in the interval from 1905 to the Hague award of 1910. It is very gratifying to know that this matter will be adjusted this year.

Our Government has recently closed an order for the building of a new steamer in Holland. The construction is well under way, and it will soon be in operation on the Port aux Basques-Sydney route. Some members of the Opposition may be surprised that this order was placed in Holland but I may assure them that this was the only course open to the Government and as the Speech from the Throne points out, the prices in the Old Country were prohibitive. Besides, there was no sort of guarantee from firms in the Old Country as to what time the order would be completed, because of high wages and other industrial troubles. The people of Newfoundland must not feel that we are unpatriotic in doing that because a great deal of the capital and management of the company, which has the order, is British, and many British steamship firms operating in Britain have placed orders with the same company. This being so, it would be very unfair if anybody were to suggest that the Government has done wrong in giving consideration to these very important matters.

The matter of unemployment is one which is not unknown in this country. Fortunately, because of our small population, we are not called upon to face the tremendous difficulties which arise elsewhere. However, we, Hon. Members, who are representatives for the City, have some problems which are not experienced by Hon. Members for the outports and it has been a matter of great concern not only to my colleagues and myself but also to the Executive Government and we have given the matter a great deal of thought. After consultation with the representatives of the largest unions in this country we have come to the conclusion that the expenditure of large sums of monies on relief works of the same nature as have been in operation in previous years would be ill-advised and unsatisfactory. We have come to the conclusion that in case of necessity the Government will step in and see to it that nobody will be in danger of any hardship or privation. We feel that the results will justify what we have done and prove our decision to be in the best interests of the people. We feel, too, that in a short time work will be started in St. John's which will adequately provide employment for the workingmen and also put them in a position to obtain permanent employment and enable them to provide amply for the next winter. This is not the first year that there has been unemployment. Unemployment seems to be a matter of continual recurrence. It is apparently a permanent social problem defying solution and it is a surprise to me that in former years more thought was not given to preventative measures rather than relief.

The Government has appointed a committee to investigate the Charitable Institutions. And they have discovered many discrepancies. They have been veritable gentlemen with dusters. There have been many improper practices in these institutions and the department of the Government with which they are connected. These were largely due, I think, to the excess of human nature. Many of the hon. members of this House represent outport districts, and when their constituents come to them in times of stress the hon. members do most generously by them. The result is that people of all conditions are crowding the boarding houses of the city waiting to get into the hospital. This condition of affairs is intolerable, as it prevents any proper control or administration. By the appointment of this commission, and by the knowledge which they have received in their investigation we trust that this condition which has ben so much in evidence will be eliminated in the Public Charities Department and the various institutions connected with it.

The Government is deserving of congratulations for the raising of the recent loan which was authorised by this House last year. The Government did well in not rushing to raise this loan and waiting until six months when they were able to point to a good half years operation. It may not be uninteresting for hon. members of this House to know a few figures in connection with the working of the Finance and Customs, for the six months ending Dec. 31st, 1924, and to take the revenue for this period in comparison with that of other similar periods. It exceeded the revenue of the year of 1922-23 by $363,735.00 whilst the decrease in expenditure for the same period as compared with the 1922-23 was $808,946 making a total savings on current account of $1,172,-682. And now we will take last year when perhaps the Government in power acted a little more wisely than the previous Government. The Revenue for the current year over 1923-24 shows an increase of $640,764.00 while the decrease in expenditure over the same period is $790,623.31, a total savings over 1923-24 of $1,431,388—a saving of almost one and a half millions of dollars. I think that the Hon. Minister of Finance and Customs is justly deserving of the highest congratulations on the work which he has done in his present capacity.

Another item in the speech from the throne refers to still another practice of past Governments, that of exceeding the amounts voted in this House. That is a very incorrect procedure, Mr. Speaker. When this House votes a certain amount after careful consideration it is wrong that some official of the Government should take it upon himself, or even any committee of the Government, take it upon itself, to exceed votes of this nature by any large amount. Sometimes in an emergency it is impossible to avoid doing this entirely but there have been occasions when votes have been exceeded to the extent of one and a half million dollars! I am sure that this Government intends to abandon practices of that kind and to be able with careful estimation to have no necessity of exceeding the amount which will be voted by this House.

Another matter of importance to the people of this country and particularly to the fishermen is that referring to the granting of a bounty for repairs of ships. There has been for a number of years a bounty for shipbuilding in this country and it was granted at a time when the comparative cost of building a vessel was low. During the war prices increased and since then they have not gone down so very much that it is possible to pay owners for the great expense which it is necessary to undergo. However, the Hon. Members of the Opposition are well acquainted with this matter. To help out the fisheries and to help those engaged in the shipbuilding, this measure is to be introduced immediately and give the bounty for the repairs to vessels. It will also encourage a larger number of vessels to take part in the fisheries and will give employment to that large body of tradesmen known as shipwrights.

The Dry Dock is one of the public works on which employment will be given as soon as the weather conditions will warrent. There was a vote for this work in the loan resolutions of last year of fifty thousand dollars. I was not sanguine of the adequacy of that amount but one of the honourable and gallant members went even so far as to suggest that the amount was three times as great as necessary. I say, that living in St. John's West as I was, I had no illusions about the amount necessary to spend on this utility before it could be put in proper shape.

The Dock has been in need of repair for a considerable number of years, and if we are going to take any steps to furnish the Dry Dock to accommodate vessels that become disabled in mid-stream, we must be prepared to spend a large amount of money on repairs; and I consider it will be money well spent.

Another feature of the Government's programme, which has been forecasted at a previous session of the House, is the policy of encouraging tourist traffic. A large amount of money was voted for the opening up of roads to encourage tourist traffic to come here. I consider that this is a policy which will soon justify itself, and assist very considerably in increasing our revenue. Honourable members who are familiar with conditions in the neighbouring provinces of Canada will know what a very large revenue can come from tourist traffic. Honourable members who are acquainted with the provinces of Canada, for example. the Province of British Columbia. know what an incredibly large amount of revenue comes into the province through the medium of tourist traffic. I consider that we are going the right way about carrying out that policy by the establishment of a Highroads Commission under the chairmanship of the Government Engineer. Under this system the hitherto sporadic methods of road building will cease, and we will now have a better system under which we will have good road building, and good road repairing. Under the old system, one part of the country did not know what the other part was doing, and there was not one person who had devised or planned any general scheme of connected construction or repair of our roads.

In connection with the road scheme propagated by the Government there will be a revision of the motor laws. That is a matter which I think required consideration long before this. Those who are familiar with the Courts of Justice in this country will know that in places outside St. John's there does not have to be any registration of motor cars, unless the owners brought those cars into St. John's. It was quite a common occurrence to see a motor car going around in the city without any registration number. It was an anomaly, too, that a man who wished to drive a motor car in Harbour Grace would have to come to St. John's and pass an examination before the Inspector General before he would be permitted to drive it. That is an anomaly which I trust will be cleared up by this legislation. I trust also that if we are going to bring our laws into conformity with the laws of Canada and the United States, we will make it the rule of the road to go to the right, and I am sure that those Honourable Members on the other side who are familiar with the workings of the Road Commission will recognize that that is an important introduction.

Another matter of local Government is contained in the second last paragraph of His Excellency's gracious Speech from the Throne in regard to the distribution of municipalities. This is a very interesting, if new, feature. I do not know if there has been any demand made for this, but it is quite easy to see the benefits that will flow from the incorporation of municipalities. and it is obvious that there are many peculiar conditions existing now as a result of the failure to do this in the past. The large towns of this country would have a greater civic pride if they had their own little organizations, and there would be a greater desire among the people to stay in their home town, instead of abandoning the homes of their fathers to come into the city. I am looking forward with hope to the development of this new institution in this country, and I trust that ere long Grand Falls, Carbonear. Harbour Grace, and other communities of similar size that would warrant the intrdouction of municipalities. will be incorporated, and I look forward to seeing them forming the proper community spirit, and vieing with St. John's in its many activities.

Mr. Speaker, before concluding I should like to remark what I think will be the opinion of many of the Honourable Members present, that the Speech from the Throne this year is brighter than usual; and I think it will be admitted that it is very comprehensive, and has no frivolous matter introduced in it. I think I can say with confidence that this Session now opening will be one of the most important sessions of this Assembly. This session, I consier, with all its important legislation will be an historic session. The Legislation that is to be introducel appears to be of paramount importance. and it is a great honour to me to be here to-day to share in it, and I am grateful for the honour that I have to-day to be permitted to second this resolution that is now before the Chair—that a motion be passed for the formation of a Committee to draft a reply to the gracious speech which we have heard to-day from His Excellency the Governor at the opening of this session.

MR. HICKMAN—Mr. Speaker, I desire to congratulate Mr. Cahill, the mover of the Address in reply to the Speech from the Throne, with which His Excellency the Governor has opened the present Session of the Legislature. Mr. Cahill is as yet but a political boy, but I have no doubt that he has a future before him in politics. I also congratulate Mr. Browne, the member for St. John's West, on his excellent address in seconding the motion in reference to the Speech from the Throne.

The Speech from the Throne contains a great many things. There is scarcely anything that it does not contain. The only thing that I am surprised to find is that it does not contain any reference to the recent eclipse of the sun.

For those who are not familiar with the proceedings of the House of Assembly, and are attending here now for the first time, I might say that such a speech as this is written by the Government to boost up their cause. It is not written by the Governor, but by the Government, and placed in the hands of His Excellency to read, and whatever they put in that speech His Excellency has to read. Therefore they try to bolster up their cause by the Speech from the Throne. You must not believe everything you hear, and not believe half you see. If you were to take seriously everything that is contained in that speech, I am sure that you would see a great deal of good in Newfoundland for the future. But this speech has yet to be pulled to pieces by the members of the Opposition.

The first opportunity the members of the Opposition have to see or hear that speech is when it is read by His Excellency in the Council. The Government members see it and hear it, but the members of the Opposition do not have that privilege. They have to wait until the speech has been read, and then they have to give their comments on it.

There are a great many subjects contained in this Speech which can be criticized, but taking this speech as it is before me now and going down through it, I will only be able to touch on certain matters, as I do not now want to delay the House. Later we will be able to discuss the Speech in full.

One matter here which has been very much stressed by the two gentlemen who spoke and is also very prominent in the Speech from the Throne is the contract for the new steamer which has been placed in Holland. Those who have listened to the speeches made have seen and heard how the speakers have stressed that point, and have sought to excuse the placing of that contract in Holland, where it will be carried out and constructed by probably half Germans. The excuse given is the saving. I doubt very much if there is any saving. We have been told to-day in the speech that the loan has been placed in England because the Trade Facilities Board will pay some of the interest on the loan. If the Trade Facilities Board is prepared to pay the interest on the loan, that same Board would no doubt be prepared to pay the interest on the cost of constructing the ship in England, and that saving would be very much more than the saving we are now led to believe the Government has made on that contract.

In reference to the Profits Tax and Income Tax which the Government proposes removing—this no doubt is a good move on the part of the Government, and it is a department that should be abolished in the interests of trade. It is a pity that the Government thought fit to make an attack on Sir Edgar Bowring through the Courts, and took all sort of trouble to collect from him income tax on money on which he had already paid income tax in England. Sir Edgar Bowring is a philanthropist of great wealth, of which he has given to this country liberally, and he is now driven from his home, and forced to resign his seat in the Legislative Council. He is a man, as I say, of great wealth, and no doubt he intended in the future to leave large legacies to the country in which he was born. This man is paraded through the Courts in St. John's. He has been compelled to resign his seat in the Upper House, and he has given instructions to his agent to sell his house in Topsail. He kept his house at Topsail, and employed a few servants to take care of it for him, and that is why he is made subject to this income tax, and is compelled to pay it.

Therefore I say it is very regrettable that a man who is so important and has such extensive interests here should have been so badly treated in his own country. One of the speakers has stated that the Government proposes to reduce the taxes on the Banks. I do not know what these taxes are, but I know from the financial papers published in Montreal that all the Banks which have branches here pay 16 per cent. on the money invested. Therefore, I think they ought to be able to pay a little here. I am not able to give particulars of this matter just now, but hope to be able to do so later. The Honorable Member for St. John's West. Mr. Browne, has stressed the point of the Government having saved 1½ millions since they came into existence. If they have saved this sum, why are there so many hungry people walking the streets to-day? Why have they not found some means of employment for them? There are many things that might have been taken up to give these people help. Those who are getting the dole. are driven only by necessity, to accept it. The dole was never intended for any but the halt, the lame and the blind, and not those who are willing to work. If you boast of the saving of 1½ millions, why don't you help out those who do not wish to apply to the Charities Department for the dole. We have yet to find out where the saving of revenue comes in and to discover what the saving will be after the salaries of the increased number of officials appointed in the various departments since the Government got in have been paid. It is common knowledge that there have been many increases made and that departments are overmanned. It has also come before my notice during the last few months that many dismissals have been made of men who have given long years of service to the Government. I know of one man in Harbour Grace District with 15 years' service who has been dismissed, but I do not know what side he voted on. Last year shortly before the closing of the House the Hon. the Prime Minister promised that no man would be dismissed unless he took an active part on some particular side. Now, Mr. Speaker, in reference to the Tourist Traffic. I think the most important step is the building of an up-to-date hotel. No tourists will come to Newfoundland unless they have some place to stop at. The provinces of British Columbia and Quebec, the revenues of which we have heard so much of this afternoon, are plentifully supplied with hotels. and that must be our beginning here. Before we waste any money on roads or regulations for auto traffic it is necessary to have accommodation for the people who will come here. I notice too, Mr. Speaker, that there is nothing in the Speech from the Throne in reference to the Railway. Last year we suggested that the estimates of the Railway be included with the others. In reply the Hon. the Prime Minister said it would be very difficult to do this as it would be hard to know what the profits of the Railway would be from one time to another. The same applies to some other departments. We must insist on having this information this year before the Estimates are passed. All the people engaged on the railway are civil servants and we must have these estimates to prevent the railway becoming a dumping ground and also to see what additions and changes to the staff are made. Our duty, as an Opposition, is to know exactly how the railway is conducted and to safeguard it for the people we represent. There are many other subjects, Mr. Speaker, I might dwell on now, but I do not wish to cause delay and will reserve comment till a later date when the House meets again.

MR. WARREN—Mr. Speaker, as a rule it is usual for the leader of each party to take part in the formal proceedings connected with the opening of the House, and, modest as I am, I cannot forget that I am the leader of a party. It is true the party is not so strong in numbers as those I see around me, but this I can congratulate myself on; my party went to the constituencies and came back 100 per cent. strong. I not only take it, Mr. Speaker, that I represent those who voted for me, but by the correspondence I have received, I take it I represent an independent body of opinion outside the House. The man who votes for a party is not always a hidebound politician and sometimes he has an independent mind and likes to have his opinions aired in the House, even if by a man not bound to either side. Therefore I speak for the man in the street who as he sees affairs move along finds there are certain questions he would like to ask. While I do not to-day wish to criticize I would like to point out that there are some reflections that have occurred to the "man in the street." I would like Mr. Speaker, to add my congratulations to those of the Hon. Leader of the Opposition to the gentlemen who so ably moved and seconded the Reply to the Speech from the Throne. I thank goodness that I was saved the ordeal but the Hon. the Prime Minister made no mistake in leaving it in the hands of these gentlemen. Mr. Cahill—I was going to say is not young in years —is young in politics, and I hope he will long be spared to do honor to this House. Mr. Browne has already won a reputation as an orator and he well sustained it by his effort here this evening. I know the ordeal of speaking from a set text, as I have had the experience, but we on this side make our own text. I also join in congratulating the Hon. the Prime Minister and the Minister of Marine and Fisheries on their victory in the bye-election in Bonavista Bay. They found a doughty opponent, but defeated him, and are worthy of congratulation. Those who were present at the ceremonies in the Upper House must have noticed three new faces, and three newly filled chairs there. I saw Mr. Fred Alderdice, Dr. J. A. Robinson and Mr. C. P. Ayre in the seats of the mighty for the first time, and I want to congratulate the Government on the appointment of these gentlemen. Mr. Alderdice will prove a valuable addition to the Upper House, he is very well known in the mercantile world, and I am especially interested in the other two members of the Legislative Council, as I offered them the seats, when I was Prime Minister but was not able to bring it to fruitition. I not only congratulate them but the Hon. the Prime Minister on their appointment to positions in our legislative halls. Now, Mr. Speaker, referring to the "man in the street" and thinking particularly of the "man in the street" on the West Coast, we must remember the disaster which recently overtook that West Coast and I am going to refer to it briefly, not so much as it affects my district as the one next it, but to point out that the appeal for assistance of the people affected has not met with the assistance that it should have. We have heard this afternoon a lot about unemployment and the Government devoting 1½ millions towards relief and I understand they are giving out a dole.

Now let me point out to this House that those men who lost their lives in that West Coast disaster a few weeks ago never looked for any dole. They did not want any portion of that million and a half dollars. They go out in their boats in all sorts of weather and at all times of the year. They go and pull fish from the sea when the spray freezes before it hits their faces, and, in pursuance of that, they carry on their work without asking the Government for a cent to go to the women and children who are left without husbands and fathers. A fund was started here by the "Evening Telegram," and I am sorry to say that if a man had his house burned down or had lost a horse he would get a better response than this appeal for these West Coast people has met with. I have no newspaper to advertise in, and, as this is the only place I can assert myself, I want those within sound of my voice to try and do something. To say that only four or five hundred dollars is all that is contributed for this deserving cause is a positive disgrace to us all. I do not appeal to the Government for help; but to private individuals, and I hope that the fund will be swelled by what I have said here this afternoon.

The gentleman who proposed the Motion for the Address in Reply, Mr. Cahill, stated that the present Government had not faltered in any shape or form in carrying out the policy for which it was elected, and he said that it had a slogan of "Clean up, keep clean, and a square deal to all." It will be within the recollection of everybody in this community that we have been for the past eighteen months indulging in some political fireworks and it cannot be denied that in these political fireworks I had a little to do It is, therefore, quite clear to you, Sir, that I must take some personal interest in the matter of that slogan of "Clean up, keep clean, and a square deal to all." I was rather amused I must admit when my learned friend picked out the three departments in which this slogan had been carried into effect and how strangely he took them in order from the left of the Prime Minister. I saw the modest blushes of the Minister of Finance, the Minister of Posts and Telegraphs and the Minister of Agriculture and Mines, as the proposer referred to them. I am not in the same position as Mr. Cahill was and I do not know exactly what policy of "Clean up, keep clean, and a square deal to all" the Honourable Ministers have indulged in; but perhaps, now that the Minister of Finance has the assistance of Mr. James Gladney in his department, that I hope and trust things will go on alright. I do not say this in any disparaging spirit of Mr. Gladney. He is a personal friend of mine and I was delighted to know that his able assistance was at the beck and call of the Minister. The department of Posts and Telegraphs, I know from experience, is one that calls for thorough investigation and if there is any department that needs a duster that is the department. I know of no better wielder of the duster than the Hon. Mr. Woodford. As a reformer he stands pre-eminent and I am glad to see that he is following in the steps of his predecessor. The late Government, of which, for a few months, I was the Leader, had already become aware of the fact that the Postal Department was not all that it should be and we had already instituted some reforms there. We had suspicions that things were not altogether right there and we had, as some members of the present Government know, put that department down as one to be investigated and enquired into by an independent outside Tribunal, and as far as I can see those steps taken by the late Government have been cancelled and the services of Colonel Ross have been invoked, but more with regard to the efficiency of the Posts and Telegraphs system rather than exposing to the public view and the public sight those who were not doing their work, as it was alleged to the Government at the time that matters were not going on as they might have and should have. I do not say that any officials were personally liable for the conduct of the department, but they were liable for some of their actions there.

The Department of Agriculture and Mines is taking steps to obtain from farmers some idea of a National Agricultural policy. In that my friend the Minister is following the footsteps of Mr. Baldwin and Mr. Wood in England; but I want to point out to the Minister that he must go farther than the farmers in and around St. John's to help him establish that policy. The farmers in St. John's have a limited market here. They have their own methods and, I am sure, they cannot advise men in their garden in the outports and I hope that the Minister will take into his confidence those outport folks who are trying to farm and trying to grow vegetables and other products referred to by the member for Hr. Main and obtain some advice from them.

The Leader of the Opposition stated that the Speech from the Throne contained pretty well everything except a reference to the eclipse of the sun. I might say that the Speech was remarkable for two reasons, firstly, for its great length and secondly because it was so radical, and, as far as I am concerned, the proposed legislation which is foreshadowed in the latter part of the Speech, I am sure, will meet with the approval of every man on the street.

I started to talk a few minutes ago about the slogan of the Government Party and I want to say that it is not in keeping with the slogan they went to the country on. I do not ask the Government to do anything. I only say this that the man on the street wants to know—and if he does not know now he wants to known later on—why the Commission of enquiry inaugurated by the late Government of which I happened to be Leader was cancelled and why investigations into various departments that were outlined in reports to the Governments have not been proceeded with. I do not say this personally; but I cannot help remembering what happened a little less than a year ago when Mr. Cramm, the honourable member for Bay de Verde, got up and proposed a vote of want of confidence. He said nothing against the then Government. What he said was against me. He said that I only carried on the investigations sufficiently to get my own leader. If that is true, what has been done by the present Government of which the same Mr. Cramm is an Executive member; if it was not true there was no justification for saying it and no justification for the Government joining him to carry out that vote of want of confidence. Now as far as my connection with the Squires Government is concerned, I say this, that, at all events, whatever the shortcomings of that Government were, I do not think that any Government put their cards on the table and subjected themselves to exposure as that Government did. I say nothing of individual members of that Government, but I talk of that Government as a Government.

I am also reminded that during the Squires administration a Royal Commission was appointed to carry on what is known as the "Woodford Affidavit Enquiry." That enquiry was proceeded with without any undue delay. Later on Sir William Coaker was accused of something wrong about Government salt and a Royal Commission of Enquiry dealt with the matter. Subsequently charges were made against other members of that Government and proceeded with.

Take the Auditor General's Department. It is apparent to anybody and it is to the man on the street that thousands of dollars have disappeared from the public chest. I say nothing of the officials . The Auditor General is a perfectly capable man. But there is something wrong with the system by which thousands of dollars disappear, apparently without anybody knowing. I hope the Government will, at an early stage, engage the services of some expert chartered accountant ,to try and put our system right. Now the Leader of the Opposition has referred to the question of income tax, in which Sir Edgar Bowring was involved. I only refer to it casually for a particular reason. In a certain sense the late Government was responsible for the non-collection of that, and thus it has been made especially hard on Sir Edgar. I do not purpose to debate the case, but I want to say this, when I was Minister of Justice I did not think it was either legally or morally right to collect the income tax from a man whom the Government had appointed High Commissioner and who, by the terms of his commission, had to live in London. We did not collect the tax. The result was that it went on for a certain number of years, and in the end Sir Edgar was sued for quite a large amount. My point is this, that whether the Government was right or wrong in not collecting the tax, if Sir Edgar had known in the first place that he was liable for the tax, he would have rid himself of the liability then as now. I point that out to the Government for their consideration. I would like to refer to one other point, Sir, and that is raised by the learned member for St. John's West, Mr. Browne. He has referred to the large revenue which the Government has collected and to the fact that at the end of the present year we shall have a surplus of revenue over expenditure.

I would like to point out, Sir, that with the exception of the duties that are now to be taken off, the Revenue Act is the same as that proposed by the late Government. The present Government was appointed to office in June, 1924, and at least 80 per cent. of the estimates were those of the late Government. The present Government has been in office for 7 or 8 months and so has enjoyed the benefits of a policy which was pursued by its predecessor. They will have a chance this year to bring in their own estimates. I have a hazy idea that these estimates are not going to be as low as those passed last year. They are not going to do away with the extra amount being paid to officials by a Minute of Council; but they are going to provide for them by passing them formally through this House. I may say that I am amused at the few words in the Speech from the Throne, referring to the irregular order issued last year in taking off the duties now taken off. I have already spoken of it in the House. I desire to mention it again. It will be recalled that last year there was some agitation to get the people to go to the fisheries during 1924. There were various articles signed by the constituents of the Prime Minister. Mr. Winsor asking for a bounty on fish or the reduction of duties on articles the fishermen were supplied with. I called the merchants together and asked their opinions, and upon consideration eventually it was decided not to collect the duties on pork, beef, kero, gasolene, etc. That was done purely because we wanted to get the fishermen fishing. The House did not open until April and we wanted it settled as quickly as possible, so an order was passed. It was not wrong; the Speech from the Throne contained a statement that we were going to take the duties off for that particular reason. The mere fact that it was irregular did not prevent the fishermen getting the benefit of it. One hears a lot of political rumours these days. The man in the street has had enough of elections and cabinet-making for some while. We want tranquility, we want political peace and we want to get down to business. A good stable Government has been put in office and the man in the street desires that Government to remain stable, to pay no attention to rumours but to carry on for the benefit of the people of the country who are first to be thought of.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—It has been a common practice in years gone by on this day of the opening of the House, when the proposer and seconder of the motion for the Address in Reply have spoken and when the leaders of the opposition parties have had something to say, it has been usual for the Prime Minister to rise to his feet and, metaphorically speaking, pat those budding statesmen on the back, tell them their speeches were excellent, and predict for them a very bright future. Mr. Speaker, it is not necessary for me to take any such course. In Mr. Cahill and in Mr. Browne, you have two men with experience of parliamentary practice as long and with a knowledge of constitutional law as profound as that of the very Prime Minister himself. I have not counted the number of years these gentlemen and myself have been in politics together. During twenty or twenty-five years of political turmoil with politicians shifting from one side to the other, Mr. Cahill, Mr. Browne and myself have never been in opposition to one another in politics. We entered the political arena together and we have been together ever since. I hope very sincerely that we remain together as long as I am in public life. I believe that these men to-day are in public life to try and benefit the country to which they belong. Now, Mr. Speaker, it is a pleasure to have with us a great number of the ladies. And I want to say that I am afraid some of them were disappointed when the Speech from the Throne made no reference to the subjeect that has concerned them for some years. I was not more than three weeks in office when a deputation of the ladies called on me and asked me to introduce a Bill giving votes to women. I want to say here that I did not for one moment imagine that they had come to me because they thought I could put their case before the House more forcibly than any other member. They came to me because I was the leader of the Government party and I explained that if I brought in a measure it must be a private one. I would not expect a member of our party to vote for it because I introduced it, and I would not expect the Opposition to vote against it because I had brought it in. I do not propose to make a long speech on the subject of Woman Suffrage just now but I want to say that Newfoundland and South Africa are the only two English speaking countries which have not given women the vote. And when it is considered that South Africa is largely Dutch, Newfoundland stands alone, I am convinced that the women of Newfoundland are as deserving as the women in any part of the world to get the privileges they ask. There are three points which I would like you to turn over in your minds before the Bill comes before the House The three questions to ask yourselves are: Should a woman have a vote at all. What age should she have it at. What are the privileges it carries with it? I am inclined to think that women should have a vote. As far as the age is concerned I have a very open mind In England the vote is given to women of 30 years of age, and I think that was done because, after the war they were afraid that the large number of women would swamp the votes of the men. I understand that a law to amend this is to be brought in at this session of the House of Parliament. In Canada votes are given to women at 21. I fancy in this country it would be as well to give franchise to women at the age of twenty-five.

I say that not because I think that a woman of twenty-one has a mentality less developed than a man of twenty-one, but because I think it possible that it was a questionable policy to allow the men to vote at the early age of 21. There may be a difference of opinion about that and I am open to conviction. The next question, gentlemen, is as to what privileges we are to give with the vote. A couple of years ago my wife wanted to join the Historical Society. She had heard that some papers were to be read in which she was interested and she wished to become a member. She made application and found that because she was a woman she was not allowed to join. On account of her sex she could not become a member of the Historical Society. Now, Mr. Speaker, I would allow every woman of Newfoundland to become a member of the Historical Society. I go further, I would allow every woman to sit on a jury. If the juries which we have had during the last six months had been entirely composed of women I firmly believe they would have done just as well as the men. I still go further, I would allow every woman who can get there a seat in the House of Assembly. Some ladies came to see me a few weeks after I became Prime Minister and I told them a story. I will tell it again. It was told by Lady Astor when she was first elected to the House of Commons. A day or two after she had taken her seat in the House, Sir Edward Carson, now Lord Carson, went up to her and shook hands. Lady Astor said to Sir Edward "Is this a shake hands of welcome or just an ordinary shake hands " Sir Edward, who speaks very slowly and with a broad Dublin accent, replied, "It's a very ordinary shake hands. I hate to see you here." I just mention this to show that a woman trying to get elected to the House of Parliament has to face very great disadvantages; but if a woman of outstanding character should offer herself for election she should not be debarred from the House of Assembly on account of her sex. That is all I wish to say on this subject this afternoon.

Now I wish to make a reply to a few matters brought up by the Leader of the Opposition. In the first place I wish to speak about the contract which we have given for the building of the ship referred to. I want to say that we have made a saving of ten thousand pounds by giving the contract to the Holland firm. We could not very well sacrifice ten thousand pounds simply for the pleasure of giving the order to an English firm. The Furness and other British steamship companies are building their ships in Holland, and if in this manner we can save money for the country we are going to do it. As regards assistance procurable for work of this kind, the Government communicated with the High Commissioner and he wired that the Trade Facilities Board considered that vessels of this type were not a public utility, and they would not give the same assistance they would on rails. The Leader of the Opposition made some reference to Eir Edgar Bowring's income tax. I think that there should be some little explanation in connection with that, because what we want clearly understood is, that we did not make the income tax law. The very fact that we abolish it, or are about to abolish it, shows that we disapprove of it. The law is wrong, but since it is there it must be obeyed, and we cannot make the effect any different for Sir Edgar Bowring than for any other person. As a matter of fact Mr. Warren will remember, as he was acting for Sir Edgar Bowring, that I suggested a compromise, but Sir Edgar preferred to have the case tested in court. We are certainly not to blame for the result of a bad law which we are proposing to abolish. Mr. Hickman also referred to the matter of a hotel. He says that the first thing that we have to do is to build a hotel and the roads will come after. I do not quite agree with Mr. Hickman. I agree that the hotel is an essential and we have been trying to get somebody to build a hotel. We have offered every kind of enticement to get an American or Canadian company to build a hotel. We have even offered to subsidise them or guarantee their bonds to some extent. But in spite of this nobody has come forward yet. It may yet be necessary to build the hotel ourselves and then sell it afterwards at cost price. Anyhow, we want the hotel and we are going to have it. The building of the hotel and the roads go hand in hand, and as it is going to take longer to build the roads than it is to build the hotetl, we need not worry ourselves about the objection raised by Mr. Hickman. As regards the income tax, we felt some diffidence in taking it off because the people might be of the opinion that we were doing it because some of the rich people might be affected favourably by it. Now, Mr. Speaker, nothing was farther from our minds in that respect. There are a small number of people who are paying the income tax and there are many people who should be paying the tax and are not paying it. The people who are paying it are regularly salaried clerks. It has become a disgrace. This class of man cannot escape paying the income tax because his employer gives a statement showing his exact salary, so that he cannot escape. But there are fishermen who have paid for new schooners this year and never paid an income tax, and would be deeply surprised if they were asked to do so. The whole principle of the income tax is wrong and indirect taxation is what we want in this country. There is Captain Kean, and he will think that he was the man who got that off, but I want to tell Captain Kean that this matter was discussed before ever his letters came out in the papers. Now, Mr. Warren refers to the fact that our policy was "Clean up and keep clean, and a square deal to all." I can tell Mr. Warren that we are cleaning up and have been cleaning up with very startling results. It is a very difficult business. And I want to tell Mr. Warren that we have not yet finished paying the bills of the late Government. We got a bill the other day for sixteen thousand pounds for repairs to the Lobelia. The late Government apparently bought only the shells of these ships. No doubt they thought that they bought fully equipped vessels, but this bill charges us with everything that went into them. We also got a bill the other day for two aeroplanes which were supposed to have been given to the Government. I think that it was the Squires Government. I do not know whether they thought that they were getting aeroplanes. If they did, they did not get them. They got balloons —dirigible balloons. They came out to Botwood, were unpacked there and sold to some garage firm. The material was cut up and made into waterproof coverings, and when you see a horse going through Water Street with a silver covering on him you will know where it came from. If it happens, Mr. Speaker, that you are driving home some evening in a sleigh and an attentive cabman wraps one of these silver robes about your knees, you can feel you are as near to driving in a Government aeroplane as you are ever likely to be.

Now I do not want to delay the House this afternoon, but there is just one thing which I wish to say before we close and that is, that we have a great deal of very important legislation to lay before the House and we want the criticism of the Opposition. We want to hear what they have to say and any honest criticism that they give we are prepared to take sitting down. I believe that honest criticism is the best thing that we can get. I do not think they should try to make political capital out of it. I cannot help feeling that last session some of the gentlemen in opposition were obsessed with the coming election in Bonavista Bay and that they could not think of anything else but how they could embarrass us politically. I do not blame them for that. These gentlemen have, I hope, now settled down resignedly and contentedly to enjoy all the home comforts that can be found on the opposition side of the House and do all they can to further the interests of the country, which is what I hope we are all here to do.

On the motion of Mr. Cahill, and seconded by Mr. Browne, that an Address of Thanks be presented to His Excellency the Governor in reply to the Gracious Speech with which he had been pleased to open the present Session of the Legislature, and that a Select Committee be appointed to draft such Address in Reply, it was accordingly done and that the Committee consist of Mr. Cahill, Mr. Browne, Mr. Chambers, Mr. Duff, Mr. Ashbourne.

Hon. the Colonial Secretary tabled the following reports:

The Report of the Board of Governors of the St. John's General Hospital for the year ended June 30th, 1924.

The Report of the Tuberculosis Public Service for year ended December 31st, 1924.

Annual Financial Statements of the St. John's Municipal Council.

The Minister of Marine and Fisheries gave notice that he would on to-morrow ask leave to introduce the following Bills:

"An Act Respecting the Seal Fishery during the present year."

"An Act Respecting the Lobster Fishery."

"An Act to Amend Chapter 25 of the Consolidated Statutes (Third Series) entitled 'Of Light Dues.'"

Hon. the Minister of Justice gave notice that he would on to-morrow ask leave to introduce the following Bills:

"An Act to Amend 11 George V. Cap. 45, entitled 'An Act to Incorporate the Women's Patriotic Trust Fund, and for other purposes.'"

"An Act further to Amend the Act 61, Victoria, Cap. 47, entitled 'An Act relating to the constitution of the Supreme Court and the Acts in Amendment thereof.'"

"An Act respecting Companies."

Hon. the Minister of Agriculture gave notice that he would on tomorrow ask leave to introduce the following Bills:

"An Act to Amend Cap. 24 of the Consolidated Statutes (Third Series), entitled 'Of payment of certain fees and charges by Stamps."

"An Act to Amend Chapter 134 of the Consolidated Statutes (Third Series), entitled 'Of the Operation of Saw Mills.'"

"An Act further to Amend Chapter 129 of the Consolidated Statutes (Third Series), entitled 'Of Crown Lands, Timber Mines and Minerals.'"

Mr. Ashbourne gave notice of question.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—I move that the House on its rising do adjourn until to-morrow.

MR. HICKMAN—Does the Hon. the Prime Minister mean to-morrow, Thursday?

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—Yes.

MR. HICKMAN—The members of the Opposition would like to have the usual course adopted of having the House meet again on Monday, which is the usual course followed. This would give the members of the Opposition an opportunity to consider the Speech from the Throne.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—What is the particular reason? The idea of the Government is to try and get through the sessional work as quickly as we can. We do not wish to embarass the members of the Opposition in any way, but I do not believe the Opposition will read more of the Speech from now and next Monday, than they will from now until to-morrow. They can read the Speech from the Throne ten times through between now and to-morrow. If the Leader of the Opposition makes a point of it we will adjourn until Monday, but we would rather go through a little work, and make the Session as short as we can. Our idea in getting Bills ready is to have things a little different from other Sessions of the House, which were adjourned almost immediately after opening, because nothing was prepared.

MR. HICKMAN—It is the wish of the Opposition that the House adjourn until Monday. It is the pleasure of the Prime Minister whether he moves that or not. There is nothing whatever to be gained by departing from the usual custom.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—I will accede to the request of the Opposition that the House adjourn until Monday.

It was moved and seconded that when the House rises it adjourn until Monday next, 23rd inst., at three of the clock.

The House then adjourned accordingly.

MONDAY, Feb. 23rd, 1925.

The House met at three of the clock in the afternoon, pursuant to adjournment.

MR. SCAMMELL—Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present a petition from the residents of the Groais Islands, District of St. Barbe, and I notice among the signatures the names of some who are directly connected with trading there during the summer. The request is that the Government see its way clear to make the Islands a schedule port of call during the Summer for the Prospero. This petition has my heartiest support and I would like to take the opportunity to point out that every year since I have represented St. Barbe, I have presented a similar position or plea in this connection. I urged the Government of which I was a supporter to make it a regular port, and they did so as circumstances directed, but this did not satisfy the people; and is not satisfying them to-day. I ask the Government to give every consideration to the request I am now urging. The Groais Islands is not only a fishing centre and concerns only men from St. Barbe district, but fishermen from all the East Coast as far south as Conception Bay, have occasion to visit there in connection with their operations. I do not see why the petition should be denied. In view of the importance of the place and the large number of fishermen interested, it is only right to make it a port of call. The matter affects Twillingate, Bonavista, Trinity and Conception Bays, as the Islands have a large floating, as well as a resident population. I would urge the Government and the Minister of Marine and Fisheries to give their earnest support to the petition.

MR. BROWN—Mr. Speaker, I rise to support the petition. I have received letters from Bonavista, Twillingate and Trinity Bays on the subject of this petition, and would ask the Government to give every consideration to seeing that the Prospero calls at the Islands both going and returning.

MR. WALSH—Mr. Speaker, The presenter of the petition has rightly said that the matter is of interest to the people of the north, and though my constituents are not directly concerned, I am, and have great pleasure in supporting the petition. It may not be known generally in the House or outside, but I spent two years of my short career as a fisherman at the Groais Islands, and I know what the people there labor under through lack of steamer accommodation. The harbor is not what we would wish, but there is no reason why the ship could not call there in summer with little disadvantage to either captain or the crew. I therefore heartily endorse the petition.

MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES—Mr. Speaker, I wish to endorse the petition asking that the steamer call at the Groais Islands. I may say that when I first assumed office I was asked to send the steamer there a couple of times and did so, and also in the Fall. I have no doubt the Government will see that the Islands are made a port of call during the coming Summer. The fishermen now are inconvenienced by having to go to Conche and other places for freight, etc., and the petition therefore has my heartiest support.

MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES—Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present a petition from the residents of Glovertown in the District of Bonavista Bay, asking for the erection of a public wharf during the coming summer. As outlined in the petition, many men come there from outlying settlements to join the train and are inconvenienced by having no proper landing place. It is true there are some private wharves but there is no public wharf and landing is very difficult. This wharf would not cost much—say $200, and there should also be a room for the storage of luggage, costing say a total of $500. I hope this petition will receive the hearty support of the Government.

MR. CASHIN—Mr. Speaker, I beg to present a petition from the electors of Witless Bay in reference to a breakwater at Lower Pond Gut. I think if the matter were referred to the Government Engineer, who did some work there a few years ago, he would be able to throw some light on the matter. I also beg to present a petition from the same place for the erection of a public wharf. Witless Bay Harbor is very exposed to the sea and the Gut is the only refuge of the fishermen. I would suggest that the Government Engineer be sent to inspect the place. A breakwater was built up a few years ago but the sea has carried it away, and it is absolutely necessary in the interests of the fishermen that the work of reconstruction should be commenced at once.

HON MR. BRADLEY—Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present a petition from the people of Otterbury, North River and Hallstown, praying for a public wharf in that vicinity. Formerly there was a public wharf at North River and it was of great benefit to the people of that place and adjoining centres, but of recent years it has been allowed to fall into bad condition and is now practically non-existent. There is very considerable traffic at this point from Bell Island and other places and in the interests of the people the wharf should be again erected. I know myself of the existing conditions as I visited the place last summer and I know of the great difficulties experienced in landing—in some cases, even women have to come ashore on a plank. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I give this petition my heartiest support and hope that it will receive the consideration it deserves.

MR. CAHILL, on behalf of the Select Committee, appointed to draft a reply to His Excellency's Speech, presented the report of the Select Committee, as follows:

To His Excellency Sir William Lamond Allardyce, K.C.M.G., Governor and Commander in Chief in and over the Island of Newfoundland and its Dependencies.

May it Please Your Excellency;

We, the Commons of Newfoundland in Legislative Session assembled, beg to thank Your Excellency for the Gracious Speech which Your Excellency has addressed to both Houses of the Legislature.

(Sgd.) CYRIL CAHILL,
W. J. BROWNE,
W. McK. CHAMBERS,
R. DUFF,
T. G. W. ASHBOURNE.

Assembly Room, Feb. 23rd, 1925.

On motion the reception and adoption of this Report was deferred until later in the sitting.

HON. THE MINISTER OF FINANCE—Mr. Speaker, before the adoption of the Report I would like to ask leave to introduce a Bill. I crave the indulgence of the House but as it refers to the Loan I would ask that the Bill be allowed to go through in all its sections, as its passage is most important. The Loan is being raised in England and therefore it is necessary to have the word "bonds" inserted afther the words "the said Loan shall be raised less the issue of." I have just received the following message from the Trade Facilities Board bearing on the matter.

I feel confident that the House will have no objection to the passage of this Bill as it is important to get it through and only the slight change mentioned is being made in it.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Mr. Speaker, might I be permitted to explain for the information of honourable members opposite. As regards the legal aspect of the situation, I may say that the reason the indulgence of the House is asked for this afternoon is for the insertion of a word only. Section 7 of the Loan Act last year reads that in the event of the Loan been raised in England the Loan shall be raised by the issue of "stock." The request now is to insert the words "bonds or." I merely want to explain to the Leaders of both parties on the opposite side of the House that the change of the wording has no effect whatever, except, apparently, that it is necessary to have these words inserted in order to float the Loan over in England. I take the liberty to say this so that there will be no misunderstanding as to the legal position.

MR. SCAMMELL—Do I understand that the Dominion Securities Company floated this Loan?

HON. MINISTER OF FINANCE—Yest, but it is essential in England to have the words "bonds or" added. It is essential to have it under the English Acts. I think you will find that all our other Acts read in the same way.

Hon. the Minister of Finance, with the unanimous consent of the House, asked leave to introduce the Bill entitled:

> "An Act to Amend the Act 15 George V., Chapter XX., entitled 'An Act for the raising of a sum of Money on the credit of the Colony for centain public purposes,'" which was, on motion, introduced and read a first time, and it was ordered that the said Bill be read a second time presently.

Whereupon, on motion of Hon. the Minister of Finance, and with unanimous consent, the Bill entitled "An Act to Amend the Act 15 George V. Chapter XX, entitled 'An Act for the Raising of a Sum of Money on the credit of the Colony for certain Public purposes,'" was read a second time and it was ordered that the said Bill be referred to a Committee of the Whole House presently.

Whereupon, on motion of Hon. the Minister of Finance, the House resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole to consider the Bill entitled "An Act to Amend the Act 15 George V. Chapter XX, entitled 'An Act for the Raising of a Sum of Money on the Credit of the Colony for Certain Public Purposes.'"

Mr. Speaker left the Chair.

Mr. Puddester took the Chair of Committee.

Mr. Speaker resumed the Chair.

The Chairman from the Committee reported that they had considered the matter to them referred, and had passed the said Bill without amendment.

On motion this Report was received and adopted, and it was ordered that the said Bill be read a third time presently.

Whereupon, on motion of Hon. the Minister of Finance, and with unanimous consent, the Bill entitled "An Act to Amend the Act 15 George V. Chapter XX, entitled 'An Act for the Raising of a Sum of Money on the credit of the Colony for Certain Public Purposes,'" was read a third time, and passed, and it was ordered that the said Bill be engrossed, being entitled as above, and that it be sent to the Legislative Council with a message requesting the concurrence of that body in its provisions.

MR. HALFYARD—Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Leader of the Opposition, who is not acquainted with the procedure, I would respectfully suggest that the rest of the Order Paper be gone on with before we take up the motion for the adoption of the Report of the Committee appointed to draft an Address in Reply.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—Is there any partciular reason for that?

MR. HALFYARD—There is no particular reason, but there is a lot of questions to be answered and we could proceed a step or two by going on with the Order Paper.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—We have no objections.

HON. THE COLONIAL SECRETARY—Mr. Speaker, it will be remembered during the last session of this House that a Bill was introduced by Mr. Brown, member for Twillingate, in respect to Logging. Nothing was done in connection with this Bill outside of the Government promising to appoint a Commission to enquire into its merits and into logging operations generally, and, accordingly, Mr. Warren, member for Fortune Bay, was appointed a Commissioner, and I have much pleasure in tabling his report.

Mr. Scammel gave notice of questions.

Mr. Brown gave notice of questions.

Mr. Warren gave notice of questions.

Pursuant to notice and leave granted, and on motion of the Minister of Agriculture and Mines, "An Act Further to Amend Chapter 129 of the Consolidated Statutes (3rd Series), entitled 'Of Crown Lands, Timber, Mines and Minerals,'" was introduced and read a first time, and it was ordered that the said Bill be read a second time on to-morrow.

Answers to the questions Nos. 1, 2, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10 and 12 were tabled.

(10) MR. HALFYARD—To ask Hon. the Prime Minister if it is the intention of the Government to have the allocations for Public Works under the direction of the Public Works Department and the Marine and Fisheries Department made upon the recommendations of the elected representatives of the various districts.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—In reply to question No. 10 in relation to the Departments of Public Works and Marine and Fisheries, that is a matter for the Heads of those Departments. They will use their own judgment in expenditure and in accepting the recommendations of the elected representatives.

(13) MR. HICKMAN—To ask Hon. the Minister of Justice for list of all convictions under the Prohibition Act and Alcoholic Liquor Act from 15th June, 1924, to 15th February, 1925. The fines imposed and the amounts collected and what portion of each fine went to the informer.

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE—In connection with the answer to question 13, I may say that this is a question which involves the decisions of about thirty magistrates and all the details in connection with them, but if the Hon. member will tell just what he desires, I will get it for him in half an hour; otherwise it will take a considerable time.

(14) MR. HICKMAN—To ask the Hon. the Prime Minister to lay upon the Table of the House statement of all moneys paid out on Executive authority from 10th day of June, 1924, to 15th day of February, 1925.

HON THE PRIME MINISTER—In answer to question No. 14, I may say that a statement of the expenditure made by the Executive Government is a matter for the Finance Minister. The Supplementary Supply, asked for in the Estimates, will in a full measure account for such expenditure.

(15) MR. HICKMAN—To ask the Prime Minister to lay upon the Table of the House all correspondence in reference to the building of a Hotel; also what guarantee the Government is prepared to give to holders of Bonds in proposed hotels.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—I beg to lay on the Table of the House the reply to question No. 15, which is the correspondence in connection with a hotel, showing the guarantee which the Government might be prepared to give.

(16) MR. ASHBOURNE—To ask Hon. the Minister of Justice when the appointment of a Magistrate for Twillingate will be made.

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE—I might say in answer to question No. 16, that the choice of a magistrate for Twillingate is a matter having the consideration of the Justice Department just now. I have no doubt that an appointment will soon be made.

ADDRESS IN REPLY:

MR. SCAMMELL, Mr. Speaker, on the motion before the chair, that the House draft an Address in Reply to the Speech from the Throne. I want first of all to say that it is my humble opinion, whether I am constitutionally correct or incorrect as regards proper procedure, that the House ought not at this time to be called upon to draft such Address. In my opinion, Mr. Speaker, the elected Representatives of the people of this country ought not be requested to draft any reply to the Governor's Speech until such time as they have had full opportunity of acquainting themselves fully as to all the facts in relation to our public affairs since the present Government took office.

On Wednesday last we heard the Speech for the first time. It was a lengthy document and, in view of that, the Leader of the Opposition very wisely asked for an adjournment till to-day, in order that Opposition Members should have ample opportunity to acquaint themselves with its contents. As the Leader of the Opposition pointed out, it referred to practically every subject under the sun except the Eclipse of the Sun, and I will go further and say that, to my mind if it did not refer to the Eclipse of the Sun, it, at least, portrays the Eclipse of the Government. The Speech is wordy, exuberant in verbosity, and having looked all around it I am reminded, Sir, of the Parable of the Fig Tree. It will be remembered in relation thereto that the foliage was copious, but no fruit was found thereon.

The Speech from the Throne, Sir, at first sight conveys the impression that it contains a great deal, but on closer examination we find practically nothing in it that gives any food for satisfaction or hope. Like the Tree of old, to which I have just referred, it may be that the time of figs is not yet.

The Leader of the Independent Party the other day said the Speech contained no reference to matters which the man on the street were interested in, and I entirely agree with the position he took, and will go further and say that it gives no reference to, and seeks only to blind public interest and public attention to the graver matters that are really confronting the country to-day. Again, Sir, let me say that were I in order I would like to move that this Address ought to be the last thing considered by this House at the present time. We ought, Sir, in this matter to be able to intelligently discuss the affairs of the Country. As an Opposition Party we are responsible to the Country for having full light thrown upon the events of the past eight months. Opposition Members have already placed certain question before the Government, and until these questions are answered, I fail to see how we can intelligently dilate upon the events to which I have just made reference. But, since the Motion for the Address is the Order of the Day, we must proceed, in spite of protest, with our manifest duty.

First of all, I would congratulate the Mover and Seconder of this Motion, and I congratulate them, Sir, only in so far as they acquitted themselves creditably on that day from the standpoint of eloquence, and from the fact that they made a good case out of a bad one. Every one of us who listened to them on Opening Day realized that they had a difficult problem before them in presenting a case for the Government at the present time. I feel sure that no one less than two legal luminaries such as the Honourable gentlemen could have put forward such a case for the Government as they, and they were evidently picked for the job.

Their remarks lacked the force of conviction, they did not appear to be heart and soul with the task they were confronted with, and I feel sure that the Honourable Member for Hr. Main, Mr. Cahill, in particular, put a great deal more vim in his election speeches in that constituency last Spring than he did in his efforts on behalf of the Government last Wednesday. In fact, the old saying seemed to have been reversed and in their case it appeared that "while the flesh was willing, the spirit was weak." They felt of course that they did not have a very good case but that it was their bounden duty to make the best of matters as they were. The Government seems, it appears to me, to have so many irons in the fire that when it comes to writing a speech for His Excellency the Governor to deliver, they scarcely know where to begin and where to end. The most remarkable thing about the speech is its great length, but I fail to see how the average taxpayer throughout the length and breadth of this Country is going to get any consolation as a result of a perusal of this document.

Before passing on to discuss the Speech, I would like to refer to the matter of the West Coast Disaster Fund. I feel sure that there is no honorable member in this House who does not agree with what the Honorable Member for Fortune Bay said on this point the other day. The West Coast Disaster Fund has not received that measure of support from the public which such a tragedy ought to induce. These men went under at Duty's post. They ventured out that morning as only fishermen can venture, and only those who are most intimately connected with it, can have any adequate idea of what West Coast fishermen are called upon to endure in the prosecution of the Winter fishery. Amid frost, snow and ice they venture all to provide for themselves and their families. On this particular day the fishing fleet put to sea, the storm broke, and we know the result. The wives and families of seventeen men are left the Country to-day as a legacy of that spirit of adventure, and the tragedy which follows in its wake. It was ever thus.

"Not once, nor twice, in our rough Island's story,
The path to duty was the road to glory."

An appeal is now being made on behalf of those who suffered as a result of that day's storm. The fund is not being patronized, Sir, as well as it should, and without stigmatizing the City of St. John's at all, I should like to say now that, in my opinion a first-class lottery would have been better subscribed to than the appeal which has been made in this connection. I feel that the member for Burgeo has done all he possibly could, and I now offer him my hearty support in any further effort that he makes in this direction, and also beg to inform him I hope to be able to do something in a tangible way to express my sympathy on this occasion. I shall be only too pleased to help in any way possible.

Now, Sir, there is another remark made by Mr. Warren the other day with which I do not find myself in absolute accord. He congratulated the Government on the appointments they had made to the Upper House, and felt that they had done well in their selections of men to fill the vacancies in that Chamber. I cannot congratulate the Government for the appointments, although the three gentlemen they have appointed may be very estimable gentlemen in many respects. The Government of course has acted true to Tory traditions and have placed in these vacancies men who are representative of Tory traditions and the die-hard merchant element. Apparently, the Government could not find it convenient to place in the Upper House any representative of our Fishing Industry or any representative of the large industrial activities in the Country. It would appear moreover that despite the large number of prominent Outport gentlemen who are supporting them, they cannot find among such gentlemen a fit and proper person to grace the Upper Chamber. So much for what they think of their Outport supporters.

The first of the Appointees, the Hon. Dr. Robinson, may be a gentleman and a scholar. He is of course a Tory of Tories, in fact, he is a traditional Tory. He was an opponent of Whiteway, an opponent of Bond and an opponent of Squires.

Mr. Alderdice, as Manager of the Ropewalk, also represents the mercantile element, and the same applies to Mr. Ayre. The public can very well know, sir, from these appointments just where the present Government stands in its relation to Water Street, and despite the large number of supporters they had among leading men in the Outports, they apparently did not think it worth while to appoint any of these gentlemen to the Upper House. I am an Outport man myself. The city and the city interests are well and ably represented in the Upper House and I fail to see why the Outports have been so ignored by the Government when appointments of this nature was being considered. There are plenty of splendid men in the Outports who could grace the Upper Chamber equally as well as some of those there at present.

The Speech from the Throne opens by a reference to the general prosperity and gratifying conditions existing in the country at the present time. These conditions may be a matter of consolation to the Government, but they certainly cannot be a matter of congratulation to them. The people of this country, sir, know that the real foundations of the prosperity which the country is enjoying to-day was laid by the late Liberal Administration. The people of this country need no history books or text books written to inform them as to the history of the Humber Deal.

I recently returned from the Humber Valley and I want to tell you, sir, that the Deer Lake I saw the other day and the Deer Lake that I went through in 1923, when I went down to the District of St. Barbe with the Humber deal as my platform, were entirely two different Deer Lakes. When we were preaching from that platform, who were our opponents? They were, in the main, the gentlemen who are sitting on the other side of the House of Assembly to-day. I doubt very much if one man who sits on that side of the House to-day can take to himself one single iota of credit for anything that has helped to make the prosperous conditions we have in the country to-day. Yet the Speech from the Throne takes care to stress that the prosperity which exists to-day is largely due to the conditions in the Humber Valley.

And I want, in this connection, to refer to a man who was for many years a member of this Chamber; a man who was as big and broad a man as ever held a seat in this House of Assembly. I refer to Sir William Coaker. When the Humber Deal was mooted. Sir William Coaker asked the Union Councils to pass resolutions favouring the Humber Deal; he asked the men to talk night after night and develop public opinion in favour of the project. He was then characterized as a fool and a madman. Bu he was right, and those who opposed him have lived to see that he was right, and that he had hold of the right end of the stick. Sir William Coaker is out of this House to-day, and there are men in this House to-day who will say things behind his back who would not dare to say the same things to him face to face. I take this opportunity of paying a tribute to my leader, the President of the Fishermen's Union, and I say that this country can ill afford to have men of the stamp of Sir William Coaker outside of the four walls of this House to-day, and I say further that it will not be long before Sir William Coaker will find his way back to the House of Assembly again, and that is the wish of thousands.

The history of the Humber Proposition, the whole Humber story, and the ultimate prosperity to the country which resulted from the Humber Industry in no measure gives the present Government any room for congratulations, and they can no longer fool the people with such talk as they have got off in the Speech from the Throne.

The general prosperity of the country is also due to the fact that last year we had a short catch of codfish. I understand that the catch last year was three hundred thousand quintals short of a normal catch. The extra prices given for the fish last year have had something to do with the present prosperity in this country. But the Government of Newfoundland has had no more to do with the prices paid for the fish last year than the man in the moon had to do with it.

There was competition, there was a short catch of fish, there was a good market, and that, more than anything else, was responsible for the high price paid for codfish.

"The codfishery last year was prosecuted successfully," says the Speech but the Government can take no credit to itself for any of the resultant prosperity.

Now, what is going to be the position in the future. It would have been more to the point if the Speech from the Throne had been more devoted to discussion of the problems which will arise during the coming year What is going to be the position this spring? There will not be anything like the same number of men employed in the Humber Valley this spring as there was last year. There will be a surplus of two, or three, or four thousand men released for the fishery this spring. Where are these men going to find their supplies and outfits? Are they going to find boats and schooners to take them to the fishery? And if not, what does the Government propose to do with them? The Government must concern itself with this problem. A similar situation developed during the regime of the Squires Government in 1922. The Government found itself up against a similar situation. Men were coming in and asking for supplies for the fishery. They met the situation of that day, and grappled with the situation by what then for the first time became known as the Guarantee Fishery Supply Account. We have been hounded and vilified by the opposite side for what was done at that time. But we are now and always have been satisfied that that step was necessary, and we have absolutely nothing to be ashamed of in connection with that account. The present Government will have much more to be ashamed of if they do not adopt some similar measure to meet the situation that will surely arise in the spring. I need not recite the details in connection with that matter. The hon. member for Placentia and St. Mary, Mr. Sullivan, and his colleague, Mr. Walsh, know that he and his colleague were members of the Select Committee that heard and advised the bringing in of that project. They will know that we had our backs against the wall then, so to speak, and that we did the very best we could under the circumstances. I was replying to Sir Michael Cashin in the House the following year, and I think Hansard will bear me out when I say that I remarked that it would be much better for the country if we had spent one million dollars that year on supplies, and left certain construction works alone. And I think Sir Michael Cashin agreed with me. The Government need not rest easy, and think they will have any sinecure this spring. There are going to be thousands of men without employment, and there are going to be thousands of men who will find it very difficult to get supplies and outfits to enable them to prosecute the fishery.

But even if we do have a large fishery this year, does the Prime Minister as a business man—does the Minister of Finance and Customs as a business man, anticipate that a larger fishery this year is going to find the country in a more fortunate position. I say no. If we have a larger catch of fish this year it will not leave us in any more fortunate a position than we are now. Can we anticipate as good prices next year even if we only have a normal catch. I am afraid present indications are not encouraging.

You say that you have reduced taxation. Your action is tardy, and so tardy that you will get no thanks for it. You have reduced taxation on beef and kerosene and pork because the public and your conscience has compelled you to. You have reduced taxation on beef, pork and molasses because you have had, so to speak, to cut off your noses to spite your faces, because you were going to reduce the Income Tax, which is paid by the monied classes, and you had to reduce the taxation on the fishermen and the working classes of this country. You have reduced taxation. Again, I say, your action is tardy. You have taken upwards of three thousand dollars from the fishermen during the last six months that need never have been taken from them. Last session you film-flammed, saying that the reduction on taxation on these articles which had been made by the preceding administration was illegal and irregular. But none of the legal luminaries on your side of the House attempted to tell us wherein it was illegal, and you did not tell us where you got your legal advice from, but we suspect that we know. You know that you got your advice from outside sources, and no efforts was made to satisfy honest opinion that the course taken by the late administration was wrong or illegal. You know that you have reduced taxation, but you also know that the dollar to-day is not the dollar that it was six months ago, and you know that the dollar is going to be worth considerably less this spring. You know that it is going to be less in value this spring. What are the fishermen going to pay for flour this spring? What are they going to pay for their outfits? They are going to cost prices which I tell you frankly will stagger you. I met a man the other day, a man who takes ten men to the fishery in a large schooner, he asked me what I thought of prices the coming spring.

I told him he would likely pay $15. a barrel for flour this spring. The consequence was that he went down town and bought his supplies at the present prices. But what about the man who cannot do that, and has to get his supplies on credit? The latter, I fear, has an eye-opener in store for him and will find to his grief that he is not living in the paradise that the Speech from the Throne would lead him to believe in to-day. The Hon. the Prime Minister told us the other day that he felt the Government would be likely to build a hotel. That, of course, will be a great consolation to his constituents to whom he promised last year a bonus on fish.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—I did not.

MR. SCAMMELL—There are two ways of doing a thing—you can do it in a way so that you can say you did it; or you can do it in a way that you can say you didn't do it. I am afraid, Mr. Speaker, to submit a questionnaire to the constituents of the Hon. the Prime Minister asking them, did he, or did he not, lead them to believe that he was going to pay a bonus on fish. I am not afraid to say that fully 75 per cent. of the people would say that he did. But, be that as it may. the fact remains that it must be a matter of the greatest concern to those interested in the fisheries to see the Government, as shown by the Speech from the Throne, are so little interested in this direction. The Speech contains only a passing reference to the stable industry of the Country which shows how much they are really concerned about it. The Hon. the Prime Minister as a business man must know that the great question today is the improving of the quality of our fish. He knows the history of what transpired during the past Summer, the history of our competitors and their efforts to place a better article on the markets, and also their strenuous endeavours to undermine us. I would like to think it would be wise on the part of the Government which pledged itself to advance the interests of all the people, to give earnest consideration to legislation which will benefit our largest class of earners, and see to the improvement of our fish. I do not think we will have a better cure till legislation is passed to encourage the fishermen in this direction, to abolish the tal-qual system and to regulate the cull, etc. I regret that when the Fish Regulations were abolished they were removed in toto. I regret that the Acts dealing with Standardization and statistical information were not retained and the Government would not be far wrong if they replaced them on the Statute Book. I saw by a recent report of the Board of Trade that no statistical information was available. Sir William Coaker when he introduced the Regulations made an effort to have statistics available as to the catch of fish. But now there are no reliable figures as even the Board of Trade states they can only estimate the catch as at or about. If the Board has reliable information they would not have to produce their report by the words at or about. It is very regrettable that the Act providing for these statistics was abandoned. However, that is now a matter of past history and we can only hope that efforts will be made to obtain reliable figures in the future. Now nothing has been said in the Speech from the Throne of the bonus on fish. The Hon. the Prime Minister has said that the Government may build a hotel but makes no mention of the far more important matter. Again, we expect to see a stop put to the export of our manufactured pit props and pulpwood. The Government must have considered this problem and must know that there is a constantly growing feeling against this export. At the last meeting of the Fishermen's Union Convention, resolutions were passed against this export and it is also condenmed in their annual report by the Board of Trade. I therefore, cannot see how the Government can still permit this export in view of the objections of two such different and important bodies functioning in such different atmospheres and directions. The Government should get down to work and stop it. see that no licenses are granted for next Summer and that there is no further export as far as this season is concerned. I would also, Mr. Speaker, wish to refer to another matter which is perhaps of more interest to the people of St. Barbe District than to those of the other Districts. I am informed that the Government has promulgated a law calling for a close season for lobsters for a period of three years. This is of particular interest to the people of St. Barbe as that is the largest lobster fishing section in the Country. I cannot understand or find where the Government got their cue for the introduction of this close season. I have gone to considerable trouble and expense to sound the opinion of the people of St. Barbe on the matter and I find that while a majority of the merchants approve of it, the fishermen themselves are totally opposed to it. I have telegraphed some 20 men between Trout River and Flower's Cove, among the number being 6 or 7 business men. A few of the latter agree to the measure but the fishermen on the whole are opposed to it. I think this matter was too much rushed and I feel it my duty to ask for a reprieve. The fishermen should have been given time to dispose of their gear—as far as such gear can be disposed of—and given time to make arrangements for earning a living elsewhere. The ordinary lobster fishermen has no nets, twines, traps, etc., such as the cod fisherman, but only such gear as appertains to the catching of lobsters. Usually in the Fall he spends considerable time and money in repairing this. and the position in the District of St. Barbe to-day is that scores of men have gone to that expense and made provision for next year's work without making provision for engaging at anything else. Those prevented from engaging at the lobster fishery can not now get work elsewhere. The Humber has absorbed all that it can and not 25 per cent. of those formerly employed there will go back again next year. As these men will not be able to get work at the Humber next year and as they are not fitted out for the prosecution of the cod fishery, it is apparent that they will be in a very bad position. I would. therefore, Mr. Speaker, ask that the Government grant a year's reprieve before putting the regulations mentioned into effect. I understand there is to be a bill introduced to give effect to the proposal and I sincerely trust that a year's reprieve will be granted. St. Barbe. it seems, Mr. Speaker, has been coming in for a lot of the hard knocks of late. Besides the lobster regulations, there is also a law as to the killing of caribou. I know where the idea originated. I know that in the Humber vicinity there has been a demand for a larger game reserve. By all means give them the larger reserve, but do not apply these iniquitous regulations to the places in the Straits of Belle Isle. A few years ago there was a serious outbreak of a disease called beri-beri at several places along the Straits, and Dr. Grenfell in his report stated that it was largely due to the use of white flour and not a sufficient supply of fresh meat. Now, deer meat was a valuable addition to the food of these people but the small number of deer killed by the people of St. Barbe District for food purposes would not appreciably affect the growth of the caribou herd or interfere with the ideas of those who want a larger reserve around the interior. The people of the Straits of Belle Isle are going to find this a very imposing and a very iniquitous regulation, and they are going to use every means in their power to protest against it. I must protest against these actions of the Government in inflicting these hardships on the people of St. Barbe District, and the Government have shown that they have not taken the trouble to consult the public. They have merely acted on suggestions from one or two who profess to know all and be all, and then they made up their minds to put the drastic regulations that I have referred to in force. Now, I hope the Prime Minister will be as square as he claims himself to be, and be consistent as regards the lobster fishery and as regards the caribou. The district of St. Barbe does not want those regulations and the people propose to use every means at their disposal to show their resentment just as soon as occasion occurs.

Now, to get back to the Speech from the Throne. It says: "Very disturbing discoveries have been made by a Commission engaged in an enquiry concerning expenditures for charitable institutions and services. Laxness of administration, and imposition by the non-deserving, have been proved, and there is evidence that the homely virtues of self-reliance and self respect have been diminishing. Public expenditure for the relief of the sick and afflicted is meant for the helpless poor, and the conduct of those who selfishly prey upon this charity is highly reprehensible. Stricter rules and closer observance must be insisted upon. Good results from the enquiry have already been observed." I cannot go on and discuss this matter intelligently until somebody on the other side of the House informs us what the real conditions are to-day with regard to poor relief. It appears that the Government began its practice of economy by getting after poor people first. The people in my District are very outspoken against the new poor relief regulations in force at the present time, and I think we should have a word from the Colonial Secretary on the subject. Why begin your economies by using the pruning knife on crippled and infirm people first.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—We are not doing it.

MR. SCAMMELL—Now, it is said that the Government are taking great pains in cleaning up but it appears in a different way than what they proclaimed they were going to clean up. The Speech from the Throne states that some people were trading upon the charity that should go to the helpless poor. I would like to know from some one in the Government ranks who these people are.

Another paragraph states that "The services of a Postal Service Expert, with great experience in Canada, have been obtained, to aid in a reform in the Postal Service of the Colony, in which conditions have existed of a nature very injurious to public interests. The service is over-manned and underworked, and much greater efficiency must be attainted at less cost. It is not possible to reform a service so demoralized in a short time, but drastic reforms have been proposed, and will be insisted on." We have on this side of the House an ex-Minister of Posts and Telegraphs who is better able to deal with this matter than I am; but I was rather amused the other day to read this extract from the Speech of Hon. Dr. Robinson in the Upper House. He is an ex-Postmaster General and one who ought to know what he is talking about. He says: "The real trouble (he is referring to the Post Office) is there is no esprit de corps, no discipline and no ambition. Governments appoint men without training or capacity, whose sole qualifications is partisanship. This causes the lower ranks to lose ambition. They lose the hope of promotion and become indifferent and careless. Partisanship becomes rife. Factions are formed, etc., etc., etc."

Now, Mr. Speaker, there is a rumor current to-day to the effect that the Government proposes to appoint a man, who as far as my knowledge is concerned, never was in a Post Office in his life, to the position of Deputy Minister of Posts and Telegraphs. In view of the statement of one of the Government sponsors where does the Government expect to land itself or where does it expect to land the country if matters and appointments of this sort are to be the order of the day. If you put Mr. Hodder, to be frank, in the position of Deputy Minister of Posts and Telegraphs, according to Hon. Dr. Robinson, there will be no discipline and no ambition in the lower ranks. Surely a Government pledged to reforms and pledged to clean up is not the Government that is going to take a rank outsider and place him in the Department of Posts and Telegraphs as Deputy Minister, in view of Dr. Robinson's laudable sentiments. I do not think—that the Government has any reason to congratulate itself on the way the Department of Posts and Telegraphs stands to-day, although it may be that we are in the unfortunate position that we do not know anything about it. So far we have had no opportunity of getting inside information, but when the facts are revealed—and we do not propose to let up until we get the information we require—all the facts will be made plain to the public.

Then, there is the visit of the Labrador Delegation. They did nothing. Of course, we all expected that; and I doubt very much if the man who wrote that Speech from the Throne didn't use the newspaper to assist him in drafting that paragraph in the Speech. Nothing was done with the Labrador Boundary question; but we expect the Minister of Justice or the Prime Minister or the Colonial Secretary to tell us something of the nice time they had while in Montreal.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—You do not expect us to tell you all the fine times we had.

MR. SCAMMELL—Another paragraph in the Speech from the Throne says: "Owing to the increased cost of shipbuilding the bounty offered by the Government has not induced the construction of many new vessels, and as a large proportion of our present fishing fleet are in need of repairs, a measure providing a bounty for the encouragement of such repairs will be submitted for your approval. I hope that the bounty to be offered by the Government in this connection will be sufficient inducement for the undertaking of the repairing of vessels on a large scale, and I am glad to see that the Government have adopted the proposals which we advocated from this side of the House last year, namely, the inauguration of a bounty for repairs to vessels. I feel sure that if the Government will go the right way in applying the bounty for repairs and see that no discrimination is practiced that good results will come therefrom.

As to the paragraph relating to "Banks," I might say that I am not sufficiently wealthy to be interested much in banks and will have nothing to say on that topic.

The Speech goes on to say that "An examination of the Dry Dock in this port made by an expert engineer, has revealed the need of extensive repairs, and of partial rebuilding, and the cost will be large. Proposals will be made for your consideration." In my opinion the cost will be about eight times as large as the Government in their wisdom estimated last spring. By the time the Government gets down to a final esimate for the performance of all the work outlined in that loan act of last spring they will find that instead of six millions they will have to borrow fifty millions of dollars, that is if we are to take this Dry Dock transaction as an index of their accuracy in estimating costs.

Then again we are told in the Speech from the Throne that the Income Tax is to be abolished. Well, we all know the history of the Income Tax. War times led to the enactment of it and it was imposed when the financial conditions of the Colony were stringent. At the time it was put in force very few people objected to it, we should not carry it on any further. We should abolish it now and not have false and misleading statements go abroad in the press. Consequently, I urge upon the Government to remove it as from December 31st, and I think that such an action would be more in keeping with what the public construes from the reference of this subject in the Speech.

The Prime Minister chose to be very witty and very happy the other day. He told us all about votes for women and it looks now as if they are going to get the vote. Now everything is not exactly as the Prime Minister would have us believe. I have no doubt he got a shock when he got some bills for the "Lobelia" and the "Daisy", but the Prime Mnister—professing to be a square man as he does—did not do the square thing in connection with this incident and tell the country the other side of the story as regards these steamers. It was not a dead loss as the Government would have us believe. The "Lobelia" was sold and the Government received $30,000 for her; the "Daisy" has been continually engaged in the Revenue Service and the "Watchful" has on various occasions been employed by the Government in useful work when other steamers might have been needed to do the work. It is just as well for the Prime Minister to be square and let the country know the truth.

The story of the late Government is not as black as the Prime Minister would have us believe. It is all very well for the Prime Minister to point to the past. It was a great occasion to get the smart stuff off. The Prime Minister is fast becoming adept at getting off the smart stuff occasionally. Now, Mr. Speaker, despite all the smart stuff got off in the House, I want to make this point that the people are not going to be bluffed. They want facts and they are going to get facts. They want both sides of the story and not one side only, as the Prime Minister gave in connection with these steamers on Wednesday.

The Government is not very happy to-day, they did not look very happy on Wednesday afternoon, they will look less happy as the session proceeds. It is true that they won the bye-election in Bonavista and from that point of view they can feel secure in possession. Of course they know that a hard battle was fought. I trust that while they are there representing the District of Bonavista they will see that their policy of the square deal to all is put into effect without fear or favour. We do not feel down north that we are getting a square deal from this Government. Where was the square deal in removing the "Malakoff" from Trinity Bay? That will be a matter no doubt which the members for Trinity Bay will forcibly deal with. The people feel that there is a great deal of personal vindictiveness dictating Government policy North. We don't feel that a square deal is being practised in parts of Bonavista and Trinity Bays. No, sir, the Government cannot console themselves with the thought that they actually practised that square deal during the past six months. I would warn the Government that they need not feel too secure in their position in the country to-day. There are no indications of better conditions in the country. If they congratulate themselves in that respect they are living in a fool's paradise. They have set for themselves a high ideal. Like the Knights of Arthur's Round Table of old they have constituted themselves "A glorious company, the flower of men to serve as model for the mighty world." They have set for themselves a high standard and place themselves on a high pedestal and consequently when they fall, their fall will be all the greater. It will be the duty of the Opposition during the present Session to see how far the Government is living up to the high ideal it has set for itself. There has to be some plain talking and a great many more matters to be dealt with and discussed in the public interest than those to which the Speech from the Throne makes reference.

MR. GODDEN—Mr. Speaker. As everything points to this session of the House being a busy one, it behooves us, therefore, to come to the point as quickly as possible in our remarks. To Mr. Cahill and Mr. Browne, the mover and seconder of the Motion in reply to the Speech from the Throne, I would add my congratulations to those already extended. Their profession of course calls for eloquence, and they sustained the reputation of their profession by their performance Wednesday last.

The Speech from the Throne contains a good deal of superfluous matter. It is a matter of common knowledge that operations at the Humber are fast approaching a manufacturing stage. It is also common knowledge that negotiations have been under way for a considerable time regarding a pulp and paper mill in the Gander Valley. In reference to the Humber activities I have been wondering whether the workingman's interests have been adequately looked after. I say that because we have reports from men that have been engaged there, that men are brought in from the outside and are being dealt with more generously than our own. I understand that the outside man is being paid a higher wage than the Newfoundland workman, which is not fair, and a matter for the Government to look into without delay.

It was quite a pleasure to hear that the action of the late Liberal Government is now about to be endorsed by the present Government by removing the duties on beef, pork and kerosene oil. That is welcome, and I would now put in a plea for the importers of the commodities. I submit that in all fairness to them when it is proposed to alter the tariff value of any article notice should be given of not less than four weeks. The Prime Minister and other business men sitting in this House will, I am sure. see the reason and justice of this.

That there is less unemployment in our midst than formerly I quite believe; but we all know that there are a great many men with families to support who are anxious to find employment and cannot. And I do not think that adequate attention is being given the matter as regards these men. I trust there will be done more than has been done under the dole system in this connection.

Whether the encouragement of tourist traffic will be successful is a matter for conjecture only; but, if a sum of money is devoted for road construction, by all means let us get down to that part of the business with all despatch; put good and trustworthy men in charge of the work, and, if possible, connect each district by a good main road. It is only necessary to travel some parts of Trinity District to know the necessity of road construction.

The suggestion of Municipal Corporation is a step in the right direction and, should suggestions develop, it will prove a solution to many of the difficulties and problems faced by the people of the outports for a considerable time. It is quite easy to arrange a programme, but the carrying out of that programme is a horse of another colour.

Some seven months ago when the present Government assumed office we were led to expect a big improvement in the functioning of different departments, and also to expect Legislation that would be to the betterment of Newfoundland, and to the encouragement of our people; such. I am sure. were the motives which actuated the Hon. the Prime Minister, and that gentleman, I believe, has earnestly striven towards that end; but his efforts have had no apparent success so far, and it would seem that he has been playing a lone hand, and has not had the wholehearted support of the Members of his Government; and what can even a Prime Minister accomplish when his subordinates, instead of standing shoulder to shoulder with him, persist in going their own way, seeking self-advancement and gain. At this juncture I would say that I have no personal ill-feeling against any member of the Government, but I shall deem it my duty, when necessary, not only to Trinity District but to myself, to speak out against any unfair discrimination practiced by Heads of Departments, or to anything that does not portend to the betterment of conditions generally I mentioned unfairness and discrimination, and I would caution all Ministers of Departments, as Heads thereof, that before they apend their signatures to any document to be sure that the document contains nothing of an unfair nature. A short while ago I received letters from two civil servants who had received notice of dismissal from their respective departments, and who had been given no reason why they had been dismissed, and they asked me to look into the matter on their behalf; and when I approached the Ministers for particulars of these dismissals, expecting to hear that it was for political purposes, I was surprised to be told that they knew nothing about the matter. Why then were these men dismissed if no fault was known of them? Is it true, as has been suggested, that there is some Big Boss in the Government ranks, whom even Ministers of the Crown must obey? I hope that is not true, but it looks very much like it. The junior Member for Harbor Main in his able speech on Wednesday last mentioned that the Government slogan is the same to-day as it was when they sought election "Clean up, keep clean, and a square deal to all". I say that this banner has not been lived up to, and the last part, namely, "a square deal to all," particularly is not being upheld; and how can a square deal be given when political spite enters into the Government's scheme of action.

A few days ago the Hon. the Minister of Agriculture and Mines held a meeting of farmers to discuss with them ways and means whereby the interests of agriculture could be encouraged. This is a very laudable thing to do, and I trust that the Honourable Minister is really sincere in his desire to co-operate with the farmers; but I hope he will make it his business to prevent any unfairness such as occurred some time ago when contracts were being allocated for the supply of Pure Fresh Milk to our public institutions. One of our young farmers was supplying the Fever Hospital with fresh milk and giving all the satisfaction possible. This farmer is one of the best and most progressive farmers that we have, and is noted for his success in the raising of dairy cattle, and has done more than anyone else to raise the standard of dairy produce in this country. I say that he had been delivering milk to the Fever Hospital and had been giving every satisfaction possible; this contract was taken away from him in favour of a man who was only a part-time farmer, who, besides, had not sufficient cattle to obtain the necessary quantities of milk desired by the Hospital and had, therefore, to go to other milk vendors and get sufficient milk to supply the order; thereby not only rendering the deliveries of the milk, but also the quality, very doubtful. If the Hon. Minister of Agriculture and Mines wishes to co-operate with the farmers, I suggest that he should keep in close touch with those gentlemen who comprise the Board of Works Committee; and I still further suggest that he should endeavor to see that contracts be given to applicants who are doing their utmost to make farming successful, and a thing worth while, and whom it is the intention of the Hon. Minister to encourage. I make these suggestions to the Hon. Minister of Agriculture with every good intention.

I wish to congratulate the Hon. Minister of Finance and Customs on the great energy which he has displayed in the interests of his department. His activities have been apparent to all, and they have extended in a great many directions, and have been felt by some. I hope his further efforts in checking up delinquents who owe money will not be guided or affected by personal or political spite; and trust that he will continue to show those returns which are an evidence of our prosperity, not forgetting that one of the most important reasons to take into consideration in the present increase in revenue is due to the activities at Corner Brook, an industry which was fostered and made possible by the late Liberal Government. Reference was made the other day to what the man on the street was saying, and it is a fact that these results which have come to light as a consequence of the recent investigations into public affairs have caused the man on the street to say, "Why is it possible that these irregularities can go on when we have an auditors' department such as we have?" Our auditors have come in for a great deal of criticism, whether fair to them or not I am not in a position to say; but I do say this, that if our audit system is ineffective, then immediate steps should be taken to install a system so that this department will be able to meet the necessary requirements. I believe that the Auditor General is quite capable of carrying out the duties of his office, and it has been suggested to me that in the past the Auditor General has, when submitting his audits, made reports of the irregularities that have come under his notice, and when he has done this I take it that his duties as an auditor have been accomplished; it is the duty of those in authority to whom the reports have been submitted to take the action necessary under the circumstances. This suggests that, in the past, those guilty of misdeeds have been able to hide themselves behind the skirts of politicians. It must no longer be possible for parties to be able to help themselves to a loan from public monies for private business or any other purposes. I submit that the hands of the Auditor General would be considerably strengthened if he were allowed to bring his reports in future to a committee composed of members of the Government and of the Opopsition side of the House of Assembly. In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I would ask that the gentlemen sitting on the other side of the House work together if possible in harmony under the leadership of their Prime Minister for the best interest of Newfoundland, until the termination of their term of office, and I bespeak for them from this side of the House such criticism and suggestions as I hope will be helpful to them in their efforts.

MR. BROWN—Mr. Speaker, the Speech from the Throne contains very little of importance. The first thing that we have before us is that the fishery of last year was very successful and that the products were disposed of at the most profitable prices in the history of the Colony. Now, Mr. Speaker, what led to their being successful? First let us turn to the policy of the late Liberal Government. That Government brought the Humber into being which took men from the fishery, which left so few engaged in fishing that the catch in consequence is so short that the price of codfish went up and the returns were proportionally great. Next, let us come to consider the Humber. That is very interesting when we come to look at it. "The construction of the great works on the Humber has proceeded with marked speed and success and many are now engaged in cutting wood for the manufacture of pulp and paper." There is a question to be asked and that is a question in which members not only on the Opposition side of the House but also members on the Government side should be interested. To-day we have between five and eight hundred French-Canadians logging on the Humber. I ask the question here and now, and I don't care who smiles or who does not smile. I ask the question: Why are these French-Canadians brought into this country when there are men just as capable and able to do the work as well as French-Canadians and they are not allowed to work? We see daily in the papers that so many French-Canadians crossed the Gulf on the Kyle bound for Deer Lake for the Newfoundland Power and Paper Company. Another paper says that there are no more men needed. And still another says that only those men are wanted who are qualified loggers and must have obtained labour before he starts to come out there. Why should Newfoundlanders be discriminated against in favour of French-Canadians brought here to take their places? It is said on the Humber that Newfoundlanders are no good. I say here without fear of successful contradiction that you cannot get a better man than the Newfoundlander in this world to-day. Whenever he has been given a good showing he has proved himself equal to any man of any other nationality with whom he has come into contact. Why is he not given a square deal, a good opportunity in his own country? This country may be called upon to pay five per cent. of the cost of that Humber, and if we are possibly going to be called to pay this interest why are we not going to be given the benefit which can be derived from it at least in the way of employment? Why cannot we get fair play? Foreigners come over on the Humber and they get the pay for doing the work and the Newfoundlanders do the work. Over there the Newfoundlander is getting twenty-five cents an hour while the man from Montreal or New York or some other American or Canadian city is getting from 45c. to 85c. and a dollar an hour, in some cases for doing the same work Why is this being allowed? I would say the same if I sat on the Government side of the House and I would voice the same sentiments in the same manner as I do now. I claim that every man who works in the country should get fair play, and I say here and now, without fear of contradiction, that the Newfoundlanders are not getting fair play. And the time is fast approaching when the Newfoundlanders are not going to stand for such treatment. I myself have seen the Newfoundlanders come out of the woods after working for days or months, as the case might be, to get paid. They come to a wicket about 15 by 24 inches in size and there they are made to line up one after another to the number of perhaps two or three hundred. The temperature is perhaps fifteen or twenty degrees below zero and every man has to wait his turn to get paid. There is no shelter. And after the men get their cheques they are not allowed to cash them until somebody has gone around to all the shops in Corner Brook or Deer Lake to find out if the man owes anything there. And when these cheques have been cashed they have to wait two or three hours for a train. There is no place to go. There is a sort of a hen house there for a station. And when finally the train does come it is filled up and these men have to get on the brakes and ride across country to their destination. Imagine, Mr. Speaker, on the brakes of the train. I am informed that this man Stadler over there does not think very highly of Newfoundlanders either. We may not be completely up to the scratch but we do not like to have foreigners come out here and tell us so. It was only the other day, Mr. Speaker, that I heard one of the men from the Cabot Strait steamer tell about a man named Fraser, he may be the head of the Fraser Brace Co. for what I know, who was crossing the Gulf to Canada, and he was in a hurry for some important meeting or other which was to take place in the very near future. The Kyle got an S. O. S. call for assistance from the steamship Dunstan, I think it was. After the captain had changed the course of the steamer this fellow came upon the bridge and started to argue with Captain Cross as to why he had changed his course, and Captain Cross after fully explaining his position and telling him that he as chief magistrate and captain of the ship was supposed to respond to an S. O. S., was insulted by this fellow, who started to get nasty over the affair and wanted the ship to go back towards Montreal or wherever he was going. Captain Cross then told him to go to his room, or whatever place he belonged, or he would have to put him in his place.

This is the kind of thing that we have to contend with, although we are —or the country is financing this Humber industry to the sum of ten million dollars. We can't seem to get much fair play out of it. I would like to ask now if the Newfounlland director has handed in his report to the Government yet this year. If not, he should have handed it in.

I hear that there are to be two boats operated from Corner Brook to New York, and instead of these boats being managed by concerns in Newfoundland as they ought to be, they are being managed in New York. Outrageous! Ridiculous! The idea! And when the manager was asked if Newfoundlanders would command these steamers, he said "as far as possible," but the Executive would not be Newfoundlanders. In other words the Commander and Officers and the Engineers, who would also be Officers, would not be Newfoundlanders, but a Newfoundlander might get a job as a fireman or a deck hand. I am not blaming the present Government any more than any one else, but somebody should look into the affair, and see that this thing is handled in a different way.

I would like to speak of the question of the French Canadians coming here. What are these French Canadians getting? It is reported that for logging these men are getting seventy dollars a month in the woods, while the Newfoundlander in the same place have to work on the subcontract system, and earn what he can. That is the state of affairs that is existing now, and what is more, the French Canadians are sent into places where the wood is thick, and all they have to do is just cut ahead. But it is different with the Newfoundlanders. I have received letters to that effect from various places. These fellows get a show because they come from across the water, and our own men who have to leave their own homes in this country are almost looked upon as serfs in certain places, and have to take the dirty end of it.

The day is coming when this thing will be no longer tolerated. I understand that a report has been tabled to-day in this House of the result of the Logging Commission. I have not yet seen it, but I am anxious to get hold of that report, and see what is in it, and I will not be satisfied until something is done to better the conditions of these men. If this Government does not do it, then some other Government will have to look after the workmen and labourers of this country.

I am not speaking this afternoon to get clapped or stamped from the Gallery, or anything of that kind. But I am speaking for my fellow countryman, and my fellow workman, the men who have to go and work for their living. It is alright for men to sit down to their tables or in their offices, after a decent meal, and then come out and look down on the man who has to do the laborious work of the country. They have got to get consideration, and I am here now to see that the labourer and the fishermen and the logger gets the consideration that he properly deserves.

I heard of one instance to-day of two brothers who are to-day working on the Humber; one of them coming from St. John's, the other from Montreal. The two men are working at the same job exactly. One man, the man who came from Montreal, gets forty-five cents an hour, the man who came from St. John's gets twenty-five cents an hour. They are both working at the same job.

HON. MR. SULLIVAN—If you can get the names give them to us and we will see that the men get fair play.

MR. BROWN—I have not the names here now.

HON. MR. SULLIVAN—Well get them, and we will see that the matter is settled. We want to see that everyone gets fair play, and we will have the matter looked into and settled. You know there is no use in making an accusation unless you can substantiate it.

MR. BROWN—Even if it is substantiated, I doubt if anything will be done.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Why do you say that?

MR. BROWN—I will come back to what I was speaking of. What I am saying applies also to those who earn their living by the sea. I am going back to the incidents of the Prospero and the Malakoff and the Wren. Here is a case where last Spring a capable man was taken off the Labrador route, and a man put on who apparently was incapable. He took the steamer down there and battered her brains out. There was a case where everybody would have admired the Government if they had let the officers continue in their job until the end of the year. Instead of that they gave it to a new officer. I am not going to deny that the men were good men, on a schooner or at the fishery, but not officers of a steamer. They were men without experience. The result was that the captain was unfortunate enough to have an accident, because he had been twelve days without sleep, and with his clothes on, and there is no doubt that he was asleep on the bridge.

You all know about the Malakoff, and there is no need for me to deal any further with the subject.

One other subject is the matter of the conditions in Bell Island. I read in the Evening Telegram some time ago that the Government was likely to deal with the situation. I congratulate the Government on the action that they have taken over the conditions on Bell Island. Conditions at Bell Island have never been satisfactory, and the men never get fair play from the Company. I think it is about time that the Company was brought to its senses in one way or another. If they will not improve conditions put the export tax on them, and make them pay it. That will bring the Company to their senses.

I do not propose to hold up the House any longer this afternoon, but I hope to be able to speak about this matter at a later date, and I hope that the Government will see its way clear to deal with the Humber matter, and the Bell Island matter, and that they will make some satisfactory arrangement between the workmen and the employers.

MR. DUFF—I would like to take this opportunity to congratulate the mover and seconder of the Address in Reply. They have a great deal of material to work on, and they made the most of it. I must say that personally I thought that Speech from the Throne was good looking stuff. But then I am no politician, and I have not a great deal of experience in this House. Also at this time I would like to congratulate the Hon. Prime Minister and the Minister of Marine and Fisheries on their return for the district of Bonavista. I understand that Mr. Ashbourne and myself took a prominent part in having these two gentlemen returned. I have been informed that our names were used a lot down there. Nevertheless I am glad to see them here.

To begin at the end of this Speech of the Governor's I would like to refer to the incorporation of towns. I am just wondering if the Government has a change of heart since last year. It is a well known fact that the members on this side of the house had nothing whatever to do with the affairs of their districts last year, although they were the elected representatives, and why the Government should not want to incorporate the towns is just what I should like to know.

To mention one or two facts. Last year the first thing I found was that the Government had appointed two fire wardens for the district of Carbonear. I have no doubt that there are fire wardens over a good deal of Conception Bay, but there is no work for them to do. It is really a gift, and the men have nothing to do. I am rather surprised that the Government made these appointments, because I thought it was against the policy of the Government. But why they should dismiss one fire warden and appoint two. It was not necessary and was unkind.

Anoher matter I want to speak of is the matter of the Post Office at Bristol's Hope, which is in my district. The people desired to have the post office put in the middle of the settlement, for their convenience. The place chosen was probably the most unsuitable and inconvenient place in the settlement. I must say that the lady in charge has been very good, and carried out her duties very well. But the Government should not have placed the office where it is and in doing this the Government has acted unfairly to the people of this village.

In regard to Victoria Village. It seems strange that the Government would want to incorporate towns, when they will not let the elected representatives of the districts have anything to say in the affairs of their districts. I have a reply here from the Board of Works, whch says that the Department considers it advisable that the money should be expended by the commissioners appointed by the Department. That was not fair or square to the people who were appointed and elected as the Road Board. If that is what they are doing, I cannot see why the Government suddenly wants to incorporate the towns.

Then again I find that there is to be a redistribution of seats. I have only one thing to say about that. I find that there are to be forty members. In my opinion the number of members should be reduced instead of increased. There should be a reduction to at least thirty. At present too many are being kept by the people of the country and I suggest that the number be reduced. As a matter of fact the country is being run by nine men in the Executive Council. There are many men in this House who have nothing to say in the country's affairs. I refer to the Opposition, and it would be just as well if they were not here at all although in some cases they have been returned by very big majorities. There is one thing about the Opposition—they can see what is going on and are able to criticize the doings of the Government. I would like to remark to the members for Bay de Verde that last year there were some repairs supposed to be made to the public wharf at Freshwater. But what happened? The timber was used for the repairing of a private store and not the public wharf. Possibly Mr. Puddester who was down there knows something of this and I think he or Mr. Cramm should look into it. I understand that the Government is also considering the building of a public wharf at Brigus. Now this is unnecessary as there is one there already and the building of another would be too much expense. Sometimes I am inclined to think there are altogether too many public wharves and public buildings. Now, Mr. Speaker, when the Government came into power we were lead to believe hat they were going to do great things on their slogan of Clean Up. Perhaps though we are too hasty in judging them already and should give them a little more time. And perhaps some of those in the Council are not to blame for the slowness in introducing the reforms. We have heard a lot of the Clean Up in the Customs Department and maybe something has been done there but I think that many other departments are in need of reorganization and it should be undertaken at once. I agree with the Hon. Dr. Robinson who in dealing with the Speech from the Throne said the Post Office Department should be taken out of politics entirely. As far as I can see last year there were numerous appointments made of assistant postmasters on trains, etc., appointments of men who had nothing whatever to do only draw their pay. There is something radically wrong in this and it should be remedied at once. Now as to the plan of tourist traffic and road building, I would like to agree with the Government but cannot, as I think it is a wildcat scheme of the worst kind. If we could get people to come here and spend their money it would be alright, and I notice that all the men who own motor cars approve of the plan as to roads, but as far as I can see we only get an occasional tourist here and he never seems to return. As to the building of a hotel for the accommodation of visitors, it would mean a very big outlay and we would never see our money back again. The main thing for us to attend to is the fisheries which are the mainstay and principal industry of the country. Is there no way in which we can spend our money and get returns in this connection. I agree with the reference in the Speech from the Throne that last year the returns were very good but this season a much larger number of men will probably prosecute the voyage and there is a possibility that the markets will be overstocked. In view of all the conditions we should be able here to produce the cheapest fish in the world and the Government should be able to aid in this direction by taking cff the duties on the various supplies. When I see the reference to this tourist traffic, Mr. Speaker, I must say I think it is a very ill-considered measure but if I could see any prospect of returns from it I would agree with it. Now every day we see hundreds of our young fishermen leaving the country by every boat, and they will be going constantly from now on. This loss to the country is inestimable and still we talk of tourists and spending 2 million dollars for roads to bring at best a few dozen or score of visitors here. We all know that these tourists can easily go to Quebec or even down to the eastern provinces but I do not think there will be many cross the Straits, or if they do risk the long and tiresome journey across country to see the roads. A certain few men come here each year to catch salmon or shoot caribou but you can count them on your finger tips. Again Mr. Speaker, there are few representatives in this House who live in the ouports—perhaps one or two on either side—but I would like to bring to their notices that at present there is a fight cn in Conception Bay in connecton with electrc light. Probably the members for Port de Grave, Harbor Grace and Bay de Verde know of it and I would like to ask them what they are going to do about it. Some 20 years ago this House gave certain parties exclusive rights as to lighting and electrical power in Conception Bay which was a crime and I hope we have learned the lesson now in this House and will not do the same again. These powers have been repeated several times since the first grant. To-day the people are fighting for light in Conception Bay and perhaps in a few days will be in darkness. This company which has the exclusive right of house and street lightng paid 10 and 12 per cent. to their shareholders as well as stock bonus of 33% and on the low rate of a minimum of 50 cents per month at first charged. All their machinery is brought in duty free and they are paid by the Government for the street lighting all over Conception Bay. I think, Mr. Speaker, there should be a commission appointed to look into the affairs of this company with their customers and they may find out even a more serious state of affairs. At one time the electrical rights were given to certain business men in Hr. Grace, Heart's Content and Carbonear, but now they are in the hands of the one family who are living in St. John's and are now looking for hundreds of thousands of dollars from the investors. If this matter is investigated the Government might see why they should take a hand in. As to the new industry to be established on the Gander River, Mr. Speaker, I would like to hear an expression from this House as to whether it is going ahead as many men would be able to get work there this summer which will be badly needed. I have heard repeatedly that the men employed on the Humber proposition were not getting a square deal and I do not blame the Government as they had very little to do with it, but I hope if the Gander deal goes through we will see a different condition of affairs. In regard to the case of Bell Island and Besco it has struck me that in this connecion the Government has acted wisely. Besco has appeared a shoddy outfit, and the revelations not pleasing the people have a very poor opinion of them and in the past the Governments have been too lenient altogether with them. It is a very common thing to see the people of Bell Island out of employment and we ought to find out if the Besco concern wants the ore from the mines there so badly. There should be no more remitting of royalty with them as there has been formerly. Now, Mr. Speaker, as to the railway question. The Carbonear branch has been the best paying one and we had one or two trains a day for a time. We have the train crews under pay and perhaps it would not be too much to ask to have the two trans daily. The winter is apparently passed and snow shovelling unnecessary, and nothing to prevent us having two trains. As to the matter of the vote for women, a bill dealing with which is to be introduced this session, I quite agree with the granting of the franchise to them, and I believe that if the women had the vote the liquor question would be speedily disposed of. I am disappointed in the liquor bill to see that the prices have not been reduced. I do not know if the quality has been improved but as the prices for liquors have been kept up the present Government has been profiteering somewhat.

MR. ASHBOURNE—Mr. Speaker, I would like to add my congratulations to those already offered to Mr. Cahill and Mr. Browne for the able manner in which they proposed and seconded, respectively, the motion for the Address in Reply to the Speech from the Throne. I want to be brief and to the point and I hope I am not speaking to the galleries. (I don't think I am, as the people have nearly all gone home to tea). The first thing I notice in the Speech from the Throne is a reference to the codfishery. To my mind the codfishery is of prime importance to this country. It is the backbone of this country and has been so for centuries past and will always be in my opinion. We should treasure always the fisheries and we should do everything in our power to foster and develop the Labrador, French Shore and West Coast fisheries, hence it is a good thing that the first mention in the Speech from the Throne is with regard to the codfishery. It seems that the Government, though, are taking the credit for the high prices that obtained last year; but, as previous speakers pointed out, the credit is not due to the Government. Last year there was a shortage in the catch of codfish to the extent of over three hundred thousand quintals, and according to the law of supply and demand when the catch is short the price goes up correspondingly. The history of Newfoundland has proved that the prosperity of the country is in the same proportion as our fisheries are profitably engaged in. In fact, as has been already said, more attention should be given to this important industry, because, after all, Newfoundland depends to such a large extent upon it. We have a good supply of timber and we have considerable mineral resources; but the codfishery is the most important asset we have and there should be a bounty paid for the improved cure of fish or something done to encourage and give heart to the fishermen to pursue his hazardous calling. I think that the whole matter should be gone into thoroughly by the Government, seeing that the fisherman is the bone and sinew of our land.

The next reference in the Speech from the Throne is to the Humber industry. According to the last message I had from that territory, the staff is still considerably reduced over there. I would like to know from the Government why it is that foreigners are receiving more pay than Newfoundlanders for doing the same work. There are instances of this spoken of in this House this afternoon which are outrageous, and, I contend, that the matter should be gone into carefully and found out how it is that people from Montreal get higher rates of pay than people from St. John's for doing the same class of work.

In relation to the Bell Island proposition, I have no hesitation in saying that a strong hand is necessary. As we have the third largest hematite ore deposit in the world on Bell Island, I think that we are in a position to see that, if Besco do not operate the mines, the Government could. I think that a strong hand should be applied in order that we might protect not only the workmen at Bell Island, but also the country at large. If the Besco people do not meet their contractual obligations, they should be forced to do so.

The next paragraph dealt with in the Speech from the Throne goes on to say "My Government recently sent a delegation to Canada to discuss suggestions regarding a settlement, by negotiations, of what is popularly known as the "Labrador Boundary Question." I should like to know who suggested the sending of this delegation to Canada and whether it came from the Newfoundland side or from the Canadian side. To my mind this is a very important question. No doubt Canada is after the timber rights and the timber rights are equal to the fishery rights there. A few years ago if a man wanted to build a house in the outports he could build it out of pine. To-day he cannot get any pine at all in our section of the coast and he is compelled to use fir and spruce. Therefore, I think we shall need that timber on the Labrador in years to come, and we want to be sure that we are not giving away something that may be utilized, if not in a few short years to come, by generations yet unborn; so we should safeguard their interests and act for them as an industrious factor. I should not like for the Government of the present day to make any compromise, if they are sure we have a good right to that part of the Labrador in question. There is also to be found on the Labrador considerable mineral property from Nain to Mugford, and I think about three years ago Canada had a surveying steamer down there with about eighty men. They are naturally as much interested in this question as we are. We, as an Opposition, want to see that Newfoundland gets the best portion of the bargain. There is also a great deal of timber and mineral lands at Hamilton Inlet. I think that no compromise or sacrifice should be made in connection with this Labrador question without prior consent of the Legislature.

I would also like to see the correspondence in relation to the purchase of this steamer which is being built in Holland for the Government. To my mind it seems rather strange that that there should be such a difference in the contract price of ten thousand pounds for the construction of this steamer, and I back up the statement of Mr. Hickman that it was ill-advised to place this contract in Holland, without being positively sure and without making full enquiries that the contract could not be just as well placed with a British firm. We are all Britishers and proud to be such, and I think that if we go to the Old Country we shall always get a square deal. and when it comes to a few dollars here or there that it does not pay to quibble over a small amount. We should see that the country that does most to protect our shores and who are ready to serve in our defence, if occasion should ever arise, should be given the preference for all work that Newfoundland has to give. We go to England to raise a loan of four million dollars, and, as the railroad was considered a public utility, they are going to pay a certain interest on the amount spent on the purchase of rails. Now I want to be convinced as to whether or not that aspect of the matter was gone into thoroughly before the order for the construction of this steamer was placed in Holland.

With regard to the matter of unemployment, it seems, according to the Government, that public money spent for work done at this time will not give commensurate returns. I understand that a certain form of relief is being given out in St. John's. Now what about the people of the Outports? Are the outports getting their share and the same square deal as St. John's. Well we have men from Green Bay in the woods cutting wood and we have lots of men from Green Bay who are anxious to go in the woods but who cannot get there. A short time ago I sent a message to try and get some of my constituents work in the woods, but was unsuccessful. Now we are here to see that outport men get as good a deal as St. John's men.

We are also told in the Speech from the Throne that the Department of Posts and Telegraphs is "overmanned and under-worked." It would be interesting to know what appointments were made there within the past few months and whether this statement in the Speech is correct or not.

I notice that the Minister of Agriculture and Mines had interviews with farmers, and I hope that much good will accrue from those interviews. No doubt Newfoundland suffers considerably by her climate, and it is a question, in my mind, whether or not agriculture can be profitably carried on with success in this country, owing to the rigorous climate. At all events I hope that some successful scheme will be worked out whereby the farmers will be able to grow more crops in this country and have to import less from other countries. If we could produce more hay, turnips, potatoes, etc., we would have a much better chance to survive, especially when the world markets get bad

According to the Speech from the Throne, it seems forecasted that a larger amount will be asked for in the Estimates. This, to my mind, is regrettable, although I may be mistaken. I hope that the expenditure will be less. With regard to the taking off of duties. We are all aware that the price of Pork, Beef and Kerosene have advanced and we all know that these commodities are of paramount importance, as is also Molasses, but I notice that the Government has not seen fit to remove the duty from molasses. I do not know why, but I would very much like to know. As I understand it, the matter rests with nine or ten members of the Executive to say when they see fit to remove the duty from molasses.

I do not think this should be given to any body of men outside of this House. I am glad the Government has seen fit to remove the duties off these because juggling with the tariff does not assure the best interests in the trade of the country. And it is very difficult for the business man to know to-day where he stands. If to-day the duty is taken off and to-morrow put on and the next week removed again, there is no stability—the one thing wanted to-day in the country. We want to get down to rock bottom, bed rock. And seeing that they had the power to remove the duties from these commodities they might have included molasses. If they cannot take it off at this session of the House reserve it for the next session. I understand at this moment a law was passed as to the time the duty was to be taken off molasses. I do not think it right that we should be bound down to any body of men outside of this House. I am very glad to know that that is not so, because in my opinion this House should have absolute right to remove the duties at any time. The Bounty for shipbuilding is a great thing. I hope that the amount they get per ton will be sufficient to allow people to go ahead and repair their schooners. A person interested in fishing and looking around cannot see what is going to happen now that the schooner fleet is fast being depleted, and he wonders where they are going to get schooners to carry on the fishery in a few years. The work on the Humber will engage less men than last year. The majority will find their way to the fishery, in order to secure employment there, and the outport man perfers during the summer months to go to the fisheries rather than to go to the woods, that is if some encouragement is given by this Governemnt. I think they will be backed by the Opposition Party in order that everything that can be done by the fishermen to repair their schooners and get new ones will be done. We are told that the taxes on banks has been excessive and unfair, and we are asked to reduce it. I understand that some banks are paying dividends of from 15 to 20 per cent. I know that bank stock carried double liability and that the stocks are greatly at a premium. They are charging 6 and in the outports 7 per cent. interest, it is a question whether or not they can afford to pay the half of one per cent. which is to be collected from them. I shall want certain information from the Prime Minister or the Finance Minister as to how he arrived at this statement that this tax was unfair and excessive. To-day in the outports we are asked 7. In St. John's perhaps it is 6. I know as far as Twillingate is concerned the rate is 7. If the tax is remitted or even a reduction made are we confident that they will get a lower rate of interest charged in the outports. The successful prosecution of trade depends very largely upon the continuance of the banking facilities. Banks play an important part in the commerce of the country. And we want in our banks large men, broad-minded men because we know that the banks may be sometime or other called upon to carry the load as it were. Whether or not the policy of the banks will be changed by the removal of this tax or this reduction remains to be seen. I believe the policy of the banks is generally dictated from abroad. I don't owe the banks any money.

These are points I would like to bring up before the House. I believe that anything that I say will be construed as constructive criticism and I want to bring those matters before you. I question whether this remission of reduction will have any effect upon the banking facilities which will be afforded our men in this country. I think the Government should go into this matter carefully in order that they might not err. An examination of the Dry Dock made by an expert shows that it has need of extensive repairs. I would like to ask whether it was necessary to bring an engineer here to report on the dry dock. Have we no Government Engineer, and is he not capable of reporting on the dry dock. Even a school boy could see that it needs extensive repairs. I don't know what an expensive engineer was required for. The income tax is to be abolished as it was found to be most unsuitable for Newfoundland, and no doubt this change will be a welcome one. Another Bill that is to be brought before the House is the Redistribution Bill. We have in this country to-day a population of about half the size of a modern town About a quarter of a million people, and we have here an island one-sixth larger than Ireland.

As has been pointed out by one of the former speakers, the policy depends upon the 10 men of the Executive. We may increase the districts from 36 to 40. It may be a good thing. I have an open mind about it. The idea of redistributing or splitting up the districts is a good one. It will be an incentive to the districts to return local men. And I believe since the outports get a better share, that perhaps they will do more in the building up of their island home. There is no mention in the Speech from the Throne of the Liquor Bill or how it is working. We are told there has been nothing done as yet in regard to the building of a hotel. Nothing has come of that up to the present. The question of spending two million on roads I think is a debatable one. In my opinion the money would be better spent, if spent on the fisheries. I think the idea of tourist traffic is a visionary one as I said at the last session of the House. That the motor traffic law needs to be changed is apparent. To-day persons who have motor cars in the outports have to pay six dollars to the Municipal Council. They do not even have to have a number plate on their automobiles. The question seems an open one and ready for discussion at any moment especially if it is the intention of the Governemnt as it evidently is in this Speech to create a new Department. With regard to incorporating municipalities, I think we should have more team play. I think, as it is mentioned here in this Speech that we should try to bring our towns up to the State and not retrograde. We have heard nothing about the railway. This is a very important branch of the public service. It is a public utility and the fact that nothing is said in the Speech about it indicates that it is not getting the attention and consideration which it requires. I hope, Mr. Speaker, that the Goverunemnt will see its way to go through the business of the House with the greatest despatch, and I would like also to ask that they let us as representatives of districts know about and be consulted in any matters pertaining to the districts which we have the honor to represent.

I have already been consulted with regard to two or three things about the District of Twillingate, but I would like to be consulted still more fully about these matters of vital interest to my district. I feel sure that every member on this side of the House feels as I do, and would like to be consulted as I would. Our advice may not be taken, but we would like to be given the chance. I notice that the time for adjournment is now come, so I beg to move that the House adjourn.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—Mr. Speaker, before the adjournment there is one little explanation which I would like to make, in connecton with what Mr. Ashbourne has just said. He was right and we were wrong. He said just now that we had not the right to remove the duties off molasses. It appears according to the last clause that we have.

The clause reads as follows:—

Reads the Clause.

I just want to make the statement because the Government has no intention to interfere with the tariff, and will not exercise their rights under that clause. We have decided not to take the duty off molasses because we have done as much as we can well afford, and also because the price of molasses is very much less in Barbados this year than it was last, and therefore the duty being left on will not be felt so much as it would be if left on the other articles in question.

On motion it was ordered that the debate on the Address in Reply be deferred until to-morrow.

It was moved and seconded that when the House rises, it adjourn until to-morrow afternoon at three of the clock.

The House then adjourned accordingly.

TUESDAY, Feb. 24th, 1925.

The House met at three of the clock in the afternoon, pursuant to adjournment.

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE —Mr. Speaker, I ask leave to present a petition from a number of the residents of Portugal Cove. The people on the West side of the Cove request that a connecting road be put in from the main road to their farms. Very many people are interested in the petition and I would strongly recommend it for the consideration of the Public Works Department and ask the attention of the Minister to it when the allocations are being made in the early part of the year.

Mr. Hickman gave notice of question.

MR. HICKMAN—Mr. Speaker, I would like to make reference to two questions which I asked on yesterday's Order Paper. One was "to ask the Hon. Minister of Justice for list of all convictions under the Prohibition Act and Alcoholic Liquor Act from June 15th, 1924 to February 15th, 1925. The fines imposed and the amounts collected and what portion of each fine went to the informer."

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—I gave the reply to it yesterday.

MR. HICKMAN—How long will it take to get all the particulars.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—You will have to wait some time to get them. It will probably take about a month.

MR. HICKMAN—You told me yesterday it would take two weeks.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—If you are in a hurry and name the specific cases, I can get the information for you in a quarter of an hour. You name the Magistrate or the particular convictions and I will give you the particulars very quickly.

MR. HICKMAN—I want the whole particulars.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—I know what you want.

MR. HICKMAN—I want the information too before the House closes. I also put a question on yesterday's Order Paper to the Prime Minister asking him to lay upon the table of the House a statement of all moneys paid out on Executive authority from 10th day of June 1924 to 15th day of February 1925. Now the Prime Minister's reply, I consider, is very unsatisfactory. The members on this side of the House have the right to know what moneys are paid out on Executive authority.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—I do not pay out money on Executive authority.

MR. HICKMAN—But you are the Prime Minister and you are the man from whom we expect to get the information we want, and if the information is not forthcomng this way we shall have to ask for the Minutes or the Warrants of the Executive Council. During the last session of this House members on the other side had a great deal to say about the Executive Government paying out moneys on their own account, without referring the same to this House of Assembly. I understood that the present Government would not pay out any moneys unless what is absolutely necessary. In that event, I see no reason why the information that I have asked for should not be forthcoming. If certain things have been done that should not be done there is no reason why the information should not be given to this House.

Mr. Randell gave notice of question

Mr. Scammell gave notice of question.

Mr. Brown gave notice of question.

Mr. Duff gave notice of question.

Mr. Godden gave notice of question.

Mr. Hibbs gave notice of questions.

Pursuant to notice and on motion of Hon. the Minister of Finance the House resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole to consider certain Resolutions respecting the Revenue Acts.

Mr. Speaker left the chair.

Mr. Puddister took the Chair of Committee.

HON MINISTER OF FINANCE AND CUSTOMS—Mr. Chairman, these resolutions are what I spoke of the other day. They are just to amend the Act in relation to the duty on beef, etc. They are for the purpose of putting on the free list "beef when salted in barrels, including duty on barrels; pork in barrels or half barels, viz: Mess, Family, Prime Mess, Rump, Extra Prime, Bean Clear, Butt and Ham, including duty on packages per barrel, Belly, Back or Family Mess or Loin Pork including duty on packages; kerosene Oil and the package in which it is imported, and also beef when salted in barrels—and so on according to the resolutions.

You already know by the Speech from the Throne that the duty was going to be removed off these articles, and the intention is to enable the people giving those artcles in supplies to get articles in duty free, so that the supplies will not cost the fishermen anything extra.

MR. HICKMAN—Mr. Chairman, in reference to these Resolutions I would like to say that in removing the duty on pork, beef and kerosene oil the Government is only removing duty that they themselves put on these articles last year—at the last session of the House. At the opening of the last session of the House these articles were duty free, but the Government placed duty on those articles and also on molasses. These commodities have advanced in value, and I suppose the Government feels that by taking the duty off they will be relieving the burden of the fishermen in their outfits for the coming year. If that is the idea it is a very good one. It was not the idea when they put these duties on at the last seession.

A great deal has been said and particularly in the Speech from the Throne about the good results of last year's fishery. I intend to deal with that matter later on, but the result of last year's fishery is not so good as the Government would make us believe. The price of fish was not so high in the early part of the season as it was in the latter part, and therefore the fishermen did not get very good results from the fishery. It was only the men who had very good success at the fishery who were able to carry this burden and pay their accounts at the extremely high prices which were charged for these commodities on which the duty is now being removed. After these duties were placed upon beef, pork and molasses last year, the prices of these commodities went up three or four dollars a barrel, and then the duty of three dollars a barrel increased the burden which was placed on the backs of the fishermen by six or seven dollars a barrel at least on pork and beef more than it was before the meeting of the last session of the House of Assembly.

HON. PRIME MINISTER—You do not blame us for the advance, do you?

MR. HICKMAN—I blame you for putting on the duty on these commodities. The Prime Minister as a merchant knew the prices of these commodities, and I blame him because he, knowing the prices of these articles, put the duty on them, and so increased the burden on the backs of the fishermen.

I notice that molasses is left out of this bill. Evidently it is not the intention of the Government to take the duty off molasses. The Prime Minister makes the explanation that molasses this year is at a low price in Barbados. I do not know that the price of molasses is going to be very much lower this year in Barbados. Some time ago it was quoted at thirty-three cents per gallon there, but there were no purchases made at that price, and at the present time it is quoted at thirty-eight cents a gallon, and the planters do not care to sell even at that price. So you can see that by the time the purchases are made for Newfoundland, molasses might be as high as it was last year, particularly if there is an advance in sugar, which there is likely to be, because sugar has been at a fairly low price for some time, and it is not likely to go lower.

However, Mr. Chairman, it is my intention to move an amendment to these Resolutions that molasses be added to the free list. I do not know if any other members wish to discuss this matter before I go further.

MR. WARREN—Mr. Chairman. The resolutions which are now before the House merely confirm what was planned by the recent Government, and of course must have the support of every member of this House. I would now like to ask that another article be added to the free list, and that is an article which will not cost the Colony very much. I refer to the duty on dories. The electors of the district that I represent have asked me to do this. I understand that the duty collected on these articles last year was not more than fifteen or sixteen hundred dollars.

At the present time no dories are being made in this country, but whether they can be made or not is a matter for those who know more about the matter than I do. What brings the thing home to my constituents, I think, and also to the constituents of other representatives of South Coast districts where dories are very much used, is the fact that other fishermen—Lunenburg and others—come down there and fish with their dories, but do not have to pay duty on them because they do not land them. My constituents say that this duty might easily be left off.

I do not ask that the duty on dories be taken off by these resolutions, but I do ask the Hon. Minister of Finance to give this matter his consideration, and, if possible, when he brings in his budget speech, to look into the matter and see if the duty can be taken off dories. I have been given to understand that it is very hard to make these dories in this country. I n any case, so far as the amendment proposed by the Leader of the Opposition is concerned, I have no other course than to vote for it. A year ago, the Government with which I was associated took the duty off molasses, because they thought they could afford to do it, and that it was a duty that ought to be taken off; and unless the Government shows some reason why the duty should remain on, I have no other alternative but to vote for the amendment proposed by the Leader of the Opposition.

MR. HALFYARD—Mr. Chairman. In connection with the resolutions now before the chair, I would corroborate all that has already been said by the Leader of the Opposition and by Mr. Warren, the Hon. member for Fortune Bay. It was, in the opinion of ninety-five per cent. of the electors of Newfoundland, a wrong move on the part of the Government last year to put the duties back on these articles now mentioned in these resolutions. It was a great surprise, and disappointment. Those who supported the Monroe Party, and voted them to the seats which they now hold in the House of Assembly felt that they had been given a slap in the face. The Government which had promised to make living conditions easier, particularly for the fishermen, put the duty on these articles, and when that was done it was evident that the promise of the Government had simply been forgotten as soon as the votes were counted. The first move of the Governemnt as soon as they had a chance in the House of Assembly, was to add insult to injury by placing back the burden of taxation on pork, beef, molasses and kerosene oil. However, apparently the pressure brought to bear on them, was so great that they were ashamed to allow the duty to remain on flour and gasolene. That was taken off last year.

Now the action of the Government is not expected in removing these duties at this time, as one of the speakers yesterday pointed out, in view of their intention to remove the Income Tax. Certainly they could not remove the Income Tax which is paid by the well-to-do, and leave the duties on the necessaries of life which are largely consumed by the fishermen and labouring classes. Every concession which the Government have made in any respect to the labouring classes seem to have been made under pressure and not with any free will. Why molasses is not now included amongst the articles put on the free list I cannot understand. We do not know what the price of molasses will be when importations will be made within a few months' time. Prices fluctuate, and we do not know what those prices will be when importations are made.

And although the price may be a little low to-day we cannot tell what the price will be in the future as pointed out by Mr. Hickman. And this is something that the fishermen and the labouring class of the country use more so than anything else, and why it is excluded from these resolutions I cannot for the life of me understand. I heartily support the amendment proposed by the Hon. Leader of the Opposition that molasses be adedd to the free list.

Mr. Speaker resumed the Chair.

The Chairman from the Committee reported that they had considered the matter to them referred, had passed the said Resolutions without amendment and recommended that Bills be introduced to give effect to the same.

On motion for the adoption of the Report Mr. Hickman moved and Mr. Halfyard seconded, in amendment, that "Molasses including the duty on packages be included."

Whereupon the House divided, and there appeared in favor of the amendment:

Mr. Hickman
Mr. Halfyard

so it passed in the negative.

QUESTIONS.

(1) MR. SCAMMELL—To ask the Minister of Public Works what Ferry Services were in operation in the District of St. Barbe the past season, who were the ferrymen in each case, and what salaries were paid them.

THE MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS—Mr. Speaker, that answer is in course of preparation.

(2) MR. BROWN—To ask the Minister of Public Works to lay on the Table of the House a list of all allocations of Public moneys, main line and special, sent out to the district of Twillingate since April 30th last, showing in each case to whom grants were sent.

THE MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS—Mr. Speaker, the same answer applies to that.

(3) MR. WARREN—To ask Hon. the Colonial Secretary: (1) How many families in St. John's are being relieved at public expense per week; (2) What amount is being paid to individuals and families; (3) What is the total amount paid from January 1st, 1925, to February 14th, 1925; (4) If any investigation of the circumstances of applicants is made before they receive relief; (5) If so, what is the nature of such investigation; (6) What steps are being taken to relieve destitution in other districts; (7) What is the total amount spent in able-bodied poor relief by districts from January 1st, 1925, to February 14th, 1925.

HON. THE COLONIAL SECRETARY—Mr. Speaker, that question is being prepared by Captain Byrne, and will be ready in a short time.

(4) MR. ASHBOURNE—To ask the Minister of Public Works to lay on the Table of the House an itemized account of the expenditure in connection with repairs to the Court House at Twillingate during 1923 and 1924, showing names of parties supplying material, names of labourers and how much each was paid; bills of all material, etc., and if any Commissions were paid on purchase of material.

THE MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS—That answer is being prepared.

The answer to Question No. 5 was tabled.

The answer to Question No. 6 was tabled.

(7) MR. HALFYARD—To ask Hon. the Colonial Secretary to lay on the Table of the House a statement of claims received by the claims agent of the Railway for compensation for animals killed on the Railway from September 1st, 1923, to February 1st, 1925. The statement to show, in detail, the following: date of claim, name and address of claimant, value and description of animals, date killed, amount of award, if any. If claim disallowed, state reasons.

HON. THE COLONIAL SECRETARY—That answer will be tabled to-morrow.

(9) HR. HICKMAN—To ask the Hon. the Prime Minister to lay upon the table of the House all correspondence with the Quebec Government in reference to the Labrador Boundary Quebec.

HON THE PRIME MINISTER—Mr. Speaker, I beg to lay on the table of the House a copy of all correspondence prior to our taking leave for Montreal. The correspondence which has taken place since our return has been of such a confidential nature that unless authorised by the Government of Quebec we would not be justified in tabling it.

(12) MR. SCAMMELL—To ask the Minister of Marine and Fisheries to lay on the Table of the House a statement showing: (a) what kerosene oil has been purchased by his Department for light houses since April 30th last (1924); (b) parties from whom such kerosene was purchased; (c) price paid in each case.

MINISTER OF MARINE & FISHERIES—In reply to the Hon. Member for St. Barbe I may say that 1,120 gallons of kerosene were bought at 22½ cents per gallon. 2,920 gallons at 25 cents per gallon these were all purchased from the Imperial Oil Company.

ADDRESS IN REPLY.

MR. ASHBOURNE—Mr. Speaker, there are a few points I would like to speak briefly upon. I was glad that the Prime Minister drew the attention of the House to the fact that I was correct in my statement yesterday as regards the right of the Governor-in-Council to abrogate the duty on pork, beef, molasses and kerosene oil. I would also say that I am not very pleased that the Governor-in-Council did not exercise the right to remove the duty from molasses. I feel sure that it could be taken off, and I think it would be wise to have the Act rescinded and I would suggest that the Government would bring in a bill to rescind that Act and if they cannot place it on a free list, place it so that the Members of the Executive Government will no longer have it under their control. As I said yesterday changes in the tariff tend to demoralization in trade and if it is the hope of the country to get back stability in trade we must finish once and for all with tinkering with the tariff. Referring to bank interest, it is a fact that 7% is being charged by some banks. I have been informed recently that in St. John's as well 7% has been charged. The managing director of a large concern told me that a few days ago he was asked for his signature to a document bearing interest at 7%. He said that if his signature was not good enough to get the 6% rate he would not sign the note. The result was that the interest rate was changed. I think that we should have an understanding with the banks in this regard. If it is the intention of the Government to reduce the rate of one half per cent. there should be some understanding so that the outports would not be unjustly dealt with in this regard. The absence in the Speech from the Throne to the granting of the franchise for women seems perhaps rather worthy of mention. The Prime Minister said on the opening day it was his intention to bring in a private bill to this effect. I think that as we are living in the twentieth century and not in the dark ages that it is a wise move on the part of the Prime Minister to bring in this bill in order that we may extend the right of the franchise to women. Nobody who has looked at the work of women in times of peril and national calamity and particularly in the Great War in muniton factories and in other ways providing for the comforts of the men can deny that they helped in no small way to bring about victory and bring the war to a successful issue and so I feel that I can heartily support this bill when it is brought in. There is mention made in the Speech from the Throne with regard to tourist traffic. Now if I may be permitted I would like to read from the Hansard. At the last session the Prime Minister stated "we can interest hotel companies to build a chain of hotels through the country." We find now that the Government has not been successful in inducing anybody to come into Newfoundland to build an hotel. It seems now the Government is entertaining the idea of building hotels themselves. I consider that the Government has enough irons in the fire and I would like to know what the Government has to do with building hotels in Newfoundland. I think the allocation of two millions to be spent on the roads had far better be spent on the fisheries to encourage the fishermen of this country. I would like to comment on what was said by the Hon. Member for St. Barbe in relation to the Pit Props. We have great reserves of timber and we know that they are fast being depleted, that by and by they will be gone unless something is done in the matter of reafforestation. It would be well for the Government to go into the matter to try and conserve our forests by preventing the exportation of pulp-wood. We may some day be in need of timber and the use of this wood for the manufacture of pulp. There are one or two other matters that I intend to speak on but when the different bills are coming up I shall keep my remarks until that time. The Speech from the Throne contains quite a lot and perhaps some might call it radical I would call it perhaps conservation. I am a Liberal and glad to be a member of the Liberal party. Liberalism has stood for progress. It stands for progress to-day and it will stand for it in the future.

MR. HIBBS—Mr. Speaker, I desire to make a few remarks on the subjects referred to in the Sueech from the Throne, but before doing so I wish to congratulate the mover and the seconder of the Address in Reply. Both Mr. Cahill and Mr. Browne made very excellent speeches on that occasion; they played their part well, and like loyal and staunch supporters, they, of course, did their best to boost the administration of which they are members. To those of us who have had the pleasure of listening to those gentlemen on former occasions their eloquence was not surprising. I sincerely congratulate them.

Now, sir, I would like to review the Speech from the Throne for a few moments. The very opening paragraph deals with the fisheries, and it is very disappointing indeed, because I find there are only four brief lines devoted to the greatest industry in Newfoundland. Now of course I am not accepting that as an index of what the Government intends doing. We have at the moment as the Leader of the Government a man directly interested in the fisheries of the Colony. He is one of the biggest exporting merchants in the country and I cannot believe that he has not some policy in view. If I may be permitted to make a few comments on what I think the Government should do with regard to the fisheries the coming summer, I would say, first of all, we must make up our minds that we are going to be faced this Spring with a much greater number of men endeavouring to engage in the fisheries than last season. Last year the Humber employed seven or eight thousand men, most of whom would otherwise be engaged at the codfishery. The Humber construction work is practically completed now. There will be nothing like that number employed this year, and as there is little hope of the Gander operating in the Spring or during the year, for that matter, there is no other recourse than the fisheries. What are you preparing to do to assist those men to engage in this industry? Most of them will have no supplies, and it is well for you to have that in mind right now. Many people will be looking for some means of encouragement to engage in the season's voyage. To quote the Speech:—"The codfishery last year was prosecuted successfully, and the products disposed of at the best prices known in the history of the Colony (exclusive of the abnormal war years)." It is not correct to say that last year's fishery was successful, as a matter of fact the shore fishery was the smallest for a number of years. However, the prices obtained were very good, particularly in the latter part of the season. There is no doubt but that because of the good prices last year it is generally thought that there are going to be high prices next year. I don't believe the Prime Minister or any member of the Government is sanguine of the high prices continuing if we have four or five thousand more men engaged in the catching of fish, and particularly if our competitors—France and Norway —continue to increase their activities in this direction. I would like to see something being done to increase the value of the fisheries, in the way of a better cure and in regard to its sale in the foreign markets. Some years ago we had trade commissioners, but because of party politics the plan was knocked from its very inception. It is very apparent that any country that exports to foreign markets twelve million dollars' worth of produce should have representatives to look after its interests there.

Mr. Speaker, it is a poor argument that because the late Government introduced the idea of trade commissioners, with the abnormal conditions existing at the time militating against its success, that this Government should not take the suggestion seriously. The Government should not hesitate. Get good live commissioners, the best men obtainable, men who know the business down to the ground, and send them to the markets to boost and sell our products. If you think the idea is not a sound one, then we should advise such countries as Great Britain and the United States that they are wrong in sending men abroad to sell their goods. I hope the Government is seriously considering the matter, but the subject is of such vial importance that I want to further impress it upon them.

The next paragraph in the Speech deals with the Humber construction and says that the work proceeded there with remarkable speed and success. The speed side of the operation is something we all know of already. As to the matter of success, I am not so sure; I would like to put a question mark after that. If we judge by the complaints of the workers who were engaged there, it was not such a success for them, and, sir, if we take into consideration the matter of discrimination between Newfoundland and foreign workmen, the proposition has fallen far short of expectations. I do not directly blame the Government for this state of affairs, and perhaps they were not altogether responsible, but surely it was their duty to investigate and discover what has been going on there. If I remember rightly this matter was brought to the attention of the Government, even debated on the floors of this House, and the facts disputed by some members, who claimed that Newfoundland workmen received the same fair treatment as foreign labourers. I am prepared to challenge that statement, as several cases of gross discrimination has been practised against our workmen, and, Mr. Speaker, this kind of thing should not have been allowed, and the Government long ago should have taken steps to prevent it. To cite one case, out of many, as an example: Painters from this city were engaged by the N. P. & P. Company last Spring, they arrived simultaneously with a number of Canadian painters. I know two of these men and they are first class tradesmen. They worked in the same room painting and varnishing with two Canadians. One of them received forty cents per hour and the other fifty cents. The Canadians who were doing exactly the same work were paid sixty-five cents per hour. Besides this the Canadians came in with their passages paid, while our men were obliged to pay railway fares by having it deducted from their wages. The Canadians were rated sixty-five cents per hour and found, while our men received forty and fifty cents per hour and had to pay one dollar a day for their board. The Newfoundlanders paid for their bedding while the Canadians enjoyed theirs free.

HON. MR. BENNETT—You should have provided for that when you were putting the contract through.

MR. HIBBS—We did not think we should be succeeded by a Government so absolutely indifferent to the interests of our people, as you have proven yourself to be. It is all very fine for the Colonial Secretary to interject that kind of talk, but we cannot all be prophets. These are unforseen circumstances that should be dealt with as they arose by the Government of to-day.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—The people who made the contract have the sin on their soul, if sin there be, and you will have to do the confessing, not us.

MR. HIBBS—Mr. Speaker, I recollect that certain men who are now enjoying seats on the Government side of the House were on this side at the time when that contract was debated, but I have no recollection that they ever offered a helpful suggestion with respect to this question.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Do you remember the history of the affair? And that we had to pass that contract, and also give the Reids two million dollars. We had to take both parts of the bargain and smile.

MR. HIBBS—The railway settlement in no way affected the question under discussion, and that kind of camouflage will never remedy the evils complained of, and which I am placing before the House. At a matter of fact I think the two men I refer to are constituents of the Hon. the Minister of Justice, and I would expect him to be alive to their interests in this particular.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—I wish I could do something for them.

MR. HIBBS—The next question in this lengthy document is the trouble at Bell Island. In referring to this the Speech from the Throne is telling us something else that we know all about. However I have to congratula'e the Government on their attitude in this matter, which shows that after all they have decided to take our advice. Last session, it will be remembered, there was similar trouble on the Humber, which resulted in a strike like that at Bell Island; it will also be remembered that messages were coming in here pleading for intervention but the Government were quite indifferent to the plea of the workmen, and took the stand that it was none of their business. It was a matter for settlement between the employers and employees. The Government regarded the dispute as a domestic difference between the Company and its workmen that did not justify Government interference. But why the change of policy now? I congratulate the Honourable the Premier on the stand he has taken in connection with the Bell Island trouble, and only regret that the same action was not taken in the case of the Humber, which fact perhaps explains why such regrettable discrimination followed.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—In the one case we were bound by a contract but in the other we were not. We can talk to Besco but we could not to the Humber people.

MR. HIBBS—You were not bound to allow the rights of our own people to be infringed upon either at the Humber or at Bell Island.

Another matter referred to in the Speech, and one we hear a lot about recently is the Labrador Boundary Question. I can appreciate the Government's position as to saying very little about this matter, as they are in the throes of negotiations with the Government of Quebec at the present time, and obviously it would be injudicious to disclose anything of a confidential nature. I think I speak for the gentlemen on this side of the House when I say, we hope the Government will make the best possible bargain for the country in the settlement of this vexatious question. We on this side of the House have no desire to embarrass the Government in this connection, but personally I have a few ideas to which I would like to give expression. I think I know the sentiment of the people in Newfoundland, and believe I am justified in saying if you can get decent terms from Quebec, sell the Labrador hinterland. The general desire of the people throughout the country is to get rid of this question, because they are tired of listening to stories of the dispute, and reading the lists of big fees that political lawyers and others have raked in while engaged in real or imaginary work in this connection. I could regale the House for an hour or more with references to these fees, which ran anywhere from ten thousand dollars down. After all to be practical in discussing the matter of the disputed area, we have held this claim for over three hundred years and it will remain for three hundred years more without the slightest returns to Newfoundland. If there are valuable timber and water power there, by what means are we going to develop it; I advise you to get down to practical business and dispose of it, but, by all means protect the fishing rights of our people. It is, I feel superfilous to suggest that, as I have no doubt the Government are fully alive to that phase of the question. Mr. Speaker, I repeat, we should make the best terms available and get the most money possible, but hesitate seriously before you let the matter go to the Privy Council. We must remember that Canada is a big and prosperous country, having lots of money, prestige and high standing in the Empire. Canada, because of her geographical position can develop the Labrador, while we cannot. We are living in a country that needs development badly, and we require money to carry out that development. I firmly believe that Newfound land has a perfect right to the Labrador territory affected by this dispute, but it requires diplomatic skill on the part of our negotiators to drive a bargain with the Canadian authorities, and I sincerely hope the Government will prove equal to the test.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—What price would you suggest for it?

MR. HIBBS—To mention any price here, would I fear, embarrass you and your Government. I hold certain ideas with regard to what the terms should be. Among other things, I believe that not only should Newfoundland fishing rights be preserved, but a right to erect fishing rooms, stages and other intercourse with the land should be reserved, including the cutting of necessary timber for boni fide fishing purposes. I cannot think, however, that any good purpose would be served, at this juncture, at least, by shouting the price which you are negotiating for from the house tops.

Mr. Speaker, before closing my remarks on this subject, I would say once more, get the best price you can for the hinterland of the Labrador, but sell it if you can and use the money in reducing the taxation which our people are suffering under, and in developing and opening up the resources of our own country. Let us do this while we are alive. We shall all be dead bye and bye and receive no more benefit from the lands of Labrador than did our forefathers. When this question is settled by negotiation there will be less inducement perhaps in the legal profession, but what is better for Newfoundland, there will be greater room and inducement for farmers.

Now sir, the Speech also refers to the fact that the United States is making a claim against us, with respect to that old fishery squabble of long ago. It is one of the greatest mistakes in the world to advertise yourself as having too much money. During the last three or four months we have been reading in the Government newspapers glowing accounts of the flowing revenues the Government were receiving.

HON. MR. SULLIVAN—It pays to advertise don't you know.

MR. HIBBS—It pays to advertise in the right way, but you people went at it in the wrong way. The trouble with you, was, that you were so surprised and delighted upon getting in power, that you did not know what struck you. It was like getting money from home, you did not have to work for it, your predecessors in office had done all the work for you. During 1924 money was flowing in from the Humber like water, it was a veritable gold mine for the Government—and then you began to advertise your good fortune, with the result that the Americans came along, and dug up an old claim against us. I am not a bit surprised to find even the old mother Country making up her mind to relieve us of some of our surplus cash while the going is good, and she politely presents a bill for several thousand dollars on account of airships and warships, equipments, etc. It is a wonder that such bills were not sent in when we were in office seeing that we were blamed for being so liberal over money. The late Government were obliged to spend money to help those who were in need, there is no such problem as that to-day.

And now, sir, speaking of the fisheries again, the only redeeming feature that I can see, is that there is going to be a bounty given for the repairing of vessels, and I give the credit for this to the Minister of Marine and Fisheries. This policy was adopted by the late Government, and will go a long way toward reclassing vessels, with bottoms sufficiently good to warrant repairing.

With reference to the question of unemployment, Mr. Speaker, the Speech from the Throne says, "Unemployment in the country has greatly decreased, by comparison with all the years since the Great War ceased, and it is now normal." Well that is what we naturally would expect. During the past two years inland industries have engaged so many of our people as to greatly reduce the number of unemployed, but there are still unfortunately a large number out of work. However I do not advise the Government to enter upon non-productive employment. I can never understand why there are such a large number of able-bodied young men in St. John's, unemployed. Now I do not want to be considered unkind or too critical, nor do I want to pander to anybody, but I know that if the majority of the young men in this city were in the outports they would be working in the lumberwoods.

To-day in the city of St. John's you have twelve hundred able-bodied men receiving a dole of from $6.50 to $10.00 per week and doing absolutely nothing for it, and you are the gentlemen who have talked so much about the late Government demoralizing the people. You are doing worse than any former administration did, and if you are honest men you must admit it. How can the Government justify the giving away of $50,000.00 per month for nothing to men whose only job is to sit back and smoke their pipes while this generous Government provides the tobacco. There is no justification for it. Talk about demoralization. Why that is the worst form of demoralization.

Mr. Speaker, I would sooner see those men digging holes and filling them up again, than have them taking a dole and giving no returns. Our city to-day is not in such an up-to-date condition, that there is no room for improvement; as a matter of fact the streets and sidewalks are in a dangerous, filthy and disgraceful condition. The Council have not sufficient money to clean up. Could you not manage to meet them and collaborate by putting these twelve hundred men to work cleaning up the city during the fine weather at present prevailing?

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—They will not collaborate or will not come together at all to discuss the matter with the Government.

MR. HIBBS—Well, then, I will vote against every member of that Council at the next Municipal election. At any rate there are lots of work to be done in the city, as can be seen everywhere one goes, even if it is only cleaning the sidewalks.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—For your information and for the purpose of helping your argument, the Council takes the position that, firstly, they are not able to do any relief works, and secondly, they will not accept any money from the Government by way of loan, and the Government has no right to give them money.

MR. HIBBS—That is a very unfortunate state of affairs to say the least of it.

Why the Government is giving out thousands every day, but the Council won't accept work for it.

Coming now to the Department of Posts and Telegraphs. I am glad that postal matters are engaging the attention of the present as well as the late administration. There is no department in the whole public service so complicated, and requires so strict a supervision. Mr. Speaker, I often question the sincerity of the Government in matters of public policy and this case is no exception. The Government says that this departemnt is overmanned and underworked. Of course it is overmanned, and who is responsible for the overmanning? Is it not a fact that twenty-six men have been placed in jobs in this department, in addition to those already there, since the present Government took office, and the same story can be told of other departments and offices all over the country, but particularly in St. John's. Imagine twenty-six men being pitch-forked into nicely made jobs in the Post Office and then you talk of the service being underworked and overmanned. Now I am going to watch that department very closely, because frankly I have not much faith in what you are doing there, and the service is worse to-day than ever it was. I am glad that you have engaged the services of a reputable and competent man who will, I hope, remain incorruptible. He undoubtedly will, if you don't interfere with him, I refer now to Colonel Ross. The Speech from the Throne states that the Government is going to maintain efficiency in the public service. You state that every person should have some training for the particular job he is about to fill. That is merely your propaganda. But what have you done in practice. A new Deputy Minister of Posts and Telegraphs was appointed yesterday, who has absolutely no experience. The gentleman has never been in a post office unless it was to buy a stamp, but he was one of the team I helped to defeat in Trinity District, and that was, I suppose, his qualification for the position. Now I want to be correctly understood. I have nothing against the man personally. He is a fine character, a friend of mine and as a man I respect him. He was an excellent schoolmaster, and has managed an orphanage very well, but it is palpably unfair to put this new man over the heads of men who have spent the best years of their life in the service. I claim the principle is wrong, and every member of the Government knows it is wrong. When the late administration was in office certain gentlemen now in the Government ranks were wont to expound the many qualifications of Mr. LeMessurier, who had put in over thirty years of service. Well then do you think it is fair to the service now to put a schoolmaster in his place?

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—Mr. LeMessurier voluntarily resigned.

MR. HIBBS—Yes, but why has not some official of the department better qualified and experienced than the new appointee peen promoted to the job? Is it possible that no such official could be found in the Department?

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—I am sorry to say it is.

MR. HIBBS—Well I am sorry, too. Not because Mr. Hodder got a position, but because I think that his present appointment is not in the best interests of the public service which to my mind, is second only in importance to the codfishery, and yet there are only three brief lines devoted to it in the Speech, and it reads as follows:—"Agricultural interests are having the attention of my Government, and it is hoped that a committee of practical farmers, now in conference with the Minister, may suggest some wise legislation for the promotion of this important industry." Does not that show a most unfortunate state of affairs? You have no policy and must therefore call in a few farmers to institute one for you. I am not opposed to the idea of consulting farmers, because, after all, it is a practical way for the Minister to get information which he may not personally possess. And now, Mr. Speaker, I would crave the indulgence of the House while I review the history of agriculture in this country for the past twenty-five years.

The next subject I wish to deal with is the question of agriculture,

Agriculture in Newfoundland has been made a political football of. Sir Robert Bond, in 1906 made what I always considered the first serious and honest effort to try and place agriculture upon something like a sound scientific basis, which aimed to give our people a training in at least the rudiments of agriculture. But what happened? Sir, I fear it is not much to our credit, but instead of receiving the indorsation of the country, Sir Robert's Government was defeated on that very issue. Most of us can still remember with regret the effect of that cheap and senseless catch cry "Bond's model farm," you would think he had committed one of the worse crimes in history so cleverly did the professional politician disguise the real merits of his work. Mr. Murray, a successful and highly reputable agriculturist, who was recommended by high Canadian authorities including Professor Zafitz, had just started work here, when the Government changed in 1909, and he was sent home after being the subject of abuse and misrepresentation by people who knew more about playing dirty politics than improving agriculture in this sadly abused country.

The Morris administration that succeeded Bond made up their minds to do something entirely novel. They had condemned and abused the Bond policy, and must needs inaugurate something different to that which they had succeeded in destroying. Sir Edward with a great blowing of trumpets started in to "Whiten the South Side Hills with sheep." His policy included the formation of a large number of agricultural societies in Newfoundland. They found no trouble to get men to join, large numbers, whether interested in farming or not, flocked in, because they hoped to get something for nothing. They wanted to take part in the free givings out. One of the most ridiculous features of this scheme, was the so-called agricultural reports, sent in by the Chairman or Secretary of those societies and purporting to give statistics of all crops and cattle over a radius, sometimes of twenty miles, the real facts of which they knew no more about than the man in the moon. And Mr. Speaker, the saddest part of the matter was, that this stuff was incorporated in the regular agricultural report, and tabled in this House, and regarded as reliable and official figures. I am however prepared to admit that the giving out of farm implements, had the effect of increasing rotation of the land. But, Sir, with no means of imparting the scientific knowledge so essential to success, our people were no more advanced in 1919 than they were in 1909. The Morris effort had proven a blank failure. The societies died a natural death, and practically none were in existence in 1919. During the Squires regime, the energetic Minister, Hon. Dr. Campbell, brought a stock farm into existence. General conditions existing throughout the country however, greatly militated against engaging in any extended scheme. Some of the best stock available was secured but a serious mistake was made in not having first provided modern housing facilities. When the Warren Government took over control they were stampeded into sacrificing these splendid animals, and many of the choicest 'pedigree stock went to the block. I personally protested as I considered it a crime, and an outrage on the farming interests of the country. They merely pandered to opposition clamor to destroy. True to the disgraceful agricultural tradition of the country, anything a former Government had built up must be torn down, and we find ourselves in this day of grace 1925 no further advanced than our great grandfathers were one hundred years ago. The advice of the Secretary of the Board, Mr. Bayly, the only practical man on the Board, has seldom if ever been followed. Mr. Speaker, I fear that this Assembly has not yet awakened to treat agriculture as more than a political joke. When I referred to the matter in this House in 1920 Honourable Gentlemen began to smile, it was such a ridiculous subject, they had to laugh at it, they now appear to be becoming disillusioned. When I advocated the building of roads, one gentleman said I was mad. He drew the line between giving out relief and building roads, but you are going to build roads now, are you not? I would now ask the Minister Mr. Walsh what he intends doing for the encouragement of agriculture. I believe he is in earnest. Mr. Walsh has said that he intends cutting politics out of this question. I am glad to hear it and sincerely trust he keeps his promise. Why not follow the example of other countries. Go to Nova Scotia if you will, and see what they are doing there for agriculture. Their conditions may be more favorable than ours, but they are steadily building up, not tearing down. What our people require are object lessons. Lectures and literature may help, but you must give them practical demonstrations of what can be done in the way of improving their farming and gardening methods if you want to interest them. Those demonstrations must be given by practical men, but where are you going to get them here. No trouble to get merchants, lawyers and doctors, very indispensable gentlemen in their own line, but you can't get an agriculturist in Newfoundland to-day. If you import a stranger can he be expected to have the interests of Newfoundland at heart? Now let me tell the House where a good man can be found, and if the Minister will take my advice, he will secure his services at once. If we are ever going to get out of the old time worn rut, we must have a professional man in charge of the practical side of our agricultural activities. The Government would not think of appointing an ordinary layman, as Medical Superintendent of the General Hospital, unless they wished to increase the number of funerals. If we did not have a legal gentleman in the whole of Newfoundland, and Mr. Higgins was in Canada, you would try to get him down here at once would you not, because you must have a lawyer to fill the office of Minister of Justice, but Sir, what about the greatest of all sciences, the science of Agriculture. Are you still going to fill that department with useless political office seekers? This gentleman to whom I refer is a graduate of McDonald College, and is an Agriculturist and Biologist, both.

I understand that he would like to give his services to his Homeland, the country that he offered his life for in the Great War. This young man went to Truro Agricultural College in 1912, and after two years came home and joined the "Blue Puttees," and went overseas, where, without "pull" he won his commission. He was among the first to go and one of the last to return, having served in Gallipoli, France, India, and finally as an officer in Ireland. After returning home he proceeded to McDonald College, and there graduated and received his B.S. A. degree. He comes of a family of practical farmers, a splendid fellow, and one to whom work is a pleasure. His name is Mr. H. A. Butler, B.S.A., and he is now in charge of a large live stock yard near Toronto. (I am glad the Minister is taking his name). The President of McDonald College, or Professor Cummings, will no doubt, recommend him. Secure this young man's services if possible, give him charge of the practical end of the business in co-operation with Mr. Bayley, who, has the interest of agriculture at heart, and see if you can't reduce the importation of $3,500,000.00 worth of farm produce which this country is annually purchasing from abroad.

The next paragraph says, that you have reduced the taxes on the Canadian Banks doing business here. That is a matter to be hailed with delight by the poor struggling fisherman or labourer, who is beginning to see the bottom of the last barrel, to know that these banking concerns will now be enabled to get over the trying month of March more safely with their taxes reduced. Mr. Speaker, will this reduction of taxes on the Banks, that according to reports have cleaned up millions here during the last few years, mean better financial accommondation to our people. I consider those bankers as people well able to look after themselves, and unless they loosen up a bit, and help the fishery supplying trade better than they have in the past, I fail to see the purpose of your reducing their taxes. There are lots of room if you feel like reducing taxation, besides beginning with the millionaries behind the Banks.

Now Mr. Speaker, we come to the redistribution of seats. This is a big question and will mean a radical change in the whole electoral district system, as we have it to-day. Of course I am not worrying about it personally, as I happen to be the sort of a person who can get elected in any district in the country.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—It's good to have a high opinion of one's self.

MR. HIBBS—Certainly, everybody who knows me will vote for me anyway. But speaking seriously, Mr. Speaker, I am interested in this question because I agree with the principle of it. I believe that one man districts will give better service, than the present system which has outgrown itself. Mr. Monroe has taken the leaf from the F.P.U. book in this respect. The Prime Minister has been closely in touch with that organization recently in more ways than one.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—We get all our good ideas from others.

MR. HIBBS—We are only doing our duty in offering you advice. While the principle of one man constituencies is a sound one, I feel that the Government has made a big mistake in increasing the number of seats from thirty-six to forty. Now it is a well known fact that the machinery of Government in Newfoundland is out of proportion to the population and resources of the country. It has been likened to the "trappings of an elephant on the back of a mouse," and the Government is certainly not justified in increasing the number by four more seats. Every hon. gentleman who represents a district knows, that so far as the interests of their constituents are concerned there is no necessity for forty members. I am inclined to think that there is some kind of political expendiency at the back of all this. I would ask the Government to forget the political party game, and instead of increasing the number to forty, reduce it to thirty. The denominational aspect can still be taken care of, by distributing the seats proportionately as you are doing now.

What advantage can be expected from the increased number of seats? Take the District of Fogo for example, I have represented that district for a number of years, and managed it, I hope, fairly well. On some occasions I have been accused of running the District of Hr. Main in addition to Fogo, this of course is not quite correct, but anyway I did not find any great overstrain in doing what I did. It must be remembered that the more constituencies there are, the greater will be the cost of representation and general elections. I ask the Prime Minister to reconsider this decision, and reduce the number of members of the House of Assembly to thirty instead of forty, even though the suggestion does come from this side of the House. Then the country will believe that you are really trying to practice economy.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—I wish you would tell us how it can be done.

MR. HIBBS—How are we going to get the chance to tell you if you will not consult us.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—I can assure the hon. member, that ample time will be given for helpful suggestions, as to how the matter can best be arranged.

MR. HIBBS—Thank you! I believe if we got together on this old map we can cut off six members instead of increasing by four.

Mr. Speaker, this is a national question, and when the bill is brought up, we will be in a better position to deal with it.

The Speech next refers to a tourist trade policy. This is a venture that I have personally advocated for a number of years. For a long time mine has been a voice crying in the wilderness. I have advocated and worked for such a policy under the Squires and Warren Ministry's and I shall gladly support the same policy if inaugurated by the Monroe administration. I sincerely believe if properly handled, there is an opportunity for us to utilize our natural attractions for tourists, and now I would like to place my position clearly before the House This sir, is one of the things in which we require a little faith. It must be somewhat of a venture. We will all be very much wiser in four years from now than we are to-day. While believing in a tourist trade policy, I do not want to be classed in the category of an extremist. I would advise a safe, sane middle course. We should not imagine that this tourist business will cause the country to flow with milk and honey, or that it will be a panacea for all our ills. The first thing the Prime Minister and colleagues will have to do is to work out the matter as free from politics as possible. We cannot afford to play politics in this case, and there has been nothing done by the Government during the last six or eight months to give us any assurance they are not going to play politics.

Bermuda's success is due to the application of business to their scheme. Members of Government, Opposition, transportation, general trade and hotel interests, comprised an active board, and their success has been marvellous. To-day practically the whole of their revenue is derived from tourists. The same is true of the Bahamas. To the success of the tourist trade in the latter country. His Excellency Sir William Allardyce contributed a valuable quota. I have often recommended this idea, both by writings and on the floor of this House.

Mr. Speaker, after you have built your roads and your hotels, if you do build them, after the transportation interests have placed adequate shipping on the routes, your work will not be complete, for to insure success you will have to do lots of advertising, and you will require live people to do it. There is one thing that I want to refer to in this connection, which I missed in reviewing other portions of the Speech. I was speaking just now about Trade Commissioners. I would like to call the attention of the House to the fact that Mr. J. M. Devine was appointed by the late Government in 1920 as a Trade Commissioner in New York. I think he is well known to everybody here, and those who know him I am sure will agree with me that he is as good a man as one could get to fill that position. Mr. Devine is a good type of Newfoundlander. He sacrificed a good business here at that time, and accepted the position imbued, I believe, with the hope of doing something in that great Metropolis to advertise the attractions, and introduce the products of this country. A live energetic hard worker with the accomplishments and qualifications to represent Newfoundland creditably in such a field as the United States. But this gentleman's services were dispensed with, simply because the policy of the Government in appointing Trade Commissioners, generally at the time was criticized by the Opposition. Trade Commissioners were recalled, and Mr. Devine's services to the Colony, which had just begun to bear fruit, were lost. Apart from the gross injustice and hardship to himself and family, the act was an absurd one. Mr. Speaker, when Trade Commissioners are appointed as they certainly will be, in order to sell our products and advertise this tourist programme, I think you should right the injury which has been done Mr. Devine, and reappoint him, if he will accept the position.

HON. MR. LONG—What good did the Trade Commissioners ever do?

MR. HIBBS—That is a very broad question to ask. In the first place, why does Great Britain, the United States and Canada and all other countries which are abreast of the times, send out their commercial travellers and trade agents to every corner of the globe, to advertise and sell their products. I wonder has not some smart foreign commercial traveller sold you something that you didn't think you wanted, by virtue of his superior persuasive power.

HON. MR. LONG—But I am asking you now what good have the Commissioners done?

MR. HIBBS—That is not a fair or logical question to ask. I am referring to the principle. I say that the principle of having Trade Commissioners is a sound one, and I will go further than that, and say that before four years will have passed, if this Government remains in office for that period, you will have Trade Commissioners.

HON. MR. LONG—Doing what—selling fish?

MR. HIBBS—Certainly, selling fish, and everything else that we have to dispose of, and boosting Newfoundland. Do you mean to tell me that if we had the right kind of trade agent in New York, such a man for instance as Mr. Devine, that a market for a great deal of our fish could not be found in America. We can do it if we have proper representations. I do not believe in this idea of sticking forever in the same old rut, and never making an effort to improve our foreign connections. Does the hon. member arrogate to himself the right to dictate to the commercial world, and tell them their policy of appointing Trade Commissioners is all wrong? I say, sir, that in connection with tourist traffic programme, we will want a good man in New York and one in Canada. We will have to give these men advertising facilities if you are to induce the right people to come here. That is when we prepare ourselves for the traffic. We are not ready yet, and will not be for some time to come.

With respect to the establishment of the Highroad Commission, it is gratifying to me to learn that the Government is about to act on my advice in this connection.

I am very glad indeed to know that Mr. Hall is to be the Chairman of the Commission. I hold a high opinion of the Government Engineer in that capacity. Mr. Hall is a man who has done a great deal of good work since coming to this country. Of course he has not had very wide avenues in which to practice his profession. The many splendid concrete bridges around Newfoundland testify to his undoubted skill, as well as his able assistants. But Mr. Hall will not be able to be on the job all the time, and you will require other skilled help. I would recommend Mr. Cochius who built Bowring Park as a first class man. I also know of a Newfoundlander who is at present in the Province of Ontario, working with the Highway Commission. He has a practical knowledge of road work, from the building of a good gravel road to the making of a paved highway. I think that his services would be available, he will naturally be glad to get a job nearer home, and I think he is desirous of giving his services to his own country.

HON. COLONIAL SECRETARY—What is his name?

MR. HIBBS—His name is George H. Dawe, I am not sure of his address just now, but he is engaged in the construction of roads just outside Toronto. When the bill comes up I will have something more to say with regard to this Commission. In the meantime I would strongly urge that, all other things being equal, by all means, give this work to Newfoundlanders.

HON. COLONIAL SECRETARY—Hear, hear.

And now, Mr. Speaker, the Speech refers to the incorporating of municipalities in outport towns. This idea looks very nice on paper. The principle of municipalities is of course a very sound one, but you must remember you have a form of municipalities now in Newfoundland. The Local Affairs Act of 1915 gave us something similar in principle and practice to municipalities. It gave to every settlement in Newfoundland the right to elect their own Road Boards, which not only had the sole right to look after roads, bridges and wharves, but everything else of a local public nature. While those Road Boards were allowed to function everything was alright—but what do we find now? The present Government during the last eight months have demoralized the whole system of outport expenditure. This Act, as binding as either one on the Statue Book, has been wilfully violated and trampled on. This outrage has been committed by the Government to serve a petty cheap code of Party Politics. And, Mr. Speaker, these are the same gentlemen who come in here now and talk about incorporating muncipalities in the outports. What faith or confidence can the people place in you anyhow; you ignored the lawfully constituted Boards and gave their grants to your political supporters to expend as they wish. If on a Board of six, two are political friends of Government members, you retain these two and ignore the other four because you say they were not legally elected. Was there ever anything more dishonest? That is not the kind of thing I would expect from the Prime Minister. Mr. Monroe has not been a professional politician, and I had hoped he never would become one. I am, frankly, astonished that he stood for such a demoralizing practice. That sort of thing has destroyed the confidence that the people had in you, sir. After treating the country like that, you come in and tell us that you are going to incorporate municipalities. I ask you, would it not be following in your own footsteps if, when we get back into power, we were to ignore those muncipalities that you propose incorporating?

I remember when Mr. Jennings held the office of Minister of Public Works, if I went into him and told him that the Chairman of a Road Board was dead, he would almost want a doctor's certificate, before he would allow the money to go to anybody else. He respected the law, but you appear to think that because a fellow voted for you he is qualified to handle public monies. Mr. Speaker, allow me to cite an example of how this form of outlawry works out in practice. Every hon. gentleman from the Premier down, are acquainted with the main road from St. John's to Holyrood, and remembers the pleasure it was to drive over the section prior to last summer. A board of men elected by the people greatly asissted the Road Commission to keep that road up against the wear and tear of fast motor traffic, particularly the chairman, Mr. Dawe, whose record as a road man is so well known. You ignored these men and gave their money to a few fellows who you think voted for you. Is that what you mean by a square deal? The result of your illegal interference was that, if the squadron of warships had not visited Topsail last summer, you would have to fence off the Topsail road. In order to make the road passable for the heavy traffic during that week fifteen hundred dollars was allocated at that time and the most of it wasted between St. John's and Topsail, and the road is still in a frightful condition. These men have no interest in the roads. We are gone back again to the days of sops for votes. I am tempted to tell the House the record, as road builders, of some of those who have now usurped the office of the lawful and official boards in this section. And this is not the only case in which this has been done, it is the same practice all over the country, more or less. I can not believe the Prime Minister has been aware of that sort of public outrage, or he would never have allowed it.

And now, Mr. Speaker, I want to say before I take my seat, that I am not talking politics for the sake of politics. After all we are all Newfoundlanders; we have to live in this country and support our families here; and I, for one, will give the Government my support in all that I believe aims for the best interest of Newfoundland.

This Speech from the Throne contains twenty paragraphs, but can only be classed as a document containing a fine array of words, most of which I fear contribute very little toward the advancement of this country.

I have heard a lot about reforms in the Post Offiec, and I may have more to say in this connection before the House closes. I know of some reforms and doings in that department that are not entirely creditable to the Government. Some of your objects may be well meant, but the country wants you to show that you mean to do something more for the country than playing cheap party politics and practising discrimination against your political opponents.

CAPTAIN RANDELL—Mr. Speaker, I would like to add my congratulations to the gentlemen who so eloquently moved and seconded the motion for the appointment of the Committee to draft the Address in Reply to the Speech from the Throne. It is according to custom to do that, but in this case I believe I am right in saying that we listened to an unusually able discourses, and congratulations are rightly due. Perhaps we heard some of the matter contained in the speeches before, though now we have heard it expressed in particularly striking language, and I am proud to see we have among us two such able coming politicians. Most of the subjects referred to in the Speech from the Throne have already been ably dealt with, and perhaps it is little I can do to add to what has been said, but there are one or two subjects that perhaps I may be able to throw little light on. I have had connection with some of these subjects. I refer to the Labrador Boundary, the Corner Brook Industry, the proposed repairs to the Dry Dock, and one or two others. I might say that I am just back from Canada, and after spending a day or two at Corner Brook I gathered some little information as to how affairs are progressing there which perhaps will interest the House and the public generally. There is no doubt of there being a great industry there, but whether it will be a great success is another question. What I heard and saw—and perhaps such cannot always be depended on—was such that I must say I cannot congratulate myself on being one of the party which was instrumental in bringing that industry about, because I believe we will have to find the money in a very few years to pay the interest on the ten million dollars. I understood the industry would be moving and making paper in a couple of years at a cost of about twenty millions, but I am told that to date the expenditure is in excess of twenty millions. I have heard the figures expressed in various numbers, and I believe I am safe in saying that the amount will run to about thirty-five million dollars. I do not know if this is correct but I have my information from a very reliable source. If that be so, where will the dividend be found when the interest on the loan by the Trade Faciliities Board has to be covered first. I am no financier and do not understand much about finance, but I think the small dividend on thirty-five millions, and this will likely happen, will be a much smaller dividend on ten millions when the interest is asked to be paid. The industry may pan out alright for this country, but I must say it looks very doubtful. I have it on very good authority that there will be no money in it for two or three years, and I am not versed sufficiently in the matter to say if it should pay a dividend. We have to leave that for the future, as we are in for it anyhow. I would like to draw the attention of the House, and the country generally, to the employment of so many foreigners in connection with the industry referred to. As far as I could learn you will generally find a Newfoundlander sixth or seventh from the top in any job, and not only that, but some five or six hundred French-Canadians were brought into the country to engage at logging during the winter. I do not know much about logging or about construction work, but I have been told that the Company are having two ships specially built to carry their paper to whereever they intend shipping it—New York, I think. These ships are being specially built for the trade, but as we all know, we have conditions around this country for which we must have special men to do the navigation around the coast and in the waters adjacent to the Island. I was told that these ships would be manned as far as possible by Newfoundlanders, but when I said this would mean all Newfoundlanders, I was told the executive on the ships would very likely be foreigners. I hold that all our history shows that there is not in any country men so good in any other part of the world as right here in Newfoundland to handle shipping or navigation especially around our coast. And I am prepared to pick them if needed. There are many within sound of my voice who have often heard the quotation "If blood be the price of Admiralty, we have paid in full."

Many of us have lost sons, brothers or fathers in the waters surrounding our shores or following their calling in the foreign trade of this country, and seeing that we, the people of this country, are guaranteeing the interest on the bonds whereby this industry was accomplished, I think it only right and just that we should have a say as to how this money is to be spent, particularly in regard to these steamers. If that be so and they will probably employ foreigners to man and go in charge of those ships, I again affirm they are not treating our people right or just. I could say more about the shipping end of the business as far as Corner Brook is concerned but I do not propose to deal much with that at present as it is not my business. I do state, however, that I think the management of the Company have made a mistake as regards the shipping end of their business. When I was at Corner Brook I asked the question why were foreigners being put into this department and I was told the Newfoundlanders had no idea of time and they could not be found to fill the positions. If they could not get Newfoundlanders to handle shipping better than it was done last year for them, then it is high time that this island of ours was sunk.

HON. MR. SULLIVAN—Did they not have any Newfoundlanders in charge of shipping at Corner Brook?

MR. RANDELL—They had one man somewhat recently there.

HON. MR. SULLIVAN—I understand they had a man named Bartlett, of Brigus, there all the time.

MR. RANDELL—Of course, when I referred to the shipping end of it, I meant the chartering of ships and everything in connection with the water line. I will give one instance, but I could give many more, wherein there was a certain amount of mismanagement. They have a pier right in front of their mills and that pier has eighteen feet of water alongside at low water so that they could not load or could not discharge a five or six thousand ton cargo boat. And they cannot do it now; they either got to dredge the place or else build out. But what I want to emphasize is the fact that Newfoundlanders are overlooked and not given a chance. I do know that Newfoundlanders can handle those ships from mess room boy up to captain. Mr. Speaker, I do not want to keep this House listening to any unnecessary remarks I may have to make. I just want to bring before the Government certain matters that might be remedied, that is if the Government thing there is any need or occasion of a remedy or not. In the meantime I should like to refer to one or two other subjects. With reference to the paragraph in the Speech from the Throne as to the need of repairs to the Dry Dock. I can assure the Government and the people of St. John's that repairs to the Dry Dock are very badly needed. I will go further than that and say that I think that the Dock has been in grave need of repairs for some time past. I want to throw out a warning to those in authority that there is likely to be a serious accident at that Dry Dock in time. Four years ago on the south side of the Dock inside the gate I saw the ground moving up and down in the harbor when there was a slight swell. Three years ago I saw the same thing, due to the sea outside. Now that is a state of affairs that should not exist, and, I presume, things are getting worse there. Sir Michael Cashin quoted me as knowing that things were serious there. Well he was quite right. I did not voice these sentiments myself what I did know. Perhaps I was not inclined to speak then as I am now; but, at the same time, I thought it my duty to speak to people in authority about it. That Dry Dock is in need of urgent repairs and in order to prevent a serious accident from occurring the Government should take steps towards effecting immediate repairs, whatever the cost financially. Personally, I am of the opinion that the Dry Dock should never have been put where it is and endorsing this opinion there is a letter in to-day's Telegram with reference to the Dry Dock. Nearly every place in the world that I visited where there is a small harbor their sole aim and object was to make accommodation for shipping and make the harbor large because as trade increases of course more harbor accommodation is needed; but here we fill up our harbor and make it smaller. If all that space above the Long Bridge had not been filled in, there would be an area about one-fifth the size of St. John's harbor available. I just cite this to show that we have been adopting a very peculiar policy regarding our harbor facilities. In my opinion, I repeat, the Dry Dock should never have been where it is. At any rate, I would like to put myself on record as saying that if something is not done very soon as regards repairs to the Dry Dock, the results might be more serious than can be imagined.

Another subject I would like to refer to is what is known as the Labrador Boundary. This has, perhaps, been ably debated by former speakers; but I want to say that I do not agree with the member for Fogo when he advises getting rid of the Labrador at a price, because, in my opinion, we do not know what we have there, and, not only that, but you do not know the coastline. There is not a man alive who knows the coast line exactly. There has never been a proper survey made, not a regular survey. There may have been something done by the Canadian Government in the way of sending a party of men down there off and on; but there has never been any geological survey or any marine survery made by any living man. Even the headlands are not properly charted. Hamilton Inlet is not properly charted. Take a map of the Labrador and take a position north of Blanc Sablon. It is said we own the land east of a line drawn from that to Cape Chidley, but if we do not know the coastline we do not know whether the territory is on water or on land. A line drawn to Cape Chidley bisects the coast and what is not generally known Cape Chidley is on an island. And not only that, but Port Burwell is also on an Island and there are two Straits inside of it. Now I take it that there is little known by the ordinary Newfoundlander here about these Straits. But if these outlying Islands are belonging to Newfoundland, the Canadian Government has been making a mistake in collecting revenues at Port Burwell. I cannot see how we can discuss something we know nothing about. How can we discuss a subject we have no data upon? We might say that we own the hinterland, or water shed, but we even do not know where that is when we have never had a survey made. This I do know, because I have seen it myself, that we have a valuable possession there and I do not think it should be sold for any small amount of money. I know that there is considerable mineral land along the coast and the most of us know that there is a vast quantity of timber lands on the Southern part of the coast, but neither this Government or any former Government of Newfoundland can give scarcely an approximate estimate of how much of these resources we have there, because, as I have already pointed out, it has never been properly surveyed. Whatever information has been obtained was probably got from people who were there on private expeditions, but there has never been any one sent there by the Newfoundland Government as far as I know.

I would next like to refer briefly to the Redistribution Bill about to be introduced in the House.

As most of the Government members know, there is quite a population on Labrador. I believe they claim allegiance to the British Crown and are supposed to be under the Newfoundland Government. They have never been represented in the House of Assembly or in the making of laws pertaining to their own welfare. As to the matter of population they have from four thousand to five thousand people at least, and they should have representation. They have never had it, and as this Redistribution Bill is about to be brought before the House, I think that some regard, in the ways of discussing it anyway, should be given to the welfare of these people to see that they are properly represented. I think that it would be a step in the right direction. In the Speech from the Throne it is stated that the finances of the Colony are in a highly satisfactory condition. There is a surplus of revenue over expenditure. It is well known that I am not a financier. I know very little about finance. But I hold that no matter whether it is a colony or a country or an individual, the finance of that colony, country or individual is not in a wholly satisfactory condition when they have to borrow money. Mr. Hibbs, the hon. member for Fogo, in speaking on the Labrador question made reference to the conditions that existed there one hundred years ago. And as they will exist in a hundred years' time, I think that we should be concerned not only with the immediate present but we should be concerned with what is going to happen in the future not only to ourselves while we are alive, but as to what kind of legacy we are handing down to our children. That's what we have to consider here. We have to find interest on a public debt amounting from three to four million dollars. We are still increasing it. I don't say that the finances of the country are in a very highly satisfactory condition while that state of affairs exists. Every man, woman and child in this country has to find thirteen or fourteen dollars a year to pay the interest on the public debt. I question whether it is right, legally or morally, to hand down to our children in the future a big debt that they have to liquidate. If we don't want to bring about insolvency, what is going to happen? What is going to be the result? Where is it to end? And it is going to end somewhere, even though we may not be here. But some day we will have to foot the bill. I would like to say a word or two about the present. I asked a question here during the Summer session, in July, about coal bought for the Newfoundland Railway. After receiving a reply to my question I had no time to speak on the subject in the House. I would like to say a word in regard to that now, if I will be given permission to refer to this for a little while. I heard the Hon. Minister of Justice make a speech in which he said that in 1923 the Government could have saved 70,000 dollars on coal bought for the railway. Well, now, that may be right. Somewhat of a reflection on the management of the railway at that time perhaps. It is a reflection on how the corporation known as the Besco has exploited this country. Now I question whether the saving could be as great as 70,000 dollars, but possibly it could. I know that that year the people of Corner Brook bought coal much cheaper than the Newfoundland Railway bought it. But in connection with the Besco Company I would like to make a suggestion. As a matter of fact, talking over some subjects, no longer ago than this forenoon, in connection with the affairs on Bell Island, I think that a good scheme would be to have an investigation and find out what capital has been invested on Bell Island. Find out what is the cost to operate. Find out what is the interest on their money and find out how the industry on Bell Island stands as a going concern aside from anything else. Then we would see if we could not demand a decent wage for the men. The Besco Company has, I believe, not only exploited this country in the matter of coal in the interests of Bell Island but also have been trying it with their own mines at Cape Breton. But as far as the Bell Island industry is concerned we should take stock of what is being done there and I believe that the result would be very apparent if there was an investigation with regard to the Bell Island industry and our mining interest there. We could then know very well if they could afford to pay a decent wage to the miners, or if they had been exploiting the miners, or if the miners had not been treated fair.

In the matter of the redistribution to be introduced I would like to add a word. I think it is not what was expected from the Government, it is not in accordance with their professions to increase the membership of the House of Assembly to 40 members. I understand that there will be some districts that will have two members each. And now the question arises, and of course it has arisen, I understand, with regard to the denominational side of it. Personally I have not much use for denominationalism, but it has to be taken into consideration perhaps. But why not have all the districts represented by a single individual? Why have some districts with two men? In other parts of the world, I understand in Great Britain, they have four or five men representing as many people as the whole population of this country. Could not one man represent a district if you are going to consider the cost? It does not speak for economy when they purpose to increase the membership of the House. There are also one or two other subjects in the Speech from the Throne that I would like to refer to, but perhaps before the session closes I may have a chance to debate on some of the subjects in connection with the billls to be brought before the House. I trust anyway that, as forecasted, the coming session will be one that willl be beneficial to the country at large and the fishermen in particular. I am not much in accord with this idea of encouraging tourist traffic. I fail to see it, as a matter of fact. It may be that it is all right, but I can't say. I think that a portion of the money that it is proposed to spend in connection with the tourist traffic would be much better spent if spent on the fishermen. The fisheries is, of course, the principal industry, and it is going to remain that for a long time. I don't see that there is any chance of any big development that is going to oust it out of its premier place, and I think that it should be given the first consideration, and that you should do something towards its encouragement. I think that our men should be more encouraged to go to the fisheries. I think that the coming season is going to be a very busy one, but similar to the wheat situation in Canada, the beginning of the season opens when you don't know your harvest, we don't know our catch. As far as the fishery is concerned it is going to be a very difficult year. Anyway I trust, sir, that what has been prophesied with regard to the tourist policy will come true. Before I close I would like to say that, in my opinion, the clean up, keep clean, and a square deal for all policy has not been adhered to by the Government—not as much as we were led to expect. Still there is some cleaning up to be done. I think there is some cleaning up being left over. We have a case where it is reported by the Auditor General that from one to two hundred thousand dollars had been misused and misappropriated in the course of a couple of years. So far we have not heard where that money went. Now I think that if the Government wanted to follow out their slogan with which they went before the country last year, it is about time that they made some move in the matter of the Controller's Department. There are a lot of people in this country looking and wondering why. In conclusion, anyway, I want to say that the coming season will be one that we will be able to congratulate ourselves on and that the good times forecasted in the Speech from the Throne will become an accomplished fact.

MR. HALFYARD—Mr. Speaker, as it is about quarter past six, and as I would like to have an opportunity to speak to the Address in Reply before the adoption, I would suggest that we discontinue the Address in Reply and go on with the Orders of the Day.

It was ordered accordingly.

Second reading of the Bill entitled "An Act respecting the Seal Fishery during the present year."

THE MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES:—Mr. Speaker, this Bill is in reference to the Seal Fishery of the country. During the last four or five years under executive authority the law has been laid aside, and it is the intention of the Government, this year, to allow the sealing ships to sail on the fifth of March and this is the matter which is contained in this Bill. According to the law on the Statute Book the ships cannot sail until the thirteenth of March and it is not allowed to kill seals after the twentieth of April. During the last few years we have been allowed to kill any time and as long as we wish, and it is the intention of the Government, this year, to make the law so that the killing of the seals can go on as long as the provisions last or longer if anybody wants to. It is intended to make it lawful for the ships to sail on the fifth of March and also to make it lawful for ships to kill after the twentieth of April. I have very much pleasure in introducing this Bill.

Pursuant to order and on motion of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, the Bill entitled "An Act respecting the Seal Fishery during the Present Year" was read a second time, and it was ordered that the said Bill be referred to a Committee of the Whole House on to-morrow.

Second reading of the Bill entitled "An Act respecting the Lobster Fishery."

THE MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES—Mr. Speaker, it is the intention of this Bill that the Lobster Fishery should be closed for the next three years. During the debate on the Speech from the Throne some of the members on the opposite side of the House made reference to the fact that it was the intention of the Government to make a close season for the Lobster fishing for the next three years. One gentleman, in his speech, I think that it was the member for St. Barbe, said that the people of his district were very much against having this close season imposed. He said that it was not from the merchants of the district that the complaints were coming but from the fishermen themselves. Now it is a strange incident that the Fishery Board has not received one solitary word from any person in the district of St. Barbe with the exception of the firm of Abbott and Haliburton. These are the only people with whom the Fishery Board has had any communication whatever in connection with the Lobster Fishery. As a member of the Fishery Board I may say that during the last four months we have had hundreds of applications from all over the country crying to us that we close down the lobstering for at least three years and in many instances they ask for the period to be made five years. After taking the facts into consideration the Fishery Board has decided to ask the Legislature of the Colony to close the Lobster Fishery the next three years. As far as the district which I represent is concerned the Lobster Fishery is a thing of the past, and has been for the last five or six years. I can remember when I have seen from seven to eight thousand cases of lobsters packed right before my own two eyes. Now there are two or three so called fishermen who stayed home from the Labrador and they started to pack lobsters and I may say that they never packed enough lobsters to pay for their molasses bill. The same thing has occurred practically all over the Island. I have been told and the Fishery Board has been told that when some of the merchants of the West Coast have supplied for the Lobster Fishery they do not get enough to pay for the cases. We have also had letters from foreign countries complaining against the way the lobsters have been packed; not so much about the way the lobsters have been packed as about the small lobsters which the cases contain. The lobsters are very scarce and those that are caught are very small. Therefore from the correspondence that the Fishery Board has received during the past five months from the men interested in the Lobster Fishery of this Colony, I as Minister of Marine and Fisheries and also as a member of the Fisheries Board, think it my duty and the duty of this House to see to it that this one time great industry should be protected. We have been told that this step would cause undue harm and hardship to the fishermen of this country because they have made preparation for the next years fishing. For the information of this House I may say that I, myself, as early as the month of July notified the men of this country engaged in the Lobster fishery that there would probable be a close season for three years. I do not believe for a moment that in the month of July men were making preparation for the Lobster Fishery for the coming year. If they were they are very few Any how, the action which we are about to take and which should have been taken before, must be taken now or otherwise the industry will be destroyed and the Lobster become extinct altogether. That is the only hope for it. If it is the case that some on the West Coast will suffer I may say that the Government of the Country has something else in mind at the present time which I believe will be a help to them. We have on this side of the House a member representing a portion of the West Coast and I feel sure that his district will come in for as much hardship under the enactment of this Bill as any other part of the country, but if the Government is to listen to every thing that is said, or objected to, then nothing will be done. But I claim, Mr. Speaker, that this Lobster Bill has not been brought into this House a bit too early. Surely, at this time when they are clamoring for more men to go to the fishery and it has been proven this year that we have not got fish enough to supply the markets; surely it is a good time to close down the Lobster Fishery and give it a chance to build up again. We have heard in this House what is going to happen to the fishery for next year. We heard what was going to happen in the spring of the year. We heard last year. We heard the statement in the spring of the year that it was not possible for shore fish to go more than $7.50 What did happen? It went as high as ten dollars and I have no doubt that in some cases it went to fourteen. The same thing happens now. They paint everything as black as possible. We are printing in our newspapers to-day, and we will print to-morrow as the case may be that there is going to be a large catch of fish this year, and that the price will be low. And those newspapers are broadcasted all over the world, and therefore they get to the markets where we sell our fish. I think that that sort of thing should cease. There is nothing more detrimental to the fishery in this colony than the newspapers. They all come out and say that we are going to have a big fishery and that the price will be low.

I may say, Mr. Speaker, that this Bill got a great deal of concentration and consideration by the Fishery Board before it was brought here. I may say that the Fishery Board to-day consists of what it has never consisted of before. Ninety per cent. of that Board consists of outharbourmen and fishermen of this Colony. I have been charged as Chairman of the Fishery Board that all the members of the Board are Merchants. I am proud to say to-day that it has a majority of outharbourmen, and therefore it will interest itself in the fishery of this country. And it will interest itself in the codfishery, and it has interested itself in it, and I hope and pray that this Bill will go through during this session of the Legislature, because I feel sure that we can take care of the few men that have been lobster fishing during the season; and I have no doubt that next fall these very few men that are making an outcry about the closing down of the Lobster Fishery will only be too glad to acknowledge that it was the best possible thing to do under the circumstances.

Further debate on this Bill was postponed until to-morrow.

Mr. Ashbourne gave notice of question.

Mr. Scammell gave notice of question.

The remaining Orders of the Day were deferred.

It was moved and seconded that when the House rises it adjourn until to-morrow at three of the clock.

The House then adjourned accordingly.

WEDNESDAY, Feb. 25, 1925.

The House met at three of the clock in the afternoon, pursuant to adjournment.

MINISTER OF MARINE & FISHERIES—Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present a petition from the inhabitants of Dodd Cove, St. Brendan's and other places in that locality asking that a public wharf be built in that place. I may say that the petition has my hearty support.

MR. HALFYARD—Mr. Speaker, I ask leave to present a petition from certain electors of Winterton, Trinity District, asking for a grant of two thousand dollars to build or start to build a public wharf. This petition or letter that I have here was sent to the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, who courteously passed it along to me for presentation. The necessity for a public wharf at Winterton is pressing, otherwise the petitioners would not have taken the trouble to ask for an allocation of two thousand dollars. I may say in presenting this petition that the people of Winterton are very industrious and from my own knowledge of that district I know that the inhabitants of Winterton are as independent and as trustworthy as are to be found in any part of the Island, and that is one of the reasons why I heartily support the prayer of the petition. I now ask that the petition be referred back to the Minister of Marine and Fisheries for his consideration.

MR. GODDEN—Mr. Speaker, I rise to support the prayer of the petition. Public facilities are entirely inadequate at Winterton in the best interests of the fishing industry. I know that because I was there last Spring. I give my wholehearted support to the petition.

MR. RANDELL—Mr. Speaker, I would like to add my support to the petition just presented by my colleague. I think Winterton deserves as much or more recognition than any other place in Trinity district, and I think the Government would do well to give the petition their sympathetic consideration. I beg to support the prayer of the petition.

MR. POWER—Mr. Speaker, I ask leave to present a petition from the people of Codroy asking for a breakwater there. I ask that the petition be referred to the Engineer's Department, as this work was undertaken by that Department some two years ago.

MR. SPEAKER informed the House that he had received a message from the Legislative Council acquainting the House of Assembly that they had passed the Bill sent up entitled "An Act to Amend the Act 15, George V. Chapter XX, entitled 'An Act for the Raising of a Sum of Money on the Credit of the Colony for Certain Public Purposes,'" without amendment.

THE MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE & MINES presented the Reports of his Department 1923-24.

HON. THE COLONIAL SECRETARY —Mr. Speaker, I beg to lay upon the table of the House a reply to question of Mr. Warren No. 3 on Order Paper of February 24th:

1. Number of families in St. John's who are being relieved at public expense per week.

2. Amount being paid to individuals and families.

Individuals, $5.00 per week. Families first relief order, $10.00. Following orders, $10.00, $8.00 and $6.00 according to size of family.

3. Total amount paid from January 1st, 1925, to February 14, 1925.

4. If any investigation of the circumstances of applicants is made before they receive relief.

Yes.

5. What is the nature of such investigation.

Upon the registration of the applicant for relief, an Investigating Officer is sent to the address given, for the purpose of making enquiry into the condition of the family. It is upon the report of such Officer that relief is either granted or refused.

6. What steps are being taken to relieve destitution in other Districts.

Outside of the regular plan which consists of each Relieving Officer in his particular section investigating, and reporting any application to the Commissioner of Public Charities, who instructs him what to do, no general plan has been inaugurated to assist Outport cases of destitution.

7. Respecting total amount spent in Abe-bodied poor relief by Districts from January 1st, 1925, to February 14th, 1925.

Up to date no statements have been received for relief issued in the Outports during the said period.

Mr. Warren, Mr. Brown, Mr. Hickman, Mr. Scammell, Mr. Duff and Mr. Hibbs gave notice of questions.

MR. HICKMAN—To ask the Hon. the Prime Minister to lay upon the table of the House all correspondence between the Government and the Imperial Government in reference to the construction of the new steamer in Holland.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—Question one and the second question asked by Mr. Randell appear to be more or less on the same lines, and there is a tremendous lot of correspondence to be copied before we can answer the questions thoroughly, so I propose, with the permission of the Leader of the Opposition, to let the two questions stand over until tomorrow when we hope to have all the correspondence copied.

MR. HICKMAN—That is quite satisfactory.

MR. SCAMMELL—To ask the Minister of Marine and Fisheries to lay on the Table of the House a statement showing all marine grants sent out to the District of St. Barbe since April 30th last (1924) and parties to whom such grants were sent in each case.

MINISTER OF MARINE & FISHERIES—I beg to table the information.

MR. DUFF—To ask Hon. Colonial Secretary the reason for the dismissal of Mr. William Guy from the management of Carbonear Water Company, and submit all correspondence relative to same.

HON. COLONIAL SECRETARY—Reply to Question of Mr. Duff, No. 5, on Order Paper of date February 25th, 1925.

In 1920, after the Squires Government returned to power, they retired the Manager and Secretary of the Carbonear Water Company, and appointed Mr. W. T. Guy to the said position. When the present Government came into power, they received a requisition (copy of which is attached), asking that Mr. G. H. Soper be appointed as Manager and Secretary of the said Company in place of Mr. Guy. This requisition was acted upon, and the appointment of Mr. Soper was made in due course.

Carbonear, July 4th, 1924.

Hon. J. R. Bennett,
Colonial Secretary,
St. John's.

Dear Sir,—I hereby make application to be appointed "Superintendent of the Carbonear Water Co."

With the approval of the undersigned members of Mr. John Rorke's Committee.

With the confidence that my request will be granted.

I remain, yours truly,
(Sgd.) G. H. SOPER,

Signed: Messrs W. & J. Moores, per S. W. Moores, Edward P. Goff, James Moore.

The reply to the questions No. 5 was tabled.

MR. HIBBS—To ask Hon. the Colonial Secretary to lay on the Table of the House: (1) the total cost of rails and plates, etc., recently purchased for the Newfoundland Government Railway; (2) the price paid per ton; (3) the name of the firm from which the rails and plates, etc., were purchased.

THE HON. COLONIAL SECRETARY replied as follows:

(1) Total cost of rails and plates, etc., recently purchased for the Newfoundland Govt. Railway; approximately $670,000.00.

(2) Prices paid per ton:

Rails and angle bars	8 guineas
Nuts and bolts	£20. 11. 6d.
Track spikes	20. 1. 6d.

All C.I.F. St. John's.

(3) Name of firm from which rails, plates, etc., were purchased—Barrow Mematite Co., London.

MR. HICKMAN—To ask the Hon. the Prime Minister to lay upon the Table of the House the report of the Government Director of the Newfoundland Power and Paper Co., Ltd.

HON. PRIME MINISTER—In reply to that question, Mr. Speaker, Mr. Foote is the Director of the Newfoundland Power and Paper Company. He was appointed by a past Government. He did not make any report before and did not know that he was called upon to make any report. He suggests that if there is any particular information that is required he will have it prepared and give it. But he has not prepared any general report.

HON. THE LEADER OF THE OPPOSITION—Has he made any verbal reports to the Government?

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—Occasionally, on certain points.

THE MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS—Mr. Speaker, I beg to table the following replies, answer to question No. 13 of the Order Paper of Feb. 25th, answer to question No. 1 of the Order Paper of Feb. 24th, also answer to question No. 2 of the Order Paper of Feb. 24th.

MR. HALFYARD—Mr. Speaker, with your permission I would like to refer to the questions No. 10 and 11 of the Order Paper of Feb. 24. One of these questions refers to the District of Trinity and I cannot see the reason why that should not be forthcoming as the amounts of the monies have not been so very great. Another is in connection with the district of Bonavista. I would think that these two questions would take precedence to any others as they are the first on the Order Paper.

MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS—In reply I may say that all these answers are ready but for the fact that we have to wait for some returns from these two districts. I have sent letters asking that these returns be sent on, and as soon as these have arrived I will table the answers.

ADDRESS IN REPLY.

MR. HALFYARD—Mr. Speaker, after the very many excellent speeches that have been delivered by the members of the Opopsition who have been speaking to the Address in Reply, it will be conceded by all who have had an opportunity to hear those speeches that there is little left for me to say on the question which is now before the House. But as a member of His Majesty's Loyal Opposition, it devolves upon me to make a few remarks in connection with the Speech delivered by His Excellency on the opening day.

It may be in order for me to congratulate the mover and the seconder of the Address in Reply. We have already heard some very congratulatory remarks from the previous speakers and it is not more than we should expect from two such learned and honourable gentlemen. In the course of my remarks this afternoon I have only one or two things to say to the hon. gentlemen in connection with the Speech, on the policy of the Government. It may not be ungracious on my part to congratulate the Prime Minister and the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, on the confirmation of their election in the District of Bonavista. In the game of politics, as on the field of sport, it is only in order to congratulate the winners. But I am reminded of a remark that the Prime Minister made very wittingly, at the opening of the session. It was about the occasion of Lady Astor's first appearance in the British House of Commons; when she was shaking hands with Mr. Carson she asked him if this was an ordinary shake hands or a shake hands of welcome. He replied, "It is an ordinary shake hands for I hate to see you here." And like Mr. Carson, I say that my congratulations are very ordinary congratulations. I would not follow up and say that I hate to see you here, but I would very much like to see some person else in your place; that is, of course, if I were with him on the other side of the House.

To refer to the Speech, I may say that it is a very lengthy document, with very little substance. It consists of words and verbiage, and I do not know that we can compliment the composer on its phrasing. When the Speaker was reading the Speech to the House, he very aptly put in some words and deleted others, to make it more intelligible.

We are to-day living under better conditions than existed eighteen months ago. In nearly all other parts of the civilized world conditions were not very good as a result of the Great War. But to-day, fortunately, Newfoundland in common with other parts of the world, is in a better condition. The employment situation in the country as a whole, for the last six months is better than it has been for some years. The fishery gave very good results for those who were fortunate enough to have caught a fair, or large quantity of fish. There is one part of the Speech from the Throne which requires an explanation; it is as follows: "Those engaged in the staple industry of the country reaped a reward which renewed their faith and interest in it." Now that is a statement that needs explanation or modification. Those who were fortunate enough to get a catch of fish did fairly well during the year, but not all those who engaged in the fishery. The unsuccessful fisherman reaped no reward.

If the people of the District of Trinity were depending solely on the codfishery last year for their support, the conditions there would be much worse than they were in the years 1922-1923. Strange to say, the fishery in Trinity District during the last three or four years has been practically a blank, with the exception of Heart's Delight, Whiteway, Dildo, New Harbor, and one or two other places in the bottom of the Bay, where there was more fish caught last year than has been caught for some time previous.

In practically the whole of the rest of the District, the fishery was a blank. But the people in that district are better off this year than they have been for the last two or three years, and the reason for that is, they were not dependent on the fishery. Seventy-five per cent. of the men in that district had employment other than the fishery. They were at Deer Lake, Corner Brook, or some other place in connection with the Humber industry; some were at Grand Falls, others in Canada or the United States.

We all know that the reason for the better times is because of the inland industries which were instituted and brought into being by the outgoing Government. The present Government, I hope, are honest enough to say that they did not take any part in making the conditions that obtain to-day, better than those that obtained two or three years ago. They did not do anything. They did not start anything. They simply sat tight and collected the taxes, and therefore they have to give the credit to the Squires and Warren administrations for the prosperity that now exists in this country. I know they will all admit that. Possibly there is an excuse for the Government's inactivities in this respect, but for the idea to be broadcasted throughout the country that a change of Government brought about better conditions is dishonest, when we know that they had nothing more to do with it than the inhabitants of the planet Mars.

The people of this country—the thinking people of this country, the politicians, especially those who had anything to do with the administration of affairs during the last three or four years, knew that as soon as the tide turned there would be an increase of revenue; that there would be a greater revenue, and, therefore, a larger amount of money to spend. I know the matter was spoken of in Council many times. We knew that if we could get over that bad period, and keep our independence as a self-governing Dominion, we would have much greater revenues when times got better. That would as surely follow as darkness follows light. People were living on their earnings and savings, and nearly all their savings were exhausted. But people had to eat to live, and according to climatic conditions and the laws of society people have to wear clothes, and have to keep themselves and those dependent on them warm during the cold and rigorous winter months. The earnings of the people increased, as a result of new industries and a better price for fish, and the people had to spend their earnings in dutiable goods. At least seventy-five per cent. of our requirements must be imported, and increased importations mean increased revenue. If there was a surplus of revenue over expenditure.

last year the country is to be congratulated. But referring to the policy of the Government again, it would be dishonest for them to use any propaganda to cause the people to think that any action of the Government brought about any better conditions in this country.

If the party that opposed you at the Polls, in June, 1924, had been elected, conditions would be just the same, and that party could justifiably point to the results of the policy inaugurated by them. The seeds of industrial progress were sown by the outgoing Government, and you and the country are reaping the fruits thereof now. I hope conditions will continue to improve.

To repeat myself—the price for codfish was remunerative to the fishermen during the season that is past, and I do not suppose that there is very much left to be sold by those who catch the fish. What the result will be for the exporter, I do not know, but I hope that it will give him all the returns he expected. But the marketing of codfish is surrounded with a lot of uncertainty, and what the final result will be for the exporter, I do not know.

I am surprised, Mr. Speaker, that there is no more in this Speech from the Throne about the codfishery. The codfishery is our staple industry, and will be, no doubt, for a very long time. It is the industry that our people are accustomed to, and it will be a long time before they will be happy at any other employment, even if it does give them the same returns. They are accustomed to the sea. There is a certain element of adventure about it, that appeals to them. They can work as hard as they like, or if they are inclined, they can loaf as much as they like. There is not the same discipline about it that there is about any other enterprise. The fishermen, to a certain extent, are as free as air. He can go out to the grounds when he like, and he can stay out there as long as he like, and when a fisherman is fortunate in loading his boat from day to day, he does not mind staying up two or three nights at a time, to get his fish under salt, whereas, if he was under a master, who would say, "You have got to do this, you have got to stay up to-night, you have got to work longer hours," he would rebel against it. But being his own master, it is only a pleasure to him, just as a sportsman would go out hunting and tramp all day, and get home to his home to his camp, after night, fatigued. But the sportsman does not mind that —it is pleasure. The same thing applies in the prosecution of the codfishery to some extent. The hardship is when the fishermen does not get any fish. He works just as hard, perhaps harder, looking for fish and getting nothing. Therefore the fishery appeals to our people, and they will be coming back from the woods just as soon as they think there is a chance of earning enough to provide for themselves and their families, and they will be back next Spring in their hundreds, if not in their thousands. It has been remarked that, it is a question as to who is going to look after the thousands of men that will be anxious to prosecute the fishery this year. That is a question that perhaps the Government will be asked to settle.

But outside the ordinary prosecution of the fishery, there is one thing that the fishermen have no control over, and that is the marketing of the fish. They are the producers, they catch the fish and prepare it, then it is somebody else's business to market the fish. Under the system in this country, the exporter arranges for marketing and values, but there is room for improvement in the manner in which the markets are looked after. The producer does not always get satisfactory returns for his labour, and becomes discouraged. If the fishermen see no way of disposing of the fish at remunerative prices, hundreds of them will leave the fishery, indeed many have already abandoned it because of inadequate returns in the past. The fishermen need encouragement, and the exporting system needs attention, and what are we doing as a Government, a people, or a Board of Trade, to bring about any improvement in the conditions of marketing our staple product? Have we forgotten this all important subject because we have had some differences on the matter, tinged by politics, or because those who were in Opposition a few years ago, have since come into power and are no longer interested. It is indeed a strange view to take, that because during the last season we marketed our catch at a fairly good price, we must now lie on our oars and forget that we ever sold fish at $4.00. It is not because we had one fairly good year that we should remain idle. Now is the time when things are prosperous, to make our plans for the future, and not wait till the people are coming up and presenting memorials to the Government. It is admitted by all that our system of marketing is anything but right. And now, Mr. Speaker, cannot we try to remedy this state of affairs, forget our politics and do something to improve the marketing of the catch on which the welfare of the country so largely depends. The Government is in a strong position to-day, and in a sense can ignore the pleas of the Opposition. As a matter of fact it is said, so strong is the Government along Water Street, that you cannot get a merchant to give financial support to a newspaper, unless its policy is to back up the Government or at least remain neutral. You are a merchant's Government and have their support—and why should you not, considering that you have granted them practically everything they asked.

If things go well, as it is true they did to a certain extent last season, we will be able to market our fish at a fairly good price again this year, but the question is, will these favourable conditions last? We have no guarantee whatever that they will. According to all indications we will have a much larger number of men fishing this year than last; with the result that there will be a larger catch, and with the keen competition of our opponents in the markets the question arises, will the prices be maintained? It has been said that because the catch was short last year the price was high; but is it reasonable to suppose that that condition will apply again this season. I am sure that the Hon. the Prime Minister must be thinking of this matter. He is one of our largest exporters, and his interests are in the fisheries. It is true he may have other interests in other industries, but his principal interests are in the fisheries, and it is needless for me to question his anxiety as to the success of the fisheries.

The fisheries are, and will ever remain, the principal industry of our people, and every effort should be made to improve the marketing conditions of the catch.

Now, Mr. Speaker, we have heard a lot about tourist traffic and the building of roads, which matters are all right in their way, but we can never get anything to replace the fisheries in this country. We are now dealing with the staple industry of the colony and I have in my possession certain resolutions which were presented, in 1922, to the Government of that day, by a Society known as the United Fishermen. The representatives of that body I remember, asked for a conference with the Government, which was gladly given them, and it is no secret that the honourable gentleman who advised them on that occasion, was the Hon. Mr. Morine, who attended the conference with them, presented their case, and drew up the resolutions. But nothing whatever has been done since to improve the marketing conditions of our fish.

The reason why I refer to the Hon. Mr. Morine is because he is a member of the Legislative Council and prominent in all the affairs of the Government, and the Hon. the Prime Minister is credited with saying during the bye-election in Bonavista Bay that he took him into his Government because he was a man of brains. I am sure that nobody will question that he is a man of brains; but rightly or wrongly, it has been said that the result of this brainy man's activities have not always been in the best interests of this country, and that is the reason why fault is found with him. I am not referring to Hon. Mr. Morine in a personal way, Mr. Speaker, but considering that he is the brains of the Government, is it possible that he has undergone a change of heart, or is it that the difference in his position, he now being a member of the Executive Government, while in 1922 he was on the outside, has caused him to alter his opinion on fishery matters. Perhaps he is too busy wielding the poliitcal axe, dismissing honest, efficient civil servants to find positions for political heelers, especially the leaders of the United Fishermen movement, that the fishery policy of 1922 is forgotten. Times are better just now and we will bring in something else to take the attention of the people and they will forget that we ever had anything to do with the United Fishermen, or any movement to bring about a better marketing of our fish. Mr. Speaker, it would be worth while for this House to spend many hours in the consideration of this question. There are many things in the Speech that are put there merely to camouflage, and perhaps the Speech is not entirely indicative of the Government's attitude towards the matter of the fisheries. There are certainly other important matters not referred to, which, I presume, they will deal with later, and one of these must surely be the fisheries. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I take the liberty to refer to the Hon. Mr. Morine's activities on the fisheries in 1922, and repeat that since then nothing whatever has been done to improve the marketing. With your permission, Mr. Speaker, I will quote from the petition referred to, and presented by the United Fishermen, Nov., 1922, and the House I submit could not do better than consider it. The United Fishermen were apparently sincere in applying to the Government of that day and the Hon. Mr. Morine might have been the same. But recent happenings may cause one to doubt the sincerity of the United Fishermen, as well as the motives of the man, or men, who took a leading part in that movement.

Quotes petition.

Mr. Speaker, I shall be only too glad to pass that petition over to the Prime Minister, it contains some good points while others may be discarded. Now is the time for something to be done while you are in a strong position. The man who drew up this petition is now at your service; get busy and do something before the House closes. This is an outstanding question which should not be considered from a political standpoint, and you should be broadminded enough to take advice from the excellent speeches made on this question from this side of the House. We should forget the past and be willing to consider, not only consider, but accept, any proposals put forward which would bring about the conditions desired by every person of mature age with regard to our national industry. I offer no apology for taking up the time I have on this question. We were told by some of the best fishermen of this country, those living on the north side of Bonavista Bay, men who prosecuted the fisheries on the Labrador, that unless taxation was lightened, unless expenditure was reduced, they would not be able to prosecute the fishery. They returned during that season with comparatively large voyages but they could not make two ends meet, and they were considering leaving the country if the Government did not do something to lighten the burden of taxation. They admitted that taxation could not be reduced unless expenditure was reduced correspondingly. During the Squires and Warren administrations, the estimates showed a reduced expenditure of two million dollars. The United Fishermen told us that expenditure should be cut in half, and referred to useless and overpaid officials, there were too many steamers, receiving large subsidies. The steamer should be taken off Bonavista Bay; there was no need of a steamer on northern Labrador. They were speaking of expenditure on current account, not on relief. What has the Government they helped to elect done to cut ordinary expenditure in half? Absolutely nothing. There is no protest from the leaders of the United Fishermen now. Seventy-five per cent. of them are stowed away in Government jobs. Now I do not intend to speak on finance this evening, there will be time enough for that when we get to the Budget, but I may be excused for offering a remark on the expenditure of this year. I am told that there is going to be a surplus revenue over expenditure, there will be reduction of expenditure of three quarters of a million dollars. I am anxious to get the public accounts to find out in what way the lessening of expenditure has taken place. The votes for public institutions, I presume, are about the same as last year. The repairs for public institutions, I presume, are about the same. With regard to the administration of Government departments I cannot see how it is possible to have less expenditure, when we consider the number of officials and the salaries paid the officials this year compared with last year. As regards expenditure, I venture to say that when the accounts are tabled, the only saving will be in the amount spent for relief. It is unreasonable to suppose that the Government would be called upon to spend as much money on relief as last year when we had seven thousand people, the most of whom were out of employment the year previous, earning on a low average two dollars a day at the Humber. That would be about fourteen thousand dollars a day multiplied by the number of working days in a year, say three hundred, gives in wages alone five million two hundred thousand dollars. Without this industry conditions in this country would be far worse than during the year 1923. This applies particularly to Trinity District, where the fishery was the worst on record. Still the people are better off than they have been since 1921. The conditions that obtain in St. John's where you have over twelve hundred families kept alive on the dole system on an average of ten dollars each per week, or about $50,000 per month. Where would your saving in expenditure come in if the people of the outports had to be helped at the same rate per capita, which condition would certainly exist if we had no Humber Industry. You have adopted the dole system, which is demoralizing, but it is the easiest way to give out money, and get no returns. There are people in Trinity District who could not go to the Humber, some of them were at the fishery, others through age and sickness had to remain at home, these people in some cases have to beg from door to door for a bit to eat. Your Relieving Officers can do nothing for them, while here in St. John's you are spending at the rate of half a million dollars per year. You have a Commission of Enquiry on Hospitals and Public Charities, consisting of the Prime Minister, the Colonial Secretary and Hon. A. B. Morine, with two secretaries and a typist, which is a pure waste of money. The Prime Minister said in reply to a question as to when this Commission will report, that they may not be in a position to report for six months. Then I presume the Commission will present their bills for payment, and two respectable but needy men and a typist will have a job for 8 or 10 months. People had to be kept alive during the years 1922 and 1923. No person would give credit. All avenues of employment were closed. Some people got money who could get along without it, you are sure to have impositions. You have them now in connection with your dole system in the city. The applicants are right under your eyes and an army of officials and policemen to enquire into the circumstances of each individual. Do not waste any more money on Enquiries, you will never collect money that has been improperly spent. See that these Intittutions are properly managed now. Institute a better system, if you can, and enforce your rules and regulations; but do not waste time and money over what cannot be remedied. How have you kept your pre-election promises, re a square deal to all? I will mention one or two instances out of the many to show that your activities are anything but square. Why did you dismiss honest, efficient officials and put in their places many unfitted in every way for the positions. Take the change of crews on the Malakoff, why was the mate of the Malakoff put on the street the first of September? I refer to Mr. George Howell of Catalina, a man who had been in the service on Trinity and Bonavista Bays for 16 or 17 years, and had been from before the mast to Captain on the bridge for some time when Capt. Day was sick. Even poor old Capt. Day had to walk the plank.

MINISTER OF MARINE & FISHERIES—Howell was a political partizan.

MR. HALFYARD:—I do not believe that Mr. Howell took any part in politics I do not know whether he voted for me or not. But the Minister of Marine and Fisheries has given the reason why Mr. Howell was dismissed. Some person told the Minister, or the Prime Minister, that Howell voted for Halfyard, and without taking the trouble to find out whether it was true or not, this man was penalized, because the majority of the electors in Trinity District voted for me and my colleagues. This is what we get from the Square Deal Party.

You are making every steamer in the Costal Service under Government Control a dumping ground for political heelers; suitability or efficiency does not count. The Wren was lost. The Malakoff was put on the rocks. The Prospero just escaped being a total wreck, and the whole chapter of accidents might possibly not have happened, if the captains and crews of these steamers had not been interfered with. I would be shirking my duty as a representative of Trinity District, if I did not speak of the injustice to Mr. Howell. It is a crying shame, and a disgrace to any Government. The people of Trinity District individually and collectively, were penalized for political reasons. It was bad enough to dismiss the crew because they belonged to Trinity District, but to take the Malakoff off Trinity Bay without giving any substitute service, was most outrageous treatment. Bonavista and Trinity Bays were being served by the Malakoff by a weekly trip, which was as much as the finances of the country could afford, and the people were satisfied. Bonavista Bay on the north side was being well served by every steamer sailing north from St. John's.

Splendid Motor ferry services linked up the other parts of the Bay with the Railway and the Malakoff. By having one boat do both Bays we saved thirty or thirty-five thousand dollars, and both districts received similar treatment. Trinity District during the past few months with regard to transportation services and money to meet pressing requirements, has been completely ignored, while steamers are chasing each other around in Bona vista District, and money in galore for Marine Works and Roads and Bridges have been distributed in every nook and corner of the District. And this is a Square Deal. Before this House closes we shall find out what the Malakoff cost this country last year, compared with the year previous. The Minister of Posts and Telegraphs came in here last year and told us all that was being saved on steam subsidies. The steamers would be taken off Bay of Islands, the Wren off Fortune Bay, and there would be no steamer on Northern Labrador, and there would be a saving of about $125,000. What happened? Ten days after the Minister made that statement, the Wren was sent to Labrador, and a little later Bay of Islands and Fortune District had steam services, and we shall find when the accounts are tabled, if I am not much mistaken, that steam subsidies this year are just as great as last year.

The Minister of Marine and Fisheries had visions of great numbers of schooners on Northern Labrador, and he decided to send the Wren, and of course they had to get a good captain, Captain George Barbour, for political reasons was put in the discard, his experience did not count, and when it came to choosing a captain, blood was thicker than water, and he got a captain to go down. That captain, like many other good men, had an accident, and then another steamer had to go down. I cannot see where there was any saving to the revenue. All that the Government has done, has been done under pressure. Did the Government think that the honourable member for Fortune was going to tolerate your proposition, or your actions, wtihout protest? You had to fall in line with his propositions, because you saw the wisdom of them.

MR. HALFYARD:—The Minister of Marine and Fisheries just bears out what we all know and you would not take a proposition coming from this side of the House, because you are afflicted with the germ of partisanship. I thought that the Prime Minister was going to inject something into the political systems of his followers that would kill that germ; but instead of that he is encouraging its propagation, and it is increasing. It has taken full control of every action of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries and of the Government, and almost every utterance of every responsible Minister of the Crown. Where are we and whither tending?

I was speaking of expenditure, and I was dealing wth the policy of the Government. It is a very important question. It vitally effects every man, woman and child in this country, because if we cannot reduce expenditure, if we cannot carry on the public service at less cost, the burden of taxation will bear just as heavily during the coming year on the shoulders of the taxpayers as it has borne in the past. It is a regrettable condition of affairs, but as the honourable member for Fortune District pointed out in the House last year, there are certain services that we are under an obligation to have performed, and Fortune Bay must have some kind of transportation services. Fortune Bay has been shown up in the public press as an example of the little amount of money that has been spent for medical services during the past year. Why?

Are the people of Fortune District not subject to the same ills that the people of other parts of the country are subject to? Are there any ills that affect the people near St. John's that do not affect the people of Fortune Bay? No! The difference is that these people are out of communication with doctors and nurses, and they live and suffer and die And that is the reason that the expenditure has been so small. It is unnecessary on my part to refer to Fortune District so much, when the people in that constituency are so well represented by the able exponent of their cause, the honourable Mr. Warren. I apologize to Mr. Warren for referring to the matter at all. But the conditions have shown that the Government made a mistake in taking the Wren off Fortune Bay. Your action was inexcusable. Transportation services in certain sections of this country must be maintained, just as you maintain lighthouses. You say you have to maintain the railway. You must, but you must also maintain certain steamer services in some places in this country. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take advantage of this opportunity to tell something else to the Minister of Marine and Fisheries. I tell it to him in his public capacity, and not at all in his personal capacity. It affects the District of Trinity to such an extent that it must appeal to the Hon. the Prime Minister at this time, and I am sure that what I say will be readily accepted by the Ministers of the Crown, including the Minister of Marine and Fisheries. What I have to say is this,—that you made a mistake last year in connection with the arrangements about transportation services in Fortune Bay, and a similar mistake was made in Trinity District.

You must admit that it was a mistake, from every point of view. The Malakoff, I hope, will be put back on Trinity and Bonavista Bays, and thus a lot of money will be saved. Get that done as quickly as possible. Get down to a Square Deal, and see that the members are consulted. I hope that all the members on the other side of the House had the privilege of listening to the speeches of my colleagues Mr. Godden and Capt. Randell. I am proud to have these men as my colleagues. Just for the minute leave Halfyard out of it altogether. He is an old politican. But why have you not consulted my colleagues, Capt. Randell and Mr. Godden? If it has not been necessary to consult these members, why has it been necessary to consult Mr. Mitchell, Mr. King and Dr. Tait? Why have these men been consulted?

Certainly Captain Randell knows something about the district. I do not know that Dr. Tait has interferred in any way with Trinity District, but I know that Mr. Mitchell has, I have been told that the Hon. the Prime Minister persuaded him to manage the affairs of the District. It was forced upon him, I believe. It seems that Halfyard who has the good-will of the majority of the electors and knows the requirements of every part of the District, must be ignored; if anything is to be done let it be through Mr. Mitchell. This is Premier Monroe's idea of a Square Deal. The majority of the people say it is an outrageous deal. From some sections of the district people write to say—the Tories got a few votes down here last spring, but if they came here now they would not get one quarter of the number.

MR. P. H. MOORE—Would you believe that, Mr. Halfyard?

MR. HALFYARD—In the natural order of things, could you believe anything else? You took the steamer off the Bay, turned out competent officials, sent no money to the District to rebuild bridges, and did nothing for friend or foe.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—Didn't we put a road down there?

MR. HALFYARD—Yes, Mr. Prime

Minister, we heard something of a road, and this gives me an opportunity to speak of it. It is a sorry story, but true. It was broadcasted last year that a scheme of roadbuilding was to be undertaken, and the people of Trinity Bay South were told that the first work started would be in connection with the road begun by the outgoing Government in their District the previous year. This road began at Old Perlican and went right through to Lead Cove. It was partly built and a large sum of money had been expended as the hon. member for Bay-de-Verde is well aware. The money was voted by the outgoing Government, and the Hon. Mr. Cramm with Mr. Hibbs, who was my colleague at the time, had the allocating of the money. It had been built to within two and three-quarters of a mile of Lead Cove, and the policy was to have a splendid motor road through Sibley's Cove, Whale's Brook, New Chelsea, New Melbourne, Winterton and other points to Heart's Content. The plan as outlined by the Government Engineer, showed that the contour was not exactly what it should be, and that the road should go around certain hills and build a good road to connect with the railway at Heart's Content. That was the compensation for taking the steamer off the Bay. I certainly cannot see how a road would be a substitute for transportation service in that section of the District. The people were told in August you would give them a road, and men from Lead Cove to Green's Harbor were writing me for a job on the road. It is said that some men who were working up country gave up their jobs and came home, thinking that if they were near their property they would have a chance to improve it in the evenings. Men at New Chelsea even hauled up their boats and dug their potatoes two weeks earlier than usual to be prepared for the work on the road for the rest of the Fall. A Government Contractor, who was used to building the Badger, Botwood, and other roads was engaged, and I do not know how much it cost to transport his machinery, horses, drays, tractors, etc., from Grand Falls to the South Side of Trinity Bay. Anyhow the work was started, and about two miles of road built when work ceased a day or two before the bye-election in Bonavista Bay. The men only got about seven or eight days' work, and those who did not stop up country or hauled up their fishing boats were not only sadder but wiser men. That is exactly what happened. To quote Scripture, they asked for bread and you gave them a stone, and metaphorically speaking if they were to exist on what they got they might just as well have had the stone because they did not earn enough on the road to buy the bread let alone the butter to put on it. We are reviewing the history of what you have done during your six months in power. A few days ago I saw a book giving the reasons why the women should not get the vote. When I opened it I discovered all the pages were blank, which was just what they should be—there were no reasons. The Government's record is just the same—it is worse than a blank. Now the Speech from the Throne takes four pages to tell what they will do in the future, and I hope, Mr. Speaker, they will do something.

Fearing that I may not have occasion before the time arirves for the closing of the session to refer to the matters that I would like to touch on this evening in a casual way, I shall take this opportunity to refer to the Income Tax. The Speech from the Throne has this to say about it:

This is rather amusing. Repeal the Income Tax and it is a panacea for all our ills and we will get back to the good old days of comfort. "The good old days of comfort." I do not know what that means. From remarks in the public press and in this House the repealing of the income tax is regarded as a most popular thing. Well, why is it popular? And with whom is it popular? It is popular with the wealthy and well-to-do classes. Certainly it is, and will be popular no doubt with parties who have shirked their responsibilities, and have not conformed with the Laws of this Colony, and who have evaded the payment of the income tax. But why should the law be repealed because it is difficult to enforce? Evidently the Government is following the line of least resistance. The Leader of the Government in the Upper House is credited with having said a year or two since that the Prohibition Act was a good thing for the country, and to make it effective it required to have some teeth put in it and cause it to function properly. As soon as that hon. gentleman had the opportunity to put his statement into effect, he was one of the first to repeal the Act. We presume this was much easier and apparently much more popular, than to get the machinery installed to put some teeth in the Act. Now we are to have the Income Tax repealed. This is no doubt very popular also, with the well-to-do section of the community, whose annual incomes cause them to pay certain moneys into the treasury. Political economists say, while revenues must be collected by taxation, the income tax is an ideal tax, but deplores the fact that it is very difficult to make collections, or it is too much trouble to bring defaulters to realize that they must obey the stautory laws of the land, and render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's. This Government will therefore give another instance of repealing what is regarded as a just system of taxation. It is too much trouble to put the law into effect. It is unnecessary to elaborate on the justness of the tax, so long as we must have taxation. Under our indirect system of taxation, every person who lives in the country pays into the Treasury, upon the necessaries of life, viz., food and clothing, proportionate taxation on the food consumed and the clothing used, whether the income of that person is much or little. Of course the easiest way to get revenue is to collect the taxes on the imported article before a release is given by the Customs. The merchant, business man, or trader sets the price accordingly for the rich and poor alike. One must eat to live, and according to the rules of society and climatic conditions, one must wear clothes; all members of the community are therefore taxed alike in proportion to the quantities consumed by the individual. Will any person argue that this is a just system of taxation? It is an iniquitious system, when the labourer owing to the increased cost of life's necessities as a result of taxation, not only himself, but the wife and children dependent upon the result of his toil, eke out a miserable existence, badly housed, poorly fed, and half clothed. Then the Government that removes the Income Tax, which applies only to the wealthy and fairly well-to-do, are greeted by the press with laudatory statements. From whom? From men who should be thankful that their earnings are such that they came under the provisions of the Income Tax. I give no credit to the individual who has tried to evade this form of taxation. I happened to get a copy of a weekly city journal last Saturday, and was surprised that there was one paper, at least that had the courage of its convictions and was bold and daring enough to give its opinion on the repeal of the Income Tax. I cannot do better than quote the editor's remarks. I agree with the writer in every particular.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—Your own Leader said he thought this Income Tax should have been repealed long ago.

MR. HALFYARD—I am not speaking for my Leader, I am speaking for the man on the street.

MR. BROWNE—I thought Mr. Warren spoke for them.

MR. HALFYARD—Yes, Mr. Warren spoke from one angle a few days ago, I am speaking from another. I have not consulted any one in this House or outside the House on this question. I am dealing with it as it appeals to me; and I cannot see how the Government can take off all forms of taxation that may appear embarrassing to the wealthy and well-to-do, and cannot reduce taxation on those who earn their bread by the sweat of their brows in the fishing boats, in the mines and in the lumber woods.

The Hon. member for Harbour Main, Mr. Cahill, when proposing the motion for an Address in Reply to his Excellency's Speech, said that the Government had kept its promise, for a "Clean up keep clean and a square deal to all" to the very jot and tittle. That is the spirit and letter of the slogan had been rigidly adhered to. In the face of what the Government has actually practised, it is difficult to perceive how the honourable member could be guilty of making such a statement, so contrary to what has really taken place. It was understood by the electorate that the cleaning up meant, the pushing of the inquiry to a conclusion in connection with alleged misdemeanors in the Controller's Department. The Prime Minister now says they are cleaning up because they have to find money to pay outstanding bills due the British Government, and completely satisfies himself that he is doing all the people expected of him. If he is satisfied, the people are not, unless they are disgusted with all inquiries. What about the Square Deal? Is it a square deal for the elected representatives of Trinity District and other Representatives of Opposition Districts to be absolutely ignored in all matters affecting the interests of their constituents?

I beg to differ from the hon. proposer of the Address in Reply to the Speech of His Excellency. If he being a resident of the city is not acquainted with the Government's policy, I excuse him for that statement.

Mr. Speaker, I would again ask the Hon. the Prime Minister, if it is the intention of the Government to ignore elected representatives?

Question—To ask Hon. the Prime Minister if it is the intention of the Government to have allocations for Public Works under the direction of the Dept. of Public Works and the Dept. of Marine and Fisheries made upon the recommendations of the elected representatives of the different districts?

Answer—All allocations for Public Works are under the jurisdiction of the Ministers of these Departments, and they will use their judgment, in accepting or otherwise, the recommendations of the elected representatives.

There was a similar reply given last year. We on this side of the House are to get the same treatment as last year, judging from the reply given by the Prime Minister. I would ask the Prime Minister for his idea of an honest or square deal. Does he really and sincerely believe that it is the right thing, to ignore the elected representatives of the Districts? Evidently my colleagues, Capt. Randell, Mr. Godden and myself are not worthy to represent the District of Trinity or hold seats in this House of Assembly, according to the ruling given by the Hon. the Prime Minister.

THE PRIME MINISTER—It depends upon the person who asks for allocations to be sent.

MR. HALFYARD—Are there words in the English language sufficiently strong to repudiate and to condemn the motive and the idea behind the reply which has been given this afternoon by the Prime Minister in connection with this matter. It is reprehensible; it is discreditable. Can you have an honest Government? Can you have co-operation? When you treat the members of this House in such a disgraceful manner,, and discriminate to such a contemptible degree. The districts expect to deal with the elected member or members, you insult them when you say it depends on the man who asks for the allocation to be made. Quite true, it depended on the man who asked for the allocation of moneys for the roads last year. As far as the people are concerned they are ignored, absolutely ignored. Elected Road Boards are ignored in connection with the spending of local and main line moneys. No Government ever interfered with elected or appointed Road Boards before in the spending of Local and Main Line Grants, which are annually voted by this House. At Blaketown you took these grants out of the hands of the duly constituted Road Boards, and appointed Mr. Arch Brown as a Commissioner, an insult to 75 per cent. of the voters of that place. There is a duly elected Road Board at Dildo, you appointed three men in place of that Board. Two of the three men told me that they would prefer not to be on the new Board, they were appointed without consultation. Of course one of the men was appointed to the job because he was a political partisan, and received the chairmanship of the Board. That man attempted to break up our meeting at New Harbor, he made himself most objectionable to the majority of the electors at Dildo, and it is another case of putting a premium on rowdyism.

I wish, Mr. Speaker that the Hon. Minister of Justice was in his place at this time, for when he occupied a seat on this side of the House, as Leader of the Opposition, in 1923, he asked the same question then, that I am asking now. This is what Mr. Higgins said at the time:—

MR. HIGGINS—"Mr. Chairman, before the Committee rises there is a matter which I should like to refer to arising out of the voting of public moneys. As I intimated to the Hon. Prime Minister in a private interview, I think the experiences of the past few months should have taught us something from which we might now benefit. It seems to have become an established thing for people who are in no way responsible to this House to have control of the expenditure of public monies with power to fling it around where and how they please. If the present Administration are sincere in their desire to have a general clean up, this is one of the first abuses that should be put a stop to. In my opinion, and I think all Hon. gentlemen on both sides of the House will agree with me, only elected representatives of constituents should recommend expenditure for district needs to the heads of departments. This practice of irresponsible people going around the country spending large sums of public moneys is an outrage. In many cases the money is not spent at all, but nothing can be done about it because those to whom it is given do not have to account for it. It is the duty of the Hon. Leader of the Government to see to it in future that such expenditures are directed or recommended by the men who will be responsible to this House. If there was an understanding that districts that happen to be in Opposition were to be treated the same as the Government districts, many of the abuses that have existed of late would be quickly done away with. Now, Mr. Chairman, might I, through you, ask the Hon. Leader of the House to lose no time in having this matter set right. I may say that this request is made without any consultation on the point with my colleagues on this side, but I feel that in making it I am voicing the wish of every Hon. member of the Opposition. Those who should alone have a say in the spending of public monies are the elected representatives of the people. The pople themselves sent us here and they must therefore take the responsibility for our acts."

How more applicable can anything be to the matter which is before the House at the present moment. The Hon. Mr. Higgins was at that time Leader of the Opposition. He knew whereof he spoke. He certainly cannot agree with the Prime Minister, who said "it all depends upon the person who asks for the allocation." The Hon Minister of Justice, Mr. Higgins, talks about abuses and said this is the first that should be cleaned up by the Warren Government. Perhaps it will be considered now that it has been brought to the attention of the Minister of Justice, surely it cannot be that he is uninformed as to what is being done. In fact the Warren Government was not guilty of the abuse at all; the elected representatives under that Administration had the absolute and full control of all moneys spent in their Districts, irrespective of Government or Opposition. The Monroe Government and the Minister of Justice, Mr. Higgins, are guilty of introducing the abuse. This is an example of the Clean Up policy. But I have not finished about those good old times; this clause in the Speech from the Throne says, "repeal the Income Tax and get back to the good old days of comfort." The first thing you did was to repeal the Prohibition Act, and that is the first step back. Now you propose to repeal the Income Tax, another step back. Possibly "the good old days of comfort" refers to the conditions that obtained in the eighteenth century, and to illustrate the relations that existed between the merchant and the fishermen of that time. I take the liberty to read the items that appeared on an account between a fisherman and his employer:—

Were those "the good old days of comfort" when the duty on rum was only three pence a gallon, and everybody could get all the rum they wanted? Methinks those good old days did not bring much comfort to the fishermen who were treated as serfs. If any one had comfort it must have been the merchants. The merchants are getting every consideration by the present Government in the removal of the Income Tax, which affects them and the well-to-do; but you will not take the duty off molasses for the fisherman and the labourer. Perhaps the "good old days of comfort" are not meant for them.

MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES—Mr. Speaker, I wish to say a few words in reference to the Speech from the Throne. In making reference to the Speech from the Throne, I wish to congratulate the mover and seconder of the Address in Reply on their splendid speeches made on the opening day, and before I go any further I would like to say that when I came down here to-day I had no intention whatever of making any speech in reference to the Speech from the Throne, but during the remarks made by Mr. Halfyard, my attention was drawn to several different things, and I think in fairness to all concerned I should say something. I do not think it is right for any member of the House of Assembly to come in here and make charges against a man who is not here, and cannot be heard to defend himself. Why cannot he tell this to the man's face. I am speaking with regard to a charge made against me of having my brother put in charge of the Wren. In the first place, I have been charged with putting him there. That is a lie. The boat was chartered by the Government, and the Government made the appointments of the master, and the officers, and the crew and all the rest of them. I had nothing to do with having my brother put there. In reference to the running ashore of the Wren, I may say that Capt Randell, the honourable member for Trinity, made a speech yesterday, in which he referred to the dangerous, and uncharted coast line of Labrador. I did not pay very much attention to Mr. Halfyard talking about the Wren being lost on the Northern Labrador, because Mr. Halfyard does not know what he is talking about. Capt. Randell knows a lot about these things, and he will know very well that any man who takes a boat up on Northern Labrador is up against a hard proposition running along that coast, especially when she is out of her regular route. I want to tell Mr. Halfyard another thing; at the time that the Wren was lost, there was a pilot aboard. My brother did not lose her at all.

MR. HALFYARD—A pilot on board? More extravagance.

MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES—It is the extravagance of the Government that you were in some time ago that left us as we are. We are living to-day suffering from the bad management of the Government that Mr. Halfyard was a member of.

He brought up the question of the United Fishermen, too, some time ago. He made the remark that the Minister of Marine and Fisheries made a promise to the fishermen of Bonavista Bay that he would give them a bonus on their catch of fish. The Prime Minister and myself did, but on what conditions? One was that if the revenue of the country would stand it, and the other was that it would be given if it was needed. The statement that Mr. Halfyard made that seventy-five per cent. of the men in Bonavista Bay wanted the bonus on fish last year is not right.

MR. HALFYARD—That is a personal matter which I want to answer. The honourable member has misunderstod what I said. I was referring to a remark made by Mr. Scammell, the hon. member for St. Barbe, when he was talking a few days ago. He said that seventy-five per cent. of the fishermen in Bonavista Bay last year were led to believe that they were going to get a bonus on fish.

MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES — Perhaps seventy-five per cent. of the electors of Bonavista told you last Fall that what Monroe and Winsor told them in June last they believed and still believe in. You charged me with pitchforking my brother into a position. I would like to ask Mr. Halfyard if he ever pitchforked any blood relation of his into a position?

MR. HALFYARD—That is a personal matter. I do not see why you should say anything like that. It is small and despicable.

MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES—I say that it is small and dirty for any member to make a statement against a man that is not in the House of Assembly. You took good care to say that the boat was lost, but not to say who lost her. You did not accuse my brother of any bad management—you did not say that it was because of bad management that she was lost. You were not man enough.

About the Malakoff. We did take the Malakoff off, but who took her off Bonavista Bay in the first place. You took her off Bonavista to satisfy some of your supporters at Port Union, who were anxious that she should come off Bonavista Bay. You did not bring her back for the benefit of the public of Trinity Bay, but for the benefit of a private concern. I had scores of letters from the residents of Bonavista Bay, and even Captain Day told me that she was only a nuisance running on Trinity Bay.

Mr. Speaker, in reference to a charge made while discussing the Speech from the Throne about turning certain individuals off boats, I may say that it is a fact, and I make the statement without fear of contradiction, that there was one solitary Government man on the Malakoff in Bonavista last Fall during the elections, and he was not allowed to go ashore by the captain, because they feared that he might do some benefit for the Government. I say that it is time that the Government put a stop to these kind of things, and see that they are not allowed to go on.

Mr. Monroe made a statement that any public servants taking active part in politics would be dismissed. But who started that in the first place? Mr. Halfyard said that the members elected for the districts cannot get the money to spend. I make a challenge to Mr. Halfyard, and to Capt. Randell, and to Mr. Godden to name anything that any one of them has come and asked me to do for their district which I have not done. I sent for you three or four times to come to me, but you would not come.

MR. HALFYARD—It would be useless, we would not get the money.

MINISTER OF MARINE & FISHERIES—You never asked me for it. You asked for money to be sent out to Elliston to build a bridge, and the money was sent out. And I sent money to everyone you asked me to, didn't I Capt. Randell?

CAPT. RANDELL—Yes.

MR. HALFYARD—What was the good of that; did you want us to get down on our knees and crawl to you.

MINISTER OF MARINE & FISHERIES—I never asked you to crawl to me and if it was humiliating to come down to my office, I will tell you now the reason why I would not do it for some of you. For the last years before 1923 the members who were sent money for Bonavista Bay should not have had the handling of the money of any district. Every dollar of it was sent to the Union Councils and they gave it only to those who supported their own side. A case was stated last year where $1000 was sent to my own home town and because certain men were not on the side of the Union they could not get one red cent of it. Is that fair, Sir. I ask Mr. Halfyard if there is any difference made now as to the giving of a day's work, and I challenge him to state if any Union man asked me for anything that I did not try to get him a job and in nine cases out of ten succeeded. As far as the fishery is concerned we did not give a bonus because with fish at from $8 to $12 a qtl. we did not consider it fair to tax the other people of the country to give it. I may say for the benefit of the public generally that the fishermen of Bonavista and Notre Dame Bays were told it would not be fair to the other taxpayers of the colony to give a bonus and they did not want it. I consider that if any squandering was done the gentleman opposite is one of those who did it.

On motion the debate on the Address in Reply was deferred until to-morrow.

The remaining Orders of the Day were deferred.

It was moved and seconded that when the House rises, it adjourn until to-morrow afternoon at three of the clock.

The House then adjourned accordingly.

THURSDAY, Feb. 26, 1925.

The House met at three of the clock in the afternoon, pursuant to adjournment.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—Mr. Speaker, before proceeding with the Order of the Day, I am going to ask the concurrence of the Opposition for the purpose of proceeding immediately with the Sealing Bill. His Excellency is coming to the Legislative Council this afternoon to consent to the Finance Bill which we passed the other day, and to avoid giving him the trouble of another trip down to consent to the Sealing Bill I thought it possible that we might put it through this afternoon, have it sent to the Legislative Council, and after it was passed there to have it assented to by His Excellency the Governor at half past four.

THE HON. LEADER OF THE OPPOSITION—We are glad to conform with anything of that nature which arises, now or any other time during the session.

MR. SPEAKER left the Chair.

MR. PUDDISTER took the Chair of Committee.

MR. SCAMMELL—Mr. Chairman, I do not intend to make any reference to the bill before the chair. I would just like to ask the Minister of Marine and Fisheries whether all the steamers going to the ice are fitted with wireless outfits, and if so whether they are obliged by law to be so fitted.

MINISTER OF MARINE & FISH-

ERIES—Yes they all are outfitted with the wireless. That is the law.

HON. THE LEADER OF THE OPPOSITION—Mr. Chairman, I want to ask the Minister of Marine and Fisheries for a little information. He is a sealing captain and I think that he should be able to tell me what I would like to know. There was a law put in force some years ago and I suppose that the captains who were sealing masters at that time were consulted about the matter, I would like him to give me a little information as to why the change is being made at the present time.

MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES—Mr. Chairman, in reply to the Leader of the Opposition, I may say that for the past few years there has been a great agitation that the law be changed as perhaps the Hon. members opposite are aware. At one time you were not allowed to carry guns to the fishery. You were not allowed to kill hoods. Since 1921 there have been a great number of the clauses of the act which have been amended by Executive authority and the ships have been allowed to sail on the fifth of March. This is a matter which should be in my opinion left to the captain. As a master of many years experience there have been some springs when I would have liked to sail on the thirteen of March and on other years I would like to sail on the fifth of March. Sometimes the seals are thirty or forty miles north of Belle Isle and the coast is blocked with ice. Consequently, it takes a long time to get to the seals and if you do not leave till the 10th or 12th of March, it will take a long time to cut through this ice and when you arrive where the seals are you are too late. It is, the opinion of the owners of the ships, as well as the captains, that the ships should be allowed to sail on the 5th of March if they wish. I have been practically always under the impression that the 10th of March is the proper time to set out for the seals.. I remember a few years ago that the captains, who, at that time nearly all came from the Northern side of Bonavista Bay, were asked their opinion about making the date of sailing later. I wrote my owners, who were Baine Johnson's at that time, to that effect, and I am of the same opinion now. Others thought different. Some thought that as late as the thirteenth of March was best.

But with the vessels which we have at the present time, I think that the captains should be allowed to sail as early as the fifth of March. Perhaps we may have steel ships and it may be necessary to change the law—this law-again. This law was enforced last year by Executive authority. It never came before the House. So as to make it lawful and not have the captain, or somebody else getting into trouble when he comes back from the fishery, I brought in this bill. Next year we may have different conditions. Then it may be necessary to change this law again.

MR. SCAMMELL—Mr. Chairman, for myself I may say that I am in accord with many of the things that Capt. Winsor has said. I think with him that the captains interested should have some say about the date on which the ships should be permitted to sail. I know the captains are very watchful for some months before the fishery time comes around in making observations as to the direction of the winds and other conditions which might effect the locations of the seals. But there is another point about this bill which is before us on which I would like to hear Captain Winsor give some explanation. That is the point about the steamers staying out for an unlimited time. I am but a young man, and not very experienced in affairs as regards the sealfishery. I was under the impression that the law now was on the Statute Book, provided for a certain length of time, beyond which the ships could not stay out. I would like to know whether it is the intention of this bill to arrange matters so that the captains will now be able to stay at the fishery as long as they choose. I think that the majority of the men who go to the sealfishery would like to have some definite knowledge as to the time when the voyage might be expected to conclude. Only this morning a couple of men came to see me and talking about various matters they made reference to this bill. Are we to understand that the captains alone are to decide as to when they shall give up the voyage or is it possible to get some definite knowledge as to when the voyage will be over. I hope that the Minister of Marine and Fisheries will give us some explanation on that matter. I would like to be informed.

THE MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES—In reply to the hon. member for St. Barbe, the captain is to decide when he is to come home from the fishery. If I go to the sealing fishery with a hundred and twenty men I should be in a pretty condition if every man had to give his opinion as to when we were to come home. Of course it can be very clearly seen that there will be few ships that can stay out until the twenty-fifth of April because they cannot carry enough coal. There are the Terra Nova and one or two others which can stay out until this time but that is all. The most that some of them can do is to stay out as long as the fifteenth or twentieth of April. I have never been able to stay out longer than the tenth of April. That is the only suggestion that I can make as to the time that the ships might be expected to come home. That is when all their coals are burned. The owners have to go to a great expense in the fitting up of the ships to-day, and as these are ships that cannot make any money during other times of the year, all that I can say is that any man who wants to go to the sealfishery ought to be prepared to stay out until the captain has decided to come in. If he is not prepared to do this then it is better for him to stay down in his own outport where he belongs. It has often happened to me that I have not come in from the fishery until every ton of coal has been burned. So that is the only thing that I can see which will be able to give a person some idea as to what time the voyage might be expected to finish, and that is when the coal or provisions have given out.

CAPTAIN RANDELL—In reference to this amendment now before the House I would like to add a few words. I think that it is immaterial when the ships sail for the fishery. I think that the ships should be given a chance to get to the seals. It does not matter whether they go on the fifth of March, but whenever they are ready, so long as they get the seals. Of course as to the length of time which the ships are to stay I agree with Captain Winsor that it depends on how long the provisions and coal last. I think that is a matter that might be very well left to the masters discrimination as to when he shall give up the voyage. Now there are very few ships which can stay out longer than the twenty-fifth of April. There are times when some men would like to stay out longer but usually it is not the case. I think that it is a matter which might be left to adjust itself.

HON. THE LEADER OF THE OPPOSITION—Mr. Chairman, there is a little explanation which I would like to have made in the interest of the sealfishery. Perhaps Captain

Winsor will give us some explanation about the birth of seals. The seals have young some time every year and I would like to know what time. The Government has found it necessary to bring a bill before the House at the present session of the Legislature for a close season for the lobster fishery for three years, because the fishery was becoming depleted. Now this action may possibly make it necessary for some future Government to bring in a bill making a close season for the sealing fishery also. I am satisfied with the explanations given by Captain Randell and Captain Winsor. That is all I wanted to know. I only wanted to suggest to Captain Winsor that he sees that everything is in order before he asks us to put through this bill. As to the time that the ships should come back from the ice, I quite agree with him that that should be left to the captains themselves.

MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES:—Mr. Chairman, and Mr. Leader of the Opposition, I think you have asked me a question this evening that it is rather unfair to ask me, but nevertheless I am quite prepared to part with any knowledge that I have to anybody that wants it. I cannot say that I have ever been there when the seals had their young, but I have been twenty-six years as a sealing captain, and as far as my knowledge goes, and the knowledge of the people who live around the places where the seals have their young, the time the seals have their young is about from February 27th. to March 1st. or second. That is in the majority of cases. Of course there will be exceptions to that, and I have heard of cases of the seals having their young about February 22nd.

I was told the other day by a man coming across the Gulf, that there was a whitecoat caught on the 18th. February, weighing fifty pounds. But everything that is white is not a whitecoat. The seal that that man was referring to I think must have been what is called a "pot-head". I have been told that there are two thousand and more of those caught every year in the gulf. It is not those seals that I am speaking of now, but the seals which are caught on the Northern section of this Island. From the 26th. February to the 1st. or 2nd. of March the old seals are seen along the French shore.

Yesterday, I had a message from Magistrate Alcock at Griguet, in which he says that there were millions of old seals all along the coast. That goes to prove that they have not had their young yet. But I think that the people who will follow the reports from around there for the next few days will find that about the 1st. March it will be reported that there are no old seals on the French shore. Consequently they will have gone to look for some place to the Eastward where they can have their young.

This year I may say will be the first for eighty-two years that there will not have been a Winsor to the ice. My grandfather was a sealing captain, and my father was also. This year I thought I might be able to go, because while I never thought that I was much service on land, still I did think that I would be some good to the country, on the water. But I will not be able to go this year.

MR. HICKMAN:—Why don't you put a Winsor on the "Prospero"?

MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES:—No, I would not do that. But for the information of the Leader of the Opposition I may say that so far as my knowledge goes, the seals have their young any time from February 27th. to March 1st. or 2nd.

There is one thing that I would like to say, and that is if I had it in my power, I would have a man stationed down on the Eastern end of Belle Isle, to report the weather conditions, the seal conditions and ice conditions. It is all very well to have the shoremen say that the fish are running here or there, but you really want a man down there, who can report these things day by day.

There was many a year that it used to be a cant in the city that "you would have to go to the eastward to find the seals" I remember a year a long time ago when I had Mr. Walter Baine Grieve out to the seal fishery with me. The day that we were going out of the Narrows he said to the second hand on board "the captain is going North—if I had charge of the ship I would have her go East." Sometime after that, the second hand told me, as perhaps he thought he should have told me, what the other man had said to him. I went North, however, and held fast to the Wadhams for a few days, and waited till we got a south west wind, and then we got our load of seals, twenty thousand of them or more. Captain Barbour of the Neptune had got his load before us, and Mr. Grieve wanted to get back to St. John's as soon as possible, so he was moving his things to the Neptune. He said to me that there were some bottles of whiskey and port wine up in his cabin. He said he knew I would not take any whiskey, but I might like the port wine. I said —"do you think we should have gone East, Mr. Grieve". Oh he said, "he told you what I said, did he."

I am glad to hear that Captain Randell is of the same opinion that I am, that any master who goes out to the seal fishery has a very difficult proposition ahead of him. And any merchant in this city who makes up his mind to make any individual master of his sealer should be prepared to let the master decide what time he ought to sail.

There is another thing that I had hoped would come up in this House, and I did not intend to bring it up now, because I intended to bring in a Bill at the next session of the House in relation to this matter. I intend to bring in a Bill next session to provide that all sealing masters be allowed to take their own crews, and have no interference in regard to them however. I have seen quite a bit of the seal fishery during the years that I have been master, and I think that the master of a sealing ship has to take a big lot of responsibility on him. He has quite enough responsibility on him without having men put in on him that have never been to the seal fishery before, and does not know the first thing about the ice, and do not know how to protect themselves even a few yards away from the ship. There are very stringent laws to-day on the statute book in reference to the captains of sealing vessels. About six or seven years ago the laws were very stringent for the captains, and now when a captain does not know who he is bringing out with him to the ice, it it a wonder that the captains are not down with Mr. Parsons in the Penitentiary for the rest of their lives.

A yew years ago a gentleman in this town had arranged to have two men go to the ice in the Viking. These men were delayed coming to St. John's, and consequently when they arrived here, the Viking had gone to the Gulf. He then asked me to take the men out with me. I asked him what kind of men they were, and he said they were all right—good men, so I took them out with me. What happened? I was very nearly losing my Spring's voyage because of those men. I got out to the ice, and one of those men had never been on the ice before, and as soon as he got clear of the ship, he went down between two pans of ice, and nearly had his leg broken. I might have had to start out and come back to St. John's with that man and so lose my voyage, but luckily I had a man on board who knew how to treat a case like that, and he fixed him up alright.

Therefore, I hope I will be able to bring in this Bill next session allowing every captain to pick his own men. I know now what a lot of the honourable members have said in their own minds—that it will be all Bonavista Bay men go to the ice. I want to abuse your minds of that idea. Only the other day a man came to me, and wanted me to get berths to the ice for fifty or sixty men. I said I have not got one to give you—the Government has not given me one berth out of their ships.

I was looking up the papers of the boat I had to the ice last year, and I found that out of one hundred and sixty-three men that were at the ice with me, there were only thirty-eight Bonavista Bay men, and the same thing applies to every boat that went to the ice with a Bonavista Bay captain in her. This year I understand that Bowring's have given their captains the whole responsibility of choosing their men. I myself am prepared to go to Conception Bay or any other place in the country outside of Bonavista Bay, and get just as good a crew for a sealing ship as in Bonavista Bay, that is, if I am allowed to pick them myself. It is not the fault of certain men that they did not get good men, but the reason is that the captains are not allowed to pick their own men, and pick men that have been to th seal fishery before.

MR. HICKMAN:—There is just one more question that I want to ask the hon. Minister. Are there not some regulations in reference to taking charge of a sealer? Does not the captain have to have certain requirements under the law.

MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES:—No. A few years ago there was a board appointed to examine the masters, the watch masters, and the bridge masters of the different ships. The law called for a board of three masters of ten years standing as masters, to examine the captains, watch masters and sealers officers. The Board has certain rules laid down, but I do not think myself that there is any advantage in having any rules laid down, because any man who has been master to the seal fishery for ten years will know all there is to be known about it.

MR. SCAMMELL:—Who are the examining Board this year?

MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES:—They are not appointed yet. I am going to ask for their appointment to-morrow, because I understand that the Viking is going to sail in two or three days' time. I was on the Board one year myself, and I suppose being on the wrong side last Spring, they turned me out. But I never kicked, and never accused anybody of it. I was quite satisfied with the three men that were there last year. In fact, when a man came to me and made a complaint that one of the members of the Board was not master for ten years, I did not make any fuss about it. I said, perhaps he knows as much in eight years as you and I do in ten.

CAPT RANDELL—Mr. Chairman, there is one question I would like to ask the Minister of Marine and Fisheries and that is, does he not think that the 13th is too early a date at which to kill. I believe this country has lost hundreds of thousands of dollars since we have been engaging in this fishery by the date to kill being set too early—that is, that the ships have been allowed to kill before the seals are matured. I ask the Hon. Minister if he ever saw the main body of the seals matured before the 13th of March. The old idea was that they were matured by the 17th, but in my few years experience I have not seen it, and I think the date, 13th should be carefully considered before the amendment is passed.

MINISTER OF MARINE & FISHTRIES—I may say in reference to Capt. Randell's question that I wish we had more time to talk this matter over, as I have an argument to put up in connection with it. When Mr. W. C. Job asked me if it was good to put off the killing date to the fifteenth, I expressed the opinion that the later the seals were killed one year, the later would they be in coming to killing weight next year. As I said before, and as I think Capt. Randell agrees after the time of whelping, if the seals are prevented from mating in one year they will be later the next year in having young. Unless the seals are caught up in the bays and manage to take to the water by the twentieth, it is generally considered that the voyage is practically hopeless. I agree it is immaterial as to when the ships sail, and as I said before, I would like to discuss the matter further, but I am satisfied that the thirteenth is early enough, and I don't think that the fourteenth or fifteenth would be too late. The main think is to go and get the seals. Some people think to get the seals is just like crossing the floor of the House, all you got to do is to go down to Belle Isle, cut around a bit, and pick up all you want of them. I admit we sometimes do not know exactly where the seals are, but last year we knew they were almost up in the woods, but still could not get to them. If we extended killing to a later date, I do not think it would do any harm.

MR. SCAMMELL—I would like to ask the Minister of Marine if he thinks Mr. Little would have any difficulty in passing the necessary examination.

MINISTER OF MARINE & FISHERIES—I do not think he will have any difficulty. He will answer the questions of the Board. Nobody can take a position from a man if he passes the examination, and answers the questions just like anybody sitting for a master's certificate. If he answers the questions you can't take the position from him.

MR. WARREN—Mr. Chairman, I had not intended to take any part in the debate on this subject only for the statement made by Captain Winsor himself. I think this is the first year in very many that he is not going to the Sealfishery as Master. I understand that he has some Qualms of conscience as to prosecuting the voyage, while he still holds the position of Minister of Marine and Fisheries. I know that he is trying to be honest with himself, but personally I think, and I firmly believe many others will agree with me, that in view of the importance of the fishery to the country, and the knowing ability and experience of Captain Winsor, we are not justified in keeping him back. Now then take the Government's own position. They are sending out the "Sagona" and the "Prospero," and for a time thought of sending the "Glencoe" also. These ships are not being sent out on pleasure trips, but to secure catches of seals. We certainly need a good sealfishery, and I ask is this the time to keep a man like Captain Winsor back when everything is dull, and he cannot do much in his office? I think the Government is very ill-advised in keeping him from going to the sealfishery. Here we are trying to get all the seals we can, and the Government itself sending out ships, so I cannot see any justification for the action in connection with Captain Winsor. We are sending others in his place, while he could easily go himself.

MR. SCAMMELL—Mr. Chairman, I beg to differ with the opinion expressed by Mr. Warren, and I think that Captain Winsor is well advised in staying home, in view of all the conditions. I agree that his valuable experience and ability are a loss to the fishery, but I believe Capt. Winsor has acted wisely in refraining from going out this spring. He is a public servant and a Minister of the Crown. Not so many years ago a certain Minister was slammed right and left for drawing a salary and accused of not being inside the door of his office for twelve months. Surely Captain Winsor is not going to lay himself open to attack in a similar way. He has done wisely in staying home, as he will be needed before this House closes to explain many matters, and I believe that when all the facts are laid before the country and his constituents, it will be generally agreed that he did right. It will be shown that he was prepared to make a great personal sacrifice. He has an able second-hand to succeed him, and consequently I am entirely at variance with the view expressed by Mr. Warren, and again affirm that Captain Winsor was right in staying in port.

MR. WARREN—Mr. Chairman, I thought I had made myself quite clear in my remarks. I put the matter on national grounds, rather than in comparison to what have been done by a previous Minister of Fisheries. I said that this is a time when the Government is sending steamers to the ice, that a good sealfishery is badly needed, and that it is a pity to have left behind men of the ability and experience of Capt. Winsor, particularly at a period when he can be of little use in his office. That is the ground on which I have based my argument, and to which I still adhere. It is not because Mr. Coaker did not attend to his office and was subjected to severe criticism, that, therefore, Capt. Winsor must not follow the same course. That is not in the matter at all, either the previous Minister was right, or he was wrong. If he left his office and did right, then Capt. Winsor can go to the ice, but if Mr. Coaker was not right in attending to his duties as Mr. Scammell intimated, then there is no reason why Capt. Winsor should not stay home. But as far as the present situation is concerned, I put it on the grounds as a national question, and I do not propose to argue the matter. Does anybody think for a moment that Ministers in the past devoted their whole energies and time to their office, and did not attend to their private business? Not at all—and there is nothing to justify Capt. Winsor stopipng ashore.

CAPT. WINSOR—Mr. Chairman, I would like to make a few more remarks, and draw attention to the fact that now no steamer is to sail for the sealfishery before 8 a.m. on the fifth of March in any year.

MR. SCAMMELL—The hon. the Prime Minister asked us to assist in getting through this Bill in a hurry, but now these changes are introduced.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—Mr. Chairman, I might say, if I am not interrupting, that the amendment was made after consulting the Minister of Justice, and at the suggestion of the Minister of Fisheries, and in view of the fact that unless this was legalized now, we would have to be going through the same rigmarole next year, as to the date of sailing. It is possible we may have better steamers going to the ice next year, though it does not seem likely at present, and we do not know what might be asked for then. The only reason why the changes made now is, that we may not have to pass the same legislation next year.

MR. SCAMMELL—Mr. Chairman, I thank the hon. the Prime Minister for his information, and I want to say that any criticism I have made on this Bill was not from the viewpoint of political acrimony or any desire to hold up the debate. Consequently, in view of the explanation of the Prime Minister, probably it would be just as well if the Bill went through with the amendment.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Mr. Chairman, I would like to explain that the intention of this Legislature is to remedy what has been the practice in the past. The law calls for this year only; but if we find ourselves in this position twelve months from now and the House not in session, then we would have to do it again on Executive responsibility, a situation we want to avoid even if done with good intent.

MR. HICKMAN—Mr. Chairman, if the amendment is not put in now, next year we will likely have another Sealing Bill here. If Capt. Winsor is satisfied that this Bill is a correct Bill, I think it could apply to any year as well as this year.

MR. HALFYARD—Mr. Chairman, I was very much interested in the debate on this Bill and everything seemed to have gone on nicely from my point of view. The Bill has been lucidly explained by Captain Winsor, but, in my opinion, it should not extend beyond the present year because next year there may be steel steamers prosecuting the sealfishery, and the amending of this Act would have to be done by Minute-of-Council, that is, if it is thought in the interests of the country that steamers cannot sail before a certain date. Other amendments have had to be made on Executive responsibility during the past few years. I would prefer, personally, for the Bill to remain as it is and let next year provide for itself.

Mr. Speaker resumed the Chair.

The Chairman from the Committee reported that they had considered the matter to them referred and had passed the said Bill with some amendment.

On motion this Report was received and adopted and it was ordered that the said Bill be read a third time presently.

Whereupon, with unanimous consent, the Bill entitled "An Act respecting the Sealfishery During the Present Year" was read a third time, and passed, and it was ordered that the said Bill be engrossed, being entitled as above, and that it be sent to the Legislative Council with a message requesting the concurrence of that body in its provisions.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Mr. Speaker, I ask leave to present a petition from a number of residents on the front section of Bell Island requesting an allocation for the extension of the public wharf there. In connection with the extension of this wharf the position is at the moment, that the water is too shoal and an extension of some thirty feet is requested. The petition is signed by practically all the people on the front of the Island, and I commend it to the Department of Marine and Fisheries for consideration and ask that, when allocations are being made out of a public character, this petition be borne in mind. The sum asked for by the petitioners is $1500.00.

MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE AND MINES—Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present a petition from the residents of the several harbours in St. Mary's Bay. The petition emanated in St. Mary's and is signed by Rev. Frs. O'Driscoll and Enright, William Hogan, M.D., Stipendiary Magitrate, St. Mary's, and about five hundred residents of St. Mary's Bay. The petitioners ask that a Fog Alarm be erected at Point LaHaye. I think that past hon. members of this House, a large number of whom are here today, will remember that on several occasions during the past four or five years petitions were presented by my colleagues and myself with reference to this fog alarm. In the years 1921-1922 when Sir William Coaker was Minister of Marine and Fisheries he took occasion to pledge to my colleagues and myself here in open House that the Government and his Department would have two fog alarms erected in the district of Placentia and St. Mary's. He not alone undertook to guarantee to put up those two very necessary public utilities and aids to fishing boats and coasters, but he went so far as to send Captain English, the present Harbor Master, and, I think, Captain Couch, to locate a site for them. They came back and reported that Point LaHaye was a most suitable place for the erection of a fog alarm and my colleagues and myself were given the assurance that work on them would start immediately. It is unnecessary to go into the details of what happened afterwards, sufficient to say that no fog alarm was erected at Point LaHaye, neither was there one erected on the West side of Placentia Bay. Now I hope and trust that, with such an important man as Captain Winsor in charge of the Department of Marine and Fisheries, the request of the petitioners this afternoon will be acceded to and acceded to at the present session of the House. I trust that the Minister will be able to make provision in his estimates to have sufficient money allocated to go ahead with these very necessary aids to navigation in this important section. During the past few years a large amount of money has been spent on fog alarms and lighthouses that were erected in various parts of the country; but within the twelve years that I have been a member of this House not twelve dollars have been spent on such utilities in my disrict, though there might have been improvements made to lighthouses, but I contend that lighthouses are not as important as fog alarms because a man trying to make the land in thick fog or stormy weather can see the light from the lighthouse but cannot see the land, whereas if he could hear the fog alarm he would know whereabout he was. At Point LaHaye numerous wrecks and considerable loss of life have occurred. There is no question that, if the fishermen of St. Mary's Bay were not hampered in pursuing their avocation and if they had this necessary aid to navigation erected, the country as well as themselves would share in the result of their toil. I have very much pleasure in presenting this petition and with the hope that this will be the last time—even if I represent the district for the next twenty years—I will present a petition from the inhabitants of St. Mary's Bay on this subject. I give the petition my hearty support and I ask the Minister of Marine and Fisheries to do all that is humanly possible to have the request of the petitioners acceded to.

MR. SINNOTT—Mr. Speaker, I have very much pleasure in supporting the prayer of the petition presented by my colleague, Mr. Walsh.

HON. MR. SULLIVAN—Mr. Speaker, like my colleagues I give the petition my unqualified support. We have been promised this fog alarm at Point LaHaye for a long time, and as Mr. Walsh has explained, Sir William Coaker saw the necessity for its erection just as much as we did, realising that every fog alarm is in the interest of the fishermen of Newfoundland and as a guidance to strangers coming in here. Near Point LaHaye there is a dangerous rock known as Nancy Cann and if that fog alarm had to be erected a few years ago, two shipwrecks would have been averted.

Last October, I wrote a letter to the present Minister of Marine and Fisheries asking him if he would include in his estimates provision for two fog alarms which are so badly needed by the people in both Placentia and St. Mary's Bays. I am glad to say that the Minister, with characteristic promptness, has placed the matter before the Government I have no doubt but that when this matter comes up before the Executive Government again that it will receive the same hearty support as it does from the three members for the district of Placentia and St. Mary's.

MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES—Mr. Speaker, I ask leave to present a petition from the residents of Glovertown, Bonavista Bay, asking for a Government building to be used as a Post Office, Custom House and a Magistrate's Office. As far as a Post Office is concerned at Glovertown, it is badly needed and has my hearty support. I ask that the petition be referred to the Department to which it relates.

MR. CHAMBERS—Mr. Speaker, I beg to present a petition from Cape LaHune on the subject of wireless telegraphy. This Cape is a great place on that Coast for bankers seeking bait, and it is most convenient to be able to communicate with other harbors. It would serve a population of six hundred people in an area of sixty miles. It would be a great convenience to the fishermen and business men there. I strongly recommend that a wireless station be established there to make up for this great want. I hope it will receive the proper attention.

MR. LAKE—Mr. Speaker, I have much pleasure in supporting this petition. Probably I know more about that coast than any other member in this House, having travelled over it many times. As mentioned by Mr. Chambers, it has absolutely no roads whatever. It has a coast line of sixty miles. It is a great place for bait. They go there on the chance of getting bait. The only connection is by the Portia once a fortnight or three weeks. The Glencoe does not call there. Therefore, I have much pleasure in supporting this petition.

HON. MR. LONG—Mr. Speaker, I have much pleasure in supporting the petition presented by the hon. member for Burgeo & LaPoile.

MR. POWER—Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present a petition from the people of Codroy. This is in connection with the dumping from fishing vessels going to and from the fishing grounds. This matter has been brought before the Fishery Board some time ago. I refer to it again and ask that the Department have the matter attended to.

Hon. the Minister of Justice tabled the Memorial of American Fishery Claims, and the British Answer.

MR. HALFYARD—While these are being tabled I am reminded that last year we got no report from the Postal and Telegraph Department. I beg to draw the atetntion of the Prime Minister to this matter. I do not know whether the reports were printed. There were no reports tabled. I am referring to the reports of July, 1923.

HON. THE COLONIAL SECRETARY—I will look them up.

Mr. Ashbourne gave notice of question.

Mr. Warren gave notice of question.

Mr. Scammell gave notice of question.

Mr. Hickman gave notice of question.

MR. HICKMAN—While I am on my feet I would like to ask the Minister of Finance and Customs when he expects to table the Public Accounts. It is necessary this year to have the public accounts before the estimates are brought in.

MINISTER OF FINANCE & CUSTOMS—Mr. Speaker, the Public Accounts are not quite ready. As soon as they are they will be tabled.

MR. DUFF—I beg to ask permission to refer to the question I asked yesterday. It was answered by the Colonial Secretary. It refers to the dismissal of Mr. Guy. I must say for the information of the House that Mr. Guy was a very competent man. He took no part in politics. He had three sons to the War. One was killed, another was decorated, another one fortunately returned. I would like to call the attention of the House to this I brought the matter before several members of the Government but received no satisfaction.

I notice the Hon. Prime Minister said in reference to a question asked him by a member of the Opposition as regards the privilege of having a say in the spending of local monies, "It all depends upon the representative." To that I will quote the words of Bobby Burns: "A man's a man for a that."

The Minister of Public Works last session stated that I had not advanced any concrete suggestions, when criticizing local affairs. So that the Government may not again repeat this, I will state that I am willing to make a suggestion that I believe would be acceptable to the Government, and at the same time do justice to all concerned without any great cost, and I ask the Government to reconsider this matter.

ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS.

(1) MR. WARREN—To ask Hon. the Prime Minister if advice was taken by the Government from any lawyer or lawyers upon the question of a settlement of the Labrador Boundary Question at any time between the receip' of the invitation to discuss the matter up to the present time. If so, what lawyer or lawyers were consulted; (2) if any advice was given was it in writing and, if so, either by cablegram or letter to lay upon the Table of the House a copy of such advice.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—In reply to that question, no lawyer has been consulted on the Labrador Boundary Question. The matter stands just as Mr. Warren left it.

(3) MR. HICKMAN—To ask Hon. the Prime Minister to lay upon the Table of the House a report from Mr. Ross on the Post Office.

HON THE PRIME MINISTER—In reply I beg to say that no report has been received from Mr. Ross. He has given a certain number of recommendations which the Government are considering, but there is not likely to be any regular report until he is about ready to leave the country.

(6) MR. HICKMAN—To ask Hon. the Prime Minister to lay upon the Table of the House a report of the Commission engaged in the enquiry concerning expenditures for Charitable Institutions and services.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—Mr. Speaker, I beg to say that the answer to this question is in course of preparation. I would like to remind the Opposition that they are not giving us much time to get a lot of correspondence together and get the copies. At least it would be expected that we be given 48 hours to furnish this correspondence. The Commission engaged to enquire into the Charitable Institutions have not done as much work as they would like to have done. They have been so much taken up with other meetings. We have not had time to do very much more than the immediate work on hand. The Report is not nearly ready yet. It will be six months before we are in a position to give reports on these institutions.

(7) MR. HICKMAN—To ask hon. the Minister of Finance and Customs to lay upon the Table of the House a list of new Customs appointments made in Harbour Grace District since 10th day of June 1924.

Tabled.

(8) MR. HICKMAN—To ask hon. the Prime Minister to lay upon the Table of the House all correspondence between the Government and the hon. M. S. Sullivan in reference to the raising of the Loan.

HON. THE MINISTER OF FINANCE—Mr. Speaker, in reply to that question I may say that there has not been any correspondence between the Government and Hon M. S. Sullivan in connection with the raising of the Loan.

(9) MR. HICKMAN—To ask hon. the Prime Minister to lay upon the Table of the House statement of claim by the United States for alleged wrongful act of the Newfoundland Government in respect to American fishing vessels.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—Mr. Speaker, In reply to that question, the statement of the claim of the United States has been tabled by the Attorney General and the British responce to it also. I might say that I would like to table also the reply to the question asked by the Hon. Member for Harbour Grace on yesterday's order paper. That is the correspondence in connection with the building of the new steamer. That replies to the question asked by Mr. Hickman and also that asked by Mr. Randell.

(11) MR. HICKMAN—To ask the Minister of Marine and Fisheries to lay upon the Table of the House of new appointments in his department made in Harbour Grace District since the 10th day of June 1924.

MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES—Mr. Speaker, in reply to the hon. Leader of the Opposition, I may say that there have been no appointments made in my department in the District of Harbour Grace.

(12) MR. SCAMMELL—To ask the Minister of Marine and Fisheries what amount of money, if any, was paid Mr. J. Allan Taylor in respect to his visit to this country some time ago in connection with an investigation into our fishery resources.

MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES—Mr. Speaker, one half of that amount was paid by the Board of Trade and the other part was paid by the department according to an agreement made. I beg to taole the reply.

(13) MR. DUFF—To ask Hon. the Colonial Secretary, the names of the Directors of the Carbonear Water Company appointed; also if it is the intention of the Government to appoint other Directors to constitute a full Board, their names, and when?

(Tabled).

(14) MR. HIBBS—To ask the Minister of Marine and Fisheries to lay on the Table of the House the following information: (a) A statement showing what allocations of Public Monies for Marine Works have been made in the District of Fogo from the first day of June, 1924, to date; (b) to show the names of the parties to whom grants were sent in each case; (c) to state on whose authority the allocations, if any, were mode.

MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES—I may say right here and now that they were made on the authority of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, and that nobody else has any right or authority to do it. I beg to table the answer as follows:

(Answer to Question 14).

ADDRESS IN REPLY.

MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES—Mr. Speaker, it is not my intention to delay the House for any length of time this afternoon by discoursing on the Speech from the Throne. In fact I did not intend to say very much at all, but for the fact that we have had so much rain to-day that it gave me a chance to get a drink from Windsor Lake as it has been replenished since Mr. Halfyard drank it dry yesterday and carry on a little longer.

There were a few items in the Speech to which I intended to refer, but as they have to come up later, I think that I may as well let them go for the time being. One thing that drew my attention as I sat in my place listening to the various speakers in the criticism on the Speech from the Throne, was that they were very hard on the Government in reference to the "Clean Up and a Square Deal to All." And there have been some questions asked from my department in connection with things that have to do with the past. There have been some questions from my department about the sums of money that have been paid from my department to Bonavista Bay and other settlements around the country, and there are some no doubt that claim that this has been done as a political sop. But, I can show you, Mr. Speaker, that in every instance this is not the case. But you expect a Government to take control of a condtion of affairs and to go right away and complete the clean up. But I am afraid that this is not going to be done. All that I have done practically, since I went into the department was to pay bills of late administrations some of them dating as far back as 1921. During the last week I had made up my mind that all the bills were in because I wanted to have some of the monies voted for the current expenses of the department left for that purpose and we are getting very short. But just before coming down here I got another bill to the extent of five thousand three hundred dollars, from the Imperial Oil Company. This was an expense incurred in buying oil from a gentleman named Cheeseman from the West Coast in 1923. The bill is made out $2250.00 for one amount and another amount for 1923-24 is $3200.00, and that makes up a total of more than five thousand dollars. We have got to clean this up and as soon as I have cleaned this up and they have got their cheques there will be something else to fix up. How can we clean up under conditions like that. How can you hope that we could be able to clean up a condition of affairs like that in six months. It may possibly be that we will have it all cleaned up at the end of the four years, but I am afraid that it is going to take longer than that. There was another instance about which I intended to speak, but I think that I will leave it over as I will have another chance to throw back some of the dirty insinuations that have been made against the Government.

MR. SPEAKER informed the House that he had received a message from the Legislative Council acquainting the House of Assembly that they had passed the Bill sent up entitled "An Act respecting the Sealfishery during the Present Year," without amendment.

MR. WARREN—Mr. Speaker, on the opening day I offered a few remarks on the Speech from the Throne but I had not time to go into the matter very fully so I must crave the indulgence of the House this afternoon while I make some more extended references to the various points raised in the speech. I propose, Sir, to be critical but I hope that what I say will be accepted in the same spirit in which it is meant. I have had during the past five years some experience in trying to carry on the affairs of the country and I shall, then in the course of what I have to say, make my criticism as far as I possible can, constructive and not destructive. First of all, I would like to thank the member for Trinity Bay, Mr. Halfyard, for taking up the cudgels on behalf of Fortune Bay in his speech of yesterday. He was so much in earnest about it that I thought that he must have had some aspirations to that district. But I want to tell him that he consumed about fourteen glasses of water and thereby proved himself more than a bottle-a-day man and therefore will not commend himself to the people of that district. First of all, Sir I want to say that there are some things which are not mentioned at all in the speech. We have all heard the saying that "It is more remarkable for what it does not contain that for what it does contain." Of course the speech refers to the proposed legislation. There will be other things to come before the House during the session. Ministers or members may want to bring in some matters which are not mentioned in the speech from the Throne. Therefore members in speaking to the address in reply are entitled to speak on matters which will come before the House during the session. Perhaps, while I am speaking about this I may make reference to the Coastal Service on Fortune Bay and I want to say this that I think that the South Coast and Fortune Bay has got the best Coastal Service that it has had for many years.

It took time. I had to do some fighting for it, but I must say now that I am expressing the sentiments of everybody in that constituency when I say that the services given by the Glencoe were as near to perfect as they could possibly be; and I was only sorry one day when I read in the papers that the Glencoe was going to be taken off the route and sent to the sealfishery. Fortunately, however, the Government countermanded that order. Now, I would like to convey to the Government the amount of work that is done there by that steamer. On the trip before last, from Port aux Basques to Argentia, the Glencoe passed through four hundred passengers; and when she left Belleoram to come to Argentia she had one hundred and thirty-five passengers on board—so much, indeed, that there was not enough accommodation for them, and one passenger and his wfie, whose names I need not mention, could not find any accommodation and had to go into one of the engineer's rooms.

In addition to that, at this time of the year the industries are beginning to open on the West Coast, and it would have been fatal to take the Glencoe off and put a smaller vessel on. There are about two or three hundred people up there who go to Lunenburg to fish at this time of the year and who come back in the winter. Some may say that these are people leaving the country. They are nothing of the sort. They are doing exactly the same thing as the Northern men who go down to Labrador. These men go to Lunenburg and fish and bring back their money in the fall. Exactly the same as the Northern man who fishes on Labrador and brings his money back. There will be at least two or three hundred men going to Lunenburg, besides those who will be coming back from the Humber, and the Home could never have been able to look after them.

Last Session we heard a great deal about the Prohibition Act, and though we have had a good many speeches in the House on the matter now before the chair, no reference has been made to the Prohibition Act, the working of the Act, or the Controller's Department. I therefore am, perhaps, making a new point when I refer to it. The Act was intended to provide that a man would be able to get a bottle a day. But I think, sir, that some amendment will have to be made either to the Act itself or the Commissioners will have to amend their Rules and Regulations to carry out that object.

I do not know whether a bottle a day was too much or too little for the ordinary man. I know my own requirements, and I do not propose to state them to the House. But I do know this, that at present a man who lives in the outports has either to accept a bottle per trip of the steamer or to pay a very enhanced price for what he orders.

I have taken the matter up with the Commissioners because of representations made to me. The people who require a bottle a day say that they are not able to get it. They may not want it, but they are not able to get even a half bottle a day. The position is this, and I think it has already been referred to in the newspapers: The man in St. John's can go to the Controller's Department and his bottle. It may not be a bottle a day. But on the South Coast, where the Glencoe leaves Argentia once in three weeks, and the Portia once a fortnight, it means that a person who wants to abide by the law and carry out the Prohibition Act, and obtain whatever he is allowed to obtain, can only get one bottle per trip of the Portia or the Glencoe. That means a bottle every fortnight or a bottle every three weeks, or else he has to pay very considerably more for anything he gets in addition to that. I understand that the Commissioners have taken this view of the Act, that a man who has not ordered anything from the Controller's Department for a fortnight, and who write to the Department and says "I have not ordered anything from your Department for ten days. I, therefore, would like you to sell me five bottles of"—his particular fancy—"and enclose the money for it." He is told that all he can get is one bottle, but that if he writes a letter on the 1st of March, ordering a bottle, and another on the 2nd of March, ordering a bottle, and others on the 3rd, 4th and 5th March, ordering a bottle each day, unless the 5th happens to be Sunday—then the Controller's Department will send him one bottle per day at the usual price plus expressage for every single parcel they send.

I desire to draw this to the attention of the Government so that some arrangements may be made whereby, as far as possible, the man in the outports may be put on a par with the man in St. John's, who are more fortunate or more unfortunate.

Now, sir, there is one more matter which has been brought up here to which I want to refer. That matter is this, that last session I was asked by the Government to undertake an enquiry into the system of wages paid loggers in this country, and to the best of my ability I did it. I filed my report and the members can read it for themselves.

It will be remembered that a Bill was introduced into this House last session to provide for a minimum wage of forty-five dollars per month and found be paid to those engaged in the logging industry. I proceeded in November to the various headquarters of the loggers, and I understand I was not in the House at the time—but I understand that the member for Twillingate, Mr. Brown, who introduced that Bill, in criticizing the Logging Report, said that he could have written a better report sitting in his arm chair. I am not sure if that was what the member said, but he can correct me if I am wrong.

MR. BROWN—That is not what I said. I said that I heard somebody else say that he could have written a better report sitting in his arm chair.

MR. WARREN—The hon. member said that he heard somebody else say that he could have written a better report sitting in his arm chair. I do not know whether in making that statement to the House the honourable member takes the responsibility for it or not, but whether he does or not I am just going to tell him that he may take what I am saying back to the gentleman who told him that he could write a better report sitting in his arm chair. I am at a loss to understand what he means. If he means that the literary style, diction or the language of the report is not all that it might be, then I cannot say whether he is right or wrong, because I do not know the literary abilities of the gentleman who gave the honourable member his information. But if he means that the facts are wrong in that report, I think that the gentleman who gave him his information will find that he is mistaken, as every fact in that report is verified on oath. As a matter of fact the report is merely a resume of what was taken on oath. Of course anybody, as a matter of fact, could have written that report sitting in an arm chair. I did it in mine, after I had been out to the West Coast and interviewed the various people who gave evidence, which evidence is set forth in that report. It is only natural that any man could write it sitting in an arm chair.

I found, sir, that as far as the logging industry is concerned that the men wanted to get as much as they could, and that, far from asking for a minimum wage of forty-five dollars a month and found, they wanted sixty-five dollars a month and found; and the Companies—I will say this for them—are prepared to give them that, and are giving it to some, provided they get returns for it. Of course every man, whether he is a logger, or a fisherman, or whatever else he is, wants to get for his labiur as much as he possibly can get, and nobody will refuse to give him that. But the logging industry, as every man or practically every man that came before me swore, is a skilled or semi-skilled work. The trouble is this, that those who make a business of going into the logging woods each winter work in their own gangs. It will be found in that respect that nearly every man whose evidence is with the report has sworn that a bad man in a gang will spoil the work of the rest of the gang. Therefore the men make up their gangs before they leave their homes, or when they get to the place where they have to work, they pick out the four best men they can get and they work in the same gang.

The trouble I found was this. That there were a lot of men who had been fishing during the summer and did badly, and then came back and looked around for some enterprise in which they could engage to tide them over during the winter. They went into the logging woods, and found that they were not earning the same large amounts that other people were. At the end of two or three months they expected to come out with a hundred dollars or more, but instead of that they found that they had little or nothing.

After all, the logging industry is like all others. The men must know something about it, and it can be readily seen that those who have to get the wood, the paper companies cannot afford, nor indeed can the country afford, because the country is behind one of these companies to the extent of ten million dollars, to treat the industry in that manner; but the time will come when there will be no need for Mr. Brown's Bill, when the men will realize that logging is a skilled industry. They will devote their whole attention to it, instead of . . .

At five of the clock the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod appeared at the Bar of the House with a message from His Excellency the Governor commanding the attendance of the House in the Council Chamber.

Accordingly, Mr. Speaker and the House attended His Excellency in the Council Chamber.

Mr. Speaker, at the Bar of the Council Chamber, addressed His Excellency as follows:

May it Please Your Excellency:

In the name of the House of Assembly I present the following Bills for Your Excellency's assent:

"An Act to Amend the Act 15

George V., Chapter XX, entitled 'An Act for the Raising of a Sum of Money on the Credit of the Colony for Certain Public Purposes,' and

"An Act Respecting the Seal Fishery During the Present Year."

To these Bills His Excellency assented.

The members of the House of Assembly then returned to their own chamber.

MR. WARREN—When interrupted by His Excellency's command, I was concluding my remarks with regard to the wages paid the loggers. I was saying that the time will arrive, and perhaps in the not distant future, when the loggers realizing that theirs is skilled labor, will be able to force their own rates of pay and be able to look out for themselves instead of having an Act of this sort put through the House. Now turning to another point, there was something in the remarks of the hon. member for Carbonear a short time ago when referring to dismissals such as that by which Mr. Guy—I do not know the man—lost his position though he had three sons who gave service to the country during the war, which leads me to say that I think the time has arrived when the Civil Service should be placed under a Commission and we should follow the system in vogue in other countries that are further ahead than we are. At present investigations are being conducted by experts into the different Departments of the Civil Service and we are told that every branch has something wrong, that they are not functioning properly, and as we have seen lately civil servants are being haled before the Courts. To a certain extent this is the fault of the Government—not the present one—but those which have gone before. Since the days of Responsible Government we have been appointing to civil service positions those who we think have done the most for us on the political platform or in the political campaign irrespective of his ability to perform the work for which he was appointed. It is all very well for those of us who are in the Government at the time to do it for the one who gets the position, but speaking for the man in the street who has to pay the salaries it is not good enough. He is entitled to the value of what he pays and unless we run our civil service as other countries do, or like the ordinary business man conducts his business we can expect nothing but the disclosures such as we have witnessed the last few years. Civil service positions should be given to the men best qualified to fill them irrespective of his political views, and wherever possible, to the ex-service men. We have been told that conditions in the Post Office Department are bad, and we have heard an ex-Postmaster General state one of the reasons for the disintegration and poor condition of the department is because men are put in the positions who have not gone through the system, have no knowledge of the work and are practically useless as far as properly filling the jobs is concerned. In spite of the appeals to previous governments to appoint ex-service men to civil service positions, we find Mr. Hodder to-day appointed to the position of Deputy Minister of Posts. I have nothing against Mr. Hodder, and as far as I know he is a good citizen, but I have yet to learn the reasons why he was appointed to the position of practically permanent head of the department. He has no service in the department to recommend him, but while ex-service men, many with the same abilities and out of work, are passed over, Mr. Hodder is appointed. I would like to hear the reasons why these men were passed over and the position given to a man with no experience in the department, which admittedly is not functioning and which is in such a condition that strong hands are needed to pull it together. I have now come to some things mentioned in the Speech from the Throne, and to which I would like to refer. The first paragraph relates to codfish and that subject I will deal with last.

The next point in the Speech from the Throne to which I wish to refer is, that dealing with the conditions at Bell Island. The relations of the Government with the corporation generally known as Besco have been strained for some years. It will be remembered that the contract made by the Government, I think in 1905, and to last fifteen years, expired in 1920. By this contract the Company was to pay a tax on all iron ore mined at Bell Island. In 1920 another agreement was made, and since then various troubles have arisen. I consider that the miners are being exploited by the corporation, and the situation will have to be taken hold of with a strong hand if we are to arrive at a basis, where work at the Island will be carried on satisfactorily, and with profit to the country, the miner and the company alike. Perhaps a review of the situation since 1920 will help honourable members to obtain a view of matters in connection with the deal. In 1920 the contract expired, and it was the duty of the Government of the day to make another agreement with them. This agreement was a little different from the other, and obligations were put on them to carry out—in some cases the tax was increased—and in others a tax was abrogated. Further we must remember that that agreement was a mutual one, not between the Government and Besco, but rather between Besco and this House. As a matter of fact it was accepted first outside this House, then submitted here, and a joint committee appointed to take it up with Besco. That committee consisted of members of both sides of the House, and further, that committee took the agreement up with representatives of the corporation, and agreed to amend it so that peace might reign, and all would be satisfied. The Hon. Minister of Justice, I think will bear me out that the Committee offered various alternatives, but the Company would not agree—we offered a sliding scale and a tax, but the contract was fastened on the Government, and no sooner was it ratified than the Company began trying to avoid it. The very year after, having found, to use a colloqualism, that they had bitten off more than they could chew, that they had entered into a contract with the Government which they could not fulfil, they started to try and evade it.

MR. BROWNE—Why did they enter into the contract?

MR. WARREN—I do not know what was in their minds at the time, but I remember we met outside in the Speaker's room, and they would not agree to our proposal.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—President Wolvin, of Besco, says that they never intended to carry out the contract as far as certain sections were concerned ,that clauses such as that dealing with the promise of an erection of a smelter, were never intended to be lived up to, and when asked as to why an alteration in the contract, as suggested by the Committee, could not be made, he stated the Company would not consider any alteration at all, because having had a signed contract with the Government they were afraid, in view of the talk of the famous dollar a ton, export duty, it might possibly lead them into a worse state of affairs. I had intended, Mr. Speaker, when the opportunity offered, to bring this matter to the atetntion of the House.

MR. WARREN—I do say this that so far as I was concerned in that Government and so far as the present Minister of Justice was concerned there was no question of $1 per ton when they came in to make that contract.

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE—In fact the proposal of the Select Committee was to make a lighter tax.

MR. WARREN—But, having made the contract, they have tried to evade it, hence it is that a strong hand must be taken with them. When I was in the Government year after year, it was in December month when everything else was dead and there was not a stroke of work doing for laborers, that was the time that Besco always stepped in. I think that the Prime Minister will find in his fyles a copy of a letter from me to Mr. Wolvin dealing strongly with this annual lockout on the part of his Company and I hope that the Prime Minister will see that it must stop and that there are no more of these annual lockouts from the Besco people. And this is not the only country that has experienced trouble with Besco. They are up to their necks in it in Nova Scotia where Besco is having a fight with the coal miners. When it came to the end of 1924 in Nova Scotia Besco said to the miners "your wages must be reduced by ten per cent." The miners, through their Union, said "No, our wages must be increased by ten per cent." No arrangement or agreement could be arrived at and eventually the Dominion Government stepped in and a conciliation Board was appointed. The miners refused to appoint representatives on it. Although such a board was illegal by a judgment of the Privy Council, representatives for the miners were put on that board by the Government with the result that, after hearing various evidence at what was known as the Winfield Commission, it was decided that the whole matter should be thoroughly explored and that there should be an investigation and both sides to the dispute were willing. Both the Company and the miners said "Yes, we are satisfied to have the investigation." But what happened. They immediately fell out as to the scope of the investigation. The miners wanted a full investigation regarding the Company, internally and externally, as to whether their side of the case was right or wrong and as to whether their wages should be increased or not. The Company wanted to limit the scope of the investigation and have it determined as to whether "we can this year afford to pay an increase of ten per cent." There the matter stopped and there it rested, except that the Prime Minister of Nova Scotia has now offered a Royal Commission to enquire into the whole matter. It is not my desire to offer destructive criticism, but constructive criticism, and, I have made up my mind that the one course for our Government to pursue is to have a Commission of Enquiry and investigate the whole matter thoroughly and see if the contractors cannot pay those workmen on Bell Island or see if the men are overworked or are producing too much for what they are being paid. We want the industry here to go on and we want the men to get work, but I consider that there is only one course for the Government to take and that is a complete investigation and not take the ipse dixit of Mr. Wolvin, who, frequently says that Besco cannot do this, that or the other thing. Let the Company come before the Government and substantiate on oath what they are doing and then the Government, the miners and the people of the country will know for certain what the position is, and until that is known we will be constantly in a state of turmoil over these annual lockouts and with a spirit of antagonism prevailing between the miners and the Company. And I want to say this, that there are some parts of that contract that Besco would like to have carried out and there are other parts of it that they do not want to have carried out. There is in that contract a proposal to give the Company the use of the waters of the river known as Rocky River in the district of Placentia and St. Mary's for power purposes. When I was in the Government I was approached by various people both on behalf of themselves and on behalf of Besco asking that that power on Rocky River should be given to Besco, but while I was Leader of the Government I always refused and I would like to point out to the Government of the day that efforts are likely to be made still on behalf of that corporation to obtain the use of the waters of Rocky River and pitch the rest of the contract overboard. I hope that the Government will take into their consideration the waters of Rocky River when they make a new contract, if they ever do with that corporation. So much for Besco.

The next paragraph in the Speech from the Throne is one that I have a great deal of interest in. I refer to the Labrador Boundary Question. The Labrador Boundary Question has been a more or less unfortunate thing for any lawyers who happened to be mixed up in it. It has been treated as a joke somewhat ever since it started in 1909 and has been looked upon as a lucrative source of revenue to any lawyer who has been engaged on that question. Any lawyer, whether he has been an Attorney General or not, has had to stand a certain amount of witticisms and criticisms because of his connection with that Labrador Boundary Question. I need only refer to the speech made by the hon. member for Fogo a few days ago in which he thought, according to the papers, that the Labrador ought to be sold because of the large amount of lawyers' fees that had been paid. Last session I had to stick out for my constituents in Fortune Bay when they were deprived of their steamer. As soon as I did, I was told by the Hon. Minister of Finance that the Government was cutting out the steamer in Fortune Bay for reasons of economy, and that one of the reasons for the economy was the large expenditure over the Labrador Boundary Question. I did not argue over it with him at the time. It was much more important to me getting the steamer in Fortune Bay than it was to know whether or not I robbed the Government over the Labrador Boundary. So that the House will appreciate and see for themselves I must quote the words from the Hansard that the Hon. Minister of Finance used in dealing with the matter in which he rounded on me the squanderings of the past few years. Here is what he said: (Quotes from Hansard).

Well I did not anticipate then that the Labrador Boundary was going to play such a prominent part in the doings of members of the Executive Council, as I have learned since, but I hope that the Minister who talked about those payments being squandered and described them as shocking and unfortunate has now come to see that, perhaps, there is something more in the Labrador Boundary than the mere payments of fees to lawyers. I need not go into the history of the matter nor do I propose to go into the details, but I would like to point out to those who think that the money has been squandered and the expenditure has been unfortunate that it has suddenly dawned upon some good people in the community, at all events, that there is something of value on the Labrador and something worth fighting for. The Labrador Boundary Question was not started by the late Government. It was started long before that period.

It was commenced in the time that Sir Robert Bond was Prime Minister. The dispute arose really between the Province of Quebec and a private individual. I am going into this history so that people can understand a little about what is known as the Labrador Boundary Question. It was found that in pursuit of that action a judgment between the Province of Quebec and a man named Dickie would not settle the Boundary of the Labrador, and Dickie who had got a lease from the Newfoundland Government, appealed to the Newfoundland Government to stand behind him. The Government of Newfoundland said "Yes, as we have given you a lease, we will stand behind you."

I want to assure the House that in my opinion and in the opinion of the then Prime Minister and of the Solicitors and Counsel on the other side, that we could do no harm by trying out the Quebec and Dominion Governments with a view to a settlement rather than pursuing the bitter fight in the Privy Council. As I said, I came out from England by way of Canada. It was done after consultation, and I am safe in telling now the reason that the delegation that went to Quebec and Montreal, did little more than I did at that time. I am going to tell you exactly what I did, and some of the propositions I made in order to rush the question to a conclusion. Between 1909 and 1915, there was nothing done in the matter at all events, and I do not say this with any amount of pride. It is only my duty to do it, but when I happened to be Attorney General our case was settled complete and ready for exchange with the Province of Quebec. I spent three and a half years on it. I was always twitted about taking trips across to England, but if nobody else brought it to a head, I did, and now the country reaps the benefit of what I did, in spite of the shocking expense referred to by the Minister of Finance last year. In 1922 we had our case very far advanced. I was in England at the time, and I went over the matter with the lawyers on the other side, particularly with Sir Thos. Berridge, who was our Solicitor. He died a few months ago. I am going to mention one reason, I am not going to give the other. It would not be right or fair, although I am no longer associated with any counsel on the Labrador Boundary Question. But Sir Richard Squires, who was in London at the time, in consultation with him it was decided that it would be just as well to see if steps could not be arrived at instead of going to the Privy Council with it. I am not going to submit it to the House. I am prepared to tell the Prime Minister and the Minister of Justice why we could not come to a decision.

Now, if we could settle the Labrador Boundary Question by the Dominion Government taking over the National Debt, we must do it. I accordingly made that proposition to the Prime Minister of Quebec. I may say he did not know whether to believe I was in my right senses or not. However, I did not leave it at that. I took up the question of fishing rights and of vested interests down there, and we were practically agreed on every point. The Prime Minister—Sir Richard Squires, followed me, and we had a further interview with the authorities as to the settlement of the question. The next year was 1923, and I attended the Imperial Conference. At the Conference there were the Prime Minister of Canada and the Minister of Justice of the Dominion Government. I again took up the matter with them with regard to a settlement. I did not go into details but I had an assurance from him that a reasonable settlement was what he preferred. Mr.

Lancelot was one of the delegation which met the Newfoundland delegation in Quebec. He was in London, too, and looked into the matter. I want to say that I had an interview with him, and in spite of any assertion made to the contrary, the lowest figure we were prepared to entertain for any transference of our rights on Labrador to Quebec or Canada, was twenty-five million dollars. I did not offer or consider any figure less than that—whatever I was prepared to do later on. I was prepared to consider 25 millions and nothing else until they gave me an indication of what they were prepared to give. Nothing was done until the present Prime Minister received an invitation to discuss the matter with the authorities. I am going to say this, and I have gone into the matter, I don't think there is a lawyer in Newfoundland who has a better knowledge of the details of the Boundary Question than I have. I asked the Prime Minister if he had taken any legal advice before he had proceeded to Quebec or Montreal, and I was rather surprised to find that he had not. I don't think if I had a case in court with another man that I would try to settle it without taking some advice from the lawyers I had retained. Of course I don't mean that he should have consulted me, but he was most unwise to proceed further without legal advice.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—We had a lawyer with us.

MR. WARREN—But I don't think he had a knowledge of the details that the lawyers prominent in the case for the last four years had. There was no reason why he should not acquire it. There are enough documents on this subject to acquire the knowledge that has been acquired by those delving into the matter for the past four years. But, Sir, I will say this, looking at the whole matter, and without giving any legal reason why I think so—this matter can be settled without going into the Privy Council. Some agreement has to be arrived at. Although the case has already been printed, we can't hand it over to Quebec nor get their case. So eventually, whether there is a settlement or not, we must come to some agreement before going to the Privy Council at all. Ask them are they going to let us have their case, if they want to string the matter out or if they want the matter tied up for the next three years. There is no machinery to compel action within the next five years, and evt:ything will be tied up. There is another reason I might tell, but I am not going to give it in the House because I might be prejudicing our case. I might give the reason privately to the Prime Minister or the Minister of Justice.

The next point to which I wish to refer is the matter of the construction of the new steamer. Some reference has been made to the fact that the Governemnt has raised a loan to pay for the steamer and for the rails purchased in England, and that the Trade Facilities Committee over there has undertaken to pay a portion of the interest on the part of the loan which is expended on the purchase of the rails. I had something to do with that, Sir, and I want to make myself perfectly clear with regard to it. Last year when I attended the Imperial Conference and the Economic Conference, there was a select committee of the Economic Conference consisting of the Prime Ministers only, and it was held with a view to increasing employment in England. At the Economic Conference were Sir Marmaduke Winter, a member of the Executive Board of Newfoundland and Sir Patrick McGrath. They did not attend the meeting that drew up regulations regarding the Trade Facilities Committee providing for payment of a certain portion of interest on the loans raised in England. No fault can be found with the other gentlemen for not knowing very much about what took place, but I know after these discussions with the Chancellor of the Exchequer and the other Prime Minister, no arrangements had been come to, by which fair work that was necessary, would be subsidized, whether it was public or private, so long as it provided employment for the unemployed in England, and whatever it was, the Government was prepared to pay up to 75 p.c. on loans raised in England for the period of five years, if the money was utilized on making materials that would give employment in England.

Because it was not a public necessity is perhaps more fully understood, because under the rules, and if you will look up the minutes of the conference, you will find that it does not matter whether it is a public concern or a private individual or anybody else so long as they would speed up any work that they had and would probably leave for a year or so otherwise, and they would pay seventy-five per cent. of the interest on the money spent so that it was spent in the Old Country and thereby lessening the condition of unemployment which existed there. As I said, any private individual could take advantage of that offer but it had to be under the auspices of the Dominion or Colony in which the work was done. Now, sir, with regard to the order for rails and with regard to the order for the machinery, which they must of necessity have a considerable amount; you must have roadmaking machinery for the proper building of the roads; I hope that you will bring the matter up with the Trade Facilities Committee. As one of the Committee, any help of any form that I can give, or any assistance which I may be able to offer from my knowledge of the rules and regulations in connection with the working of the Committee, I shall be glad to give it. Now, there is another matter to which I have to refer, unemployment. I propose to leave this with the fishery until the end. Now, sir, the next matter to which I have to refer in the Speech from the Throne is this: "Very disturbing discoveries have been made by a commission engaged in an enquiry concerning expenditures for charitable institutions and services. Laxness of administration, imposition by the non-deserving have been proved, and there is evidence that the homely virtues of self-reliance and self-respect have been diminishing. Public expenditure for the relief of the sick and afflicted is meant for the helpless poor, and those who selfishly trade upon this charity are very reprehensible." That is the only reference to any commission of enquiry in the speech. I do not think that in view of what has recently taken place that the man in th street thinks that enquiry sufficient. In the first place, compared to the other enquiries which have taken place in this Colony, you have a private investigation. It is not a commission of enquiry. It is a private investigation undertaken by members of the Government, and however much they would like to do, you cannot separate them in the minds of the man on the street from some idea of partisan politics, and any member of the Government or of the Opposition or any one sitting in this House would have the same thing thought of him. This investigation cannot bring in a conviction of any guilty persons. This committee is able to restrain any information which the man on the street is entitled to know and allow the press to print just what it likes to divulge. We have been told that there have been discriminations practised. We have been told that there were doctors who have made thousands of dollars out of it and that there were others who have made none. Some districts have taken advantage of the Commission of Public Charities and that others have not done so. There is only one district, and that happens to be the district which I represent, which has not taken advantage of this condition of affairs which existed. And I think that I saw in one of the papers the other day that the hospital was crowded with people taking advantage of the Commission of Charities. And as I stated, the people of Fortune Bay are the only people who did not do so. That must be very gratifying to them to be aware of this. I am sure that it gives them much pleasure to know that they are the only district who did not avail of the Commission of Charities or whatever official was looking after thees affairs. They may be very pleased, but this is not sufficient. They want to know who are the others. If the money has been voted by this House for Public Charities and is to be publicly spent, and is not publicly spent, it is right that the person or persons guilty should be made known and an enquiry made, not a partisan enquiry by the members of the Government, who give out what information they like and cannot make any convictions on what they find. You are not going to stop it by this means. Let the names of those guilty persons be given the publicity which they deserve. It does not matter who it is. Let us see the names of those doctors who got the thousands. If they did wrong in getting it their names should be published. If the members of this House obtained for their districts what they should not have gotten, I say, sir, that their actions should be made public. You are not going to stop a repetition of these wrongs with a private enquiry that can give out that information only which it likes to give. I am reminded of one other thing. It was on the opening day of the House. I had just congratulated the mover and seconder of the Address in Reply. The Prime Minister spoke after me and therefore I did not have an opportunity on congratulating him publicly on his speech, although I did do it afterwards privately. I had heard the Prime Minister eulogised as not being a professional politician. It was said to his credit that he was not a professional politician, and I agreed with it, but on the opening day there was no politician that ever sat in this House that could handle the situation that was presented that day as well as he did. Now I made reference upon the opening day to the policy referred to by Mr. Cahill as "Clean up, keep clean and a square deal to all." I do not want to go into the details of Mr. Cahill's and Mr. Monroe's speeches now, but what I want to say is, that Mr. Monroe got up and gave this House and everybody who sat in it the idea that he was presenting the policy of cleaning up and paying the bills that were left over. "We are paying for two balloons and the shell of the Lobelia and that is the cleaning up that I am doing"; and I say that the Prime Minister made a perfectly satisfactory explanation that he was paying the bills for the balloons and the Lobelia and that would be the clean up policy, and everybody went away perfectly satisfied. Now I say, sir, God help the rest of us the day that the Prime Minister starts in to be a professional politician. He knows that he satisfied the crowd that day; but he knows that if he had gone to the country with that sort of a clean up policy and tell the people that he was going to pay the bills for a couple of balloons and perhaps clean up the question of the Lobelia, if, I say, that he had gone to the country with that sort of a policy, I think that there would not have been so many of the members on the other side of the House who are there now.

My friend the Minister of Marine and Fisheries did the same thing this afternoon. He said that he was cleaning up a bill due the Imperial Oil since 1921. If that is what the Prime Minister means by saying that he is cleaning up, I am prepared to accept his assertion.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—The trouble is that we have struck so much new stuff that we have been delayed. You know what was in those pigeon holes.

MR. WARREN—I am glad to hear from the Hon. Minister of Justice that the cleaning up has only been delayed.

HON. MINISTER OF FINANCE—Do you mean to tell us that you did not know that there was anything due on the Lobelia and the Wren and the Daisy?

MR. WARREN—Not until I was informed that that was the case by the Prime Minister a few months ago. I did know something about the money that was tried to be collected on the two balloons, and I refused to pay that money. There was no demand made upon us by the Government except for a small amount, but there was a demand made by a Major —I cannot think of his name just now. . . .

HON. MR. SULLIVAN—Major Kennedy?

MR. WARREN—Yes, Major Kennedy, which demand we refused to entertain. As far as we were concerned these presents—these Greek presents, I may call them—were made to the Government through the High Commissioner's office in London, and as far as I am concerned, I understand that they really were presents. I did not understand that we were buying them, nor so far as I know was any demand made for payment upon the Government, except as I have outlined. As a matter of fact, I was away when the Lobelia arrived.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—I do not think anyone blames you for these presents.

MR. WARREN—If we had understood at all that we were buying these things, they would never have been accepted. There is only one oher matter that I wish to speak of before I resume my seat, the Government's proposal to incorporate towns and villages and settlements for the management of their concerns. That is a matter that will require a good deal of thought and consideration; but I think it is a move in the right direction. I think that the time is arriving when those settlements or towns, which are capable of being incorporated, should have the control of their own affairs, and in this connection I would ask the Government to consider the advisability of the appointment of a Public Commission to deal with all public utilities.

Here in St. John's we have a town which is run by a municipality. The town has its charter, but it is not fully incorporated. The town cannot borrow money itself. It has to rely upon the Government for its finances. It has to come to the Government before it can borrow money for any improvements or public utilities whatever.

We have recently had an experience which shows us the need of a Public Utilities Commission to look after the interests of the ordinary man on the street. We need some Commission of that sort. I am speaking now of the time when we were promised a new telephone service in St. John's, and a bill was being put through for the new Company. We were told that the old system was inadequate, antiquated and antedeluvian, but the new system was to remedy all the old defects, but now after some years of it I defy anyone who uses the telephone under the new system to-day to say that the system is an up to date one, or at all commensurate with the promises that were made at the time that it was being started, and when the Act was going through the House, and I think that that is one Public Utility that might have borne the Inspection of a Public Utilities Commission.

Since last year we have a new owner of the Electric Lighting and the Street Cars. The other day I was coming from the West End in a street car, and I saw a man sitting in the car with his umbrella up. That is just typical of the condition that these things are in. Then there has been a lot of trouble about the electric light. The price went up, and then it came down again; the light is not good enough, there is not enough power, on all sides there are complaints to be heard about this Company.

I would suggest that the Government in connection with the Bill that they now propose to bring before the House for the Incorporation of townships, they will take into consideration the advisability of providing for the appointment of a Public Utilities Commission, who will have power to speak for the man in the street, who cannot speak for himself in regard to matters of that sort.

Mr. Speaker, finally I want to refer to two more matters which I have left over—the question of unemployment and the question of our fisheries. These two things are absolutely intertwined. I asked yesterday for a list of the number of families that are being relieved at the Government's expense in St. John's. I did not ask that question for the purpose of advertisement. I asked the question so that I could have accurate figures to compare with the figures of previous years. I see that the Daily News this morning in giving the figures was inaccurate. The number of families being relieved by the Government per week is one thousand and two hundred and seventy-four, and they are paying to individuals five dollars per week, to families for the first relief order ten dollars, and following orders ten, eight and six dollars according to the size of the families; and an investigation is held into each case before the relief is given.

What I want to get at is this—it is not so much an investigation into the actual circumstances of each family that is needed; but what we have to do, what the Government have to do, and what the Opposition has to do, and what the man on the street and everybody else has to do is to find out the reason why twelve hundred families are receiving relief in the city to-day, and when they have found that reason they have to remove it.

It is not so much the number that is alarming; that is practically the same number that was being relieved last year and the year before, but what I am worried about and alarmed at is this—how long is that state of affairs going to last? When is it going to stop? What are we going to do to stop it? What can be done to stop it? That is the problem that is facing us.

With about thirteen hundred families being relieved, at the rate of five to ten dollars for individuals, the total comes to about fifty thousand dollars each month, and for three months it would come to about one hundred and fifty thousand dollars. How long is that drag on the community going to continue. The man who is receiving relief, wants work, and he wants to know what is going to be done for him.

Undoubtedly many side industries have been started in this country, and while they have helped a lot in reducing unemployment, they are not able to take up all the unemployed of this country. There can be no doubt that we have to get back to the fishery, which is the mainstay of this country. I am not criticizing the Government now; I am merely trying to give them some suggestions. I am alarmed to know that thirteen hundred families are receiving relief from the Government in St. John's, and everyone must do what he possibly can to stop that.

I think that the institution of industries like the Humber and the Gander and Grand Falls have helped a lot, but eventually we have got to get down to the basic industry of this country—the fishery. It was the fishery that made this colony, to begin with, and we really have to have a good fishery to carry on.

I have talked about the settlement of the Labrador Boundary Question. I say now, yes, sell the inside of the Labrador so long as you have your fisheries left. Suppose you get ten millions for it. With five per cent. on that you will have five hundred thousand dollars a year. Spend that money, or whatever you get for the inside of Labrador, on doing something to improve the fishery. Here we are a fishing country, and we are making, and catching, and shipping our fish exactly as we did a hundred, or a hundred and fifty years ago. Can that be said of any other country? Has any money ever been spent on any scientific investigation of the fishery? In a small way, members of the community have tried to do something to obtain a scientific insight into our fishery, and private efforts are made from time to time to dispose of the fish in some other way than the time honored one of salting it down, and sending it across to the markets—the same old markets that have been buying our fish for years. The hon. member for Burin yesterday asked what good Trade Commissioners were. I do not know that Trade Commisisoners such as we have had them have been very much good; but is there any man in business who does not try to boost his wares. You do not see the Royal Stores or Ayre & Sons, or any other merchant on Water Street sitting down and expecting somebody to come in and buy his goods from him. They send out men to sell their goods, and it does not matter whether you call them Trade Commissioners or Commercial Travellers—they try their best to boost their goods wherever they go.

Take the case of the hon. member for Burin—Mr. Lake. He is going to commence to make profitable a new method of disposing of fish and selling it. But who knew of that. Not a soul—but if we had some trade commissioners or commercial travellers around, even though we could have only one or two to start with, then at all events we would be able to dispose of our fish in new markets, and not in the old time honored way. But as long as we sit down and consider ourselves a sound, tight little Island bounded by the sea, then we can expect nothing but to go on shouldering our burden of taxation—the higher burden of taxation upon the same quantity of fish that we had about a hundred years ago, when the public debt of the Colony was only a fifth or a quarter of what it is now, and when our expenditure was only one-fifth of what it is to-day. We are still practically depending upon the same amount of fish, caught in the same old way, handled in the same way and sold in the same way. There are individuals and bodies who have tried to do something about it, and I suggest to the Government that they co-operate with these people who are trying to do something. Take our Board of Trade. With very little money at their disposal they have done a lot of work. They have realized that if we are going to get out of the rut, and if we are going to improve our fishery, we have got to introduce some scientific knowledge into it. We want to find out if we can handle the fish better, if we can cure the fish better—and we are told that we can't.

The Board of Trade in its annual report has 1½ pages devoted to scientific research in connection with the fisheries. It is not put there to fill up but to give information and with the object of improving the fisheries. But what notice has been taken of it. None as far as I can discover. I have in my hand now a pamphlet dealing with biology and the waters around Newfoundland by Mr. Huntsman a member of the Biological Board of Canada. In that Dominion they have tried many means of improving their fish catch and of disposing of it. But we have no Biological Board and have done practically nothing as to improving the fisheries and making them such as to support the heavy taxation which we have to bear to-day. I have also another pamphlet on the fisheries of Newfoundland by Mr. Taylor. He was brought out here by the Governor and I think the late Government. He is a fellow the Royal Statistical and other such Societies of England and bears a very high reputation. He gave an address here before the Board of Trade and it was put in pamphlet form but I do not believe a single fisherman ever saw it. The one by Mr. Huntsman who was sent here from Canada dealt with practically everything from the taking of the temperature of the water to the catching of the fish but what fishermen takes the temperature or does anything else in a scientific way. During election times he has political propaganda, circulars, manifestoes, etc. poked under his door but none of them ever see one of these pamphlets. I had to ask for one at the Board of Trade and I trust the present energetic Minister of Fisheries will see that these matters which were given to the Board by these men who are among the highest in their profession are distributed among those who catch and sell the fish. It may be said that if we caught more fish we would not be able to sell it. Well then, let us find more ways of disposing of it. A larger catch means more employment in St. John's and a catch of 100,000 qtls. at $10 a qtl. will not give as much labor as 200,000 qtls. at $5 a qtl. If we get more fish we have to find more ways of marketing it. When I was in London I was speaking to Premier Massey of New Zealand and I asked him how it was that his country could sell butter in Newfoundland in competition with the product of Prince Edward Island which is just next door. He replied that it was because of the system of manufacture by which they use nothing but machinery and by selling the product under Government regulations. Their dairy products are sold under control of act of Parliament and that is why they can sell their butter in Newfoundland. Now if this can be be done in one Colony—and mentioning regulations, I do not think anyone wants to return to fish regulations—steps should be taken here in regard to the marketing of our fish which result in the giving of labor and the stopping of the present unemployment conditions.

As I said before I do not wish to delay the business of the House, and referring to the matters in the Speech is one of the formalities, but if I can do anything to help in bettering the conditions of the fisheries and the fishermen I will gladly do so, as I believe my constituents sent me here for that purpose. Whatever I can do I am prepared to do. I would like to add that since I referred to the distribution of the pamphlets dealing with fishery matters I have learned that the Minister of Marine has distributed 3,000 of them, which only bears out what I said before as to his energy in office. I hope when such people as the scientists referred to come here again to help us, their views will again be put in pamphlet form, and I know the Minister of Marine will have them distributed. Today I have confined myself to dealing with codfish, but I would like to add that there is a great market for our herring which has not yet been touched, and that is Russia. When I was Prime Minister I was one day approached by a Water Street firm on this matter as a trade agreement between England and Russia was then on the tapis. I do not know if the contract is in effect yet, but I do know that besides Russia there are great markets for herring in Lehvia and Esthonia. The Newfoundland representative in London could easily get in touch with the British Overseas Department and obtain all the information needed on this matter of herring for Russia. There is no doubt whatever as to the market being there, and I hope the Government will pursue the subject by every means in their power.

On motion the debate on the Address in Reply was adjourned.

The remaining Orders of the Day were deferred.

It was moved and seconded that when the House rises, it adjourn until to-morrow afternoon at three of the clock.

The House then adjourned accordingly.

FRIDAY, Feb. 27th, 1925.

The House met at three of the clock in the afternoon pursuant to adjournment.

PRESENTING PTTITIONS.

HON. MR. SULLIVAN—Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present a petition from the inhabitants of St. Vincent's Parish and St. Mary's Parish, and the inhabitants of Riverhead, St. Mary's. This petition is mainly in connection with a road from St. Vincent's to St. Mary's. This road would be about eighteen miles long, and would be an excellent addition to our tourist roads. For many years we have been spending small amounts of money to try to complete that road from St. Vincent's to St. Mary's, but unfortunately we have never been in a position to get a sufficient amount of money. I certainly think the road should be completed. The main road now runs just along by the sea coast, over barren country, and it is impossible to travel over it in the winter season. I, therefore, have very much pleasure in recommending this petition to the attention of the department to which it relates, and in asking that when the Government is pursuing its new road policy, that this will be one of the first roads completed.

THE MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE AND MINES—I have much pleasure in supporting that petition.

MR. SINNOTT—I also have much pleasure in supporting that petition.

MR. CASHIN—Mr. Speaker, I ask leave to present a petition from the electors of Brigus South and Admiral's Cove, in the vicinity of Cape Broyle, asking that a telephone line be erected between Brigus, Admiral's Cove and Cape Broyle. In giving this petition my support, I would like to impress upon this House that both these settlements have a population of about fifty families. Through the winter season these people are practically cut off from communication with civilization, I may say, because there is no telephone in Brigus, nor in Admiral's Cove, and they are three miles from Cape Broyle. I feel sure that I will only have to refer this petition to the Minister of Posts and Telegraphs to have it receive all the attention possible.

MR. MOORE—I give the petition that has just been presented by my colleague my heartiest support. I know the needs of these people, and what hardships they have, and I hope the Government will see its way clear to accede to this petition and have the telephone line erected.

HON. COLONIAL SECRETARY—I beg to lay on the table of the House the answer to the question of Mr. Halfyard on the order paper of February 24th.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—I wish to lay on the Table of the House a copy of the correspondence between the Government and the British Empire Steel Corporation, which was asked for by Mr. Hickman yesterday. It was question number 5 on yesterday's order paper.

NOTICE OF QUESTION.

Question No. 1 on the Order Paper was deferred.

Question No. 2.

MR. SCAMMELL—Asked the Minister of Marine and Fisheries if it is the intention of his Department to place a Lighthouse on either the Groais Island or Bell Island (known as the Grey Islands) in the District of St. Barbe, and if so, to give particulars as to character and location of the proposed structure.

MINISTER OF MARINE & FISHERIES—I may say for the benefit of Mr. Scammell that the Government has never been asked of late years to put a lighthouse on the Groais Islands. The only place that I know where a lighthouse could be of any benefit to mariners is the place where the lighthouse is at the present time. I do not know if Mr. Scammell is referring to the Horse Islands, commonly called the Groais Islands by some people. In that case there is a light at the entrance to the harbour there.

Question No. 3.

MR. ASHBOURNE—To ask the Hon. the Prime Minister under what department the S. S. Prospero and S. S. Sagona are being outfitted for the sealfishery, and if it is a Government venture; also give names of parties supplying the outfits; is an additional insurance required, and if so, give rates and with whom insurance has been or will be effected? Have any arrangements been made as to the disposal of the seals on arrival of the steamers?

HON. PRIME MINISTER — Mr. Speaker, I beg to table the answer as follows:—

Reply to Question of Mr. Ashbourne, No. 3, of Order Paper of Feb. 27.

The Prospero and Sagona are being outfitted for the sealfishery under the Railway Commission as a venture on behalf of that Department.

The outfits for the steamers are being purchased by the Railway Purchasing Agent, Mr. Kent, and the men are being cropped by Messrs. James Baird, Ltd., and Jesse Whiteway, Ltd., entirely at the risks of these firms.

The attached statement shows the amount of inusrance effected on both steamers in connection with the prospective voyage.

An arrangement is being made with Messrs. Baine Johnston & Co. for the disposal of the seals on the arrival of the steamers.

S. S. Sagona—

Question No. 4—MR. BROWN asked Hon. the Minister of Agriculture and Mines on whose recommendation Mr. Turner of Lewisporte, Camp Inspector, was dismissed and one Manuel appointed in his place.

HON. MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE AND MINES—Mr. Speaker, I beg to table reply as follows:—

Camp Inspectors are appointed for six months only, consequently party was not dismissed.

New appointment made on recommendation of Mr. Joseph Peters.

Question No. 5: MR. HICKMAN asked the Hon. the Minister of Justice if it is the intention of the Government to appoint a Magistrate for Harbour Grace during this year; if so give the name of person who will be appointed.

Reply: HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—The matter has not yet received the attention of the Government. As it has not yet received the attention of the Government, I would not like to say what the intention of the Government is.

Question No. 6—MR. HIBBS asked the Minister of Public Works to lay on the Table of the House: (a) A statement showing what allocations of Public Monies, either Mainline, Local or Special, have been made in the District of Fogo, since the first day of June, 1924 to date; (b) To show the names of parties to whom Grants were sent in each case; (c) To state on whose authority the allocations, if any, were made.

MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS—The answers to these questions have already been given to-day in the answer to another question asked two days ago. The questions here are the same as have been asked before.

The reply to questons No. 7, 8, 9 and 10 were deferred.

HON. PRIME MINISTER—In reply to a question asked by Mr. Hickman yesterday, "to lay on the table of the House the report on the Dock by the expert who was brought here by the Gopernment." I would like to say that while I have these reports here, I do not wish to table them to-day, because we have asked another expert to come down here and make an estimate on the cost of repairs to the Dock. I do not think it is fair to the party who has already given his views on the matter, to have those tabled until we get the second expert's opinion on the matter. Consequently, I would ask the Leader of the Opposition to let that question stand over.

MR. HICKMAN—I accept the Prime Minister's explanation, but I would like to have the reply before anything is done.

HON. PRIME MINISTER—Certainly.

ORDER OF THE DAY.

Address in reply.

MR. HICKMAN—Mr. Speaker, before the debate is finished I would like to have a few words to say in reference to the matters outlined in the Speech from the Throne at the opening of the House.

On the day on which the House opened I asked the Prime Minister if he would adjourn the House until the following Monday, which has been the custom for many years, and it was with great reluctance that the Prime Minister agreed to the postponement. As I stated before, the Speech from the Throne is something that the members on this side of the House do not see or hear, until they come down here and hear it from His Excellency the Governor in the Upper Chamber at the opening of the House.

I have no objection to the Honorable the Prime Minister trying to hurry through the Legislation, and we on this side of the House will give all the assistance possible to measures which we consider of benefit to the country. The Government organ on the morning following the opening of the House said we had had notice served upon us that there would be no further delays or adjournments. At the time I did not take it, that notice had been served on us—I would not take it seriously in any case, but I understood that the Honorable Mr. Morine said there would be no postponements, as if he were going to take charge of the whole affair and run it through. Now the first item in the Speech from the Throne relates to the Codfishery. I will deal with each item as I go along, and try to be as brief as possible, and not cause unnecessary delay. The Speech begins:

"The Codfishery of last year was prosecuted successfully and the products disposed of at the best prices known in the history of the Colony (exclusive of the abnormal war years). Those who engaged in this staple industry of the country reaped a reward which renewed their faith and interest in it."

The reason why I take each item is because this Speech is the Government's mouth-piece. It is what they are handing out to the people of Newfoundland through His Excellency the Governor on opening day. It is gratifying to Members on both sides of the House to know that conditions are a little better than at the close of last Session. This was brought about principally by the high price of fish —the previous year's catch was not very large, the price low, it went into consumption, and left the markets bare for the opening of 1924, which gave a ready sale for all we had. At the beginning of the season the price was not so high, on Labrador it was $5.00 a quintal, and people fishing there had to pay twenty-five to thirty cents going down in the schooners and back, which really reduced the price to $4.75 or $4.80 a quintal. Later in the season the price advanced and those who had brought their catch home obtained better results. But what I want to point out is that all the fishermen on Labrador and around our shores did not reap the reward told of in the Speech. They had all they could do to carry the burden, as they had to pay a high price for their outfits, and as I said before the Government as soon as they came into office put the duty on beef, pork and molasses. That on beef and pork amounting to several dollars a barrel, so this was an additional burden which they had to bear, and out of their returns they were not left such a great reward. We all know that outfits for the fishery are very expensive, lines and twines have been advancing yearly. Most of those who had traps which cost them a lot of money during the war time, now have been worn out, and cannot replace them, and that is why they will have to work for years with high prices for their catch before they will reap any benefit. I understand the Government this Session intends to introduce a Bill in reference to the Cull of fish. I did not hear it in the House, but outside, and, therefore, cannot discuss it till it is brought in and we see what it contains. However, I want to go from that to another item which the Government can take care of, it is the sale of Salt. I have spoken of this subject in the past, and it is a very important one to the country, so that if the Honorable Prime Minister can do anything about it, he will have the support of the Opposition. At the present time a man buys his salt and that's all he knows about it—it is salt —but there are many grades of salt, and that from Cadiz is the best for the cure of Shore fish. There is another quality which we get from Torrevieja, and another from Eiza, and they are all of different strengths. If a man is accustomed to use Cadiz salt, and he is given that from Santa Pola or Torrevieja without his knowing it, he will likely use the same amount with the result that his fish will become burnt, and damaged before he knows it. I think the Government should have the salt graded, so that the fisherman will know what kind he is getting with the result that he will have better fish. Strong salt like those of Santa Pola are best, and fish cured with that is in most cases good. Mr. Warren has told us that he was speaking to the Premier of New Zealand as to selling butter from that country in Newfoundland in competition with the product of Prince Edward Island, our next door neighbor, and Mr. Massey said the reason why that could be done was that it was shipped under Government status. I am speaking of fish, because it is the mainstay of the country, and perhaps there is something that we on this side of the House may be able to advance, and out of which some good may come later on. There is one drawback in connection with the fisheries, and that is the lack of statistics. There has been a controversy over it. I have seen some letters in the papers, one of which was by a Member on the other side of the House, but they seemed to be mixed up over the matter. As I said before, we lack statistics, and I do not know how we are going to get them, but if the brains of the Government be used to advantage, it should be possible to obtain them. This is a matter which I will take up later, if the Government Bill as rumored, is introduced. The next item in the Speech deals with the work on the Humber, and says it has "proceeded with remarkable speed and success." Every Newfoundlander is glad of the industry on the Humber, as it has given employment to a great many of our people, but I regret to say that it has also given labor to many who are not our people, but who took their places, and were put in positions ahead of them. I have heard the report that six hundred Canadian loggers were brought here recently, but they are no better than ours who are thoroughly capable woodsmen, and it is to be regretted that something was not contained in the contract whereby the money paid to these outsiders would have been saved to our men. It is said that thirty-five millions have already been spent in connection with this industry. Newfoundland has guaranteed two million pounds, the Trade Facilities a similar amount, and I believe the rest is by the Armstrong Whitworth Company. I regret that so much money has been spent above the Twenty Millions, first calculated on. The more money that is put into the industry, the greater the possibility and probability of Newfoundland having to pay the interest on the amount guaranteed, whether that money was spent well or not I do not know, but according to reports the Canadian contractors that came down here got ten per cent on what was expended.

And under that contract what inducement for that concern to economize in any way because the more money they paid out or wasted the greater amount they obtained in the way of commission. I understand, however, that one particular concern has had a contract cancelled and has had to leave the country. We know but very little about the Humber and we know but little about the Newfoundland Pulp and Paper Company, Limited. The Newfoundland Government is supposed to have a Newfoundland representative on the Directorate of the N. P. and P. Co., Ltd., and so far as I know I was told by the Prime Minister that we have a Director appointed by the Newfoundland Government on the Board of Directors in the person of Mr. S. J. Foote and the Prime Minister stated that there has never been a report of any kind submitted, either written or verbally.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—I did not say that. I said there was a report verbally, but nothing in writing.

MR. HICKMAN—I beg your pardon sir, I understood you to say that you had been given little or no information from time to time. But I want to point out the laxity of the Government in having that tremendous industry going on there, in which our Government is guarantor for ten millions of dollars, and not having a man, no matter who he is, to go there and find out what is really going on and report to the Government just the same as the Head of the Department would report to the Government about his Department. From what source does the Government expect to get their information, if they do not get it from the member of the Board. I hope and trust now that this will help the Government and inspire the Government to see that information from the Humber will be secured through their representative on the Board.

The next item referred to in the Speech from the Throne is the mining industry and I will deal with that later, but the following paragraph deals with the Labrador Boundary Question, which is a very important and very live subject to almost everybody in Newfoundland at the present time. We all know what happened recently in connection with this matter. The Prime Minister and his two colleagnes, the Minister of Justice and Colonial Secretary, made a trip to Quebec to discuss the question and since they have returned we have got no information from them. We expected to have something laid before us at this session of the House, but we have nothing thus far. Now I have asked the Prime Minister to lay upon the table of the House a copy of the correspondence the Newfoundland Government had with the Government of Quebec. He has given me the correspondence that took place before he left for Quebec, but which contains nothing, except the arrangement of an interview; but the Prime Minister said that any correspondence that took place since the return of the delegates was private and could not be given. I consider that we, on this side of the House, are entitled to see all the correspondence in the interests and welfare of the people of this country. No doubt, this delegation that went to Quebec did quite a lot of work, at least, they did a lot of Curling.

HON. THE COLONIAL SECRETARY—And we did it well.

MR. HICKMAN—So much so that I was going to advise young budding lawyers here who expect to remain in politics to join the Curling Club, if they are not already members of it. At any rate the delegation consisted of three curlers, and probably next time there will be a full team of four. According to reports we received every day and published in the "Daily News"—who compiled the reports I do not know—the delegates were doing almost everything else except discussing the Labrador Boundary Question. They arrived at Montreal on December 15th, had an interview with Premier Taschereau and some of his colleagues on the 16th, played Curling and lunched with the Governor-General and dined with the Prime Minister up to the last of December and then we had a report that the delegates had a meeting before they left for home.

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE—That was not all we did.

MR. HICKMAN—I quite believe that, but I want to point out that we have received no information about the Labrador Boundary and my candid opinion is that the Government got none to give us because they have none to show. The fact of the matter is that the delegates did not name a price while abroad, were never offered a price and the whole thing has been a fizzle from start to finish. Mr. Warren said that when he first started negotiations with the Quebec Government his offer was to sell the Labrador, if enough money was obtainable to pay off our National debt. If the country got the amount of our National debt for the Labrador, I am sure that every member on this side of the House, at any rate, would sanction it, and even if we got a little less than the National debt, provided the price was not too low, we would not be against it. Mr. Warren further said that the lowest price mentioned in the negotiations that he carried on was twenty-five million dollars for the Labrador. Now as to whether twenty-five million dollars would be sufficient for the areas on the Labrador I do not know. However, my opinion is, that if we send another delegation to Quebec, Montreal or anywhere in Canada, I hope a lawyer will not be sent because, if there is, there will be no success attend the visit, with all respect to the Minister of Justice. This Labrador Boundary has been a milch cow for the last twenty years for lawyers.

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE—The fact is that the whole five Canadian delegates were lawyers.

MR. HICKMAN—It was also stated by Mr. Warren yesterday that, although our case was prepared for the Privy Council, there is no reason why Quebec should present her case right away. Quebec need not present her case for the next five years, if she has not done so already. Still there are Committees of lawyers in Canada, England and elsewhere engaged to dispose of this Labrador Boundary; and that is why I say now that if we got a little less than sufficient to pay off our National debt we might be inclined to support it. Would it not be proper for Newfoundland delegates to go to Quebec and try and make a settlement or does it mean that we have a bad case for the Privy Council? If it does not, alright.

HON. THE COLONIAL SECRETARY—I think the theory some people have is erroneous. The delegation did not go to Canada to try and settle the Labrador Boundary at a price; they went there on invitation of the Prime Minister of Quebec and the Prime Minister of Canada to discuss terms as to the disposal of the Labrador Boundary.

MR. HICKMAN—Was it to dispose of it or hire it?

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE—The trouble with some people now is that they thought we were going to sell it.

HON. THE COLONIAL SECRETARY—Sell it over night I suppose.

MR. HICKMAN—I know it all alright.

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE—I know what you know.

MR. HICKMAN—Probably our Labrador contains great assets which we know nothing whatever about. Nobody knows the value of the timber and mineral that are on the Labrador or what they are worth to us or to our children in years to come, and it is a big question to decide whether or not we should hold on to the Labrador or dispose of it at any reasonable price. Why there is water power on the Labrador greater than the St. Lawrence River or the Niagara Falls. Electricity has been carried successfully as far as eight hundred miles and who knows the value of that water power. There are electric companies operating Niagara Falls to-day with combined paid up capital greater many times over than our National debt amounts to. Therefore, I say that this whole matter ought to receive careful consideration because who knows but that that water power on the Labrador will not be some day as valuable to us as the equivalent of our National debt. Some people are inclined to think that the climate in Newfoundland is getting milder every year. Well if this year is any evidence, it certainly is getting milder.

There is a regular society that holds forth here in St. John's, called the Bible Students. They hold forth every Sunday night. They preach the doctrine that the world is getting milder. One of them was telling a story last year of how mild it is getting on Labrador. He told me he found a large block of ice drifting to Norway; when they opened it they found a man it it who once had lived down in the Arctic and had become frozen into the ice. He further prophesied that the climate would be much warmer in this country sometime in the future of Newfoundland, and we would not need to wear any clothes, only a fig leaf. If this is true, I would like to see it come to pass. It would make Labrador property very much more valuable. Now there is no chartered map of the Labrador that I know of that is reliable. I tried to get a chartered map. I saw one a few days ago. It is printed and put out by the Grenfell Mission, the first I have ever seen. I am writing away to see if I can get a copy. I do not know much about Labrador, but Captain Randell, who is a practical navigator, has been on the Labrador coast, tells me that if you draw a straight line from Blanc Sablon which is the boundary between Quebec and Newfoundland and Cape Chidley on Labrador, this line would touch the water in many cases. Therefore, in settling a claim in connection with the Labrador Boundary in a case where a straight line is drawn from Blanc Sabon to Cape Chidley, we are not only going to lose the land but also a great deal of our coast. There is no proper chart of the Labrador Coast. The Minister of Marine and Fisheries made some statements in reference to the loss of a steamer down there last year. There is no chart, and you could not blame any man for losing a ship on an unchartered coast. I presume that the Labrador Boundary Commission is able to enlighten us on these subjects. I expect to hear from them afterwards. That is a matter important, if true, whether a straight line drawn from Labrador to Cape Chidley in many places goes into the sea. In any case in the sale of Labrador the fishermen's rights have to be protected and well protected. The fact of the matter is we will not give up the sea coast at all. We know what trouble the fishermen have had who have been fishing on Canadian Labrador. If a Newfoundlander wants to go and fish on Canadian Labrador and put out his traps, he has to pay fifty cents per fathom on his twine as a tax.. He has to pay the duty on articles landed on that coast. As the fishery is the great industry, then great care should be taken to see that our sea coast of the country is not lost to the fishermen. Because any rights given over to Canada, given to our fishermen made in agreement, may some time in the future be disputed and the same trouble may arise over that as has arisen over the French Shore and make a lot of trouble. It is something the same at the present time as the arbitration supposed to be held in reference to the American Government claim on Newfoundland for collection of dues on American vessels coming to this country. We were told that the Commission when they were up in Canada discussed the West Indies Trade. I am very glad to see that that was so. It is a very important subject. We have no direct communication between Newfoundland and the West Indies, therefore we lose great opportunities of marketing our produce. We have to route the fish via New York or Halifax. The fish is transhipped in New York in hot weather perhaps, and arrives in bad condition. The receiver is most dissatisfied. All we want is direct communication with the West Indies. Some years ago when I first came to do business in St. John's, all the fish which went to the Mediterranean markets was routed principally by Liverpool. We had to meet claims on every shipment of fish that went forward, whether we were justified or not I do not know, but the buyer always if he was a dishonest man took the opportunity to make a claim. He could substantiate his claim. I have known a case where casks of fish were transhipped and covered up with some kind of a cargo which ruined it, but since that day steamers have been put on the Mediterranean and there is very seldom a claim and shippers are very much more satisfied. I claim that in Newfoundland there should be some kind of a connection with the West Indies. I know that if a man in the West Indies wants fish, take for instance Jamaica, where he buys fish on order, same as anything else, he knows the date on which the steamer is leaving Halifax. There are regular sailings. He runs over the stock of fish and he knows this before the steamer sails, cables in his order for requirements and he is prepared to pay two dollars more for cask fish. The Halifax merchants come here to buy fish giving advanced prices and paying two or three per cent insurance by schooner to Halifax. He pays fifty or sixty cents freight, has it packed in Halifax and gets more money than we in Newfoundland where the fish is bought, just because there is very ready connection. It would be much better if this country could get direct communication with the West Indies by subsidizing a steamer or having a steamer touching at Halifax and call here; we should get better results than we are getting at the present time. It is difficult to get anyone to talk about that matter when there are people in St. John's personally affected. There are people in the trade who have very great influence with the Prime Minister or the Government. When they have influence, it is impossible to put anything through in this country. Some years ago a bill was to have been introduced into this House asking for a subsidy for two steamers for the West Indies. Everybody in the trade sat upon that, but that was the best thing the country could ever have. Subsidized to connect up with the millions of people in the West Indies, that would be the best investment in reference to the fisheries.

The next item is the contract made for the construction of a steamer. The statement that £10,000.00 was saved by placing the contract in Holland, is absolutely false. Not a word of truth in it. Camouflage; I have got the proof right here which I will give you. We all believe that we require a steamer to carry passengers across the Gulf, because the steamer Kyle is not fit for the route. I crossed in that steamer in the winter. I could not be induced to make the trip again, and everybody agrees that we should have a steamer to carry comfortably the passengers from the port of Sydney to Port aux Basques. I have the contract here before me for the building of the steamer, and I notice that she is to be built on the same line as the Bruce. I mean a steamer with sleeping accommodation. I wonder whether the Government ever considered building a day steamer, such as crosses the Straits of Dover. This would have been much more suitable and built very much cheaper. After all the journey is little longer, but with a 15 or 16 knot boat, the passage could be made in the early part of the day and with more comfort and less expense.

Now on the opening day of this House in the few remarks which I made when I had first seen the Speech from the Throne I said that I thought that the Government should have taken advantage of the Trade Facilities Board in connection with the construction of the steamer as well as the supplying the rails for the railway .And the Hon. the Prime Minister stated in explanation that they could not avail of the Trade Facilities Board. They thought that they could not get the steamer delivered on time and that is why she is being built in Holland. And he says that they have saved ten thousand pounds or fifty thousand dollars. Now according to the correspondence laid on the table of the House, which I asked for a few days ago, I find that on the thirteenth day of December the Hon. M. S. Sullivan cabled the Government that he had signed the contract yesterday at Shiedam. Prior to this there is no mention whatever of the Trade Facilities Board, but in January 25th, 1925, over a month after the contract had been signed the Prime Minister sent a cable to London, asking if we could not take advantage of the Trade Facilities Board, of the Imperial Economic Conference in connection with the construction of the steamer.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—Would you mind reading that message?

Mr. Hickman reads the message which had been tabled.

MR. HICKMAN—Now what I want to point out is this, I do not want to say that the Prime Minister got up here in this House and tried to mislead anyone, but what I infer is that the Prime Minister forgot about the Imperial Conference Trade Facilities Board until the Contract has been signed and then he thought of it and made an effort to see if he could not still get the benefits which could be derived from this Board. I do not charge that the Prime Minister made any misstatements to the public. That is the way that I size the thing up. What I want to say is that the explanation which was given on the opening day of the House was not as satisfactory as it should have been. I will give the reply to the message that the Prime Minister has tabled. What I want to point out is that the contract was signed for this steamer on the thirteenth of December and you have not any correspondence here about any negotiations with the Trade Facilities Board. You never mentioned that anybody had seen the committee about it. Mr. Warren said that the Trade Facilities was made to take any contract whether private or public on account of the unemployment in the Old Country. Any private individual could have taken advantage of the Imperial Trade Facilities Board. And up to this when nothing has been said about it the Prime Minister thought about it when he was going to buy some rails and I give him credit for trying to get the Imperial Economic Trade Facilities Board to help us to pay some of the interest on the money. What I mean is this, that the Prime Minister told us that he had saved ten thousands pounds. The Daily News says this morning that he had saved thirty-five thousand dollars. They say that that is a mistake. They meant to say that he had saved fifty thousand dollars. You can make it fifty if you like. That steamer is to cost eighty-nine thousand pounds and that is nearly a half million dollars. If the colony had got the steamer in Britain the Trade facilities Board would have paid the interest on this amount to the extent of four per cent. And this interest on a half a million dollars which they will pay for five years amounts to a hundred thousand dollars. That is the amount that the Government would have been helped to pay if they had had the ship built in England. If you deduct the amount which they say that they have saved in the cost price they have still lost fifty thousand dollars. I say that in connection with his matter the Government has made a bad deal. They also made a bad deal in having the ship built in Holland. The Trade Facilities Board guarantee the money for us to give the Humber. They did everything that they could possibly do for Newfoundland and when we have something which we might give them to help out their unemployment we give it to Holland instead and perhaps half the men working in the docks at Shiedam are Germans. Now according to this the contract for the steamer was made on the thirteenth of December and the steamer has not to be delivered until the thirty-first of July. How many months is that. It is seven and a half months and I think that they have got up to the 17th of August. That makes eight months. You have the list of the offers in this mornings News. There is a list of the contracts offered in England and many of them offered to have the ship ready in seven and eight months. The Colada Shipbuilding and Engineering Co. were eight and a half months. David William Henderson & Co. of Glasgow, eight months. Neptune Works, Walker, New Castle, seven months. And the statement in the paper says that the ship is to be delivered on the first of July when the correct date is to be the thirty-first of July which is practically a month later. Give the public the facts. I say that a great deal of money could have been saved if the advantage had been taken of the Trade Facilities Board. There is one company which offers to have the contract finished in seven months. If the offer of this Company had been availed of this country would have been fifty thousand dollars better off than she is now. And now the ship is to be built at Shiedam and delivered in July and that after all the British Government has done for us. That shows our appreciation to her for what she has done. Now if the Government did not know anything about the Trade Facilities Board then I know that some of the members of the Government did know. Because Mr. Warren said in his speech that he knew all about the Trade Facilities Board and how it was formed and what it was formed for and he had given this information to the Hon. Minister of Finance and Customs, some time ago. Now the next item is the unemployment. We hear a great deal of the unemployment in this city at the present time. Although the Speech from the Throne says that there is work we believe that there is not so very much. "Unemployment in the colony has greatly decreased by comparison with all the years since the war ceased and is now almost normal. Now the unemployment is still great around St. John's and what is the reason There is some reason. And there should not be so much unemployment. I know that the Government has given instructions to give Charity to those in need of it. That is all very well. It keeps a man from starving. But Public Charity is not what a man wants. A man with his health and strength wants work. He wants work something like he is used to. And there is a great many men who want work and cannot get it. There are things that the Government can do to give men employment and they can do this without taking away a man's independence. Giving assistance or the dole takes away a man's independence. I had a case the other day. A man came to me who I have known for some time. He is a fisherman and a very industrious man. He did not reap that rich harvest about which the Government speaks in the Speech from the Throne. He said "I have come to you because I am in this position. I have got a family of so many. I have two boys who are able to work. I am also willing to work. If I do not get work I have to get something from the Government to support my family and I do not want to do that." He was not any particular friend of mine, political or otherwise, but I knew that that man was an honest man, and I said to him—"do not go and get the dole now. Let me know what you want, and I will give you credit for it, and you can pay me back next summer." That man would have had his spirits broken if he had to go down to the Government charity place and take out the dole, when he was willing and eager to work.

You know that work has been on the Humber, and a great many men are being taken away from the Humber because certain construction works have finished, and a great many foreigners have been brought in to cut logs, and so forth. Every foreigner that comes in here means another man out of employment. There is unemployment in Canada, and in the United States to a certain extent, and there is unemployment at Bell Island. A great many of our sailing vessels have gone out. Some years ago we had three or four hundred sailing vessels, and these all gave employment to certain men, but those vessels have gradually dwindled out, and the men are out of employment. It is high time that the Government looked around to see if something could not be done.

The Government needs certain buildings put up in this country, and they could give many people employment constructing them. The Government needs a bond warehouse, and not a very small one at that, where they can put all the goods coming in in bond, belonging to people who do not want to take delivery of them all at once. The building of a place like that would be a great help to the masons and carpenters of this country, and the Government would get some returns for the money they spend. The Government could have employed several men this winter—even now—in cleaning up the streets—Water St. and the other streets of St. John's, and get some returns for the money that they are giving out.

Why do so many people need relief when they get out of employment. Because the people working in our industries only make enough money to maintain them and their families when they are working. They just get enough to keep them alive during the time that they are working, and as soon as the work is over they have not got a cent of money left. How could men leave here and pay their passage to the Humber Valley, work there for twenty five cents an hour, pay his board, pay his passage back and support his family. Every cent that he gets during the time that he is working only supports him and his family.

The same thing applies to Bell Island. The men work at Bell Island for twenty-five or twenty-seven cents an hour shovelling ore. They have certain expenses when they are over there. They work hard at twenty five cents an hour, but as soon as they are out of work they have actually nothing left. No industry can be carried on in this country unless the people working in that industry are protected. If you do not protect them, it is better not to have any industries at all. These companies should pay a reasonable rate of wages to the men working under them, which will pay men properly for their work and help them to be independent.

The next on the programme is the Commission of enquiry. "Some very distrubing discoveries have been made by the Commission of enquiry with regard to expenditure in Charitable Institutions. That is a very good move for the Government to have a commission of enquiry into any place that is not properly run, and when the fault has been found, they should do the best they possible can to conduct the Department in a proper manner afterwards. I am not saying that the Government has not done the best they can, or that the Prime Minister is to be blamed in any respect. I am not saying that he is not making an effort to have these departments run correctly and properly. All I know is that the Government is not responsible for all that is going on in the Departments. I know all about that, and I am not laying that charge on his shoulders now, although some day he will have to carry all the blame.

The enquiry into the Post Office—what does that amount to? There has been a statement made on the floors of this House which has not yet been contradicted—that there have been 26 new employees put in the Post Office since this Government came into power; and then the Speech from the Throne says that the staff is very much over-manned and under-worked. I should say that the staff is under-worked and over-manned if twenty six new employees have come there since this Government came in. I am not making the statement that twenty six new employees have come in. I leave it to the Prime Minister to correct me if that is wrong—but that is a statement which has been made on the floors of the House which has not yet been contradicted.

Also additions have been made to the Custom House staff, according to reports. There is another thing that the Government has done when it came into power; since they came in a great many men have been suspended, and in a great many cases the Government has had to take them back, and pay them their salaries for all the time that they were walking the streets of St. John's.

Now, the Government has very wisely brought down a man to look through the system at the Post Office. Whether he is a capable man or not, I do not know; but the fact that the Government has brought in a man means, I suppose, that he is the best man they can get, and their move meets with the approval of this side of the House. But there has been no report from that gentleman since he came here to show what he has done. As a matter of fact he has done absolutely nothing, and he has been unable to do anything, unless he started to do it very lately. He has been helpless up at the Post Office, and he has been unable to do anything.

Then I understand there are a great many irregularities in connection with the Post Offices in the outports. A few have had to suffer, while others have not. But there is no doubt that it is on account of the system that is in vogue at the Post Office that so many people have got into trouble. That system has been in vogue for many years now, and should be changed.

The next thing is the agricultural policy of the Government. I am glad to see that the Government is interesting itself in agriculture. The Honourable Minister of Agriculture and Mines is not in the House now, but I believe that he is in earnest in trying to improve that department. I am glad to see that he is going to meet some practical farmers. If there is any place where he can get information it is certainly from the practical farmers.

There is one thing that I am strong on in reference to Agriculture—and that is that we should be able to take care of the produce which the people produce. I made a statement here in the House last session, which I intend to repeat now, and that is that this country needs a Government Warehouse for the proper storage of vegetables, and to ensure their preservation. In St. John, New Brunswick, our next door neighbour, there is a large warehouse, which was built by the Federal Government. That is a warehouse which is used by the Government for the storage of vegetables, and keeping them in proper condition. The vegetables are taken in from the farmers, put in the warehouse, and distributed from the warehouse. Very often you will see a steamer there in St. John, New Brunswick taking a load of vegetables from the Government warehouse for the West Indies.

We, in this country are able to grow all the vegetables that we need, excepting some perishable vegetables, such as cabbage. But of potatoes, carrots. turnips, parsnips and such vegetables we have abundance. But we do not grow as much as we can. If we had an outlet for our vegetables, the man who now grows fifty barrels of potatoes, would grow two hundred or more. A man here raises fifty barrels of potatoes in his garden, but all that he can sell is twenty barrels in the fall. He has to put the rest into his cellar. Then when the frost comes he cannot take them out of his cellar. He has to leave them there during the winter, and when he opens up his cellar in the spring he finds that the vegetables in his cellar are half rotten.

I say that if the Government is going to develop its agricultural policy in earnest, it can spend money on a thing that will be better than the Model Farm or anything else, and that is a proper warehouse, with sufficient cold storage to keep the temperature down so as to preserve the vegetables. The Government can let the farmers put their vegetables into this warehouse, and keep them there. We can dispose of them afterwards, because we can sell them to the West Indies if we have a surplus. We can export to the West Indies just the same as Canada exports her vegetables to the West Indies, or to those islands of the West Indies where they do not raise them.

I say that is the Agricultural policy to follow out, and that is a cheaper thing than any model farms, or special bulls, or anything that the Minister of Agriculture and Mines can import.

The next item is the financing of the Colony. The Speech from the Throne says:

"The finances of the Colony are in a highly satisfactory condition. Revenue has increased, and Expenditure has decreased, and there will be a surplus of ordinary revenue over Expenditure on current account in the year 1924-25. Tenders for a Loan of four million dollars, part of which was authorized last year, have recently been received, and the rates quoted have been most satisfactory. Part of the loan will be expended in Great Britain for the purchase of rails, and the Imperial Trade Facilities Board has undertaken to pay part of the interest for five years on the amount so expended, with the stipulation that the loan be raised in England."

If the country had thought of the new steamer, and had got the Trade Facilities Board to pay the interest on her, I presume it would be in the Speech, also, as it would be too important a subject to leave out. The Speech says our finances are in high condition. I am glad to hear it, but if that is the case, it is nothing to the credit of the present administration, or Minister of Finance. But nothing has been saved, that is true, because to-day there are more Government pensioners and employees than before June, 1924, when the present administration came into power. The Speech says the Revenue has increased, but the real reason why it has, is because the conditions are somewhat better, the price of goods is higher, there has been a lot of labor given on the Humber, and the increased price of fish brought wealth to the country. And also because more merchandise has been imported is why the revenue has increased. And now it says the Government have raised a loan on satisfactory terms. We do not yet know the real position, as we haven't been given much information on this matter. I asked the

Hon. Minister of Finance to lay upon the Table of the House the bids for the loan, but up to the present they are not forthcoming; possibly we may have them to-day, but he is absent at present. Now what I say is that while the Governemnt think they have done well to get that price, they have not really done so, because if our finances are in a highly satisfactory condition, the least rate we should get is par. Out of the Financial Times, the finanical paper of the highest standing, to which I subscribe, I have taken clippings which show the methods and means of raising the loan. At last session of the House I insisted that the loan should be advertised for, but the Minister of Finance said he did not think it wise that we should show our wares. There is not a single province in Canada but advertises for a loan, whether it be for fifty thousand or fifty million, and when they receive the prices everything is published in the papers. That is the course that should have been followed here, but the only thing we know of the loan is the following clipping which I cut from a Canadian paper a few days ago. (Quotes Clipping). That is less than 97½, but if our finances are so good as we are led to believe, we shoud have got a better figure, and I should not think there was any necessity, even though the Government had the sanction of the House to pay five per cent. to do so, as loans are being raised at 4½, even by the smallest towns. There are places which I have never heard of before, such as Boar Bay getting loans at par. There are many references here of the same nature. I cannot say the Government got the best terms that they could have. He advertised in the papers here giving financiers only four days in which to bid, and the time should have been longer. There is nothing whatever of our loan in the recognized financial papers of Canada. In reference to the rails which the Government are getting in England, under arrangement with the Trade Facilities Board, they are paying a price much higher than that for which the rails could be had from other sources. In his reply a few days ago, the Prime Minister says we are paying seven pounds a ton, but as this is giving needed employment to workmen in England, I have nothing to say against it, even though the price is a little higher, and there is no undue profit to the manufacturers. Now as to the taking off of duties. The Speech says these have been removed from beef, pork and kerosene oil. Now these duties were put on by themselves in June, 1924, as there was nothing on them when they came into power. At the opening day, the Bill was introduced, and particular stress was laid on the removal of duties on certain commodities. We ask that the duties on molasses be also removed, and there is no reason why it should not be, as it is an article that the fishermen can scarcely do without. The next item refers to the bounty for shipbuilding. What it is we do not really know, as the Bill is not yet before the House. If it is for repairing vessels, it is a good one, and will receive my support. If it is drawn up so that worn-out schooners can be repaired for the fishery, there is no reason why it should not be given asisstance, as the number of our vessels is dwindling, and it would be an incentive to replace them. We are not criticising everything the Government is doing, as it is our policy to help out, and while it is our duty to criticise anything that is wrong, we intend when anything is introduced that makes for the benefit of the country, to give it our help. The next subject of importance is the Dry Dock. An engineer has been here to look over it, and I asked the Hon. the Prime Minister for his report. The Prime Minister tells me that he has one report but expects another from a second expert, and will let us have both when they are completed. That is satisfactory, provided the matter is brought up in the House for discussion as to what is to be done in the matter. The Dock is said to be in a terrible condition, and I have heard Capt. Randell say he has seen the ground some distance from the Dock rise and fall with the swell, and also that the pits in the machine shops could not be used when the Dock was flooded, because they were filled with water. What I want to point out is that the Dock needs very extensive repairs, and if it is to be made worth having we have got to spend a lot of money on it. Whether it would be better for the Government to spend money on it, or to hand it over to some other operators, is a matter for discussion. If it is to accommodate ships of large size, we will have to spend a lot of money. You will remember that last year the Metagama, which was damaged off Cape Race, came in here and her temporary repairs cost as much as if she had gone on Dock. But the Dock could not accommodate her, and she only came in because she was forced to do so. If the Dock is to be of any benefit—and we must look to the future as well as the present—it will have to be enlarged and put in a condition to accommodate the largest ships, and machinery will have to be installed, so that every kind of a job can be handled; therefore, I say the Government should interest competitors to come here, as a Dock operated by a Government is very little good, and nothing owned by a Government has shown any profit yet. Whereas a firm handling the same utility would make first rate dividends, labour would be given just the same and we would receive more benefit in the Colony than if handled by the Government. That Dry Dock cost originally $150,000, but at the present time to put it in proper condition would cost many times more than that.

The next paragraph in the Speech from the Throne deals with the removal of the Income Tax. I think that is a step forward. The removal of this tax, as it is carried on in this country at the present time, is a move in the proper direction. There are a few people comparatively who pay the tax and there are a great many who can afford to pay it and who do not pay it. Every firm doing business here to-day is compelled to pay a portion of their dividends every year and are compelled to give to the Assessor's Department every year a list of the employees and the salaries they get. Therefore, the people employed in that way are compelled to pay the tax because the Assessor knows every person's income; but there are many men who carry on small businesses in the country and who keep no books and the tax is never paid by them, so that it bears very heavily on the shoulders of those who pay. There is no doubt about it that every man from a clergyman down when he makes up his accounts at the end of the year does not want to pay any more than he can possibly help. At all events this sort of tax is one that cannot be very well carried on like it is at the present time. It is a great hindrance to small industries. If a small business or a small industry that paid this tax during the war and was hard hit since and was just recovering and showed a balance sheet of some profit, it has to pay a portion of this money under this tax, whereas it should be putting it in that business so as to put the business on a firm financial basis and give more employment all round to the people. The forms of income tax that other countries have may be alright if introduced here; but the tax here is a drag on the country, a hindrance to progress and should be abolished. In fact the Income Tax Department should be done away with, and the Government would do well to do away with the Audit Department also. What is an auditor? An auditor is a man who looks after a concern, audits the books, sees that no mistakes and irregularities occur and signs documents. Look at the irregularities at the Post Office that came to light. I would take a broom, if I were the Government of the day, and sweep out the present Audit Department, employ a new auditor to conduct a proper audit into affairs from time to time and to lay upon the table of the House all information desired, and then everybody would be satisfied that the country is being run properly and not to have the leakages in departments that we have had in the past. Look at what has been disclosed in the enquiry about audits. Why the Auditor General had no power to take stock in the Controller's Department.

HON. THE FINANCE MINISTER—You could not very well blame the Auditor General if he had no power to take stock. The Government of that day did not give him the power to take stock; nor could you blame his department.

MR. HICKMAN—I blame his department, yes, and I have no hesitation in saying it again.

HON. THE FINANCE MINISTER—If they had been given the power things would have been quite alright.

MR. HICKMAN—For the benefit of the Government, Opposition and of the people of the country generally, I repeat that if we are going to have an Audit Department let us have one so that the books are audited in the proper way and then everybody will be satisfied.

The next item in the Speech from the Throne is that with reference to the Redistribution of seats. It says that a Bill is going to be introduced for Redistribution of seats in certain Districts throughout the country and that certain Districts will be divided up, except in a couple of cases of two men Districts. We have not seen the Bill and we do not know whether it is the intention of the Govrenment or not to divide up according to population or area, and until we see the Bill and find out what it is all about there is very little we can say on the matter. Whether one man Districts will give proper representation to the country or not I do not know, but, I presume, there is one thing and that is that it will give representation on the floors of the Assembly to outport men more so than at the present time. I must say that on the face of it I cannot see the necessity for raising the number of members in the House of Assemt ly to forty. At the present time there are thirty six members. What do we want forty for to run this country with a population of about 250,000 people and with an annual expenditure of eight or nine million dollars. Why that is only a one man job. There are lots of firms in the United States and each of which handle more cash than that annually. Perhaps, the Government have a reason and may give an explanation later on. My idea would be to reduce the number of members down to twenty instead of increasing them to forty.

The next item dealt with in the Speech From the Throne is that of Tourist Traffic. The Government during the last session of the House got authority to borrow six millions of dollars and two millions of this were to be spent on roads for tourists. New roads will be alright if properly kept up, and it would be far better for this country now, if when Sir Edward (now Lord Morris) came into office he had built roads instead of building railroads because the money spent on railroads have been a great source of expenditure year in and year out and have never paid in this country. Road building, however, might be a very good and proper thing to emtark upon, but I have my doubts as to the wisdom of the Government in spending two million dollars on such work at the present time. The first thing we got to remember, before we try to encourage tourists to come to Newfoundland, is that the hotels here are not large enough to accommodate but a small number of people and a man who is travelling for pleasure is a man possessed of means and who wants good accommodation while travelling and who is not going to pass through the Provinces of Canada where he can get good accommodation and make a trip to Newfoundland, without having first class quarters where he can put up when he comes. Now the first thing the Government has to do, before spending money on new roads, is to find out what hotel accommodation we can offer tourists. We got good enough roads here already for the few tourists that come here and until such time as we construct further roads; but you cannot expect to attract tourist here until you get the hotel question solved first. People do not go to Bermuda or any other place pleasure seeking without knowing first that the hotel accommodation is suitable for them and they are not coming to Newfoundland either unless we have properly conducted hotels to put them in, so that if the Government intend to spend two million dollars now on roads and not touch the question of hotels the chances are they will want two millions more to spend before the tourist come here.

One thing was the need for advertising. I am going to tell the Prime Minister that I do not believe in his advertising. While the Prime Minister was in Canada on the Boundary Question we read some of his after-dinner speeches. I don't think he did any good advertising in his speeches. From what I got, he talked a good deal about conditions in Newfoundland, conditions Newfoundland is in. We have our country painted black enough in every way without somebody showing off the defects. Perhaps the Prime Minister did not intend to say anything but that is the meaning it conveyed to me. Now the Government purposes to appoint a highway commission. If they are going to build roads, that is the proper thing under which the roads should be constructed if the highway commission do not take it out of the hands of politicians then the road building is going to be like every thing else a dumping ground. Now if the Government are sincere and intend to appoint a highway commission they should get some practical man in charge of it. I understood the other day, I think, from the Prime Minister that Mr. Hall, the Government Engineer will likely be chairman. Now with all due respects to Mr. Hall, I don't think he has any experience in road building. He is alright for constructing bridges, but when it comes to the construction of roads I think a man of experience would be better fitted than the present Government Engineer. Another thing the man who takes charge of it is a man who must give all his time to it, and if the Government Engineer had charge of that and a thousand other jobs at the same time he will give the proper attention to none. The Highway Commission will not pan out as expected. Why not get a man like Mr. Hibbs recommended? A Newfoundlander who is now working in Ontario, or get the man who built Bowring Park. He is an excellent man.

HON. PRIME MINISTER—He is a German, isn't he?

MR. HICKMAN—You have Germans building steamers, why not have them building roads? Put a man like that in charge of the roads and make it a proper Highway Commission where the money is spent to advantage. Next item, the encouragement of the incorporation of municipalities. I suppose that is something done to take the place of the road boards. If the Municipalities are incorporated and the people can run their own affairs I do not see any objection. It will make better men of our outport men, more self-reliant and more intelligent if they have to meet together and run their own municipalities. The next item in the Speech from the Throne is in reference to the claim of the United States against the Newfoundland Government for illegal fees collected on American vessels in Newfoundland. Now we are not able to talk very intelligently in connection with that because we do not know very much about it. I understand our claim is to be settled by arbitration, and I suppose that is the means the Government intends to adopt. I presume that is the best way. One thing I want to say is that we are altogether too lenient with the United States. We are lenient with them because we think we cannot do without them. About two years ago the United States put on a duty on Newfoundland fish of $1.25. Port Rico is under the protectorate of the United States, the same duty applies to our fish going into Port Rico, which is a large consumer, probably a hundred thousand quintals a year, and we pay $1.25 on fish going into any other protectorate of the United States. Still the Government took no steps to retaliate in any way. Ships have been permitted into these ports under the same conditions as heretofore, and we should do something. We could do without the United States. We have the big country of Canada from which we can get all our food stuffs. We have markets elsewhere for our products, and if they see fit to put a duty on our products there is no reason why we should give any concessions to them. I ask the Minister of Justice to remember what I said and not forget it. $1.25 on every quintal at the present time. Speaking on the unemployment question, Mr. Warren yesterday made reference to unemployment. He put the two subjects together, unemployment and the fisheries. He said, we are splitting fish now as we did twenty years ago. We will always be splitting it the same way until somebody gets something better. Then he referred to the industry which Mr. Lake is carrying on in canning fresh fish. It is not a new industry, it has been in use for a good many years, but fresh fish cannot be tinned cheaply enough to enable us to export it and find a market for it. Some years ago, more than seven or eight a man came from Boston. He wanted fish put up in tins. He asked me if I could put it up. We put it up for him, he asked me the price and I told him. He paid the price. I wondered afterwards how he could pay that price for tinned fish and sell it in the United States. He told me he sold the whole lot in the United States for ———. In regard to this tinning of fish I do not think it can be done cheaply enough to be profitable.

Now as far as the exploiting of new markets goes every man in the fish trade has been exploiting all the new markets he can. Tries to exploit salt fish in Greek markets. A cargo was salted and sent over there. They never had salt fish before. Mr. Hepburn saw them cooking Labrador fish. They had it on a pan frying. You can imagine what it tasted like. It is no easy matter to educate people to eat salt fish, it is the hardest thing in the world to do. The same thing applies in other countries. The hardest thing is to find a market for salt fish. All the Government Commissioners will not make conditions any better in the consumption of salt fish. Shortly after the war when fish was at a high price I visited Bay Bulls when the company was in operation. I went into the plant, the fish was then about nine or ten dollars a quintal. There was a long table and around the table were twenty or thirty girls picking the bones out of codfish to make boneless fish. The fish was then dried and put up in cardboard boxes and sent to the United States for sale for about twenty five cents per pound.

MR. BROWNE—Surely more than that?

MR. HICKMAN—I think that was about the price. It was about thirty-five cents a pound here, However, I must tell the Hon. Member that I don't know the price of boneless codfish here. There is one industry which I think should be encouraged. And that is the packing of herring. Everybody who talks about fish he talks about codfish. There is any amount of herring swimming in the waters around the shores of this country, and the people do not know how to put them up and do not know what to do with them when they have put them up. If the Government were to put a bounty on the packing of herring I think that it would be a good move. The herring fishery is a great industry. Mr. Warren in his speech the other day said that Russia would be a great market for our herring. The fact of the matter is that is not a new thing. I took that up several years ago. The Russians can get their herring from Scotland or Norway for as much as the freight to ship them from Newfoundland. What the Russians take must be very cheap. They would not give any more for the Newfoundland herring than what it would cost to freight them to that country. Mr. Warren says that he would not like to say that officially. But I do not see why Mr. Warren's opinions should not be taken unofficially because everybody in this country knows all about the fishery. Mr. Brian Dunfield was connected with Job Brothers for two months when he was down in the Board of Trade, telling the people of Newfoundland how they should market their fish, and I do not see any reason why Mr. Warren should not express his ideas. Now the last item on which I am going to speak this afternoon is the "Clean Up." It is not a matter to which reference is made in the Speech from the Throne, but I am just going to refer for a little while to this "Clean Up." This Government came into power last year on the "Clean Up" policy and they said that they were going to "keep clean." That means that they were going to take over the affairs of this country and administer in on a proper basis. They were going to run it on a business basis. And no doubt that was the intention of the Prime Minister and he has found out that it is not so easy to get things straightened out quickly as one would imagine without experience. There are a few things which we were promised by the Prime Minister which have not been carried out. There was one thing which he brought up in the House and which we considered very important, and that was the administration of the Crown Lands Act. At the present time there is a great deal of timber held by different people under lease, and it has been the custom for the Government supporters to make application for these limits, and after the payment of small amounts they hold them in the endeavour that they may be able to dispose of them to some corporation and make a lot of money on them. And sometimes these hopes have not materialised and these properties are still unoccupied and undeveloped. The manufacturers have been driven off. And last year at the beginning of the session we brought this up and the Prime Minister said that he was going to have the Crown Lands Act amended and that in the future any timber that was left would be disposed of for the benefit of the colony and for the benefit of the trade of the colony, and that the Government would be in a position to deal with any propositions that might come before them in connection with development of timber properties. Now that amendment has not been introduced into the House. And it was promised last year. Here is the reply given to a question by Mr. Halfyard last year. I will read it from Hansard.

HON THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Previous Governments let out the timber limits without charging more than the minimum regulation bonus. The Governor in Council has the power to fix the bonus.

MR. HICKMAN—That is not the answer or explanation to us last year.

MR. HALFYARD—The question asked by me last session was whether the Government has the right to put timber limits up for auction.

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE—That is an entirely different thing. The Government has not the power to auction any land limits, but it has the power to fix the bonus. There is a maximum and a minimum bonus and it has been the habit of past Governments to demand the minimum bonus. I may say that since this government came into power there has been but one license issued and that has been at a bonus the like of which was never heard of before in this colony.

MR. HICKMAN—I am sure that the Prime Minister at the beginning of the last session agreed to amend the Crown Lands Act.

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE—That is an entirely different thing.

MR. HICKMAN—That is one of the things that was brought up at the closing of the last session. There was no explanation given. I remember bringing it up at the end of the session and that was all that we heard of it. I accept the answer given by the Minister of Justice. The reason that I stress on this matter now is that it was talked about in the House at the last session and I asked if there was going to be any measure introduced, but nobody gave me the explanation that I have been given now. I was under the opinion that the Government could sell lands by public auction.

HON THE PRIME MINISTER—Can the Government now sell lands by public auction?

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE—No, the Government cannot now sell lands by public auction. but the Government has the powers to fix the bonus at which the lands can be licensed.

HON. THE MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE AND MINES—Perhaps it is my duty to explain that practically since responsible Government the practice has been that whoever had the most political pull got the pieces of land if there were more than one person looking for it. But since the Monroe Government assumed power and since I became the head of the Department there has not been one inch of land sold in this manner to any person. There has been a sale made to the Reid Newfoundland Co. of a block of land.

There were some twenty applications in for it. There was an application practically from men of every shade of politics in this country for this block of land. It was sold to the Reid Newfoundland Company, for which the Department received a cheque for forty-five thousand dollars. It is the only land transaction which has taken place since Premier Monroe came into office.

CAPT. RANDELL—Did you say that every man in politics in this country has made application for this piece of timber land.

HON. THE MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE AND MINES—No. You are one of those who did not apply.

MR. HICKMAN—I remember that at the last session of the House the Minute of Council Government came in for a lot of criticism. It was said the previous Governments did wrong in spending certain amounts of money by Minute of Council. Now we did not suppose that the present Government would undertake Minute of Council, Govt. and least of all did we expect that they would pay out monies on executive authority since they came into power. I asked the Prime Minister to table the list of the monies which have been paid out on Executive authority by the present Government since it came into power, but I did not get an answer. If the Government has done as they said they would do I see no reason why this list should not be tabled. Mr. Warren has made reference in his speech this session to the "clean-up," and for the benefit of the House I am going to read a part from the Speech from the Throne which was delivered at the last session of the House on the opening day. It is in connection with the enquiry which the Government promised would be made into the several public departments.

I just wanted to read that part of the Speech from the Throne last year to bear out the argument that I used at the beginning, that the Governor, in reading the Speech from the Throne, is only the mouthpiece of the Government, and he has to read whatever is placed in his hand, whether the Government has any intention of carrying out what is contained in the Speech from the Throne or not.

I propose to move an amendment to this Speech from the Throne to the effect that molasses be placed on the free list.

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Mr. Speaker, I just want to add a few words to what has already been said, more by way of explanation than by way of answer. As a matter of fact I think I may speak for every member on this side of the House when I express the very sincere appreciation of the spirit in which all the Honourable members have spoken. I apply this to the honourable mover and seconder of the address in reply, Mr. Cahill and Mr. Browne, coupled with the official leader of the Opposition, the leader of the Independent party, and the private members opposite, all of whom have spoken in the most helpful spirit of constructive criticism that it has ever been the privilege of any Government to hear. The Hon. Prime Minister must be very glad indeed to have the Speech from the Throne discussed in this spirit. The Leader of the Opposition has carried out his promise to deal with the Speech in the spirit of helpful and constructive criticism and not by way of obstruction. The addresses given by the honourable members have certainly typified that spirit, and I think it is an unique happening in the history of this House, to have the policy of the Government since the House last met receive the unanimous endorsation of the House in every respect. The Prime Minister must have reason to be proud to have his policy so unanimously adopted and approved by every member of the House.

It should be a source of satisfaction to him, and to Mr. Hickman, and other members who are business men to feel that the days of old politicians are over. There was many a time in this House when the Prime Minister's seat was filled by men of many years experience in politics and filled, amongst others by lawyers, who are supposed to be trained in the way of looking for compliments, and in the way of saying things that get applause. Yet never on such occasions has the policy of a Government received such hearty endorsation by the House. The public outside the House naturally expect from and demand from the Opposition that attention be drawn to all the misdeeds of the Government, and surely it must be a matter of great satisfaction to the Government that no such reference has been taken in this case, because, and the public and everyone must agree with this, the Opposition has very properly refrained from making any such references, as they have no material facts on which to base them. It is the first time that the Speech from the Throne has gone through unquestioned, and with nothing but the endorsation of the members of the House behind it. Those of us who are associated with the Government are very glad to see this spirit existing at the commencement of the session.

The Government is starting in now to carry out the promises made last year—to endeavour to save as much time as possible. The Address in Reply has been gone through in a very short time, and now that debate upon it is almost finished, members will be glad to see that so many bills are ready for the House to debate, which will necessarily result in making the Session as short as it could possibly be.

Unofficially, and in a purely personal way, and speaking for myself and on behalf of those who went on the delegation to Canada, I want to thank Mr. Hickman for the very kind reference he has made to us. He is a keen curler himself, and if he happened to be round there at the time I can say that he would have been quite good enough to join those who represented Newfoundland up there on that occasion. Unfortunately we could not get a member of the House of Assembly to make up the team, and we had to get an ordinary Newfoundlander to fill up, but Mr. Hickman will be glad to learn that when next we go up there we shall be glad to have him on the team.

So much by way of generalities. There are one or two things that I think I ought to explain. The honourable the Leader of the Opposition no doubt thought that he was saying something new when he talked of a straight line from Blanc Sablon to Cape Chidley, and said that it would cut off part of our coast on the Labrador. There is no question about that. In order that I might explain this matter better to the House I sent down for a map. The Labrador Boundary that we claim is not a straight line from Blanc Sablon to Cape Chidley. If we had a line from Blanc Sablon to Cape Chidley it would run thus (indicates line on map) and it would cut off a certain piece of the Labrador coast here (indicates piece on map). But the boundary that Newfoundland claims is here. (Shows line on map). It is not an absolutely straight line, and it retains all our coast line, and runs in places hundreds of miles inland.

I am glad to see that my predecessor in office, Mr. Warren, is here now, so that I may take advantage of this opportunity of thanking him for his very sane suggestions. Mr. Speaker, in connection with this idea of selling the Labrador, there are two things that must be thought of. When you talk about selling Labrador, you must remember that it means the selling of the land right out to the coast. In other words, selling, as I say, our territory, not alone the territory that is in dispute—the "hinterland" between the height of land and the sea—but selling in addition to that what is indisputably admitted to be ours. The latter point was not questioned at all in our conference, but what may be in the pleadings I do not know. What may be raised in the pleadings as to Newfoundland's undoubted right to the coast is another matter. The territory that we understand is in dispute is the territory between the sea coast and this height of land.

Now, as I said, there are two things to be considered in the matter of a sale. There is first the matter of selling the land right out to the coast, and having the dominion, or sovereignty of this land go to Canada, with Newfoundland getting rights to use the coast by treaty. That is one method of sale, and that method of sale would naturally involve very much more and very much greater thought both as to price and as to the sale itself than the second form of proposed sale. Under the second form of sale, we would consider only that portion of Labrador lying between the height of land and our own Newfoundland Labrador, territory of which so far as this country is concerned, we have only the most meagre knowledge. I do not know that we have any more meagre and scanty knowledge than Canada has. We have purely hypothetical ideas as to its timber, but we have assured ideas as to its water powers.

So far as this country is concerned, one of the things that we have all got to sit down and consider would be the price which we should ask for it. Even supposing for the moment that you wanted to sell that land—that you had agreed to sell it, and you had destroyed all idea of sentiment about parting with Labrador and the coast line, can you say what it is worth, apart altogether from what you would try to get for it. There is no method of valuation. There is no method known to ordinary business science that can value that land. You can only approximate something. Even suppose that you were certain of your rights, and that the Privy Council was going to render judgment in our favour, there is no one here today that can do any more than give a guess at what we ought to sell it for. I think that our friends in Canada are in practically the same position as to knowledge of what is down there.

There is just one word more I want to say in this connection, and that is as regards the position of the delegation. I want to explain this to the members of the House. This delegation did not go up to Canada to sell or try to sell Labrador. They did not go up even to endeavour to negotiate a sale of Labrador or any part of it. All this talk about a sale was naturally brought in by the Opposition as a means of saying something as something must be said from the Opposition standpoint. We did not go up there to sell the Labrador and come back with a bag of money in our pockets. That could not happen, because, in the first place, we would have no authority to even attempt it. Even if Canada had offered us five hundred thousand millions for Labrador the delegation had no power to even attempt to accept it. The only thing that we did was to go up there in response to the invitation that was sent us. And despite the natural interest that those who had claims were exhibiting, the Govenment took care to make clear that the conference was between the Governments of Quebec, Ottawa and Newfoundland, and no outsiders were to be represented. The Delegation only went up to ascertain, without any prejudice whatever, to our case, what possibilities there were of discussing a legal settlement. But members on both sides of this House must remember that nothing whatever can be done by any individual of the Delegation, or by the Government itself, except in the proper way through this House, so, therefore, there is nothing to be afraid of or worried about, as a certain Clergyman was accustomed to say in the course of his sermons, '|The hour has not yet come," and that is the situation at present, the hour is not yet arrived. Now I would like to refer to a remark by the honourable member for Fortune yesterday, and to support it. It is this, that through the Honourable Leader of the Opposition and many others inside and outside this House may not think so, there is such a thing as an honest lawyer, and sometimes he settles a case out of court. It may be of interest to many to know that there is more money usually in a settlement of cases outside of court, than in fighting them out in court. A good lawyer like my predecessor in office knew that he would be more than justified in expecting both fees and praise if he had been able to bring back a substantial amount of money in settlement of this claim, though all the banter is to the effect of the lawyer keeping on the case so that he can get all he can out of it. And I may add that as far as I am concerned I want a settlement of the matter, because though like all poor lawyers I badly need any fees that can be got. I would consider that the best value I could give the country would be in way of a settlement. As Mr. Warren has said we have not the control of the situation altogether in our own hands. He left office with the Newfoundland case prepared. It but remained for me to sign and have it printed. The arrangement was that when our claim was printed the Canadian case would be exchanged with us, but this did not transpire. Now on our return, so that there would be no excuse on the part of the Canadian Government to complain of delay on our side, I immediately wrote the Attorney General at Ottawa to hurry up and expedite their case, and I make the statement now that there was nothing whatever done on our part to cause delay in any way. But their case has not yet been filed, and the position is that when it is filed we shall probably have to file an answer and they another, and it is difficult to say when the matter will get to the Privy Council. I would not undertake to forecast the result. It must be remembered that Canada is just as sure of her case being right, as we are ours. Ours, it is true, looks good on paper, but I have known hockey and football teams which looked good on paper, but when they got on the field were cleaned up. As far as our case is concerned, I think the expense in connection with it has been justified, and as one who has not yet been able to get my hand in the chest, though I need the money, I must say in justice to those who have been conducting the case, that they have had to deal with a matter that is entirely different from going out and selling a fire ladder or a hose. This matter of the Labrador is one in which the territory involves is three times the size of Newfoundland, and none should regard it in any but a serious light. The question is really a tremendous one. It is not a partisan question, or one effecting only this side of the House, but one in which the people outside are most vitally interested, and anything that can do to conserve our rights must, therefore, be done. It is merely ridiculous to talk of what we have spent when we see the expenditure in Canada in connection with the same matter. Up there they have whole staffs of engineers, historical men, map men, and others, with suites of offices and the largest kind of salaries, preparing their case. And why? Simply because it is a great big matter. What amuses a lawyer is comment of the kind referred to. Why if you go on Circuit and want a case that has employed lawyers for years you will find it in one involving the possession of a few feet of ground. The desire for property is inherent in us. Now the Labrador question is a great big one, as the territory is so huge and valued at so much. It involves an area three times the size of Newfoundland. I want to say that as far as Mr. Warren and his predecessors are concerned, whatever remuneration they received is only very small indeed in proportion to the importance of the subject involved, and I say that only in justice to those who have preceded me. Now there is one other matter that I would like to clear up, and which has been referred to by the Honorable Member for Fortune. I wish to make an explanation of what might have appeared to be an interruption on my part when he was speaking yesterday. He was referring at the time to the conduct of Besco, as to the export duty on ore after the contract had been passed. As I said before when Mr. Bennett and myself as representatives of the Opposition were appointed on the committee, and joined up with others on the Government side, not alone was it a surprise to us that the Besco representatives would not sign another contract, but it appeared at first blush that the matters were so ridiculous and so difficult to follow that we agreed we should try to get a new contract drawn up. No lawyer would interpret the contract in its existing form, and it was made so intentionally. The Committee said that a clean cut one, clear and explicit, ought to be brought in. We had three things in mind, the continuity of work, the employment of the largest possible number of men, and the fixing of wages as high as possible, because if we secured these the export duty on ore would be only an incident and nothing at all in comparison to the benefits to be derived from these other factors. The more men at work the longer they worked and the higher the rate of pay, the more revenue would result. We suggested the adoption of a sliding scale of export taxation to Mr. Gillis who was here at the time as representative of Besco, the idea running through our minds being to get $250,000.00 annually from this duty. We felt that if it could be brought about that enough of ore would be mined to pay such a royalty as mentioned, then we could let the rest go free, because we would have such a large number of people employed. But what happened? We were told the contract had to go through without crossing a T or dotting an I; we came back into the House and the contract went through. Now I do not want to resurrect what happened since—as it was not the fault of those in the present Opposition—but the case to-day, as I told Mr. Wolvin in Montreal, is, whether rightly or wrongly, that the men at Bell Island have lost faith in the outfit and we will never get back again to the old conditions at that industrial centre till the popular status of the Besco concern is improved. I have no desire to review what happened after the passing of the contract, as perhaps it would not be fair because the man chiefly concerned is not now in the House. As Mr. Wolvin said to me in answer to a question when I was talking to him at Montreal, the clause in the contract relating to the smelter was ridiculous, but was put in because a politician of the day, who was a big factor in the Government, had apparently given the idea to the Besco people that, if this thing was not gone through, there was the danger of a heavier tax being put on. I said "it was absurd and ridiculous because when the House was in session it surely was a ridiculous thing to come along here and not withdraw that clause." He said "we could not withdraw that clause regarding the smelter as that was purely thrown in as a camouflage and because the Government of the day, through these who were negotiating it, wanted something nice on paper." But there was no intention to put up this smelter, and he said himself that the reason why Besco did not bother was because they were only prepared that, in the event of the smelter not being put up in five years, the tax would begin to operate; but from the moment the bill was put on the statute book, not only was not a cent paid under the contract, but history in this country shows that steps were taken to have this clause removed. Now the present Government does not want to talk fireworks and without making any suggestion as to the future I will merely say that this Government will try and see that some definite arrangement is arrived at. That contract and that Act as it is on the Statute Book is an imposition and a fraud and a joke on the people. It was never intended to be carried out, it cannot be carried out and it is impossible to carry it out. The idea suggested of bringing coal from Sydney to the electric smelting plant on Bell Island, was never intended to be lived up to. I, therefore, must subscribe to the sentiments expressed by members on the other side of the House that we try and get a new agreement drawn up and stop this annual farce. There is one thing, though, in this matter and that is that one cannot get up and idly say that this must be done and that must be done. The hard part of the position is that those people on Bell Island are like a crowd marooned. They are over there today working for less wages than they would like to get, and they are working as shovellers for less wages than they deserve to get. But, God help them, they got to work under such conditions because there is no place else for them to go now, and, if, as I said to Mr. Wolvin, there was some place else for them to go there would be nobody on Bell Island shovelling ore. But one must not lose sight of the other side of the story. We do not want Bell Island mines closed, if they can be kept open, because the day that they are closed a hardship will be inflicted upon our people. For these reasons I endorse the idea that there should be an absolutely new agreement and a thorough enquiry into Besco affairs. The position taken to-day by the miners and workmen generally in Sydney is that they refuse to have an enquiry, except an enquiry on oath. Our position here is somewhat similar and the nature of such an enquiry would be advantageous to both Sydney and Newfoundland miners. Today the position is that the officials of Besco produce their sheets and a statement of their overhead charges and expenses showing that every time they shipped ore last year they lost money on it. We do not know whether their statement is true or not and we have no means of finding out. Of course, it must be borne in mind that this ore mined on Bell Island goes in competition with ores from countries that have more up-to-date marketing methods and more modern grades of machinery. At Bell Island today the ore is mined for the purpose of mixing with ore in stockpiles in a proportion of about three to one. There are at the present time a couple of hundred thousand tons of old ore piled at Bell Island and the only hope is by mining fresh ore to raise the quality.

I did not intend to delay the debate, Mr. Speaker, but felt that the two subjects to which I have referred should have a little light thrown on them. I trust I have satisfied honourable members in this respect.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—As there is not much time to say anything more this evening, I would suggest the adjournment of this debate. I would like to have something to say and other members of the House as well before the debate ends.

Mr. Ashbourne gave notice of question.

HON. MINISTER OF FINANCE—Mr. Speaker, in reply to question No. 1 on Order Paper of February 27th, I would say that Robinson and Company and the Evening Telegram Ltd., have paid their accounts in full. Mr. Scammell, on behalf of the Union Publishing Company, has undertaken to pay their bill this week. A writ has been issued to collect from the Newfoundland Publishers, Ltd., the sum of $412.50 due by them.

Also I would like to lay upon the table of the House answer to a question asked by the Leader of the Opposition.

It was moved and seconded that when the House rises, it adjourn until Monday, the 2nd day of March at three of the clock.

The House then adjourned accordingly.

MONDAY, March 2nd.

The House met at three of the clock in the afternoon, pursuant to adjournment.

Presenting Petitions.

HON. MR. LONG—I beg leave to present a petition from the residents of Point Crewe, Chalmers, Lories and High Beach in the district of Burin, asking for a grant of two thousand dollars for the purposes of repairing the bridges and roads. I need hardly say that the bridges and roads in this section of the country are in a deplorable condition, and I trust this petition will have the earnest consideration of the Government.

I beg to ask that this petition be referred to the department to which it relates.

MR. LAKE—In reference to this petition presented by my colleague, Mr. Long, I wish to say that this place is absolutely in need of the amount asked. It is about twelve miles from any settlement. It has no communication by road with anywhere else, and the only means of getting anything there is by water, and it is a very barren coast. I would ask the department to which that petition belongs to give it every consideration, so that these people may have some sort of communication with the main road.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—I beg to present a petition from the residents of Lance Cove and Freshwater, Bell Island, asking for an allocation of about fifteen hundred dollars for the purpose of an extension to the public wharf at Lance Cove. It is needed to make an extension of about thirty feet. Some time ago the mail boat used to call at Lance Cove regularly three times a week, until the wharf was damaged. The wharf at the present time is not sufficiently far out to afford sufficient water for the boat to approach it and consequently the service had to be discontinued. This has caused much inconvenience to the people of these two settlements, who, as a consequence, have to pay excessive freights in transporting their freight by road. I commend the petition to the best attention of the Department of Marine & Fisheries.

MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE &

MINES—Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present a number of petitions from the residents of Merasheen, Isle of Valen, Rose-au-Rue and other points in Placentia Bay in connection with the improvement of the coastal service. I understand my colleague, the Hon. Mr. Sullivan, also has one from other parts of the district. There is one from the Rev. Fr. Fyme and all are very largely signed. They ask that the matter of the coastal service be taken up by the Railway Commission and improved. At various times I have discussed this matter here, but personally I think there can be no better service till the schedule of the Argyle is only for Placentia Bay—that is that she run only as far as Marystown and there connect with the Glencoe. I have also tried to get a smaller boat to ply on the other section —say from Marystown to Grand Bank or some such place so that the people there will not lose by the change. I beg leave to present the petition and I trust that a conference will be arranged so as to bring about the desired improvements. The service at the present time is altogether inadequate—it is just the same as when the Argyle was put on the route and though the population and trade have increased the facilities are only the same and the people have not been able to enlarge their business as they would have done with the improved service. We often have demands made on us for the boat to make special trips in order to handle the traffic, but under existing conditions these requests have to be turned down. I therefore hope this petition will receive the most earnest consideration of the Government.

HON. MR. SULLIVAN—Mr. Speaker, I have much pleasure in giving my heartiest support to the petition presented by my colleague, the Minister of Agriculture & Mines. The trouble is that the Argyle has more work than she can do and until her route is shortened the people will be under difficulties in getting their mails and freight. The suggestion is that the ship ply only from Argentia to Marystown and back, calling of course at intermediate ports. I have also a petition from the people of Bar Haven and other points to the same effect and I beg that it be fyled with those of my colleague.

MR. SINNOTT—I also wish to give these petitions my heartiest support, Mr. Speaker, and hope that they will be given every consideration by the Government.

Notice of Motion and Question.

HON. THE COLONIAL SECRETARY—Mr. Speaker, I beg to table the answer to question of Mr. Brown, No. 2 on the Order Paper of February 26th.

I also wish to table the answer to question of Mr. Godden on February 25th.

Mr. Scammel gave notice of question (1), (2), (3), (4).

HON. THE COLONIAL SECRETARGY—Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to table a statement of the expenditure and revenue of the Municipal Council for 1924.

Mr. Duff gave notice of question.

Answers to Questions

(1) MR. SCAMMELL asked Hon. the Minister of Posts and Telegraphs what new telephone offices, if any, have been opened in each electoral district in the country since April 30th last, and to show the cost in each case of establishing such telephone offices; also to ask like information regarding telegraph and wireless station officcs.

HON. THE MINISTER OF POSTS —The answer to this question will take some time to prepare, but I may say it is in course of preparation and I will have it ready in a few days.

(2) MR. HALFYARD asked Hon. the Minister of Posts and Telegraphs to lay on the Table of the House a statement giving: (a) the names of all new officials appointed from June 9th, 1924, to date, in any branch of the Posal or Postal Telegraphs Department, at the General Post Office, the East End Post Office, or any other Postal or Postal Telegraph Office in the city; (b) the date of each such appointment, and the salary paid each new official; (c) if any position in the General Post Office, or any other Postal Telegraph Offic in the city has become vacant; state the cause of each such vacancy; (d) if any of the officials have been promoted; state particulars with names, and the increase in salary, if any, in each case; (e) if one or more officials have been disrated; give the name, or names, and the reasons for such, and the decrease, if any, in salary as a result of such disrating.

HON. THE MINISTER OF POSTS —I beg to table the statement.

(3) MR. BROWN asked Hon. the Minister of Posts and Telegraphs to name "the parties interested" who recommended the appointment of the present Mail Couriers at Exploits.

HON. THE MINISTER OF POSTS —I may say in reply that these gentlemen were appointed on the recommendation of Mr. Ayre and Mr. Hickman.

(4) MR. SCAMMELL asked Hon. the Minister of Posts and Telegraphs: (a) if his Department has as yet decided on the amount to be paid per trip to Herbert Caines, Mail Courier between Parsons' Pond and Bellburn's, in the District of St. Barbe; (b) the name of the Mail Courier employed on the route between Hampden and Jackson's Arm, White Bay; (c) to furnish a list of Mail Couriers in the District of St. Barbe who are employed all the year round and to show route on which each Courier is employed and price paid per trip per week in each case.

HON. THE MINISTER OF POSTS —I beg to table the answer.

ORDER OF THE DAY.

ADDRESS IN REPLY.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER— Mr. Speaker, the motion in connection with the Address in Reply has now been debated for a week, and I do not propose to keep the House any longer in getting it off the order paper, so that progress can be made in the way of further business. It is a matter of great gratification to the Government, that the Speech has been dealt with at such length, and so fully by the Honourable Members of the Opposition with such little criticism. Whether it is due to the benign season of Lent, or whether it is that I am not so sensitive as I was last session, it appears to me that a much better feeling exists in the House to-day than there was last Session and I thank the Honourable the Leader of the Opposition for his statement, that if we propose to pass measures which are right and beneficial to the people of the country, he will be the very first to laud us, and to show appreciation of our work. A gentleman came to me and said I was a fool to be in politics because, said he, the country will give you no credit for what you do right, and blame you for what you do wrong. He did not know what he was talking about, because according to his own expression, the Honourable the Leader of the Opposition himself proposes to be the trumpeter of the Government during the next three and a half years. The gentlemen of the Opposition in discussing the Address in Reply have stated that there is considerable Legislation yet to be introduced in this House, and it is of great interest to note how well posted they are in the details of a Bill that has not yet been presented—how many Districts the country is to be divided into, how many members there are to be, and where they are to stand for. They almost know all about the reduction on the Banks Tax, and the Honourable the Leader of the Opposition even knows more than myself, as to the introduction of a Bill dealing with the cull of fish. Now that is one subject I will never introduce a Bill to deal with. For the last thirty years I have been sitting at round table conferences, attending Board of Trade Sessions and fishery meetings, to discuss as to whether the merchants could come together in some way on this question of cull of fish, whether in St. John's or elsewhere, but I think it will be generally conceded that after all the hours of discussion we were never any further ahead than before. I think Mr. Hickman will recognize with me how impossible it is to do anything in that connection. Mr. Hickman has evidently been misinformed. Some exporter imagines he has passed the birch to us, but I can tell Mr. Hickman and the exporters that they have another guess coming to them and that they have to work out their own difficulties for themselves. If they want anything done, let them work out a scheme, report to us and then we will see what can be done afterwards in the way of legislation. The honourable member for Trinity, Mr. Halfyard, spoke for three hours a few days ago and though one hour was devoted to the subject for the codfishery I really do not know of one constructive suggestion that he made in all his remarks. He thought that there should be Fishery Commissioners appointed for the foreign markets. The honourable member for Fogo, Mr. Hibbs, also thought that we ought to have Commissioners to sell our fish. Now if we have any Commissioners at all we should not have them to sell our fish. I have been in the codfish business pretty well all my life and I have never required anybody to sell my fish for me. I have an agent in every place where our fish is sold and I am quite satisfied with the work they are doing. We do not want men in the foreign markets to sell our fish, although it may be alright to have men who are interested in the fishery to try and get us in communication with any new markets. We have had our experience of Fishery Commissioners under the Fish Regulations, which were thrown down because they did not have the endorsation of the Trade, and because the Trade was not behind them. Mr. Allan Goodridge was sent by Sir William Coaker a couple of years ago to Peru to investigate conditions and find out what the possibilities were for opening up a new market there for Newfoundland codfish. He made that investigation, presented an elaborate report, but I do not know if anybody read it or not. The report was sent out by the Department of Marine and Fisheries, and the result is that there has not been a single quintal of fish sent to Peru since Mr. Goodridge came home. So I say that the appointment of Fishery Commissioners is not a thing that appeals to me. Mr. Taylor, who was here last Summer as referred to by Captain Winsor, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, recommended that four Commissioners be appointed. The Fishery Board sat on it and they decided that such a proposition was extravagant and they suggested to the Executive that a roving Commissioner be appointed to do all the markets. The Government was not very enthusiastic about this roving Commissioner, as a roving Commissioner may be very hard to find at times, hence the proposition did not commend itself to us. I had a letter from a Mr. Cobb, a Director of the College of Fisheries, a man who is well versed in the canning industry, stating that he is prepared to send us a man to assist in getting our canning industry under way. Captain Gosse, who gave a lecture here last year, stated that our small herring and caplin should be tinned and that canned salmon should be a great industry here, but that more uniformity of size was required. The Minister of Marine and Fisheries will agree with me that the salmon canning industry is one that we should give more attention to during the coming year. Mr. Hickman, the other day, spoke of a little booklet issued by a Mr. Huntsman, which is an eye-opener to me. Here is a paragraph from it: (Reads paragraph regarding temperature of the water.)

I have been supplying fishermen for the past thirty years and I had them asking me for everything from a needle to an anchor; but I never heard of a fisherman wanting to be supplied with a thermometer when going fishing, and, according to Mr. Huntsman, it is the first essential article fishermen should take to the fishery with them. If this theory is correct, and a man has to get the temperature of the water before putting his traps in the water, I think it is well worth consideration, and any schooners going to prosecute the fishery next summer should have thermometers to bring along with them.

Mr. Hickman also referred to the West India service, and said that it was absolutly essential for steamers to take our fish direct to the West Indies, and he wound up by saying that everybody in the trade sat upon it. Mr. Hickman reminds me very much of the juror who said that he never met eleven more obstinate men. I say with the rest of the trade, it is not necessary to ship our fish direct to the West Indies by steamer. I shipped as much fish as anyone to the West Indies during the past year, and I got absolute satisfaction, though it was sent through Halifax and New York. We cannot subsidize steamers at present because we cannot afford to. That is all I have to say on that matter just now.

I would also like to say a word or two on the Agricultural situation, because I appreciate the interest that the Minister, Mr. Walsh, is taking in his department. He wrote a letter to me some time ago and asked me if I would call a few members of the Council together for the purpose of formulating an Agricultural policy. I told him there was no need of such a meeting as I did not know anything about agriculture. I told him to get in touch with a few expert local farmers and see if they had a few good suggestions to offer. He did so and some of the suggestions advanced appealed to us and some others did not. There was one good point brought out by Mr. Hickman in his speech and that was that we should have better facilities for storage of our vegetables. There was another by Captain Courtney who thought we should have some protection for our vegetables, and another was that we should have cheaper transport along our own railway line. Now when we get people growing three or four hundred barrels of turnips and potatoes in Salvage, they should not be charged an exorbitant rate to get them to Corner Brook. We should carry such vegetables over the railway line as cheaply as possible. The same applies to hay. We should charge a minimum for the carrying of hay over the railway lines, thus encouraging the growing of hay, without any expense to the Colony, and I hope we shall be able to do so.

Just a word also about the Humber and the logging industry. I think it is a very dangerous attitude to assume to criticize unfairly or rashly the Humber proposition, because we have to remember that we are shareholders in it, and, if anything happens to that industry, we suffer with the rest of the shareholders Of course, there may be reasons for criticizing some things done out there. We heard a lot of talk and a lot of criticism at last session about matters on the Humber; but we have a good Company in the Armstrong-Whitworth people, whose name is world renowned, and they are people who can be depended on for a square deal, and the fact that they are spending thirty millions of dollars in that industry, instead of twenty millions, is to their credit and to our benefit,— to our benefit because we were security for ten millions, and now we have more security there than before. We ought to think a lot of the Armstrong-Whitworth people because they have put an extra ten million dollars of their own money in that industry, as well as for other reasons. We have heard a lot of outside labourers being brought in to work in that region. I can quite understand the temperament and the feelings of Newfoundlanders in this connection when the outsiders are no better workers than our own people, and I can readily understand how the trouble came about. Some of the sub-contractors of the Armstrong Company, who wanted to get some special work done and done quickly, brought down men with them from Canada and paid a special wage, and that is why, in some cases, that some people from outside, experts in their line, got more pay than some of our Newfoundlanders. But as things go on, Mr. Speaker, very shortly you will find that there will be no outsiders employed on the Humber. Last Fall they were asking for three hundred loggers and we could not get our own people to go at this work. Captains Butler and Byrne were unable to find enough loggers to go in the woods, and, accordingly, the contractors imported men to do the work because they wanted the timber cut as quickly as possible and did not want to fall down on their contracts in supplying the people they were dealing with, and I think I would have done the same thing if the business had been mine. The result was that French Canadians came down to do the work and have been scattered around the various camps. As Mr. Warren said in his report, those French Canadians are all men of experience in this kind of work, and a large percentage of our men are not experiencd in it. They do not profess to be. They are fishermen and not loggers. If they get a number of Canadian expert lumbermen among a number of non-expert lumber-men then our people will be able to learn the lumbering business as well as anybody else in the world. I do not think, Mr. Speaker, that it is going to be any harm at all, if we get a certain number of imported lumbermen. The Armstrong Whitworth people have said that the Canadian lumbermen would not get one dollar more than our men. They have their passages paid down and back if they stay a certain length of time. I think six months. Our men can get their passages back and forth also if they will agree to stay that time.

I would like to say a word about the steamer for the Gulf. The Leader of the Opposition has said that if we had got the assistance of the Trades Facilities Board in building this steamer we could have got her built ten thousand pounds cheaper in England than in Holland. But Mr. Hickman seems to have forgotten to read the message which was sent to the Trade Commissioner in London asking whether we could get the assistance of the Board in the building of the ship, the reply to which was that they did not think they could advance the assistance because they said that a steamer was not a public utility. I do not know how they can argue that, but I know that Mr. Baldwin, the Conservative Leader and the Leader of the Government in the British House of Commons, said recently in the House, and Mr. Sullivan happened to be there at the time, that they would have to extend the Trade Facilities to the building of steamers also. That was after the contract for the ships had been signed, and having closed the contract when we did we could not have gotten the assistance. We did get assistance for the order of fifteen thousand tons of rails which we have placed with an English firm, but we do not receive very much advantage, because if we had placed the order in Germany we could have done nearly as well. Under the present condition we are doing about five thousand dollars better with the aid of the facility than we could do in Germany on this fifteen thousand tons of rails. Of course if we were to lose five thousand dollars by giving the order to a British firm we would rather do it than give the order in Germany after having the ship built in Holland. With regard to the dock, we have as I explained the other day another expert looking over the proposition. It looks as if we are going to have to spend a great deal of money on the dock. We are at present waiting for the second expert to make his recommendations, we are waiting to see what they both have to say on the subject. All I can say is that everything will be brought before the House in connection with this matter and all will have the opportunity to express an opinion on it.

The Public Enquiry has been commented upon to some extent. I think that it was the Hon. member for Fortune Bay who said that we should not publish the results of our investigation without giving the names of people and all details. I do not agree with him in that respect. We want to keep the public aware of what we are doing. We want to let them know what we are finding as well as we can. We are not seeking political kudos. We are having these publications made just to let the people know that things are so, and that we are doing it to get things better. If Mr. Warren's district of Fortune Bay did not spend as much money on doctors' bills as other Districts we want the people of the other Districts to become as good as the people of Fortune Bay. In connection with the public institutions we find that hundreds of people have been coming here to go into the hospital when there was no room for them. Boarding house after boarding house was being filled with sick patients, and the Government had to pay the doctors' bill and their board. It would be very much better for them to remain at home and await their turn, which has to be done in any case.

One word on the unemployment. Nobody feels more distressed about people being out of employment than I do myself, and the members of the Government. We certainly feel very sympathetic. But it is not the duty of the Government to find employment for every man out of work. Let that be clearly understood. It is the duty of the Government to give every encouragement to the industries that employ labour. It is not the duty of the Government, if they find a man out of a job, to give him employment. Of course, if he is starving they should give him assistance. Now in the course of the investigations that have been made we have been told that there are not so many people badly off as there were last year, but that those that are badly off are more badly off than they were last year. It is probable that if the Government were to give such employment as the Rock Sheds, that the people most in need would not be the people to get help at all. We know that the people do not like receiving the dole, and we do not like offering it, but we cannot let the people starve and we do not know of anything else to do. It is hoped to put some men to work on the dock when the report is submitted. This should be about the first of April. But, Mr. Speaker, it has been remarked that the people of St. John's have not the same independent spirit of years ago. A number of people have lost their independence. They have acquired the habit of looking to the Government for assistance and the Government is being looked to. Nothing is easier than for the Government to throw out money right and left, but as the custodians of the people's money it is our duty to see that it is spent to the best advantage of the people of the country.

I would like to say a word on the Labrador Boundary. My friend, the Attorney General, has given a little information on that and I would like to add a little more. When we went up to Monteal we found ourselves up against one big question, and that was the sovereignity of the coast. Mr. Warren stated the other day something about twenty-five million dollars being mentioned as a price for the Labrador, but he did not say to what extent the sovereignty of the coast was involved. We found the delegates were strong on that point. Any sale, they declared, must embrace the sovereignty of the coast. It was largely on that account that we did not get very much farther than we did, and we had to come back and consult our colleagues in the Executive. The result was that I wrote a long letter to Mr. Taschereau, giving him a description of the various interests in the Labrador. There was provision to be made for the small fisherman who goes down in the steamer and builds his hut on the shore and sells his fish on the Labrador coast. Then there is the planter who owns property and imports his goods direct to the coast. We pointed out that we wanted these people taken care of and asked for suggestions about it. Mr. Taschereau, however, put that aside by saying that they would all be looked after and enquired as to what would be the price. Now it is very hard to fix a price, if you do not know what you are selling. It has been submitted to me since we have come back from Montreal that the question of the boundary line can still be taken up again and that Quebec will be willing to accept three miles from the coast. If Quebec would be willing to agree to this we might be willing to sell the property at a great deal less than if the sovereignty of the coast were included. I think that that is the principal consideration with us. The fishermen must be protected. We have got to remember that the Labrador property is very big. It is a hundred and twenty thousand square miles. And we have to give a little consideration before we enter into any arrangement. Quebec has got water powers capable of developing seven or eight million horsepower, and if she had the Labrador she would have four million more. That is a very valuable asset. It is very valuable to them, more to them perhaps than to us, and all that I can say is that in the negotiations that will take place we will make the best arrangements we can and then submit them to the consideration of the House.

Mr. Ashbourne in referring to the Speech from the Throne spoke about the policy of "Clean Up." We are doing some cleaning up, but as I told the House before it may take four years to clean up, but we have begun, and I don't say that we are particularly proud of the progress that we have made, but we have begun in the right direction. Sir John Crosbie has done a lot of cleaning up in the Custom House. We have got the Post Office on fairly good lines. We have got Colonel Ross putting in a new system up there, I believe it is going to be effective. Colonel Ross has suggested the appointment of a postmaster for St. John's. Mr. Milley is taking the position. Mr. LeMessurier has retired, Mr. Martin has retired at his own suggestion, and Mr. Devereaux has retired. They are remaining on for one month, however, to give assistance to those following them. Their successors are promotions in the Post Office Department itself. I would like to encourage that sort of thing. I would like to see every man in every departmnet move up instead of having politicians put over their heads. It discourages them.

Mr. Speaker, I don't propose to take up any more of the time of this House this afternoon. I simply wish to make these few responses to the criticisms from the other side of the House, and to say that we believe that in the few years we have still to go we will be able to make a fairly decent showing in the policy of cleaning up.

On motion the Address in Reply was adopted, and it was ordered that the said Reply be presented to His Excellency the Governor at His Excellency's convenience.

Second Reading of Bill Respecting the Lobster Fishery.

MR. WARREN—Mr. Speaker, I wish to make a suggestion. There are 14 bills on the order paper for their second reading. I suggest to the leader of the House the advisability of distributing these bills now. I understand they are printed and ready for circulation. I think we would save time in the end. Some of the bills are of prime importance, and it is hard to expect members to take them up in the second reading, having seen the bill only five minutes before. We don't know any of its provisions until the bill is going through second reading. In fact, in Canada an explanation of the bill is given on its introduction. I suggest the advisability of having the bills distributed when they are printed so that we may be prepared to debate them more competently.

MR. HICKMAN—I agree with the member for Fortune Bay with regard to the Bills being distributed. It gives us members an opportunity to think them over, to read and study them. Perhaps at times on account of not having read the bill we ask to have the reading postponed. It would greatly facilitate the progress of the House.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—We would be very glad to assist the business of the House, but these Bills are not printed long enough for our own side to see them. I would like our own party to be familiar with them before the distribution. However, I quite see the point. I would be very happy to have the bills distributed before they are read the second time. As far as we can we will do it.

MR. SCAMMELL—Before proceeding with any remarks I would like first to add a word to what has already been said with reference to the fact that we do not have Bills placed in our hands until they come up for the second reading, and as the second reading invariably comes off true to schedule, members have very little opportunity to look into new provisions. I submit that we ought to have a little more time before proceeding with the second reading after Bills are distributed. This is a matter, of course, for the Leader of the Government. I merely support the point raised by Mr. Warren.

Now Mr. Speaker, to proceed with this Bill respecting the Lobster Fishery. Apparently the Government has decided to go ahead with the policy of prohibiting the prosecution of the lobster fishery in the District of St. Barbe this year and the next three years. I asked the other day, in my remarks on the Address in Reply, if the Government would reconsider their action in this connection, and I rise now, Sir, to further urge that position. With all due respect to the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, with all due respect to the very admirable case that he made out for a close season for the next three years, I am not satisfied that the majority of people who are interested in the lobster fishery have been as thoroughly consulted as the Minister would have us believe. In fact, within the last day or two I have received messages from the West side of St. Barbe asking me if the Government intends to proceed with the close season this year. I replied that to all intents and purposes the Government intends to proceed with the close season this year. I replied that to all intents and purposes the Government intends to proceed with its legislation. Captain Winsor said that his Fishery Board had been deluged with requests for the close season for lobsters. I don't believe that Captain Winsor can produce letters calling for the close season for lobsters from six influential people in St. Barbe District. I challenge Captain Winsor to do so. The District of St. Barbe is the one district chiefly interested in the lobster fishery. Capt. Winsor pointed out that the Government would be able to put something in its place. Something that will supply a lack of labour and loss from the close season, but the Captain does not tell what the Government proposed to supply to make up for the deficiency.

I cannot, Mr. Speaker, see the urgent necessity for the close season, for lobsters without having given a greater length of notice to the people primarily connected with the industry. The Minister of Marine and Fisheries made reference to the lucrative lobster fishery near his own home some years ago. It is true that lobster fishery has dwindled and is almost gone, but, in my humble opinion, Sir, the fact that we are going to have a close season on lobsters is not going in any way to increase or enhance the value of the lobster fishery as regards the catch or price. The Minister quoted figures to show that the lobster fishery has dwindled. Mr. Speaker, I submit that these figures as we have them today, and as they stand for the past decade, are not such figures as can lead us to any definite conclusion as regards the lobster fishery. I have figures before me for 1912-13, 1922 and 1923. In 1912-13 there were 26,047 cases of lobsters packed. These figures are from the Finance Minister's budget speech. In the following year 1913-14, there was a decline of one thousand, the next year 1914-15 they jumped from 25,000 to 26,000. It goes up again in 1915-16. In 1920 and 1921 there were 12,450 cases. What I wish to impress on the House and the Government is that the figures form no criterion that we cannot come to any safe conclusion from the presence of the facts as outlined in the figures. We had a fishery last year. I don't remember the figures. We will presume you had a lobster fishery of 3,000 cases. According to these figures we might easily expect a lobster fishery next year of say ten thousand cases. Again, I say the figures as we have them here are no criterion as to what we may expect from year to year. I have merely risen this afternoon to urge on the Government that they ought not to proceed with this legislation. This close season ought to be delayed for for at least twelve months. Probably I am the only member who is keenly interested in the lobster fishery from this side. I owe it to my constituency. I want to go on record as protesting against the Government's action in bringing this into effect this year. If the Government is anxious to conserve the Lobster fishery, why not revert to the system of proportion and conservation. Some years ago, we spent some 10 or 15 thousand dollars in protection of the lobster fishery in that way. The system was that paid officials went round the coast and bought up the small and the spawn lobsters and released them again.

In my opinion, if the Government is anxious as it appears to be to conserve the interests of the lobster fishery, they could have done something very more practical, very much more beneficial, less drastic and more likely to meet the object which they have in view, than bringing in a Bill to create a close season at this time.

In the year 1921-1922 we were obliged for reasons of economy to remove the vote to which I have referred for the protection of the lobster fishery from the estimates. We did not want to do it, but it was absolutely necessary to reduce expenditure. All around people were clamouring for it and we decided that one of the things that had to go was this vote for the protection of the lobster fishery.

At that time, I remember the late Mr. McDonnell, who was then honourable member for St. George's District, protesting against the vote being removed from the estimates, but the then Minister of Marine and Fisheries, Sir William Coaker, saw no other course open but to remove it. There had to be a substantial reduction in expenditure, and he felt that he was obliged to resort to this action. I deplored it at the time, but it was a matter of public necessity as against private gratification, if I may use the expression, and the vote went.

But now that the Government finds itself in such a satisfactory financial condition, I feel that a better way for the Government to conserve the lobster fishery would be to resort to the old time method of placing a vote in the estimates for the protection of the lobster fishery. A great deal more could be done for the thorough protection and propagation for the benefit of the lobster fishing industry by reverting to that system than by passing the Bill to create a close season such as is proposed today.

MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES—Mr. Speaker, in reply to the honourable member for St. Barbe, I may say that so far as this Bill is concerned what I stated here before is that this Bill has had quite a deal of consideration by the Fishery Board, and after considering the bill in all its aspects, the Board came to the conclusion that it was in the best interests of this country that the lobster fishery be closed down for three years.

I think I stated here the other day that I only had one telegram or letter from anybody in St. Barbe District or in St. George's District, but I then forgot to say that I had a personal interview with Mr. Stephen Taylor of Bonne Bay, and he was not so much against the closing down of the lobster fishery, but he was discussing the question of the disposal of the gear which he said the people had on hand. True, I have not had very many letters from St. Barbe, either for or against the Bill. I had one letter, and one private conversation with two men from that district, and I have had no other letters either for or against. But all over the country we have had numerous communications and letters, and we were asked to allow the district of St. Barbe to continue catching lobster for the next twelve months; but the Board gave that matter its consideration, and after giving it all the consideration that was possible, it was decided unanimously that the fishery should close down for three years all over the country.

I made a statement the other day that the Government had anticipated bringing in something else to relieve the people in that district who depend so much upon the lobster fishery. I was up through that district the past summer, probably when Mr. Scammell was not there, and I have been up and down the shore from Flowers Cove to Port Saunders, and to my own knowledge there were scores of people that were existing on what they got from the lobster fishery, and only barely existing on it.

I make the same statement now that I made the other day, which is, I consider that there has been no more opportune time in the history of this country for the closing down of the lobster fishery than today. The fishery last year—the cod fishery—was carried on by a smaller number of men than for many years before, and this year we want all men that we can possibly get to carry on the fishery. The Lobster Fishery is depleted, in spite of all that Mr. Scammell has said, because the figures show that it has been depleting year after year.

Nine men out of every ten who were running the lobster fishery last year did not make half enough to pay their ordinary expenses, besides keeping themselves and their families, whereas those who prosecuted the cod fishery did well.

It is a known fact all over this country that if something is not done to protect these lobsters that the lobster fishery will soon be a thing of the past. We have received all kinds of complaints from the markets to which we sell our lobsters, some saying that they are too small, some saying other things. It is easily seen that our lobster fishery is becoming a thing of the past, and I cannot understand how a member of the House of Assembly can stand up and ask the Government today to stop protecting the lobster fishery, in view of what has happened during the last eighteen or twenty years, just because a portion of his district wants to catch lobsters. If that had come as a petition from Bonavista Bay, I would not have supported it, because I do not consider that I would be doing justice to the country in which I was born.

I am sorry that I was away when Mr. Scammell was speaking. I went downstairs purposely to get the total catch and number of men employed in the lobster fishery last year. Mr. Hickman asked for that information the other day. I got that information and passed it over to him. But Mr. Hickman tells me that he has not got it with him today. I am sorry that he has not got it, but I am perfectly sure from memory that the lobster fishery last year went as low as three thousand and some odd cases, and I think that it is a pretty low figure for the industry in this country.

As one of the members of the Fishery Board and of this Government, I personally think that before twelve months have passed, even the people of St. Barbe will give credit to the people that brought in this Bill for the closing down of the lobster fishery for three years.

I stated here the other day that quite a number of people were asking that the fishery be closed down for five years, but the Board thought otherwise, and made it three years.

I think Mr. Scammell made some reference when I was away to putting back the protection law. I am sorry to say that I find in this country that it is a hard proposition for the Government to carry out the laws of the land in reference to the fishery. It was stated here during the last session of the House that it was impossible to carry out the liquor laws, and I think that the lobster laws were very similar.

Mr. Speaker, personally I am fully persuaded that the best thing that can be done for the majority of this country is to have a close season for lobsters during the next three years. Surely these people have had lots of notice to get ready for the codfishery. Mr. Scammell said that some of these people may not get supplies this year. Surely the men who supplied, or would have supplied them for the lobster fishery, where they made so little, will be prepared to supply them for the cod fishery at the price that fish is fetching in this colony at the present time.

Again I would say that the Government of the day is seeing that these people who have been prosecuting the lobster fishery will not starve, but will be able to look after themselves and their families for the next twelve months.

MR. HALFYARD—Mr. Speaker, I do not think there is anyone that will disagree with the principle of putting a bill on the statute book that will conserve the fishery, whether lobster or any other fishery; but I think that the point taken up by the honourable member for St. Barbe should have the consideration of the House, and that is, that these men who prosecute the fishery—the lobster fishery—in St. Barbe or any other part of the country, from which they largely derive their livelihood, will be subjected to great hardship in not being able to continue it this year, and I understand that many of them are not able bodied men, as this industry is mainly carried on by the old men and boys. These can do this work, but could not engage at anything of a harder nature. If the Government, as intimated by the Minister of Marine and Fisheries can find something else to do for those who prosecute this fishery, and who depend solely on it, then all right. Of course, if it were a big corporation sending in a petition or protest, because they would lose a lot of money, their appeal would be listened to, but these men cannot do that, and their side of the matter can only be ventilated by their representatives on this side of the House. If the Government is sincere as to compensating these people by providing something else, of which they can obtain a livelihood, all right. Perhaps there is need of a close season to protect the lobster as they may be killed out, but we have heard a lot of Governments taking steps to do this thing or that, and of having matters under consideration, but if we would state definitely what steps they propose to undertake so that this hardship would not be inflicted on the people, all would be happy over the thought of the Government doing what is right in the interests of this fishery, and of the people of the country. I am sure that my honorable friend, Mr. Scammell, the representative of the district of St. Barbe, which is so vitally concerned, if sure, that these people would have a substitute industry, or way of earning a living provided, would be fully satisfied.

CAPT. RANDELL—Mr. Speaker, I have listened with great interest to the discussion of the Bill now before the House, and I would like to say that as far as the lobster industry is concerned I do not know much personally, but I have consulted people interested in it during the last few days as to this Bill, and have obtained their views on the subject. I find there is a general feeling that the lobster fishery should be restricted as the catch is growing less and less as the years go by. As far as I can gather, those to whom I have been speaking think that protection could be brought about by restricting the time at which lobsters should be taken. Last year in one place I know that some men engaged in this industry cleared twenty-five hundred dollars by the first of June, and then started in at the codfishery. I would like to ask the Minister of Marine and Fisheries and the Government if consideration could not be given to restriction in that way—that is allow the industry to go on up to a certain time, and then close down for the balance of the year. Now the Minister of Marine and Fisheries says it is often very hard to enforce a law made in regard to fisheries, and that in some instances laws cannot be carried out. I do not know if he said that in so many words, but that was the trend of his remarks. He cited the liquor law as instance. As far as I am concerned, I take it that that is undoubtedly a confession of weakness on the part of those in authority. The Bill was brought before the House and passed, and we as a people have to acknowledge that it is not enforced. If the law was made and is a benefit to the country generally, I cannot see why it cannot be enforced. I think one law can be enforced as well as another, if it is handled in a proper way. I think that this Bill should be given consideration as to the operation of the fishery up to a certain time, and then closing for the balance of the year.

MR. SCAMMELL—Mr. Speaker, I do not wish to make any extended remarks, as it would be out of order just now for me to do so, having spoken already on this matter, but I would like to point out that what I asked for was, that the application of the law be withheld for one year. As I said before, there is much difference of opinion as to this close season among the people of my district, and I may say that I am myself in accord with steps for the Preservation of the fishery. I merely asked that the Government stop the application of the law for a year, as the people are not prepared at present to turn to any other form of fishery, and nothing else in the way of employment is available to them.

Pursuant to order and on motion of The Minister of Marine & Fisheries the Bill entitled "An Act respecting the Lobster Fishery" was read a second time, and it was ordered that the said Bill be referred to a Committee of the Whole House on tomorrow.

Second reading of Bill entitled "An Act to amend Chapter 25 of the Consolidated Statutes (3rd Series) entitled "Of Light Dues" was deferred.

Second reading of Bill entitled "An Act to Amend 11 George V., Cap. 45, entitled "An Act to Incorporate the Women's Patriotic Trust Fund and for other Purposes."

HONORABLE THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Mr. Speaker, in moving the second reading of this Bill, I might say that it practically speaks for itself. It is a result of an application from the Members of the Women's Patriotic Trust Fund addressed to me last October by Mrs. W. G. Gosling, Honorary Secretary of the W. P. A. Trust Fund. In explanation I will read the letter.

(Reads Letter).

In other words the Women's Patriotic Association went out of existence, and there is now only this fund, and the Bill is only to assist those who are giving voluntary service in carrying on and in helping cases which deserve assistance. I, therefore, move the second reading.

Pursuant to order and on motion of Hon. the Minister of Justice the Bill entitled "An Act to Amend 11 George V., Cap. 45, entitled "An Act to Incorporate the Women's Patriotic Trust Fund and for other Purposes" was read a second time, and it was ordered that the said Bill be referred to a Committee of the Whole House on to-morrow.

Second reading of Bill entitled "An Act Further to Amend the Act 61 Victoria Cap. 47, entitled "An Act relating to the Constitution of the Supreme Court, and the Acts in in amendment thereof."

HONORABLE THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Mr. Speaker, this Bill is really to give effect legally to what has been done since 1921. The salaries of the Judges are voted by statute, and as some of the members of the Opposition know, the amount fixed by statute was increased in the Estimates but the statute was never amended. We are only remedying now what was probably an oversight and giving it effect as from 1921 There is nothing more to be said on this Bill as I think the members of the Opposition are acquainted with it. The salaries have been appearing as voted by statute while they really were not.

Pursuant to order and on motion of Hon. the Minister of Justice the Bill entitled "An Act Further to Amend the Act 61, Victoria, Cap. 47, entitled "An Act relating to the Constitution of the Supreme Court, and the Acts in Amendment thereof," was read a second time, and it was ordered that the said Bill be referred to a Committee of the Whole House on to-morrow.

Second reading of Bill entitled "An Act Respecting Companies."

HONOURABLE THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Mr. Speaker, in moving the second reading of this Bill I want to apologize to the House, particularly to the lay members of it, for this formidable Bill, although it is really not so formidable as it looks, even though it contains some three hundred pages of printed matter; but, if honourable members feel like spending the Summer here, they can read it through. By way of explanation there is nothing to be worried about in the Bill. I had prepared a resume so as to put in tabloid form what the meaning of the Bill is for the information of the House generally.

General Purpose.

The Act is introduced chiefly for the purpose of consolidating the local laws as to Companies and to make additions thereto in order that the whole Companies law of the Colony may be brought up to date and in conformity with the Company laws of England, after which our laws are patterned.

Importance.

The Bill is one of considerable length and many of its sections will be of interest only to the legal members of the House. However, the Bill as a whole is of great importance to the business community as the modern tendency is towards the incorporation of business, manufacturing and other concerns. Although the Companies Act is introduced from the standpoint of lawyers, I think that business men will appreciate that nothing is of so much concern to laymen as the law and the working out of the machinery of the Companies Act. The Bill now submitted to the House amounts to nothing more or less than the bringing of the Companies law up to date. Little time need be spent in considering the Bill by reason of the fact that it is the work of the late administration. My predecessor in the office of the Attorney General, Mr. Warren, together with Mr. Justice Johnson and Mr. Justice Kent were appointed to take up this matter to amend the Companies Act, and we have today before you for consideration an Act, even if bulky in size, that will afford the country satisfaction, particularly in regard to its completeness of form. It will now be possible for Directors of Companies to have at hand the various forms respecting the various matters that arise to a degree more than before. I think I might as well summarize the position with the notes I have here:

Advantages.

There is no need to dwell at length on the advantages of incorporation as all honourable members must be aware of the benefits that accrue therefrom. The fundamental advantage is the separation of private assets from business assets and the Limitation of Liability. A man's liability in a Company is limited to the amount of shares he subscribes for. In addition there is the advantage of simplicity in arriving at the value of one's interest in a company and the transfer of same. Shares in companies can be easily transferred and the business continue. The shares of well established manufacturing and public utility companies have a market price. Capital is obtained from people who could not by themselves engage in business. Many companies have hundreds of small shareholders.

Development.

Our laws are based on the Act of 1899 and in the following year 14 companies were incorporated,—Bowring Bros. Ltd., being first on the list, which included Masonic Hall Joint Stock Company and the Newfoundland British Society. Since then many companies were incorporated each year and there are now hundreds of corporate bodies doing business in the Colony. Naturally with the increase in the number of companies and the problems confronting them came the necessity for amendments to the Act. Many have been made from time to time, but it follows that even though this measure will meet present requirements future amendments will be necessary. However, we have had the experience of over a quarter of a century, and the present Act is based on the lessons learnt from these experiences, and is an earnest attempt to meet all the problems that have been the cause of doubt and litigation in the past. There is nothing radical contained in the Act and the present machinery under which companies have been operating for so many years have been interfered with as little as possible, and there is nothing in it that any layman need feel any concern about. It is divided into nine parts, as follows:

1. The constitution and incorporation of companies;
2. The distribution and reduction of share capital; the registration of unlimited company as limited and unlimited liability as directors.
3. The management and administration of companies.
4. The winding up of companies.
5. The application of this Act to companies already registered.
6. Companies authorized to register under this Act.
7. Winding up of unregistered companies.
8. Companies established outside Newfoundland.
9. Legal proceedings, etc.

By the Way.

Members will notice in brackets at end of sections certain figures, for example (1908 s.21). These relate to the English Companies' Acts. As stated before, our laws are based on the English and it is convenient to refer to English Acts, on which perhaps important decisions by English Courts and Privy Council have been given.

Registry of Companies.

Frequent references are made in the Act to Registry and Registrar of companies. Formerly the office was in the Registry of the Supreme Court. Death duties have increased each year, necessitating increase of staff and the place has grown to quite a Department. I say this in justice to the illness of Mr. George Adams, a thoroughly competent official, and to the gentleman, Mr. Maddick, who has been carrying on Mr. Adams' work. Legal gentlemen of the House will endorse that statement.

Turning to Act Itself.

Part 1. deals with constitution and incorporation of companies. This deals with companies limited by shares, companies limited by guarantee and unlimited companies, and sets forth what must be contained in Memorandum of each and in what way the Memorandum may be altered. The articles may be table A or may be drawn up to suit the special purposes of the Company. Very little change from former Acts.

Part 2 follows closely the English Act of 1908 and deals with the distribution of the capital of the company. Much of this has to do with the internal management of companies such as share certificates; register of members; the reduction of capital which is subject to confirmation of the Court. It also provides that notwithstanding a company is limited, the liability of the directors, if so provided by the memorandum, may be limited.

Part 3 deals entirely with the internal management of companies, provisions being made as to its head office, meetings, resolutions, appointment and qualifications of directors, contracts, prospectus, allotments of shares and debentures and other charges on the assets of companies.

Part 4 deals with winding up of companies. Unfortunately because of financial stress in recent years many companies have gone into liquidation and many questions of proceedure and practice came before the Court for the first time. Companies are wound up (1) by the Court; (2) voluntary or (3) subject to the supervision of the Court. In each case special procedure is necessary and care has been taken under this part of the Act to meet all the requirements of any one of these three forms of liquidation. I wish to draw particular attention to section 135 on page 69 which deals with the appointment of the Official Receiver. Under section 139 of the Companies Act 1899, referred to in sub-section 1, it is provided that on an order of the court, the official receiver, by virtue of his office becomes provisional liquidator and acts under a liquidator who is appointed. That office has been held by Sir William Lloyd who has had considerable work in connection with it in addition to his duties as registrar of the Supreme Court. It will be noted that he retains the office until a successor is appointed. Sections 214-217 are very important. They are on page 101 and refer to rules set forth in schedule 6, which are a part of the Act and which come into force on the passing of the Act. Future rules come into force on their being published in the Newfoundland Gazette. These rules are set forth on page 160-212, over 50 pages of closely printed matter. Happily, they deal with proceedure, and, therefore, must be mastered only by the legal gentlemen.

Part 5 deals with the application of the new Act to companies already incorporated.

Part 6 deals with companies authorized to register under the Act and the requirements to be complied with before registration is effected.

Part 7 deals with the winding up of unregistered companies. Unregistered companies can be liquidated under this Act only by the Court.

Part 8 deals with companies established outside the Colony. It provides that companies incorporated outside this Colony which establish a place of business here must file with the Registrar of Companies certain particulars.

Part 9 deals chiefly with legal proceedings and sets forth penalties for offences under the Act. All offences under the Act made punishable by fine may be prosecuted under summary Jurisdiction Acts. Chapter 127 of the Consolidated Statutes is repealed but it is expressly provided that the repeal does not affect the registration of a company thereunder nor does the present Act affect Chapter 9 of the Consolidated Statutes dealing with Trade Unions.

First Schedule:

Table A—Regulations for management of company.

Table B and Table C—Fees unchanged.

Form C—Form of statement to be published by Insurance Companies and Deposit. Provident or Benefit Societies.

Second Schedule:

Statement in lieu of Prospectus.

Third Schedule:

Forms of memorandum and articles of company.

Form E as required by Part 2 of Act.

I beg, Mr. Speaker, to move that the Bill be read a second time, it being my intention to then ask that it be referred to a Select Committee.

MR. HICKMAN—Mr. Speaker, this Bill seems rather heavy and important, and I do not think should be discussed in a short time. We would be better satisfied on this side of the House if the second reading was postponed for the present so as we can have an opportunity to look it over. There are things perhaps that are not included in this Bill that might be included in it.

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE—We are only too glad to have the Bill deferred.

Second reading of Bill entitled "An Act to Amend Cap. 24 of the Consolidated Statutes (3rd Series) entitled "Of certain fees and charges by stamps."

MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE & MINES—Mr. Speaker, in moving the second reading of this Bill I want to point out to the House that no material change in the Statute as regards the Agriculture and Mines Department is anticipated in the Bill, but under the request and advice of the Auditor General, the Bill is introduced in order to afford better facilities to the Auditors in the department. Under the present law a stamp has to be affixed on a documetn. That gives the auditors extra trouble and it is proposed to eliminate a portion of the fees by stamps.

MR. HALFYARD—Mr. Speaker, I accept the explanation given by the Minister, but really we do not know what it means and we would like to have an opportunity to consider it, and I think it would be better if the second reading was deferred.

MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE & MINES—I have no objection.

Second reading of Bill entitled "An Act to amend chapter 134 of the Consolidated Statutes (3rd series) entitled "Of the Operation of Saw Mills."

MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE & MINES—Mr. Speaker a similar explanation applies to this Bill as the last one and I would ask to have it deferred also.

Second reading of Bill entitled "An Act further to Amend chapter 129 of the Consolidated Statutes (3rd series) entitled "Of Crown Lands, Timber, Mines and Minerals."

MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE & MINES—Mr. Speaker, I would also move that this be deferred.

Second reading of Bill entitled "An Act relating to Firearms."

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—On the moving of the second reading of this Bill some explanation may be necessary regarding the adoption of the principal terms. There may be some difference of opinion. The effect of it is simply to control the issue of Firearms by way of license. Probably today we are one of the only countries in the world except places that are more or less wild, where there is no such form of control in the sense of carrying about weapons of defence. The idea is, as members will find when the Bill goes into its committee stage, merely to provide that the carrying about indiscriminately of firearms is to cease. We have had tragedies and near tragedies, due to the fact that irresponsible persons have been carrying revolvers. And with the arrival of industrial works and the corresponding moving in of people of different veins of thought as regards weapons I feel there should be some control over the carrying of firearms. Members will find on reading that very ample provision has been made for those who will have proper occasion for using firearms. As a matter of fact the Bill is simply a digest suited to our own purposes of the provisions which apply in the Old Country. I think this is one of the cases where on principle all will agree. When we are in the Committee stage of this Bill, any suggestions that will be made I will be only too glad to take it up with the House.

MR. SCAMMELL—Does this Bill seriously contemplate that the outport man who wants to use a gun has got to be certified by Inspector General in St. John's.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—There are exceptions that cover all kinds of uses in this country.

MR. HICKMAN—Mr. Speaker, I want to ask one question. It has reference to a Bill that went through last year. It had reference to the sealfishery. We amended the Bill; but I see by reports that it went through the Upper House in its original form.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—They passed it just as we sent it up to them. It was simply a change of title.

Pursuant to order and on motion of Hon. the Minister of Justice the Bill entitled "An Act Relating to Firearms" was read a second time, and it was ordered that the said Bill be referred to a Committee of the Whole House on to-morrow.

The following Bills were, on motion of Hon. Minister of Finance, discharged from the Order Paper:

> "An Act to Amend the Revenue Act 1905, and the Act in Amendment thereof," and
>
> "An Act to Amend the Act 15, George V. Cap. XXI, entitled 'An Act respecting a Tax on Goods Imported into Newfoundland.'"

The remaining Orders of the Day were deferred.

HON. MR. SULLIVAN—Mr. Speaker, in moving the adjournment of the House I take the opportunity to say a few words, in connection with remarks made by the members of the Opposition. I must congratulate the Leader of the Opposition on his solicitude for the labouring man in England. I can tell him that we all feel the same, and I trust that we are all as solicitous for the labouring man of Newfoundland, and the fisherman of Newfoundland, as he is. The remarks that have been passed are versified on the part of the different gentlemen on the other side. What seems to stand out is the fact that for political expediency the facts seem to be distorted. I will deal with them presently. The Hon. member for St. Barbe in his remarks thought that all the sitting members should have an opportunity to discuss the Speech from the Throne. I am sure, sir, that there is not one man on this side of the House who wants to keep any member from having an opportunity to do so. Like other members who have spoken from this side of the House, I want certainly to congratulate the Members of the Opposition from the Leader down for the fine manner in which they have reviewed the Speech from the Throne. We realise what it is to be in the Opposition. You have a certain duty to fulfil and I am sure that your only regret is that you did not have some material to make good matter out of. After all it is not the duty of the Opposition, just because the Government introduces a measure to denounce it. You are not sent for that to the House of Assembly. You are put here for just the same reason as we on this side of the House are. You are to assist in making the laws and you can help the Government in the proposals which they introduce, and it is your duty to do so. So far I am glad to say that the spirit of the Opposition has been along those lines. I observed that the Hon. member for St. Barbe gave a very long discourse on the Speech from the Throne and I hope that he is perfectly satisfied. I hope his constituents are. I regret that the Hon. member made some reference to Water Street. I thought that was a thing of the past. I am sure that most of us feel that the people of this country cannot get along without the merchants, any more than the merchants can get along without the people. And it is to the best interest of the people of this country, that a tolerant spirit should grow up between people and the merchants of Newfoundland. I regret to have to refer to this matter. I trust that I misunderstood the remarks of the Hon. member altogether. The Hon. member also wanted to know why we did not reduce taxation before. We did not reduce taxation before because we could not do it in the condition in which the finances of the country were at the time this Government took charge. But we took the first opportunity to do it in a legal manner. The Hon. member also referred to Sir William Coaker. I look upon Sir William Coaker as a personal friend of mine. There was one thing that can always be said for Sir William Coaker and that is that he was always a good fighter in the House and out of the House. Furthermore he was not an obstructionist. He was ready to change his mind on any matter when he could be convinced. The only trouble, Mr. Speaker, was to convince him he was wrong. I hope that Mr. Scammell will not be so hard to convince. Another thing that the Hon. gentleman spoke about was the exportation of pit-props. I think that I can assure him that the exportation of pit-props in this country is finished with the exception of this year. With the establishment in this country of the pulp mills that are being constructed, it is to the best interests of this country that this raw material be kept in the country. Canada has begun to realize this. She has decided to prohibit the exportation of pulp wood. You talk of the fishery of Newfoundland being the main industry. But do you realise that with the completion of the plant at Corner Brook that the output from this industry will be equal to a catch of a million and a half qtls. of codfish at eight dollars a quintal. With the cessation of the export from Canada to the United States of pulp wood newsprint is going up because they will not be able to manufacture enough to supply the demand. The result will be that we will have this market for the export of that part of the output of our own industry for which we cannot find a market in England. The Hon. member for Twillingate, Mr. Brown, made a few remarks on the Labour situation and he denounces the company for bringing men in here. I think that the Prime Minister in his speech made the explanation that every effort had been made not only by the company at Corner Brook, but by the Government at St. John's, to get the labour in Newfoundland. Newfoundlanders could not be induced to go out there at an early date. So that something else had to be done. Anyway I am not allowed to talk on that just now. I am out of order, so the Speaker has just told me. However, I shall make a few remarks on that at a future date. I want to make some explanation on a matter in which the opposition are displeased. That is the placing of the contract for the building of the new steamer for the Gulf. The Government has been denounced for the building of the ship in Holland. It is wrong to save money for the people of this country apparently. We could not get the Trade Facilities to help us out. If we could why did twenty British firms get their ships built in Holland during the last eight months. Why did they not get this assistance. They could not get it. I was in the House of Commons when the Prime Minister of England, Mr. Baldwin, said that owing to the condition of the ship building industry he thought it necessary to extend the Trade Facilities to the building of steamers. The Hon. Leader of the Opposition can not produce one iota of evidence that I saw the Trade Facilities either before or after the contract had been awarded for the building of the ship.

It is the best thing that ever happened to the English ship-building Companies in this matter that we are getting our ship built in Holland. Is not that news for you. When this happened it showed the Trade Unions and Shipbuilding Companies what they were up against, and as I stated the Premier of England announced that the shipbuilding industry would have to be assisted by the trade facilities. The Harrison Company had ships built in Holland. Some of those present will remember Mr. Charley Blackburn. He is a director of that company. Before we placed the contract we consulted him as to what kind of work they had received. Mr. Bowring said that he though that we ought to have the ship built in England. That was only natural. I asked people who had got their ships built in Holland and they told me that they were as good as could be built on the Clyde or the Tyne. If we could have saved the amount of seventy thousand dollars by having this ship built in Holland and did not do so, Mr Speaker, the Opposition would be very prompt in denouncing us. They would be right in doing so. I leave it to the people of this country to decide whether we did right or not. We would not have placed the contract for the ship in Holland if it had been only a matter of two thousand pounds. In that case we would have given the contract to Swan and Hunter. The lowest tender from an English firm was for £98,715, and under no conditions would we have awarded the contract to them. I do not wish to make an explanation of this matter in the House, but if the Leader of the Opposition would like to know confidentially I would be only too glad to tell him why. I know of the cables that were sent in connection with the ship. Captain Gordon would show those that came in to me as soon as they had arrived. We have engaged the best firm of naval architects that could be got. I think that Capt. Randell can recommend Mr. Hamilton also. The Hon. member for Trinity knows Mr. Hamilton, and I am sure that he feels about him as I do.

We saved fourteen thousand pounds by having the ship built in Holland rather than in England by the firm Swan Hunter. Their tender was £100,-600, and the New Waterway Shipbuilding Co. was £89,675. The difference in the tenders is £10,925. There is furthermore a difference of forty-four thousand nine hundred and fifty pounds between the lowest British tender and the highest British tender for work on the same plans and the same specifications. There is a difference of $53,990.00 between the highest British tender and the lowest tender which we accepted, and I am prepared to leave it to the people of this country to say if we were not justified in saving that amount of money by placing the contract over in Holland. . . .

MR. HICKMAN—You have not convinced me.

HON. MR. SULLIVAN—If I cannot convince you I am sorry. But I think that those facts ought to convince everyone.

MR. HICKMAN—It is easy enough to convince me—give me the correspondence with the Trade Facilities Board.

HON. MR. SULLIVAN—Besides saving that amount of money on the contract price, there were certain things which the British firms would not include in their tenders, which were contained in the offer accepted. Wireless Radio installation, one and one half kilowatt set was not included in the British tenders; Wireless Direction Finding installation was not included; wireless submarine signalling apparatus was not included, and fixed and portable Morse electrical requirements were not included. And finally, under the contract with the firm in Holland the ship has to make her trial trip three quarters loaded, and has to load and discharge a three quarters cargo. The British firms would not have this. All these items would come to about three or four thousand pounds, so I consider that on that contract we have saved between thirteen and fourteen thousand pounds to the taxpayers of this country, and goodness knows we need the money. We are not wealthy. That saving is required to form the nucleus of a fund for repairing our own ships during the coming year, and to provide a shipbuilding bounty. There are several other reasons why ships cannot be built very much cheaper in England.

Mr. Speaker, I do not know whether I would be out of order in making reference to remarks made by a member on the other side of the House in connection with the Armstrong-Whitworth Company.

MR. SPEAKER—I fear that you are. By the indulgence of the House a member may explain remarks of a personal nature, but this is not such a matter.

HON. MR. SULLIVAN—I trust that the explanation I have given the hon. members on the other side will convince them that they are wrong.

It was moved and seconded that when the House rises, it adjourn until to-morrow afternoon at three o'clock.

TUESDAY, March 3rd, 1925.

The House then adjourned accordingly.

The House met at three of the clock in the afternoon, pursuant to adjournment.

MR. ASHBOURNE—Mr. Speaker: I ask leave to present a petition from the inhabitants of Moreton's Harbor and Summerford with regard to the construction of a road. This road has been badly needed for some time. I give the petition my hearty support and ask that it be referred to the department to which it relates.

MR. BROWN—Mr. Speaker: I have very much pleasure in recommending that this petition be given the fullest consideration. The people of Moreton's Harbor and Summerford are asking for something, which, in my opinion, should have been done long ago. The road is badly needed and I have much pleasure in supporting the prayer of the petitioners.

MR. SINNOTT—Mr. Speaker: I beg leave to present a petition from the fishermen of Fox Harbor, Placentia Bay. The petitioners ask that steps be taken to reserve a small amount of timber which is on the areas known as Sound Wood. This reservation is absolutely essential, if the fishermen of this important settlement are to continue operations. I give the petition my hearty support.

HON. MR. SULLIVAN—Mr. Speaker: I would like to give the petition presented by my colleague my unqualified support.

MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE & MINES—Mr. Speaker: I ask leave to present a petition from a number of boat owners and skippers from various parts of Placentia Bay who are interested in that monstrous petition that I presented a few days ago asking for a Fog Alarm on the east side of St. Mary's Bay. It is not necessary for me to make any further comment on this and I feel sure that the residents of St. Mary's Bay, who are asking to have this very necessary aid to navigation erected, will be grateful to the boat owners and skippers of Placentia Bay in coming to their rescue. I ask that the petition be referred to the Department of Marine and Fisheries.

MR. SINNOTT—Mr. Speaker: I give the petition my hearty support.

HON. MR. SULLIVAN—Mr. Speaker: I want to go on record in support of the petition asking for this very necessary Fog Alarm, and, I think, I am quite safe in saying that this Government, if at all possible, will endeavour to accede to the request of the petitioners.

HON. MR. CRAMM—Mr. Speaker: I ask leave to present a petition from the Newfoundland Textile Manufacturing Company, Limited, praying that a Bill be introduced ratifying an agreement between that Company and the Government. I move that, with the consent of the House, the petition be referred to a Select Committee appointed for the purpose of enquiring into and reporting as to whether the rules as to notice have been complied with.

On motion this petition was received, and a Select Committee was appointed to consider and report thereon, as follows:—Hon. Mr. Cramm, Hon. Minister of Justice, Hon. Mr. Bradley, Mr. Hickman, Mr. Warren.

MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE & MINES—Mr. Speaker: I ask leave to present a petition from a large number of the residents in various parts of Placentia Bay on the subject of a Fog Alarm asking that this necessary aid to navigation be erected in some suitable place on the west side of Placentia Bay. At the last session of this House a petition, containing eight hundred signatures, was presented by me and supported by my colleagues on this same very subject. Now I need not worry or delay the House with the history of the repeated appeals made here for these aids to navigation by my colleagues and myself on behalf of the people of the district of Placentia and St. Mary's, and also by the appeals made by the representatives who went before us. We were promised, as I said the other day, in open House in 1920-1921 by the then Minister of Marine and Fisheries that provision would be made the following session to have voted an amount for the erection of a fog alarm on the west side of Placentia Bay and on the east side of St. Mary's Bay. The petition emanated at Merasheen. It is signed by all the people there and by the residents of Red Island, Harbor Buffett, Spencer's Cove, Haystack, Bruley, Isle Valen, James' Cove and Tack's Beach. There are five hundred signatories to this petition and I have much pleasure in endorsing the prayer of it and I have every confidence that the present Minister of Marine and Fisheries will make provision in his Estimates to have sufficient funds available for the erection of these two fog alarms in the most suitable places in both these Bays. It is almost unnecessary to point out that large expenditures were made during the past six or seven years on the erection of aids to navigation in various parts of the Island and such always had the support of my colleagues and myself. We all know the disadvantages fishermen have to encounter at the present time and it is our bounden duty to use every means possible to try and lighten the burden of "those who go down to the sea in ships" while pursuing their hazardous avocation.

I feel certain that the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, with the practical knowledge and experience that he has and who knows of the difficulties that our fishermen have to contend with, the petition will have his most sympathetic consideration, and I also bespeak for it the united support of the Executive Government.

I trust that when the Estimates are brought down that there will be provision in them for these two fog alarms.

MR. SINNOTT—Mr. Speaker: The petition presented by my colleague has my strongest support.

HON. MR. SULLIVAN—Mr. Speaker, With reference to the petition presented by my colleague, the Minister of Agriculture and Mines, and supported by my colleague, Mr. Sinnott, we have but to consider that from the time one leaves Trepassey until he gets nearly up to Burin there is only one fog alarm, when we must realize that there is very strong reason why we should all give our fullest support to this petition. Imagine the difficulties fishermen of Placentia and St. Mary's Bays have to contend with in trying to make the land at night time with fog or stormy weather prevailing. Speaking of a fog alarm for the west side of Placentia Bay, I might say that in the early stages of my political life a sum of money was voted for the erection of a fog alarm at Marticot Island, Placentia Bay, but, through some political falling out, it did not materialize. The late Mr. Jackman, the senior member for the district at the time, had a political row with the result that the fog alarm purchased for Marticot was taken, I think, to Cabot Island, Bonavista Bay; and we only ask you now, Mr. Speaker, to give us back what we paid for years ago. I feel sure that the members for Bonavista Bay will give us their very best support in this matter.

HON. MINISTER OF FINANCE—Mr. Speaker, I give notice that I will on to-morrow ask leave to introduce a Bill, entitled "An Act to Amend the Income Tax Act of 1922."

Mr. Warren, Mr. Hickman, Mr. Brown, Mr. Ashbourne and Mr. Duff gave notice of questions.

NOTICE OF QUESTION.

Question No. 1 was deferred.

Question No. 2:—

THE HON. PRIME MINISTER—I was not able to get that information from the railway people by this afternoon. They say that they will not be able to have that information until to-morrow afternoon. I will table the information to-morrow.

Question No. 3:—

MR. SCAMMELL—To ask the Minister of Marine and Fisheries if the Government has recently disposed of certain sticks and other timber lying at Old Day's Pond, Bonavista, and if so to state the parties to whom such sticks and timber were sold and to show the number of sticks in each case and the prices charged; and if such sticks or timber so disposed of have been paid for.

MINISTER MARINE & FISHERIES —In reply to the hon. member for St. Barbe to question Nnumber 3 on the Order Paper: "If the Government has recently disposed of certain sticks or timber lying at Old Day's Pond, Bonavista," I may say that instructions have been given by myself during the last two months to deliver some sticks to F. J. House & Co., Bonavista Bay, and also to the Union Trading Company, Bonavista, and also to Philip Templeman Company, Bonavista Bay. "Show the number of sticks in each case and the prices charged." In reply to that I may say that up to the present time I have not received from the man in charge of the sticks the number which each party has received. So far as the price is concerned, I do not know what it will be. What is to be charged is a hard thing to say. I will have to find out first what these sticks cost. Then as soon as I find out the number of sticks sold, I will arrive at a price which I think will be satisfactory to the Government.

Question No. 4:—

MR. SCAMMELL—To ask the Minister of Marine and Fisheries what grants for marine purposes either special or ordinary have been sent out to the District of Bay-de-Verde to places between Spout Cove and Freshwater, both inclusive, and to give names of parties with amounts to whom such allocations were made in each case.

MINISTER MARINE & FISHERIES —In reply to question Number 4, asked by Mr. Scammell, the hon member for St. Barbe, I beg to submit the following:

The remaining questions on the Order Paper were deferred.

MR. SCAMMELL—Mr. Speaker, arising out of the Order Paper, and some questions thereon. It is some time now since I placed a question on the Order Paper addressed to the Minister of Posts and Telegraphs. It was Question No. 2 on the Order Paper of March 2nd. The Minister, however, is consistently absent from the House and the question has not been answered. I quite realize that the Government is anxious to facilitate business, and I do not think it is proper to have a question deferred from day to day. If our questions are not answered promptly we cannot make much progress with our business from this side of the House, and I think that somebody on the other side should see that answers to questions are forthcoming, particularly after they have been on the Order Paper for a week.

HON. PRIME MINISTER—Mr. Speaker, I quite agree with Mr. Scammell, that these questions should be answered promptly, and I shall try to avoid such an occurrence in future.

Mr. Speaker left the Chair.

Mr. Puddister took the Chair of Committee.

MR. WARREN—Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the Minister in charge of this Bill, if the Fisheries Board who have given this Bill the consideration that the Minister has described, have taken expert opinion as to the action they are taking in providing for the prevention of catching lobsters for the next three years?

MINISTER OF MARINE & FISHERIES—Mr. Chairman, in answer to the Leader of the Independent Party I may say that we have not consulted anybody outside the Fishery Board with the exception of the people who have been catching the lobsters themselves, but we have consulted quite a number of people around the country—that is the people in the country who have been carrying on the lobster fishery, and we have had untold numbers of letters from the people who catch the lobsters themselves asking us to shut down the lobster fishery for from three to five years; but we have not had any expert opinion.

During my lifetime as a member of the House of Assembly, or during my lifetime in politics, I found that when we have got to send out of this country for expert opinion on any matter, all it amounts to is that the following year we have to pay a large amount for that expert opinion without any great benefit coming to the country.

The men that compose the Fishery Board at the present time can give just as much expert opinion on these matters as any man we can import. Therefore, we have had the opinion of the men that catch the lobsters, and of the men who fit out people for the fishery, and we have got the opinion of the Fishery Board, and that represents every district practically in this country. After due consideration of these different opinions, and from the consideration that we can give ourselves from the figures showing the decrease in the catch of lobsters for the last few years, I feel sure that the majority of people in this country are satisfied that this is a justifiable Bill for the Government to bring in.

MR. WARREN—Mr. Chairman, I quite agree with what the Minister has said, but I think that he does not appreciate my reasons for asking that question.

I do not think the Bill goes far enough, and that is why I asked if expert opinion had been taken. The enquiries which you have made, and the enquiries which the Fisheries Board has instituted, shows that the people of this country are practically unanimous in wishing to have the lobster fishery closed down for from three to five years. Why is that It is in order that the fishery can be improved. That is, as far as we can see, the only way in which the lobster fishery can be resuscitated. I am not finding fault at all with this Bill, but I think that we ought to take some outside opinion and see if, during the time that the catching of lobsters is prohibited, we cannot make use of that opportunity to encourage the propagation of lobster.

I understand, for instance, that the female lobster carries its spawn attached to its body for nearly twelve months after it has actually spawned, and it is to be hoped that, for the next three years at all events, the lobster will be left to peacefully pursue its natural propagation. I am also given to understand that the artificial hatching of lobster is not an expensive and not a very difficult matter. We, therefore, I think, ought to take advantage of the fact that the people of this country have said that they are satisfied that the lobster fishery should be closed down for three years because they want a larger and more profitable lobster fishery. They have in fact practically said to the Government, "Yes, we are satisfied to take our losses, but we expect the Government to go further than that, and make use of the time when the lobster fishery is closed down to do something towards the preservation of the lobster." The Government should do something so that when the people are again permitted to catch lobster they may find that their little acts of denial are amply repaid.

That was the only reason that I asked if any expert opinion had been taken. I do not think that it would cost very much. The Marine and Fisheries Department of Canada have already been giving attention to this mattter, and I am sure that a few enquiries from there would be quite sufficient to put the Government on its way to the artificial propagation of lobster.

MR. HICKMAN—Mr. Chairman, I just want to ask the Minister a few questions. Is it by the unanimous consent of the Fishery Board that you are bringing in this Bill?

MINISTER OF MARINE & FISHERIES—It was unanimous.

MR. HICKMAN—So I presume you have made every possible investigation and have come to the conclusion that this is a necessary bill. Can the Minister give me the value of a lobster pot when left undisposed of?

MINISTER OF MARINE & FISHERIES—I will answer these questions when you have finished speaking.

MR. HICKMAN—There were last year in this country some thirty-two or thirty-three thousand lobster pots. I do not know what they cost. They represent money that is now tied up for those who prosecuted the lobster fishery last year. There were about fifteen hundred men employed in the lobster fishery last year, and there were eight hundred and forty-eight licenses used. There were eight hundred and seventy licenses issued, but some thirty of these were returned. At any rate, there were eight hundred and forty-eight people with licenses for catching loster last year, and there were about three thousand cases packed. This is a matter which I hope the Minister and the Board have taken into consideration, because the men who have been prosecuting the lobster fishery in a great many cases have no outfit for the codfishery. These men, to-day, are thrown on their own resources very largely, and in many cases have not the means of getting outfitted for the codfishery or of getting people to supply them.

Whether this Bill which the Minister is now bringing before the House is a good Bill for the preservation of lobster or of the lobster fishery I cannot say, but my opinion is that the position of the lobster fishery to-day has been caused through breaches of the law. Now there is a law in reference to lobster. There has to be a certain size opening in the lobster trap, and there must be a certain width between the laths that form the sides and bottoms of the lobster pots.

Now if the laws had been carried out and the traps used were the proper size, instead of needing nine hundred thousand lobsters for thirty-three hundred cases, it would be a great deal less. Now I say that it is abuse of this law that makes it necessary to bring in this bill and close the lobster industry for the next three years. And if at the end of the three years the law is allowed to be abused in the same way as in the past, the same thing will apply in a very short time as it does now before the close season commences. Whilst I am on the subject I might say the same thing applies to traps for the codfishery. There is a certain size to be used for the codfishery, and it frequently happens that some men use a smaller mesh than is permitted, and a great number of small fish are taken which should be left in the water. So in that respect the same thing applies to the codfishery as applies to the lobster fishery. The Hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries is a practical fisherman and he well knows the reasons and objects of this bill this afternoon, and I say that I hope that he will see that this bill is carried out to the best of his ability while he is in office.

HON. MINISTER OF MINES & AGRICULTURE—Mr. Chairman, as a member of the Fisheries Board, and as one of the representatives of a district that, if not second, rates at least third in the productions of the lobster industry, I would like to make a few remarks on the important legislation that we are about to make.

I would like to endorse the stand taken by the hon. member for Fortune, Mr. Warren, when he pointed out the necessity during the close season, of the department trying to devise some means of obtaining some scientific advice on the lobster industry. It is an admirable suggestion, and I feel that the Minister of Marine and Fisheries will take the matter into his consideration, and that during the three years that will pass during the close season, something along the sicentific line will be done. I want to indorse the attitude taken by the Leader of the Opposition. Mr. Hickman says that the wretched condition of the lobster fishery is due to the abuse of the law. I think that he is right. In my experience as a member of the House of Assembly, perhaps, I myself have been just as much to blame as any other individual man in this House. There is the same condition existing in connection with the codfishery and herring fishery and every other industry that we have at the present day. And unless the Minister presiding over the departments concerned, and representing the various industries, takes the very strongest measures, that it is in his power to take for the correction of these faults and breaches of the law, it is not a bit of use in putting this law on the statute book. It is not a bit of use if there is no intention of having it carried out. It is well known to everybody interested in the fisheries at the present time that a lobster fisherman applies to the department early in the spring to get his supply of labels when he has got his license. Then if it happens that John Jones has a lobster factory out on one point and Jim Smith has a factory on the other point just a little distance away; if it happens that one, say John Jones, runs short of labels, then he goes over to Jim Smith and gets some of his, and the result is that he is not using the official number that he has been given. Then these lobsters are sometimes bad and the article is exported by Newfoundland to important markets and from there it is sent out to other smaller markets, and it has been known that a portion of the body of a squid has been found in one of these tins of lobsters. This was probably in a decomposed condition when it was placed in the case. The same thing has been the case in connection with other fisheries, and will be the case, unless this House and the Government take this matter seriously and see that the laws are carried out. Sometimes when a man violates the law he goes to the member for the district and asks him to try to help him out, and the member goes to the Justice Department and holds up his hands and says that if you prosecute this man I am finished in the district, and so, if the Department of Justice listens to the story, instead of sending the man to the Penitentiary for six months or more, he gets off with a dollar fine. I endorse the attitude taken by the Leader of the Opposition, and I hope that he is sincere in what he says. Perhaps he knows as much about this industry as any other man in the House. It is very important. The hon. member for St. Barbe, represents the district that produces the greatest number of cases of lobsters in Newfoundland. I think that he will agree with me that this is a move in the right direction. It is about time something was done. Twenty years ago we produced about two hundred thousand cases of lobsters, where today we produce only thirty-three hundred. During the early years that I was a member of this House there was an annual grant for the promulgation of the lobsters. Mr. Dee was in charge of this department. There was a great deal of good accomplished in this way, but there was not the result that should have been from the amount of money that was spent. That was where the politician crept in again. I know a great number of men who got paid two or three times for the same small lobsters. There were all kinds of abuses and there will be again if there is not a strict penalty imposed. It is well to impose the extreme penalty of the law. That is the only way that this House and the Minister of Marine and Fisheries will be able to carry out reforms.

MINISTER OF MARINE & FISHERIES—Mr. Chairman, I am sorry that I did not answer the Leader of the Independent Party satisfactorily, but I understand that he is quite in accord with what is being done. He is rather interested in what is to be done in the future, and I can assure the Leader of the Independent Party that the Fishery Board has taken the matter into consideration some time ago. We have given considerable thought to the question of what is to be done to increase the growth of the lobster industry, at the finish as well as during the three years of the close season. We have several matters in connection with this which we have to recommend to the Executive Government. It is our intention to do all that possibly can be done in that line. Mr. Warren is perfectly right and I agree with him. With regard to the question asked by the Leader of the Opposition when he asked if all the members of the Fishery Board were unanimous about having this close season for three years, I may say, "Yes." Every member of the Board was of the opinion that there should be a close season for the lobster fishery, and if we had taken the advice of ninety per cent. of the people of the country who were interested in the industry, we would have made the close season for five years instead of three. But we thought that if the effect of this period was not sufficient for the carrying out of the purpose which we have in view, then we can very easily increase it to five. Mr. Hickman asked me the price of the lobster traps. If he had asked me that question twenty-five years ago, I would have been able to answer him. At that time I often made them before daylight and after dark. But for the last few years I have had no reason for knowing the price of lobster traps. But I may say that I would think that the price would be about a dollar. It all depends whether he makes them himself or has somebody else to do it for him. If he made them himself he would probably make them for a little less. I also note that he is of the opinion that the present state of the lobster fishery is due to the breaches of the law. I partly agree with him. I am sorry to say it is. But I was a member of the Fishery Board of the Colonly for fifteen years up to eight years ago. Then one day I saw in the papers that the Fishery Board was going to be turned out and a new Board of practical fishermen were going to be put in to run the matter correctly. There were some few fishermen put on that board, but I do not know why some of them who sat on that board were never there. I know that this is the feeling of the fishermen of the Colony on the point. But when I went into the Department last year in the month of June, I found that there was not a single Warden for the protection of the fishery. The carrying out of the law was left solely and wholly to the fishermen themselves. I also found that during the summer we have had several breaches of the lobster law. Several times there have been ten or fifteen cans of salmon at one time brought down to me, which had been taken from a lobster case. In every case we took away the license, the first thing. Some of them came back and said that it was a mistake. We wrote back and told them that they would have to pay for their mistakes. We had cases brought before the magistrates, and if the maximum fine was five hundred dollars, and the minimum was a dollar, the man got fined for a dollar. But I am glad to say that in one case on the West Coast one of the magistrates did his duty and sent an offender to the Penitentiary for three months. When all the lobster catchers of this country who violates the law are visited with the extreme penalty of the law then the Government will have a chance to carry it out.

But I don't believe the fishermen will carry out the law, because the members of the Government are not carrying out the law any more than the fishermen. herefore, when the heads of the department violate the law of the land you can understand the underdogs not doing anything better. The Honorable Leader of the Opposition spoke about the size and about the width of the openings in lobster traps. He asked me did I think this was making the difference. Well, I think it would be; but taking into consideration the depletion of the lobster fishery at the present time, I don't think it possible to bring it up any more without a close season. Even if it could be brought about by artificial propagation and placing the openings further apart in the traps so that the smaller lobsters could escape, it would be a long time before the lobster fishery would come up to the standard. The Honourable Leader of the Opposition said that there were fifteen hundred people last year carrying on the fishery business. That is practically true, and I am prepared to say that seven hundred people lost money, and lost badly, and five hundred out of the other seven hundred did not make enough to provide for themselves and their families for the winter. As far as the Board could find out only about 250 people out of the fifteen hundred people who went to the lobster fishery last summer made enough to carry themselves and their families over the winter. With such a splendid lobster fishery that we once had, it has boiled down to this, that two hundred people out of fifteen hundred got a living out of it. I think it is high time that the people in authorty in this country should see to it that this Lobster Bill is put in force. The Honourable Leader of the Opposition spoke about the smaller mesh in the cod traps; ;while this may not concern this Bill, in another way it does. I perfectly agree with him. I have had my attention drawn this winter, from people in different sections of the country, to the fact that people are putting into the traps two and a half mesh twine, and I may say for the benefit of this House that when I spoke of it the first answer I got was that the chap who told me was looking for a job.

As far as the information the Fishery Dept. received, it was that people were using a lot of small mesh twine during the last couple of years. There is one way that I would sugggest that the small mesh, that are put into the cod traps, could be eliminated and that is, if the merchants would shut down on buying tomcods; but as long as the fishermen are getting eight or nine dollars for tomcods it is a hard proposition to get them to throw them away. But it is the intention of the Fishery Department to rectify this, and I may say for the information of the House of Assembly that when I went to the Fishery Department there was no Fishery Board there. I did not feel justified in taking the position, though I have been a fisherman ever since I was fifteen years old or before, and I have been prosecuting it right up until the present time, and even though I knew practically as much as any man in the country about the fisheries, I did not feel justified in asking the Executive Government to make rules and regulations without some help, and so I asked the Executive Government to allow me to appoint a Fishery Board that would carry on without any pay. Quite a few of the members live in the outports. It is not all times of the year that we can get them here to carry on the work of the Board, not in such numbers as we would like. But some of the members took the trouble and a great deal of expense and loss of time to come in here. I want to assure this House that these men took some responsibility placed upon themselves to come in here and pay their own expenses. These men come in for the simple reason that they want to see things done right, as they can be done, and in the interests of the fisheries of this country. If, as regards the Fishery Board, it cannot carry out the laws of the land without something done to help it, do it. As I said when I went to the Fishery Department this year, there was not a solitary dollar voted for the fisheries. Therefore, they were unable to engage the services of a fishery warden. If the people of this country want the fisheries carried out right, get us some money and we will do the best we can, and I feel sure that as a member of the Monroe Government that the Monroe Government are prepared to do all possible for the upkeep of the fisheries in this country. I feel sure that during the next four years when we are called upon to give an account of our stewardship we will have a great account. We won't owe the people a hundred dollars and pay twenty cents. The people of this country will owe the Monroe Government one hundred per cent. for the benefits they have given this country.

MR. SCAMMELL—Mr. Chairman, I merely rise to make some remarks in a general way as regards some of the observations made by Capt. Winsor. I don't think I need stress the point that I have already outlined in my views as the representative of the District of St. Barbe. I do not propose to commit myself or to voice an opinion as regards the wisdom or otherwise of this Bill. I seek only to impress upon the Government the necessity for delay and to grant a year's reprieve before the proposed Legislation goes into effect. Now yesterday, Captain Winsor, referred among others to Stephen Taylor of Bonne Bay. I hold no brief for Mr. Taylor. He is not a political supporter of mine. He is not even a personal friend. I think the reverse is the case. But Mr. Taylor is I think one of the men most outspoken against the close season. Mr. Taylor is one of the largest merchants in Bonne Bay. He is one of the merchants who supplies most extensively at Bonne Bay and on the Coast. If Mr. Taylor with his experience on that coast as a supplying merchant, extending over a large number of years, is not satisfied with the application of this Legislation and the good that will come from it at the present time, he can be taken as a very safe judge. I will be frank with the Minister. I have had telegrams from my constituents on the matter from Flower's Cove and Trout River. The majority of the men's opinions were that the close season ought not to be enforced, the business men for the most part favoured it, but they argued that the application of this law ought not to come into force this year. Yesterday I received some very anxious inquiries form Port aux Choix on the same subject. I replied that the Government had decided to proceed with this legislation. I still have some doubt as to whether this close season is going to produce the results anticipated. I quite realize that the Government is sincere in trying to conserve an industry of such importance, but it seems to me that something else should be attempted first. One remark of Captain Winsor's the other day confounded me. He said that as early as July last he had notified the public of the proposed action of the Government. I was confounded. It seems to me that despite this that this legislation was sprung upon the district, that the district knew absolutely nothing about it. If they had been given notice of it, would they have been so much in the dark? However, I take Captain Winsor's word for it.

Captain Winsor has seen fit to refer to the Fishery Board. He says his Fishery Board is the only one worth while. It is the only one that has been effective in this country. Captain Winsor stated that the Fishery Board over which he presides is the only one in the country composed totally of men connected with the fishery. I refer the hon. member to the Fishery Board of 1920.

The Minister of Marine and Fisheries in 1920 was certainly a man who knew something about the fisheries. I don't think Captain Winsor will have the audacity to stand up and say he was not, Mr. McDougall was also a member. He was a man who was member of every Fishery Board since Fishery Boards came into existence. No one in this House would have the hardihood to stand up and say that he knew nothing about the fisheries. He began his business by engaging in the lobster industry in Herring Neck. Then again there is Sir Michael Cashin. Would the Minister say that he was not a practical man conversant with fishery matters?

Now then I come to the Fishery Board in the administration of Sir Richard Squires. The members of that Fishery Board had as much knowledge as the men on the Board to-day, and I dare to challenge the Minister of Marine and Fisheries to contradict it. Mr. Grimes was a member of that Board. He was not an expert by any means, but he could give practical and sensible advice concerning the operation of the fisheries. He was a man who it was felt could give sound and sensible advice. I notice the name of Mr. W. F. Penney. Mr. Penney certainly always knew what he was talking about where fishery matters were concerned. He had a large experience as a business man in this country. Mr. Jennings was a member of that Board. He was a practical man and always gave a sensible and practical opinion where matters relating to the herring fishery were concerned. He had a unique experience in that industry. Taking it all round the Fishery Board under the Squires Administration was as good as the Board of to-day and the Minister of Marine and Fisheries is not playing the game in eulogizing his own Board and decoying previous Boards.

Now, the Leader of the Independent Party said he felt the lobsters should be left peacefully alone for a few years, but if what I can hear is right they will not be left alone, unless the Government puts into being some machinery whereby the present law will be enforced. I feel that unless the Government promotes machinery to enforce the law as to the close season, and to see that its provisions are carried out the results anticipated will not justify the close season. Now referring to the Fishery Board again. Capt. Winsor just said that a lot of small Linnet is being put into cod-traps this year, if that be so, what he is hearing is different from what I hear.

MINISTER OF FISHERIES—I said I heard that was so.

MR. SCAMMELL—Well I hear that more big Linnet is being put into traps on a larger scale than ever. The Captain, of course, knows the reason of that. Again Mr. Chairman, I would like to impress upon the Minister that unless means are taken to see that the provision is made for the enforcement of the Bill all efforts will be futile in this direction.

MINISTER OF FISHERIES—Mr. Chairman, I would like to make a few remarks in reply. I only said that I heard of small Linnet. The hon. member for St. Barbe made reference to Mr. McDougall as being on the Fshery Board. He was on the Board with me, and I must say he was a good man. As to Mr. Jennings, in his young days, I understand he was a fisherman, but some thirty-five years ago he took charge of a Lighthouse, and was up to the time he got in the Government. As to Mr. Coaker who held the position of Chairman ex-officio, he knew something about the fisheries, but how often did he attend the Meeting of the Board. I think I will take the trouble to find out.

MR. HICKMAN—Mr. Chairman, I notice that there is nothing in this Bill governing the times as to the export of lobster, and I do not see how we are to know if a man packed his catch in 1925 or before. I think something should be inserted in the Bill to cover this.

MINISTER OF MARINE & FISHERIES—I may say for the information of the Honourable the Leader of the Opposition that all the labels unused in packing are to be sent back, and even if they are not sent back a man would have to get a license to pack. Of course he may do so without a license and say he had done the packing before. I would like to and the word "buy" between the words "catch" and "sell".

MR. WARREN—Does that mean that nobody can buy a can of lobsters now?

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—As Mr. Warren says, though the lobsters were caught before he could not buy them now.

MR. BROWNE—Mr. Chairman, yesterday I noticed the omission of that word "buy" from the Bill, and I was thinking that if someone approached a catcher of lobsters and bought a quantity he would then not be liable under the Act. A man who had them in his store could give a very good explanation as to having them there by saying he bought them, and he would not be liable. He might have killed them himself, but there would be no offence when he would buy them. I suggest the wording to be "kill, take, catch or sell, buy or can any lobsters killed, taken or caught."

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—As it at present stands there is nothing provided as to when the lobsters were caught.

MR. BROWN — Mr. Chairman, while I am on my feet I may say that I heartily support the principle of the Bill. I was listening to the speech of the hon. minister, in which he referred to the matter of magistrates in the Outports inflicting fines under other Bills for the protection of this fishery. I think there will be considerable difficulty in this connection, as no provision was made for a minimum fine, or an increased fine for the second offence. It is possible that a magistrate may take advantage of this Act, and considering circumstances in the goodness of his heart, inflict a fine of only one dollar. Where there is no minimum fine, it might be profitable for a man to go into the industry and catch the lobsters, because there is a chance that he would not be fined the maximum amount, and it would pay him. I think that this situation should be covered in the Act. Sub-Section 2 of Section 3 does not say what the man shall be in charge of, whether a boat, store, or anything else. I think these three matters should be amended, and then the Bill would be better. As I see it, it does not now cover very much.

MR. DUFF—It seems to me strange, Mr. Chairman, that in a country like this, we should not be allowed to have a few fresh lobsters. I know a lot of people who engage in catching lobsters, and I suggest that some provision be made to allow them to sell the lobsters fresh.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Mr. Chairman, I would suggest to the hon. minister in charge of the Bill, that we rise the Committee, as it seems that there are many important matters in it to be straightened out; if it be put into effect it should not prevent a man selling a few fresh lobsters, though the wording of it says so. There is quite a lot of lobster brought in from outside of the Colony, the sale of which cannot possible affect our fishery, and I think this Section ought to be recast. It is absurd to say that a man cannot import what has been caught outside.

MR. HICKMAN—I think the suggestion of the hon. member for Carbonear is worth considering. I do not see why we could not buy fresh lobster. If the Government's idea as to the influx of touists materializes we will want a few fresh lobsters to supply them.

MR. WARREN—Mr. Chairman, I think the suggestion of the Honourable the Minister of Justice is a good one, and as drawn attention to by Mr. Browne there is something left out of Section 2. With the rising of the Committee, these defects can be remedied.

Mr. Speaker resumed the Chair.

The Chairman from the Committee reported that they had considered the matter to them referred, had made some progress and asked leave to sit again on to-morrow.

On motion this Report was received and adopted, and it was ordered that the Committee have leave to sit again on to-morrow.

Pursuant to order and on motion of Hon. the Minister of Justice, the House resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole to consider the Bill entitled "An Act Relating to Firearms."

Mr. Speaker left the Chair.

Mr. Puddister took the Chair of Committee.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Mr. chairman: In connection with this Bill I would like to invite the attention of hon. members to the purport of it. With regard to the point raised by the member for St. Barbe respecting the carrying of firearms by our fishermen throughout the country and as to whether or not it is necessary for those to be registered. That point is answered by Section 8 of the Bill. Strictly speaking the object of the Bill, which happens to be a rescript of the English Act for local purposes, is not to cause unnecessary bother to people; but to keep track of small arms.

I am quite ready and pleased to get the views of the members before proceeding at all with the Bill. I would like to point out that it is not our intention to inflict any unnecessary bother or annoyance on the people of the country. We could insert under clause 8 "rifles" and cut out the words "smooth bore." This would leave exempt Rifles and Shot Guns and would cover everything as far as our own people are concerned.

I would like to say that the situation as I explained the other day is shortly this. This Bill is brought into the House for the purpose of putting into effect legislation to control what is going to be a very serious evil here. Members would be surprised at the number of revolvers that half responsible people in St. John's are going around town with to-day. That is a menace to the community. The police want to be in some position to control. There is no possible method of controlling the carrying of weapons of that kind at present. As far as the other weapons are concerned you will recognize in such a country as ours it is impossible to put rifles in the same category as across the water. Even applying to have the Magistrate issue licenses is in many cases unnecessary bother. My object in moving the House into Committee instead of deferring it is to get the opinion of the members concerning it. It is absolutely necessary to get legislation concerning the use of firearms. It is particularly important in view of the fact that in centres where men are congregating in industrial works the carrying about of firearms is a menace to people from the outside more than our own people. It is nothing more or less than the idea of having some form of safety. What I am desirous of is getting the views of the Members on the general principle of the Bill. I do not intend to ask members to pass this Bill today. It is just to get the views of the members as to whether the House will accept the principle of the thing. It is not desired to inflict an act that cannot be carried out.

I think we ought to avail of the suggestion of the authorities to put into effect some form of legislation. We have had two tragedies. One very serious when a Chinaman ran amuck here, and another when a death occurred because of the possession of a revolver.

The Registration of Possession is the accepted principle. What I would ask the House to consider is this. You take the tragedy like that of the Chinaman. It was due to the fact that there was no method of keeping track of small arms. The vein of thought of those people is different. Their viewpoint is different from a Newfoundlander's who uses his fist. The idea is bred in him. The other people have recourse to firearms, so we feel that small arms should be kept track of. But I am anxious to have the opinion of the members as to what they think of the Bill.

MR. WARREN—Mr. Chairman: Yesterday I suggested that the Bills be distributed before we were asked to discuss them in the second reading. Had I had a chance of seeing this Bill before going to its second reading I certainly would have voted against it. This Bill will be like the Cigarette Act, the Lottery Act, the Prohibition Act and many other Acts. They purposed to do a lot and they are never going to be observed. Now if it was necessary to keep track of small arms in the possession of individuals it is quite easy to do it. But to have a Bill of 4 pages devising all sorts of things and then not to apply to the main things, must become more than a farce. The Minister of Justice stated that the Bill was a rescript of of English Law. With this I beg to differ. Under this Bill you are not allowed to keep firearms in your house, for your own particular use, unless you are exempted by any one section of the Bill. I took occassion to look at the English Law to-day. There is no such Law as that in England. As far as I can see it is nothing more or less than officialdom for no purpose. If a man wants to murder somebody, if he wants to use a revolver, no man is going to do it in the street. But if he is going to use it, it will be in some place where he won't be seen. You have as much chance of stopping a man having a revolver in his possession as stopping a boy now from using a catapult. In England there was an Act brought in in 1870. It provided for the carrying of firearms. And the keeping of a gun in ones dwelling house was exempted from that Act. The Act itself is cumbersome. It is going to be more honoured in the breach than in the observance. But if it is necessary to keep a record of small arms it can be done much more simply than by this Act. If rifles are exempted from this Act as well as shot guns it refers then solely and only to revolvers and small arms and you have to take out some sections whereby you cannot bring sealing rifles ashore from sealing vessels without permission from the policeman. This will only lead to a breach of the Law. Every man who gets a gun without taking out a license and who is not exempted by any of the sections of the Act is liable to a penalty not exceeding 200 dollars. In England the penalty is 10 pounds or 50 dollars. How is the Inspector General going to say how much ammunition a man up in Bay D'Espoir is going to need to keep in his house. I am prepared to support a Bill restricing the use of revolvers, in order to prevent catastrophes as we have had. But regarding this Bill as it stands, I propose to vote against it, and I move as an amendment to the first section that the Committee rise without reporting.

HON THE LEADER OF THE OPPOSITION—It looks as if the Hon. Minister of Justice is introducing this Bill and does not expect it to be carried out. I should think that if he intends to have only the registration of small arms that would be enough, and would cover the situation well enough. It is not any use to put a law on the Statute Book unless it is intended that it is to be carried out. I think that it might be carried out in its entirety. I would think that the Hon. Minsiter would give this matter his attention and have the Bill passed which would just cover what he intends and than have it carried in its entirety.

MR. WARREN—Mr. Chairman: From what the Hon. Minister has just said I am prepared to withdraw the motion which I have made. I do not think that it will stop criminals just to know that they are registered. If a man finds a revolver of his own or one left around by somebody else he will use it if he wants to. I think that for what it is worth it might be put through.

MR. DUFF—Mr. Chairman, I would like to say that I do not think that this act is very applicable to the outports. There are not any people in the outports who carry small fire arms. If the law is made for St. John's then it should be made for St. John's. Everybody in the outports who wants to carry a gun must apply to the Inspector General and I think that that would be rather unnecessary and cumbersome. There is one thing I would like to refer to, and that is when we come back after the next election as a government, the people over around my district have a lot of these old sealing guns and when the people fire these there is as much danger to the person of the person, who is being celebrated as anybody else, so I would like to see something in this that would protect the people concerned. The firing of guns in towns should be prohibited, but fishermen and trappers should not be compelled to apply to the Inspector General in St. John's when they desire to go out and shoot something for their dinner, and the same thing applies to outport stores that may handle a bag of shot or keg of gunpowder. I would ask the reconsideration of the Government on this matter.

MR. ASHBOURNE—Mr. Chairman, I would like to make a few remarks upon the bill now before the Committee. I agree with the Hon. Minister of Justice that the act should be amended, as far as the outports are concerned, to include rifles. The people in the outports are dependent to a great extent on their rifles. Practically every man who goes fishing owns a gun. When he goes out to the fishing grounds he wants to shoot tern and other sea game and they often use guns to provide fresh meat for themselves and their families. I think that so far as the outports are concerned it is out of the question to debar fishermen from possessing rifles. I notice in the act that there is no amount stated for the payment of the fee. I would like to know the amount it is intended to charge.

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE

—Mr. Chairman, it was my own idea not to have any at all. If we are to have a fee it will be merely nominal to provide for the cost of the station. The sole object is protection and not revenue.

MR. ASHBOURNE—Mr. Chairman, with regard to Section 8, I understand that clerks in the banks are in the habit of having revolvers for the protection of money. I do not see any reference to them in this bill. I think that that is a thing that should be taken up. With regard to the outports I think that it should be arranged so that the magistrates or the local constables are able to effect the registration of small arms and so save considerable trouble in having to communicate with the Inspector General here in St. John's. I would like to endorse what has been said by the hon. member for Carbonear, with regard to firing of guns at political meetings. I also want to refer to that section about the supplies of ammunition by freight to the outports. I think that should be worded so as to include firms or companies carrying on business of common carriers.

MR. SCAMMELL—Mr. Chairman, I would like to say that I am in accord with the remarks of the Hon. Minister of Justice and I think that the intention of registering revolvers is a good one. I have thought for some time that there ought to be some sort of rigorous regulation in force as regards the purchase and carrying of revolvers because at the present time any criminal or crook or lunatic can go down to any hardware store and purchase one whenever he feels like it. I think that from that point of view the idea is a good one but I do not think that the Government ought to go to the extreme and bring in a lot of red tape about the ownership of fowling and sealing guns. The men in the outports have to have guns. Sometimes they want to provide fresh food for their families, such as fowl or other game, and often they have to use guns for signals. Guns must be taken to the Labrador, and I don't think that it is necessary as regards the fishermen, that they should be obligated to take out licenses for their guns. I think that the Minister of Justice might change the bill in that connection and still have the registration for revolvers and small arms.

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE —Mr. Chairman, I am glad to have got the suggestions of the hon. members in connection with this bill. I appreciate the suggestions that have been given. I have given some thought as regards the bill and I think that it will have to be altered to arrange for the matter of the guns for the fishermen. I thank the hon. members for the contribution of ideas. I move that the committee rise and report progress and ask leave to sit again on to-morrow.

Mr. Speaker resumed the chair.

The Chairman from the Committee reported that they had considered the matter to them referred, had made some progress, and asked leave to sit again on to-morrow.

On motion this Report was received and adopted, and it was ordered that the Committee have leave to sit again on to-morrow.

Second reading of the Bill, An Act to Amend Chapter 25 (Consolidated Statutes, 3rd series) entitled "Of Light Dues."

HON. THE MINISTER OF FINANCE—Mr. Speaker, this bill is not very important and yet it is. It is in connection with the taxes on vessels and we propose to amend it as follows:—

(Hon. Minister reads the bill.)

So that it is only the intention of this bill to take the taxes off local vessels, and foreign vessels will still have to pay. That is really all. I would like to move that this bill be read the second time.

Pursuant to order and on motion of Hon. the Minister of Finance the Bill entitled "An Act to Amend Chapter 25 of the Consolidated Statutes (Third Series) entitled 'Of Light Dues' was read a second time and it was ordered that the said Bill be referred to a Committee of the Whole House on to-morrow.

Second reading of the Bill an act to amend Cap. 127 of the Consolidated Statutes, 3rd Series, entitled "An Act Respecting Companies" and the Acts amending it.

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE —Mr. Speaker, in moving the second reading of the bill I think that it would be best to have it referred to a select committee. There may be points that may possibly arise and we can get the advantage of the committee's experience which contained the hon. member for Fortune Bay. The bill is of a tremendous size and even on that account I think that we ought to refer it to the select committee.

Pursuant to order and on motion of Hon. the Minister of Justice the Bill entitled "An Act Respecting Companies" was read a second time, and it was ordered that the said Bill be referred to a Select Committee for consideration.

The Committee to consist of Hon. the Minister of Justice, Hon. the Colonial Secretary, Hon. Mr. Cramm, Mr. Warren, Mr. Hickman.

Pursuant to order and on motion of The Minister of Agriculture, the Bill entitled "An Act to Amend Cap. 24 of the Consolidated Statutes (Third Series) entitled 'Of Payment of Certain Fees and Charges by Stamps' was read a second time and it was ordered that the said Bill be referred to a Committee of the Whole House on to-morrow.

Pursuant to order and on motion of The Minister of Agriculture, the Bill entitled "An Act to Amend Chapter 134 of the Consolidated Statutes (Third Series) entitled 'Of the Operation of Saw Mills" was read a second time, and it was ordered that the said Bill be referred to a Committee of the Whole House on to-morrow.

Pursuant to order and on motion of The Minister of Agriculture, the Bill entitled "An Act Further to Amend Chapter 129 of the Consolidated Statues (Third Series) entitled 'Of Crown Lands, Timber, Mines and Minerals" was read a second time, and it was ordered that the said Bill be referred to a Committee of the Whole House on to-morrow.

Pursuant to order and on motion of Hon. the Minister of Justice, the House resolved itself into Committee of the Whole to consider the Bill entitled "An Act to Amend 11 George V., Capt. 45, entitled 'An Act to Incorporate the Women's Patriotic Trust Fund and for other Purposes.'"

Mr. Speaker left the Chair.

Mr. Puddester took the Chair of Committee.

Mr. Speaker resumed the Chair.

The Chairman from the Committee reported that they had considered the matter to them referred and had passed the said Bill without amendment.

On motion this report was received and adopted and it was ordered that the said Bill be read a third time on to-morrow.

Pursuant to order and on motion of Hon. the Minister of Justice, the House resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole to consider the Bill entitled "An Act Further to Amend the Act 61 Victoria, Cap. 47, entitled 'An Act relating to the Constitution of the Supreme Court, and the Acts in amendment thereof.'"

Mr. Speaker left the Chair.

Mr. Puddester took the Chair of Committee.

Mr. Speaker resumed the Chair.

The Chairman from the Committee reported that they had considered the matter to them referred and had passed the said Bill without amendment.

On motion this report was received and adopted, and it was ordered that the said Bill be read a third time on to-morrow.

Second reading of a Bill entitled "An Act to Amend Chapter 11 of the Consolidated Statutes (3rd Series) entitled 'Of the House of Assembly.'"

MR. HICKMAN—Mr. Speaker, I would like to have the second reading of this Bill deferred for some time. We have not had an opportunity yet to look it over, and I think that the second reading should be postponed.

HON. PRIME MINISTER — Mr. Speaker, there is no intention at all on the part of the Government to push this Bill through, and the Opposition may have all the time they like to postpone it from time to time. It is our intention eventually to refer it to a Select Committee, so that we may show that it is not our intention to pass this Bill in any great hurry. I hope, however, that during this session of the Legislature this Bill may become law, and that it may not be deferred beyond the present session.

I would like to make a few remarks regarding this Bill. The total population in Newfoundland in 1921, according to the census, was 259,259. The percentage of increase 1911 to 1921 was less than seven per cent., the smallest for thirty years. The population of Conception Bay (except Bell Island) has not increased in twenty years. In Port de Grave, Harbour Grace and Carbonear districts a slight decrease has occurred, and in Bay de Verde the increase has been small. North and West of Avalon, on the main Island, there has been an increase.

A redistribution of constituencies for representatives in the Assembly is therefore necessary, increasing those in the North and West, and it is desirable that a division of those large districts, each represented by three and two members, should take place.

In any plan for redistribution it is desirable to bear in mind certain almost fundamental consderations, as for instance:

(a) the religious denominations to which the people of the various sections belong;
(b) the great extent of certain existing districts and the need of division;
(c) the trade and social intercourse between localities, so as not to unduly disturb them;
(d) the occupations of the people, and the importance of securing representation of various industries; and, finally,
(e) the history of existing constituencies, so as to preserve their historical continuity as far as convenience will permit.

Redistribution of seats in the Assembly has been a slow process. The districts of St. George's and St. Barbe were created in 1878, thus enfranchising the people of the French Treaty Coast (so-called), but otherwise the changes have been slight from 1872 or previously. In 1873 the district of Twillingate and Fogo was given three members instead of two, and in 1885 Fogo was created a separate district, with one member. In 1890 the Representation Act delimited all the districts as they at present exist.

In 1891 the population was 202,040, or 5,611 per member. In 1901 it was 220,984, or 6,141 per member. In 1911 it was 242,619, or 6,806 per member, and in 1921 it was 259,259, or 7,222 per member. In the proposal now submitted, provision is made for an increase of four seats, or a total of forty, which gives 6,500 as the average per member of the number of people according to the census of 1921. An increase of membership in the Assembly may be objected to as tending to increase the cost of elections and sessional pay, but the objection would yield to the arguments in favour of the increase.

For instance, the Roman Catholic population of the island numbers 86,-151, or about one-third of the total, and as denominational interests are very jealously regarded in this Colony in relation to political matters, it is of first importance to secure, if possible, such redistribution as shall provide that one-third of the new districts shall have a Roman Catholic majority. Minorities are naturally jealous for the preservation of their rights, and every reasonable effort should be made to guard them.

Outside of Avalon and the St. George district, the Roman Catholic people are so scattered that it is not reasonably possible to create constituencies in which they have a majority. But in the districts of Placentia, Ferryland and Harbour Man, now represented by seven members, they have clear majorities, and for the six seats in St. John's East and West it has been usual, by an understanding or convention between parties, to return five Roman Catholic members, making, with St. George, thirteen Roman Catholic seats. The population of St. John's East and West, according to the present boundaries, is 52,158, of which 26,172 are Roman Catholics, or very slightly over one-half, so that there is, in fact, no reliable denominational majority in the city. To rearrange St. John's East and West so as to provide sufficient districts with a Roman Catholic majority has been difficult, but the proposal now submitted has carved out four districts:

St. John's City (West)	2
St. John's East (extern) ..	1
Bell Island	1

With such a majority, and by adding a second member to what is left of St. George district, the twelfth Roman Catholic majority has been provided. Those, with one of the two seats in St. John's City (East), would give the thirteen Roman Catholic seats.

Port de Grave, Harbour Grace and Carbonear have smaller populations than in 1901, and Bay de Verde has an increase of about 450 only. The three former districts also decreased between 1901 and 1911, while Bay de Verde increased only about 400 in the same period; that is to say, for twenty years the population of these four districts has lost its natural increase by migration or emigration. Harbour Grace, which has three representatives, must lose one, and Carbonear and Bay de Verde, which together have three, must also lose one. On the other hand, Trinity, Bonavista, Twillingate, St. Barbe and St. George districts have increased in population and require increased representation.

In any scheme for redistribution a very important thing to be borne in mind is the extensive coastline of the large electoral districts on the East, West and South Coasts of the main Island. The settlements in these are so scattered, and the mileage is so great, that it is quite difficult and almost impossible for representatives to pay proper attention to the wants of the people, and divisions into constituencies smaller in area is practically essential. The need of dividing St. Barbe and St. George, because of their great extent, and of creating a new district by division of Burgeo and Fortune, are reasons justifying the increase of seats to forty.

On the South Coast, the districts of Burgeo & LaPoile and of Fortune are very extensive. The places are very numerous and the population of each very small. It seems desirable to make a new constituency out of the eastern part of Burgeo & LaPoile district and the western part of Fortune Bay district, which new constituency we will call "Hermitage Bay". Even with three districts where two were before, candidates will have no easy task to visit their numerous places.

The industry at Grand Falls has within recent years put a large population into the district of Twillingate, and these people have little in common with the other inhabitants of the district, who are chiefly fishermen. A new constituency called "Exploits", extending from Botwood on the east to Millertown on the west, is, therefore, now proposed. The Humber industry bids fair to create similar conditions in the Humber region, now a part of St. George district, and as the population of this district and its area justify increased representation, a new constituency has been created called "Humber", including Bay of Islands and the Humber River section as far east as Millertown. The remainder of St. George is divided into the districts of Port au Port and of St. George, divided by the river St. George. This section of the Colony may be expected to increase rapidly in population. Port au Port is given the Roman Catholic seat which Ferryland loses.

Trinity Bay has been divided into South, Centre and North, and that part of the Bonavista peninsula, which included Catalina and Bonavista sections, has been created a constituency by itself. South and Centre constituencies (which latter would include all the islands in the Bay from Little Denier Island to Greenspond, inclusive) have been created, and "Bonavista South" will include the mainland from Hare Bay, "The Straight Shore" of Fogo, as far north as Ladle Cove, and all the adjacent islands east of Greenspond. The population of Fogo is above the number which would be represented by one man, and the inclusion of a part of Fogo in Bonavista North coincides with the relation of the people and the geographical position.

Twillingate will consist of the Two Twillingate Islands and New World Island, inhabited almost wholly by fishermen. Lewisporte will extend from the northern boundary line of Fogo to the Exploits River, and across the river to New Bay: that is to say, the Fortune Harbour part. The island adjacent on the east (except Twillingate and New World Islands) would be included in Lewisporte. Then comes the district of Exploits mentioned above, and then the district of Green Bay, extending from New Bay to Cape John, with its adjacent islands. St. Barbe district is divided by a line drawn southwards along the centre of the peninsula from a point west of Boat Harbour to a line drawn eastward from Cape Gregory, the northern boundary of the new district of the Humber.

By a conventional arrangement, referred to previously, St. John's West has usually returned one Protestant and two Roman Catholics (when the latter had an actual majority in the district), but in 1919 it returned two Protestants (one on each side) and one Roman Catholic. It is now proposed to create a one man constituency out of the South Side and parts external to the city, with a Protestant majority, leaving the city part as a two man district with a Roman Catholic majority.

St. John's East had during recent years, returned three Roman Catholic members, but it is now proposed to create the constituencies of Bell Island and St. John's East (Extern) both of which will have Roman Catholic majorities, and to make a two-man district of the eastern end of the city for which the conventional arrangement would be to elect one Protestant and one Roman Catholic. This arrangement will be in accordance with the principle of fair play applied to the whole Island.

From this redistribution may be expected a number of beneficial results. It now takes from six to eight weeks to adequately canvass any one of the three man districts, such as Trinity, Bonavista or Twillingate, and as long for St. Barbe and St. George. Redistribution would permit thorough canvassing in half, or less than half the time. In the old days it was possible to find candidates ready to give the time required for canvassing, but it is extremely difficult now, and after the redistribution I would expect a busier class of men to offer themselves as candidates than can be obtained under existing conditions. Under the present system, where there are three members for one constituency, it is usual to secure an outstanding man as leader of the team, and to fill in with less prominent men. After redistribution each candidate will have to do his own canvassing, as it were, and, having more responsibility thrust upon him, will probably be a man of more individuality. Under the present system, the people of one part of a district not infrequently have very little communication with the people of other parts, and as a result there is a sort of compromise amongst them, and the people in the South vote for the candidate from the North and vice versa; and very frequently all the Centre has no special representation whatever. After redistribution, the areas of constituencies being much smaller, a natural result will be that candidates will be better known personally to the electors than under the present system, and an increase of local candidates, so-called, might naturally be expected. Then, under the present system, the expense of canvassing the large constituencies is very considerable. The smaller areas will call for less money and for less time, and for this reason candidates will be more easily procurable. Redistribution should improve the standard of qualification for candidates; busy men who now keep out of public life might be expected to take a greater interest. Then, too, there will be increased attention to the districts when the representatives have to be personally responsible to the electors, not being able to "pass the buck" to any other representatives, and will at the same time be able to obtain a much greater personal knowledge of affairs in the smaller districts they would represent. Some good might result, too, from the special attention which candidates could give to the avocation of the people in smaller districts. In the constituency of Twillingate, for instance, as it at present exists, the pulp industry has nothing in common with the fishing industry of the greater part of the district, and a candidate who well represents the one industry can hardly be expected to represent the other adequately; that is to say, the man who is preferred by the people of Grand Falls cannot naturally be preferred by the people of Twillingate Island, or of the many other small islands which form so large a part of the constituency. The Humber Industry bears the same relation to the district of St. George. It is industrial, while the greater part of the district is agricultural. Under this scheme of redistribution, labour will probably be represented by the members for the districts of Exploits and Humber, and in view of the growing interest in labour in this Colony, it is desirable that it should be amply represented. Take it all in all, it will be agreed, upon consideration of the matter, that a very great advantage may be expected to result to the Colony from a redistribution of seats hereby submitted.

By this proposed redistribution, no three-man constituencies are left, and only three two-man districts:—Harbor Main, St. John's City (West) and St. John's City (East), which is left as at present because division is impossible without depriving the Roman Catholics of a seat.

The comparative interests of Church of England and Methodist representation will work out almost precisely on existing lines.

These are all the districts, gentlemen. This section here (indicates (white space on map in interior of country) is the one for which I shall stand myself in four years time unless the Government do better in the next four years than the previous Government did in their four years term. Mr. Speaker, I beg to move the Bill be read a second time, and referred to a Select Committee so as to enable every member both on the Opposition side of the House and this side, an opportunity to examine the new boundaries of their districts and to make any amendments—in a small way—which we would consider. But if drastic changes in the boundaries are suggested the whole plan as to the redistribution, would topple to the ground like a house of cards. I may say that we are not pleased to have the number of representatives increased to forty, but we could not see any other way out. As a matter of fact I would rather have had the number reduced. It may be remembered that when I first went on the political platform I was credited with saying that I would like to turn Newfoundland into a Crown Colony and I was called Crown Colony Monroe, and told that I would never have a chance of election. But though I may or may not like to turn the country into a Crown Colony, I do think that half a dozen men could administer its affairs as well as forty. But while the people of the different districts wish to be represented as they are entitled to be, I think they will be better off under this new arrangement than before, and I look forward to the time when the various sections will call out their own men. We have splendid men in the outports who know their districts better than we in St. John's do, but what is happening. Somebody comes along and says, "Monroe, you go down to Bonavista"—and what is the result; we go down to some district or other without even being asked to do so by the people of the place. That is what is happening but under this new arrangement the people will take a greater interest in the matter of who is to represent them, and call out their own men. That is what I hope to see the people doing in the near future.

MR. SCAMMELL—Mr. Speaker, if it is the intention of the Prime Minister to defer consideration of the Bill this afternoon, I would like to suggest that we ought to have drafted some parts from the Census of 1921, showing the settlements and the population in each case, included in the proposed districts. I think that honorable members will appreciate that that information is necessary to have, and I think that the Government ought to be able to get that information within a very short time. Take St. Barbe District for instance. What I am asking for is a list of the settlements comprised in each of the two new proposed districts and showing the population of each settlement.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—If we give you the boundaries, surely anybody can do that for himself.

MR. SCAMMELL—I do not think that the members themselves ought be obliged to go and do it. I think the Government ought to provide that information.

HON. THE COLONIAL SECRETARY—Mr. Speaker, I think the suggestion of the honourable member for St. Barbe a reasonable one and one very easy of accomplishment. I will undertake to get an official in my department to furnish the information It only needs referring to the Census and compiling the returns for the places outlined in this Bill.

Pursuant to order and on motion of Hon. the Prime Minister, the Bill entitled "An Act to Amend Chapter 2 of the Consolidated Statutes (Third Series) entitled 'Of the House of Assembly'" was read a second time and it was ordered that the said Bill be referred to a Select Committee for consideration.

The Committee to consist of Hon. the Prime Minister, Hon. Minister of Justice, Mr. Warren, Mr. Power, Mr. Hickman.

The remaining Orders of the Day were deferred.

It was moved and seconded that when the House rises, it adjourn until to-morrow at three of the clock p.m.

The House then adjouned accordingly.

WEDNESDAY, March 4, 1925.

The House opened at three of the clock in the afternoon, pursuant to adjournment.

Mr. Speaker informed the House that in accordance with the intimation received, His Excellency the Governor would receive the Address in Reply presently.

Accordingly Mr. Speaker and the House proceeded to Government House, and being returned to the Assembly Rooms, Mr. Speaker informed the House that His Excellency had received the Address of Thanks, and had been pleased to reply thereto as follows:

Government House,
St. John's, Nfld.

Mr. Speaker and Gentlemen of the Honourable House of Assembly:

I thank you for your Address in Reply to the Speech with which your present Session was opened.

(Sgd.) W. L. ALLARDYCE, Governor.

MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE & MINES—Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present a petition from the people of Branch in the District of Placentia & St. Mary's for a grant of money to effect repairs and complete the breakwater which is siituated there. In 1919 the Government allocated one thousand dollars for the building of this breakwater, and the amount of money was not sufficient to complete the work, and they require another one thousand dollars to finish the work. It is very essential because of the situation of Branch. It is a poor harbor, and if the winds are any way from S.S.W. to S.E., they blow right into the harbor and because of the sea it becomes almost impossible for the boats to enter or leave it. My colleagues and myself had occasion to visit the place on one or two occasions, and we were nearly lost. We had to be taken off the boat in which we were by some people of the place. If anybody who does not know the place tries to go into the famous Branch Gut they are almost certain to meet with disaster. On the occasion on which my colleagues and myself were there, we were not rescued before we had a good drenching and well scared. These people have to live under extreme hardship, and I support the petition heartily and would ask that it be referred to the department to which it belongs.

MR. SINNOTT—Mr. Speaker, I beg to support the petition.

HON. MR. SULLIVAN—Mr. Speaker, I beg to support the petition. The breakwater is badly needed there. The men of the place have to fish under very trying conditions. They have to risk their lives every time they go out of the harbor. If this petition were granted it would make it possible for the men of the place to carry on their fishing under very much better conditions.

HON. MR. CRAMM—I beg leave to present a petition from the people of Old Perlican and Biscayan Cove on the subject of a road. This road has been made necessary by the fact that a new road has been located and built from Old Perlican to Lead Cove during the past two years. The old road has fallen into disuse, and it was used very extensively by the people of Old Perlican and Biscayan Cove. At the present time they have to go a distance of about two miles at very considerable inconvenience to connect with the new road. A distance of one-eighth of a mile of road at the cost of about a thousand or twelve hundred dollars, would connect these two settlements with the new road and it would be a great convenience to the people, and I am sure they would greatly appreciate it. I have pleasure in giving this petition my hearty support and ask that it be referred to the department to which it relates.

MR. PUDDESTER—Mr. Speaker, I beg to suport the petition presented by my colleague, Hon. Mr. Cramm.

MR. BROWNE—Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present a petition from the people of St. John's West residing in the neighbourhood of Mundy's Pond on the matter of the boundaries of the city. Some time ago the boundaries of the city, I think that it was in 1921, were changed and a large section which was formerly outside the city were put within the city boundaries. This petition is signed by all the residents who are property holders in this section of the district and they are without those facilities which the people of the city enjoy. They have no water connection and no sanitary conveniences or fire protection whatsoever. On four or five occasions the people have been obliged to stand outside their houses and watch them while they burned down. They have no fire alarms or anything of that kind at all, and the roads are in a bad condition. They feel that the Government might possibly be able to do something in the matter. The matter was brought to the notice of the City Council and their suggestion was that the petition should be brought before the House of Assembly and that is why I am bringing it up here to-day. I have much pleasure in asking leave to present this petition because I think that the matter is one which should be considered in the conference about to be held between the Government and the Municipal Council.

HON. THE MINISTER OF FINANCE—Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to support this petition. The people of this section of the town especially in the neighbourhood of the Ropewalk have none of the town facilities. I give this matter my hearty support because I feel sure that the Government intends doing something in this matter at an early date.

MR. HALFYARD—Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present a petition from the Reverend Canon Smart, the Rev. Ezra Broughton and about one hundred and thirty electors of Heart's Content, on the subject of putting the road from Heart's Content to Carbonear in better condition, and also that a second street be built through the town of Heart's Content. Mr. Speaker the petition is of such importance and to express the wishes of the people clearly I would crave the permission of the House to read it. (Reads the petition.)

Mr. Speaker, those who have had occasion to travel from Carbonear to Heart's Content know that the road is in a very bad condition and those who travel that way in motor cars or carriages run the risk of having their cars or waggons damaged, as the road in some places is almost impassable, due to rocks and ruts. If it is the intention of the Government to spend monies on public highways I am sure that they could not do better than granting the request of the petitioners which speaks about prohibiting the cutting of trees about a hundred yards from the road will I am sure appeal to the House and to the community as a whole. The distructive propensities are so great in us that if we see a good tree we are not satisfied until it is cut down. I think that the protection of the trees is necessary and to the interest of the people of the country. With regard to the building of the second street through the town I may say that Heart's Content is one of the most thickly populated towns of the outports and the petitioners think it is necessary, and I support the request, if the Government and the country can afford it. The inhabitants of Heart's Content are directly and particularly interested in the road to Carbonear, but thousands of people are interested in this road. The people of the adjoining settlements and places down the shore from Heart's Content to Lead Cove, which take a large part of the district, in the prosecution of their business to travel that way, and the same applies to that section of the district from Heart's Content up. Therefore, the Government would be conferring a great benefit on the people of that district by acceeding to this petition. I have, therefore, much pleasure in giving this petition by heartiest support, and I ask that it be referred to the Prime Minister or the Government for consideration.

CAPT. RANDELL—I would also like to support the petitioners in the matter brought up by my colleague, Mr. Halfyard, in connection with the District of Trinity. I think that it is most important that there should be a road from Heart's Content to Carbonear. In fact, I know of no road outside of the district of St. John's which is so much travelled and used.

MR. GODDEN—Mr. Speaker, I wish to give this petition my very hearty support.

MR. DUFF—Mr. Speaker, I also wish to support the petition presented by Mr. Halfyard, the honourable member for Trinity. I know that road very well from Heart's Content to Carbonear. It is a very narrow road, and needs to be improved. Also in connection with the matter of the trees along the road, I would like to call the attention of the Government that this is a very important matter, particularly in view of the fact that we have so many fire wardens at the present time. For instance in Ferryland District we find there are 16 Fire Wardens, and also in the District of Bay de Verde there are several and I fail to see what their duties are as there are no trees to protect and in view of this I would advise that these wardens should be instructed to preserve the little greenery that is left along the thoroughfares in these districts and also to plant some trees so that there may be something to show for the salaries they receive.

HON. MR. CRAMM—Mr. Speaker, I would also like to support the petition presented by the Honourable member for Trinity, Mr. Halfyard. I know of the necessity for that road, and the great benefit that would be derived from it. I would like to correct a statement that the honourable member for Carbonear made about the district of Bay de Cerde, namely that there were no trees in Bay de Verde district. Last year, we had a forest fire there that caused damage to the extent of several thousands of dollars. That may be news to Mr. Duff.

MR. MOORE—Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present a petition from the fishermen of Admirals, Fermeuse. They ask for a small sum of money to build a wharf at Admirals, Fermeuse, and I might say that Fermeuse is one of the safest harbors on the Southern Shore, and it is frequented by foreign shipping, and by boats going up and down that shore, and I am sorry to say that we have not in that harbor any place for a boat to land; so I hope and trust that the Government will be able to see its way clear to accede to this reasonable request, that is signed by every fisherman of Admirals in Fer-m-use. I know the place, and I know that this is wanted there. I had intended to forward this petition to the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, and see if I could get on his good side to grant this request.

MR. CASHIN—Mr. Speaker, I would like to put myself on record as being in accord with the prayer of the petition presented by my colleague, Mr. Moore. In addition, I would like to say that the names on the petition are familiar to me, and I can see that every fisherman in Admiral's Cove has signed it. I know the place very well, and I may say that these fishermen—the inhabitants of Admiral's Cove—very seldom call upon the Government for assistance of any kind. I may also add that the building of a wharf of this nature, whilst it would not be of very great benefit to outside shipping, it would be of very much more benefit to the local fishermen themselves. At the present time there is no place for the ships going up and down there to land their goods. I am quite sure that the Minister of Marine and Fisheries will do everything possible to see that the prayer of the petition is granted.

MR. LAKE—I beg leave to present a petition from the vessel owners of the town of Fortune, in the Distirct of Burin. I might say that this petition is signed by several vessel owners and captains, and they have taken the trouble to complete a statement which shows here that in Fortune there are twenty-three vessels from 180 tons downwards, having a total of 1,754 tons, engaging in the bank fishery and in the general foreign trade of the country. The town of Fortune is not, as generally supposed, represented by Mr. Warren, but by Mr. Long and myself. It hapepns to be my native town. At present vessels have great trouble in entering this harbor, and during the last two weeks there was a very serious accident, and it was only by the co-operation of the shoremen and fishermen that the vessel was saved. That, I might say, is almost a yearly occurrence. The breakwater at the present time is in a very bad condition, and needs considerable repairs, and in presenting this petition, I give it my heartiest support, and I trust that the department to which it belongs will give it the consideration that it deserves.

HON. MR. LONG—Mr. Speaker, I beg to support the petition presented by my colleague, Mr. Lake. The petition, as he has said, is signed by practically all of the people of Fortune, including vessel owners, and when one considers that nearly 23 banking vessels, or vessels engaged in the trade of the country are owned in Fortune, one realizes that proper harbor facilities are needed in this section. I need hardly say that along the whole West Coast the harbors are badly neglected; and the people are not asking for anything out of reason, when they ask for proper protection for their lives and property, and I trust that when this petition goes to the proper department, it will receive the earnest consideration of the Government; and that we will not again have occasion to present a petition on this matter. It is very seldom that the West Coast sends petitions in, but the coast there is so rugged and open to the sea that breakwaters are things of necessity. I give this petition my heartiest support, and I hope the Government will give the matter their earnest consideration.

MR. CAHILL—Mr. Speaker, as pretty well all the districts are represented on the petition list this afternoon, I think I should not let the opportunity pass without presenting a petition from the district which I represent. I ask leave to present a petition from the fishermen of the settlement of St. Thomas's in the district of Harbour Main, relating to the shore salmon fishery in that district. It is signed by every fisherman in the settlement, and I would ask the Minister of Marine and Fisheries and the Fishery Board to give the matter their prompt and careful attention, and try to see if the prayer of the petition cannot be acceded to at an early date.

HON. MINISTER OF POSTS & TELEGRAPHS—Mr. Speaker, I beg to support the prayer of this petition. I did not know that Mr. Cahill was going to bring it up in the House this afternoon, but I do not think that there is any doubt of the wants and requirements of the people of St. Thomas'. It is very properly called St. Thomas' because St. Thomas himself was a fisherman, and this is a fishing district. I know that the people of this district would not petition for this, if they did not need it, and it must be really necessary for them. I therefore give this petition my hearty supoprt.

MR. WARREN asked Hon. the Prime Minister if it is the intention of the Government to hold an enquiry or investigation into the relations between the British Empire Steel Corporation, Limited, and the Government, and into the operation of the iron mines at Wabana with a view to an amendment of the present contract, if necessary, and the improvement of the relations between that Company and the miners.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—In reply to the honorable member for Fortune, I may say the answer to this question is "yes."

MR. HICKMAN asked the Minister of Public Works if the report is true that Mr. A. Parsons, Governor of H. M. Penitentiary, is to be pensioned in the near future, and Mr. M. M. Young of Spaniard's Bay to be appointed to his place.

MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS—In reply to my honorable friend, the member for Harbor Grace, I may say the matter has never been considered by my Department, and, therefore, I cannot answer it.

MR. BROWN asked the Minister of Public Works on whose recommendation moneys was sent out to Twillingate District other than that recommended by the elected representatives.

MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS—If the honorable member for Twillingate, Mr. Brown will furnish me with an idea of the particular allocation to which he wishes the answer, I will be glad to get him the information to-morrow.

MR. BROWN asked Hon. the Minister of Posts and Telegraphs on whose recommendation the present mail courier between Lewisporte and Boyd's Cove was appointed.

THE MINISTER OF POSTS—In reply I may say that the courier in question was recommended by Mr. J. S.

Ayre, and is doing the work at $10.00 a trip less than the former courier.

(5) MR. ASHBOURNE asked the Minister of Public Works to lay upon the Table of the House a statement showing the number of inmates at the Poor Asylum, the date of entry of each person and the electoral district from which each came.

MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS—The information will be ready to-morrow.

(6) MR. ASHBOURNE asked Hon. the Prime Minister what is the intention of the Government regarding the establishing of a Junior College.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—In reply to the question as to the establishing by the Government of a Junior College, the Government has come to no decision as to what assistance is to be given, but there is an offer from the Carnegie Foundation of an endowment of $15,000.00 a year, which, if accepted, would largely help to pay the cost of the College.

(7) MR. DUFF asked the Minister of Marine and Fisheries the cost of repairs to wharf at Freshwater, B.D. V., in 1924; names of men employed and amounts paid to each, as well as cost of timber and material; also to state on whose property this public money and material was disbursed.

Deferred.

(8) MR. SCAMMELL asked the Minister of Public Works what road moneys, either local, main line or special, have been allocated in the District of Bay de Verde between Sopt Cove and Freshwater inclusive, since June 1st last, and to give names of parties to whom such allocations were made with amounts in each case.

MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS—In reply I may say the answer will be ready for to-morrow.

(9) MR. DUFF asked the Minister of Public Works the amounts paid the United Towns Electric Company for street lighting in the towns of Heart's Content, Carbonear, Harbor Grace, Spaniard's Bay, Bay Roberts, Clarke's Beach and Brigus for years 1923-24; number of street lights in each town and amounts paid for each town.

MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS—In reply to this question, which was No. 6 on the Order Paper of March 3rd, the amount paid for lighting the Dock Bridge, Heart's Content, is $25 per annum. This is the only street light paid for by this Department for the towns mentioned.

(10) MR. GODDEN asked the Minister of Public Works the amount of fire insurance carried by the Government on all Public Buildings, and is this insurance placed with any particular individual; also how many policies in in force during 1923 and 1924 were cancelled.

MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS—Q. Amount of fire insurance carried by the Government on all Public Buildings? Ans. $1,661,200.00.

Q. Is this insurance placed with any particular individual? Ans. No.

Q. How many policies in force during 1923 and 1924 were cancelled? Ans. All policies in force during 1923 and 1924 were cancelled and new policies issued.

MR. HALFYARD — Mr. Speaker, with your permission I would like to ask the Minister of Public Works if the answer to my question on the Order Paper of Feb. 23rd is ready yet.

MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS—I hope to have the answer to-morrow.

MR. SCAMMELL—I would like to ask the Minister of Posts for the answer to my question No. 1 on the Order Paper of March 2nd.

Pursuant to order and on motion of Hon. the Minister of Justice the Bill entitled "An Act to Amend 11 George V., Cap. 45, entitled 'An Act to Incorporate the Women's Patriotic Trust Fund and for other Purposes,'" was read a third time and passed, and it was ordered that the said Bill be engrossed, being entitled as above, and that it be sent to the Legislative Council with a message requesting the concurrence of that body in its provisions.

Pursuant to order and on motion of Hon. the Minister of Justice, the Bill entitled "An Act Further to Amend the Act 61 Victoria, Cap. 47, entitled 'An Act relating to the Constitution of the Supreme Court, and the Acts in amendment thereof,'" was read a third time and passed, and it was ordered that the said Bill be engrossed, being entitled as above, and that it be sent to the Legislative Council with a message requesting the concurrence of that body in its provisions.

Pursuant to order and on motion of Hon. the Minister of Finance and Customs, the House resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole to consider the Bill entitled "An Act to Amend Chapter 25 of the Consolidated Statutes (Third Series), entitled 'Of Light Dues.'"

Mr. Speaker left the Chair.

Mr. Puddester took the Chair of Committee.

HON. THE MINISTER OF FINANCE—This Bill, Mr. Chairman, is only for the removal of taxes on our own vessels trading in the Colony, and as there is nothing contentious in it, I think it might be put through Committee.

Mr. Speaker resumed the Chair.

The Chairman from the Committee reported that they had considered the matter to them referred and had passed the said Bill without amendment.

On motion this report was received and adopted, and it was ordered that the said Bill be read a third time on to-morrow.

Pursuant to order and on motion of Minister of Agriculture and Mines, the House resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole to consider the Bill entitled "An Act to Amend Cap. 24 of the Consolidated Statutes (Third Series) entitled 'Of Payment of Certain Fees and Charges by Stamps.'"

Mr. Speaker left the Chair.

Mr. Puddester took the Chair of Committee.

MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE & MINES—Mr. Chairman, as I pointed out at the second reading a few days ago, this is only to eliminate the necessity of paying fees by stamps.

MR. HALFYARD—Mr. Chairman, there may be good reasons for amending this Act, but one thing about it is that, if licenses have to be paid and the stamp is attached, the money that purchases that stamp goes to the Treasury; and it is a great pity, in connection with the Department of Agriculture and Mines, that in the past all licenses were not paid by stamps. I cannot see what great benefit it is. If a man has a license, the affixing of a revenue stamp to it only makes it appear something more official. However, it is not my intention to delay the passage of the Bill except to make this observation; but I do really intend to speak on the Bill respecting the operation of saw mills.

MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE & MINES—Mr. Chairman, the only reason for this Bill, as I pointed out the other day, is to act on the advice of the Auditor General, in order to facilitate the auditing and accounting of the Department. For instance, under the present system an application might come into the Department say in the month of May and the money, not being forwarded with the application, might not come in until July, or about six weeks after the grant is ready to be sent out. For that reason you have to go over the books for the period mentioned to find out where the stamp was entered up and it means the keeping of two separate accounts. Certainly there will be no license issued until the full amounts are paid.

Mr. Speaker resumed the Chair.

The Chairman from the Committee reported that they had considered the matter to them referred and had passed the said Bill without amendment.

On motion this report was received and adopted, and it was ordered that the said Bill be read a third time on to-morrow.

Pursuant to order and on motion of Minister of Agriculture and Mines, the House resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole to consider the Bill entitled "An Act to Amend Chapter 134 of the Consolidated Statutes (Third Series), entitled 'Of the Operation of Saw Mills.'"

Mr. Speaker left the Chair.

Mr. Puddester took the Chair of Committee.

MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE & MINES—Mr. Chairman, this amendment is for practically the same purpose as the last Bill. The section we ask to amend, so as to obviate the necessity of having a stamp affixed to a document, reads as follows:

(Reads from Saw Mills Act.)

MR. HALFYARD—Mr. Chairman, I would like to take advantage of this opportunity to make a few remarks in connection with the operation of the Saw Mills Act. Under the Saw Mills Act a license may be granted by the Minister of Agriculture and Mines in any year up to the 30th of November upon application of bona fide fishermen, etc., etc. I understand that a fisherman can get a license without the payment of a fee, that is, for manufacturing materials for fishing purposes. That refers to licenses commonly known as fishermen's licenses, when the quantity produced exceeds ten thousand feet a charge of $1.00 per thousand feet is made. I think this amendment to the Saw Mills Act was made during war years when timber and everything else commanded high prices and when the Government of that day was trying to get all the revenue they could to meet war expenses. It was anticipated when the Bill was introduced that the revenue would be such that this tax, or royalty on timber manufactured by the ordinary mill man could be very well paid. I understand also that it has been very difficult to put that Act in force, and it is not obscrved by one-twentieth of our mill men. I hear it said that some mill men did not pay for their licenses at all and that others operated without licenses; and I know that the Department last year, and the year previous was owed thousands of dollars royalty on the output of mills. I think that this matter is of such importance as to receive the serious consideration of the Minister and of the Government. Certain laws have been eliminated from the Statutes because they were unworkable, and the one I am referring to this afternoon is also unworkable at the present time. Whether you have the machinery or not to enforce this Act, I do not know; but there are scores of mill men who cannot conform to this Act. They found it impossible to pay a royalty during the years of depression. Some of them are operating now with very little returns, but they find it a great hardship to have this tax hanging over their heads, and the Department of Agriculture will never be able to collect outstanding bills. You cannot collect when the mill men have no money. As I previously stated, when this Act was passed conditions were altogether different from what obtains at the present time in the operation of saw mills on Crown lands. I merely draw the attention of the Government to this matter, and before the session closes I trust you will see the advisability of repealing that section of the Act, with regard to the $1.00 per thousand feet royalty. In connection with this matter also I am told that in 1912 the freight on a car load of timber from Heart's Desire to St. John's was $13.-75; to-day it is $24.75. The best offer a man can get for a car load of lumber is from $40 to $45, and the man who cuts the timber and loads it on the car gets $15 for his work. I am sure the Minister knows that what I am saying is perfectly correct, and I trust he will use his influence with the Government to eliminate the payment of the $1.00 per thousand Royalty.

MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE & MINES—Mr. Chairman, replying to the honorable member who has just sat down, I wish to say that I thoroughly agree with him when he speaks as a man who was himself a Minister of Agriculture & Mines. Perhaps he is more conversant with the Act than I am. I am of the same opinion as he. I think that instead of charging a royalty we could perhaps make the license fee a little greater. What I want to say is that since I have had control of the office what I found was that a large amount of-money was owing by saw mills scattered all over the country. Recently I had a list compiled by the Department, giving the names, locations and amounts due by the owners of saw mills with a view to collecting but we got no response. I was placed in an awkward position and had to hand over the accounts to a firm of solicitors to try and collect the amounts due. I have very little hope of collecting any great amount because the responses that have come to my notice have come from people who have had very little to pay. They have no mills and no lumber. I think a way out may be along the line of eliminating the clause whereby the royalty should be paid. If we have to collect the revenue we could raise the license fee. With regard to the statement of the honourable member as to the mills operating without a license, I have no knowledge of such happening. We have two inspectors, one looking over the northern service, one looking after the southern section. If any case comes under my notice I will have immediate steps taken to have it discontinued.

MR. HIBBS—Mr. Chairman, I wish to endorse the remarks made by Mr. Halfyard in connection with the saw mills. I am very glad to hear that the Minister will consider the matter. There is a form of discrimination with regard to the saw mills which makes the Act unpopular, and of course that is to be expected. I know a person in the district of Fogo, Mr. French, and I understand that during the last few years he has paid about five thousand dollars. He told me that up to May two or three years ago other mills operating in the same district had not paid a cent.

that is unfair. It is very discouraging to the man who pays. Then again, if this royalty is not paid for a number of years it will be accumulating all the time. It means that if the Government takes action against the men operating those mills to collect, or if they do try to collect the people generally can't pay. I would say to the Hon. Minister either to strictly enforce the Act or to abolish it altogether. Don't have any discrimination—some paying and others not paying, for it all figures out this way. Anybody who buys lumber pays one dollar per thousand feet more, for the mill owner adds one dollar to the cost of the lumber, and the small owner has to do this in order to get back the royalty he pays. I don't know, Sir, whether this Act is altogether popular. Of course, I don't mean to say that because it is unpopular you should not enforce it; but is it possible to enforce it? I think it is wise for the Minister to seriously consider this matter. I hear that the mill owners owe about thirty thousand dollars, but I don't know whether that is correct or not. I speak subject to correction. While there are a great number of honest mill owners paying up, there are a number of others who have not paid at all. There is another matter of which I would like to remind the Minister. It must be quite apparent that there is a great waste, a very great waste going on in connection with the lumber industry. We must remember that we are in a way a lumbering country and should take steps to conserve our lumber. In a case where certain countries own large timber areas and there is a waste going on, they must be sorely in need of good business men. I refer principally to the cutting of timber in winter when the ground is covered with three or four feet of snow. I have heard from very competent lumbermen and loggers that after the snow goes they find the butts of trees standing up four or five feet. They just chop it off to the edge of the snow. I don't think that would be permitted in other countries. I don't think other countries allow them to cut the lumber while the snow is on the ground. After the snow falls they go and transport their wood, but previous to the snow falling their cutting is done. I understand that the A.N.D. Co. have awakened to that fact themselves. The cutitng of the wood in the winter time is disastrous to our timber. I hope the Minister will consider that and see if he cannot do something to protect our forests against that waste. I want to make my arguments more clearly. Take for instance the cutting of railway ties. The man who cuts the railway ties chops it off and leaves the tops of it in the woods. Even estimating that 100,000 ties are cut down and the tops left to rot in the woods, this would mean a loss of a million feet of lumber at ten dollars a thousand feet that would be a thousand dollars, practically half the value of the ties themselves. This would not be permitted in countries that are trying to preserve the timber, but I think the Government could draw up a law to prevent men from chopipng down wood and leaving the stumps in the woods especially if they were large trees. It not only means a loss of stumpage but it also interferes with the growth of other trees, and besides this is very inflammable and would no doubt cause many of the forest fires. I think that the Minister of Agriculture and Mines is open to suggestions. I think he should seriously consider what I suggest in connection with this timber conservation. I don't think it necessary to go to great expense to enforce the law. I think you have four camp inspectors and I don't think that all the time is taken up in inspecting camps, so you could form some law that would empower those men to look after the stumpage of timber. I think that those fellows are having a very good time. I understand as regards the camps their coming is heralded many days in advance, and the campers have a very good report prepared for them to assure them that the logging regulations are being carried out, at any rate as far as the food supplies are concerned, and I think that those men would have a little time to spare to inspect stumpage of timber and see that this waste is not going on. Again perhaps it would be possible to have some other department take care of it. Perhaps there would be a good deal more of the royalty collected if we had some one to look after it. The reports are coming in and nobody to see about them, and nobody bothers very much about it. Finally when the bills are sent to those people they pass them over. There is no system to enforce the payment of the royalty. I think if we are going to insist on the royalty you should have some man in charge of it to see that the reports are promptly sent out. I don't see why you should have any trouble, you might try out this suggestion, and I hope that the Minister will seriously conisder it because after all you have got to conserve your timber. In Canada and the States all those things come under the consideration of their Governments. Perhaps they may not be as much up-to-date as we are, but I don't think it would do any harm to take a leaf out of their book.

MR. WARREN—Mr. Chairman, what has been said by the member for Fogo, brings to my mind some incidents while I was engaged as logging commissioner. I refer to what he said about cutting the trees to within a foot of the ground. Well, now, both the companies who are engaged in the manufacturing of pulp are endeavouring to do that, and because they are endeavouring to do that they had been compelled to bring in French Canadian lumbermen who have been the subject of so much comment. The Pulp and Paper Co. had to cut the wood while there was no snow on the ground, that is during October and November. At that time it was extremely difficult to get men to leave the fisheries and engage in the logging operations, and they had to get the timber men from the outside. Another point is that the wood is cut about a foot above the ground and that is before the snow comes, and it is then piled and most of the skilled work is then finished, and there is a great deal more work that can be done by ordinary unskilled labour. If the wood is cut in October or November, it always provides a lot of employment for men who are not otherwise skilled at logging. I do not think that it is necessary that the Department make rules and regulations about the matter, because it will work out itself. I merely mention this because there have been some criticism about the introduction of outside men for the cutting of the timber, and I think that this should explain the situation very well.

Mr. Speaker resumed the Chair.

The Chairman from the Committee reported that they had considered the matter to them referred, and had passed the said Bill without amendment.

On motion this Report was received and adopted, and it was ordered that the said Bill be read a third time on to-morrow.

Committee of the Whole on Bill entitled "An Act further to amend Chap. 129 of the Consolidated Statutes (3rd series) 'Of Crown Lands, Timbers, Mines and Minerals.'"

HON THE LEADER OF THE OPPOSITION—Mr. Chairman, while we are on this bill this afternoon I would like to offer a few remarks. During the last session of the House, that was the first session of the present Government, we brought up the matter of selling timber now in this country by public auction and thereby getting as much money as possible out of it for the Government. It has always been the custom when there was a good timber property open for a large number of people to make application for the area. It has been the custom for the Government to give it to some ardent supporter of theirs and he would pay some small fee for it, and then endeavour to sell it to some corporation and make a large sum of money on it. Sometimes they ask too much and the company or corporation is prevented from investing and so starting the pulp mill or saw mill as the case may be. At the last session I say, we brought this matter up and the explanation was that according to the act the Government could not sell by public auction. And we understood from the Prime Minister that he was going to bring in a bill before the close of last session to amend the act, so that the Government might be able to sell lands by public auction and to the highest bidder. I mentioned this matter before during the session, and the Minister of Justice, I think it was, gave the explanation that the Government could place any bonus which they should deem suitable for the lands in question, but that they were not able to sell them by public auction. He told us that during the past year the Government has disposed of some land for more than is usually receivd for it. I do not know what exactly the amount was. I hope the Hon. Minister will not have any objection to telling me. What I want to point out is that the act should be amended so that the Government can sell the land for the highest sum that it can get for it.

MINISTER OF MINES AND AGRICULTURE—In reply, Mr. Chairman, to the Hon. Member I beg to say that it is a pity that some member like him, or even himself, did not some years ago bring up this matter of the Crown Lands Act. If the Hon. Leader of the Opposition will take a map of Newfoundland at the present time it will not take him very long to find out that there is a very small amount of timber left for the disposal of the Newfoundland Government. Practically all the timber in Newfoundland has been licensed to somebody. With regard to the amendment that was to be brought in by the Prime Minister last year, I do not remember it. Perhaps the Leader of the Opposition does. With regard to the piece of land that has been disposed by the bonus system since this Government came into power I may say that it is a piece of land situated down in Bonavista Bay near Gander Bay. There were a number of applicants who were looking for it. They were all prominent politicians. The Government decided to dispose of it to the party which was doing some development in Gander Bay. The sale was made to the Gander River Pulp and Timber Co. The price was $45,800. The department received the cheque for this and it was handed over to Sir John Crosbie to the credit of the Treasury. That is the only piece of land that has been sold by the Government since it assumed office. With regard to the licenses for the Labrador I am sure that the Government would hesitate before giving any license for any part of the Labrador whilst this area is being negotiated for between the Newfoundland Government and the Government of Quebec.

HON. THE LEADER OF THE OPPOSITION—Mr. Chairman, I am glad to have the explanation of the Hon. Minister. But he says that at the present time that there are not so many properties available. But I understand that there are a great number of expired leases on the Labrador. I feel that if the Government had been able to sell this piece of land by public auction they would have got a great deal more for it. Even more than the $45,800. But they are not in a position to do this. It is the idea of this side of the House that the Act should be amended so that the Government would be in a better position to handle these cases. If they had a supporter who wanted a certain piece of land they would be able to tell him then, that the land was to be put up for public auction and he could have his bid for it and buy if he wished.

MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE AND MINES—Mr. Chairman, with regard to expired leases on the Labrador I feel sure that the Leader of the Opposition will agree with me that it would not be a very judicious undertaking to grant leases or any other titles for land on the Labrador at the present time while the Government has negotiations with the Government of Quebec for the disposal of the Labrador. But I am a layman and do not know very much about the matter. Perhaps the Attorney General might be able to deal with the aspect of the matter better than I could.

MR. HALFYARD—Mr. Chairman, the Government can not sell lands by public auction, and it was the idea of the Opposition to have this act amended so that they could do it if they wished. Then if the Government had a supporter or a number of supporters who wanted to get a certain piece of land they could tell him or them that the land would be put up for public auction and he or them could have it if they were prepared to pay the price. That would be a fair course to adopt. In a great number of cases holders of licenses have not complied with the act as it stands. That being the case if the Government were to enforce the law a great number of these licenses would lapse, and the lands would come back to the Government, and then if we had the amendment passed the lands could be disposed of by public auction to the best advantage of the people of Newfoundland.

HON. THE ATTORNEY GENERAL—Mr. Chairman, just a word in connection with this bill. There seems to be no difference of opinion as to the policy of getting what revenue we possibly can out of Crown lands. Unfortunately our friends on the opposite side of the House, or those of them who were in recent Governments, assisted in the disposal of certain lands, and not either upon increased bonus, nor by public auction.

The actual fact to-day is that what land is left ungranted in Newfoundland amounts to very little. The position is that, whilst in fact the Act does not provide for sales by public auction, in effect the same result is obtained. The Crown Lands Act provides for a minimum rate, but the Governor in Council can fix the bonus at what rate he likes.

Without reflecting on any Government, the first time that anything but the minimum rate was obtained was on a transaction that occurred recently. Under the practice that had prevailed up to this, the Colony would have got something like eight hundred dollars; but when the parties interested in the Gander proposition came forward, they were accompanied by about twenty-five or thirty land sharks, who were applying for this land purely for the purposes of speculation. The position was to assist this enterprise. It was represented that this particular section was important to be included in the general scheme to be laid before the financiers. Still the Government decided that, much and all as it would like to follow the practice that preceeded up to now, and grant this land after the method in which it had been granted, to the parties interested in the Gander River project it felt that, in view of the attitude not only that the leader of the Opposition had taken, but also that which the leader of the House had taken last session, this granting of land should cease; and so it is that this grant which has taken place since this administration came into power is a grant under which the Government and the Colony will receive forty-five thousand dollars, as compared to eight hundred. Without referring at all to the cause which brought about that action, it will be agreed that this is a step in the direction that everyone has been recommending.

As to the second point: the wisdom or otherwise amending the Crown Lands Act, it is not for me to say now. The unfortunate situation is that what we have left to auction does not make very much difference to this country. It is too bad that this practice was not brought into force years ago. As to the point that has been raised here respecting Labrador, and the lands in that territory on which the rents have not been paid, there are two points to bear in mind, and I speak, of course, purely from the attitude of one who would view it from the legal point of view.

It seems all very well to say that these people whose rents are in arrears have no legal rights. On the face of it, that looks a very strong position for the Government to take. I do not say that these people have any legal rights, but I do not go on and say that my opinion may not possibly be tested by these parties, who claim, apart altogether from any moral rights that they have got, that they have certain rights beyond moral rights; they have refused to pay us rentals, because we have refused to give them a good title. They had been paying these rentals, but they took the position that they would decline to pay further rentals, because we declined to accept their representations, and give them a good title. I do not say that the position is any more than a moral one, but it is a very strong moral position, and I would not like to be the one to undertake to say that the wise course for the Government to-day would be to start in cancelling the grants of these territories.

It would also be very unwise for this reason. The present negotiations might result in some form of agreement that might be submitted to this Legislature; but in a country like ours, once we start to cancel rights that people have got or claim to have got, we do not know what trouble is going to be started. Supposing the Canadian Government should put forward a proposition that would be sufficiently commendable to recommend to this House, and one which this House would accept, one of the first conditions that has certainly got to be contained it it is a provision for the protection of this country and the Government from any obligations under the timber holdings down there, either licensed holdings paid in full, or licensed holdings the rents on which have fallen into arrears.

I think that to come to a public decision here in the House of Assembly as to what attitude the Government is going to take with regard to the areas on the Labrador would not be possible

As regards the amendment to the Crown Lands Act, an amendment would certainly be necessary to give the Government power to call public auctions for the sale of lands. Under our present system to-day, if twenty men apply for the same area, the Governor in Council, under the Crown Lands Act, has power to fix the bonus rate. The Governor, in council under the Act to-day, in my judgment has got pretty extensive powers. The point still remains as far as what we call public auctions go, I think that the Act would need to be amended to give the Government that power.

MR. WARREN—Mr. Chairman, there are one or two things that I would like to say with regard to lands on the Labrador. Apart from the fact that negotiations are going on which may or may not result in a settlement, the mere fact that the lands are in dispute precludes the Government from selling them, and in any case, who is going to buy them if the Government cannot give a good title?

The Canadian Government and the Government of Quebec have already protested against the Government of Newfoundland selling or disposing of any further areas down on Labrador, and I would refer the Minister of Justice and the Prime Minister, in case they have not seen the record, to the reply to the Colonial Secretary dated May 5th, 1911, when Sir Ralph Williams was Governor.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Yes, I have seen that.

MR. HICKMAN—Mr. Chairman, I am very glad that I brought this subject up, because we get so much information in that way. Perhaps the Minister of Justice will be able to give me a little more information. Are there any persons holding timber properties on Labrador who have paid their rentals up to date?

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Yes, there are.

MR. HICKMAN—And others who have not?

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Yes.

MR. HICKMAN—And do you mean to say that those who have not paid are in just as good a position as those who have paid.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—I did not go so far as that. I said that I would not like to undertake to say that the people who have not paid their rents have no rights. They certainly are not in as good a position as the men who have paid up.

MR. HICKMAN—The Minister refers to the present machinery as being inadequate to sell the lands by public auction on account of the Crown Lands Act, but he says that if lands are disposed of in the proper way they will get sufficient price. But the Minister must remember now that by leaving the Act as it is at present, future Governments will be able to carry on as Governments have in the past.

Mr. Speaker resumed the Chair.

The Chairman from the Committee reported that they had considered the matter to them referred, and had passed the said Bill without amendment.

On motion this Report was received and adopted, and it was ordered that the said Bill be read a third time on to-morrow.

SECOND READING OF THE HIGHROADS BILL.

HON. THE COL. SECRETARY—Mr. Speaker, in rising to propose the second reading of this Bill, I would crave the indulgence of the House for a short time to consider some of its features.

It might be claimed that the Bill is somewhat revolutionary in character, because it is the first time, I think, in the history of Newfoundland that an attempt has been made to go outside of the beaten track in the way of looking after our highways, except the excellent work which has been done by the Road Commission.

The Bill that is before us to-day is one that has for its subject a very long step in the way of improvement of the roads and highways in this country, and it is part of a programme that has been adopted by the present administration; a programme that is comprehensive in character; a programme that, if worked out, will, I believe, have on the affairs of this country very far reaching results for good.

This might be claimed to be the first step in the inauguration of the tourist policy of the present administration. Heretofore we have not made any effort, we have not endeavoured to attract the large number of people that come around yearly looking for some place of recreation, some places as health resorts, some places that have attractions that many people cannot find in their own environment. This country with a wonderful reputation as one abounding in natural resources and with scenery second to none, has laid outside the track of the tourist invasion from the outside world which many other countries are experiencing at the present time. We have heard and read a lot about the tourist policy of other places and can easily appreciate the efforts they are making to attract the large numbers of the leisured classes who have plenty of money and are ready to spend it on their amusement and comforts. The Atlantic to-day is the highway of a fleet of large and magnificiently equipped steamers plying from America to Europe with huge numbers of tourists, and the countries of the Old World are receiving the flow of gold which these people bring with them. We are right in the track of this traffic, and we have unsurpassed possibilities in the way of attractions, but they have never been utilized to the advantage of our people.

The tourist industry, if I may so term it, is a source of revenue to the United States, and it has extended to Canada, because though formerly the motor car was a luxury, it is now a necessity and the millions who own them in America cross over the border to enjoy the advantages of the neighbouring country.

And this has become so general at the present time that the man who a few years ago made the trip because he had a limousine, has now been forced to go further afield for his enjoyment, and the smaller man with the flivver is taking his place. These people are now coming down in their hundreds to Nova Scotia and the Eastern Provinces and their gold is keeping up the people of the communities which they visit. But there is no part of Nova Scotia or America that has the attractions which Newfoundland possesses. And what have we been doing. Shutting our eyes and leaving the people of other countries to do everything they can to develop their resources while we do nothing towards obtaining the revenue which we should derive from our God-sent advantages. It it true that we cannot expect tourists to come here unless we are prepared to properly house them.

The average tourist—and I have no hesitation of disparaging those who come here from time to time on the Red Cross and other boats—is not of the moneyed class, but generally from the ranks of the working people and come here for a short holiday, taking advantage of the cheap trip. But the tourist we want is the one with unlimited means and who is prepared to spend his money and not go away after a day or two, but stay here for the whole summer, and by his spending help the people—or the Government, if you will have it so,—to turn into revenue the attractions with which our country has been so abundantly blessed. Now it has been said that the first step necessary for the attraction of tourists is the building of a hotel or series of hotels, but while I agree with the contention that hotels are needed, they are not the first thing. It is no use to have a hotel in which these people may sit in comfort or in which they may have every convenience and take their meals at their leisure and with satisfaction or sleep in comfortable beds. They must be able to go abroad in the country and see the attractions. A hotel—no matter how up to date—is no novelty to the moneyed tourist as he has been seeing them every day in his own country. What he wants is to go out and get the benefit of the air and see the attractions we offer. And I say the whole foundation of the enterprise is good roads, properly constructed, and of such a character as to suit those who, perhaps, are more particular than ourselves in this respect.

Of course some will say in this connection that the Monroe Government is spending money for the benefit of only the Americans and the wealthy classes, so that these may travel in comfort, but I may state that we have another object in view in this matter, and that is to get the gold which the tourists will spend from the day of their arrival till the day of their departure and thus prove to be revenue producers. It is true we may not have a tourist traffic next year that will be very appreciable, but I am convinced that in four or five years we can build up one that will astound every member who is in this House this evening. We already have the attractions and we want only a few essentials to minister to these people who desire comforts. They will not travel in cattle boats as they have the money to journey in luxury, and other countries are putting the best steamers available at their disposal. The Government in building the new boat to ply between Port aux Basques and North Sydney is taking an initial step that will prove of great value. She is to be called the Caribou, a significant name, as she will be the forerunner of others, just as the Regiment that bore that name was the forerunner of others in gaining prestige in the war. On the West Coast we have unsurpassed natural attractions—salmon and trout streams without number, lakes and streams and a most beautiful coastline. The vicinity of the Humber and Bonne Bay is not surpassed in scenic beauty by any part of the old world or new. Are all these natural assets to remain unproductive? No,—we are in the tourist business and have every confidence that every dollar we spend in fostering it will be returned by us tenfold, and that people who now may think we are merely spenders will in future years look upon us as the savers of the country financially. How could we get along to-day if we had to depend solely on the fish that we get from the sea? Half of our people would not be able to live at all, but for the mines and other resources which have been developed. We have even now come to the point where with all our other revenue producing enterprises we are up against it still, and I feel sure that when the accounts of the country are produced in this House by the Hon. the Minister of Finance they will show that we have got to have other sources of revenue to help us out in the present and future. I crave the indulgence of the House in referring at length to this Bill, and hope that it will receive the fair consideration of the members on both sides. This Bill is somewhat revolutionary as it means the replacing of a body of men that I have the highest admiration for. I refer to the Road Commission who have done great work with the facilities at their disposal, especially in connection with the improvement of the roads around Conception Bay and the Southern Shore. I can look back to the time when the roads in these sections were in a very bad condition, but to-day they are practically boulevards. The work was done by these men, who volunteered to do it, and they did it well. They are worthy of every commendation. While I regret the passing of the Commission, it cannot be expected that these gentlemen can devote their time to such a far-reaching project as we have in view at the present time. Not alone in Conception Bay, Placentia Bay, and along the Southern Shore have the roads to be improved, but we have to develop the West Coast also. The highways about Conception Bay will of course be given consideration first as St. John's will be the centre at which we will attempt to provide accommodation in the beginning.

Well let us try the roads. I might say, though, that these roads are not all going to be built this year, or next year, or the year after. This policy will have to go down through a series of years and the work will be in charge of the Government Engineer, a man who we are all glad to know is available to undertake this very important work. Everybody knows of Mr. Hall's ability as an Engineer and it is fortunate for us that his services are now available because of the change of ownership of the railway. The railway is now a public institution and does not require the services of a Government Engineer. When the railway was under the management of the Reid Newfoundland Company Mr. Hall's duties were confined to inspecting the building of bridges, culverts, tracks, and everything appertaining to the railroad was done under Mr. Hall's direct supervision, and he was responsible to the Government and had to see that the Reid Newfoundland Company kept up to their contract. Under present conditions, Mr. Joyce is the Government Engineer as far as the railroad is concerned. So I say it is fortunate to have the services of Mr. Hall, who will be in charge of this highway project and under his personal direction the whole thing will be carried on. We have ample evidence of Mr. Hall's ability with regard to the building of bridges all over the country. If one wishes to call at my office or the office of the Prime Minister to-morrow morning, he will see for himself pictures of some fifteen or twenty bridges that were constructed by Mr. Hall within the past few years—a credit to the country, a credit to himself and an ornament to the roads with which they are connected.

This afternoon the honourable member for Trinity, Mr. Halfyard, presented a petition from Rev. Canon Smart and others of Heart's Content and he alluded very graphically to the possibilities and attractions of that particular part of the country. The barrens in that particular place do not contain much scenery it is true, but, as stated by the Rev. Canon Smart, it has its other attractions, such as game and fish, etc. What is true of that part of the country is true of almost every yard from here to Port aux Basques.

Those who will compose the Commission I have referred to will, I feel sure, be qualified to act on that Commission. Nobody will be put on that commission for the sake of political expediency. Mr. Hall will be the Chief Commissioner and three other Commissioners will be appointed to act under him. The powers of the Commission are far-reaching. They will have the right to go on with any highway that they may so designate after the Governor-inCouncil has approved of it. They will have the right to take charge of that highway and build it according to the plans that have been laid down. They will have the right to stop traffic, on that highway and they will have the right to acquire property and plant trees and divert streams and go through private property, and go through towns, although they may have Municipal Government, acquire towns, and build highways and in co-operation with the Municipality, develop the roads as they go through in conformity with Municipal Regulations, providing they do not clash with the Regulations of the Commission.

The appointments under this Commission will be for two years. All appointments will lapse after two years; but any member or members of the Commission can be re-appointed. I think this is a very wise precaution, because a man may be appointed to-morrow and in a year's time he may show his unfitness. Well, the Governor-in-Council has the right to remove him and put some other man in his place or have the right to re-appoint him. Hence I say it is not alone a very wise precaution ,but it is a very essential one for the proper carrying out of the work. Also this Commission will not be an unpaid Commission. It is not anticipated that work of this kind, which will require a great deal of care, time and attention should be undertaken by those who will serve on this Commission without some remuneration for their services. I am glad to see this provision in this Bill. Whilst we have had many instances of the self-sacrifice of private citizens and whilst in those particular cases that I have referred to the Road Commission gave their services gratuitously, yet at the same time we cannot except citizens to engage in work of such an important character as that which we have in view, without being paid for it. You may get a man to act on that Commission who may be the most efficient man possible, but who is debarred because he cannot afford to give his time gratitously. Therefore, I say it is right and proper for the men serving on a Commission of this kind to be remunerated for their services.

I think the general principle of the Bill will be accepted by all sides of the House. I do not say it is a perfect Bill. I dare say that it may need additions and alterations; but I commend it to the House because of the spirit in which the Government have taken up this matter.

I, therefore, move the second reading of the Bill.

Pursuant to order and on motion of Hon. the Colonial Secretary, the Bill entitled "An Act to Provide for the Construction Reconstruction and Maintenance of Highroads" was read a second time, and it was ordered that the said Bill be referred to a Committee of the Whole House on to-morrow.

HON. THE COLONIAL SECRETARY —Mr. Speaker, I give notice that I will on to-morrow ask leave to introduce a Bill entitled "An Act to Amend the War Pensions Act, 1922."

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—Mr. Speaker, I give notice that I will on to-morrow ask leave to introduce a Bill entitled "An Act to Amend Cap. 3 Consolidated Statutes of Newfoundland (3rd Series) entitled 'Of the Election of Members to the House of Assembly."

The remaining Orders of the Day were deferred.

It was moved and seconded that when the House rises it adjourn until to-morrow afternoon at three of the clock.

The House then adjourned accordingly.

THURSDAY, March 5th, 1925.

The House met at three of the clock in the afternoon, pursuant to adjournment.

MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE & MINES—Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present a petition from the inhabitants of St. Joseph's, Admiral's Beach and other parts of St. Mary's Bay for the extension of the telephone from St. Joseph's to Admiral's Beach. The petition is signed by Rev. Father Enright, the parish priest, and one hundred and seventy-eight electors of that section. It is unnecessary for me to point out the immense benefit that would arise by the erection of this office. The amount involved would not be very much and I give this petition my hearty support. I understand that the Minister of the Department of Posts & Telegraphs is inaugurating a new system under which many of the offices which are telegraph offices and which hardly pay for their upkeep will be transformed into telephone offices which will be very much cheaper. I hope that now that this arrangement is being made that this very important office will be opened.

MR. SINNOTT—Mr. Speaker, I have very much pleasure in supporting the petition of my hon. colleague for the granting of this concession.

MR. PUDDESTER—Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present a petition from the people of Burnt Point, Gull Island and Long Beach, in the district of Bay de Verde, for the allocation of a sum of money for the opening of a road to some timber. The timber in this locality is very valuable and the people are in the habit of cutting firewood there. I know that this road would be a very great assistance as it would open up some agricultural land to the people of the district. The petition is signed by every man in the three settlements named. I have very much pleasure in supporting the petition and I would like to have it referred to the Department of Public Works.

HON. MR. CRAMM—Mr. Speaker, I have very much pleasure in supporting the petition of my hon. colleague for the allocation of this sum of money for the people of these places.

MR. CAHILL—Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present a petition from the people of Bacon Cove, in the district of Harbour Main, on the subject of a new road. This road would be a great benefit to the residents of the place and I give the petition my hearty support.

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present a petition from the people of Lance Cove, Bell Island, in the district of St. John's East. They ask for the allocation of a special grant for the improvement of the main road. This is the only means of acccess that the people of this district have to the mines, where they work, and the places of business and to the churches. The allocation at the present time is divided up between the two councils, one on the front of the island and one at the back. In referring the petition to the Department of Public Works I would ask that if there are any special allocations possible this year that they might endeavour to grant the request here made. The petition is largely signed and I give it my hearty support.

HON THE MINISTER OF FINANCE—Mr. Speaker, I beg to lay on the table of the House the Auditor General's Report for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1925. I beg leave also to lay on the table of the House the Public Accounts. I beg to draw the attention of the Clerk of the House that this book is not to leave this House. The Public Accounts for 1922 have been lost and I have been told by the Deputy Minister that they were sent up here and stolen, and the result is that we are without the 1922 accounts to-day.

(2) MR. HICKMAN asked Hon. the Prime Minister when he purposes opening St. John's East for bye-election to fill the vacancy made by the appointment of Mr. N. Vinicombe to the Board of Liquor Control.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—The Government up to the present time has not considered the question of the opening of the district of St. John's East for bye-election to fill the vacancy made by the resignation of Mr. N. J. Vinicombe. When it is the intention to do so a proclamation will be issued in due course.

(3) MR. WARREN asked Hon. the Prime Minister what progress has been made with the proposition to make Mortier Bay an open port and how the matter now stands.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—Up to the present time very little progress has been made in this proposition for making Mortier Bay an open port. Colonel Peel and the High Commissioner went up to the States to raise the sum of money necessary in connection with it and I understand that they were not very successful. They were rather disappointed at the reception that the proposition got.

(4) MR. ASHBOURNE asked the Minister of Marine and Fisheries to lay upon the Table of the House a copy of all correspondence between the Executive Government and the Fisheries Board, relating to the Report of J. Allen Taylor, of Fleetwood and his recommendations.

MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES—Mr. Speaker, in reply to the question of the honourable member, I may say that I will have the reply to that some time during the next week. I have been very busy during the last three or four days because the sealers have been around. If the honourable member would like to come down to the Department he can get any information which he may require from the books.

(5) MR. HALFYARD asked Hon. the Colonial Secretary to lay on the Table of the House a statement showing in detail the cost to the Colony of the services of the S.S. Malakoff for Trinity and Bonavista Bay services for the year 1923; also the cost of the Malakoff's services for the year 1924. Give the earnings of the Malakoff for the years 1923 and 1924 respectively.

HON. THE COLONIAL SECRETARY—Mr. Speaker, I may say that the information will take a little time to prepare. The railway department has been instructed to forward it as quickly as possible, and I hope to have it here in a few days.

(6) MR. HALFYARD asked Hon. the Colonial Secretary to lay on the Table of the House a statement showing the cost of repairing the Government wharf at Port Blandford to make it suitable as a railway terminus for the S.S. Malakoff.

HON. THE COLONIAL SECRETARY—Mr. Speaker, in reply to that question, I hope to have that information here this afternoon.

(7) MR. DUFF asked the Minister of Marine and Fisheries the cost of repairs to wharf at Freshwater, B.D.V., in 1924; names of men employed and amounts paid to each, as well as cost of timber and material; also to state on whose property this public money and material was disbursed.

MINISTER OF MARINE & FISHERIES—Mr. Speaker, I may say that the same answer applies to that question as to the previous one which I answered this afternoon. I hope to be able to answer it early next week.

Hon. the Minister of Justice gave notice that he would on to-morrow ask leave to introduce a Bill entitled "An Act to Amend Chapter 52 of the Consolidated Statutes (Third Series) entitled 'Of Egress from Churches, Theatres and other Buildings.'"

Pursuant to notice and leave granted, and on motion of Hon. the Minister of Finance and Customs, the Bill entitled "An Act to Amend the Income Tax Act, 1922" was introduced and read a first time, and it was ordered that the said Bill be read a second time on to-morrow.

Pursuant to notice and leave granted, and on motion of Hon. the Colonial Secretary, the Bill entitled "An Act to Amend the War Pensions Act, 1922" was introduced and read a first time, and it was ordered that the said Bill be read a second time on to-morrow.

Pursuant to notice and leave granted and on motion of Hon. the Prime Minister, the Bill entitled "An Act to Amend Chapter 3 of the Consolidated Statutes of Newfoundland (Third Series) entitled "Of the Election of Members of the House of Assembly" was introduced and read a first time and it was ordered that the said Bill be read a second time on to-morrow.

Pursuant to order and on motion of Hon. the Minister of Finance and Customs, the Bill entitled "An Act to Amend Chapter 25 of the Consolidated Statutes (Third Series) entitled 'Of Light Dues," was read a third time and passed, and it was ordered that the said Bill be engrossed, being entitled as above, and that it be sent to the Legislative Council with a message requesting the concurrence of that body in its provisions.

Pursuant to order and on motion of the Minister of Agriculture & Mines, the Bill entitled "An Act to Amend Cap. 24 of the Consolidated Statutes (Third Series) entitled 'Of Payment of Certain Fees and Charges by Stamps," was read a third time and passed, and it was ordered that the said Bill be engrossed, being entitled as above, and that it be sent to the Legislative Council with a message requesting the concurrence of that body in its provisions.

Pursuant to order and on motion of the Minister of Agriculture & Mines, the Bill entitled "An Act to Amend Chapter 134 of the Consolidated Statutes (Third Series) entitled 'Of the Operation of Saw Mills,'" was read a third time and passed, and it was ordered that the said Bill be engrossed, being entitled as above, and that it be sent to the Legislative Council with a message requesting the concurrence of that body in its provisions.

Pursuant to order and on motion of the Minister of Agriculture & Mines, the Bill entitled "An Act Further to Amend Chapter 129 of the Consolidated Statutes (Third Series) entitled 'Of Crown Lands, Timber, Mines & Minerals," was read a third time and passed, and it was ordered that the said Bill be engrossed, being entitled as above, and that it be sent to the Legislative Council with a message requesting the concurrence of that body in its provisions.

Pursuant to order and on motion of Hon. the Colonial Secretary the House resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole to consider the Bill entitled "An Act to Provide for the Construction, Reconstruction and Maintenance of Highroads."

Mr. Speaker left the Chair.

Mr. Puddester took the Chair of Committee.

MR. HALFYARD—Mr. Chairman, I wish to make one or two observations on this Bill now before the Chair. The Bill is said to be one of the most important that has been brought before the House during this session, and it covers very extensively several public utilities, and entails the expenditure of large sums of money in this country. Therefore, it is broad enough and inclusive enough to permit of almost any remark on the general policy of the Government in spending money on roads, bridges, tourist traffic, hotels and such like.

Mr. Chairman, I may be permitted to remark casually that we are getting back to the "good old times" of presenting petitions. I am sure that every member of both sides of the House must be reminded of the time when a member representing a northern constituency was credited with bringing along every session a Saratoga trunk full of petitions. It is only the ordinary thing for members of the Opposition to present petitions, praying the Government to do certain things, but when members of the Government get up and pray to themselves it must appear extremely ridiculous to those who witness this proceeding. Be that as it may, it gives the members of the Government an opportunity to hear themselves speaking; and I wish they would take the same interest in Bills that come before the House. Now, last year a Loan Bill was passed, which included for building roads and highways, two million dollars. At that time I opposed the borrowing of money for that purpose, and nothing has transpired since to chance my opinion. We know as a House and as a people that we are apparently, or figuratively getting our heads below water financially and industrially. In common with other parts of the world, money had to be found here, and in some countries millions had to be found, and have to be found at the present time, to provide food and clothing for the unemployed. Now, unemployment is more acute in the city than in the outports; and it is an object lesson to us as to what would happen if the rest of the country were like St. John's.

Of course, we will be told that during our term of office some millions of dollars were wasted, and that we thew out money regardless of getting returns or value for it.

I thiuk we will all admit that in 1920, money was spent on current account. We did not have to borrow money. There was a large surplus, and quite a large amount of money spent on repairing the Railway, and on the maintenance of the Railway; the terminus at Argentia was completed, and it is generally conceded that money had to be spent. Then during the years of depression, millions of dollars were spent on the roads up country—the Deer Lake Road and the Badger Road. Possibly if the same conditions obtained today, money would have to be spent in a similar way. It was proposed that the Railways should be built to Bonne Bay. That was one of the schemes advocated by Lord Morris in 1910, and a survey had been made to build the Railway up there, and they were talking about a road to Hall's Bay to tap the large Bay of Notre Dame. It was not feasible to build a Railway to Bonne Bay. Our experience with branch Railways led the Governnient to abandon the idea of building and more money had to be spent to provide the people with the necessaries of life, and employment had to be found during the fishing season. For these, and for various other reasons the money was not spent in the districts where the people resided (not in every district) but it was thought that only the needy, and those who could not get to the fishery would go up country, as some person remarked at the time, to be eaten up with flies. It was no picnic, whether the men worked or not.

Anyhow, it is quite unnecessary to recall the happenings of 1922 and 1923, but I just mention this, Mr. Chairman, because I anticipate in the course of the debate on this Bill by the members on the Government side it will be stated that money was wasted by the outgoing Government during these years. The same, no doubt, will be said about the present Government in two or three years time, in reference to the money they are spending now on poor relief, for which they are getting no returns.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Why anticipate? No one has said that any money was wasted by the outgoing Government. Surely you do not think that anybody here would say anything like that. You do not think that I would suggest that the outgoing Government would waste any money. I have no intention of saying any such thing.

MR. HALFYARD—Of course no such suggestion has ever been made.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—But you said that we were going to say it. I am not going to say it.

MR. HALFYARD—It has been said since the House opened this session. It is a stock phrase that you use when you have nothing better to say.

Mr. Chairman, this Bill is brought in to provide machinery for the spending of large sums of money on public highways' and the question is now whether we can afford to embark on such an undertaking. It is speculative and questionable. It is a problem nobody in this House or outside can tell whether you will get proper returns for the spending of large sums of money on roads in this country. It is said that by repairing the highways and building new roads, we will induce tourists to come into this country—wealthy men, who may bring their motor cars with them to tour over the barrens and beauty spots of Newfoundland. Are there no beauty spots anywhere except in Newfoundland? The climate in Canada and the United States is just as good as it is here in Newfoundland, in certain seasons of the year.

MR. BROWNE—It cannot be any better there than it is here now.

MR. HALFYARD—No! You are quite correct. I was reminded of that while coming down to the House, and wondered if the opening of the House had anything to do with the weather, because whenever the House is in session, be it August or March, we have summer weather. It is thought by the building of roads fit to drive cars over, and linking up the different communities, that the wealthy will be induced to come here and spend a lot of money. Well, possibly something like that will happen, but it will not be very soon. The people who will come here, in my opinion, are those who will do so for the fishing and shooting and not for the scenery and climate. It is the sportsman who comes here—the one fond of fishing and shooting—but he will not come here now for shooting, as we have a three years' close season on caribou. My opinion is that even if tourists do cross to Port aux Basques they will not cross the country to St. John's to sleep in a good hotel, as they have that where they left, but will stop off along the line. The majority of the tourists coming here will not be well-to-do, but will be like a great many Newfoundlanders who take a trip to some other country. They will first count the cost, consider ways and means, and look out for the place where they can best enjoy themselves at the least cost. They will be like the round trippers who, it is said, are not of the well-to-do class but who try to get away from the heat of the cities and enjoy the trip on the water. They come here from New York, Boston, or other parts of the States, remain a few days, buy a few curios and go back again. It will make no difference to these whether we have good roads or not, as they could not afford to drive over them. I do not think this is the time for the country to undertake such a project as road-building, the returns from which are so problematical, although the expenditure will be very large; every member of this House should give that point his most serious consideration. The natural sun is shining and the sun of prosperity peeps out from the clouds, but we do not know how soon it will be hidden from view again. There is nothing certain about the returns that we get from the fishing industry—there is nothing more uncertain as to the quantity we will catch, and we all know that the price we may obtain is very uncertain. I know that the Hon. the Prime Minister, who is a business man, will appreciate that statement that there is nothing so uncertain as the fishery. We think in October that we will get a certain price in January or February, and we buy accordingly. When the time comes we find calculations were all astray; and that is what is happening at the present time. It is a question whether those who paid high prices last fall will come out on the right side when the fish is marketed, and the general opinion is that the merchants will not realize the prices expected and get that encouragement which they should for the prosecution of next season's voyage. I mention this as we are borrowing two millions to spend on roads; can we afford to borrow money for this purpose now? We do not know what the condition of the country will be in eight or nine months from now.

Some say that this year the fishery will be prosecuted by hundreds, or even thousands, more than last year, and if the catch should be in proportion to the number of catchers, the catch will be large, and the price of fish will likely decline. The cost of outfitting is no less than it was last year, or 1922-1923, and that is what the fishermen are up against. It is not altogether the price that will be paid for fish but the cost of outfit, and I do not think they will be any better off in this respect now than they were then. The cost of all staple articles has increased, except sugar, which is a little lower; but flour and meats are away up, and supposing that conditions are not what we hope for next October or November, where are we to find avenues of employment for those who may make a poor voyage to provide for themselves and families. You may say we are going to spend a lot of money on roads, but these will not be built by the fishermen; to build roads properly you must build them in the summer, when the men are trying to catch fish. In October you have to give up road construction, therefore you will not help the fishermen in that direction. If we had a surplus of revenues, perhaps it would be all right to spend some of it on road-building; and as a matter of fact we must spend a lot of money on the roads we already have. We all know that in every district, especially where there are any motor cars, the gravel has been worn off the surface and nothing is left but the roadbeds, particularly where there is a lot of traffic. I know several places in Trinity District where money should be found for repairs. A road was spoken of in a petition yesterday—the road between Carbonear and Heart's Content, which needs repairs. There is no need to appoint a highly paid commission to repair this road; there is no road-building paraphernalia, such as referred to in this Bill, needed to put this road in order. As a matter of fact there is no need of this commission at all; we have one now which can spend the money as wisely as a commission of three appointed by this House. These are men who have worked faithfully and well without remuneration. The Road Commission which has done such good work is to be discontinued. Even if you go ahead with this road-building scheme and spend large sums of money, there would be no need of a commission outside the one you have. They built the road from here to Harbor Main, which has been referred to as a boulevard, and have been eulogized for what they have accomplished. There is no mystery in building a road, there are scores of men here who can give you the theory of the thing, and tell you all about the material needed, what is to be laid down first, how drainage is to be planned, and the degree of curvatures, etc., and how the material is to be laid down first, second, third and lastly. It only needs ordinary intelligence to see that that is done. You have a man in Kelligrews, Mr. Joe Dawe, who was the foreman in building the Topsail Road, and I do not suppose you could get a better man. Now when we hear so much about scientific road-making one would imagine that it was almost necessary to have a chemical analysis made of certain roads and that certain doses were to be administered in the holes found in the road. Talk about " the trappings of an elephant on the back of a cat". The Government is simply copying something we get from the Provincial Legislatures of Canada, where they have a population of about a million people, and with half a dozen towns each with a population equal to the whole of Newfoundland; besides Canada is in close touch with the United States, and people in the States have motor cars to bring them to Canada one day and return the next day, dropping off at hotels at Montreal when they come and stay over night. We think that because they made a lot of money up there through the tourist traffic that we are going to get rich quick by building roads for those who are to come across from the States to get to a fishing pool. I suppose the ordinary sportsman is not a jelly fish. When he goes out for a day's sport he does not mind roughing it a bit because it is a change for him. Take a man living in an atmosphere that may not be regarded as altogether healthy. Is it because that man has been working under certain conditions that he cannot spend a night in the woods or a week in a camp? He takes it as his choice and for the good of his health, that is, any man who is any kind of a sportsman. Any man coming here from abroad can get his luggage carried to the fishing pool if he is not strong enough to carry it himself. No man coming to this country to take in our scenic beauties and to engage in fishing wants to be provided with a luxurious limousine to take him to a fishing pool. I am reminded of something I saw in a paper in which a certain plenipotentiary who visited a strange country and the officials there were so anxious to show their appreciation of his visit that flunkeys were engaged sweeping the ground from his car to the hotel, and the plenipotentiary made the remark that he did not think he was a "blooming curling stone".

Mr. Chairman, I am quite serious in my objections to this House assuming a liability for a loan of two million dollars at this time to build roads for tourists. It is unwise, and I fear that we shall have to realise that it is unpatriotic and is not in the best interests of the country. I cannot speak too strongly on this matter because I think it is a wild goose chase. It is not altogether the initial expense of two million dollars that I object to most, but you are assuming a liability for all time, because five per cent. interest on two million dollars is $100,000, and if you build those roads for two millions they will cost at least another $200,000 per year for upkeep and maintenance. Therefore you will assume for all time, in addition to the initial outlay, liability of over three hundred thousand dollars. If, as I have already said, we had surplus revenues, then it might be alright for us to take on such a venture, but I do not know if we shall be in any better position financially this time next year than we are now. We cannot get money to repair the roads and bridges in Trinity district. There are bridges that have rotted away as the result of natural decay. I have appealed to the different departments and to the Executive Government and I cannot get $100.00, not to talk of two millions, to meet present pressing necessities for our own people—the producers of the country. We are asked to vote away two million dollars to bring outside people here in the hope of getting something from them when we cannot provide the proper means for travel for our own people who have to prosecute their undertakings with regard to the fisheries and agriculture. I know this does not apply to every district. I have a question on the Order Paper ever since February 23rd asking for the amount of money spent in Bonavista District by the Public Works Department, and I cannot get a reply. The Minister of Public Works promised me one day that he would furnish the information the next; but the next day he is absent. Now the Department has prepared a reply to that question and still I am not afforded the courtesy of having that laid on the table of the House. I do not know the reason why. I might say that two days after I asked a question of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries concerning his department he had the information tabled for me; but not so with the Minister of Public Works.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—How do you know that the answer has been prepared?

MR. HALFYARD—I know that the answer to my question has been prepared. The Minister promised to supply it to-day, but I see he is not in his place in the House to-day. He also said yesterday that he had part of it answered and that he would have the whole of it ready to-day; but I am satisfied to take what is ready now and to wait for the rest of the answer. The Minister said that he would not give the list of moneys sent out because no returns were in. That, in my opinion, is only camouflage because you will always find it difficult to get returns in for money sent out. I find also that the amount of money allocated from the Department of Marine and Fisheries from June 1924 to date is over $8,000.00 as against $1,600.00 sent to Trinity District for the same period. It savours of discrimination. The necessity for spending money in Trinity District was just as great as in Bonavista District.

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE—It is only history repeating itself. Bonavista got more than Trinity did under the late Government too. They got forty odd thousand dollars for the town site.

MR. HALFYARD—I am not talking of harbour improvements; I am talking of the ordinary allocations.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—I did not think there could be any discrimination practised at that time, and still Bonavista District got a great deal more than Trinity.

MR. HALFYARD—I am not referring to any large undertakings like the harbour site at Bonavista which will cost hundreds of thousands. I am speaking of general allocations. I could give you the names of places where moneys were spent.

HON. MINISTER OF FINANCE—The amount sent to Bonavista for the year 1922-1923 was $87,393.00.

MR. HALFYARD—That is drawing a red herring across the trail.

HON. MINISTER OF FINANCE—There is a lot of caplin across it too.

MR. HALFYARD—We have places in Trinity District at the present time impassable for want of proper bridges and roads and we cannot get money to meet those requirements, still we are bringing in a Bill this year to appoint a commission to spend in prospect $2,000,000 dollars for new roads. What do you intend to do? Do you intend to spend no money on the roads you already have? If you can afford to spend two million dollars on extra roads why cannot you get a few thousand dollars to repair the roads that we have? Perhaps only a few men of the Government know just how things are going, and I would take this opportunity to remind them of what I regard as gross discrimination. It was said by the Minister of Marine and Fisheries that every request made by the members for Trinity District was granted, but I beg to differ from the Minister. I differ absolutely in every respect, and I can show correspondence to prove that he was in error when he made such a remark; in fact we could not get any money outside the ordinary vote of twelve or fourteen hundred dollars, and we were not allowed to allocate that. We were not extended the courtesy to recommend the parties who should get that money to spend. We got sixteen hundred dollars for the year, whereas Bonavista got over eight thousand. Captain Randell and Mr. Godden were not qualified to recommend the spending of sixteen hundred dollars. I interviewed the Minister of Public Works. He said he had made a request to the Government for two thousand dollars for Trinity District, but the Executive had referred the matter back to him for further particulars. I took the matter up with the Acting Prime Minister, Sir John Crosbie, and the particulars were forwarded by the Minister of Public Works to Sir John Crosbie, but no money was forthcoming. In the letter to the Government special mention was made of the bridges at Little Heart's Ease, Chapel Arm, Winterton, Green's Harbour, Harcourt, Bellvue, Thornlea, Chance Cove and other places. At Little Heart's Ease a bridge four hundred feet long had rotted down and horses had to wade through the river. Chapel Arm bridge is also a long bridge, timber for both these bridges had been procured; in fact where the bridges at these places were not actually washed away or rotted down those that still remained were unsafe to pass over. Still we could not get money to have these bridges rebuilt. Requests are continually coming in, but it is useless for us to apply to the Government. I am speaking for my own district. I do not want anything personally. I exhort you to do something for the district at once. The time is passing, the winter is breaking up and it will soon be too late to get timber out of the woods, if you intend to give Trinity District any bridges, act quickly so that the timber can be procured. This is a very important matter and if I did not have this opportunity I intended to move the adjournment of the House to bring it to the attention of the Government as a serious and important question. The Government certainly has the money. They have a balance from the 1922 loan unspent, and a balance from the 1923 loan unspent. When it comes to relief for destitution Trinity District is most unfairly dealt with. There are places in Trinity District where deserving men who cannot provide for themselves, through no fault of their own, would think it a God-send if they had a chance of going into the woods and cutting timber for bridges. Talk about letting people die, they could die for want of the means of transportation and for the means of increasing their earning power by giving them facilities to get from place to place, and they could also die for want of doctors. In some places in Trinity District the system that the Government now have for dealing with sick people there is the risk of having men, women and children die for want of medical assistance. I will give you a case in point, a young man, 23 years old, belonging to Chapel Arm, Trinity Bay. This is an isolated place with regard to communication with the railway, and no relieving officer within miles. The Government was asked to send a doctor, but no doctor was sent. The result was the young man died a fortnight after being taken ill without medical assistance. I would give the Government credit for curtailing the expenditure of money for unnecessary purposes but don't let innocent, deserving people suffer, because you think money was spent unwisely in some cases two or three years ago. The necessity is there, and the machinery should be employed so that people will not suffer when through the action of the Government relief could be afforded them. Mr. Chairman, in connection with the roads, bridges, public utilities, and the destitute sick people of the outports, I trust that the few remarks I have made will receive the consideration that their importance merits. You are appointing commissions for everything. I think that the Squires Government during the first two or three years of its administration may be regarded as the Government of agents, while the Monroe Government will be regarded as the government of commissions. It cannot do anything without appointing a commission. Mr. Prime Minister, you have referred to the outstanding claims the present Government have to meet that were left unpaid by the outgoing Government. Every new Government is asked to pay outstanding claims or bills that have been refused payment by the preceding Governments, and the Government that succeeds yours will have a similar experience. As a rule the bills are not presented at the time they are contracted. They wait until the House of Assembly is closed, or until the public accounts are tabled. Some of us know how it is done. I would advise the Honorable Prime Minister not to take for granted that there are no bills coming in in connection with these commissions. People do not work for nothing, especially brainy people. If you get work done you will have to pay for it. We have a Commission of Enquiry into the Post Office about the transportation of mails. If it is necessary to have better roads then the Government might spend some of this money to facilitate the transportation of the mails in the outlying districts. But, Mr. Chairman, apparently we are all like a crowd of sheep; we all stampede in the same direction and at the present time the stampede is in the direction of Commissions of Enquiry, and when we have to get a commission we have to get it from Canada. How in the world a Canadian can arrange the Postal system which is needed in Newfoundland I do not know; but a man who knows this Postal system from A to Z, and who has been working at the Post Office all his life is ignored. The question of transportation of mails in Newfoundland is altogether different from that which obtains in Canada and the States. As a rule they can transport mails according to schedule. We can only do that during a few months of the summer, but when steamers and trains are held up you want men like Mr. LeMessurier and Mr. Sam Bradbury who know from experience the best thing to do to meet the special circumstances. But efficiency, honesty and experience do not count. Mr. LeMessurier is not consulted and Mr. Bradbury is disrated and humiliated. What for? The service suffers, but needy, persistent, hungry political heelers take the places of these men. I have no brief for Mr. Bradbury. He has not consulted me, but when I was in the Post Office I found him to be one of the most useful and trustworthy officials, and he was appointed superintendent of mail clerks and transportation of mails, and I understand now that his services are no longer required, and you have to import a man from Canada to run the Post Office. In the Postmaster General's Report of 1918 the following is what the Hon. J. A. Robinson said about Mr. LeMessurier:—"He knows more about the Postal Service of Newfoundland than any man in the Island. He has grown with it from the far off days, when a mail once in three weeks or a month was sufficient during the Winter, and a fortnightly mail from Europe and another from Canada and the States was sufficient for our requirements. There is not a branch of the service, not a Post Office or a Courier's route of which he has not a personal knowledge. Nominally Chief Clerk and Accountant he has been for many years the pivot on which the whole Postal machinery has moved."

Mr. Speaker, conditions were made intolerable for Mr. LeMessurier and he asked to be retired. Then you take a man with absolutely no knowledge of Postal work and make him Deputy Minister of Posts and Telegraphs. The Prime Minister in reply to a question asked by one of the members of the Opposition said that he was sorry to say that there was no person in the Department of Posts and Telegraphs qualified to take the position of Deputy Minister. Well, I suppose we will have a splendid service now that we have two new men there. They must be supermen. I sympathize with the Minister of Posts and Telegraphs that he has been treated in such a way. I know how I would feel myself if I were the political head of that Department. Nobody expects the political head to know the workings of the Department. The minister of any department must depend upon the Deputy for advice. The Deputies of the different Government Departments are without exception, men of sterling character and ability. Mr. LeMessurier has gone through the service, and is a man of experience, honesty, and proven ability. Still you dispense with the services of such a man and appoint a man who may be an estimable citizen, but knows nothing about Postal work. One-third of the robberies which have occurred in the city branch of the Postal Service system has been traced to the messengers from the commercial houses to the Post Office. The Postal Department has been made a political football. It is not because two or three men have made mistakes and have to suffer as a consequence that the whole service should be held up to ridicule by getting a man down from Canada to show us how to run the Post Office. The people of this country want their mails dispatched in the quickest possible way. And we have to get Colonel Ross down here to tell us how this should be done. It is an insult to the people of this country. The General Post Office since the present Government assumed office has become a regular dumping place for political agitators. Men have been put into positions for which they have not been fitted. All Governments make mistakes, but what is the good of us if we do not profit by the mistakes of ourselves and others. Perhaps somebody will say that we made political appointments; but, Mr. Speaker, I will challenge anyone in the House or outside of it to prove that while I was Minister of Postal Telegraphs there were appointments made to the department for political reasons. It is stated in the Speech from the Throne that the Post Office is overmanned and underworked. Who, I ask overmanned the Post Office? Certainly it must be the present Government for I understand there are now fifteen more names on the payroll than there were last June. Do you think you can fool the people in this respect? You may fool them a part of the time, but you cannot fool all the people all the time. You must appear extremely ridiculous to yourselves and to those who are acquainted with the conditions that actually obtain at the Post Office. Don't imagine such misleading statements will go unchallenged, the Postal Officials know what you are doing, and they are the greatest publicity medium in this country.

Speaking of Commissions, Mr. Chairman, I disagree entirely with the importing of commissioners to enquire into our Postal system. If an enquiry had to be held, you could have got competent men here in the city, men who know the system, and are just as intelligent as any man you can get from Canada. If you wanted to improve your system you could have sent a man from here to learn something of the Canadian system, and if he could learn anything from their system, it could be applied to our own. You should not have imported a Commissioner, that is where the mistake was made.

Mr. Chairman, referring to this Commission for Highroads, it is said that Mr. Hall, the Government Engineer, is to be the Chairman. Mr. Hall's duties in connection with the Railway should never be interfered with, and although the Railway is under different management, and you have a Government Commission running it, Mr. Hall should be on that Commission as adviser to the Government and management of the railway, and a man like him should not have his experience and valuable advice discounted and lost to the country. He is one of the best men that we have ever imported, and his experience and ability is stultified and overlooked now in the running of the railway, and he is given the position of looking after the building of roads and bridges.

HON. COLONIAL SECRETARY—I beg your pardon. He is still Government Engineer.

MR. HALFYARD—You told us that he would no longer be engaged at the Railway.

HON. COLONIAL SECRETARY—I said that he had nothing to do at the railway now, and his time would be devoted to this work. The railway is well looked after by Mr. Joyce, as competent a man as can be got in this country. His work should please Mr. Halfyard as he is a Newfoundlander. He was born in Carbonear.

MR. HALFYARD—That is no news to me, but you have Mr. Hall here, and you have to pay him a salary.

HON. COLONIAL SECRETARY—Yes, and he is going to earn it, I hope.

MR. HALFYARD—I submit, Mr. Chairman, that it is most improper that a man like Mr. Hall should be turned down, that a Government Engineer who understands everything in connection with the railway, and who is absolutely necessary to be there, should be told that he is no longer required.

HON. COLONIAL SECRETARY—It is not necessary at all. He is not needed there.

MR. HALFYARD—You told us that he is no longer required. It is done for political reasons.

HON. COLONIAL SECRETARY—It is not. He is not necessary there.

MR. HALFYARD—For political reasons and political expediency a man like Mr. Hall is ignored, and his services, which would be of great good to this country on the railway, are turned down, and he is no longer consulted about the railway.

HON. COLONIAL SECRETARY—Absolutely untrue.

MR. HALFYARD—Absolutely true.

HON. COLONIAL SECRETARY—You do not know what you are talking about. You come in here like a man with one hemisphere of his brain functioning and the other not.

MR. HALFYARD—I am trying to get something into your brain, even if I have to use a pickaxe. I hope there is no one in this House who needs such an operation in order to get an idea into his head.

HON. COLONIAL SECRETARY—You have a fine regard for ability. The very department you are talking about this afternoon is the department which shows up your own incapacity to run it.

MR. HALFYARD—I am trying to point out that the greatest mistake that was made in this country was not to allow Mr. Hall to perform the duties for which he was brought here.

HON. COLONIAL SECRETARY—He is still doing them.

MR. HALFYARD—I beg your pardon.

HON. COLONIAL SECRETARY—He is still doing them.

MR. HALFYARD—You told us just now that he was not.

HON. COLONIAL SECRETARY—He is not required at the railway.

MR. HALFYARD—I say it is the greatest mistake you ever made. You have a railway here that may turn out to be a loss to you . . .

HON. COLONIAL SECRETARY—It did turn out to be a loss under your regime.

MR. HALFYARD—Not at all. Last year there was only a deficit of $6,000. I presume the country is to be congratulated in having a man of such ability filling the office of Colonial Secretary at the present time. It is a pity that he has to play second fiddle to another man who is running the Government.

HON. COLONIAL SECRETARY—If we had the reins of Government when you had them the country would not be like it is to-day.

MIN. OF FINANCE & CUSTOMS—If we were prepared to play second fiddle as you were to Coaker.

MR. HALFYARD — Sir William Coaker is just as honourable a man to play second fiddle to as Mr. Morine.

HON. COLONIAL SECRETARY—I don't know what it is you were playing, I think it must have been bass viol.

MR. HALFYARD—I am playing the tune that suits myself, whether it suits you or not. I suppose it is a little irritating for the Hon. Colonial Secretary to have to sit out there in that chair for such a long evening on such an important matter, but when it comes to presenting a petition to the House for a well, that is a different matter, and one which is more agreeable to him. But this Bill is to be railroaded through the House, and any man who has the audacity to get up and give his opinion on a Bill that is going through the House is playing a tune. That is the position that we are in to-day, that a member of this House cannot express an opinion but he is subject to insults from no less a person than the Hon. Colonial Secretary.

HON. COLONIAL SECRETARY — Where are the insults? If I have given any insults I am prepared to withdraw them, if you can tell me where they were.

HON. MINISTER FINANCE & CUSTOMS—Might I ask if, when you were on the Railway Commisssion, which was appointed by your Government, you had Mr. Hall working with you? Can you answer that question?

MR. HALFYARD—Yes, I will answer you when you sit down. Mr. Chairman, in reply to the question asked by Hon. Minister of Finance and Customs, Sir John Crosbie, I may say that we did not have Mr. Hall with us. This House, as it was composed at the time, would not allow us to have Mr. Hall, and to give you proof of that . . . .

HON. MINISTER FINANCE & CUSTOMS—But pardon me, you were the Government, were you not?

MR. HALFYARD—We were, but do you think that all we did was done with our own free will?

HON. MINISTER OF FINANCE AND CUSTOMS—Very well then, you admit after all that you were not the Government, but that you did what the Opposition told you.

MR. HALFYARD—I must admit that we were stampeded into doing lots of things.

HON. MINISTER OF FINANCE AND CUSTOMS—For all the bad things you said we thank thee now. I admit that we were a bad crowd alright, but I did not think that we were running the Governmnt.

MR. HALFYARD—The Hon. Minister of Justice knows that we could not have the Commission that was named by the Government. The Commission named by the Government first was, the Auditor General, Mr. Berteau, the Government Engineer, Mr. Hall, and the Colonial Secretary of the day.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—That was a beautiful commission. Do you think the Opposition was right in their objection?

MR. HALFYARD—That was the Commission that the Government named.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—You must have thought that the Opposition was right when you altered the Commission. You came down and altered it the next day.

MR. HALFYARD—I quote Mr. Higgins: "As I have already pointed out in this House, this railway is going to be on our hands for twelve months at least, and God knows how long after, now that we see the character of the Commission appointed." The Commission consisted of the Auditor General, Mr. Berteau; the Government Engineer, Mr. Hall, and the Colonial Secretary of the day. It makes no difference who the Colonial Secretary of the day was . . . .

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—You may as well tell us that it was yourself.

MR. HALFYARD—It so happened that it was myself. That was a lovely Commission, so the Attorney General says. Leaving myself out of it altogether, did not Mr. Berteau and Mr. Hall know as much about running a railway as any member of the present Commission?

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—The difference is that Mr. Hall and Mr. Berteau were civil servants, and under the domination of the Government of the day, and bound to obey their orders.

MR. HALFYARD—Then you go today and appoint five members of the Executive Government, and of course that is not wrong. They are not under the domination of the Government. They dominate each other and everybody else.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Certainly not. If the Government is prepared to accept the responsibility for running the railway they are not going to pass the operation of it over to servants. The Government is responsible publicly here in the House of Assembly to the people.

MR. HALFYARD—What an argument for a Minister of the Crown to put up. Your objection last year was that it was a political machine.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—It is the proper position to adopt.

MR. HALFYARD—A Commission consisting of members of the Executive Government is not political, but a Commission consisting of the Auditor General and the Government Engineer is political. That is the position you take now. Is that logical?

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—That is the trouble with you. You argue from wrong premises. The essence of logic is in the premises, and your premises is wrong. The position is that if the Government is going to run the railway it must be run by the Government and not by its servants.

MR. HALFYARD—The Commission was to consist of the Colonial Secretary, the Government Engineer, who is attached to the railway, and the Auditor General, who attended to the finances of the railway. Was not that running it by the Government?

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—No, that is running it by people who are servants of the Government.

MR. HALFYARD—In reply to the Hon. Minister of Finance and Customs I think he realises why we did not have Mr. Hall on the Commission.

HON. MINISTER OF FINANCE & CUSTOMS—Upon my word, I do not. I do not understand after what you said first. You said that he ought to have been there. I should have expected then that you would have seen that he was there, as you were Colonial Secretary.

MR. HALFYARD—I expect I shall have to get the pickaxe. I repeat again—as we all know the Commission consisted of the Colonial Secretary,

Mr. Berteau and Mr. Hall. The Prime Minister of the day, in reply to a question asked by Mr. Higgins from this side of the House, named the Commission. Mr. Sullivan then said that he would not allow the votes to go through. The House was in committee then on certain votes, and he held up the House that night, and then a conference was held with the Leader of the Opposition. They were agreeable that a Commission consisting of the Colonial Secretary, Mr. Cook and Mr. Shea should be appointed, and therefore the Opposition had as much to say with the appointment as the Government.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Do you think that is why the Government changed the Commission—because the Opposition objected?

MR. HALFYARD—That is the record.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Is not that an extraordinary situation to come in here and say that you did that because the Opposition made you do it.

MR. HALFYARD—I do not know, but we did not want to be here the whole summer.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Does not that show that you do not know your own policy?

MR. HALFYARD—Mr. Hall should have been on that commission.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Then the Government did a most dishonest thing. You can sit on whichever horn of the dilemma you choose.

MR. HALFYARD—Mr. Hall was appointed and you and Mr. Sullivan threatened all sorts of things if he was allowed to remain there.

Quotes Hansard.

"MR. HIGGINS—What I had hoped would be that the Government would have lifted this railway matter clear of politics. It is practically a repetition of the old story, with all respect to the Colonial Secretary, the Auditor General and the Government Engineer, that the railway is going to be made a political machine, I care not how honest the intentions of the Prime Minister are. It is a pity that an outside commission, so constructed as to be non-partisan, are not taking hold of this matter. In the first place, take the Auditor General. I have no confidence in him because he has no time to attend to railway matters. Why it is an absolute joke to talk about the Auditor General being shoved about here, there and everywhere; and if he has all the time on his hands to handle the different things that are passed around to him, he certainly has not time to look after the railway as well. Secondly, as far as the Government Engineer is concerned, he is a very competent and capable gentleman, but I am confidently certain that he will not be in a position to devote that time that he should to the work of railway commissioner."

"MR. SULLIVAN—Well, I for one strongly object to the railway being made a party machine Why did you not appoint a commission, sir, from members on both sides of the House and not pay any salary for their services? We, as opposition members, want to get a fair show for our constituents, but with this commission in charge of affairs we do not anticipate getting a square deal. . . . . We came here and treated the Prime Minister right and in turn we expected to be treated right by him. We did not anticipate seeing the railway run by Government men, and before the House closes, Mr. Chairman, you will hear more about this."

MR. HALFYARD—Is it a party machine at present? I make the statement now that the transportation service of the country is a dumping ground for political heelers and supporters, and I defy contradiction. That is the machine that we have now.

HON. COLONIAL SECRETARY—There have been no changes, the same men are running the railway.

CAPT. RANDELL—Then you give the commission no credit for what is being done.

HON. COLONIAL SECRETARY—I said the same heads are running it.

MR. HALFYARD—And it is non-partisan because four heads of Government Departments are running it? If you can get the people to believe that you can get them to believe anything. Why it is impossible for a man to get a job on one of the steamers unless he is a Government supporter.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—That is a trick taught by your masters.

MR. HALFYARD—These conditions did not exist under the previous Government. Coming to the appointment of Capt. Wes Kean, even some of the strongest supporters of the Prime Minister and Minister of Fisheries would not have him there if they could help it. Certain people protested against his appointment.

HON. THE MINISTER OF FINANCE—I never heard of it.

MR. HALFYARD—The protest was made all the same by the crowd who want to run the Government. Now it is very interesting to know that the railway is non-partisan because it is run by five members of the Government. We were held up to ridicule when we were forced to do something which you now say was all wrong. That is the treatment that has been meted out to us, not only in that respect but in others. When anything is wrong you say why didn't we do otherwise. Now reverting to the matter of positions on steamers, I will give you an illuminating instance. A man named Barbour, who was forty years going to the ice, and last year had the misfortune to lose his schooner, applied to Capt. Dalton for a berth on the Meigle on her last trip north. As soon as the Minister of Fisheries heard that Barbour was on the ship, he phoned Capt. Dalton and asked why this man was on the ship. When Barbour came back he was told by Capt. Dalton that his services were no longer required. I think Capt. Dalton said that he had a letter from the Minister of Fisheries that Barbour should be dismissed. That's an example of how the service is run. I do not know if the commission has much to do with giving berths to the ice on the Government steamers Sagona and Prospero, but I know there are very few men from Conception Bay or Trinity Bay going on them. The sealers say that it is useless to apply for a berth unless a man comes from Bonavista Bay. Mr. Chairman, the Bill before the House would be received with better grace and be given greater support if the country had experienced a series of successful years for any length of time. We are told that the Revenue is greater than that of the previous year by over three hundred thousand dollars. You are congratulating yourself on the increase, but the wonder is that the surplus is not greater, when we compare our increased earnings with the previous year. We have passed through a year in which the importations are regarded as abnormal, but the question is, will our imports be as great next year and the year after? With the increase of revenue it is time for you to reduce taxation. But where are we to get off if we reduce taxation while we are increasing expenditure. We have a national debt, including the new loan, of about sixty millions, and we have assumed the liability of guaranteeing the capital and interest on ten millions in connection with the Humber, which makes our liabilities about seventy millions. We all hope that the Newfoundland Power and Paper Company will be a great success and that we will never be called upon to pay the interest, but we must give consideration to such a possible liability and govern ourselves accordingly. Our liabilities are too great now for such a small population, and the chances of getting returns from the Road Scheme in this Bill are so remote and visionary that I must oppose the measure. We cannot afford to undertake such a venture when we are unable to provide for the encouragement of our staple industry. The country has been told that we cannot spend anything to improve our transportation system, or provide a subsidy of one hundred thousand dollars for the carrying of our fish to the West Indies, and yet you propose to undertake this road-building scheme, and we are told it is the best thing that was ever proposed. Every country under the sun is trying to take advantage of quick transportation facilities for marketing their products, but we must go on in the beaten track through Canada and the United States for the marketing of our fish because we think that this country cannot afford to spend one hundred thousand dollars on a steam subsidy to the West Indies. Now I am not speaking for or against that project. We are prepared to gamble two million dollars on roads for tourists, but we are not prepared to spend one hundred thousand dollars on steam subsidies to increase the price of our codfish by better market facilities. With regard to the maintenance of roads, we do not know what these roads will eventually cost, and it is no use having roads unless they are built properly and kept in repair. I had no intention of speaking at such length in connection with this Bill, but I must submit again that Mr. Hall, the Government Engineeer, should be connected with the railway as a consulting engineer with the commission. If the commission is going to be carried on as it is—and I have heard nothing to the contrary —why not have Mr. Hall there giving his sole attention to the biggest transportation problem in the country, and not having his activities confined to building roads and bridges. He should work in conjunction with the Manager of the railway, as he always did, and give valuable service to the commission from time to time. Where do you get your advice from if it is not from the Manager of the railway. The Manager is a very busy man, and he has to give some hours of his time every week to the Commission. If you had Mr. Hall there he could give you detailed information as to how everything is going on and act as kind of supervisor and advisor to you. You are not in a position now to suway because you have not the knowway because you have ont the knowledge or ability, and no one expects you to have it. Why not use the brains and ability of Mr. Hall, who does know something about the railway. You have one of the best men in the country as Manager of the railroad, and who is as good, if not better, than one you might import, and there is no reason why you could not have the services of the man who was brought into the country for the work he is prepared to do. Then there is Mr. Robinson, assistant to Mr. Hall, who can give you all the drawings, estimates and plans of bridges and culverts for roads and bridges just the same as Mr. Hall; so I would impress upon the Government as a matter of ordinary common sense and common decency to employ the man who is a valuable asset at the present time on railway matters. If you have money to spend, let it be spent on the roads we already have. Use the commission that is functioning at the present time and engage some local men in the country to construct the roads, men of practical experience, and not import men because they might have gone through some college and have some knowledge of science. Spend one hundred thousand or a half million dollars if you like on the roads you have at present and you can do that work without having to engage the services of three extra commissioners, as is proposed in this Bill, besides a staff of clerks. Cut the thing out because the country cannot afford it under present conditions. The prosperity may be only temporary, but we pray it will be permanent. Conditions are not as bright as we would like to see them in connection with our national industry. We do not know what will happen next year. Therefore, as a conservative Government, try and conserve the interests of the country. Do not undertake any scheme which is only problematical. The outgoing Government were criticized severely for spending too much money, but I think the present Government are decidedly more lavish, although they told us they were going to cry halt to any such undertakings as they are now embarking upon.

MR. GODDEN—Mr. Chairman, I rise for the purpose of making a few observations in relation to the subject matter now before the Chair. As has been pointed out by my colleague, if it is the purpose of the Government to spend any particular amount of money on road building, that should be done in the interest of Newfoundland people anyhow and not principally for the encouragement of outsiders. I take it that the Government have made up their minds that this Bill is to be made law, and that anything said from this side of the House will not make any difference, so that we must make the best of a bad business and try and throw out criticisms, suggestions and amendments to make the thing a little more worth while. The first page of the Bill, I notice, is entitled the Constitution of the Commission, and that the Government Engineer will be in chief command of that Commission. That is as it should be. Mr. Hall is a man of considerable experience, both theoretical and practical; but I am afraid you are going to have a good deal of trouble if you purpose having only three other Commissioners to control the money to be spent on highways. I fail to see how four men are sufficient, if they are not going to give their whole time to the work, and I take it that it is not the intention that they should give their whole time to it. Section (e) says: "Three members of the Commission shall be a quorum for the transaction of business." What will happen, I wonder, when two of these four men are in different parts of the country or are out of the country? Does it mean that the Commission will not function in that event? I would suggest that one or two more members be apopinted on that Commission, and I would say that it would be most desirable to have such men appointed on that Commission who are not interested in politics. In other words that the entire Commission should not have any political affiliations whatever.

Referring to Page 2, Section 2 (f), the salaries and compensation, etc. I think all the members of this House would like some idea of just what those salaries are going to be. The same thing applies to Section 6 on Page 3. Would it not be wise to state just what percentage the fees of the Assessors would be based on. Because if this is not done now you may find out afterward, it comes to a matter of settlement, that you are being charged any or an exorbitant amount.

Now as regards the Section under the heading LAND PLANS, I submit, Mr. Chairman, that the word may be substituted, and the word SHALL be inserted in its place. Because if that is the only means of knowing that the particular lands acquired by the Government is owned by them and it is not so marked clearly, what is to prevent this land that is acquired by the Government being sold a second time by previous owners. Lots of these plans, I understand, are in the Agricultural & Mines Dept. to-day, lying forgotten and hard to find when wanted. Then in Section 11 (a). Wherever a road connects with a highway, etc. . . does this mean that all small culverts, or bridges, gradings, etc., desired by private parties shall be looked after by the Commission. That is how it reads to me.

HON. THE COL. SECRETARY—It means that any private highways that intersect on the public roads, the repairs of the private road will be borne and paid for by the Commission. Referring to Page 6, Section 24, under Heading FINANCES, it reads all sums, etc. (reads paragraph).

MR. GODDEN—Well, I submit, Sir, that all monies required by the Commission should be voted by the Legislature, and that no appropriation by the Governor-in-Council should be in order. I think that is all that I have to say. But I take it that as I said before, what I have said is not going to make any difference to the Government, and the Bill will be put through in spite of criticisms from this side. But I hope that any suggestions that I have made are quite in order.

MR. DUFF—Mr. Chairman, I would like to make a few remarks on the Bill before the House, by saying here and now that I am not in favor of this expenditure. I don't believe the Colony can afford it. As I said before in connection with the tourist traffic, I am not in favor of it. I have spoken to parties in connection with this, and I only met one person who was in favor of it. I have come to the conclusion that it is a wild-cat scheme. I would like to see a tourist traffic and welcome it if it could be proved to me that it would be profitable and beneficial, on which the people of this country could spend their money. But I feel that in spending two million dollars on roads in this country, we will never get our money back again. I would recommend that the roads be widened. Speaking of the roads in the neighborhood of my own district. We have one from Heart's Content to Carbonear, and one from Harbor Grace to Carbonear that needs some attention. I think those roads are too narrow. On the South Side of Carbonear there is a very narrow road with picket fences on both sides. As soon as the snow comes it blocks the road; the traffic is suspended and cannot be opened again until the Spring. I have often wondered why some Government in the past did not do something to obviate that state of affairs; for instance, they could widen those roads or make some provision so that the narrow roads should not have picket fences because, after all that has been the reason why, when the snow falls, it blocks up these roads. Then again, I would like to say that the Motor Association, for the three or four years that it has been in being, has done great work, and without pay, and I understand and believe that the same people who looked after road repairing last year are here, and are perfectly willing to do the work again. We all know that Road Boards have wasted money, and did not get adequate returns. We have to get the worth of our money in the work performed, and if the Government intend by appointing a Commission, to get over this difficulty it is a step in the right direction. At the same time I believe the Motor Association could do the same work. Now look at the state of the city of St. John's, where there are 1274 families getting poor relief. Fortunately in the outports, the people are not so badly off. In the city they either have to depend on the Government or else go under. In the outports they are a little better situated, and although we have our poor, there are not many, and are helped out by their neighbours, and get along somehow. But I do say that in view of the weather conditions at the present time, something could be done as regards improvement on roads, so as to give destitute people some asisstance. In St. John's here, it does not seem to me quite fair the way the money is spent. According to the papers people are getting relief and a great number of them do not require it at all. Take for instance the case where the dole is being given out. I understood that enquiries were made as to the people seeking relief. It sems quite evident now that this was not done. And, Mr. Chairman, right here and now, I say St. John's is getting more than its share, more than is just. I see in the papers some remarks about the outport doctors, in connection with the fever patients and the amount given out for poor relief. What hapens in the town of St. John's if some of the people's children are stricken with fever. They are at once sent away down to the Hospital. There they have nurses to care for them and everything is done for them. What happens in the outports? The people in the Fall put in their provisions, which consists of Flour, Beef, Pork, Tea,etc. The people, as a rule have only these provisions, and which is quite sufficient for them in health. But in a case where fever comes along they require fruits and medicines, something altogether different from what they eat in the best of health. Food of that kind may be death to a person who has fever as you all know. What the patient requires is something in the way of fruits or cereal. The money spent in the outports to relieve outport fever patients, is what is complained about in the Press. But take for instance the doctors. They do not make large sums of money while attending to a case of poor relief. The amounts paid are very, very small. I would like to enlighten the House as regards that matter, as I feel sure that injustice is being done. What I would advise the Government is that if they have 2 million dollars that they can lay their hands on for goodness sake reduce taxation. This country is essentially a fishing country. What is needed is reduction of taxation, so that the fisherman can market his fish as cheap as any in the world. If they cannot do that they must go under. I fear that this 2 million dollars that is to be spent on roads is visionary and imaginary, and the country cannot afford it, and therefore I will not support it.

CAPT. RANDELL—Mr. Chairman, with the few remarks that I have to make in regard to the Bill now before the House, I do not wish to delay the House, but I just want to put myself on record as saying that I am not in favor of this Bill. In the first place I don't see how the country can afford to spend two million dollars on propositions that are purely speculative, visionary, and without doubt, not likely to give returns commensurate with what has been expended. I understand that in connection with this scheme there is likely to be some hotels, or at least one hotel erected, in St. John's. I would like to ask some of the members on the other side if they have faith enough in the scheme to start in and erect an hotel for themselves. Why don't they put up the money themselves if they think they are going to make so much money. I think that this two million could be spent to much greater advantage for the people of the country, than in this scheme to get tourists to come here. It may make out alright. I hope that it will. It may notwithstand anything that I may say. At the same time I want to put myself on record as being against the bill. If we had that money as a surplus and had no immediate use for it then by all means it may be right to put it up for something that is speculative. But in the present instance the idea is a crazy one. That may not be very parliamentary language to use but that is the feeling that I have. There is one thing that nobody seems to have considered and that is that we have not the climate that would be inviting to people to come here. The bottle a day may be some incentive but aside from that I do not know of anything else that we have. I have travelled quite a bit and I have seen quite a lot of scenery and some of that not so very far from the state of Maine either. If anyone travelled from here to Carbonear by train or otherwise I do not think that he will see any scenery that will be of very great attraction to tourists, or anything that they might go into raptures over. You can see a lot of barren country and rocks and there is scarcely any vegitation even during the summer when the farms are cultivated. Now on the matter of commissions. It was said a little while ago in reply to a statement from Mr. Halfyard that in the commissions which have been appointed since the present Government came into power the commissioners have been without pay and that they have given their services free of charge. Well, you have had a man to come here to look at the dock. I suppose that he was commissioned to do that, I do not imagine that he would come here without being paid. You have had another commissioner to look into the Post Office. I presume that he was commissioned to do it. I presume also that he is being paid. You have a commission for the railway. I don't know whether they are being paid or not. I presume that they are. If they are not paid they are paid indirectly. I should like to have it explained to me how it is that if a man is on a commission in this country and tenders for a contract from the department for which he is a commissioner, I should like to know if he is not getting something out of it. I have been told that in other countries it is not considered to be according to Hoyle for a man to be the Minister of the Crown for a department and to hold contracts with the department for which he is the minister. I may be wrong in making this statement but I have been given to understand that Mr. Sullivan is a commissioner of the railway and that he also was a contractor for coal to the railway. That is the answer that was given last year.

HON. THE COLONIAL SECRETARY—Mr. Sullivan was not on the commission last year.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—He did not get any contract for coal since he became a commissioner of the railway. When he was selling coal to the railway, he was not a commissioner of the railway.

CAPT. RANDALL—He has been selling coal to the railway during the past year.

HON. THE COLONIAL SECRETARY—That is only fulfilling the order which he had contracted for before he became a Commissioner.

CAPT. RANDALL—Last year in the month of July on the 17th I asked who were the contractors for the coal which was to be supplied to the Government Railway how much they had contracted for, who were the tenderers and what were the contract prices and the answer which I received for this was that seventy thousand tons of coal had been supplied. I was told that there were no tenders asked The price of the coal was $6.50 per ton c. i.f. at Newfoundland ports and those who sold the coal to the railway were the Dominion Coal Co., the Evans Reid Company for which Hon. M. S. Sullivan was the agent, and Cashin & Co. I expect that these explanations are for political expediency. I know that these explanations are for political expediency. I know that these contracts are just ordinary business contracts in this country. The Hon. M. S. Sullivan was made a commissioner of the railway of which he had the contract for coal and I fail to see the difference which the hon. gentlemen are trying to explain to me. The Hon. M. S. Sullivan could not have taken this position of commissioner of the railway while he held the contract for the coal with the railway. He would not have done it if he had considered it as an honourable man should. I do not mean to say he has acted in a dishonorable way but with regard to the commissioners I dare say that it is ailright. It is allright according to what has been the custom in this country during former and under former administrations. But because somebody has done a thing that is no reason why the present Government should do the same thing. That is the excuse that has been given the members of this side of the House when we have spoken about something which we do not approve. One of the excuses is, what did you do? What was done under your administration? But Mr. Speaker I do not hold with that kind of thing. I am not in accord with doing a thing because another did it. More especially do I disapprove of a thing like this being done by a member of this House. I am not in accord with this bill. I do not see where we are going to get the returns. I do not believe in spending so much money on a scheme like this. It is purely speculative and I do not believe that there is a man in this House this evening who believes that we are going to get adequate returns. If we had the climate to induce those people and if we had the accommodations it might be a different thing. But how long do you think that it is going to be before you can have a hotel? It will take two years to build a hotel that would be anything like a first class building, well equipped and well furnished. I do not say anything against building a new ship for the Cabot Strait service. I think that it was about time that we had something done in connection with this service. The Kyle is not the right kind of a boat for that service. Any man who knows anything about steamships knows that the boat there now does not fill the bill and I think that it is quite alright to get something that will fill the bill better. But if you think that you are going to get a great influx of visitors just because you think that they should come along and spend their money and to do this you are going to borrow two million dollars, I think that it is not wise. I think that it is a purely speculative venture.

MR. HICKMAN—Mr. Chairman, I just want to ask the Hon. Colonial Secretary, who represents Harbour Grace, what he has done for the people of Harbour Grace in the way of giving employment. Some time ago, I understand the Minister of Public Works had made some arrangements to give some employment to the people of Harbour Grace in the way of Highroads construction, and I have since been informed that the work has been stopped. I will be very glad if the Minister will inform me of the position of that matter to-day.

HON. COLONIAL SECRETARY—Mr. Chairman, I would like to say in answer to the Leader of the Opposition, that he will remember last week a delegation of two or three came from Harbour Grace looking for some relief work to be started to relieve the destitution there. In company with the Minister of Public Works, I met these men and talked the situation over with them, and we told them that if there was any work that was essential, or would be of advantage to the district, we would have work started on it, and provide employment for those in distress. Apparently the matter was left in the hands of the Minister of Public Works and he sent the outport Road Inspector to Harbour Grace, and he discovered that the residents of Harbour Grace, who were the prime movers in this matter had formed themselves into a committee, and had proceeded to employ the men. Of course we told them that we could not approve of their action, because the money that was to be spent was public money, and had to be spent through the proper channels. At any rate, we had to stop these proceedings, because the whole population was at work. The result was that the thing became so embarrassing that we had to call the whole think off, and instructions were given to the Commissioner of Charities, Mr. Brownrigg, to get in touch with the relieving officer at Harbour Grace, and try and discover what cases of destitution existed in Harbour Grace, and see that proper steps were taken to provide relief for them. We could not undertake to employ the whole population of Harbour Grace. Instead of starting work to relieve the destitute, we found that when we started work every man in the place wanted to have his share of it. Of course, when this Roads Commission plan is developed, I have no doubt that there will be plenty of work to be done in that section. This work which we had for these men was merely the widening of some road that was considered too narrow. When the work has to be done, it will be done under the supervision of the Highroads Commission. The situation in Harbour Grace has been very difficult to handle, but we did the only thing that could be done. However, I was talking to Mr. Squires, the Relieving Officer in Harbour Grace, this afternoon, and he told me that everything was alright there now, and that those who were destitute were being looked after, and there is no necessity to take any notice of this claim of general destitution at Harbour Grace.

MR. HICKMAN—Mr. Chairman, I thank the Hon. Minister for the information we have received from him. I had been merely informed that the work had been arranged but had stopped. In reference to the Bill now before the chair, I would ask the introducer of the Bill if he would be good enough to rise the committee for this afternoon. I think quite a time has been taken up with cross-firing and one thing and another.

HON. THE COLONIAL SECRETARY—If you are not prepared to go on.

MR. HICKMAN—Unless you insist.

HON. COLONIAL SECRETARY—I do not want in any way to hamper the honourable member.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Mr. Chairman, there is just one matter that I would like to refer to, arising out of a remark made by Capt. Randell, the Hon. Member for Trinity, which I hope he did not mean seriously. If what the hon. captain has said is true, I think not only ought we not go on with this Bill, but we ought to change our views about this country altogether. I was surprised to hear him say that our climate was not one that would attract any tourists here. That is a complete revolution of thought from what we have always been inclined to think about Newfoundland.

Personally, I think that our climate here is admirably attractive for those tourists who might otherwise go to Bermuda, but would find that place too hot in summer. I think our climate is particularly attractive during the season that these people would come here.

As I conceive it, the tourist trade that is going to come to this country is the tourist trade that Nova Scotia has been recently trying to attract-- the people who go south in the winter, and in summer want a climate such as ours. Frankly, if the hon. member is serious in that remark, I think we ought to abandon the whole idea of having tourists come here at all. I always thought that that was one thing we had . So far as a summer climate is concerned, I do not think that there is any climate more likely to attract tourists than ours. If the Hon. Capt. was serious in that remark, then I think the whole scheme is based upon a wrong principle. I think we have a very healthful climate, but we are not to be thanked for that. We have to thank God for that—it is not a Government measure.

MR. HICKMAN—I am rather surprised that you do not take credit for our fine spring.

HON. COLONIAL SECRETARY—Mr. Chairman, I might say that if Capt. Randell, the honourable member for Trinity, would ask his friend Capt. Mitchell, of the "Silvia," he would find out from him that there was an enormous number of people who would have come down here last summer if we had any hotel accommodation for them. But we have not had that class of tourist down here at all. It is only a certain class that come here on the round trip. We do not have the other class at all, because we have no place to accommodate them.

This matter is not new. It has been discussed frequently in this House and outside. I remember having a conversation with Sr Edgar Bowring last year on the matter. He told me that if we had a good hotel built here in St. John's, and two or three hotels outside connected with it, and if we made good motor roads, his company would put on two fifteen knot boats, running between here and New York.

I heard the same story from the Manager of the Newfoundland section of the Furness Withy Company in Liverpool. He told me that, as a matter of fact, they did not intend putting the new boat on this route until a new hotel was built here, but they must have changed their policy in regard to that, because they will have a new boat, called "The Newfoundland," come here this summer. But they have been encouraged in that respect by these developments that we propose bringing in.

I am sorry to hear the honourable member on the other side so pessimistic about the matter. We have to try and make an effort to bring people into this country ,and get revenue from them, instead of always getting it from the same source. Already our people are fairly heavily taxed, and we must not overtax them. But we must find some other means of revenue, and I know of no more lucrative way than to get some of these wealthy people come here and spend their money here.

Mr. Higgins, the Hon. Minister of Justice, referred to Bermuda. I went down to Bermuda one winter, and it was extraordinary the amount of money that people spend there. Of course, I know that we have not got a climate like Bermuda has in the winter, but we have a climate that Bermuda never had and never can have in the summer.

Some of these wealthy people are ony waiting for an opportunity to come to some place new. These rich people practically cover the globe, and when we are prepared to accommodate them, they will come here.

I move that the Committee rise.

HON, MR. SULLIVAN—Mr. Chairman, I regret that I was not here when Capt. Randell, the honourable member for Trinity, made certain remarks with reference to myself in connection with coal contracts for 1923-24. It is to be regretted that some honourable members of this House make unwarranted statements without being able to substantiate them. Remarks made by Capt. Randell on Water Street may not carry much weight, but statements made by the honourable member for Trinity, Capt. Randell, on the floors of this House and broadcasted through the public press, should be carefully considered before made, and it would be well for any gentleman making statements in this House that might be injurious to individuals or our industries, to be certain that the statements he makes are correct before making same.

I think that this coal question was fully discussed in this House last year. I made the statement at the last session of this House, that Newfoundland had been overcharged by the Besco Company for the last three years, at least $1.00 on every ton of coal which we purchased from them. A short time previous to the letting of the contract for coal supplies for the Railway last year, the Besco Company had sold a cargo of coal at $7.50 per ton, cif St. John's, Newfoundland. Their sales agent came down here when it was proposed to place the contract for 60,000 tons for the Railway and steamers. Presumably as they had supplied a cargo of coal only six weeks previous at $7.50, their intention was to try to obtain the contract at a similar price for 1924. The honourable member for Trinity refers to me as supplying coal. He is absolutely wrong. The firm of Evans & Reid, Teasdale, Lidstrom, Ltd., of Newcastle-on-Tyne sold one cargo through their managing director, Mr. Lidstrom. Mr. Lidstrom was out here and saw the General Manager of the Railway and asked to get a trial order, and he eventually secured an order for a cargo of 3,000 tons of coal Please bear in mind that at that time I was in the Opposition and that the late Government was in power. The coal that I was tendering on was American coal. My price was $6.50 per ton, cif, St. John's, Newfoundland, American funds. Cashin & Company were also tendering. Their price was $6.50, Canadian funds. The Besco Company, through their agent, tendered at the last moment for $6.50, Canadian funds, cif St. John's, $1.00 per ton cheaper than they had supplied coal about six weeks or two months previous. The contract was awarded—40,000 tons to the Besco Company and 20,000 tons to Cashin & Co. Cashin & Co. got the coal because their bid was in early and was the lowest, mine being in American funds, was 5 cents higher, but I contend that if it had not been for the bid which I put in and which Cashin & Co. put in, it is very doubtful if the coal would have been supplied this country any cheaper than the year previous. For the honourable member's information, I might say that since I have been on the Railway Commission no coal has been sold by me either directly or indirectly. Am I to be debarred from doing legitimate business because I am working on the Railway Commission without salary? If so, the quicker I get off the Commission and give up politics, the better for myself.

There is one question that I would like to ask the honourable member for Trinity. Is he a director of A. H. Murray & Co., Ltd?

CAPT. RANDELL—That is quite right.

HON. MR. SULLIVAN—Then what is the difference between your position and mine, if I had sold coal to the Government? You are a director of that Company and a member of this House, and your Company were awarded the contract for supplying the public institutions with coal. If it is wrong for me to supply coal because I am a member of the House, then it is equally wrong for you.

CAPT. RANDELL—The coal was not supplied to the Railway on tender.

MR. SULLIVAN—It was, and I am proud to say that I am one of the men responsible for making the Besco crowd cut down their price $1.00 a ton. By doing this, I was instrumental in saving for the tax payers of this Colony at least $60,000.

CAPT. RANDELL—Why did I get this answer then?

HON. MR. SULLIVAN—It is not for me to explain why you received the answer that you did. That is not my business. Tenders were called for, and as I said before, Cashin & Co. and the Besco Co., and I, submitted quotations, besides several other coal dealers, and you know the result. Instead of being praised for what I actually did, the honourable member seems to claim that I did something particularly horrifying.

CAPT. RANDELL—I am going by the answer I received to my question.

HON. MR. SULLIVAN—Did the answer say how much was to be supplied by each party who was awarded the contract?

CAPT. RANDELL—No.

HON. MR. SULLIVAN—I think, Mr. Chairman, the honourable member ought to be more careful in future when he is making statements, and not make statements without being able to verify them. I was surprised at the tone of some of the other remarks made by the honourable member for Trinity. Every Newfoundlander who has the interests of this country at heart, has been trying in every way to boost the country and get capitalists and tourists to come in here from abroad. We are told by the honourable member that the scenery is not worth looking at and that the climate is bad. This is certainly poor propaganda and very damaging coming from a member of this House, and because of this, it is certainly much worse than coming from an ordinary citizen. We have scenery in this country unsurpassed. The honourable member must not be able to see as well as the rest of us, and as for our climate—where would you find better weather than we had all last summer? Compare the weather we had in Newfoundland last year with the weather they had in England. Contrast the weather we are having since the 1st of February until to-day with what they are having in other parts of the world. It is very poor policy indeed, for any one to run down their own country, and I was very much surprised indeed, at the statements made by the honourable gentleman when he referred to Newfoundland. It is not because the honourable gentleman does not observe and admire our sceneries that tourists coming in here would be of the same opinion. We have rivers and lakes teeming with salmon and trout. Where can the angler get such sport at such a little cost?

A few days ago in this House, the honourable gentleman, and others, also made reference to the business of the Armstrong, Whitworth Company, in connection with the Paper Mills at Corner Brook. The statements made were quite uncalled for. We should do all we can to boost this Company and not do anything which might have injurious results. Let us remember that we are indirectly shareholders in this Company to the tune of ten million dollars. If this undertaking is a financial success, Newfoundland benefits by it. If it is not a success, then we are losers. The British Government guaranteed ten million dollars, the Newfoundland Government guaranteed ten million dollars, and the Armstrong, Whitworth Company must have put ,at least, ten million dollars into this proposition. We are told by certain members of the House that too much money is being spent. The more money they are spending on equipping and building the plant, the better security we have for our money, and even if the Newfoundland Power and Paper Co. do not make a success of it, then with a plant of this kind, it would be very easy for the British Government and the Newfoundland Government to arrange with some of the big paper industries to take it over and work it, because there is no doubt that this mill will easily pay the interest on the guaranteed twenty million dollars. Even if it did not, the Armstrong, Whitworth Company, who are into it to a large extent financially, could not afford to let it go by default. The Company that pays out in England, £800,000 or £900,000 a month to 50,000 employees, are not going to default on their interest in the industry in which they are interested in Newfoundland.

Making statements with reference to bad management at Corner Brook and that they are afraid that the Government may be called upon to pay the interest on ten million dollars, is destructive criticism and not constructive. I would like to ask the honourable gentleman who made him an authority as to whether there is bad management or not. One of the statements the honorable gentleman made was that he was told there was a lot of bad management at Corner Brook, and he gave an instance as follows: there was only twenty feet of water at low tide at their pier. This is a half truth. For the information of this House, I would like to say that they have two piers at Corner Brook, a shipping pier and the townsite pier where smaller steamers discharge. At the townsite pier, there is 18 feet of water at low water, and at the shipping pier, there is 28 feet of water at low water . Some of us take every opportunity of advertising our country so that we may assist her along the road to prosperity, whilst others take very opportunity of knocking the country and its resources. I had thought the honourable gentleman was a different type of man, and I regret that he should so far forget himself as to make the statements which he did.

Reference was made by members on the Opposition side of the House, that Newfoundlanders were not getting a fair show and objecting to the placing of English captains in the new steamers. The steamers are built by a subsidiary Company with English capital, not guaranteed by the British or Newfoundland Government, and, surely, they have a right to place whom they like on their own ships. Statement was made that the ships were to be managed in New York by an American Company. This is incorrect. The ships are to be managed, so I am informed, by the Furness Withy Co., Ltd. This firm, as you are aware, have large premises in St. John's.

Statements were also made about the importation of Canadian lumber men. The Newfoundland Power and Paper Co., from September to December, made every effort to secure Newfoundlanders to go in the lumberwoods, but certain propaganda work was done to prevent men from going in, telling them they could not make a day's pay. The wood had to be got, and it eventually became necessary to import a certain quantity of labor. Statement was made in this House that six or seven hundred men had been brought down from Canada. This is greatly exaggerated, and I am informed that there are not more than two hundred and fifty men brought in, and I have been assured by the managing director that in all cases, the same price per cord was paid to Quebec lumbermen that was paid to Newfoundland lumbermen. The Quebec men came in and took sub-contracts and made good money. Several of our Newfoundland lumbermen also made good money, and it was only yesterday that I was handed letters from Twillingate District, which showed that a group of men had returned to Hall's Bay, from the lumberwoods and had averaged $114.00 per month. One man went to Badger on December 5th, and returned after two months with $270.00, and it was found that men could not be induced to go in for $2.50 per day to load wood, as they preferred to go in on the piece work system.

During the construction period, it was unavoidable that a certain number of outsiders should be brought in, but as time goes on, Corner Brook, you will find, will be the same as Grand Falls, and after a few years, there is no doubt but 95 per cent. of the people will be bona-fide residents of Newfoundland. The management realize that the quicker they can educate sufficient men to operate the machines, the smoother things will run, and, knowing Mr. Stadler as I do, I have no doubt that his policy is to get as many Newfoundlanders into the manufacturing as soon as he can.

I hope, Mr. Chairman, the few remarks that I have made this evening, will clear up some of the misunderstanding, and that in future, when members are making statements reflecting on others and on our industries, that they will be able to substantiate the charges they make.

CAPT. RANDELL—Mr. Chairman, when I spoke the other day in reference to the coal contracts I spoke from the answers I had received to my question in this House. If the answer is not correct then someone on the other side of the House is responsible. The Hon. member for Placentia says that I vilified him, but I say I did nothing of the kind, and I will not listen to such a statement without contradicting it. And another thing, as regards what I said about the Humber affairs the information was given me by the management. I was speaking to Mr. Stadler and I may say he was very frank in his opinions as to how the whole business should be run, how the railway should be conducted, how the Kyle should be managed and that he didn't think it advisable to have Newfoundlanders as masters and executives of the new ships that are being built. I listend to his criticisms until he came to this point and then I started in to answer him back. I had it from the Armstrong Whitworth people that they had about 18 feet of water at the wharf. They had ships there last year that they could not discharge, and I can name some of them if necessary. I did not vilify anyone in my remarks and I had no wish to detract from the work being done at Corner Brook, but I spoke as I did because I felt the Newfoundlanders employed in this enterprise are not being used right although it was for them that it was inaugurated. That is why I spoke as I did the other day. And I may say right now that I do not want to get up in this House and make any statements other than those I have information on and can substantiate.

HON. MR. SULLIVAN—There are some things it would be better to forget in the interests of the country.

CAPT. RANDELL—I spoke according to the answer given me.

HON. MR. SULLIVAN—Were the quantities given in that?

CAPT RANDELL—No.

HON. MR. SULLIVAN—The answer was given last year.

HON. THE COLONIAL SECRETARY —There would be no object in us withholding the information—it was the late government's doing.

CAPT. RANDELL—It was not in the answer. Anyhow, I do not think it would be considered right by the British Government to have such a thing going on. I remember reading of a member in England being disqualified because he was connected with contracts like this. I also understand that Sir John Crosbie while a Minister of the Crown and a Commissioner of the Railway is also agent for the companies which have insurance on the Government steamers. That bears me out in what I have been saying as to members doing business with the Government.

HON. MR. SULLIVAN—The Opposition are doing the same.

CAPT. RANDELL—Does that mean that the Commissioner is not being paid directly or indirectly. I can substantiate what I say.

HON. THE COLONIAL SECRETARY —Will you substantiate the statement that the Commissioners are paid. If a man is doing ordinary business, do you expect him to drop it because he is in the Government. If for example, the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition, who is in business wanted to sell anything to the Government, hasn't he a right to do so.

CAPT. RANDELL—That is alright, but I do not want anyone to say that I am making statements that are not in accord with the answer which I received to my question in this House.

HON. THE MINISTER OF FINANCE —Mr. Chairman, I crave the indulgence of the House for a few moments. I am sorry indeed to see that the Hon. member for Trinity, Capt. Randell, lost his head completely this afternoon. In fact I had a higher opinion of him. Respecting the matter of coal, I may have a few words to say within the next seventy-two hours that may be very interesting to him, very interesting indeed. With regard to the matter of the Humber Company he made a statement as to what the manager told him in connection with the depth of water at the wharf. Now would he tell us the name of that manager?

MR. RANDELL—The manager that told me that was one Mr. Warren.

HON. MR. SULLIVAN—Warren is in Hong Kong now.

HON. THE MINISTER OF FINANCE —The Hon. member for Trinity also talked about being told other things by another man. Now would he mind telling the House who that other man was?

MR. RANDELL—I refuse.

HON. THE MINISTER OF FINANCE —I thought that. That is usually the way some people do things when they go behind the scenes and make charges, which they know they cannot substantiate. Still he boldly gets up and tells about insurance carried on the railroad. Yes, I insured for the railroad and shall do so again, if the opportunity offers; and for the information of Capt. Randell I might say that our rate was cheaper than anybody else ever put in there. Why should I have to discontinue insurance on Government boats? Must I close up my business because I am in public life?

MR. HALFYARD—Why did you not ask for tenders?

HON. MINISTER OF FINANCE— What did you do when you were on the Railway Commission?

MR. HALFYARD—I beg your pardon———

HON. MINISTER OF FINANCE—I beg your pardon. My tender at that time was juggled with and the insurance was given to Dale & Company.

MR. HALFYARD—You cannot give proof for that statement.

HON. MINISTER OF FINANCE—I will give the proof and don't worry about it either. The rates we offered were cheaper than the rates offered by any other Insurance Company in this country, as I have said before, and that is why we effected insurance on these boats.

MR. HALFYARD—But tenders were not asked for.

HON. MINISTER OF FINANCE—A year ago what did your Government do? Did you not pay 45 cents per ton higher than the next tender?

MR. HALFYARD—That is incorrect; it was 35 cents per ton higher.

HON. MINISTER OF FINANCE— Is that true?

MR. HALFYARD—I don't know; the papers say it is true.

HON. MINISTER OF FINANCE— Do you believe everything that you see in the papers?

MR. HALFYARD—Apparently, you do.

HON. MINISTER OF FINANCE—

Whether everything that appears in the papers is true or not, I would prefer to see the tenders.

MR. HICKMAN—The Hon. member for St. John's West, in view of his own personal record, should not be so personal in his remarks.

HON. MINISTER OF FINANCE—When it comes to personal records, yours is no cleaner than mine.

MR. CHAIRMAN—The Hon. Minister of Finance was referring to the Hon. member for Trinity in his ex-official capacity.

HON. MINISTER OF FINANCE—This whole matter was brought about entirely by the member for Trinity this afternoon.

CAPT. RANDALL—I just made reference to it.

HON. MINISTER OF FINANCE—You just made reference and you tried to get off with it; but you are not going to, because if you did it would be just as well for us on the Government side of the House to get out and leave Saints like you in here in charge of affairs.

Mr. Speaker resumed the Chair.

The Chairman from the Committee reported that they had considered the matter to them referred, had made some progress, and asked leave to sit again on to-morrow.

On motion this Report was received and adopted, and it was ordered that the Committee have leave to sit again on to-morrow.

The remaining Orders of the Day were deferred.

MR. HALFYARD—Mr. Speaker, in moving the adjournment of the House, I think that it would be in the interest of the House, especially after the interesting and lively debate this afternoon, that I should refer to the reporting of our remarks in the newspapers. I think I should have referred a few days ago to this matter, but it was only yesterday that my attention was drawn to it, and to allow such reports to broadcast throughout the country, without contradiction on our part, would be unjust to the persons credited with having made such statements. It is in regard to the Hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries replying to certain remarks I had made with reference to the expenditure of moneys.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Is that an official Report. The House cannot enquire into reports made by papers because the House has nothing to do with papers.

MR. HALFYARD—We have newspaper reporters here and I take advantage to correct this misleading report. (Reads Report)

The Hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries did make a remark something like that, but he did not refer to Trinity District. I, therefore, take the occasion to contradict that statement absolutely. Neither my colleagues nor myself ever sent moneys to Union Councils in Trinity District. I never sent a cent of Government moneys to a Union Council since I had a seat in this House.

MR. PUDDISTER—May I ask the Hon. member what paper he is quoting from?

MR. HALFYARD—The "Globe."

MR. PUDDISTER—I thought so.

It was moved and seconded that when the House rises, it adjourn until to-morrow afternoon at three of the clock.

The House then adjourned accordingly.

FRIDAY, March 6th, 1925.

The House met at three o'clock in the afternoon pursuant to adjournment.

MR. CHAMBERS—Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present a petition from the people of Channel in the District of Burgeo and LaPoile, on the subject of a wharf. The wharf that is there is practically beyond repair and has been in this condition for many years. As a matter of fact at the present time it is practically gone. They have had a wharf at Channel for the past fifty years, and it is more indispensable to-day than ever. I have much pleasure in supporting the petition and ask that it be referred to the department to which it relates.

MINISTER OF MINES AND AGRICULTURE—Mr. Speaker, I have much pleasure in endorsing the petition presented by the Hon. Member for Burgeo and LaPoile. I have been in that district several times and I know of the conditions that exist there. When I was in the district I was asked by several influential citizens of the place to support any request that might be made for anything to improve the wharf. I have much pleasure in supporting the petition.

MR. POWER—Mr. Speaker, I have much pleasure in supporting the petition of the Member for Burgeo and LaPoile. I know the conditions that exist there and I know a new wharf is a necessity.

HON. COLONIAL SECRETARY—I beg to lay on the table of the House the answer to question No. 5 on the Order Paper of March 5th. I also beg to lay on the table of the House the answer to question No. 6 on the same Order Paper.

GIVING NOTICE OF MOTION AND QUESTION.

MR. BROWN gave notice of question (1).

MR. BROWN gave notice of question (2).

MR. BROWN gave notice of question (3).

MR. HICKMAN—Mr. Speaker, in connection with these questions, I want to bring to the notice of the House the fact that some questions which have been on the Order Paper and were deferred have not been included in the Order Paper of the next day. I asked question No. 1 on the Order Paper yesterday, but the Minister was absent, and the question is not on the Order Paper to-day. The Minister is absent again to-day—the Minister of Public Works—and I am anxious to have the question answered.

HON. COLONIAL SECRETARY—I might say that the Minister of Public Works is ill in bed.

MR. SPEAKER—If the Hon. member will give a note to the clerk, these questions will be placed on the Order Paper to-morrow.

..NOTICE OF MOTION.

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE —To ask leave to introduce a Bill entitled "An Act to Amend Chapter 52 of the Consolidated Statutes (Third Series), entitled 'Of Egress from Churches, Theatres and other Buildings.'"

HON. PRIME MINISTER—I ask leave to let that stand over until to-morrow, as the Hon. Minister is sick to-day.

The matter was deferred until to-morrow.

NOTICE OF QUESTION.

Question No. 1 on the Order Paper was deferred.

Question No. 2—

(2) MR. HALFYARD asked the Minister of Agriculture and Mines whether he has any knowledge of timber licenses on Labrador being granted by the Quebec Government; if so, table a statement showing the location and area of each lease.

MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE & MINES—Mr. Speaker, in reply to that question, I beg to say that the Department has no knowledge of any such licenses being granted.

Question No. 3. Deferred.

Question No. 4. Deferred.

ORDER OF THE DAY.

Committee of the Whole on a Bill entitled "An Act respecting the Lobster Fishery." Deferred.

Committee of the While on a Bill entitled "An Act relating to Firearms." Deferred.

Committee of the Whole on Bill entitled "An Act to Provide for the Construction, Reconstruction and Maintenance of Highroads."

Pursuant to order and on motion of Hon. the Colonial Secretary, the House resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole to consider the Bill entitled "An Act to Provide for the Construction, Reconstruction and Maintenance of Highroads."

Mr. Speaker left the Chair.

Mr. Puddester took the Chair of Committee.

MR. ASHBOURNE—Mr. Chairman, with regard to this Bill now before the House in Committee, I wish it to go on record that I am opposed to the spending of the amount of two million dollars on any scheme which, to my mind, is so visionary, so fanciful, so unsubstantial, and such a delusion as that which we are now called upon to consider, namely, the expenditure of two million dollars on the tourist traffic.

I am afraid, Mr. Chairman, that there are some honourable members opposite to me who have been so dazzled with the ideas of this tourist traffic that they are trying to increase our public debt, trying to get two million dollars to spend on this scheme, without being assured that they have the country behind them in this project.

I regret, Mr. Chairman, that this afternoon there are not more honorable members before me, because I feel that this is a question that should be debated strongly, and with enthusiasm. There is no doubt that it may be discussed broadly and debated, but up to the present time I have heard no cogent or convincing argument as to the feasibility of bringing this tourist traffic to the country.

I feel, Mr. Chairman, that those members who to-day are contemplating a certain traffic from tourists have not got down and taken their pencils and figured out how the tourists are going to bring any great revenue to this country. On the other hand, Mr. Chairman, I feel that this money which we are getting from outside should be spent on the development of our most important industry—our fisheries. We cannot help but know that this is very feasibly a matter which is causing division amongst honourable members opposite. We find to-day that the greatest number of taxpayers of this country are fishermen, and what have we seen the Government—the present Government do as regards the fishing industry of our land. What have they done? I ask you, Mr. Chairman. I ask the honourable members opposite me to tell me what they have done to encourage the fisheries, or the fishermen of this country. I am afraid that they are in a state of lethargy in this regard. We all know the statement made by the Hon. Colonial Secretary the other day—that if we had to depend upon the fisheries of this country, that they would not supply more than a means for half of our population to live. But the time was, Sir, when the fisheries of Newfoundland were her mainstay, and if that statement which the Hon. Colonial Secretary made is correct, then I think that it is our duty—the duty of the Government if they see it, and if they do not see it, then our duty—to point it out to them and insist that the fisheries receive more attention.

It is a great privilege to have a seat in the House of Assembly to-day, but nevertheless it carries a great responsibility with it. We, on this side of the House are called upon to criticise freely, frankly and fearlessly, and we have to point out the errors of the Government.

I think it is convincing enough to show that the scheme before this House—this one of spending 2 million dollars on roads—is too unsubstantial and visionary altogether. We are asked in connection with this to institute or incorporate a Highways Commission which will be another expensive Department, and will need to have a staff. The idea is to spend two millions, but why introduce a Commission to do it? Why cannot the Department of Public Works control that expenditure or the Minister of that Department confer with the Government Engineer to see it done instead of creating this new department which will need a new staff and is bound to prove expensive? After the money is spent there will be practically nothing for this Department to do. The interest on the Two Million Dollars, which you propose to spend on this visionary scheme, will be One Hundred Thousand Dollars a year at five per cent., and there is little doubt but the yearly repairs will cost in the vicinity of Two Hundred Thousand, so that the total outlay annually will be Three Hundred Thousand Dollars altogether. And what is all this expenditure for?—in the hope of bringing tourists here! I think, Mr. Chairman, it is time to call a halt to such expenditure. In speaking of our fisheries, why do we find the conditions as they are to-day? It is true this is the lumbering and laboring country, but it is first, last and always a fishing country. The fisheries are our staple industry, and they will ever remain so. We find to-day that the Minister of Marine and Fisheries is not a member of the Executive Government. Isn't that a pretty state of affairs in a country whose mainstay is the fishery! No wonder there is not more done for the country in connection with this industry. In the Executive we have a certain number of Lawyers. But I don't see why they are all there, and I think this House could debate any matters of law that are brought up here. I think it is time, Sir, to have practical men on the Executive Board. I am afraid, Mr. Chairman, that we have come to the time when political expediency has taken the place of experience, perhaps to the sacrifice of the fishery. We have heard a lot about the tourist traffic, but little or nothing of the fishery, and I intend to lay before the House this afternoon some details in this connection, which I feel sure will impress the members present. I have already pointed out the Minister of Fisheries does not hold a seat on the Executive Board, and our staple industry is being neglected. I am convinced that the fishery is not receiving the attention which its importance warrants, or the consideration due it seeing it should be of such prominence in our Island Home. The codfishery is not the only fishery we have in this country. The Hon. the Prime Minister has said in answer I think to a plea as to the appointment of a roving commissioner that he has an agent in every market. But I contend and think we should go further afield in this connection. We all know that it is not too easy a task to market our fish to-day, and I believe the trade will bear me out when I say it was no easy proposition to market it during the past year, even though the catch was small comparatively. But what would happen if we had a catch as we had in 1917-1918. Would we be able to market that, do you think? Everyone who is interested in the welfare of the Colony and has an eye to business, can see the difficulty fronting us in this direction, and it must be attended to, as otherwise we would be recreants to our duty. The cod is like every other wild animal—it has its runs—and I say we do not know enough in connection with it at all. We know nothing practically of the habits of the fish. All we know is that there is an inshore fish, and a fish which lies off in deep water. We have no scientific board in this country, as the Canadians and others have to secure information, and we are doing nothing whatever in this matter, and if we have an excess in revenue, unless we are going to reduce taxation, it is our bounden duty to spend it in this direction of developing the fisheries instead of on visionary schemes such as road-building. Take again for example the sealfishery—we have treasures lying at our very door of which we know little. We should do more to encourage this important branch of the fishery. Further, we are told that there is a quantity of Halibut and Turbot in the waters surrounding our shores, but we do not even know how to catch it. Now, Mr. Chairman, let me give a few facts in connection with our herring fishery. In 1917-1918 we exported One Hundred and Ninety-three Thousand Eight hundred and ninety-five barrels of pickled herring, but in 1923 the export of this fish had dropped to Seventy-three thousand barrels, and what is the Government doing about it? Absolutely nothing. Reference has been made here to the engaging of a steamer to ply direct from Newfoundland to the West Indies, but we are told the trade does not favor it. We know that the West Indies take a considerable amount of our herring which we have to send through Halifax. Agents come down from there and send the herring up, and it is they that make the profit, instead of our own people. I know that this applies to most of what is caught in Green Bay at any rate. But if we had a steamer we could send them ourselves. I would also like to give some information as to the trade for the West Indies. In 1923 their trade with the United States was $814,703,262.00 and with Canada over $54,000,000.00. We are told that the United States had seventy consular agents who were really commissioners in the West Indies and the Caribbean Sea. Canada also has some, but how many has Newfoundland? Not one as far as I know. It has even been claimed by some that the trade of the West Indies is so great with the United States that the latter would willingly cancel the debt of Great Britain if she could get possession of these Islands. It seems to me, Mr. Chairman, that in taking up this matter of roads and tourists, we are looking beyond the subject which is of the most vital importance to the country. In connection with the herring industry, it is not only the man who catches the fish that receives employment, but the man who goes in the woods to cut the timber for staves, hoops and the women and girls who also handle the fish at various stages. The captains of schooners and their crews also find employment in bringing the catch to various ports for sale or shipment abroad. All these people are doing something, and are, therefore, producers, and we ought to take some steps at once to help this important industry along. It is right at our front door, and still we are doing nothing with it. A big drop in the export of herring from 1917 to 1923 was due to the fact that we had no market. Now we are told there are markets, and as I said before a Commissioner could find them. Without such a one we are at a loss as to the best way to go about this matter. In 1917 the pickled herring fishery brought us in something like Two Million Dollars, but now our exports are considerably reduced, and what is the Government doing about it? Nothing. We are told to-day that there are great markets in Germany and Russia, and we know we have millions of herring around our coast, but still nothing has been done to bring this fishery back to its former standing. A few years ago the fishermen were told it wouldn't pay to catch herring, and they went out of the business when Halifax stopped buying. We have lost sight of this fishery which is of the utmost importance and gone after the tourist scheme, the results of which are at best, problematical. I do not understand this lack of interest in the most important industry—the fisheries —we have in this country, and I feel sure that the Government cannot be in earnest about this most vital question. We have to-day in this country roads, which the Prime Minister during the last session of this House, called a disgrace, and we have grants to-day given to outport places which will just about cover and take care of the amount of timber and plank required to plank our bridges. Further, there has been nothing done to repair the roads we have now. The Government can find two million dollars to spend on roads for tourists, but they have nothing additional to spend on our roads. We are told that we have a great country next door to us and the tourist problem in Newfoundland will never be much more than a fizzle. I may be mistaken but that remains to be seen. I want to be shown what returns can be expected for this great expenditure of two millions. As I said before, we have not yet been told anything as to how the money is going to be brought into this country by the expenditure of this amount on tourist roads. We are told that tourists are going to flock down here. Supposing they do, how is the money going to find its way into the Treasury. I cannot figure it out. I would like for some member of the Government to show me how we are going to get revenue by tourists coming in here. We are told that after the roads are built hotels will be opened in outlying places. Perhaps most of the roads will be built on the Avalon Peninsula, and if there is any money to be spent it will go to the people who carry on hotels and to people who carry on business here selling antiques and curios.

Really I am surprised that this House is asked to contemplate seriously the spending of such a large amount as two millions of dollars on such a project as the one referred to.

MR. BROWN—Mr. Chairman, like my colleague, Mr. Ashbourne, I want to go on record as being absolutely opposed to the spending of two million dollars for the building of new roads for tourists. I think that, as it is the intention of the Government to spend two million dollars on road-building, the right place to begin is in the outport districts, especially in the Northern districts of this country. Speaking as a representative for the district of Twillingate, it would take at least two hundred thousand dollars to-day to repair the roads in that district. In fact what we got there at present are not roads at all; they are goats paths, and our constituents are continually asking us to try and get money to repair the roads and bridges there. Owing to the dilapidated condition of the bridges there, it very often happens that cattle break their legs, so I think it would be a move in the proper direction on the part of the Government to repair the roads and bridges we have now. I am just in receipt of a letter from a prominent constituent with reference to the Grand Falls-Botwood road, which is in bad state, and asking for the sum of $10,000 to repair it.

(Reads letter to House).

Now the Grand Falls-Botwood road spoken of here was completed about eighteen months ago. Whether the road was completed as it should have been I am hardly in a position to say, but, if it takes $10,000 to repair the Botwood road to-day, it will take thirty-five or forty thousand dollars to put the Badger-Halls Bay line in condition so that motor cars can go over in safety. With such a state of affairs prevailing I think that the money anticipated to be spent on new roads should be spent on the roads in the outport settlements. Furthermore, I join with my colleague in stating that if two million dollars is to be expended something should be spent on the fisheries, or for that matter it would be a good proposition, in my opinion, to spend this two million dollars and an additional two millions to get a fleet of sealing steamers to replace those in use at the present time. Our sealing steamers to-day are hump-backed like camels and it would be a move in the right direction to have some new ones built. It is not my intention to hold up the business of the House because my colleague has spoken at some length on this matter, but I would ask the Government, in the interests of the fisherman, the logger and the country generally not to spend this proposed two million dollars in a way that the working men of the country will not benefit one cent.

MR. GRIMES—Mr. Chairman, I have not had very much time to examine the contents of this Bill, but I have seen enough of it to oppose the expenditure of so large a sum of money as two million dollars to be found out of borrowed money. This country is not yet in the position to spend so large a sum now on motor roads, with the fanciful idea that we are going to get tourists down in such numbers as to repay the expenditure of it. I did hope that the Government was going to practise what it was preaching during the last general election—economy in our public expenditure—but up to the present time we have seen nothing carried out in this manner, except what was already planned by the Warren administration previous to its retirement from office. The Government cannot rightfully claim that what economies have been shown at this session is theirs, when all it did was to carry out the plans of the former government. The proposal now before us calls for the creation of a "Highroads Commission," to consist of four persons for whom good salaries will have to be provided. No one, from whom good results can be expected, can be expected to serve on the Commission, unless he is highly paid, for it will require much knowledge, time and attention, and the employment of such persons at high salaries suggests that you are determined on large expenditures. Are we in the position to spend lavishly to-day, when other and more important industries are demanding the immediate attention of the Government? My colleague, Mr. Ashbourne, has stressed the importance of the fisheries, particularly the cod and herring fisheries, and I am fully in accord with him. Our fishery is still the main and most important of our industries and what are we doing, not only to preserve it but to advance it beyond its present confines—practically nothing. Instead we are chasing after American tourists and are ready to spend two millions on what is only problematical, while we know with certainty, of the millions of fish of all kinds around our shores ready for market, if more encouragement was given for catching them. When may we expect the return of our two millions once it is spent? I fear we will be dead and buried before the country will see half the amount spent, return again.

Tourists have been coming to our country for years and they are gradually increasing in numbers according as they become better acquainted with its scenic and sporting attractions. Most of them come back again, even with the facilities that are ours to offer at the present tme, and I have not the slightest doubt that did we advertise these attractions on a larger scale, we would have a larger influx of tourists. One would imagine, from those favouring the Bill, that the only class of tourists that will come to Nfld are those in possession of motor cars, who will spend their time driving around, and be landed from the car to the salmon and trouting pools, without having to walk to them. There are such tourists, and there are also those in equal numbers who will be content to come by the railroad, who will prefer a nice walk through the country and also to enjoy a canoe or row-boat over our beautiful lakes and rivers. They will prefer the rough-and-tumble camp life to the refinements of hotel life. Life in the open, enjoying the bracing air, the sunshine and the cool, invigorating breezes that our Newfoundland summers offer to all, will be more appreciated by this particular class of tourists. To think we can quickly rival Ontario and Quebec in the number of tourists coming to our shores, is not fair to delude our people with. Ontario and Quebec are close to the borders of the rich and populous New England States, New York, New Jersey and Michigan, who can within a few hours find themselves in Ontario and Quebec. Every week-end they can ride into these provinces and return again by Monday It is different with Newfoundland. They must drive through the Provinces of New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, through Cape Breton, and then take passage by steamer. A journey that will take days to accomplish. And what are the provinces of New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island experiencing to-day after all the money they have spent on highways. Very little tourist traffic compared to Ontario and Quebec, and the conditions of these provinces are such to-day, that delegations have had to go to Ottawa to implore the Government to help them out of the serious trade depression they are experiencing. We should go slow before we launch out on heavy expenditures when we have the experience of these provinces before us. I have no desire to discourage tourist traffic, but I do say that we have not made the most of the means that we have at our disposal. We have the railroad tapping many interesting and attractive parts of our country. Our steamers ply over beautiful bays and touch many points with scenic attractions that will please the eye of the most discriminating, and give them sport that will thrill them with delight. I repeat again—advertise these well. Show how near the railorad and steamers are to these places, with comparatively small cost to reach them. Place these advertisements in magazines and newspapers that are read by tourists of the class we want. Have it well illustrated. All this can be done at small cost compared to two millions for highways. Neither do I wish to discourage the building of highways. I would say—Go ahead with them as long as you can find money out of surplus revenue, out of money we have earned over and above our expenditure. Plan and work to have a surplus revenue from year to year, and out of it take a proportion for your highways. To build highways on borrowed monies with a debt of sixty millions already on an overburdened people, is not carrying out a policy of economy, or serving the best interests of the people. Our people are too heavily taxed already. It is with the greatest difficulty that the larger number of them can find income enough to make both ends meet. The cost of living is still going higher, and you propose to make the debt still higher without any definite assurance that their incomes will increase proportionately. I think much better use can be made of the monies being spent on the roads at the present time. There are too many roads in many localities which do not serve a useful purpose, but because some individual, during election year, makes it a condition of his support and influence that a road must be made to his door or his garden, too many of us comply with the demand, and the result is a number of roads, which while serving an individual, does not serve the community, for the reason that much of the money required in its principal roads have been spent and wasted on the others.

One of the great needs of the country is the rebuilding of our Dock. Rebuilt properly it can, within a short time, earn enough and probably more to pay the interest on the money required for its construction, in the meantime finding work for the unemployed. But in the consideration of this need we are not to lose sight of the needs of the fishing industry without which the country cannot go on. I suggest to the Government to place this industry foremost, build highways only out of surplus revenue, and lighten, not add to the burdens of the people already heavily overtaxed, which further borrowing entails.

HON. THE PRIME. MINISTER— Mr. Chairman, I would like to say one word on this subject more particularly in reply to Mr. Ashbourne and Mr. Brown. But before doing so I would like to extend a welcome to Mr. Grimes on returning to his seat in this House once more.

It seems to me that both Mr. Ashbourne and Mr. Brown have not thought of one essential point, and that is that the building of tourist roads is an investment. If we were going to spend money on private roads in any district we could not borrow money for that. This is an enterprise which we expect to bring in returns in the way of tourist traffic. Though I don't mean to convince the hon. gentlemen, because I don't believe that I could, that it is going to be a profitable investment. Still it is an investment that we believe in on this side of the House. And though I don't say that the money is going to come in very rapidly, yet I do think when the tourist traffic begins that the people will be very much attracted to Newfoundland. And unless we embark on this project by building roads and hotels, the tourist traffic will never come. We have got to build roads and hotels, and we believe that the income will come as a result.

Mr. Grimes made a wrong statement, in my opinion, when he said that the people of Nova Scotia are going up to their Government with their fingers in their mouths looking for assistance because the tourists have not come. The people are going up to seek aid from the Government because the industries such as the coal and the iron are failing and the people, who have been largely dropping off from the farm enterprises and going back to the city industrial works, now find themselves without the means of livelihood. That is the reason that Nova Scotia is suffering to-day.

Mr. Grimes referred to the building of private roads in the outports. I don't know how many men accosted me while on my election campaign with exactly the same purpose. That is: "There is a small road wanted here, and another there. It is not a public utility. It does not lead through any town. But it leads to my farm and John Jones' farm and we want the road." In every instance in Bonavista Bay I told them that I would not give anybody one cent towards a private road. The public funds are only for putting main roads through settlements, and if they want private roads they must build them at their own expense.

I only want to say in connection with the tourist traffic that I firmly believe that it is a good investment, and the roads that will be built will be a benefit to the people if the tourist never came here at all. If the roads are built they will open up traffic and will bring motor cars here that will help to pay the expenses. At the same time I don't want to encourage people to be any more extravagant than they are. Tourist Hotels are badly needed. We find that many tourists are coming in on the West Coast now. Would they not bring their families and come here for the Summer if they had good hotels to stop at and good roads to travel by. A tourist wants some kind of road to travel on, and if we want to open up the country we have got to build roads. I am firmly convinced, Mr. Chairman, that if we had to spend the money on roads that was spent on Branch Railways, we would be better off to-day. I want to say that I have very great faith in the tourist traffic, and I am not afraid to stand by it.

MR. HIBBS—Mr. Chairman, I would like to make a few remarks on the subject before the chair. Before doing so, however, I desire to say that I am approaching this subject free from Party bias. The subject is one I have believed in and have been intensely interested in for a number of years. I personally believe that we should have a better road policy for Newfoundland. It is regretable that during the last twenty-five or thirty years practically no attention has been given to this extremely important question. The various Governments, during the last quarter of a century, deserve the strongest censure for the indifference that has been displayed with regard to public highways throughout Newfoundland. Road-building in this country, Mr. Chairman, since I can remember, has been measured by the amount of votes that could be secured for the monies allocated for that purpose. The sums annually voted for road building or road improvement has been all together inadequate, and very little value has been given for that which has been voted. Some honourable gentlemen have stated that we have spent too much money on roads, and in answer I would like to explore that question a little further, and ascertain the correctness or otherwise of the assertion, and I do not think I can do that in a better way than by comparing the expenditure per capita on roads in this country with that of our great neighbour, the Dominion of Canada. Let us take the various Provinces from the Pacific to the Atlantic, and see what they are doing in the way of developing the country by roads. Let us begin at British Columbia. That Province makes an annual expenditure of $4,238,575.14. Its population is 524,582, which works out at an average of $808 per head.

Provinces	Expenditure	Population	Per Head
Alberta	$ 1,451,873.25	588,454	$2.46

The above represent the amounts voted for the improvements and maintenance of roads plus the revenue derived from registrations and licenses of motor vehicles.

It will therefore be seen that the amount of money expended annually in Newfoundland has not been sufficient to keep the existing roads in repair, to say nothing about building new ones. It may be argued that stance the Deer Lake and Badger roads, etc. That is true, but we must also remember that Canada during the same trying period also spent much money upon the construction of roads in order to furnish employment for her people in the same way that Newfoundland has done. Mr. Chairman, I think all honourable gentlemen on both sides of the House will agree that this apathy and indifference, this treating of a big and vital economic question as a joke, cannot continue for always. There must be a change, the country must be awakened to a sense of the importance of roads as a factor in the commercial and economic life of the country. When I say this, Sir, I at the same time realize the position we occupy financially and otherwise. I know that conditions in Newfoundland are in many respects different to those of Canada, but the fundamental principle remains the same, you cannot develop your country either from the standpoint of tourist trade or agricultural resources unless you penetrate its isolation by roads. We often hear people talk about the number of motor cars that are being imported into Newfoundland, it has been said that the city and country are being over-run by motor cars. In order to show you, Sir the ridiculousness of such a contention, I would crave the indulgence of the House for a few minutes while I compare the number of cars per capita in Newfoundland with that of the United States and Canada, and even taking into consideration the many handicaps that we admittedly live under the disparity is even then a remarkable one. The United States has a population of 104,231,737, there are 15,000,000 cars registered in that country which averages one car for every seven of the population.

Provinces	Population	Registration	Per Car
British Columbia	524,582	34,030	15
Alberta	588,454	40,642	14
Saskatchewan	757,271	61,367	12

Nova Scotia	523,837	16,159	33
Princ Edward Island	88,615	2,167	41

I repeat, Sir, that making due allowance for our own peculiar conditions, at the same time there is no reason why Newfoundlanders should be the only people in the world to be debarred from availing of the motor vehicle. If it is to the advantage of the people of other countries to substitute the motor car for the horse-drawn vehicles, does not the same rule hold good for Newfoundlanders, but before we can use motor cars economically we must have roads to drive over. Canada has outstripped us in the matter of road building, and as a natural consequence, the most backward Province in this respect has ten motor cars to our one, and the ratio for some of the Provinces would be 34 to 1.

Now, Sir, I would like to give the House a brief history of the present "Better Road Movement" in Newfoundland and why and where it had its origin. In 1915, a decade ago, we had a number of motor cars with practically no road to use them on. It occurred to me at that time that these motor cars that did so much to destroy our badly built roads should contribute something to their upkeep, and as the Government of that day paid little or no attention to the matter, I undertook to circularize the owners of all motor cars in the city, asking them to help out the Road Board on the south side of Conception Bay by contributions, in order to enable the Board to re-build the Topsail Road. My efforts in that direction resulted in the sum of $185.00, which insignificant as it was had one good effect and that was to arouse the motor owners into forming an organization. Mr. Collishaw and other gentlemen had been endeavouring to form a Motor Association previous to that time, but without success. When I made this appeal to motorists and contributions were being made, they seized upon the opportunity, called a meeting of motor owners together and said to them "Why are you sending money to the South Shore Road Board, is it not better for us to form an Association, pool our money and then make some united effort at road improvements through the Association. A number of motor owners agreed, and then and there they formed the necleus of the Motor Association which we have to-day. If I had not sent that circular I wonder would we have a Newfoundland Motor Association in existence at the present time. However, that circular has been given the credit of being responsible for the inauguration of the movement. This was the first active organization advocating good roads for Newfoundland; much credit must be given to it for whatever good that has so far been accomplished. The Newfoundland Motor Association rendered valuable service in assisting us to bring into being the Road Commission in 1920. The Newfoundland Road Commission was created in 1920, but its good work, which is in evidence where ever the Commission operated, did not receive much encouragement or support in this House either from the Government or Opposition.

HOS. MR. BENNETT—I always supported your work.

MR. HIBBS—Perhaps I should exonerate you, but it is safe to say that the Commission's work was not appreciated to the extent that one might expect.

The revenue of the Road Commission was derived from motor taxes, and an annual Government Grant of $10,000.00 per year, and to show, Sir, how little this House was concerned with the building of roads, they actually decided in 1922, to withdraw that grant of $10,000.00, and after considerable bickering and opposition, it was eventually decided to permit the Road Commission to spend this amount, provided that it was spent in St. John's East and West. This was open breach of the original Act "For the maintenance of certain public Roads" passed in 1920.

As a result of the Road Commission work roads which were no better than cow paths in 1919 were converted into fairly passable highways.

Of all the public moneys expended for relief and otherwise during these strenuous years, the only allocations for which value was given was that expended by the Newfoundland Road Commission. In view of this indisputable fact one would naturally think that th Commission would be given charge of all expenditure on roads, but strange to say that the only that the Commission would be given the only moneys which created controversy, was that expended so creditably by the gentlemen who comprised that Commission, and who gave their time and services absolutely free. From all sides, it is true, praises were showered upon our work, but nothing more tangible was forthcoming, and while it is pleasant to be appreciated, it is very difficult to build roads on praise alone, and the attitude of both Government and Opposition towards this very first serious step to improve our disgraceful road system would indicate that faithful, honest, non-partisan effort was to be penalized.

We were building roads, we were doing something substantial, something that reflected credit upon the country, and it seemed that we must therefore not receive any encouragement. I remember one of the numerous times when I interviewed Executive members regarding our road problem, and pointed out that the moneys being expended for relief work should be placed under the Commission, so that proper returns would be secured, the reply was, "Hibbs, you are mad, we are trying to relieve people, and you are talking of building roads."

Mr. Chairman, with regard to the Government's scheme as outlined in the Bills now before the House, I wish to repeat what I said in this chamber a few days ago. I am not by any means an extremist in respect to this tourist policy, I have some faith in the possibility of creating a tourist traffic in Newfoundland provided the Government approaches the matter right, but nobody can foresee just what is going to occur as the years go by, it must be regarded more or less as a speculation, a venture if you like, but a venture that I would have sufficient faith in to justify my support of the project. Every country in the world that has launched a new policy similar to this one, had to take a certain amount of chance, and the history of similar policies in other lands has justified the faith which the promoters placed in it. To be candid, however, if I could influence the Government's policy in this regard, anxious as I am to see a better road policy inaugurated, and desirous as I might be of seeing our House put in order so to speak, to cater to tourists, I would hesitate to spend $2,000,000.00 on one branch of this policy alone, unless we could afford to take care of other pressing needs. I would first of all take care of an industry, which we already have, and about which there is nothing uncertain, namely the Fisheries, and I would ear mark a half a million out of this two million dollar loan to be spent under expert direction, for promoting and boosting the various fisheries of the country. No matter what our opinion might be with regard to the development of a tourist trade, we cannot afford to neglect the greatest asset the country has, or is likely to have for a long time to come.

Mr. Chairman, last year I outlined a scheme, by which an amount of from a quarter to half a million dollars might be raised without involving the country in one cent's additional expenditure. My scheme was for the Government to authorize the Newfoundland Road Commission to raise a loan, the interest on which could be taken care of by the revenue received from motor taxation, and the present annual grant. The natural increase in motor cars will within a few years give the Road Commission a revenue of at least from fifty to sixty thousand a year. This amount would not only pay the interest on half a million dollars, but would enable a sinking fund to be formed which would take care of the principal in fifteen years. The Road Commission would independently pay off this amount itself, the same as is done in the various Provinces of Canada, and it would not be a charge upon the general funds of the Colony.

After a few years or so we may reasonably hope to be in a better financial position, and could then launch a more extensive policy. However, the Government has seen fit to undertake to spend two million dollars, as the initial step in preparing for this tourist trade, and I frankly admire their courage.

I wish to say, Sir, that my sympathies are with the movement to a great extent, I am supporting this tourist trade scheme on principal, I could not advocate such a policy under a Morris, Squires, or Warren Government, and conscientiously condemn the same principal under a Monroe Administration. Some honourable gentlemen say that the whole scheme is visionary, which is true, but we would be badly off indeed if we had no vision as to the future development of the natural resources of Newfoundland. I had hoped that some safe sane scheme would be brought into being under the late administration, and such a programme no doubt would have materialized if the Liberal Government had not met a premature end. During recent years I took steps to acquaint myself with the possibilities of inducing tourists to visit Newfoundland. I placed myself in communication with numbers of people who visit this country annually, and have obtained some first hand information of what their opinions, in this respect were. I have also communicated with a number of our best known sportsmen guides in order to secure from them some facts as to our inland fishing and sporting resources, and the best means by which they can be tapped by roads.

On one occasion I came across the Gulf with a party of seventeen tourists, all but three of whom were strangers to Newfoundland. These people had formerly spent their vacations hunting moose and other game in Nova Scotia. Upon arrival at Port aux Basques, which by the way did not present a very inviting aspect on that particular day, as it was raining and foggy, I found these gentlemen unanimous in saying that if we had a good road, from Port aux Basques into the salmon trout rivers, and hunting grounds of the interior that it would be a great inducement to motorists to bring their cars, and thus be in a position to travel at easy stages and fish at will. One gentleman informed me that he was a member of a club, practically the whole of the members of which take an annual outing and he assured me that sixty or seventy from this one club could be induced to come to Newfoundland if only we possessed the necessary facilities of travel and comfort while here.

Modern touring cars are provided with camping outfits, by which the traveller can comfortably house his party where and when he chooses. The same thing in my opinion but even to a larger extent would occur here in St. John's, just as soon as the Peninsula of Avalon is properly supplied with roads, by which its beauty spots and fishing pools may be reached. Of course one of the first steps will be to provide a suitable hotel at St. John's, and in this connection I am very glad to see, that a number of prominent and representative gentlemen are about to form a company for the purpose of dealing with the hotel problem in the city. As I stated on previous occasions I believe that if we tapped the more important salmon pools, fishing rivers, and general sporting resorts, with roads, that suitable hotels would be erected at these points by private enterprise.

Mr. Chairman, with regard to the High Road Commission, a great deal will depend upon the management of the Government's scheme by that body, and the future of the whole venture, particularly as far as roads are concerned, will largely depend upon the personnel of the commission. I presume the Government realizes the importance of this phase of the question. I would strongly impress upon them the necessity of getting capable men, men who have the interests of this important project at heart, not men who will seek appointments on the Commission merely for the sake of the dollars that the job might bring to them, and above all very little progress can be looked for, if politics is not entirely eliminated in the consideration of appointees. Sir, we have before us an example of political interference with the work of a similar institution. I refer to the present Road Commission. Everybody will agree, I think, that excellent work was done by the Newfoundland Road Commission up to last Spring when the change of Government came about, and while I am not reflecting upon the personnel of the present Commission, I do know that their activities were subjected to political wire pullings, and the result was that, comparatively speaking, very little value was given for the money expended last summer. The condition of the roads tells its own story in this regard, and now I would like to say a word on behalf of those who are actively associated with the Road Commission that operated from 1920 to 1924. These men, and some of them are associated with the present Commission, gave their services ungrudgingly in the advancement of the work they were intrusted with, and politics was never allowed to interfere with that work even in the remotest degree. I make this statement and challenge successful contradiction. I personally acted as Secretary on that Commission, and was actively identified with the work, and I know whereof I speak. During the strenuous period from 1920 to 1924 the position of Secretary of the Commission was no sinceure. My office was practically turned into a labour bureau, with hundreds of men daily seeking employment. My friend Mr. Halfyard who occupied an office in the same building can certify the correctness of this statement. Neither Mr. Soper or myself spent a holiday with our families while the work was in progress and practically every afternoon found us on some of the outlying roads supervising and directing the work. The policy of the new Commission the year past was to dismiss experienced men whom we had trained for four years, and who knew something of the art of building roads, and replacing them by others who were untrained and in some cases unfit for the work, simply because they were political friends of theirs. Road building is a science that I have tried to learn something of. In 1914 I took a correspondence course, and since then I have had some practical experience, and I contend that to-day I know how a road should be built, with the material that we have at our disposal, so that it will stand up against the wear and tear of present day traffic.

I repeat again, Sir, if the Government is in earnest, as I believe it is, and desirous of making a success of this important undertaking the whole scheme will have to be as non political as is possible to make it. I think the Prime Minister, Colonial Secretary and their colleagues in the Government would do well to follow the example set by Bermuda in her tourist trade programme. Bermuda has made a great success of her tourist trade, and with this success I have much pleasure in coupling the name of one of our fellow countrymen, Mr. John P. Hand, of Hamilton, Bermuda. Mr. Hand is one of the many Newfoundlanders, who has made good since leaving our shores. He occupies a very prominent position in Bermuda, being a member of the Legislature, and is also Chairman of the Trade Development Board of the Colony, and Mr. Chairman, I crave the indulgence of the House, while I read a few extracts from the letter which I have received from Mr. Hand with reference to the possibility of building up a tourist trade in Newfoundland.

"It may be of interest to you to know something of what we are doing in Bermuda, and of the importance of this trade to us right now. When the Armistice was signed, the only ship we had trading to the United States, was the old warship "Charybdis" which was on the Newfoundland station for many years, and which we had converted into a merchant ship. We at once took steps to revive our tourist trade, and as our first requirement was good steamships, we sent a Commission (of which I was a member) to New York and London to secure them. We were fortunate enough to induce the Furness Withy Co. to purchase two steamers, each capable of carrying over three hundred first class passengers, and we made a five year contract with that Company to operate a regular service on schedule agreeable to us, for which we have been paying them about £30,000 per year. At the time we made this contract this amount was about one-third of our total annual revenue. The trade, thanks to wide advertisement, and excellent steamship service, was quickly revived, and we now have these two Furness ships performing each a weekly service between New York and Bermuda; and the Royal Mail Steam Packet Company operate a 14,000 ton steamer on weekly schedule from the middle of November to the middle of April, for which we do not pay any subsidy. In other words, during five months of the year, we have three large steamers arriving here each week from New York. This year we will have had about 30,000 visitors. The value of this trade to the Colony is, (conservatively) £600,000 to £700.000, and it is estimated that approximately 70% of our Government revenue is derived from this source. Whereas in 1919 one-third of our revenue was devoted to this development, to-day with the increased volume, the proportion is about one-tenth.

"In addition to £30,000 per annum for subsidies, our Government expends £7,000 for advertising, and £3,000 for sports and entertainment, the latter a very important feature in connection with the development of this trade. In addition to the Government vote, the hotels and business houses contribute to an advertising pool about £3,000 per annum, spend an additional £8,000 direct through advertising agents, and the two steam ship companies spend over £30,000 for advertising.

"Up to a few years ago the idea of developing the summer trade in Bermuda, which is sub-tropical, was ridiculed, but this year out of 30,000 tourists, the number coming during the summer months will be about 17,000; in other words we have succeeded in making Bermuda an all-year-round tourist resourt, largely due to our having the courage to advertise extensively its year-round attractions.

"Good roads made throughout the Avalon Peninsula, along the South West and up the East Coast, and from Port aux Basques to Grand Lake and Deer Lake, would do much to assist this trade. The most important factors, however, are good steamships, good hotels, and plenty of advertising. These things cannot be had without cost to the Dominion, nor without the courage among those who would be most likely to benefit from the tourist trade, to build hotels.

"The steamers now operating between New York and St. John's are not sufficiently large to develop a substantial volume of tourist, travel, but having regard to shipping conditions generally, and to the present state of Newfoundland trade particularly, there is nothing to warrant any steamship company putting on larger ships on this route. You should begin to put your house in order first by making St. John's a clean city, and then build a good hotel accommodation for about 250 guests, so planned as to be conveniently added to as the trade grows. Then you must be prepared to launch an advertising campaign to begin with a cost of about $25,000. A hotel, such as I have in mind, would cost about $500,000, the financing of which should not be difficult . As the trade grows the present steamers would have to be replaced by larger ships, for which you would, undoubtedly, be warranted to pay substantial subsidies. This trade will not come to you over night, but the growth, especially in the early stages, will be slow; it has taken Bermuda over twenty-five years to reach its present position among tourist resorts. We began with a small hotel accommodating one hundred people ,and we will shortly open a new hotel, which we started about January 1st, and which will cost about $1,800,000, the bonds for which ($1,125,000) extending over twenty years, were taken entirely by Furness Withy Co., at 6%.

"In this country we have a Government Board called the Trade Development Board (of which I am Chairman) looking after this development constantly, and we are fortunate enough not to have any party politics, and, consequently, have only one interest at heart, namely the development of the Colony's trade, from which we all benefit indirectly. I would suggest that if any serious effort is made to increase the tourist trade in Newfoundland, this work should be done by the Board of Trade, to which body the necessary funds required should be handed over and without any restrictions, beyond having to account annually for the disbursement of such funds, with a report on the work done and the results accomplished.

"I am enclosing herewith one of our booklets, over 100,000 of which, at a cost of about $8,000, were distributed this year to steamship, railway and tourist agents in the United States and Canada. As an example of our faith in the tourist trade we are spending £10,000 on the British Empire Exhibition, where we shall have our own pavilion. The idea has been ridiculed by many people, who say we have nothing to sell to England, but our Board believes we have the most beautiful country ,and the finest climate in the world, to offer to the millions who will visit this exhibition, and that in the course of a few years, arising out of this effort, we will have secured a direct and regular steamship service between England and this Colony, and that this will aid considerably to our tourist trade.

"I have given you my views which, in connection with Newfoundland, may not be practical, but allowance must be made for the fact that I am not on the spot, and for many years have not been in close touch with your local conditions. However, if there is a substantial body of opinion at home, favourably inclined to the idea of at least making an effort to develop the tourist trade, the main points I have suggested are sound in principle, that is larger ships, good hotels, and plenty of advertisement. Other essentials are, as far as St. John's is concerned, a cleaner city, with sports and entertainments for the tourists when they come. In the latter connection, I understand that your half-holidays, when sports are going on, is on Wednesday, and that the steamers arrive on Thursday; this should be changed so that visitors would have somewhere to go on the day they arrive."

Mr. Chairman, this letter is from a Newfoundlander who has made good in Bermuda, has done a great work for Bermuda, and has a practical knowledge of the subject which we are discussing. It might be argued, Sir, that Bermuda possesses many more attractions than does Newfoundland. Personally, I don't subscribe to that idea. As a Winter resort, Bermuda is at her best, but her climate being sub-tropical, does not afford a greater attraction from a climatic standpoint in Summer than does Newfoundland, and yet Mr. Hand states that seventeen thousand out of thirty thousand tourists visited them during the summer season.

Mr. Chairman, a few days ago in this House, I stated that Newfoundland would have to advertise extensively if we hope to acquaint people with the natural attractions which we possess, and it will be noted that Mr. Hand thinks that we should begin by spending twenty-five thousand dollars in advertising, I hope that shock will not be too great for any honourable gentleman present; but I repeat, Sir, that after we get our roads and hotels built, and after we secure adequate steamship service, a successful tourist trade will not be brought about unless we advertise and advertise in the right way. The importance of the whole undertaking is very great indeed, and too much attention cannot be given to it by every honourable member on both sides of the House. It is a scheme which commits the country to an initial expenditure of two million dollars. Having committed ourselves to this extent, we cannot afford to stop, we will have to go on, and, in my opinion, before you get your roads built, solve our hotel problem and provide the necessary facilities to accommodate tourists, not the least important of which will be your advertising programme, you will have to spend not two millions but ten. By that statement I do not mean that we will not be in a position to accommodate tourists before any such large amount of value for the money expended is apparent to every thoughtful man who knows anything about road building in a country like this where there are no municipalities to assist, and where the burden must rest with the Govt. alone, that two million dollars, although it might be as much and more than we at present can afford, will not go very far in providing adequate highways We cannot build more than from three hundred to three hundred and fifty miles of new road, including bridges, for two million dollars, and in order to do that much, you will have to have your work properly organized and supervised, if you are to get the maximum amount of value for the money expended. I am not saying this, Sir, with any intention of discouraging the project, but rather as a warning to the Government in connection with their contemplated scheme.

Before concluding, I would say again to Mr. Monroe and his Government, approach this matter cautiously and carefully. It is a big proposition and we are only now in the speculative stage, and there is always the danger of being carried away by impulsiveness on the part of those, who though meaning well, cannot possibly have any assurance of ultimate results. However, the principle behind the movement is a very sound one, even apart from the tourist trade programme, which is the most important aspect, viewing it from the standpoint of early financial returns. The value of good roads in the development of any country cannot be overestimated, as roads both in respect to agriculture and commerce, are the arteries through which the trade of every country flows, and I cannot believe that Newfoundland will be any exception to this rule.

I agree with the houourable the Prime Minister, that we would be better off to-day. if we had built roads instead of adopting the branch railway policy of 1913. Mr. Chairman, it is difficult for one to criticize the actual scheme itself in detail unless some programme showing the sections in which roads are to be built, was more fully submitted to us, but up to the present we have not had that information.

With regard to the wording of the Bill itself, I think that taking it on the whole, while there might be some room for improvement, it is very full and comprehensive. It is of course copied from Canadian Acts, and there is no doubt, but the highway authorities in those provinces, have given a great deal of attention to the subject.

And now, Sir, before taking my seat, I will again say, make this Commission non-political and non-partisan, and your scheme will meet with the sympathy and support of gentlemen on both sides of the House, as well as throughout the country, in a general way, although we may not be able to see eye to eye in every detail. Personally I have faith in the tourist trade policy if properly carried out, and in so far as the Government places principle and country before party, they will have my support, and I sincerely hope the undertaking will meet with abundant success.

HON. THE LEADER OF THE OPPOSITION—Mr. Chairman, I would like to say a few words in connection with this Bill, and I think I may as well say them now before we proceed any further. In all that has been said in connection with this matter, the various speakers have referred to the spending of two million dollars, but nobody has said whether it is to be spent at once or not. When the raising of the loan was spoken of last year we were told that two millions were to be cut out for roads. I think that the opinion expressed by Mr. Hibbs is probably correct, and that the upkeep and extension of the roads will cost altogether about ten millions. It is very doubtful if it is wise to take up this problematical scheme or not. In referring to the Bill the speakers on this side of the House have dealt with the subject in which they were most interested—Mr. Ashbourne with fish, Mr. Hibbs with roads, and so on, but all agreed that too much money is to be spent. I have heard the Prime Minister say that he believes in the project, and I am glad to hear that, as many things have been introduced and passed in this House which nobody had faith in, and consequently they did not prove successful. Now we cannot judge the extent of the traffic that will be coming here by the few who now visit us to fish in our salmon pools on the West Coast. These people only come for the novelty of the thing, such as living in the open and sleeping in camps. We will have to get more than these, and have other attractions besides the natural ones. In some countries the tourist policy has been carried on a most expensive scale, and some cities are practically maintained by such traffic, such as Bermuda, Atlantic City and points in the South of France like Monte Carlo and Cannes on the Riverie. The people go to these places because they have every facility to get there, and when they arrive there are all kinds of amusements and attractions, such as the Casino, the roulette wheel, etc. And we will have to get attractions before we can induce many to come here. Some time ago I was in Messina in the South of Italy, shortly after the earthquake. I spent two days at Tormino and the whole population consisted of tourists. I also spent a Sunday on the lakes of Killarney with an English friend, and viewing the scenery, he said it was grand. But I am of the opinion that we have far better in the hills around Broad Cove and Petty Harbour. The reason why he apreciated the beauties of Killarney was because he had been brought up in the City of London, and had never seen the lakes and the hills before. Now if the Government is going to expend two millions on the tourist policy, I think they should go slowly about spending it all on the roads, because I expect we will have to subsidise steamers to call here and take other steps to encourage visitors to come. Therefore, I think some of the money should be reserved till we find out if we can get these people here, as otherwise the policy would be a poor one, and unless the visitors come we will have the roads and nothing else. As to advertising our climate, great consideration will have to be given, because if we bring people here and they find nothing but cold, they will go back and tell their friends and prevent them from coming.

Of course, we in Newfoundland do not know anything about touring. We are all too poor. How many tourists are there in Newfoundland? How many people in Newfoundland make money enough to go touring in Bermuda and other places? So we know practically nothing about touring or tourists, except a few people who might happen to go away to see a little of the world. As I said before, to get steamers to carry tourists here might be more profitable than the building of roads. It is alright for the Government to put on a good steamer like the one built for the Cabot Strait, but people who travel on that steamer and then have to ride through a barren country over our railroad are not likely to repeat that journey again, and, perhaps, the Government might sometimes find it necessary to put another steamer on to bring people to more accessible places like Placentia, so that instead of one steamer for the tourist traffic they will want two. Of course it is all a matter of speculation. If we are going to have lines of steamers to come here we have to get better docking facilities for them. We will have to have the Narrows cleaned up and the rocks around there blasted away so as ships like the warship that brought the Prince of Wales here and other steamers can come through the Narrows and have docking facilities in the harbour. The Prime Minister said the other day that he was opposed to the West India steamship service. I cannot understand him saying that, a man who knows what a benefit to Newfoundland the West Indies and the Mediterranean are, linking us up as they do with about twenty millions of people, to whom we sell our products. However, I suppose he has his own reasons for that; but it is very difficult to put anything in force in this House unless the people of Water Street are satisfied. These people are very philanthropic in their talk, but when their pockets are touched because of any measure which might be beneficial to the country they are opposed to it. I think it advisable that our harbour should be looked after better than it is so that steamers can move in and out. As the honourable member for Fogo has said, if this highroads commission is to be a success it must be non-political. If the Government is sincere in this thing they will make the commission non-political instead of forming a commission and making Government appointments that are purely political. Any political dump is never a success and this commission will never be a success if it is filled with political partisans. We heard a great deal of criticism here yesterday over the remarks made by Captain Randell, who is a practical and independent man and got his information when he was out on the Humber, and any criticism he made was not for the purpose of criticising the Humber project but for the helping out of the project, so that things going on there might be looked into and remedied. A remark was made here yesterday about my colleague, Mr. Halfyard, being a party to giving me a contract for coal, and I am glad to have the opportunity of bringing this up this afternoon. I had intended bringing up this matter at the last session of the House, but I thought it better to let sleeping dogs lie. However, I am going to tell the House the story about that coal now. When the Prime Minister was first appointed leader of his party at a public meeting held in St. John's he said and thought to let the people of St. John's believe what an awful grafter Hickman was. He also used it in his campaign in Bonavista district and made the people there believe that I got considerable graft on coal. Now the Government from which I got that contract I opposed in the Spring Election of 1923, when I contested the district of Harbour Grace. In August of that year tenders were asked for coal for the supplying of public institutions. I submitted a tender which I considered was low enough. When I was awarded the contract I was the most surprised man in St. John's. I never expected to get it. I did not ask anybody in the Government for it, neither did I know who comprised the Board of Works at that time. However, it was asked during last session of the House for those tenders for that coal to be laid on the table when it was discovered that my tender was 1.20 per ton under Harvey & Company, $1.00 under A. H. Murray and something like 45 cents over Morey & Company. I did not know why I got it until I met a member of the Board. He said to me, "You got the contract for the coal." I replied that I had but that I was rather surprised to know it. He said that there were five members on the Board, that he and another member voted for me and that the other two members voted for Morey & Company; but he said, "the reason I voted for you was that I thought you would give us coal and not a part of the Southside Hills." But the man who decided the whole matter of the contract was the Hon. Mr. Power, the father of the honourable member for St. George's. When it came to Mr. Power to decide he said, "I am going to vote for Hickman, because if he makes a few cents off the contract he will spend them in the West End of the city." That, gentlemen, is the history of the graft that I am supposed to have got two years ago. Now I just want to make myself clear. I am opposed to the use of personalities. I never used personalities against any man in public life. I toured Conception Bay as a colleague of Mr. Bennett's, the present Colonial Secretary, in 1923, and as an opponent of his for the same district of Harbour Grace in 1924, and he knows that I never stooped to personalities in either of those campaigns. I did not intend to bring this coal matter up, but yesterday afternoon my colleague, Mr. Halfyard, was accused wrongfully, in my opinion, and a reflection was cast upon him and the Government that he was a member of.

HON. THE COLONIAL SECRETARY —Mr. Chairman, I would like to express my deep sense of appreciation for the very fair criticisms we have listened to this afternoon, and, I might say, that I am quite in sympathy with many of the contentions put forward by Mr. Ashbourne, Mr. Brown and others with regard to the fisheries. We all know and we all must realize that it is the same story we hear every session with regard to the fisheries, and I want to say now that if there is anything I can do to assist the fisheries and to make them more lucrative or to have them carried out more profitably it will gladly be done, and I feel sure that any practical suggestions made from the other side of the House will receive the ready consideration of the Government. But we cannot afford to continue harping on the one string. We are now embarking upon a new enterprise and we cannot say positively or definitely just yet what will be the outcome until it is given a chance. There is a certain amount of chance taken in all enterprises, so also in this project we are taking a chance. I also want to express my very high appreciation for the care and trouble the hon. member for Fogo, Mr. Hibbs, has taken with regard to certain statistics that he has laid before the House this afternoon. I was not present when he made the comparative statements of the different provinces of the Dominion of Canada as to their expenditure on roads as compared to that in Newfoundland, Newfoundlanders, in some places, don't expend one-eighth or one-tenth what is spent in other places. Mr. Hibbs, one of the gentlemen to whom I referred when introducing this Bill on Tuesday, is a man who has given excellent services and performed wonders with the means at his disposal, with regard to the improvement of roads on the Peninsula of Avalon.

We are now entering on a very much larger and more comprehensive scheme, and therefore we have got to get more comprehensive machinery. We can hardly ask the gentleman to carry out a large and important work, such as this is, although he has done so well in a small way. I hope that the new commission will do comparatively as well in the larger undertaking.

The Tourist business is one that I know a little about, although I have not given that matter the close attention, and have not made such researches as Mr. Hibbs has, but I know something about Bermuda. I spent a part of a winter in Bermuda, three or four years ago. I want to say right here and now that Newfoundland has many more attractions than Bermuda. The only attraction that Bermuda has is the fine weather, there is nothing else there. There is not a bird to be seen flying in the air. There is not a fish in the waters outside of what you get out of the sea—the fish that frequent Southern waters. It has a beautiful climate, but it has its bad seasons as well as its good ones. You will find, that in Bermuda, it rains for weeks and weeks at a time. Everybody is boosting Bermuda. I knew my friend, Mr. Hand, very well. He is a very able man. He had to leave the country a few years ago, being afflicted with tuberculosis. He had to leave his native land, and he went to the Southern States, from there he went to Bermuda, and his success was phenomenal. He is one of the most important and the most respected man in the whole colony to-day. Mr. J. P. Hand is known far and wide. He is a member of the Legislature, one of the leading business men and a large hotel owner, and when he went to Bermuda first it was a different country from what it is to-day.

I was in the Legislature, at Bermuda, when they were discussing the very question that Mr. Hibbs spoke about this evening, and you know that during the war they cut off all means of communication with Bermuda and the continent. The warship Charybdis was in Bermuda at the time. She was bought from the Admiralty, and converted into a merchant ship, carrying freight and passengers to New York. They spent four hundred thousand pounds on her which nearly swamped the Bermuda Government.

While I was in the House, every member had a look of consternation on his face. They were asking themselves how they were going to get sufficient money to pay for the repairs and alterations of the Charybdis. To-day, Bermuda could almost build a fleet of warships with the revenues they are getting in.

I do believe that ninety per cent. of this revenue is derived from the tourist traffic. There is nothing exported from Bermuda to-day. Their only export trade was onions and celery and other root crops, which they used to send to the American markets, but now they can only supply enough to feed their own population and the people that go over there.

As I said before, Newfoundland has very many more attractions than Bermuda. Outside of the golf links, Bermuda has nothing. They haven't even a theatre, but they have magnificent hotels.

I merely want to confirm the remarks of my hon. friend in reference to Bermuda as regards the tourist traffic. He made a remark about Norway. I am sorry I have not got the statistics to give you, so as to give you an idea of what the tourist traffic meant to Norway. Their climate is much the same as our own, and they get tremendous revenues from the tourists coming from England and the continent. I have heard it said that Newfoundland resembles Norway in very many respects, and it has sporting facilities which Norway does not possess. We live next door to the American continent with one of the largest populations in the world, and more money than any other country to-day, and ready to spend it. It is not a dream. It is a well-conceived and well thought out policy that we have faith in. What expressions have we heard from distinguished visitors; what have we heard from Earl Haig and Admiral Feild of the "Hood," and the large staff of officers. I had the opportunity of spending a day out in the country fishing with some of the officers of the "Hood." What expressions they used! They wished that they could come back and spend three months here next year. They were astounded at the beauties of the country and the atmosphere and the climate, and that after touring the world, they would prefer to come back and spend three months here than any place they had been. And they would be perfectly satisfied if they could get the opportunity. But we have no places to accommodate the people that come here. We have no decent hotels in this country. They have ten in Bermuda, because they have sufficient faith in their own country. In regard to an enterprise of this kind, it has been more or less a case of bandying words between people for the past 8 or 10 years that we should not spend this money. The man that does not spend money on his business will never get anywhere. The country that never spends any money towards forwarding its business enterprises will certainly never get anywhere. I was just reading here in the Report of the Board of Trade this morning what it said about the tourist traffic. (Reads Report).

This shows you that the gospel is spreading. The Board of Trade is taking it up. Why should not the hon. members on the other side of the House become boosters instead of trying to knock this effort. Cannot they be Newfoundlanders first and politicians afterwards. We are not doing this with any political idea. We don't intend to make a political matter of it at all. The very constitution of the Board is not going to be political. We hope that the best men that can be found will be on that Commission. Men that the people have confidence in and men that are fit for the work. I need not again state that the people can have no misgivings with regard to the Government's attitude in this respect. We believe in what we are doing and every man can help to bring about that end. No man, I am quite sure, wants to see this fail. Every man wants to see this thing go through. If we can develop and augment our revenues we will be helping the fishermen. As I said on opening day, we have to broaden out so that we must get an increase in revenue by finding other sources of income. I want to say in reply to the Leader of the Opposition, that I will thank him for his very fair, t h o u g h brief criticism. I believe that Mr. Hickman would like to see this policy develop. It is only natural from his side of the House that he has got to say something that will indicate that he is not altogether in favour of the spending of large sums of money. But I want to make this statement as far as he is concerned. I had the unique distinction of going through the District of Harbor Grace with him as a colleague and again with him as an opponent. But I want to say this that I never heard

Mr. Hickman make any objectional personal reference to any political friend or enemy. I hope that his experience of myself is somewhat similar. I have always made it a point to avoid being personal because I feel that I have as many friends on the other side of the House as I have associated with me on this side. I think that it is a very unfortunate circumstance if men who cannot see eye to eye with one another on political matters that this should interfere with their personal friendly affiliations. I certainly regret that this should be so. However, I don't think that it exists to any great extent. I believe that this Bill will accomplish all that we claim for it. Of course the tourist traffic will not develop in one or two years. It has to grow and the expenditure will not all take place in any one year. It will probably take two years for this amount of money to be spent. Perhaps we will have occasion to bring the matter before the House in the near future to show how we are progressing in this work.

MR. HALFYARD—Mr. Chairman, I fear that the remarks made by the Hon. Colonial Secretary do not give the information required by the members on this side of the House. But there is one remark which he made which I think should be considered that the Government expects a great influx of visitors during the coming season. If that is so do you not think that the first thing that we ought to do is to build a hotel. If people come here this year in the great numbers which is expected you should have accommodation for them. Do you not think they will want some suitable place to put up. The present condition of the roads will obtain for the next two or three years. Then if that is the case do not you think that it would be better to build an hotel first. That is a point that is worthy of consideration by this House and the introducer of the bill. One of the reasons for the repeal of the Prohibition Act was the effect it would have in inducing outsiders to come here. That is accomplished and the next thing should be to build a hotel. When the hotel is built we can build the roads. This is not the opportune time for the construction of roads to the extent that is contemplated in this bill. It has been said that monies sent to the outports have been wasted. Perhaps that is true to some extent. The experience of Road Building under the Road Commission is that to build a road properly it costs about five thousand dollars per mile, and in some cases they have had to spend as much as seven thousand dollars. If you were to send five thousand dollars to any community to repair ten miles of road you would frighten them. They would ask in amazement where all the money came from. I do not blame the outports because they have not better roads. They do not get money enough to repair the roads. After the winter's weather and the frost comes out of the ground it leaves bad places everywhere in the roads, and it takes every bit of money that they can get to fix up these and repair the bridges. I cannot see how you can expect the outports to have better roads. We cannot afford to have good roads. We are a fishing country and always will be. If we assisted the fishermen to a small extent and give them a bit of money to build roads to their gardens our money would be spent wisely and well because we would be helping in some small way these men in their agricultural pursuits. To spend money on the improvement of the harbours would also be spending the money rightly. Perhaps that is the first thing that we should spend our money on because as I said we are a fishing country. The highroads should take the second place. We must look after the people living in the outports. In this country the people have settled down among the hills and it is impossible to build roads and highways among them. And we will never be able to take advantage of the highways mentioned in the bill before us. I am speaking for the country as a whole, and I think that this is not an opportune time to introduce a bill to spend such large sums of money on road building. Get the hotels built first and if the tourist traffic works out to a successful conclusion then you can get the roads built afterwards. It will do no good if you advertise the attractions of the country and have two or three hundred people come down here, and if there is no accommodation they will go back and spread the report that it is no good going down to Newfoundland because there is no accommodation. They will not be very particular about the roads. They do not expect to have boulevards and streets like they have in their own cities, but they do expect to have decent places to reside while they are here. And I repeat again what I said yesterday we cannot tell what conditions will obtain next year. We are just getting over a period of depression and are paying our bills with current revenue according to the statement of the Minister of Finance, therefore we should not be too sanguine as to what the result will be twelve months from now, and saddle the country with an additional yearly taxation of another hundred thousand dollars. If things are alright then we might build a few miles of road under the Road Commission, but there is no necessity of creating a department. I think that we should go along for another year and if we have a surplus we might spend a hundred thousand dollars under management similar to that which we have at the present time.

Mr. Speaker resumed the Chair.

The Chairman from the Committee reported that they had considered the matter to them referred, and had passed the Bill with some amendment.

On motion this Report was received and adopted, and it was ordered that the said Bill be read a third time on to-morrow.

Second Reading of Bill entitled, "An Act to Amend the War Pensions Act, 1922."

HON. THE COLONIAL SECRETARY—Mr. Speaker, in moving the Second Reading of this Bill. I might say that there is nothing of a contentious nature about it. The Bill provides that the extension of time for the claiming of pensions has been put to the 31st day of July, 1925. This has been done on the recommendations of the War Pensions' Board and the Executive of the Great War Veterans' Association. Heretofore any applications not in up to January 1st, 1922, would not be considered; but it has come to the notice of the Pensions Board that there are quite a few cases in which pensions are being claimed for injuries and diseases which are immediately attributable to the war, and it is to cope with such cases that this Bill is for.

The first section provides that a pension shall not be awarded unless an application has been made for it within three years after the date of the death in respect of which pension is claimed, or within three years after the date upon which the applicant has fallen into a dependent condition, or on or before the 1st of July, 1925. The second section provides "When a member of the Forces in receipt of an additional pension on account of his child or children dies under conditions which do not entitle his dependents to a pension, a bonus equivalent to such additional pension for one year at the rate being paid at the time of death shall be paid by the Commission for the benefit of the child or children to such person as the Commission may direct." The object of that is when the pensioner dies leaving a wife and young children, the pension ceases and it is then a crucial time for the survivors it was thought by the Board of Pensions to continue the pension in the way of a bonus for one year afterwards.

Section three says: "On the death of the wife of a pensioner, pensioned on account of disability, the additional pension for a married member of the Forces may, in the discretion of the Commission, be continued to him for so long as there are minor children of pensionable age and provided there exists a daughter, or other person over seventeen years of age, competent to assume, and who does assume the household duties and care of the children." By this is meant where a married member of the Forces leaves a wife and she afterwards dies, then provision is made for the children, provided they are minors, and provided there is a daughter there to take the responsibility of the household and to look after the spending of the money.

Section four provides an augmentation to British soldiers who were members of the Imperial Forces, who resided in Newfoundland prior to 1914, who are since living here and who are receiving pensions from the Imperial authorities. Their pensions will be augmented up to the amount they would receive as a member of the Newfoundland Regiment.

Section five provides for the annual bonus which is paid for another year. This was paid last year and a Bill passed the House last session for this purpose. It is now provided to incorporate the bonus in the Bill again this year, and make the bonus payable up to the 30th day of June, 1926

I might say that this Bill does not involve any additional vote. The whole expenditure will not mean much and besides this expenditure will be offset by those who are going off the pension list from time to time. These are the salient points of the Bill and I would ask that the Bill be accepted and put into Committee Stage at the next sitting of the House.

MR. HALFYARD—Mr. Speaker, I am sure that the Bill, affecting our returned soldiers who did so much, will receive the hearty support of every member of the House; but I thing the honourable introducer will appreciate the necessity of deferring the Second Reading of it because it has only just been placed in our hands and we would like to deal with the Bill intelligently.

HON. THE COLONIAL SECRETARY—Mr. Speaker, in order to facilitate the business of the House, I think it would be just as well that the second reading be accepted seeing that the principle of the Bill has been accepted by the honourable member.

MR. HALFYARD—Mr. Speaker, I feel sure that nobody is going to obstruct the Bill. But whether it is important or not, it has been only put in our hands a moment ago. Unless there is a desire to rush legislation through there is nothing to be gained by passing the Second Reading this evening.

MR. MOORE—Mr. Speaker, I am very much interested in this Bill and I think when the honourable member who has just sat down was Colonial Secretary he was frequently approached in connection with matters contained in this Bill also. I understand that this Bill in the main is for the purpose of assisting returned soldiers who were paid for a year after the war and who became ill since. Well I think that this Bill should go through this House, in all its stages, right now. I know of men in several districts who are suffering from diseases and injuries which are directly attributable to the war. I know particualrly of one man in St. John's who was getting $30 a month for his leg which became tubercular as a result of his war activities, but the doctors who examined him said that his disease was not brought about by the war and his pay was stopped. I interviewed Commander Howley on behalf of the man to try and have something done for him, but without avail, and it is for men of that kind that this Bill is going to help. I am persorally entirely in support of this Bill and if the Government does no other good than provide for some of the poor returned soldiers who are now lying in Sudbury and other institutions, I feel sure that it will have amply justified its existence.

HON. MR. SULLIVAN—Mr. Speaker, in connection with this Bill I might say that matters have now got to the stage concerning returned soldiers and pensions that this House has got to deal with cases that the Pensions Board had no authority to deal with. I know of sons in a family in my district who were killed in the war and the sons who were left home to support their mother, the father being dead, have since died, with the result that the mother is left in destitute circumstances. I know of a man in Baine Harbor who is in a frightful condition, and who is not able to get any financial assistance from the authorities although he had sons killed in the war. These are some of the reasons why we are asked to pass legislation so as the Pensions Board can deal with cases of this kind and so as to give a square deal to the fathers and mothers of sons who went overseas and never came back. The Government does not want to place an extra burden on the country. The Bill emanates from the Pensions Board and the Executive of the Great War Veterans' Association. Surely it is not the intention of any honourable member of this House to hold up a Bill of this nature. The honourable member for Trinity, Mr. Halfyard, admits the principle of the Bill and why does he object to the Second Reading passing the House to-day? Why the delay?

MR. HALFYARD—Mr. Speaker, it is only a matter of ordinary plain procedure or necessity. You are not going to call down His Excellency the Governor until the session is closing are you. Well that is the only reason. If there is no necessity for putting this Bill through in a hurry why are you railroading matters through the House. But if you want it to go through of course it is going through. Only dont depart from the usual parliamentary procedure.

HON. THE MINISTER OF FINANCE —Mr. Speaker—There is nothing in the procedure of the House to prevent this Bill from going to the second reading, provided you are satisfied. And as Mr. Halfyard said that he was quite prepared I think we should go on with the second reading.

MR. HALFYARD—I suppose there must be some reason. I suppose the Hon. the Prime Minister is having a lot of ladies here on Monday so he wants to get this done all the quicker, so that he will be able to give the ladies more attention.

Pursuant to order and on motion of Hon. the Colonial Secretary, the Bill entitled "An Act to Amend the War Pensions Act 1922" was read a second time and it was ordered that the said Bill be referred to a Committee of the Whole House on to-morrow.

The remaining Orders of the Day were deferred.

It was moved and seconded that when the House rises, it adjourn until Monday, March 9th, at three of the clock p.m

The House then adjourned accordingly.

MONDAY, March 9th, 1925.

The House met at three of the clock in the afternoon, pursuant to adjournment.

MR. POWER—Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present a petition from the people of Woods Island, in the District of Bay of Islands, in connection with a ferry service from that place to Corner Brook. A large number of the people of Wood's Island are employed at Corner Brook and they want some convenience in getting back and forth. I therefore give this petition my heartiest support and hope it will receive the consideration which it merits.

HON. THE COLONIAL SECRETARY —Mr. Speaker, I beg to table the reply to the question of Mr. Duff, No. 4 on the Order Paper of March 6th.

HON. MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE & MINES—Mr. Speaker, I wish to present the answer to the question of Mr. Halfyard on March 6th.

NOTICE OF MOTION.

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE—To ask leave to introduce a Bill entitled "An Act to Amend Chapter 52 of the Consolidated Statutes (Third Series) entitled "Of Egress from Churches, Theatres and other Buildings."

On motion of the Hon. the Minister of Justice the Bill was read a first time, and ordered to be read a second time on to-morow.

MR. BROWN asked the Minister of Public Works to lay on the Table of the House a statement showing what work was performed on the road between Gambo and Carmanville, and to give: (a) The amount of money spent to-date on ths road, and to lay on the Table of the House, copies of the Returns for such expenditures, MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS—In reply Mr. Speaker I may say I have no knowledge of work done between Gambo and Carmanville and therefore I am not in a position to answer sections (a), (b) and (c).

MR. DUFF asked the Minister of Marine and Fisheries to answer my question No. 7 on the Order Paper of March 5th.

MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES—For the information of the House I may say I passed the information to Mr. Ashbourne after the closing of the House on Friday.

(5) MR. HALFYARD asked the Minister of Public Works to lay on the Table of the House a statement showing the total amount of money paid by his Department or any other Department of the Government for the building of 2¾ miles of road from Old Perlican to Lead Cove, Trinity District.

MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS—In reply I may say the amount of $8,000 was paid the Road Commission for work on the road between Old Perlican and Lead Cove, Trinity District, on the recommendation of Capt. Randell and Mr. Hibbs.

(6) MR. HALFYARD asked the Minister of Public Works to lay on the Table of the House a statement giving the names of any Labor Agents employed by any Department from June, 1924, to date; state the sphere of activities of each Labor Agent and the salary paid each.

MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS—The answer is not ready yet but I will furnish it as soon as possible.

(7) MR. HICKMAN asked the Minister of Public Works what is the position held by W. Strickland of Spaniard's Bay; what salary he has been receiving and is he still under pay and what work is he doing.

MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS—The answer is in course of preparation.

MR. HALFYARD—Mr. Speaker, I would like to point out that my question No. 3 on the Order Paper of Feb. 23rd has not yet been answered.

MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS—I now have the answer to question No. 1 on the Order Paper for March 6th which I will now lay on the table of the House. I also wish to table the answers to No. 5 of March 3rd, which was asked by Mr. Scammell in reference to the District of Bay de Verde; also the reply to question No. 1 of March 3rd by Mr. Ashbourne as to the Poor Asylum.

MR. HALFYARD—Mr. Speaker, I am sure the honourable members on this side would appreciate the courtesy of a reply and I again respectfully ask for the answer to question asked by me on Feb. 23rd.

MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS—The answer is being sent up from the department now.

MR. HALFYARD—Mr. Speaker, I think there is some misunderstanding. The reply to question No. 5 of to-day refers to the work undertaken in October, 1924, and recommended by Capt. Randell and Mr. Hibbs. I think there is a misunderstanding because the work I speak of was done by Mr. Goodyear last year and paid for through the Government Engineer. I would also like to ask the Minister of Marine when we are going to have the report of his department.

MINISTER OF MARINE & FISHERIES—It has been on the table of the House some time.

MR. HALFYARD—Mr. Speaker, I wish to remind the Hon. the Minister of Posts of the report of his department for 1923-24, and also remind the Hon. the Prime Minister, in the absence of the Hon. Minister of Finance, of the report of that department being tabled as soon as possible.

HON. THE MINISTER OF POSTS—I beg to table the report.

Mr. Speaker informed the House that he had received the following correspondence from His Excellency the Governor, which he then read:

It was ordered accordingly.

Pursuant to order and on motion of Hon. the Colonial Secretary the House resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole to consider the Bill entitled "An Act to Amend the War Pensions Act, 1922."

Mr. Speaker left the Chair.

Mr. Puddester took the Chair of Committee.

HON. THE COLONIAL SECRETARY—When we were dealing with this Bill on Friday last, I endeavored to explain its provisions which are of such a character as to commend it to the approval of the entire House. The main object of the measure is this. To-day unless an application for a pension has been made prior to January 1st, 1922, though a soldier or sailor may suffer from diseases or disability directly attributable to his war services, he has no claim. The object now is to extend the date of application to the 30th of July, 1925, so that any men suffering from a disability due to War will be entitled to the same as those who had the pension previously. The Bill also provides that where a pension is derivable through children they shall receive it one year after the death of the parent I previously pointed out that at this particular period children needed the pension most, and it would be a hardship to deprive them of it forthwith after the parents death, therefore, it is extended for one year afterwards. Also, in the case where the mother is dead somebody in the family either a daughter or other responsible female over seventeen years of age shall be entitled to receive the money for the use of the child or children. It further provides that where the pension of a man who served in the Imperial Forces and has since returned to live here, whose pension is not so large as if he had been in the Newfoundland forces, an augmentation shall be added to bring it up to those granted the Newfoundland forces. There is also provision for bonus on war pensions. This is passed annually, and we merely propose to do the same this year. There will be no increase in expenditure by this Bill, as the decrease by death and other sources will be more than equal to the additional amounts granted. I, therefore, submit this Bill for the consideration of the Committee.

MR. HALFYARD—Mr. Chairman, could the honourable introducer of the Bill give an idea as to the number of applicants outstanding coming under this section of the Bill.

HONOURABLE THE COLONIAL SECRETARY—The report of the Pensions Commissioners states that the amount involved is $423.00.

MR. WARREN—Mr. Chairman, with regard to this section of the payment of a bonus, I would like to know what the policy of the Government is. I notice that is payable up to June 30th, 1926. Is that in accordance with the Canadian authorities? And will that bonus be discontinued here, if and when the Canadians discontinue?

HONOURABLE THE COLONIAL SECRETARY—This bonus is granted every year by special Act of the Legislature, and the policy of the Government is to follow the Canadian policy in this respect and no other.

Mr. Speaker resumed the Chair.

The Chairman from the Committee reported that they had considered the matter to them referred, and had passed the said Bill without amendment.

On motion this Report was received and adopted, and it was ordered that the said Bill be read a third time on to-morrow.

Committee of the Whole on Bill entitled "An Act respecting the Lobster Fishery."

MR. GRIMES—Mr. Speaker, I would like to call the attention of the Minister of Marine to the fact that Mr. Scammell who is interested in this Bill is not able to be present this afternoon, and I would, therefore, ask to have it deferred.

It was ordered accordingly.

Second Reading of Bill entitled "An Act to Amend Chapter 3 of the Consolidated Statutes of Newfoundland (Third Series) entitled 'Of the Election of Members fo the House of Assembly.'"

HONOURABLE THE PRIME MINISTER—Mr. Speaker, I consider it both an honour and a privilege to introduce to this House this afternoon for Second Reading a Bill which has for its object the granting of the franchise to the women of Newfoundland. I do not commend this Bill to the House simply because the ladies have asked me to do so; I do not bring the measure forward in a spirit of indifference as to how the House might see it; but I bring it forward this afternoon with a full feeling of honest conviction, that in granting this request of the ladies this House of Assembly will only be doing something that has been their due, and what we owe the ladies during the past number of years. This is not the first time that this measure has been brought before this House of Assembly. The Bill was introduced here in 1920, and also in 1921, and, perhaps, before we go any further it might not be any harm if I were to revive the memories of some of the Members who were in the House at that time as to what did happen, and also of those who were not present then as to what took place during those years. On May 20th, 1920, Mr. LeGrow, who was then a sitting Member for the District of Bay de Verde, presented a petition to this House signed by seventeen hundred women of St. John's asking for the Franchise. That petition was supported by Mr. Fox, Mr. Higgins, Mr. Vinnicombe and Sir John Crosbie. No one opposed it, and it was referred to the Department to which it related. I am inclined to think that the Prime Minister of that day concluded that the Department to which that petition related was the waste-paper basket, because it disappeared and we have not heard of it any more. A month later you, Sir, our much respected Speaker —as Member for St. John's East— asked leave to introduce a Bill, and on June 10th, 1920 a Second Reading of the Bill was moved by you, supportd by Mr. Vinnicombe and Mr. Walsh, and it was opposed by two Members of the Government, namely Mr. Guppy and Mr. Jennings. A vote was taken on the Bill, and it was defeated on a straight Party vote, thirteen to nine, the Government voting solidly against it. Mr. Targett had expressed his intention to vote for it, but I do not think he was present when the vote took place. That was the end of the first period, and the end of the Bill for 1920.

In 1921 Mr. Warren presented a petition signed by 7,485 women, and he called the attention of the House to the fact that every District in the Island was represented except his own. He said he did not intend to introduce a Bill that Session, but it might be that a Bill would be introduced before the next General Election. Mr. Higgins and Mr. Bennett supported it, and the Prime Minister who spoke in favor of it, stated that it would not be a party measure. On May 16th or about a week later the Prime Minister intimated to the House that he would introduce a Bill to amend the Election Act of 1913, and we heard nothing more about it. Apparently it remained on the Order Paper until August 6th, and might I say the length of the Sessions held in those days causes me not to wonder that some of the Members of the Outport districts wanted their sessional pay increased, as it was nothing unusual for the House to be three or four months in Session.

After that it was on the Order Paper for three months, and then it was Mr. MacDonell who relieved the embarrassment of the Government to some extent by asking that the Bill be referred to a Select Committee, and that was the last that was heard of it, and there ended the second lesson. So, Mr. Speaker, when we consider the way the ladies have been treated and the discourtesy extended to them, and when after that they come here in their hundreds this afternoon still smiling, I say that we cannot, even though we are the hardest-hearted people in the world and the greatest women haters in the world, help but admire their behaviour in this matter. I said that this was not a party measure. I have not asked a single member on this side of the House how he intended to vote or what were his intentions with regard to this Bill. I think, however, that there is one member whom I think I can assure the ladies is prepared to support the Bill. I canvassed the district of Bonavista Bay three times in eighteen months and when speaking at public meetings, Capt. Winsor never lost an opportunity to tell the ladies, who often attended the meetings in very large numbers, that he would be prepared to support the Bill to the last ditch. Capt. Winsor is looked upon as the ladies' man of the Party. So, Mr. Speaker, even if I cannot speak for any other members of this side of the House, I think that I can speak for Capt. Winsor, because I think that he could hardly go back to the District of Bonavista and tell the women that he did not support the measure. Now when I say it is not a party measure, I do not say that it is not an important measure, because it is. It is extremely important. In it we must be prepared to double the franchise of the people of this Island. We are prepared to double up the responsibility and that is something that no member should consider other than very carefully. He cannot look upon it as a joke. It is a serious matter and one that cannot but be well considered by this House. I have seen where some of the members of this House said that they could not do anything without first consulting their constituents. In this case the constituents have been very well consulted. This Bill has been up since 1920, and I feel satisfied that members of this House can well assume that their constituents are in accord. So, Mr. Speaker, I say that while it is not a party measure it is an important measure. I said in my remarks at the opening of this Assembly that there were three questions which we had to ask ourselves, and the first and most important is whether we will give the franchise to women at all. Before we answer this question, I think that we ought to give some little consideration to what our neighbours have done. It is not always necessary to follow the example of our neighbours but at the same time it is always advisable to know what they have done and what has been their experience, and what has been the result of their actions. We find on going over the records that New South Wales, a colony of Australia, granted municipal franchise to the women in 1867, or 58 years ago. The first country that granted the full franchise was New Zealand in 1893, or thirty-two years ago. The colonies of Australia formed themselves into a Commonwealth in 1901, and at the very next session of the legislature they voted a full measure of franchise for the women. In Canada we find that the first franchise was given the women in 1917. That was when Sir Robert Borden went to the country on the question of conscription, and a Bill was passed to permit the widows, wives, mothers and daughters of members of the Canadian Expeditionary Force to vote at that election. In 1918, the next year, the Canadians gave the full measure of franchise to women at the age of twenty-one. Now let us turn to the Old Country and see what they have done. The lawlessness of the British suffragette before the war is a very well known historic incident. They mobbed the Cabinet Ministers. chained themselves on the railing of Downing Street, they went on hunger strikes and had to be forcibly fed; they assaulted historic monuments and St. Paul's Cathedral and Westminster Abbey, the British Museum and the National Gallery. The House of Commons had to close their doors against the entrance of women. I feel that there are many in this room that think that this action on the part of the women did not advance their interests at all. I feel sure that most reasonable women will admit that while the suffering of the women are very admirable in as much as it was very courageous, at the same time we cannot but think that it did not do anything to advance the cause. While this militant movement on the part of the suffragette was going on, the war came on and the suffragettes dropped their enthusiasm to go about the business of the war. I need not relate what the women of England did during the war. Everybody knows how they took the men's places in every phase of life and contributed so enormously towards the result of the war. I need only state that the result was that when the Parliament met in 1918 they voted a full measure of franchise to the women of England at the age of thirty, by seven to one. The same Parliament that had refused the vote to women had passed the Bill by a vote of seven to one. In 1919 a further provision was made to give the women the right to become justices of the peace and to sit on juries. I may say that in connection with that matter a cousin of mine, a sister of Hon. F. C. Alderdice, is a justice of the peace in the North of Ireland, and I am satisfied that she is able to perform the duties of the office as well as any man who ever held it. The first woman to be elected to the British House of Parliament was strangely enough an enemy of Great Britain. She was the Countess Markievieux and was the first to be elected to the British House of Commons. The Irish Sinn Feiners refused to sit in the House of Parliament to which they had been elected so that Lady Astor was the first woman to sit in the House of Commons of England. In 1923 9 women were elected to Parliament. 1924 the number was reduced to three. So it does not seem that the women are likely to take possession of the House in the near future. That is the history of what the Mother Country has done up to the present time, and we would like to know from them, the Colonies, and the North American Continent, what has been the result of the experience gained since suffrage was given to women. The Prime Ministers of New Zealand and Australia were over in England a short time ago and they were asked what their experience was and they both said that the granting of suffrage to women was a very great success and that they would not repeal the Act on any account. We find ourselves, together with South Africa, the only English speaking country in the world, which has not given the franchise to the women. South Africa is largely populated by the Boers who are not English speaking and therefore we are the only English speaking people who have not granted the franchise. I want to ask you to-day why we are in this position and why we have not given the vote to women. Surely our women did as much during the war as the women of any other country. I say, Mr. Speaker, that after considering whether we shall give the vote to women at all or not, the balance so far seems to be in their favor. The next question that the House will have to consider is at what age we are to give it to them. In England the Franchise is given at the age of thirty. At this session of the British House a petition was filed asking that the age be reduced so as to give the franchise to the women at the same age as the men, that is twenty-one. But it was found that if the women got the vote at twenty-one, there would be two million more women to vote than men and so they would swampt the votes of the men; so they did not give it.

Now we ask ourselves at what age we should give it to the women. In Canada they have made it twenty-one. In England they have made thirty the age. I think that in England a large number of the women do not vote. A large number of them are very indifferent about it and I think that one might be inclined to imagine that a great many young maidens just passed the thirtieth mile post, be a little delicate about advertising the fact by their appearance in a public booth. However that may be I am inclined to believe that the best age to give the vote to women here would be twenty-five.

I don't concede at all that the woman is not as well qualified to vote at twenty-one as the man is, but I have my doubts as to whether the vote ought to have been given to the men at twenty-one. The next question is what privileges we are to extend to the women, and this Bill gives permission to the women to sit in the House of Assembly exactly on the same terms as the men do, and their privileges are exactly the same. The Bill calls for the fact that a woman sitting in the House of Assembly must have an income of four hundred and eighty dollars, or must be the owner of property to the value of forty-five hundred dollars. I don't say that the women are going to make a desperate effort to get into the House of Assembly, but if they are given the vote I submit that they should be given the right to get the proper people to represent them, whether it be male or female.

Mr. Speaker, I shall be making more remarks on this subject after it goes to Committee. I only wish to introduce this Bill this afternoon, and I want to sum up my few remarks now by saying that all arguments go to show that the women of Newfoundland are merely looking for their just rights. The question we have to ask ourselves in this House this afternoon is, are we going to give way to their very reasonable requests? Are we going to give the women what they are asking for, or are we going to make the public pronouncement that, in the opinion of the majority of this House, the women of this country are less deserving, the intelligence of the women of this country is less developed and the judgment of the women of this country is less to be depended upon than that of the women of any other part of the English-speaking world?

I have much pleasure, Mr. Speaker, in moving the second reading.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE— Mr. Speaker, as the Prime Minister has intimated, those of us who sit on this side of the House have not been directly or indirectly approached by him on our attitude to this Bill, and, as he correctly intimates, it is a question upon which we have to act for ourselves. I rise to second the motion that this Bill be read a second time, and I do it only after a great deal of thought. I do so because I am convinced that there is no other course properly open to me under the circumstances.

In the first place, as the introducer of this Bill has said, from the first time that this measure came under review in this Assembly I have always supported it. If the women asked for the vote they have a right to get it, and we have no right to refuse them. I have never been influenced by the fact that the number who asked for this vote was small or large. I have not been one to view it from the angle of a politician, and I have no right to view it from that angle.

The question of giving the women a vote is a question of principle, whether it is right or wrong to give the franchise or not. As I see it, the Prime Minister very properly summed up the question in his concluding remarks when he asked whether we feel that the mentality of the women of Newfoundland and their general character and general conduct are such that we would hesitate to commit any question of public importance to their judgment. As far as I personally am concerned I will frankly state that my experience in public and professional life has been that, given the deliberate thought of a woman, you generally get more sound judgment than you do from a man. And I think that any one present who has had experience in professional lines, particularly, will agree with me that, from the standpoint of discernment, the matured judgment of a woman, generally speaking, is more remarkable for its soundness and sanity than that of a man. That, at least, has been my experience. I don't fear for a moment the idea of committing any public question to the decision of the women.

Then again the experience of other countries and their attitude on this subject whilst it does not bind us ought to serve as a guide for us and ought more or less to give us some suggestions that will help us in debating this subject. I say that right here under our own observation we can see the changed mission of women. The changed conditions of the world have compelled us to admit that some of the old conditions are passing away. The woman of necessity has become a factor of the world around her, because of the changed conditions of the world in the first place and because of the absolute competency of women, themselves fit in. Right here in our own town if we carry our minds back 20 years and consider the commercial life, the office life, the general administrative work of that time as compared with to-day we can see the gradual growth of the power of women, and the first conclusion that we will come to is that they can't be excluded from public life. I don't think that those of us who are men should take the position and decide that women have not got the same power to judge as we have. Therefore I say that having been asked as to whether we ought to give the vote to the women or not, we have no right to refuse it. I do not fear the argument which tries to dodge the issue by taking the position that the woman's mission in life must preclude her from the franchise to the degree that the man has. That is her own business. Whilst the home is primariiy woman's sphere and her rule there will always be her finest feature. I would not like to think for a moment that merely allowing woman the right to vote is going to alter her makeup or her tempernment. I don't think that we will find that because the woman has the right to vote that she is going to neglect her home. In fact, I rather think that it will be the reverse. I believe that if she is given the opportunity and if she decides to go out on important occasions and use her influence she will be a greater factor for good than the man. I believe that there are certain aspects of life that are more naturally going to be the concern of the women and in such their interest is going to be felt immediately. I have no fears myself as to what is going to be the result of giving the women the franchise in Newfoundland. And to take the history of the institutions about us to-day, we are compelled to admit that nothing of any magnitude has been done in educational or charitable movements that has not been helped by the entry and driving power of women's organizations. I have no fears as to the fact that the women of this country, no matter what may be the age they are given the vote at, will vote as intelligently as the ordinary man. For that reason I support the second reading of this Bill. I think that the greatest compliment that could be paid the women is the fact that could be paid the women is the fact that we are trying to make a dividing line that would not make the franchise too young or too old. No woman of course would object to be in the 25 class. We might call it the class between the flapper and the staid age. I would have no hesitation to give the women the vote at twenty-one, the same as the men. I think that under the educational progress of recent years that the history of the public institutions show that they stand side by side with the men. A study of the office work of the town will show that most of the secretaries are women. So as far as the age is concerned I quite agree with the Prime Minister that whilst it is not a matter of our altogether being bound by what is done elsewhere we may be somewhat inclined to think that the House at first ought to consider the notion of making a half-way concession. Of course as to the question of 21, this does not obtain over the whole world as it does here. There is limitation of the franchise for men in certain parts of Canada, there are qualifications that put a limitation on the voting power of men even at that age. I support this Bill and look forward confidently to the future years proving that the entry of women into our public affairs will bring nothing but beneficial results.

MR. WARREN, Mr. Speaker, the Prime Minister, in introducing this Bill, said that it was not a Party measure, and that his Party will vote as they please. My party is a little different. I have made it a party question with my party. Sir, and this party is going to vote for Women Suffrage. All the questions about this Bill have been thrashed out by the party, and the party is now committed to vote for the second reading of this Bill.

But while the Prime Minister disclaims any idea of making this a party measure, in his opening remarks he, at all events, gave it a party tinge, not so much as far as his own party is concerned, but in speaking of the history of the Bill, as far as previous parties are concerned. When I was a member of the late Government, I was approached with a view to the introduction of a Bill to provide votes for women. It was always stated and clearly understood that any such Bill would not be a party measure, and when I eventually presented a very big petition, signed by some twenty-five hundred women, I clearly stated that I was not committing myself to support Woman Suffrage or to the introduction of a Bill. I think that the ladies who came to me with the petition understood clearly the position. Of course, I can't say what took place at party meetings, but I can say that when I became Prime Minister I told Mrs. Gosling and her associates that during the session an opportunity would be given to introduce a Bill and to put that Bill through or not, in the same manner as the Prime Minister has done here to-day. I do not think that the Prime Minister is altogether fair in saying that the ladies were treated with discourtesy. They understood that it was not a party measure. It was introduced by private members, and there were members on both sides of the House prepared to vote either for or against it ,and because this Bill was not eventually proceeded with cannot be regarded as discourtesy any more than the abortive attempts in the British Parliament could be called discourtesy, nor could the British Parliament be said to be discourteous this year because they refused to reduce the age from thirty to twenty-one. Personally, I disclaim all discourtesy as far as the women are concerned.

After the very excellent reasons which have been given to the House by the Prime Minister, I need hardly say why I think that not only one, but all the members of this House, ought to support this Bill. On the opening day I said that the Speech from the Throne was very radical. I still believe that it is very radical. There are two Bills which the Prime Minister had introduced this year which will undoubtedly have a big effect on future elections. The first is the Redistribution Bill, which provides that, in nearly every case, there shall be single man districts, and divides the districts up so that they will not be so disproportionately represented as they are to-day. The next most—and I do not think I need apologize for using the word—the next most radical Bill is this one, and I feel quite sure that the giving of votes to women coupled with that Redistribution Bill will have not only a lasting, but a beneficial effect on the future elections in this country.

I do not know why anyone should be alarmed at the idea of woman having a vote; that she will change in temperament or in sentiment, or in any other way. I have been over in England, where they have had the vote for a number of years, and I found that the women over there were just the same as they were before. They have not altered a bit, nor do they fight any more than they did previously. There is no reason why a little domestic squabble over the way which the vote should be cast should irretrievably break up the household. I do not think it will.

May I ask the Prime Minister—I have not had an opportunity to peruse the Bill carefully, but I heard him say that the women could stand for election, and become members of the House of Assembly—that is so? At what age, may I ask?

HON. PRIME MINISTER—25.

MR. WARREN—Is that in the Bill? I did not carefully peruse it. I did not see anything there about a woman becoming a member of the House of Assembly. But if a woman cannot become a member at the age of twenty-one, and cannot vote until she is twenty-five, I shall certainly ask that she may get the vote at twenty-one.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—You would like to have them young in the house?

MR. WARREN—If I am going to have any associated with me, I would like them young, and I do not guarantee that I will not move in Committee that the Bill be so amended that women get the vote at twenty-one in any case.

As the Minister of Justice has said, our law of franchise is a little larger than in some other countries. I have seen imbecile people—old men who cannot look after themselves—and are being taken charge of by the country ta the Poor House, I have seen them being taken out to vote: and I have seen girls in offices, of twenty-two and twenty-three earning some of the money to keep those men in the Poor House, and they cannot get a vote; and I don't see why they cannot get one.

There are those who are getting poor relief today; there are men who are being kept at the Government expense, and there are women of 22, 23 and 24 who are contributing to their support, not only working in offices, but in shops and everywhere else where women can be found working today; and yet they cannot get a vote, whilst the old man whom they are supporting can have one. Such a state of affairs as that ought to be altered.

I will not take up any more of the time of the House. I have not consulted anybody outside of my party, but I hope that all members will take advantage of this opportunity to give the women what they are looking for, and what they have already obtained in other countries. And in these other countries they have exercised that vote with great credit to themselves, and to the countries in which they use that vote.

MR. CASAHIN—Mr. Speaker, I would like to make a few remarks on this Bill that is now up for second reading. Looking around here this afternoon, I think I am the only one who took an active part in the late war, and being a returned officer, naturally I came to the conclusion that I should know something about what women did during the war. Consequently, I want to tell them in advance, although I do not consider that they are very representative of the women of Newfoundland, that I am prepared, and intend to support the principal of the Bill that has been introduced for the second reading by the Prime Minister.

During the three or four years which I spent overseas I happened to be knocked out once or twice, and in visiting and being a patient in various hospitals, I had occasion to see what women were doing as nurses, as drivers of motor lorries and drivers of Red Cross cars. I have spoken to various commanding officers, and I remember what one of them said to me once, which has since struck me very forcibly. He said that "women were more truthful, and exhibited more gratitude, and on many occasions more physical courage than men." I am sorry to say that in that respect I have come to the conclusion, after seeing quite a lot, that I have to acknowledge that that officer was correct. I think possibly that the ladies have exhibited more gratitude than men, especially politicians, who are very prone at times to show themselves insincere; while women are much more inclined to be sincere. That is my personal opinion, and comes through personal experience, although I am only two years in politics.

With reference to the opinions of the ladies in Newfoundland who have not in any way contributed to having this cause brought before the House, I merely wish to state that, so far as my district is concerned, I have visited every House between Doyle's Bridge and Cape Race, and I know every man, woman and child in that district, and I think I may take the same credit for my colleague, Mr. Moore. In our campaigns during the last two elections, he and I have visited all those houses, and invariably the women say to us that it is a pity we have not got a vote to give you. When we ask the question, we are invariably told that they are in favour of having a vote. I think so far as that Bill is concerned my district wants it. Personally, I would feel more safe going back to that district, especially being a young man, and I feel sure that my majority would be away over what it was last election. I feel confident of that, and I do not think that any women in the district will come out to oppose me.

During the past number of years, in fact since the beginning of time, women, in my opinion, have been merely the occupation and amusement of men. The highest aducational advantages were denied them. Professions, practically of all characters, have been closed to them. But during the past twenty years women have convinced the world that, if they are not absolutely the equals of man, that they are at least independent of him in this respect, that they are able to earn their own living. Therefore it is only right and proper, that this matter should come before the House, and now every member should vote for this Bill. It was only a matter of time until this Bill will become law, and it will only be a matter of time until this House passes this measure. We may pass away. We are only here by accident now, but the women of the country will eventually bring this matter up to some administration, and some administration will pass the Bill. Why should it not be this administration; this Legislature convened here today, who will have the privilege, or if any one considers it an honour, to have the honour to give the women of Newfoundland the franchise. They are certainly entitled to it.

During the late war—I speak so much of the war, because I was taking part in it—during the war in Russia a battalion of women was formed known as the Battalion of Death. They played a wonderful part in the war, led by women, while possibly there were many amongst us, and also among the Russians who should have played their part but stayed at home. Therefore, as I stated before, that women are possessed of physical courage is borne out. When this Bill reaches the Committee stage, I intend to add a few extra remarks, but in passing this evening, I thought I would take the opportunity to assure the ladies present and the House, that this Bill has my heartiest support.

MR. ASHBOURNE—Mr. Speaker, as one who served in a little way in the war, I wish to endorse what Major Cashin, the Honourable Member for Ferryland, has said. Speaking on the Address in Reply, I outlined briefly the valuable services rendered by women during the war. Today it gives me great pleasure to give this Bill my heartiest support, and I think it is my duty to do so. It was my plasure while in England as an Officer of the Imperial Army, to hear Mr. Lloyd George speak on the Granting of the Franchise to Women, I did not have the privilege to hear Mr. Asquith speak on the subject—and I think that as he related the splendid devotion displayed by the women particularly in the making of munitions, and in other avenues of war endeavor, all present were deeply impressed by the noble part they played, and as spoken of here today by Mr. Cashin. I did not intend to speak today on this subject, but as I am on my feet, I may say that during my campaign in Twillingate District the greatest enthusiasm was displayed by the women in connection with the granting of the franchise, and when it passes this House, as I have every hope that it will, I trust it will be given full approval by practically every voter in the country.

HON. THE COLONIAL SECRETARY—Mr. Speaker, I would like to add a word or two in connection with this Bill, and on rising to express my congratulations to the ladies who have so persistently followed this movement to a point where they can now see victory in sight. Personally, I have always favored this measure, and I have had the opportunity in my official capacity to have interviews with ladies, prominent in the movement, and I have always taken the position that though suggested Legislation did not comprehend giving the right to women to sit in the House, that if they were granted the power to vote, they should also have the right to seats here, and I am glad that this Bill now provides for this. A great deal has been said of the right of women to vote, and I think the Honorable the Minister of Justice placed his finger on the true position today when he said "We have no right to refuse them the vote." When the country was in distress we had no hesitation in calling upon the women to save the Nation. They responded nobly, and we would never have won the war, if it had not been for the cooperation and devotion of the women, and I think they have every right to full privileges as free citizens. During the past twenty years there has been an evolution in the status of women, and I have no hesitation whatever in saying that in St. John's their earning power is as great as that of the men today. Families who formerly were in straitened circumstances because they had no breadwinner but a man, are now in comfort through the industry of the young women and girls. In all kinds of offices today, government and commercial, girls hold responsible positions; they predominate in the factories, and in all walks of life they are doing splendidly. It would be a sorry day for many families in this city but for the girls and young women. And why should they not have the vote? In many cases they have more intelligence than the ordinary man, and if they have the right of saying how the country shall be managed, the women also have the right to the Franchise. The Honourable Prime Minister is perfectly correct in putting this Bill before the House, and I may say here that if the previous Government as referred to by the Honourable Member for Fortune, did not treat it with discourtesy, they certainly showed indifference, and it therefore never came to an issue. We of the Opposition of that time tried to bring in the Act, but the Government of the day would not do it. Therefore, it could not be said that we of the Opposition were against it. As an administration we are pledged to give a square deal to all. We are only acting justly in giving this square deal to women, and I have no doubt that all the Members on this side of the House will support it. I also trust that the gentlemen on the Opposition side will also display the spirit of fair-play and do so. The passage of this Bill is the best expression you can give to the world of what we think of the women of Newfoundland, and though late in performing this act of justice we should do it well, and show our appreciation of what the women have done of a philanthropic and charitable nature. I, therefore, heartily support this Bill, and while in the latter stages of its discussion there may be a few minor alterations in it, nevertheless I fully endorse it.

MR. MOORE—Mr. Speaker, as this is apparently an evening for testifying, and I supported this measure before, I wish to again place myself on record on the second reading of the Bill as again supporting it as moved by the Honourable the Prime Minister. I think it is very fair on his part to allow the Honourable Members of this House to use their own opinion as to voting for or against this measure. I may say that I am in a rather awkward position as to this Bill. For the past ten years, or ever since I had a seat here, I have been canvassed by some of the ladies connected with this movement. One of them is here this evening and I hope she has kept what I told her one time before, to herself. I have also been asked by some ladies to vote against the measure, but I held the women were entitled to the vote. They said the ladies who were canvassing did not represent all the women of- Newfoundland, but I said they had worked hard for the vote and deserved to get it. Speaking on the subject to a clergyman some time ago he said that after the world was made, God rested, and after man was made there was also a rest, but since woman was made there has been any rest for God or man. It is the same with the ladies in connection with this Bill—they have never rested in promoting it—and I compliment them on finally bringing it in here. I am fully convinced it will go through this House and I will give it my heartiest support as I did when it was brought up here on a former occasion.

MR. BROWNE—Mr. Speaker, I feel that I should avail of the opportunity which this debate affords to express publicly what I have often said privately as to the position in which I stand on this question of Women's Suffrage. I have been interested in the matter for years—perhaps not so long as some other honorable members—but I have been able to observe some features of the work of women in war times which have deeply impressed me with their responsibility and position in the world today. Unfortunately, unlike the honorable and gallant member for Ferryland, I did not take any active part on the battlefields of Europe, but I helped in some little way in the training of men in Canada, and there I saw the women working under conditions that normally they would not be expected to work under. I saw them working in the munition factories and in undertakings, under most trying conditions, and they did it in a way which showed their attitude of mind, and that they realize the responsibility they had towards the state in a time of stress. And what is Government anyhow? No king or administration owns a country. Government is for the people and must be by the people. And the women are of the people. That is the principle that has been promulgated by all civilized countries throughout the world, and which should guide us. Government has come through various stages of progress; it has fallen from the hands of groups of men and today whereever there is an enlightened government it is in the hands of the people. And the time when women should get that power, to say how government shall be conducted and by whom, is when they come to the age of recognition of their responsibilities to their country. Women have shown the greatest ability in the handling of household affairs, in the bringing up of families and the care of children —far more ability along these lines than men—and as the honorable member for Fortune has said, why should they not have a voice in saying who is to manage the affairs of their country. When the members have given this question their consideration the only answer they can come to is to vote for it. The question has been raised of taking woman away from her sphere, the home, but that argument is easily answered. In fact it is too obvious to need an answer, at all. The fact that they can now leave the home to take up all kinds of trying and difficult tasks and fill them competently is the answer to that. The whole thing now rests on the alteration of one word in the Statutes, and that is whether the word person referring to a voter is to read male or female person. Though I have not consulted with my constituents as a whole on the matter—it was not an issue during the election campaign,—I feel sure that I am voicing the opinion of the majority of voters in St. John's West when I say they would welcome to their ranks a body of women who would share their responsibilities and duties with them. I have canvassed some of these people on this movement and they are one hundred per cent in favor of granting the franchise. I take this opportunity to express my belief that Newfoundland would benefit in untold measure by the advent to the ranks of the voters of a body of women who have proved by their conduct in the past that they are prepared to do their duty to their country in the future.

MINISTER OF MARINE & FISHERIES—Mr. Speaker, I do not think that I would be doing my duty to my lady constituents of Bonavista Bay if I did not get up and say a word or two on the Bill now before the House. The Prime Minister told the House this afternoon that the ladies were counting on the support of one man, at least, and that man was Captain Winsor. I may say for the information of the Prime Minister that a deputation of women called at my office last summer on behalf of Women Suffrage. When I saw them coming in I expected I would lose an hour before I would get disengaged with them, as I was very busy at the time. They asked me my opinion and what I was going to do on the subject and I told them I was going to support them. As soon as I gave them my answer they went out. Now there are lots of men who came to my office and after I give them an answer, right or wrong, they hang around for an hour or so and lose a lot of one's valuable time. It is very true that I did promise the ladies of Bonavista Bay my support and it is not the first time that I did so. I might say that I was practically the first candidate that ever promised the ladies of Bonavista Bay to support the measure, if it ever came before the House. Why did I do it? I did it because I considered that at least ninety per cent. of the women of this country are just as capable to go to a booth and cast their votes as any ninety per cent of the men of the country. I have knocked around quite a deal during my short term of forty odd years and I have seen and known times during a period of seven or eight years where businesses would have been more successfully carried on by women instead of having them carried on by men. As an outport man of this country I think it my duty to day to stand up here and tell the ladies of St. John's that I will support this Bill now before the Chair to the very utmost. I was never to the war, as my age at the time prevented my going. I have come into contact with a number of young men belonging to my own settlement who were to the war and some of them were with the first five hundred and I found out from a couple of them who spent two years as prisoners of war in Germany that they owed their lives to the women of Germany. They told me repeatedly that if the women there had been so cruel to them as the men were that they would not have lived six months. They also told me that an aged lady had been thrashed by Germans for giving food to the prisoners. I consider that is proof beyond doubt that women acted as nobly and as courageously as the men, and, therefore, why should they not get a vote in this country the same as men. I feel sure, Mr. Speaker, that, if the ladies had given a vote in October last, the majority for Monroe and Winsor would have been 1000 instead of 400 and that would go to prove that a great many of them would have more sense than their husbands. I know of a case in my own home town where a man who had six children who had more than he could do to get himself and his family along. He died and left his wife and those children without any means of support whatever. The mother, I am proud to say, started out to work with the result that she made a much better living for those children than the father did when he was alive. Therefore, taking everything into consideration, I think it is my duty and the duty of every member of this Chamber to vote in favor of Woman Suffrage.

MR. HALFYARD—Mr. Speaker, it has been wittingly remarked by a previous speaker that this evening is one for testifying, so I suppose it is alright for me to occupy a few minutes in connection with this Bill. At the outset I might say that I regret the absence of the Leader of the Opposition who is ill, as I have heard it remarked that he was favorable to this Bill, and if he was here he would give it his support. It is somewhat of a personal matter whether we support or oppose the Bill; but the ladies here this afternoon must be delighted to hear the remarks made from the Government side of the House and it looks as if the Bill will pass unanimously. It seems now that we have arrived at the time when the ladies of this country will be given the franchise and they have in sight the successful result of their efforts. I think that it will be quite satisfactory to the ladies to know that the Bill will pass the Legislature, and, as Captain Winsor complimented the ladies who called upon him for not wasting his time, I, therefore will not waste the time of the ladies who have taken the trouble to come here this evening, and I assure them that the Bill will have my hearty support.

MR. PUDDESTER—Mr. Speaker it has been said by a number of speakers that when the Bill went to Committee they would have something further to say in connection with several clauses contained in it. As you know, Sir, it will not be my privilege to have anything to say in Committee, therefore I crave the indulgence of the House for a few moments to say a word in connection with the Bill at the second reading. Without at all beating about the bush, I have to say that I am going to vote for the Bill and give it my hearty support. In doing that I am not the victim of any propaganda. Sometimes I agree with propaganda and sometimes I do not. There is a possibility of carrying propaganda too far sometimes and to the extent of defeating the cause. I have never changed my mind as to whether women should be given the right to vote because I have never had any cause to change it, as I have always believed that women should have the vote.

A great deal has been said and said justly that the women won their right to their franchise by their work during the war. I am of the opinion that that onus should not have been placed upon the women to prove that they had won the franchise. I believe that it is the right of a woman to have a vote whether she won it during the war or not. I believe it is a matter of justice. It is also a matter of natural right for a woman to have the privilege of going to the ballot box testifying that she has the inherent right to say who shall govern her country. In my opinion there never has been, and there never can be a good and sufficient reason advanced by anyone to show that the women should not have the right to vote. The woman is on absolute equality with the man; and if the man has the right to say who shall govern his country the woman has the same right. I cannot for the life of me see the distinction between a man and a woman in that regard. We live together; we marry together and we die together, and Mr. Speaker, the time has come for the women to get equal rights with men, and I have very much pleasure indeed in supporting the motion now before the Chair that the bill be given its second reading.

MR. LAKE—Mr. Speaker, as an Hon. Member has said this afternoon it is up to me to give my version of the matter. Now just like many others I have given this matter careful consideration for the past six months and I want to say that I intend to vote for this Bill.

This year before I left the District of Burin I put the matter before some of the towns. The matter went into debate and then some of the Ladies waited on me and asked me if I would support the Bill. I told them that I had an open mind on the matter, as I believed that the Bill should come up and be debated upon by those most interested in the matter. I am glad to be able to say that the people of Burin are of the opinion that the ladies should have a vote.

Now I am not like my friend, the Hon. Member for Ferryland, who said that had the ladies had a vote I would have been elected by greater numbers. I can't say that, for being an old married man I probably would not have the same chance as the younger men. In fact my wife told me last year that had she a vote she would have voted against me. So you see I stand in a different position from some of the men around here this afternoon.

I have been waiting for several Hon. Members to speak, for I had been expecting that some of them may oppose the measure. So far no one has appeared. Now I would like to know why it is that some of them did not support the Bill when it was brought in before. Why is it that they waited till now when the Prime Minister has brought it in and it is favoured so strongly. I am very anxious for some of the Hon. gentlemen to get on their feet. I would have liked to have heard them speak first as I would have liked to have a chance to say something in contradiction. I suppose that they are going to get cold feet in front of the ladies. I am very well pleased that the Bill has not been brought in as a party measure, but as a general measure, as then each man can speak out, and now the ladies will be able to judge and decide what members are for it and what members are against it. And besides if it came in as a party measure we would have to decide in a party meeting whether we were for it or against it, and only those who were against it would have an opportunity of having their views heard. It was generally understood that the Member for Burin Distrit, Mr. Lake, was opposed to this Bill. Nobody heard me say so. I told the ladies of my district that I had an open mind on the matter. But as to what my colleague, Mr. Long, may have to say I am not prepared to say. But as we will not have the privilege of going back as two in one I suppose he can just do as he likes. I will be going back to one part and he will be going back to some other part. But I would like to hear the views of some of the other members who were opposed to this measure. So far we have nothing, and as it is my fortune to be here for the first time I am pleased to be able to state in conjunction with the good ladies of Burin District that they have decided in favour of women franchise and I have much pleasure also to state that I will heartily support the measure now for second reading.

HON. MR. SULLIVAN—Mr. Speaker: It is not my intention to say much in connection with the Bill before this House. After what has been said by the different speakers, I think it is a foregone conclusion that this Bill will have the unanimous vote of the House. I had pledged myself a year ago to support the Bill. About three weeks ago a delegation called on me and asked me whether I was going to vote for this Bill or not. I said yes. I have given my word and I see no reason to change my views. When this measure comes up to be voted upon, I am going to vote the straight ticket for the ladies. I am sorry they did not have the vote before. I am glad to welcome the prospective members of the House of Assembly. It is going to be much more pleasant when the election campaigns start in the future. I would be delighted to have a lady as opposition candidate against me in whatever portion of Placentia Bay it may be my good fortune to contest, and there is no need of apologizing for giving the ladies a vote.

When we come to consider it, every British colony, with the exception of South Africa, has given the women the right to vote, I think it is time that the women of Newfoundland should have the vote. The women who have been fighting for this franchise for the last three or four years deserve great credit. There is no need to tell what the women had done during the Great War. They did their duty the same as the women in other British possessions. They did their duty whether working at home or overseas. They drove motor lorries in France, ambulance cars,and nursed the sick. Even the old women, many of whom could not get out of their beds knitted socks for our boys overseas. There is no reason to get up here and apologize for giving the women of Newfoundland a vote. I am proud to see that they are going to get it. I believe the vote is going to be unanimous.

MR. HIBBS—Mr. Speaker, I did not intend to speak on this matter this afternoon, but like the other gentlemen present I thought it would be too bad if I did not take advantage whilst the ladies were present, otherwise they might believe that I was not inclined to vote for the Bill. I believe in the principle of the Bill that the women of this country should have the vote as well as the women of other countries of the world. I believe in the principle of a person, no matter what his or her sex may be, having equal privileges in the affairs of the country. I regret , as Mr. Halfyard has said. that some gentleman referred to the fact that the question was brought up before and that it did not materialize. I do not know if there are any members in the House of Assembly at present who had anything to do with shelving that question. I was always in favour of it and will vote for it when it comes up before the House. There are many reasons why, and I need not elaborate on them. One fact has struck me and that is that from the splendid speeches we have had this afternoon I believe that when we get the ladies in the House we will have all the members developing in oratory and among the other good things you will find all good-looking members in the House of Assembly.

MR. GRIMES—Mr. Speaker, it has been my experience to find myself in disagreement with the Prime Minister on many of the measures that have been discussed in the House, because the stand taken by him did not seem, to me, to be the practising of the Square Deal promised by him in his election manifesto.

His introduction of the Woman Suffrage Bill today, and his strong pronouncement in its favour, shows that he intends to give a square deal to the women,—a measure which I have supported for years. Women play a very important part in the life of a country, the most important of all having the care of a home, the training of children who are to be the future custodians of the country; what kind of custodians they will be, depending largely on the training received at the hands of their mothers. We stand by justice and fair play, when we give our support to Woman Suffrage. I could never understand the mental processes of those who oppose it, most of whom think it quite proper for a woman to attend political meetings during election time, but think it wrong that she should on polling day, once in four years, go to a booth-room to record her vote. How that much time taken once in four years would interfere with her home duties, I cannot see. That she should seek to know how the country is governed, how taxes are imposed, what effect it has on her home, on the income required to conduct the home, to me is perfectly proper, for upon her devolves how that income is to be used, and what saving can be effected.

Women play a large part today in the social, industrial, commercial and political life of countries. In Canada, Australia, the United States, and Great Britain, their part in political affairs has been done with great credit to themselves. In Great Britain, Lady Astor, Margaret Bondfield and others have shown, particularly in legislation affecting women that they are fully capable of dealing with it in a satisfactory manner. I need not say more, except to join with the other members of the House, who have already spoken favourably of the measure, in giving it my whole-hearted support.

Pursuant to order and on motion of Hon. the Prime Minister, the Bill entitled "An Act to Amend Chapter 3 of the Consolidated Statutes of Newfoundland (Third Series) entitled 'Of the Election of Members of the House of Assembly'" was read a second time, and it was ordered that the said Bill be referred to a Committee of the While House on tomorrow.

The remaining Orders of the Day were deferred.

It was moved and seconded that when the House rises, it adjourn until tomorrow afternoon at three of the clock.

The House then adjourned accordingly.

TUESDAY, March 10, 1925.

The House met at three of the clock in the afternoon, pursuant to adjournment.

MR. GODDEN—Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present a petition from the people of Heart's Delight respecting the main road leading from that place to Carbonear. This road needs attention and improvement, as at the present time it is in a bad state. This road affects people of both Heart's Delight and Carbonear, and I have no doubt that as soon as road work begins in the Spring that the road in question will receive the consideration of the Gvoernment.

MR. GODDEN—Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the honourable member for Carbonear, I also beg leave to present a petition signed by over four hundred residents of Carbonear regarding two main roads. One road is that I have already referred to and the second road runs from Carbonear to Heart's Content. A petition on this same subject was presented by my colleague, Mr. Halfyard, last week. The petition has my hearty support and I ask that it be given the consideration which it deserves.

MR. HALFYARD—Mr. Speaker, I beg to support the prayer of the petition.

HONOURABLE THE MINISTER OF FINANCE—Mr. Speaker, I ask leave to present a petition on behalf of the Truckmen's Protective Union and other people of St. John's in connection with the proposed change in driving from the left to the right. In presenting this petition, I do not say that I am in accord with it; but at the request of the petitioners I submit it for the consideration of the House. It reads as follows:

(Reads Petition)

This petition is signed by the President of the Truckmen's Protective Union and two hundred and eighty odd other people and I have much pleasure in presenting it.

MR. HICKMAN—Mr. Speaker, I beg to support the prayer of the petition.

MR. LINEGAR—Mr. Speaker, I rise to support the motion, though I have not yet seen the petition. I shall have more to say on the petition later on after I have had an opportunity of examining it.

HON. MR. SULLIVAN—Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present a petition from the inhabitants of Red Island in connection with the coastal service on Placentia Bay. This petition affects nearly every harbour from Placentia to Rushoon. I ask that this matter be referred to the proper Department of the Government for consideration.

I also beg to present a petition from the inhabitants of Angle's Cove in connection with a breakwater at that place.

HON. MR. BRADLEY—Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present a petition from the residents of the town of Brigus in the district of Port de Grave on the subject of a public wharf. The situation in Brigus today is a most serious one. From the standpoint of bringing a steamer there of any size either to discharge coal or take men and their belongings to the Labrador coast facilities are nil. In the past several attempts were made to put a public wharf there, but it seems to have been misdirected energy. Last Summer I had the honour of going through that district, accompanied by the Minister of Marine and Fisheries. We visited every public wharf and lighthouse in the district and the Minister was particularly interested in the question of a wharf for Brigus. His opinion, with which I coincided entirely, was that the attempts that had formerly been made had been misdirected. We selected a site on the old Munden property. The property has since been acquired by the Government and now funds are required to put the wharf there. It is a matter of grave importance to my constituents and this petition is signed by practically all the voters of Brigus.

MINISTER OF MARINE & FISHERIES—Mr. Speaker, I rise for the purpose of supporting the prayer of the petition just presented by the honourable member for Port de Grave. As has been stated, I visited Brigus with the Hon. Mr. Bradley and saw conditions and the absolute need for a public wharf there. I may say there was no wharf there. A part of a new wharf, built a few years ago at a cost of three thousand dollars, was in use there and this was simply money thrown away. After visiting the place I found a most suitable site, namely, where Munden's had their premises some years ago. I may say that the site for the new wharf is an excellent one and it has since been purchased by the Government. In justice to the people of Brigus I am more than pleased to give this petition my strongest support.

HON. THE MINISTER OF FINANCE—Mr. Speaker, the petition presented by the honourable Mr. Bradley has my unqualified support, as I realise as much as any man in the House the difficulties the people of Brigus are up against for the need of a public wharf. There is no doubt, as has been pointed out to the House, that the money spent there a few years ago for a wharf was wasted and misdirected. If a public wharf was built on the Munden property, acquired by the Government, it would be a great convenience to the residents of Brigus and suburbs. At present a great many people who go to the Labrador every year have no place to land or discharge anything. I support the prayer of the petition and I trust that it will receive the sympathetic consideration of the department to which it relates.

HON. MR. BRADLEY—Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present a petition from the inhabitants of the settlement of Port de Grave, in the district of Port de Grave, on the subject of a breakwater in that place. I understand that an attempt was made there some years ago, probably ten years ago, to erect a breakwater at the entrance to Port de Grave Harbour. The attempt failed for certain reasons, one of which was that a storm broke out, and swept the breakwater out before it had been secured, which is sufficient proof of the necessity for it. Capt. Winsor also visited this section with me last summer, and the whole situation was pointed out to him. The petition is signed by practically all the residents of that place.

I give my support to the petition, and ask that it be referred to the department to which it relates.

I also beg leave to present a petition from the residents of Bareneed on the subject of a public road in that settlement. The petition prays that a road be built through the settlement leading to a number of farms. There is a considerable amount of arable land up there, but it is difficult to cultivate it, because the only way that the farmers can carry anything out of it is on their backs.

I ask that this petition be referred to the department to which it relates.

MR. HALFYARD—Mr. Speaker, I beg to present a petition from the elctors of Heart's Content in the district of Trinity, on the subject of a public building. The petition is signed by several men there as a committee, by the resident clergyman, and by about one hundred and thirty others.

The petitioners set forth that Heart's Content is the principal town on the south side of Trinity Bay, the terminus of one of the most remunerative branches of the Newfoundland Railway, and the shipping port of the Anglo American Telegraph Company; and is without a public building. The present post office is a disused store; and the petition describes it as an eyesore. Without further describing the unsightly building and its total inadequacy to meet the requirements of such a large population, I would certainly ask the Government to give the matter their earnest consideration.

I may say that the petitioners also point out that the rent now being paid for the offices which are being used as a post office and postal telegraphs office; the magistrate court, and the sub-collectors room, would provide five per cent. interest on a capital investment spent in the building of a public building for Heart's Content.

I was very much surprised on my first visit to Heart's Content to find that they had no public building. I do not know the reason why they have been neglected in that respect so long. Possibly the reason for the people not having a public building such as they have in other places, would be the presence of the Anglo American Telegraph Company there, doing a very large business; and perhaps the large commodious building of the Anglo American Company met the requirements of those who had to do business with the Telegraph Office. But there, as in other places where there is an Anglo Telegraph office as well as a Newfoundland Postal Telegraph Office, the Postal Telegraph office must be used.

The question may be raised—why is it that the prayer of this petition has not been answered before? For various reasons it was difficult to find money to meet the request for public buildings, but I trust that the Government will give the matter their consideration; and if they can see their way clear to grant the request, I am sure that they will have done something that will please the people of Heart's Content.

I support the prayer of this petition, and ask that it be referred to the department to which it relates.

CAPT. RANDELL—I beg to support the petition presented by my colleague, Mr. Halfyard, from the inhabitants of Heart's Content, in connection with a public building. It is a thing which I think has been long needed by the people of Heart's Content, and I hope the Government will see their way clear to grant the prayer of the petition.

Giving Notice of Motion and Question.

Hon. the Minister of Finance and Customs gave notice that he would on tomorrow ask leave to introduce a Bill entitled "An Act to Amend Chapter 209 of the Consolidated Statutes (3rd Series) entitled 'Of Banks and Banking.'"

Mr. Ashbourne gave notice of question.

Mr. Hickman gave notice of question.

Mr. Godden gave notice of question.

Hon. the Minister of Justice gave notice that he would on tomorrow ask leave to introduce a Bill entitled "An Act to Amend the Terra Nova Sulphite Company Act, 1922."

Order of the Day.

Pursuant to order and on motion of Hon. the Colonial Secretary, the Bill entitled "An Act to Amend the War Pensions Act, 1922" was read a third time and passed, and it was ordered that the said Bill be engrossed, being entitled as above, and that it be sent to the Legislative Council with a message requesting the concurrence of that body in its provisions.

Pursuant to order and on motion of the Minister of Marine & Fisheries, the House resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole to consider the Bill entitled "An Act respecting the Lobster Fishery."

Mr. Speaker left the Chair.

Mr. Puddester took the Chair of Committee.

MR. HICKMAN — Mr. Chairman, might I ask in reference to this Bill if it is the intention of the Government to prevent anyone catching lobsters to eat fresh. During the discussion of the Bill before I took this matter up, and I understood it was to be considered by the Government. It was then thought by some of the members that during the season persons should be allowed to catch and purchase some fresh lobsters for the table. Under the amended Bill that is taken out altogether?

MINISTER OF MARINE & FISHERIES—Mr. Chairman, the question of catching lobsters for table use was discussed at great length at a recent meeting of the Fisheries Board, but it was the unanimous opinion of the members of the Board that it would be advisable not to allow any lobsters to be caught under any conditions at all, and the Fisheries Board is making recommendation to the Government of this country not to allow lobsters to be caught at all.

MR. WARREN—Mr. Chairman, before we turn to the consideration of this bill, I must say that I have not had much time to consider the provisions it contains because it has just been given to me. I would like to know if there is any distinction made between the men who catch the lobsters and the men who buy the lobsters.

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE —Mr. Chairman, this was one of the points discussed at the last reading of the Bill and it is provided for in section 2. In connection with the imported lobster this act does not apply, nor does it apply to lobsters that were caught before the passage of this act or coming into force of this act. This is one of the things that had to be provided against.

MR. SCAMMELL—Mr. Chairman, this point that has been raised by Mr. Warren does not seem to me to be explained after all. Where is the bill clear on the point of importing the lobsters for sale. What section is it?

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE —Section 2, subsection A.

MR. WARREN—Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the Minister of Marine and Fisheries if it is the intention of the Government to take any special measures to see that this act is going to be carried out. It is necessary that some special penalties be imposed or the act will be useless.

MINISTER OF MARINE & FISHERIES—Yes, the Board is considering that matter now.

MR. SCAMMELL—Mr. Chairman, I must plead ignorance of a phrase here as I am not a lawyer and so I would like to have the Minister of Justice explain to me the meaning of the expression "Parol Complaint."

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE —Mr. Chairman, it just means that a man can just go to the magistrate and say to him "Somebody is breaking the act." It is not necessary to put it in writing at all.

Mr. Speaker resumed the Chair.

The Chairman from the Committee reported that they had considered the matter to them referred, and had passed the said Bill without amendment.

On motion this Report was received and adopted, and it was ordered that the said Bill be read a third time on tomorrow.

Pursuant to order and on motion of the Hon. the Prime Minister, the House resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole to consider the Bill entitled "An Act to Amend Chapter 3 of the Consolidated Statutes of Newfoundland (Third Series) entitled 'Of the Election of Members of the House of Assembly.'"

Mr. Speaker left the Chair.

Mr. Puddester took the Chair of Committee.

HON. THE LEADER OF THE POSITION—Mr. Chairman, I was unavoidably absent from the House the other day, and I did not get the opportunity to support the bill at its second reading. I wish to put myself on record as being in favour of this bill. And I regret very much that this bill was not passed in this House of Assembly many years ago, so that many of the ills to which this country is heir to at the present time would not have been. Many of the disasters which have happened to this country would never have taken place if we had given the women the vote. I re-regret very much that the women did not have the vote at the last election. I am sure that if they did the free distribution of rum which is now taking place in St. John's would not be going on. If the women had the vote they would have decided the fate of many other bills on the statute book differently than they have been decided. I am not going to say very much on this bill this afternoon because I am going to ask the Government to have the Committee rise so that certain amendments which we have shall be placed before the committee. The amendments which we have to the bill are only minor ones and they do not effect the vote of the women in any way whatever, and will only effect the bill in certain small minor matters which I think, should be amended so that the bill can be made more workable. The ladies need not have any fear that we will bring any amendment that will effect the bill because although it is not a party measure all the members of this side of the House are unanimous in favour of it and they have no objection to it whatever, and therefore I would like the Government to defer the committee to the next sitting of the House. This bill will be passed by this House and go up to the Upper House and passed there, I think, and then it will only have to get the signature of the Governor to become law. Therefore I ask the Prime Minister or the introducer of this Bill if he will be good enough not to pass this Bill this afternoon, so that we may get an opportunity to look it over. I have not seen the bill very long. I saw it first yesterday and so have not had sufficient time to peruse it.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—Mr. Chairman, the introducer is quite prepared to consider anything that the Opposition may suggest, but the Leader of the Opposition has not said what the amedments are, and we would like to know what they were so that we might be prepared.

HON. THE LEADER OF THE OPPOSITION—Mr. Chairman, I might say that one of the amendments which we are going to ask for in this bill is a small amendment to the Election Act and was brought up at the last session of the House and that is in reference to the placing of booths in certain industrial sections of the country at the general elections. A great number of people of the country working at the industrial sections of the country have been disenfranchised at the last election because they were working at the Humber and other industrial centres. In the last general election and bye-election there were hundreds and even thousands of people working in these industrial centres who on account of the election act could not cast their votes. These men were compelled to leave their homes and go over there to earn a living for their families, and they could not afford to leave their work and pay their passage home to their own districts to vote, and therefore hundreds and even thousands of men were disenfranchised. And I do not think that it is right that people of this country should be prevented from voting simply because there is no booth in the vicinity of their employment.

Now the amendment of this Election Act is a very simple matter, that is for the Goverment—for the Minister of Justice—to have the power granted by this House of Assembly to place a booth in any industrial centre. If he had a petition presented to him, and signed by, at least twenty-five people, from any particular section, living there and who could not get home to cast their vote. That is one of the amendments and the principal one. This will not effect the Bill as far as the Bill itself is concerned.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—Mr. Chairman, the object of this Bill, as the House well knows, is simply to give the franchise to women. It seems to me that the Leader of the Opposition is trying to make out of this Bill an opportunity to bring in something foreign altogether. It is not suggested, for a moment, that there is going to be a lot of men around the Humber, away from their districts, or at any industrial centres so that they will not be able to vote at their own districts, and so I think it is rather unfair of the Leader of the Opposition to bring in a proposition of this kind, simply because we are trying to get votes for women included in this Bill. As regards the point he took up, it was debated in the House last year, and we refused to do it. We have been accused that this was a deliberate attempt on our part to prevent other men from casting their vote in the by-election in Bonavista Bay, which would have been in their favour instead of ours. I told them then, as I am telling you now, if every man in Bonavista Bay had been permitted to vote, we would have had a bigger vote than we had. I am perfectly satisfied, myself, on this matter, although it is not the sort of thing we can very well satisfy the House about. Everyone has his own opinion on the matter. But we did not try to shut this out last year, nor did we refuse to comply with the request of the Opposition because we were thinking of the Bonavista election. We refused it because we considered it was wrong in principle. I think it is wrong now. If a man is standing for Bonavista Bay, and quite a number of his constituents are away in the Humber or Grand Falls, how can he represent the affairs of the country to those people? And if the people are not in their district, and he cannot see them there, and if there is no means of canvassing them, no means of laying the affairs of the country before them, they ought not to have a vote. So I say that I don't approve of the proposed amendment that Mr. Hickman intends to bring in. I don't think that this issue at the present moment has anything to do with the Bill before the House.

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE —Mr. Chairman, as the Leader of the Opposition has just said this Bill is not a party measure, so that the views of the Leader of the House need not be accepted by any of the Government members. Therefore, I would wish to give my opinion of the matter. I want to state right here that I can't conceive of the House entertaining such a proposition. I think it is the worst kind of red herring drawn across the trail. What we are considering is the principle as to whether the women are to be given the right to vote. Surely it is not intended seriously by the Leader of the Opposition that making provisions for the women to have a vote means that the women will want to be on all fours with the men. Surely he does not mean that all the men are going to be turned away from the Humber and their jobs are to be given to the women. I don't think that they are going to rush out in any great numbers. I think that they are going to let the men man the mills and cut the logs for a while. But I don't think that should be regarded seriously as suggesting that this is a reason for bringing in amendments to this Bill. If the Hon. Member wants to have his amendment debated let him give notice that he is going to bring in an amendment to the Election Act. The fact that one amendment is brought in does not prevent us from making others. This Bill is only to decide whether we will give women the vote. You are trying to make out that our views are against woman suffrage because we are not opening booths at the Humber. Now there is another bill before the House apart from the merits of the stand that we took last year as regards the suggestion of opening booths in the industrial areas. There is the Redistribution Bill. There will be a member for the Humber next election. There will be a man right on the spot. For Grand Falls there will be a member. Right on the spot. So there is no occasion to worry at all. There will be no occasion for outside booths. But I think that the Leader of the Opposition is trying to bring in an issue that does not belong to this Bill at all. The right of the women to vote and the limitation of that vote is all that concerns this Bill. That is all that we have to consider. So far as that is concerned today the only place where the women labour in any great numbers concentrated is in St. John's. But outside St. John's there are few places where women are engaged in any large numbers in factory or such work. So it can't be suggested that even if the Redistribution Bill never came into force that there is not ample opportunity for the women in St. John's to vote today. It is not fair to ask the Hon. members to consider this amendment which does not refer to this Bill, and I have to respectfully suggest that it is most improperly interjected.

MR. SCAMMELL—First of all I want to say, sir, that I was not present yesterday for the second reading of this Bill. Had I been present yesterday I would have given it my support. Some years ago a Bill calling for the extension of the franchise was introduced into this House. I was sitting on the other side of the House. The measure, strictly speaking, never got down to the point of a decided vote. Had it so got down I probably would have opposed it because at that time I felt that I had very little opinion as to the way the rank and file of the people of my district were thinking with regard to the matter of woman suffrage. Since that time I have stood in two general elections and I feel that if my oponent had stood in the place where I very safely stand today he would have given the support to this Bill. I am not giving the support to this Bill and I wanted it clearly understood that I am not giving the support to the Bill because of any agitation that has been going on in St. John's. If no agitation had been going on in this connection my common sense would have prompted me to take the step in this direction. I am supporting this Bill because I feel that the wives and mothers of this country; Those mothers who produced the men that fought in Flanders; the women who produced the men to go down to the sea in ships; that the mothers who produced men in every direction in the industrial life of the country should be the women best qualified to vote.

You have in St. John's' from the ladies' point of view a large leisure class, who are keenly interested in bringing this about. In the outports you have a different class of women not so keenly interested in having this Bill on the Statute Book. And it is because of those that I support the Bill today. I speak correctly when I say that in my own district I owe a great deal to the work of the women in my behalf. Had there been a change and had my opponent represented the district instead of myself I feel sure that he would have made the identical remark as I have made. So I give this Bill my support for the reasons that I have outlined.

But in regard to the point mentioned by the leader of the opposition I regret to say the Prime Minister saw fit to talk to the galleries. The Minister of Justice in particular who is an expert on that fine art, I think that it was very unfair of him to say that Mr. Hickman was trying to draw a red herring across the trail.

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Pardon me, I said no such thing. I merely said that the introduction of this amendment was drawing a red herring across the trail. And to the credit of Mr. Hickman I say that he has done it unintentionally.

MR. SCAMMELL—Whether you did or you did not I think that the Leader of the Opposition was quite within his rights in introducing an amendment to this Bill.

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE —A rose would smell just as sweet by any other name.

MR. SCAMMELL—That may be so. In view of the explanation and pointing out that there is another way to go about the job, there is nothing more to be said. The Honourable the Prime Minister is also lacking in this connection, and apparently has learned very little during the past six months. Ulterior motives were attributed to us last year when we proposed the amendment to the Election Act, and I gather from his remarks today that there is still something rotten in the state of Denmark. The Honourable the Minister of Justice says there is now before the House the Redistribution Bill which will alter the situation materially, but admitting that it will do so, that Bill will not become effective before three years from now, and after it has been dealth with here by a select committee and gone through various other phases, in the meantime we may have a number of bye-elections. If the Re-Distribution Bill is accepted and becomes law it will not come into effect for three years, and nobody here has a lease of life or a lease of his seat in this Assembly. We never know when there will be a bye-election, and the amendment proposed by the Honorable The Leader of the Opposition has as much force today as it had when put forward last year,—the Redistribution Bill notwithstanding to the contrary. That is all I wish to say except to reaffirm my support of the present Bill, and to express regret at the spirit in which the amendment proposed by the Honourable the Leader of the Opposition whether he be right or not, has been received by the Honourable the Prime Minister and the Honourable the Minister of Justice.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—Mr. Chairman, as I have already pointed out, we turned down the very self same proposition last year, and it may have been thought that we did so, because of the approaching bye-election in Bonavista District, but it certainly was not on that account. I did think when the Opposition proposed the amendment that they felt it would benefit them to have a booth at the Humber and other places, but we did not think it right apart altogether from the Bonavista bye-election, and I do not feel that it is proper now. If we could not accept the proposals then, why should we accept the self-same thing now. It is wrong in principle as I have already explained, and that is why it is objectionable now just as it was last year.

MR. HICKMAN—Mr. Chairman, I would like to make myself clear in connection with this amendment, and to withdraw it if it should adversely affect this Bill which I want to see go through. My idea of the amendment is that it should be either in this Bill or in the Election Act. The Honourable the Prime Minister and I differ on this point, but my opinion is just as strong as his, and I have good reason for my belief. I represent a district in Conception Bay—Harbor Grace—and I have also represented another, Bay de Verde. From both of these a large number of men worked on Bell Island, and at election time all kinds of efforts were made to get them home to vote. Both sides infringe the law, and break it, by bringing these men to their districts to vote, and candidates lay themselves open to being unseated if a petition was filed against them. Not only that, but it costs the candidates hundreds of dollars to bring men from Bell Island to their homes, and I say it is unfair to these men to have to leave their work, and also unfair to the candidates to place them in that position. If a booth were opened at Bell Island for the different districts in Conception Bay, such as Harbor Grace, Carbonear and Bay de Verde, these Electors could go there and cast their votes instead of going home, thus saving money to the candidates, and removing the chances they take of breaking the Election Act. I possibly have been more in contact with this kind of thing than the Honourable the Prime Minister, because he represents a fishing District where most of the voters are home at election time. Perhaps some of them would be at the Humber, but his district would not be so influenced in this matter as one in Conception Bay. I might tell the Honourable the Minister of Justice that I have no desire to draw a red-herring or even a red-rose across the Bill, but I thought it would save further trouble in amending the Election Act to amend this measure. Now as you say that we have an ulterior object in doing this, I will not ask that the amendment be made to this Bill. The Honourable the Minister of Justice in his explanation said we will have a re-distribution of seats which will remedy the trouble, but I do not see its effect. I do not suppose that under that Bill a man will be able to vote in a district to which he does not belong.

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE —The temporary work at such places as the Humber will then be over, and the people there will be permanent residents. I did not like to interrupt before, but wish to point out that by special provision of the Election Act men can be taken from Bell Island by water to vote. That is they may cross an arm of the sea.

HON. THE COLONIAL SECRETARY—Surely the Honourable the Leader of the Opposition did not pay such men.

MR. HICKMAN—I had an idea that you did.

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE —I did not like to interrupt before because I thought you had more on your conscience in this connection than those on this side.

MR. HICKMAN—Mr. Bennett was the first who thought of it. Now as to the Re-Distribution Bill, it will not give a man the right to vote in another District than his own. In that case is it fair to men who are away from home.

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE —If we had a booth at Bell Island the men of Conception Bay would go home anyhow. They look on going home to vote once every four years like going to the regatta.

MR. HICKMAN—In any case it is the opinion of the Members on this side of the House that by the means we propose all would have the Franchise whether they were home or not. But after what has been said by the Honourable the Prime Minister and the Honourable the Minister of Justice, I do not wish to draw a red-herring across the trail as I am anxious for this Bill to go hrough.

MR. HALFYARD—Mr. Chairman, I would like to make a few remarks as I introduced an amendment to the Election Act last year, so that transient residents at industrial centres could vote for any candidate for a district of which they were bonafide electors. It was stated then by the Hon. the Prime Minister, or the Hon. the Minister of Justice that possibly the whole Election Act would be taken up during the ensuing year, and amendments introduced, and then it would be possible to deal with the amendment then before the House. We only ask that an addition be made to Section 33 of the Election Act. We are dealing with that Section of the Statutes governing the Election of Members for the House of Assembly. Section 33 reads as follows:—

33. "In addition to the polling districts constituted and the polling stations appointed in the several electoral districts outside of St. John's district, the Governor, by proclamation, shall appoint in the town of St. John's one or more polling stations for each of the said electoral districts, and each polling station so appointed shall be under the control and supervision of the Returning Officer of its respective electoral district; and for the purposes of this Chapter shall be deemed to be a polling station within the electoral district for which it is appointed.. Such polling stations shall be kept open from the hour of eight o'clock in the morning until eight o'clock in the evening of the day of polling."

It was thought necessary by the Government to put that section 33 in the Election Act. It was thought proper that men of outlying districts, who happened to be in St. John's during the time a general election was held should have the privilege to vote for the candidates for their districts. If the attitude taken by the Prime Minister is correct and he wants to follow it up in considering this Bill, he should have deleted Section 33, otherwise I cannot see what objection could be made by adding this to Section 33, as an Amendment, viz.—

"Whenever an Election is held to elect a representative, or representatives, to the House of Assembly, should twenty-five or more, bona fide electors of the District where an election is being held, transient residents of any industrial centre, such as Deer Lake, Corner Brook, Grand Falls and Bell Island, by petition duly certified, request the Executive Government through the Colonial Secretary, for polling booths to be opened under the same conditions as set forth in Section 33 hereof; the Governor in Council shall cause such booths to be opened."

How that is "drawing a red herring across the trail" in connection with the Woman Suffrage Bill I do not know. Why it is silly for anyone to suggest that we cannot at this stage of the Bill, further amend the Election Act by inserting this clause. We will be the laughing stock of the community if, every other day, we introdce an amendment to the Election Act and I feel sure that the Minister of Justice would be the first to ridicule the action.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—I thought we were going to vote this Bill through unanimously. I certainly would not vote for this amendment in the light of the Redistribution Bill.

MR. HALFYARD—The Redistribution Bill will not alter the situation one iota. Does the Minister of Justice assume that there will be no transient residents out at Deer Lake and Corner Brook? Loggers and workmen generally will be going from outside districts as they go to Grand Falls and Bell Island. As a rule men go there in the Spring and the Fall of the year, and these are the seasons of the year when elections are held in this country. Therefore, it is very unfair for this House to disfranchise men who have to leave their homes to go to such industrial centres. If we are going to be fair to the ladies, well certainly we must be fair to the men also, especially to the producers, the men who bring the wealth into the country. In this Bill you are giving the franchise to females twenty-five years old and over, and at the same time disfranchising the men at industrial centres by refusing to give your assent to the insertion of these few words that I have suggested to section 33 of the Election Act. There will not be many districts represented at Corner Brook and other places mentioned in the amendment. The men are principally from Notre Dame Bay, Bonavista Bay, Trinity Bay and Placentia and St. Mary's Bays. The coast will be very small. It will only mean the opening of four or five booths. The idea is to treat male and female who have reached the ages of twenty-one and twenty-five years, respectively, on equal footing and give them all a square deal as regards the franchise. I think we should take advantage of bringing in any amendment to the Election Act at this time that would tend to make the Act more workable. We all know what happens during an election. Men of both sides are anxious to get a vote because they do not know but an election may depend on one or two votes and they run the risk of being unseated and disqualified should they be elected. I do not think there has ever been an election held in this country that the Election Act has not been broken in some particular. For instance men are often paid to go home to vote. No working man, no matter how anxious he is to cast his vote, can afford to leave his employment and come over the railway any long distance just to record his vote for the man of his choice. The paying of men to go home to vote is a corrupt practice. I am not blaming one party more than another. It has been done, and will be done unless the Act is amended, and we are in a position to remedy that now by inserting the clause I have suggested. Whichever way you look at it, it is a straight-forward proposition and it is not a hardship to anybody. It is only an act of justice to the men who happen to be away from their homes when an election takes place. What the Prime Minister intends to pursue is, in my opinion, very unfair and it is time that there were ladies in this House of Assembly to see that everybody gets a square deal.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Give their Bill a square deal first.

MR. HALFYARD—They are getting a square deal.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—They are not by bringing in this kind of a discussion.

MR. HALFYARD—This Bill amends the Election Act and we are simply taking advantage of this, the proper time to add an amendment to section 33 so as to make it possible for men to vote at certain places outside their own districts.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—This Bill is providing for women.

MR. HALFYARD—If that is not "drawing a red herring across the trail" I would like to know what is?

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—You knew when you brought in the amendment that it would not be accepted. Last year it was not accepted and why bring it in again this year?

MR. HALFYARD—The Prime Minister in his opening remarks this session stated that he thought certain actions of the Opposition last year had political motives behind them. Admitting that such was the case last year, which it was not, what is the reason for not accepting it now?

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—We claim we did not refuse you for political reasons last year.

MR. HALFYARD—Well, why refuse it now?

HON. THE RRIME MINISTER—For the same reason as last year. I told you last year that I thought it better to do away with booths for outports in St. John's' or anywhere in the interior of the country.

MR. HALFYARD—I cannot see why this amendment cannot get the unanimous support of the House; and one has to hesitate in giving his opinion on any Bill coming before the House at the present time. We may be accused of sidetracking some issue or of "drawing red herrings across the trails" for political reasons; but I think that persons who make such a statement are playing to the galleries and are more guilty of such tactics than any member from this side of the House. There is another matter in connection with this Bill that I would refer to. I do not know if the Government thought of it or not. In St. John's East I presume a bye-election will be held in May month, which will be six months after the seat was vacated. If it is the intention of the Government to hold an election in May in St. John's East I daresay the requirements of the Legislative Disabilities Act will be met, namely:—If you have a by-election after the month of May, I think you will have to take a new voter's list. The election list stands good only for twelve months.

I think the voters' list was taken last year, mostly by telegram. Therefore, if you can put off an election in the month of May you will avoid a new voters' list.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—We will have to have it revised next May anyhow, if we have the ladies in it.

MR. HALFYARD—That is right too. If this Bill becomes law within the next few weeks, the ladies will be qualified to contest that district or any other.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—That is why I am so anxious for the ladies to get the vote. I am anxious to get a lady colleague in the East End.

MR. HALFYARD—But to get back to the point raised by the Leader of the Opposition with regard to the Committee rising for a further opportunity to consider this Bill. I do not think there is anything unreasonable about it. We are railroading bills through this House just as much as if we were on the last week of the session, with the rules of this House suspended. Bills are put through the second reading without being laid on the table. Nobody has an opportunity of reading or studying them, and I would venture to state that neither the Government, nor the Opposition, can do justice to the Legislation by meeting this House every day in succession. You have no more time to consider those bills than the Opposition. It is just as well if you govern by executive authority. Two or three members of the Government may have some knowledge of the bills, but I am prepared to state that the rank and file knows no more than the Opposition do, and yet you can railroad things through so that legislation cannot be properly attended to. You are rushing the bills through as soon as they are out of the printers' hands. I submit you can rush things as much as you like, but if you are determined to rush things through in a few weeks, this House will know no more about the bills than if they were done on Executive authority.

This is a very important Bill and certainly I see nothing wrong in suggesting that the Government members have twenty-four hours to look through the Election Act, not only with regard to this Bill but the other parts of the Election Act to see if we cannot give some opinion that perhaps may make legislation a little better. If the Prime Minister and the Minister of Justice who have spoken on this matter are determined to rush things through, they will have to be rushed through and we can only submit to it.

MR. GRIMES—Mr. Chairman, I regret the position that has been taken by the Minister of Justice in refusing to give consideration to suggestions in the amendment to be brought in by the Leader of the Opposition. It is only fair that every voter should have an opportunity in this country of being able to register his choice as to the man he wants to represent him in the House of Assembly, or the woman, if they are given the franchise in a year or two.

As to the Prime Minister's idea of last year that it should not be done, he has given no reason why it should not be done. What is your reason Mr. Premier?

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—I will tell you that later.

MR. GRIMES—With regard to the number of voters in the last general election who were disenfranchised in the interior of the country there were about sixteen hundred voters who did not have the opportunity to vote because the same privileges did not happen to them as happened to those who were living in St. John's. Do you think it fair that because a man comes to St. John's he has the right to vote, but if he goes up to Grand Falls or some other place in the interior he is disenfranchised?

Mr. Chairman, I don't think the Premier and the Minister of Justice have given this due consideration. I do not know whether the other members have given it any consideration whatever, but I don't think those men, if they had spoken their own convictions, would see anything exceptional in the suggestion made this afternoon. As Mr. Scammell has pointed out, we do not know what may happen in twelve months' time, for the present it may do alright. But, if a vacancy should occur it may be in the Humber or some district of the Humber, and because a man has gone out from Bonavista Bay or Trinity Bay or Fogo or Notre Dame Bay, as he is compelled to do so because of the circumstances; and because he has to leave his own district he cannot vote.

The Minister of Justice stated that the redistribution of the seats would remedy this because there will be districts in the Humber and at Grand Falls and other places, but that won't help the man who goes to the north or the south. He will have no right to vote. To say that there are no transient voters there would be not to recognize conditions that have been prevailing there for the last seven years. Grand Falls has been established for a number of years, yet, in the last general election there were in the neighbourhood of about three or four hundred voters in Grand Falls who could not vote. The same thing is going to happen in the other districts that are going to be created at the Humber. They will be in the same predicament as the people at Grand Falls because, as they are in the unfortunate position of going up there instead of to St. John's, they have no claim for consideration. I submit, there is no democratic principle in refusing the man who has to go up there the same privilege as the man who comes to St. John's. These men can't help going up there. They have got to go there to earn the wherewithal for their families, and the Premier and the Minister of Justice should be only too ready to offer facilities to men of that kind who are forced to leave their homes. They have to spend large sums of money going forth and back. They have to pay board for themselves as well as provide for their families. And because these men are living under circumstances worse than the people of St. John's—men who have to live and work under such hard conditions and heavy expenses, these men are to be disenfranchised. I don't think the Prime Minister and the Minister of Justice have given the consideration that they ought to have given to this matter, and I think if they would consider the matter a little more they would see the justice of the most of these men in claiming that they have the same privilege to vote as the man who comes to St. John's.

THE HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—I quite agree with what the Minister of Justice has said. That was just the point I was going to make when he got up. I have been asked to give my reason why I consider these voters should be disfranchised. I think that I made that point clear both last year in Committee and when I spoke in the House just now. It is hard enough to get things done properly now without adding to the difficulty by establishing booths in districts for men from other districts when there may be no more than 25 such men. You do not want a polling booth in every district. Again, as I stated just now, a man who is standing for a certain district wants to represent his policy or that of his government to the members of the district to which he belongs. If he happens to be going back to his district after four years he has to render an account of his stewardship and he has got to explain to the district what has been done by his government and let them vote on that statement. He cannot do that if the people of his district are scattered all over the island. If there happens to be a very big number of people belonging to his district in other parts of the country it is not humanly possible to go over all that district, look those men up, and canvass them. So I say that it is not an unreasonable hardship to disfranchise them. I see nothing else for it.

When St. John's was practically the only market for Labrador fish that the men could avail of, and men had to be here in port when elections were on it was agreed to have a booth for all districts here. I would rather give that up than attempt to establish polling booths for every district in every district. And that is the reason why I refused to consider this proposal at the last session of the legislature. I know perfectly well that member of the Opposition thought that we refused to have these booths placed in these districts because of the election that was coming on in Bonavista Bay. If a booth had been established on the Humber our side would have done as well as our opponents.

HON. THE LEADER OF THE OPPOSITION—Mr. Chairman, it is the greatest surprise to me this afternoon to find that the Government has made this amendment a party measure. I feel sure now that if I had thought of it I would have never mentioned this amendment to this bill because I could have easily have figured that the members on the other side of the House if they had made a party measure of this amendment could not possibly vote for the bill. I thought that this would be an opportune time to get this amendment to the election act put in and I certainly thought that it would not be looked upon as a party measure. I thought that every member of this House could use his own judgment as to whether it is right or not that men of this country who are compelled to leave their homes to earn a livelihood for their wives and their families should be disenfranchised. As the law stands they are disenfranchised and thousands of men who are working in the big industrial centres will continue to be disenfranchised unless this amendment is added to this bill. Now the Prime Minister has told us that this is a party measure and the Attorney General has intimated the same thing. Then I say that we will not attempt to introduce anything that may hinder the passing of this bill, as we are all desirous of having this bill placed on the Statute Book, and as far as I am concerned now we have discovered that the Prime Minister and his Party have the same mind on this subject and are still desirous that a large number of people be disenfranchised we will not take any steps to include anything in the bill before the House or to prevent it from going through.

MINISTER OF ARGICULTURE & MINES—Mr. Chairman, before the committee rises I would like to first avail of the opportunity of offering my congratulations to His Honour the Speaker, who had the honour of presenting to this House something less than two years ago a largely signed petition from the ladies of Newfoundland asking that the Franchise be extended to them. I happened to be one of the supporters who occupied a seat in this Assembly at that time, and I think it is something that the ladies who are behind this measure ought to be proud of. It must be a matter which will give great satisfaction to His Honour the Speaker to know that in less than two years the petition which he presented to this House is going through this House with the unanimous support of the members. I think that it is something that the Speaker and every honourable member of this House should be proud of.

I supported the petition at that time, not because of any particular section of ladies in Newfoundland, nor because of any argument I had heard in support of the measure, but from my own sincere conviction, and from not seeing why women should not have an equal say in the affairs of this country with men.

It is unfortunate that there came into this debate this afternoon something that looked as if it might mar the splendid feeling of co-operation exhibited by each individual member on both sides of the House. I have much pleasure in reiterating what I said when I supported the petition two years ago. I am glad to know that the ladies are going to be extended the franchise. I do not anticipate that things are going to be as some people fear—and I do not agree that this House is going to be monopolised by women. I do not think there is going to be anything of the kind.

I am more familiar with the women of the outports than with the women of the city. I know that it will take a lot of inducement before any of the immediate members of my family will offer themselves as candidates for any particular district.

I look forward to the time when some good will accrue to the country from having women in politics, and I feel sure that we will have no repetition of the scandals that we have had in the past. It has become a matter of common knowledge that when a man offers himself as a candidate for the House of Assembly, he becomes a public target, and the public newspapers rake up all the members of his family, and make all kinds of references to his actions. I hope that the entry of the women into the political arena will have some material benefit along those lines.

I do not wish to further delay the committee, but I do not think I would be doing my duty, if I did not at this stage give the Bill my heartiest support.

HON. MINISTER OF POSTS AND TELEGRAPHS — Mr. Chairman, I strongly support the measure now before the chair. Yesterday afternoon, at the second reading of the Bill, the House was pretty well taken up by members on both sides speaking in support of it, and I have only to add my quota and say that I am a firm believer in extending the franchise to the women of Newfoundland. If I were a member of St. John's, either East or West, I would certainly strongly support the Bill, because of the many ladies here present. I am sorry that a number of my lady friends from the district of Harbour Main are not here today to hear me say that I am strongly in favor of extending the franchise to the women of Newfoundland. Capt. Winsor told us yesterday that he had promised the women of Bonavista Bay that he would support a measure that would give them the vote I have no doubt that he got a good many votes by making that promise, and the Hon. Prime Minister also. But the Prime Minister and Capt. Winsor proved their s i n c e r i t y in their strong advocacy of the measure yesterday afternoon. The Prime Minister, as always, was sincere and earnest; and no one can deny that he is honest in his intentions, and firmly determined to carry out his promises. I feel proud of such a man being at the helm of our country today; a man of backbone and a man of honour, whose word is his bond, a man who is determined to do justice to all and recognize that the women of this country should be put on a par with the men when it comes down to the franchise.

I think I might say that I owe my election during the thirty-five years that I have been in politics to the good women in my district. All the good women in my district were on my side. I do not know that there are any bad women in the district; but if they were, they were on the other side, of course.

When we think of the good work done by such women as Florence Nightingale, the great heroine of The Crimea, and of the women whom we admire who became known to us during the late war, such as Edith Cavell, their sacrifices on behalf of their countrymen appeal to us all. And have we not many an Edith Cavell here in our midst? Have we not Florence Nightingales all over the country, women prepared to lay down their lives on behalf of their brothers, and uncles, and cousins and fathers? Who is doing more on behalf of the country than the women of the country? I say certainly, sir, we are doing the right thing in giving the women the franchise. The hand that rocks the cradle is the hand that rules the world. I feel that every member of this House will favor this measure, and I hope to live to see it being carried out, and that please God, we will see some of the ladies take their seats in this House, and I am sure that we will all extend to them the greatest welcome and help. As the father of the House, I would advise all the members to do all that is in their power to give all the encouragement that they possibly can to the women of the country. Perhaps I shall not go back for election to my district, but if I should be prevailed upon to do so, the first section of the people to whom I should appeal for political support would be the women. I expect that you young men, yourself, Mr. Chairman, and all young men that sit on either side of this House, will be out early tomorrow morning canvassing the young ladies, and looking for their votes to help return you to your seats at the next election.

I believe the ladies have as much brains in connection with politics as the men and if I live long enough I expect to see great and beneficial legislation enacted through their efforts. I regret to say that in my experience I have found the men rather careless as to recording their votes at an election. A man will say, "why should I bother about voting and lose my time and get nothing out of it. I did get a few dollars for a well or a road to my garden but my neighbor got the benefit of that as well as myself." I do not believe this will be the attitude of the women. I imagine they will vote for Mr. Monroe, of whom they have heard so much and whose reputation stands so high in the public estimation, and I feel they will not be disappointed, as he has the ability and integrity to carry out his programme of reforms and clean up and keep clean. He will give a square deal to the ladies and I hope in a short time to see far-reaching and beneficial results from the enactment of this measure. My congratulations to the ladies and I trust they will enjoy in full measure the privilege extended them.

Mr. Speaker resumed the Chair.

The Chairman from the Committee reported that they had considered the matter to them referred and had passed the said Bill with some amendment.

On motion this Report was received and adopted, and it was ordered that the said Bill be read a third time on to-morrow.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—Mr. Speaker, in rising to make a motion for the adjournment of the House I would like to say that on tomorrow I hope to table not only the report of Mr. Crandell who has been making an inspection of the Dry Dock, but also that of Colonel Mitchell who has been doing the same and who is connected with the firm of W. I. Bishop, of Montreal. Both these gentlemen report that the Dock is in a very dangerous condition and that it is absolutely necessary to have something done in this connection immediately. Colonel Mitchell presents a very interesting report on the whole Dock situation and I am having it printed and will give every member a copy so that he may consider it fully as until it is read through thoroughly no one will be in a position to discuss the situation. I think it is necessary that some action be taken immediately because the reports of both these gentlemen are extremely alarming. Colonel Mitchell tells me that it is quite possible that the next steamer which goes in Dock will be found up in the Railway Yard and her crew with her, and that it is very dangerous to use the Dock any longer. I want to bring in this report to-morrow so that you all may consider it fully and I will present Mr. Crandell's at the same time. The latter expert did not go into the details of the situation so fully as Colonel Mitchell who has taken every possible step to ascertain the true condition of the Dock; and not only of the Dock itself but of the piers around it and the general working of the whole situation. The Hon. the Leader of the Opposition asked me the other day if there was any suggestion as to selling the Dock or of giving it over to anybody else to operate. I spoke of this to Colonel Mitchell and suggested we get in touch with the firm of Vickers through their Montreal agency. Colonel Peel of the Vickers Company was here this Summer and he asked me to let him know if were prepared to sell the Dock. Now Colonel Mitchell says that we really have nothing in the form of a dock to sell, but it seems to me that as we have to make repairs, if the Vickers people want it they may be a party to these repairs, and I asked Colonel Mitchell to get in communication with them and let us know where they stand in the matter. I mention this in advance, as I will lay the reports on the table of the House tomorrow for the benefit of honorable members, and I hope they will give the matter the most earnest attention as it is a most important one.

It was moved and seconded that when the House rises, it adjourn until tomorrow afternoon at three of the clock. The House then adjourned accordingly.

WEDNESDAY, March 11th,

The House met at three of the clock in the afternoon, pursuant to adjournment.

MR. BROWN—Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present a petition from the inhabitants of Beaumont in the district of Twillingate, and with your permission, sir, I shall read it to the House.

(Reads petition)

I might say, Mr. Speaker, that fishermen who go to the Groais Islands fishing very often have to leave their vessels and come ashore, and it is only a chance whether they save their lives or not on times. The Groais Islands is a sort of a deserted place and, in my opinion, has not got the attention that it should get. I think, sir, that the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, who is present at this particular time, well knows the need of the slip asked for in this petition. In supporting the prayer of the petition I ask that it be referred to the proper department and given that consideration that it deserves.

MR. ASHBOURNE—Mr. Speaker, I have much pleasure in supporting the petition presented by my colleague, and, in view of the small amount asked for, I ask that it be given the best consideration of Government.

MR. SCAMMELL—Mr. Speaker, I have very much pleasure in supporting the prayer of the petition presented by the honourable member for Twillingate, Mr. Brown, and, as the subject matter of the petition affects a section of the district that I have the honour to represent, I am keenly interested to see that the request is granted. The need of this very necessary marine work has been brought to my attention on a couple of occasions, and, as has been pointed out already, the people who fish at the Groais Islands cannot very well do without it much longer and I think the petition should receive the support and attention of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries. And, if the money is to be forthcoming and the slip is to be built this year, we ought to have a definite answer so that men might have an opportunity to go in the woods to procure the timber for the erection of this slip, as there is no timber procurable around the Groais Islands. I think the Government would do well to let us know how they stand on this matter so that we may inform the signatories of this petition. If the grant for this work is forthcoming, perhaps the members for the districts of Twillingate and St. Barbe could have a conference with the Minister of Marine and Fisheries with a view to getting the necessary timber so that this work could be proceeded with at once.

MR. LINEGAR—Mr. Speaker, I ask leave to present a petition from the Boilermakers of St. John's. With your permission, sir, I shall read the petition to the House.

(Reads petition).

I might say with reference to this matter that a similar petition was presented here during the latter part of last session of the House, and, consequently, there was not time to deal with it; but since that time the Boilermakers have been working on this thing with a view to having embodied in the Boiler Inspection Act the clauses set forth in the petition. The request is a very important one, concerning as it does the handling and repairing of steam boilers, but I am sure that all parties have been considered by the petitioners in their suggested amendments to the Boiler Inspection Act. I hope and trust that, in referring this matter to the Department to which it relates, no undue delay will occur, but that the matter will be taken up for consideration by the Government at the earliest possible moment.

MR. BROWNE—Mr. Speaker, I take very great pleasure in supporting the prayer of the petition presented by my honorable colleague. I might say that, if the request of the petitioners is granted, it would have a beneficial effect in so much as it would be an encouragement to the trade of boilermaking which in this country has fallen back for several years past. If favorable consideration is given this matter, I feel sure that it will tend to give more encouragement to boilermakers to continue to work at their trade, and to give them a feeling of security which, at present, in their estimation is lacking.

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE —Mr. Speaker, I ask leave to present a petition from a number of residents of Torbay requesting an allocation for the improvement of a road leading from Newtown to the Beach. The people of that section are fishermen and farmers and the road is used by them very extensively. In referring the petition to the Department of Public Works I would ask that when the matter of allocations shall be made this year in connection with road extension that this request be taken note of. The road in question is a half mile long, and, as there is no grant for it, the only hope is an allocation of a special nature. The people largely depend upon this road for getting out manure for their farms in the early part of the year, and I give the prayer of the petition my strong support.

Pursuant to notice and leave granted, and on motion of Hon. the Minister of Finance and Customs, the Bill entitled "An Act to Amend Chapter 209 of the Consolidated Statutes (3rd Series) entitled 'Of Banks and Banking,'" was introduced and read a first time, and it was ordered that the said Bill be read a second time on tomorrow.

Pursuant to notice and leave granted, and on motion of Hon. the Minister of Justice, the Bill entitled "An Act to Amend the Terra Nova Sulphite Company Act 1922,'" was introduced and read a first time, and it was ordered that the said Bill be read a second time on tomorrow.

MR. ASHBOURNE asked Hon. the Minister of Finance and Customs what position Mr. Alexander Robertson holds in the Customs House, his duties, when engaged, if paid by the day, week or month, salary paid him to date, and if he is engaged in commercial business as a Manufacturers Agent.

HON. THE MINNISTER OF FINANCE—Mr. Speaker, in reply to the Hon. member for Twillingate I may say that Mr. Alexander Robertson is an employee of the Custom House. His duties are to appraise the goods which come into the country. He is paid a monthly salary, and as regards his being in a commercial business I do not know anything about it. He is a sworn official of the Custom House like all of the rest of them.

MR. ASHBOURNE asked Hon. the Minister of Finance and Customs what position Mr. Peter Skirving holds in the Customs Department; if he was an employee of Ayre & Sons, Limited, if he is still in the employ of Ayre & Sons, Limited, and if so, whom does he represent at the Customs Department, the date when his services were engaged, the salary paid him, and the amount received by him to date.

HON. THE MINISTER OF FINANCE—Mr. Speaker, in reply to that question I may inform the Hon. member for Twillingate that Mr. Peter Skirving is assistant to Mr. Robertson and is not as far as I am aware in the employ of Messrs. Ayre & Sons. He is also a sworn employee of the Custom House and his salary is monthly and is to be voted by the department when the estimates come in.

MR. HICKMAN asked the Minister of Marine and Fisheries to lay upon the Table of the House a list of Grants, special and otherwise, sent out to the District of Bay de Verde from his department since 1st June, 1924, to date. To give the names of persons to whom the Grants were sent and to furnish returns if any.

MINISTER OF MARINE & FISHERIES—Mr. Speaker, in reply to that I have not had time to prepare the answer to that question today and I will get it as soon as possible.

MR. HICKMAN asked the Minister of Public Works to lay upon the Table of the House a list of Grants, special and otherwise, sent out to the District of Bay de Verde from his department since 1st June, 1924, to date. To give the names of persons to whom the Grants were sent and to furnish returns, if any.

MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS—Mr. Speaker, I will have that answer ready for tomorrow.

MR. GODDEN asked Hon. the Minister of Finance and Customs if any seizures of Liquor, Cigarettes and Tobacco, have been made at Wabana during the year 1924; if so, give dates, names of steamers or vessels connected with the seizures and by whom the seizures were made. If such seizures were made what action was taken by the Customs Officials with regard to same, and if no action was taken, why not.

Reply tabled.

MR. GODDEN asked Hon. the Minister of Finance and Customs if any seizure of Liquor or Tobacco was made on schooner "Helen Var"; give particulars of goods found; give reasons why the case was dropped and the Captain let off.

HON. THE MINISTER OF FINANCE—Mr. Speaker, in reply to the Member for Trinity, I may say that there has been a seizure upon the schooner Helen Var and the case came before the Court and was postponed sine die or for a sunny day, I am not sure which.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—Mr. Speaker, before proceeding with the order of the day I would like to inform the House that this morning we received a message from Fogo telling us that the Stellar Maris was in a sinking condition and was in communication with the Prospero. This afternoon we have just received a message from Captain Burgess of the Prospero:

"Our position Lat. 51 min. 23 sec. "N., Long. 53 min. 28 sec. W. Steer-"ing South West. Searching for "Stella Maris' crew. Saw smoke "early this morning."

We have found it advisable because of that message to get the Sable I. which left early this afternoon back again. By this communication it seems that there are now eighty men on the ice and we must but do everything possible for the safety of these men.

Pursuant to order and on motion of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries the Bill entitled "An Act Respecting the Lobster Fishery,'" was read a third time and passed, and it was ordered that the said Bill be engrossed, being entitled as above, and that it be sent to the Legislative Council with a message requesting the concurrence of that body in its provisions.

Pursuant to order and on motion of Hon. the Prime Minister, the Bill entitled "An Act to Amend Chapter 3 of the Consolidated Stautes of Newfoundland (Third Series) entitled 'Of the Election of Members of the House of Assembly" " was read a third time and passed, and it was ordered that the said Bill be engrossed, being entitled as above, and that it be sent to the Legislative Council with a message requesting the concurrence of that body in its provisions.

Pursuant to order and on motion of Hon. the Minister of Justice, the House resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole to consider the Bili entitled "An Act relating to Fire-arms."

Mr. Speaker left the Chair.

Mr. Puddester took the Chair of Committee.

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Mr. Chairman, I think that the bills have now been distributed and the Hon. members will find that the bill is now in line with the suggestions which were made when the committee last sat on this matter. It has been arranged so that it now applies to "small arms" 'exclusively. No other form of fire arms will be affected by it. With regards to the registering of arms outside of St. John's this can be done by a magistrate. Perhaps some of the members have just had this bill delivered to them and they may not have had time to go over it. Shortly, the effect of it is this, that all small arms such as revolvers and pistols have now to be registered. No other forms of weapons are covered by the bill. I have to apologise for the delay in bringing this bill before the House, but it was caused by the time taken up in trying to get the bill in line with all the suggestions that have been offered on it. I am not desirous of having this bill forced through the House this afternoon and if any of the members would like to have the committee rise so as to give them a chance to peruse the bill I would be quite agreeable.

MR. WARREN—Mr. Chairman, I suggest that the committee rise.

Mr. Speaker resumed the Chair.

The Chairman from the Committee reported that they had considered the matter to them referred, had made some progress and asked leave to sit again on tomorrow.

On motion this Report was received and adopted, and it was ordered that the Committee have leave to sit again on tomorrow.

HIGHWAY TRAFFLIC BILL.

HON. COLONIAL SECRETARY—Mr. Speaker, in rising to move the second reading of this Bill, I might say that it is somewhat of a subsidiary Bill to the one that I introduced and was passed in this House a day or two ago, providing for the appointment of a Highroads Commission. This Bill has for its object mainly the operation and regulation of traffic on roads and highways.

The preliminaries of the Bill, as honourable members will see, are merely the interpretations of the different titles that are named in the Bill. It is not my purpose to go into any minute details in explanation of this Bill this afternoon, as we will have an opportunity tomorrow or afterwards of going into Committee and discussing this Bill fully, and viewing it in all its aspects. But I should like to take advantage of the second reading of the Bill to explain its more salient features, so that honourable members may generally understand the object of the Bill.

Primarily, the object of the Bill is to give control to the Highroads Commission for the regulation of traaffic over the highways and other places. The Bill constitutes the Highroads Commission as the authority to take the place of and perform the duties that are now being filled by the Inspector General of Police, and the privileges of the city council, or municipality of St. John's and other places over the granting of licenses, and registration. Whilst part of the fees collected for registration and licenses will still go to the city of St. John's, the remainder will be used and spent by the Highroads Commission.

Under this Bill authority for the regulation of traffic, as I said before, will be vested in the Highroads Commission. Today the man owning a motor car in Harbour Grace, or Carbonear, or any other part of the Island outside St. John's, has to get a license from the Inspector General of Police in St. John's. It is proposed to appoint inspectors at certain points to meet this contingency, so that undue expense and hardship will not be imposed on those who require to register cars and be licensed as drivers outside the city.

It also acquires the right to regulate speed, and to regulate lights and brakes, and to generally regulate the passage of traffic on roads and highways. The rate of speed is a very important point, and the Bill provides a very definite schedule with regard to this particular matter. It provides for a rate of twenty-five miles an hour outside of cities, towns and villages, twenty miles an hour within cities, towns or villages, and only ten miles an hour at intersections or curves where the driver has not a clear view of approaching traffic, and only ten miles an hour when motor vehicles are passing each other on a bridge or on a narrow road. It also provides that a motor car shall not be driven at any time at a rate of speed that is dangerous to the public under all the surrounding circumstances, and any breach of this provision is punishable by double the ordinary penalties; and imprisonment may be imposed. It is not because twenty-five miles an hour is permitted outside towns and cities, and twenty miles an hour within, that a driver can drive recklessly at these rates of speed. He must drive carefully under all the circumstances, or he must submit himself to punishment.

The Bill also provides that in future the rule of the road shall be that vehicles shall pass each other on the right side, instead of the left as heretofore, and this new regulation is, I submit, very far reaching and important; and it is proposed to put it into effect on January 1st, 1926, after having been very widely advertised; and after it comes into force, drivers of cars will be required to carry signs in large letters on their windshields marked with "Keep to the right," until such time as the general public and everybody interested become accustomed to the new laws.

I might say that this new regulation brings us into form, or in line with the general practice right through the North American continent. Newfoundland today is the only country on this side of the water whose traffic regulations require vehicles to keep to the left; and two years ago Nova Scotia was the last to change their methods as adapted to driving of motor cars, and made it the rule to drive to the right; and the experience of those who were instrumental in bringing about that alteration, and the experience of drivers and others has been that it has made a marked improvement in the regulation of traffic in Nova Scotia. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I submit to the very careful consideration of this House this proposed alteration of our traffic laws. I feel sure that after a short time there will be many people who will be ready to adapt themselves in anything that will be for the improvement and safety of the general public; and I feel sure that this innovation will be acceptable, and that the future will justify this alteration.

We are entering upon a policy that I had the honour to explain in a somewhat brief manner a few days ago, of inviting tourists to come to this country, and whilst I do not claim and will not accept the principle that we should alter our laws to suit those who may come into our country, still I think we ought as far as is possible, bring our regulations as regards traffic in conformity with those with which those who may come in here to visit us will be experienced in. We hope to get people in here if it is at all possible, and when they come in here, we want to make them feel as much at home as we can.

Let us anticipate what might happen on the West Coast of Newfoundland. I do not think there is any honourable member in this House who is bold enough to say that the time is far distant when we will develop a large tourist traffic on the west coast of Newfoundland. We hope to have good roads built up from the landing place of these tourists—Port aux Basques, to Bay of Islands, Curling, Corner Brook, up to Deer Lake; and when these roads are constructed we are going to have a considerable amount of motor traffic over these roads. You can hardly imagine a man who has driven his car down to the terminus at North Sydney, and who up to the time he leaves North Sydney has had to keep to the right, coming across the Gulf and being compelled to change all that, and keep to the left. I merely mention this as an incident, apart altogether from our part of the country over here.

I think it is very desirable that, so far as our traffic regulations are concerned, we should start to bring them into conformity with those of the neighbouring provinces.

Another point—the motor business of this country is growing more largely than any other business. We have hundreds of our young men today who have acquired expert knowledge in driving motor cars, and have done quite a lot of driving here; and it is not at all unreasonable that many of those young men may go abroad and seek employment as chauffeurs, and it would be very difficult for them if they find that the laws in the places they go to are entirely different from ours; and such a state of affairs might lead to confusion, and even to accident. All the motor cars that are here today are fitted with a right hand drive, and nearly all the cars that will be built in Canada and the United States will be fitted in that manner unless specially ordered.

Therefore, I think that there are a great many advantages to be derived from this alteration, although I am quite prepared to admit that there may be a great deal or argument against the change.

Motor cars today are no longer a luxury. It is only a very short time since there were no motor cars outside St. John's, but now, I am proud to say that all around Conception Bay, and in other parts of the country there is quite a number of cars. The Honourable member for Burin, Mr. Lake, told me the other day that he was going to have a motor car this year up in Burin. It shows that the use of the motor car is becoming more widespread every year as we go along. Therefore, it is to be desired that the laws of the country will be in conformity —one part of the country with the other.

Section nine is important, because it deals with the responsibility for accidents. It will be borne in mind that in this community we have had several serious accidents that possibly might have been avoided if there were a proper understanding on the part of the drivers and others as to what the law really meant in regard to accidents, and reckless driving, and in cases of criminal negligence. It is a very serious matter to have a man or woman in charge of a large car, or to have what might be called a juggernaught in the hands of an irresponsible party, and the Law must safeguard the rights of the people, and this Bill in no uncertain terms proclaims the penalties for those who commit violations of this Law. Section 9 states

(Reads section)

In other words it is incumbent upon the driver who meets with an accident to prove that he is innocent or not responsible for whatever happened. The Law most jealously guards the rights of the common people against those who have cars, and every protection must be given the public. This Bill also states that the driver involved in an accident must remain on the spot to render assistance. We have had some very painful instances of motorists running down people and not stopping to assist them, or to see what damage had been done. This Bill also provides that no person under the age of seventeen years shall be allowed to have charge of a car. It rarely happens that a boy or girl under that age is sufficiently responsible to be put in control of a car which may cause such occurrences or circumstances as we have unfortunately seen in this City. It further provides that no intoxicated person shall drive a motor vehicle. In Toronto if a policeman can prove the taking of one glass of liquor by a person in charge of a car, it is considered a penal offence, and rightly so. Some people may take a glass of liquor without any injurious effect, whilst it would make others drunk, and, therefore, under the Law it is punishable for a driver to have the least suspicion of drunkness on him. The Bill further provides for the fixing of License Fees and their collection by the Municipality. Half of these fees will go to the City Council in this City, and to the Municipality in such places as Grand Falls, Harbor Grace, etc., that will have that form of Government later. Provision is also made—and as part of the present policy of the Government, we want to give encouragement to outsiders to come in here—that Tourists bringing their cars with them and staying three months will pay no import duty, will have the use of the streets and highways on payment of the nominal sum, which amount $5.00 will be paid to the Customs. If the Tourist remains longer than three months, further payment can be arranged and it will be left to the Highroad's Commission and Minister of Finance to adjust the amount. Section 12 deals with the infliction of penalties. In addition to pecuniary penalties imprisonment is provided for in some cases, even for a first offence, term ranging from thirty days to six months. There is also provision for the suspension of licenses for periods of from thirty days to six months, and under certain circumstances for two year.

(Reads Section)

In other words not alone will a violater of the Law be sent to prison, but he will also be liable to a fine, and with those provisions I think the public will be practically safe from motor car disasters such as have happened in the past. Now the whole idea of the Bill is to provide facilities for motor traffic, and at the same time safeguard the rights and secure the safety of the ordinary public. Liberty without license is the tenor of the whole Bill. The License Fee is a small one, so as to induce many people to take out one after they have passed an examination for fitness to drive, that is to say, they must be thoroughly fit to be in charge of a car, and with all due respect to the present authorities, I feel the examination in the past has been too lax, and as all who have ever driven over our country roads will admit, they have met people driving motors who should never have been allowed to do so. I hope that the very strictest kind of examinations as to competency to drive will be instituted by the commission, and that nobody will be allowed to take the wheeel of a car unless he or she is qualified in every particular to do so. The Bill further suggests the reduction of fees on motor cars from the present rate on the ground that they are unduly large. I think that any person who has taken the trouble to find out will admit that our fees are far ahead of those charged in other parts of the world. The object of the reduction is to induce more people to get and use cars, as by doing so they will be giving a large amount of employment. The motor car industry is a large one here today, and it can be considerably extended. Today the car is no longer a luxury, but has become almost a necessity. In Western Canada today the farmers use their cars more than any other vehicle or implement on the farm. There are many progressive farmers residing in the surburbs near here who may be expected in the near future to provide themselves with cars in order to bring their produce to the City, and I believe they will find the motors much more economical than the keeping of horses. Now in the United States and Canada they have a regular system under which people crossing the borders pay no tax. For instance a man in Montreal can take his car and drive over to New York, or even to San Francisco, and there is no charge on the car, same applies to those crossing from the United States to Canada. It is a kind of reciprocity agreement, and it helps one as well as the other by the expenditure resulting from the exchange of traffic. Some millions of cars cross annually from the States to Quebec, and that Province today is reaping the benefit of the influx of money which it would not have without the motor cars. Even with the attraction of her liquor laws she would not have the traffic but for the car, which makes it so easy for such huge numbers of people to cross the border. And what is happening there on a large scale will happen here in a small way. Today a man can take a car and travel to Harbor Grace easily in three hours, while twenty years ago it would take a day to make the journey, and we can all remember not so long back when sitting around the Christmas fire, we used to talk of taking the nag to Topsail. But the car has annihilated space, and, therefore, this industry and inovation has come to stay, and it devolves on us to develop and use it for the benefit of the people on the whole. We cannot banish the cars, as they are here to stay, and we must see that they are used for the general good. Section 13 refers to the Criminal Provisions. As I pointed out before the time has passed when we can no longer shirk our responsibilities in connection with this traffic, and it is up to us to conduct it as it is conducted in other countries. If a person sins, he must be punished. It is our bounden duty to protect the children and the public generally, and to see that those using motor vehicles, which may prove a menace or cause serious accident, shall be punished for what may happen while they are in charge of same. (Reads Section).

Mr. Speaker, in moving the second reading I feel that there are certain people who do not see eye to eye with the Government with regard to this Bill. Still there are a very large number I am sure who welcome this change. I know that the Motor Association have placed themselves on record as being in favour of this Bill in every possible respect, and in moving the second reading I may say that tomorrow when it goes into the Committee stage if there is any Hon.

Member who desires any further information in respect to the working of this Bill, I will have much pleasure in furnishing it.

MR. GODDEN—Mr. Speaker, we on this side of the House are in favor of the general principle of this Bill, but there is one very objectionable feature, the changing of the rule of the road from the left to the right. Generally, in the past the drivers of all kinds of vehicles have been used to the rule which says keep to the left, same as it is in the Old Country, and now we are asked to make a drastic change. And why? The principal reason given is that because the people in America and Canada act differently, because their rule says keep to the right, therefore, in order to induce people to visit us we must upset our own comfortable order of things to suit them. I say, what is good enough for Great Britain is good enough for us in Newfoundland. And those of us who have visited the largest cities on both sides of the Atlantic cannot but compare very favourably the way the traffic is handled in London against that in San Francisco, Chicago, New York, Winnipeg or Montreal. In these Western cities one is struck by the great energy that is used up by the traffic cops in wildly gesticulating, shouting and blowing whistles in order to control all the traffic. It is quite the reverse in London. There, you see the traffic policemen all serene, controlling everything by a motion of the hand. Pedestrians are able to go from one side to the other without any great hurry. We don't want Canadian or American Institutions forced upon us, perhaps I should say, talked on us. The Honourable Colonial Secretary mentioned that the Motor Association were in accord with this Bill entirely. Well do I know that when this change of the rule of the road was first spoken about a few days ago that everybody was flatly against it. But what has happened? Wherever any men have got together to discuss it you will find the father of this measure with them and talking them over to his way of thinking. I think it was last Friday evening that the Motor Association met and discussed this question, and I know quite well that a number of men went to that meeting with the firm intention of protesting against this change. But, Mr. Speaker, Mr. Morine was there. Yes, it is Mr. Morine who is talking this on the country, and at that meeting of the Motor Association, the members against their better judgment feebly gave in to him, swayed by his eloquence. That is what has happened. And I venture to say this also that the Honourable Members of the Government have been talked into it by the same gentleman. Their own convictions are that the change is very unnecessary. But they have also given into Mr. Morine.

But, after all, there are only about four hundred motors in the country, and there are thousands upon thousands of horses. Now what have the truckmen and the carmen got to say about this?

The Honourable Minister of Finance presented a petition from these men. It was supported by Mr. Linegar, protesting against this change from the left to the right. But if they had held a meeting and Mr. Morine had been present he would probably have talked them into it. He could talk them blind. I wish I had the eloquence of Mr. Morine. Another reason that is given, is the tourist traffic to come. If this dream of the tourist traffic evolves and it is only a dream after all, and the honourable members must admit this. Don't try and delude the public into thinking that this traffic bill is going to be the means of bringing thousands of tourists to our shores. Canadians and Americans will not want to come here unless we have the means of housing them, and the means of getting all over the country and the different parts of the country, not necessarily by motor car. Now the very first essential of opening up any country, is a railway. This is a very sore question in Newfoundland. As the Prime Minister has said, and quite rightly, it would have been much better if moneys had been spent on roads rather than on the branch railways when you have a ramshackle of a railway such as we have. However, we are getting away from the point. What I want to say is, that this change of the traffic rules of the road is very unnecessary. If we had the tourist traffic, and if we were sure that hundreds and thousands of tourists were coming down here in the next two or three years, then it would be time enough to make any alterations in the rules of the road—when the tourists actually come here, but not until then. Why should we make ourselves uncomfortable for strangers? I protest against this change, it is utterly unnecessary and very untimely.

MR. ASHBOURNE—Mr. Speaker, the amount of discussion contingent upon this matter makes it very evident that this is a very unpopular move, so I have no hesitation in standing up and protesting against changing the present rule of the road which has been to keep to the left, and I see no cogent reason given here today which would influence me to alter my opinion on that matter. And so this afternoon, though we are very few in numbers, I think it is our duty on this side of the House to point out this to the Government and to ask them for certain consideration for our own people—the people who have always lived in Newfoundland—rather than give preference to those who come here from Canada and the United States. I notice there is no mention of any tourist's' coming from England. What about it if they come? Have they not been always used to driving to the left? Would it not be just as difficult for them to change as for the Canadians who come down here? I think, this afternoon, before it passes its second reading, this point should be given consideration, because after it passes second reading we will have to accept the principle of the Bill.

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE —It will not be necessary to accept the principle of the Bill.

MR. ASHBOURNE—In my opinion, Mr. Speaker, in answer to the Minister of Justice, I believe this is the most important part of the Bill. I believe it has some good points. I think the discussion should take place to-day, and if there is any alteration of the principle to be made in the Bill it should be made before it comes into the Committee stage.

Another point is this in connection with Chapter 8, Subsection k.

(Reads this section)

Does this mean that if the driver is on the right hand side of the road and the fire engine is coming behind him that he has to shoot across to the left hand curb. I don't see how this is going to work out. Supposing that there is a car coming towards you on your left. Then if you cut across you are going to collide with him.

HON. THE COLONIAL SECRETARY—His following on the right hand side of the road interferes with the passing of the fire engine. But everything is held up for the fire engine.

MR. ASHBOURNE — Well, Mr. Speaker the point I want to bring out is this, that any change will of necessity no doubt entail if the Bill goes into effect a great many accidents, and it is to prevent these that we think it is our duty to stand up and defend the present rule of the road. We are Britishers and I do not see why people who live here in Newfoundland and own carriages and horses have to give way to people who want to come down here and bring their cars from Canada and the United States. It is a well known fact that a horse—a very sagacious animal—learns the rule of the road probably as quickly as a man does. and it is natural to expect that the horse having been accustomed for a good many years to keeping to the left will in the future go on doing the very same thing. What shall we find? We shall find that when there are a large number of motor cars coming to town the chances are the horses and farmers will be going back to their homes; the horses will be keeping to the left hand side because it is not customary for the drivers to keep a close watch on their horses, and it is quite natural to let the horse take his own course home. I submit, Mr. Speaker, that in this matter alone you will see that the probability is that there will be a great many accidents. Yesterday we heard a petition which was sent to this House introduced by the Hon. Minister of Finance endorsed by Mr. Linegar from the Truckmen's Union. And I think that we should take warning by that. I do not see why the rights of those who have horses should be made second to those who have motor cars, particularly when it happens to be such an unpopular move. So the reason why I am protesting is because we are British, and in the mother country the rule of the road is to keep to the left. We have always looked upon that as peculiar to this country. I don't think that any of the tourists who may come down here will have any difficulty in remembering what we do in Newfoundland. They will say this is a little country and while we are down here we must remember to keep to the left. I don't' think there would be anybody who would forget that. If we are in Canada and are driving a motor there we have to drive to the right. Therefore it is only proper to argue that either the Canadian or American tourist who comes down here should be required to keep our law. There are a couple of other points that I want to speak about, but I do not want to take up the time of the House now, so I will leave them over until the Bill comes into the Committee stage.

MR. HICKMAN—Mr. Speaker it is not our intention to prolong the dis-ussion on the second reading of the Bill because in the Committee stage we will be able to take it up section by section. As far as we can see in going over the Bill we have to object to the part known as the "Rules of the Road." We think that is going to entail a great hardship on this country. All who have motor cars know very well that it is the horses more than the drivers that know the present rule of the road. And in coming from any of the outlying settlements very often the driver is asleep. When the horn blows the beast puts in to the left hand side of the road and it will do the same now. We consider that this is a hardship which would be put on the people to acommodate tourists who may come here from Canada or Ameria, with their motor cars. It is even problematical whether they will come here or not, and they will be so few in numbers in the next few years that there is no necessity at the present time to put that over on the owners of horses particularly in this city. Now this is purely a Canadian law and every single law that has been put through this House of Assembly since this present Government came into power has been a Canadian law from start to finish. The fact is that we are heading into onfederation as fast as we can. And this Government has no other objet in bringing this law into force than the object of which I have now spoken. In England the left is the side on which the people drive. Why is this law good enough for England and not good enough for us. Is it not good enough to follow the rules of the Mother Country instead of Canada.

As to the principle of the Bill, we agree with the regulation of traffic, with the regulation of the motor cars, and the speed of motor cars, and everything else that is in the Bill in the interest of the city and country and which calls for safety.

(Reads No. 9. The prohibition of acidents.)

Well, I think the rule of the road should be headed "how to make accidents" beause that is what is going to happen. We are going to have many acidents. This rule is not necessary at the present time.

Now as I said before this Bill will be in the Committee stage tomorrow, and we will have an opportunity to go through it in part. But we object to the part in reference to the rules of the road, and we hope that the Government when it comes into the Committee stage will see their way clear to change this. If not we will be forced to bring in an amendment in reference to the Bill that refers to the rule of the road.

MR. WARREN—Mr. Speaker, from listening to the recent debate in this House I am wondering how many members know the rules of the road of this House. We have a rule which says that in the seond reading you discuss the principle of the Bill and the principle only. Another says that as far as the House is conerned that when the Bill is in the Committee stage the members are to go into detail on it. A few days ago the Prime Minister introduced a Bill providing for the women to have a vote. There was dead silence in the second reading, but in the Committee stage the members were falling over one another. Today there is a Bill dealing with the matter of traffic, and from the statements of the Members one would gather that as they are in accordane with the principle of the Bill it must immediately be drafted into the Committee stage and discussed.

I only rise to pass a few remarks on one or two points. The principle which has been raised by Mr. Ashbourne has been drawn to my attention by a gentleman outside the House, and in order that when we get get into the Committee stage there may be no delay and everything may be satisfactory I am going to put a proposition to the Hon. the Colonial Secretary.

Now does it make any difference how the fire apparatus is approaching. Supposing the apparatus is coming towards me. I have to cut across in front of it, and at the same time the man on the left is taking the place that I left. There must be something wrong with that section. As soon as I hear the apparatus I have got to clear from one side to the other. I am just bringing this matter up now so that we can save time when we get into the Committee stage.

There is one other point that I would like to see in this Bill. There are more accidents and there are likely to be more accidents caused by want of lights than by anything else. On this account in order to make traffic as safe as possible there ought to be a clause that every wheeled vehicle ought to carry a lamp. if that is not done you are leaving open an avenue to accidents which can certainly be closed. I think the opportunity should be availed of, so that not only motor cars but all wheeled vehicles should carry lights by night.

Pursuant to order and on motion of Hon. the Colonial Secretary, the Bill entitled "An Act to Regulate Travel on Highways and the Speed, Operation and Load of Vehicles thereon" was read a seond time, and it was ordered that the said Bill be referred to a Committee of the Whole House on tomorrow.

Second reading of Bill entitled "An Act to amend Chap. 52 of Bill entitled 'Of Egress from Churches, Theatres and Buildings.' "

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE —Mr. Speaker, in moving the second reading of this bill, lest some of the members might be tempted to make enquiry, I may say that it is not a copy of any Ontario Act, but is made up from legislation on the other side of the water. It is an amendment to the act with regard to buildings where the public is accustomed to accumulate in any numbers. For some time there has been a feeling here that it is nothing else but the kindness of providence that has prevented tragedies occurring in St. John's. There has been a total disregard of all ideas of passage egress. Under the present act no provision is made with regard to the keeping of the aisles and passage ways inside buildings clear. Only the matter of what might be termed "outside" arrangements are placed under control. It is now proposed to take authority for keeping the inside aisles free of obstruction.

MR. HIBBS—Mr. Speaker, does the present law provide for the opening of doors outwards?

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Mr. Speaker, yes. I might explain for the information of the hon. member that this act provides for the internal order in buildings. The act as it now stands provides for the excess.

HON. THE LEADER OF THE OPPOSITION — Mr. Speaker, without having read the bill it seems to me as far as I can see that it commends itself to the House, as it is a means of safeguarding the public, and there is as far as I know no objection to it from this side of the House. It is very refreshing to handle a bill of local construction, and I can assure you that when we see a bill which contains four or five pages we immediately come to the conclusion that it has been imported. I am glad to hear from the Minister of Justice that it is a local affair.

Pursuant to order and on motion of Hon. the Minister of Justice, the Bill entitled "An Act to Amend Chapter 52 of the Consolidated Statutes (Third Series) entitled 'Of Egress from Churches, Theatres and other Buildings," was read a second time, and it was ordered that the said Bill be referred to a Committee of the Whole House on tomorrow.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER— Mr. Speaker, in rising to move the adjournment of the House I want to lay on the table of the House the copy of Mr. Crandle's report on the dock, and also that of Col. Mitchell, which has been printed. Copies of the report will be handed out to every member of the House, and they can consider it before the matter is discussed. I am going to suggest, Mr. Speaker, that we adjourn the House until Monday. The Government has to meet a deputation from Bell Island and we have got to consider some legislation in connection with the dock, and there are several matters which require our attention before we can bring them in; consequently I would like to move that the House at its rising, do adjourn until Monday.

It was moved and seconded that when the House rises, it adjourn until Monday afternoon next, 16th inst, at three of the clock.

The House then adjourned accordingly.

MONDAY, March 16th.

The House met at three of the clock in the afternoon, pursuant to adjournment.

MR.| WARREN—Mr. Speaker, I rise, Sir, on the matter of the privileges of this House. I desire to draw your attention to the speech made in another place which has been printed under the title of the official synopsis, and I would like to ask your ruling as to whether the members of this House are at liberty to reply to that speech or to discuss it in debate.

MR. SPEAKER—It is a well founded principle of parliamentary practice that reference in one House should not be made to the debates or proceedings in the other nor can any recriminatory reference be made to members of the other House.

MR. WARREN—Mr. Speaker, in that case I will confine my remarks to the privileges of this House. I asked for a ruling from you on this matter although I was perfectly aware as to what the ruling would be. Now in this speech made in the Upper House by the Leader of the Government on the highways bill the hon. gentleman referred deliberately to debates which had taken place in another place. Now as far as I am concerned it means nothing to me. I am an independent member of this House and I am anxious that the dignity of this House should be kept up. Now there are references in this speech, I think,, that the Hon. members of this House cannot possibly overlook. Now May lays it down:—

Reads.

Now of course the case is different here because we have our official report of the speeches printed here for publication. The other authority says:—

Reads.

Now we can deal with anything which comes up in the Upper House, but I rise to point this out to you and to the gentleman who is not only the Leader of the Government but also the Leader of this House, that the debates which have taken place in this House have been repeated in another place, and that it will only lead to acrimony and ill-feeling. Now there is another point to be considered. When one reads that speech one feels that the practice should be peremptorily stopped. Rule 101 and 102 provide that no member shall use offensive or disrespectful words in reference to another in the course of debate, and that no member of one House shall use offensive words in respect to any other member of another House. Now, Sir, I did not debate the High Ways Bill, and I am not feeling sore about it in any way. But I point the matter out to you with the idea of stopping it. In reference to the speech in the Upper House the learned Leader of the Government in the Upper House referred to certain members as Parish politicians and Jeremiahs. I do not know what the latter reference may be. But, Mr. Speaker, if any member of this House were to refer to me as a Parish politician I would ask you, Sir, to make him withdraw, because I think that it would be an offensive epithet and consequently a breach of rule 101 of this House.

MR. SCAMMELL—Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present a petition from the people of La Scie. This petition was handed me by the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, and I have not had sufficient time to acquaint myself with the outline of the petition, but from the heading of the petition it can be seen to what it refers. The petition asks for a grant for the repair of the public wharf. They ask for a sum of money to the amount of $2500.00. The petitioners point out that the wharf is very important, not only to the people of La Scie, but to Brent's Cove, Hr. Round and Horse Island as well. There is very little more to be said on this matter just now, but that I hope that the Minister of Marine and Fisheries will give the matter his most favourable attention and that he will do his best to see that the petitioners get what they are asking for.

MR. POWER—Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present a petition from the people of Little River asking for a grant of five hundred dollars for the repair of a bridge. I may point out that this bridge is the connection by which the people of this vicinity get their produce to the station, and it is very necessary to have the bridge repaired. I ask to have the petition referred to the department to which it relates.

HON. MR. SULLIVAN—Mr. Speaker, I beg to present a petition from the people of Harbour Buffett. This petition is in line with many other petitions which have been presented from points along the South Coast. It is in connection with the coastal service which has been very unsatisfactory. It is in connection with the calling of the steamer Argyle. I ask that it be referred to the Railway Department. I also beg leave to present a petition from the people of Chambers Island on the same subject.

Mr. Ashbourne gave notice of question.

Mr. Scammell gave notice of two questions.

Mr. Grimes gave notice of two questions.

(1) MR. HALFYARD asked Hon. the Minister of Finance and Customs to lay on the Table of the House a copy of the Report of the Comptroller and Auditor General, under Section 33 (b) of the Audit Act, to cover the period extending from June 1st, 1924, to January 31st, 1925. If this Report is not in the hands of the Minister of Finance, why not, as last year the Report up to May 31st for the current fiscal year was furnished by the Auditor General for the information of the Legislature.

HON. THE MINISTER OF FINANCE—Mr. Speaker, in reply to the Hon. member I may say that the Auditor General's report for the six months mentioned is not yet in my possession.

MR. SCAMMELL — Mr. Speaker, might I ask that in the absence of the Hon. member that the question might be left on the Order Paper?

HON. THE MINISTER OF FINANCE—Mr. Speaker, that is the reply to that question, and it is that the Auditor General's report is not yet in my hands.

(2) MR. SCAMMELL asked Hon., the Prime Minister if he has recently received a communication from the Bay of Islands Board of Trade anent the matter of Parcel Post between Canada and Newfoundland, and if so, to ask if the Government has as yet considered the communication, and if so, what action the Government proposes to take in the matter.

HON. PRIME MINISTER—In tabling the reply to this question, I would also like to say, Mr. Speaker, that the minister reports that a number of the officials in question are not collecting enough to pay half their salaries and the Government is considering whether some of them will not have to be cut out.

(3) MR. PUDDESTER asked the Minister of Marine and Fisheries to Table a statement of allocations (special or otherwise) made to the District of Bay de Verde between July 1st and October 31st, 1919. State in each case who authorized the allocations, for what purpose they were made and to Table returns received in each instance; also Table original requests received for the expenditure.

Answer tabled.

MINISTER OF MARINE & FISHERIES—I also beg leave to present the answer to question number three on the order paper of March 11th asked by the Honourable the Leader of the Opposition.

(4) MR. PUDDDESTER asked the Minister of Public Works to table statements showing allocations (special or otherwise) made by his department to the District of Bay de Verde between July 1st and October 31st, 1919. State on whose authority these allocations were made and furnish copy of returns received in each case.

Answer tabled.

MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS—I also beg leave to table the answer to question number four on the order paper of March 11th, asked by Mr. Hickman.

Mr. Warren gave notice of question.

Mr. Speaker informed the House that he had received a message from the Legislative Council acquainting the House of Assembly, that they had passed the Bill sent up entitled "An Act Further to Amend the Act 61, Victoria, Cap. 47, entitled 'An Act relating to the Constitution of the Supreme Court, and the Acts in Amendment thereof,'" with some amendments, in which they request the concurrence of the House of Assembly.

On motion the said Amendments were read a first time, and it was ordered that they be read a second time on tomorrow.

Pursuant to order, and on motion of Hon. the Minister of Justice, the House resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole to consider the Bill entitled "An Act relating to Firearms, and other weapons."

Mr. Speaker left the Chair.

Mr. Puddester took the Chair of Committee.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Mr. Chairman, as I promised honourable members at the last meeting of the House on this Bill, and as the honourable members who have read the Bill have probably observed, the Bill relates entirely to small arms; and the objections raised at the preliminary stages have been removed.

One other point—as regards the permits—the permits are given in St. John's by the Inspector General, and in the outports by the magistrate.

MR. WARREN—Mr. Chairman, I do not oppose this Bill, but I had a little to say about it before the committee previously. I said then that the Bill was not a copy of the English Act. I have since looked up the English Acts, and I wish to say now that there is no act like this in England. This Act goes so far as to say that no man shall keep a pistol or revolver in his house without a permit; and I can find no English Act with such a provision. The last English Act is the Act of 1870, which was an Excise Act for the creation of a duty on revolvers, guns, and so on. However, if the Government or the Inspector General thinks that it is going to stop any more murders, I have no objection to it.

While I am on my feet I would like to point out that while section three provides that a magistrate may grant a permit, section three (a) goes on to say that "A firearm certificate shall not be granted to a person whom the Inspector General of Constabulary has reason to believe to be a person . . ." Should not that power also be given to the magistrate.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—That can be altered.

MINISTER OF MARINE & FISHERIES—Mr. Chairman, I would like to know if this Bill refers to all kinds of guns. I notice that it does not refer to shot guns?

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—It does not include shot guns. The Act does not apply to them. That was one of the objects of making the amendments.

MR. BROWNE—Might I point out in connection with section two that its provisions are practically repeated in section seven. Section 2 reads . . . . . And then section seven says . . . . . I submit that section 2 is unnecessary.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Section 7 is the penalty clause.

MR. BROWNE—It recites exactly what is in section 2.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Section 2 is just a general provision. and section 7 refers to the particular articles.

MR. BROWNE—I just thought that I would call the matter to the notice of the honourable minister.

MR. CASHIN—Mr. Chairman, having one of these weapons myself which I had in the war, I wonder if I have to hand it in now, or otherwise take out a certificate.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Take out a certificate.

MR. CASHIN—Is it absolutely necessary to take out a certificate?

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Yes.

MR. CASHIN—Alright—the Inspector General can send up for it when he likes.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—I think section 9 will cover your case.

Mr. Speaker resumed the Chair.

The Chairman from the Committee reported that they had considered the matter to them referred, and had passed the said Bill with an amendment.

On motion this Report was received and adopted, and it was ordered that the said Bill be read a third time on tomorrow.

Pursuant to order and on motion of Hon. the Minister of Justice, the House resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole to consider the Bill entitled "An Act to Amend Chapter 52 of the Consolidated Statutes (Third Series) entitled 'Of Egress from Churches, Theatres and other Buildings.'"

Mr. Speaker left the Chair.

Mr. Puddester took the Chair of Committee.

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Mr. Chairman, in moving the second reading of this Bill I explained briefly that the effect of this Bill is to provide internal control in theatres, etc. At present the only control is as to ingress, while there is no control over aisles, passageways, etc. This measure gives the City Engineer—in the city,—and the Government Engineer—outside the city—power to arrange as to proper exits; and also, what is more important, power to the Constabulary to see that the aisles are kept clear. As all have noticed the aisles of buildings here are continually crowded and there is no power to clear them. The second section deals with the increasing of penalties and empowers the Magistrate to deal with the same. Subsection 2 gives the Inspector-General power while a performance is on to say whether an aisle is overcrowded or not. This will depend to some extent on the exercise of ordinary discretion on the part of the police officer. In other words those conducting theatres, etc., will in future not be able to indiscriminately sell tickets for seats in the aisles. Such seats are not sold anywhere outside this country, and the matter here is a public scandal. The real idea of this section is to prevent the blocking of aisles which is highly dangerous and improper. The selling of tickets for such seats will of course be governed by the circumstances and the discretion of those in charge as under certain conditions it may be allowed. The idea is to get some control over putting people in aisles and to give the police power to say when this shall be done. There is a difference between say a wrestling match and a gathering of a sacred character, and the matter of seating will be to some extent covered by conditions.

MR. DUFF—Regarding assemblies outside St. John's', as referred to in section one of the Bill, I would like to ask how are the Government Engineer and the Inspector General of Constabularly going to control a packed meeting, for instance at Carbonear?

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—As a matter of fact you have in Carbonear the most efficient police force for its size than in any other part of the Island.

MR. HICKMAN—Is there anything to be laid down as to what the width of aisles are to be?

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—No. The position is, that the whole matter is in the hands of the Municipal Council. For all buildings plans are supposed to be first submitted to the Council, and the State today has no control whatever over it, and no right of prescribing the building regulations. Under the old Act section 4, which is not repealed, says: (Quotes from Act). So that we have not disturbed that section. That is left entirely in the hands of the Council.

MR. GRIMES—Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the honourable Minister in charge of the Bill a question with reference to sub-section (4). Supposing a party hire a hall and find that they got more people coming to the hall than they have seats for, and they then go outside and borrow chairs or seats on the spur of the moment and the manager or owner of the hall may not know anything about it, who is responsible in that case?

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE—I take it that the occupier at the time is responsible. It is a criminal offence and you can only proceed against the person who has guilty knowledge of it. If a theatre is hired to me for a night and I overcrowd it without the knowledge of the owner or manager, surely I am the person to be proceeded against. The person hiring a hall is the occupier for the night.

HON. THE COLONIAL SECRETARY—Mr. Chairman, may I ask the honourable Minister in charge of this Bill, if there is any provision under any Act whereby this inspection can be carried out at hotels and boarding houses and such like where overcrowding might occur? I have in mind some places in St. John's where overcrowding often happens. I would like to know if there is any machinery in existence in relation to this matter, and, if there is not, I would suggest that something be done in the way of making this necessary as early as possible.

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Speaking from recollection and subject to correction, I think that provision will be found in the so-called Municipal Council Charter; but there is no other law in connection with this thing. I think the provision in the Charter is that the Council may make regulations as to the number of persons occupying buildings, and I am sending now for a copy of the Act. I might say that I think the provision is that so many cubic inches is fixed as a maximum for any one person, as certain honourable members now in the House will remember. I think also it will be found that the point raised by the honourable Colonial Secretary is covered under the Municipal Council Act.

Mr. Chairman, I would like to say in replying to the Colonial Secretary that under the Municipal Act of 1921, under that part of the Act concerning the regulations with regard to the building of houses and with regard to the power the Council may have concerning plans and specifications the following will probably remove the difficulty. Section 355. Page 139.

(Reads this Section)

There are a number of other regulations along these lines.

COLONIAL SECRETARY—But how many people can there be put in the bedrooms? That is the point.

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Here it is now. (Reads Section 364).

Mr. Speaker resumed the Chair.

The Chairman from the Committee reported that they had considered the matter to them referred and had passed the said Bill without amendment.

On motion this Report was received and adopted, and it was ordered that the said Bill be read a third time on to-morrow.

Pursuant to order and on motion of Hon. the Minister of Finance and Customs, the Bill entitled "An Act to Amend the Act 13 George V. Chapter XXVI., respecting a Tax upon Certain Incomes" was read a second time and it was ordered that the said Bill be referred to a Committe of the Whole House on tomorrow.

Second reading of Bill respecting Banks and Banking.

HON. THE MINISTER OF FINANCE—Mr. Speaker, it is understood that this Bill is simply to remove the taxes in connection with the banks. By the Act. sec. 7 Chapter 209 of the Consolidated Statutes the tax on the banks was as follows:—$5,000 on the Bank of Montreal, $3,000 on the Bank of Nova Scotia and $2,000 on the Royal. This tax is just taken off, that is all.

(Reads the section of the Act.)

MR. HICKMAN—What is the reason for repealing this section?

HON. THE MINISTER OF FINANCE—It is the policy of the Government to reduce the taxation on the banks which the Government decided has been altogether too heavy. We want to give the banks an opportunity to do business and this is one of the taxes that was taken off. This is not the whole tax. There are two taxes. One is a fixed tax. The other tax is a half per cent. of whatever is on deposit.

HON. PRIME MINISTER—The idea is to take off the first tax on the banks, a tax which in the opinion of the Government is most unjust. There is no reason, in our opinion, for taxing the Bank of Montreal five thousand dollars and keeping it on for all time, because they might be doing less business now. Sir Robert Bond put this tax on because of the business the banks were doing at that time. Sir Richard Squires' Government put a further tax of one half per cent. on all deposits in the banks. We are proposing to take off this first tax and amend the other tax, so that they may pay on their deposits and on their loan business, thus making the tax more equitable, and falling on all the banks alike. The estimated difference is about 40 per cent. reduction on what is now being collected. The tax will bring in about 127 thousand dollars altogether. Under the new tax the Bank of Montreal will pay thirty thousand dollars a year as against fifty-five thousand today. The tax now is out of all proportion to that on any other business done in Newfoundland, and we think that it is an unfair tax to any concern. We look upon the business of the banks as we look upon that of anybody else doing business in Newfoundland, and that is the reason that we think the banks should be treated as any other kind of commercial enterprise in Newfoundland.

HON. THE COLONIAL SECRETARY—Mr. Speaker, in connection with this matter I must say that as the Government are taking this magnanimous view of the banking system, they ought also bring home to the banks the fact that the rate of discount should be made as uniform as possible. I think there is a great deal of discrimination going on as regards the discount charged the outport people, and I think the Government should try and bring about a more equitable arrangement in regard to the people the banks are dealing with. It must be a very great hardship on some of the people who are doing business in the outports who have to pay a high rate of discount, particularly where credits have to be obtained at times for a fairly long period. We appreciate the fact that some of the banks have sustained much serious loss in this country in the past few years, and but for their stability greater loss might have been experienced by business people, but I feel sure that if the banks were to take a more liberal view, particularly in regard to their dealing with outport business people, things would be very much better and a very much better feeling would exist. I hope, therefore, that with this reduction of taxation the people will also receive more favorable consideration from the banks than they are getting today.

HON. THE LEADER OF THE OPPOSITION—Mr. Speaker, this is a very delicate subject. I know that you can borrow money from the banks if you have the collateral to offer and that you can get it for six per cent. The Prime Minister informs us that the Bank of Montreal had been paying fifty-five thousand dollars and now will probably be paying about thirty thousand dollars. I wonder if the Prime Minister can tell how the other banks will stand in this matter. I think that the Minister of Finance should have come in here prepared to give the information that would be needed in this matter. It is an important bill and one on which we would like to have some information if the Prime Minister would give it.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—Mr. Speaker, I cannot tell the Hon. Leader of the Opposition what the other banks would pay. But it will not effect all the banks in the same way. There are one or two banks that have very little deposit business and are doing a great deal of lending business, and again there are others that are doing very little lending but have considerable deposits. It can be seen that the banks will be taxed more proportionately under the new regulations. Under the present system there is one bank I know that has very little money on deposit, but is lending a lot of money and this bank is not paying very much in taxes. We think that they should pay taxes according to the amount of business they do whether it is lending money or keeping it on deposit. They will pay taxes on their entire turn over. When the other bill comes up it will be seen that provision has been made to include many of the Trust Companies which have money on deposit. These trust companies never paid taxes although they have money on deposit just as the banks have. It is now proposed to tax these institutions. I might point out while I am on my feet that the present tax is one half of one per cent. The Prime Minister of the day when the tax was imposed promised the banks that the tax would not be over one quarter of one per cent. On the last day of the session of the House a bill was rushed through putting on a tax of one half per cent., and when the Premier was asked why he had done it he said that he needed the money. That looks very much like holding a pistol to a man's head because he is rich. The tax which the banks had to pay was suddenly increased a thousand per cent. When that enormous increase was put in force the Bank of Montreal which was paying five thousand dollars had to pay fifty five thousand without even a by-your-leave, and I think that the banks would almost have been justified in putting up the rate of interest to their customers. What would have would have had to pay for it, because would have to pay for it, because we we cannot go on without these institutions for the accommodation and the handling of our money. We could not get money on better terms in any other part of the world. We have four of the best institutions in Canada doing business in this country. They do business in the same way here as they do in any other part of the world. We have these banking institutions in this country and we should give them reasonable taxation. I think in the cases of the Bank of Montreal and the Bank of Nova Scotia that they will have to pay taxes amounting to about thirty thousand dollars and when they pay this amount I think that they will be contributing their share of the taxes of this country.

HON. THE MINISTER OF FINANCE—Mr. Speaker, for the information of the Hon. the Leader of the Opposition I may say that I will have the facts which he desires here tomorrow. I may say with regard to the trust companies that they will have to pay the sum of three sixteenths of one per cent.

Reads.

I may say that it will be very difficult to state what the other banks will have to pay in taxes until we have had some experience of the working of the bill. At the present time we can only estimate what the amount will be.

Pursuant to order and on motion of Hon. the Minister of Finance and Customs the Bill entitled "An Act to Amend Chapter 209 of the Consolidated Statutes)3rd Series) entitled 'Of Banks and Banking' " was read a second time, and it was ordered that the said Bill be referred to a Committee of the Whole House on tomorrow.

Second reading of Bill entitled "An Act to amend the Terra Nova Sulphite Company Act, 1922."

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Mr. Speaker, instead of moving the second reading of this bill, I ask that the bill be distributed so that the members of the House will have an opportunity to peruse it, and we will have the second sitting at the will have the second sitting at the next sitting of the House. The main object as will be seen by the bill is the handling of the matter in connection with the works out at Alexander Bay. However we will go into the matter more completely at the Committee Stage.

MR. SPEAKER—The Hon. Introducer of this bill wishes me to inform the House of the fact that the House may take this as a public or a private bill. The House may consider the advisability of referring this matter to a select committee to see whether the rules in connection with the introduction of this bill have been complied with.

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Mr. Speaker, for the information of the House I may say that I do not care whether this bill goes through the House or not. I am not interested in it one way or the other.

Mr. Speaker appointed a Select Committee consisting of Hon. the Minister of Justice, Hon. Mr. Bradley, Mr. Browne, Mr. Hickman, Mr. Warren, to enquire into and report upon the Bill "An Act to Amend the Terra Nova Sulphite Act 1922" in its relation to the Rules of the House.

MR. HALFYARD—Mr. Speaker, speaking to a motion for adjournment, I beg to refer to question one on the order paper. I did not happen to be in the House when this matter came up, and I should like to know the reply of the Hon. Minister.

HON. THE MINISTER OF FINANCE—Mr. Speaker, I may say for the information of the hon. member that the Auditor General's report is not yet in my hands.

MR. HALFYARD—Mr. Speaker, I am sure that if we are to intelligently discuss the financial position of the colony in connection with the expenditure of moneys since June past we should have this report of the money which has been spent under Section 33 (b) of the Audit Act.

HON. THE MINISTER OF FINANCE—I can assure the Hon. member that there will be no hesitation in tabling the report of the Auditor General. I can have it here in forty-eight hours.

MR. HALFYARD — Mr. Speaker, there is another matter which I wish to refer to. It is a matter of great importance and I take the opportunity to bring this matter before the attention of the Prime Minister and the Government. It is in connection with the bridges of the District of Trinity. These bridges are in a very bad condition. The condition has been outstanding for a long time now and in some cases since last fall. In some cases these bridges were in such a condition that the rebuilding was about to be undertaken about eighteen months ago, but this work had to be stopped because there was not the necessary money, and if the the Government intends to do anything in the matter they should act immediately. If the Government undertook the matter now it may be possible to get the timber for the bridges in some sections of the district. If however the Government does not undertake the matter at once it will be necessary to go out of the district to get the timber for these bridges, if repairs are undertaken during the summer.

I do not want to speak of this for political reasons, but I am compelled to bring the matter to the attention of the Government. No doubt there were pressing necessities in the Government districts which have been met—certainly they have, but so far as Trinity District was concerned, we could not get any money. To give you an instance, the Public Works Department last year sent about thirty thousand dollars to the District of Bonavista, whereas the money that went out of the Department of Public Works for all purposes to the district of Trinity was only four thousand dollars.

HIS HONOUR THE SPEAKER—I do not wish to interrupt the honourable member, but I fear that this discussion is out of order.

MR. HALFYARD—I regret it very much, as this is a very important matter.

HIS HONOUR THE SPEAKER—I can quite conceive that.

MR. HALFYARD—I would like the Government to give the matter their consideration. If they have any moneys to spend in Trinity District they should start to do so immediately; and whether they will confer with the elected representatives of the district to get their opinion as to how and where the money should be spent, that is a matter for the Government.

MR. SCAMMELL—Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the Prime Minister if the Government is going to bring in the Legislation in connection with the bounty for repairing schooners, to which reference was made in the Speech from the Throne?

HON. PRIME MINISTER — Mr. Speaker, I would like to say that I have been in communication daily with the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, who proposed to have that Bill here today. It is certainly in the course of preparation, and I do not expect that it will be later than Wednesday in coming in for the first reading.

The remaining Orders of the Day were deferred.

It was moved and seconded that when the House rises, it adjourn until Wednesday afternoon at three of the clock.

The House then adjourned accordingly.

WEDNESDAY, March 18th, 1925.

The House met at three of the clock in the afternoon, pursuant to adjournment.

PRESENTING PETITIONS:

MR. HALFYARD—Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present a petition from the electors of Heart's Desire on the subject of a road, or repairs to a road leading from Heart's Desire to Heart's Delight. The petitioners set out that the road is in an impassable condition, especially for horses and waggons. The petition is signed by practically all the electors of Heart's Desire, and also by the Rev. Mr. Broughton, the Methodist Clergyman at Heart's Content. The people from Heart's Delight and Heart's Content have occasion to drive over that road, especially the clergymen and doctors, and they find it difficult to get over parts of it. I know from my own experience as I went over it last Spring, that it is in a very poor condition, and if the Government can find money to spend on roads, attention should be given to this section of the district of Trinity, right away. I beg to give this petition my hearty support, and ask that it be referred to the department to which it relates.

MR. RANDELL—I beg to support this petition.

GIVING NOTICE OF MOTION AND QUESTION.

Mr. Ashbourne gave notice of question.

NOTICE OF QUESTION:

MR. ASHBOURNE asked Hon. the Prime Minister to lay on the Table of the House a statement showing the yearly gross earnings of the Dry Dock since the Government took control.

(Reply Tabled).

MR. ASHBOURNE asked Hon. the Prime Minister to lay upon the Table of the House a statement showing the number of railway ties contracted for during the past winter, the average price, from whose land ties have been cut and whether any stumpage has been or will be paid.

(Reply Tabled).

MR. GRIMES asked Hon. the Premier if it is the intention of the Government to establish competitive examination in connection with appointments to the Civil Service.

HON. PRIME MINISTER—In reply to question No. 5, I beg to say that the Government has not given any consideration at present to competitive examinations in connection with appointments to the Civil Service.

SECOND READING OF COUNCIL'S AMENDMENTS TO SUPREME COURT BILL.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Mr. Speaker, I would like to explain to the House that these amendments are nothing more than what might practically be called a typographical error. The title of the Bill is altered, but the substance of the Bill is not changed. It is a purely technical alteration, which does not affect the Bill.

Pursuant to order, and on motion of Hon. the Minister of Justice, the Amendments made by the Legislative Council in and upon the Bill sent up entitled "An Act Further to Amend the Act 61 Victoria, Cap. 47 entitled 'An Act Relating to the Constitution of the Supreme Court" and the Acts in amendment thereof, were read a second time, and agreeed to, and it was ordered that a message be sent to the Legislative Council acquainting that body that the said amendments had been agreed to without amendment.

Pursuant to order and on motion of Hon. the Minister of Justice, the Bill entitled "An Act Relating to Fire-arms" was read a third time, and passed, and it was ordered that the said Bill be engrossed, being entitled as above and that it be sent to the Legislative Council with a message requesting the concurrence of that body in its provisions.

Pursuant to order and on motion of Hon. the Minister of Justice, the Bill entitled "An Act to Amend Chapter 52 of the Consolidated Statutes (Third Series) entitled 'Of Egress from Churches, Theatres and other Buildings" was read a third time, and passed, and it was ordered that the said Bill be engrossed, being entitled as above, and it be sent to the Legislative Council with a message requesting the concurrence of that body in its provisions.

Pursuant to order and on Motion of Hon. the Minister of Finance and Customs, the House resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole to consider the Bill entitled "An Act to Amend Chapter 209 of the Consolidated Statues (Third Series) entitled 'Of Banks and Banking.'"

Mr. Speaker left the Chair.

Mr. Puddister took the Chair of Committee.

HON. MINISTER OF FINANCE—Mr. Chairman, the Hon. Leader of the Opposition last Monday, asked me what we estimated we would get from the Banks under the new Act which is proposed. It is almost impossible to estimate it, but the total we received from the Banks last year was $127,-000.00. This year we anticipate at least $75,000 to $85,000 under the new Bill.

HON. LEADER OF THE OPPOSITION—I hope the Banks will appreciate the generosity of the Government.

Mr. Speaker resumed the Chair.

The Chairman from the Committee reported that they had considered the matter to them referred, and had passed the said Bill without amendment.

On motion this Report was received and adopted, and it was ordered that the Bill be read a third time on to-morrow.

HON. MINISTER OF FINANCE—I give notice that on to-morrow I will ask leave to move that Supply be granted to His Majesty.

MR. SCAMMELL—Gave notice of question.

HON. THE MINISTER OF CUSTOMS—I beg to table the report of the Auditor-General for January-June 1924.

MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES—I give notice that I will on to-morrow introduce a Bill respecting repairs to ships.

MR. SCAMMELL—I submit Mr. Speaker that as this is a matter of the greatest importance to the country we should have a definite pronouncement on it from the Government. I do not know what the Bill proposes but I think the ships will have to be hauled up for repairs.

HON THE SPEAKER—I have no desire to interrupt the discussion but I fear the hon. member is out of order.

The remaining Order of the Day were deferred.

It was moved and seconded that when the House rises, it adjourn until Friday afternoon next at three of the clock.

The House then adjourned accordingly.

FRIDAY, March 20th, 1925.

The House met at three of the clock in the afternoon, pursuant to adjournment.

PRESENTING PETITIONS.

MR. WARREN—Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present a petition from the residents of Hr. Breton, Jersey Hr., Miller's Passage, Little Bay West and other places in the vicinity of Jersey Harbor, asking for an improved ferry service between Jersey Harbor and Hr. Breton. It is generally known that there are few, if any, roads in this section and Jersey Harbor is the centre to which the people doing business with Harbor Breton come to before crossing to Harbor Breton. There is only a motor dory in which to cross and as this has to accommodate some 2000 people during the year, it can be seen the accommodation is attended with much risk, and hardship as the result of the weather. Formerly the service was supplied by a dory which was rowed, or sailed when the wind allowed. This was replaced by a motor dory, but even this is not sufficient to meet the demands, and I trust the Minister of Public Works will see that the petition receives the consideration which it merits and that a better boat is placed on the service.

MR. LAKE—Mr. Speaker, I beg to support the petition presented by the honourable member for Fortune Bay. I know the need of the improved service to which he refers as I have occasion to travel in this section in summer time on business. The present service is obsolete and a source of danger to travellers, and I have much pleasure in supporting the prayer of the petition.

MR. BROWN—Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present a petition from the residents of Botwood and vicinity, praying that the road from Botwood to Grand Falls be repaired. This road is an important one, and at present is very badly in need of repairs. I know the condition of this road as I have travelled over it often. There is a lot of motor and other traffic over it and it is unsafe for travel. The petition asks that the work be started as quickly as possible. With so many people travelling over this road, if the repairs are not made there is likely to be a serious accident very soon. The petition is signed by many business people in the vicinity, and I ask that it be given every consideration and referred to the department to which it relates.

MR. GRIMES—I have much pleasure, Mr. Speaker, in supporting the prayer of the petition presented by the honourable member for Twillingate, Mr. Brown. I have travelled over the road in question, and I know that it is in very poor condition. The interest of the people in the vicinity of this road is shown by the large numbers who have signed the petition, and I hope it will receive every consideration and that it's prayer will be granted.

MR. ASHBOURNE—I also wish to support this petition, Mr. Speaker. I hope the matter will be taken up and every consideration given it, as this road is widely used and connects the important sections of Botwood and Grand Falls.

MR. WARREN—Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present another petition which is closely related to the one I have already put forward, and in doing so I would wish to thank the honourable member for Burin for the support given me. This one is from the residents of Miller's Passage, and asks for a road from Miller's Passage to Jersey Harbor. The present road of nine miles is only called a road for the sake of euphiny. It is in bad repair, there are no bridges, and a new road would be of great advantage to the people. I recommend consideration of this to the Government when they come to map out the new roads under their Highways policy. This part of the Bay is a great fishing resort and a road is absolutely necessary, and I will take the matter up with the Minister of Public Works and ask him if he cannot help me in this also.

HON. THE MINISTER OF POSTS AND TELEGRAPHS—Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present a petition from the inhabitants of North Arm, Holyrood, District of Harbor Main, praying that the sum of $300 be allocated for general repairs to the public wharf there. This wharf is a great benefit not only to the residents of North Arm, but to those of adjoining settlements who come there during the caplin school to obtain caplin for bait and fertilizer. It is well known to the residents of Conception Bay, and in fact all around the coast that caplin is a valuable fertilizer for use by the fishermen-farmers. No matter what we do in our future policy we cannot neglect our wharves and roads which enable our fishermen to carry on their avocation, and to make a living. I think it will be many years before the fishermen will be independent of caplin fertilizer, though we may establish lime-kilns for the production of fertilizer for the land. I am not a firm believer in the constant aplication of caplin as a fertilizer, and I think we should get it from some other source. However, we must keep up our roads and wharves notwithstanding that we all believe in the present Government's Highways policy.

MR. CAHILL—Mr. Speaker, I beg to go on record in support of the petition presented by my honourable colleague.

HON. MINISTER OF POSTS AND TELEGRAPHS—Mr. Speaker, I ask leave to present a petition from the inhabitants of Chappel's Cove, in the District of Harbor Main, praying that a sum of money be granted for the opening up of a canal between the salt waters of the Harbor and a very large pond, which is five or six miles in extent, and which overflows at certain seasons of the year, causing a lot of damage to surrounding property, completely inundating it. I think that the allocation of a small amount of money will enable the people to carry on this work, and I appeal to the Government to grant, say the sum of three hundred dollars for this purpose.

MR. ASHBOURNE—Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present a petition from the residents of Back Harbor and vicinity, asking that a sum of money be allocated to repair a bridge between Back Harbor and Patrick's Island. The condition of the bridge at present is one of grave danger to everything passing over it of much weight, and it is practically impossible for people to get a load of coal or a load of goods of any kind over it without mishap. I would ask that the petition receive earnest consideration from the department to which it relates.

MR. BROWN—Mr. Speaker, In giving my support, I might say that the bridge referred to is in very poor condition indeed, and I thought that it would have been carried away completely.

MR. GRIMES—Mr. Speaker. I rise to endorse what has been said by Mr. Ashbourne, and I trust that the Government when making provision for roads and bridges, will include repairs to the bridge asked for by the petitioners from Back Harbor.

MR. HALFYARD—Mr. Speaker. I ask leave to present a petition from the residents of Burgoyne's Cove and New Burn Cove and vicinity in the electoral district of Trinity, asking for a special grant of $300 to complete a public wharf there. A sum of money has been spent already to build a part of a wharf and the petitioners now ask for money to finish it. I beg to support the prayer of the petition, and I ask that it be referred to the department to which it relates for consideration.

CAPT. RANDELL—Mr. Speaker, I rise to support the prayer of the petition.

MR. GODDEN—Mr. Speaker, I give the petition my hearty support.

MR. CAHILL—Mr. Speaker, I ask leave to present a petition from the residents of Lond Pond West and Fox Trap East in the district of Harbor Main concerning repairs to and extension of a road in that locality known as Dunhill Road. The petition is signed by over a hundred people and I give it my hearty support.

HON. MINISTER OF POSTS AND TELEGRAPHS—Mr. Speaker: I beg to support the prayer of the petition. I think it would be money well spent if a thousand dollars was allocated to extend that road into the country and enable the people there to take in some valuable agricultural land in that section and also enable them to reach the forest, which they cannot reach now. The people in that locality have petitioned this house for a number of years on this same matter, but without avail, although the sum of one thousand dollars used to be considered here a mere "trifle." I have no doubt but that the people of Long Pond and vicinity are looking forward eagerly to having this road extended within the next year or two so that they can enjoy the advantages that will accrue therefrom. I give my hearty support to prayer of Petitioners.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—Mr. Speaker: I give notice that I will on to-morrow move the House into Committee of the Whole to consider certain Resolutions respecting the Dry Dock at St. John's.

The Minister of Marine and Fisheries gave notice that he would on tomorrow ask leave to introduce a Bill "to Amend Chapter 172 of the Consolidated Statutes (Third Series) entitled 'Of Foreign going and Labrador vessels."

Mr. Halfyard, Mr. Godden, Mr. Brown and Mr. Hickman gave notice of questions.

Hon. the Minister of Finance and Customs gave notice that he would on to-morrow move the House into Committee of the Whole on Supply.

NOTICE OF QUESTION.

MR. ASHBOURNE asked Hon. the Minister of Finance and Customs to lay upon the Table of the House a statement showing: (a) names of officials suspended from Customs Department since June 1924; (b) whether they are still under pay; (c) various amounts paid to Mr. Alex. Robertson, Mr. P. Skirving and any others who have been appointed or temporarily engaged since June 1924 to date.

HON MINISTER FINANCE AND CUSTOMS—Names of Officials suspended from Customs Department since June 1924: L. Chafe, W. Royal, M. Kelly, T. Jackman and H. Ford.

W. Royal and T. Jackman reinstated under pay.

M. Kelly and H. Ford have been dismissed.

L. Chafe has not received any pay since suspension.

The following have been appointed and paid according to voted amounts in estimates:—

Jas. Gladney, Storekeeper, Eden's Building.

Wm. F. Wells, Invoice Clerk, Longroom in place of W. Royal transferred to Statistical Department.

Columba Murphy, Coll. Lawn, in place of J. Benning, retired.

Malcolm Chambers, Warehouse Keeper in place of P. Reardon, transferred.

Fred Vatcher, Coll. Rose Blanche in place of J. Payne, dismissed.

Chas. Barret, Coll. Old Perlican in place of James Barnes, dismissed.

H. N. Burt, Temporary appointed in Examining Store.

P. Skirving, Temporary appointed in Examining Store.

Alex. Robertson, Temporary appointed in Examining Store.

MR. SCAMMELL—Asked Hon. the Prime Minister if the Government has endorsed and adopted the programme of road building as outlined by the Leader of the Government in the Upper House recently, and if so, what is the total mileage estimated for construction under the proposed scheme and what the Government estimates the cost per mile for construction will be and also what the Government estimates as the aggregate cost of the completion of the whole programme.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—Mr. Speaker, in reply to that question of the Hon. Member for District of St. Barbe, I may say that no detailed programme of road building has been definitely adopted. Construction and reconditioning the roads under consideration at an estimated cost of not more than five thousand dollars a mile would not entail an expenditure over the two million dollars voted for that purpose.

MR. WARREN—Asked Hon. the Prime Minister if any consultation with the sitting members for the constituencies on the South West Coast on the matter of roads was had prior to the adoption of the road programme detailed by the Leader of the Government in the Upper House recently.

(Reply Tabled).

MR. GRIMES—Asked the Minister of Public Works to lay on the Table of the House a statement showing, month by month: the number of applicants (male and female separately) who registered at the Employment Bureau for work since May last up to the 14th of the present month; (b) a classified list of the various kinds of work sought for by the applicants during the same period giving the number registered under each classification; (c) the number of companies, firms or individuals who registered at the Bureau during the same period as requiring work and a classified list of the kind of work they offered and if any wage specified what were they? (d) the total number of persons (male and female) obtaining employment through the Bureau during the same period, giving the names of the localities and Districts where employment was found; (e) a classified list of the kind of work obtained and the rate of wages received for each kind; (f) what is the total number now registered as unemployed; (g) if any other Government Employment Bureau exists beside the one in St. John's.

THE MINISTER PUBLIC WORKS —Mr. Speaker, I may say in reply to the Hon. Member, that it will take two weeks at least to prepare these answers and I will have much pleasure in laying them on the Table of the House when they have been completed.

Pursuant to notice and on motion of Hon. the Minister of Finance and Customs, Supply was granted to His Majesty.

Mr. Speaker informed the House that he had received a message from the Legislative Council acquainting the House of Assembly that they had passed the Bills sent up entitled "An Act to Amend II George V. Cap. XLV, entitled 'An Act to Incorporate the Women's Patriotic Trust Fund and for other Purposes' and 'An Act to Amend the War Pensions Act 1922,'" without amendment.

Pursuant to order and on motion of Hon. the Minister of Finance and Customs, the Bill entitled "An Act to Amend Chapter 209 of the Consolidated Statutes (Third Series) entitled 'Of Banks and Banking," was read a third time and passed, and it was ordered that the said Bill be engrossed, being entitled as above, and that it be sent to the Legislative Council with a message requesting the concurrence of that body in its provisions.

Mr. Speaker left the Chair.

Mr. Puddister took the Chair of Committee.

HON. THE COLONIAL SECRETARY —Mr. Chairman, when this Bill was introduced to the House a few days ago I endeavoured to explain to the House its outstanding feature and I promised that if there was any information which the members wanted I would endeavour to give it as far as I could do it myself. Since the introduction of the bill there has been a great deal of controversy in this city and we have had a very large and influentially signed petition presented here by the senior member for St. John's West, the Hon. Sir John Crosbie, from all the truckmen and carmen of the town with regard to the regulations of traffic and the rule of the road. It will be born in mind that in introducing this bill I pointed out that it was the universal custom for all traffic to go to the right. The last place to change was Nova Scotia and they altered the rule from keeping to the left to the universal of keeping to the right. And I pointed out the many advantages that would acrue by that rule particularly in the case of the new development and traffice which is to be brought in. I pointed out that the introduction and building of highways on the West Coast with a view to inducing tourists to this country and that the tourists would come from Canada and the United States and find here the rule of the road as they have in the country which they had left. I also pointed out to the Hon. Members that I did not advocate the change of our laws to suit strangers to the inconvenience and the danger of our own people but I was of the opinion that after awhile the change of the laws would be acquired and that in a short time everything would be the same as everywhere else. A very strong feature in connection with the proposed change is the matter in connection with the truckmen and the carmen in this particular part of the country where the two wheeled dray is used instead of the four-wheeled dray or truck which is used in other places. The development of the tourist policy is one which is going to take some years as I already pointed out to the House and I do not anticipate that there will be a great influx of people here for some years because I believe that the development will be gradual and thoroughly done if the work is to be done economically. The Hon. Members on both sides of the House expressed very strong views on this proposed change, and constituents have awakened to the fact that serious dangers and complications might arise where the people were not ready or had no opportunity to understand the changes and the possibilities of accidents are not at all small. Therefore in view of the fact as I said before of the large and influentially signed petitioned of the Truckmen and Carmen's Union which places every carmen in town and representation has been made from the outlying districts such as Harbor Main and Ferryland and particularly the suburban districts of St. John's East and West it has been decided that under the circumstances and in view of the possibilities of this change not being necessary for some time the Government have decided to change the proposed amendment and the law stands as it is to-day. In other words the rule will be that the traffic will continue to go to the left instead of to the right as suggested. Therefore Mr. Chairman I commend this to the Hon. Members with the assurance that I feel that they will agree that it is better to make haste slowly in a matter of this kind than to do something that may cause confusion and disaster. While on this question I think that it would be appropriate that I should give some explanation to the House in reference to the construction and reconstruction of highways which was passed a few days ago by this House unanimously. On introducing this bill I told the House frankly, fearlessly and honestly all I knew about the bill. The bill was introduced by the Government as part of a set policy to inaugrate the building of highways and main roads and to encourage the tourist traffic primarily and to be in keeping with the bill which was passed last year authorizing a loan of two million dollars for that purpose. It will be remembered by the Honourable members that most of the bill was earmarked for some specific purpose. It that bill two million dollars was earmarked for the construction of tourist roads and highways so-called. The Government since then have not given the policy any further consideration. We have decided to appoint a Commission to take care of the work and the Chairman of the Commission will be the Government Engineer, Mr. Hall.

Mr. Hall is a man well qualified, we all admit, for that position, but we have not considered the matter in any detail whatever. I saw in the public press, emanating from a source that must be considered authentic, that when the Bill came before the House it had not been given the consideration in debate that its importance warranted. I know no reason for such a statement. It is quite true that no hon. members took occasion to fly into the heights of oratory or give any lengthy addresses with regard to it, but I consider that this House discussed that Bill as intelligently, as concisely and as properly as it was possible for that Bill to be discussed. I expressed appreciation to the hon. members on both sides of this House for the courteous and fair way in which the Bill went through this Chamber. It was an important matter.

Every member that sits here this afternoon will admit that we of this country—the people who provide the money and build the high ways, we are responsible to those people for the expenditure of this money. We are responsible to them, and to them alone. We would be derelict in our duty if we did not give that consideration to a measure of the kind to which I refer—that measure in all its phases and all its forms to the people who sent us here.

It is quite true that a great deal of what has been said in the public press has been very much in evidence with regard to matters appertaining to this measure since its passage in this House, but I think it would be unfair to myself, unfair to the Government and unfair to this House if I did not at once emphatically proclaim that no such programme has ever been considered by the Government of the Country, at least, by the present Government.

In my position as Colonial Secretary I would have some knowledge of such a proceeding, and I do say that I would be long sorry to subscribe to any scheme that would involve this country in very much larger expenditure. I do not want to see any more than two millions spent on the highways. I want to see it done economically and carefully, irrespective of what parts of the country it may be spent in. I want to see it spent in those parts where we will get returns. We have taken an opportunity of discussing, one with another, where we are going to build those highways. We are not going to build them in the wilderness. We are going to build the highways in such places that they will be of use to the people who want to use them, and in such places where they will connect up the traffic in this country, and bring the people to the points of interest, and to bring the people to places where they will have some means of natural comforts and natural accommodations. Hon. members, consequently, will appreciate where the money should first be spent. If we are going to enter on this policy one of the first things to be done is that we must build a hotel in St. John's; from there this policy must radiate over the country. And as we push out and advance we will see where and how and by what means we can develop this. I, therefore, Mr. Chairman, apologize to the House for going back in reference to a Bill already passed. I thought in justice to myself and in justice to the House that I should make these explanations.

The Bill that we are considering this afternoon is one that has many features, and will, on the whole, commend itself to the country. I think by going back and putting in the word "left" instead of "right" we probably have got a long way in assuring the acceptance of the Bill. I therefore propose the first section.

MR. HICKMAN—I am very glad to listen to the Hon. Colonial Secretary this afternoon. I am particularly glad to know that he and his Government have seen the erorr of their ways and have decided to change that part of the Bill known as "The Rules of the Road." In the second reading I had made up my mind that if that rule had tried to pass committee stage, I intended to bring in an amendment. The amendment I was going to bring in is the same as the alteration, so it will not now be necessary. I think it is high time to make changes of this nature when we have tourists coming down here and bringing in their automobiles. As the honourable member has said, the kind of vehicle used here is different from that used in any other countries. They use here what is called a long car, and the drivers have always been accustomed to sit on the left hand side. If the rule of the road is changed, they will have either to change sides on which they sit or else take a chance of their legs coming in contact with the other vehicle passing in the opposite direction.

I was very glad to hear the Hon. Colonial Secretary say that they intend to carry out the road policy without taking into consideration the policy outlined by the Leader of the Government in the Upper House. I think it is high time that the Government should wake up and see that they are being led by the nose in all these things, and that they are carrying all these regulations through without paying attention to what is being done. I state now, as I have stated before, that you will be led by the nose into confederation before you know where you are, unless you wake up in time.

This afternoon, in reply to Question No. 2 on the Order Paper, the Prime Minister intimated that no programme of road building had been adopted, but he estimated the building of roads costing five thousand dollars a mile would not exceed two million dollars as voted last year when the Act was brought in to borrow six million dollars. The Prime Minister knows very well that he cannot build a highroad at five thousand dollars a mile or ten thousand dollars a mile. When you've got to take into consideration that you are building a road over a new country you have to build bridges, fillers, ditches, etc., in a great many cases it will cost twice ten thousand dollars a mile. That answer of the Prime Minister's does not give us any great impression of the Government. Another thing, in answer to Question No. 3, I noticed the Prime Minister said that the representatives on the South West Coast had not been consulted in connection with the road-building policy. I think all the members throughout the country should be consulted in reference to this policy, because if the two millions are to be spent on the roads, each district should get a proportion. In this way the settlements and villages will be connected with one another, and it will give people an opoprtunity to get about by vehicle. The Hon. the Colonial Secretary told us that St. John's is the centre and from St. John's the road policy should radiate, and that is what we have said right from the start. We've got to have the road building from St. John's and as the tourist traffic increases more money can be spent on the roads. There must be a hotel and the people coming to this country must be put in touch with the rivers, fishing, shooting and every kind of sport that is necessary.

In reference to the remarks made that the present Bill was not debated in this House, I must say that although we did not go into lengthy debate, each member took up a certain part of the Bill, and we on this side of the House were all in accord that while a tourist policy and road building might be all right, a policy which involved the spending of millions of dollars, we were opposed to. In the Bill it was not stated how much money the Government intended to spend, and we do not know whether it will be two or three millions, but when we read a speech made in the Upper House, we have come to the conclusion that this is a policy for spending 20 millions of dollars. This is an expenditure which this country cannot afford. There are a great many things in this Bill which commend it to us on this side of the House, and one is in reference to regulating the traffic and the powers given to the constabulary with which we all must agree, because we know that the traffic has to be regulated. There are so many people driving vehicles for the first time, and unless the powers are given to the police to regulate the traffic, a great many accidents and deaths must occur. We will support the Bill in so far as it is in the interests of the country, and the people. But as I said before, we are very much opposed to the part known as "The Rules of the Road," and I intended bringing in an amendment, but as the Government have seen their way clear to alter that portion of the Bill, we have no amendment to make in reference to this.

MR. SCAMMELL—Mr. Chairman, I did intend making some extended reference to the Bill now before the Committee, but in view of the explanation which the Hon. Colonial Secretary has given us this afternoon, and in view of the change of policy which he has outlined, nothing perhaps remains to be said. There are, however, one or two things that I think ought to bear passing reference. In the first place I want to say that as a member who is sitting on this side of the House, I stand firm for the privilege of the members on this side of the House, and I resent any imputation from any source whatever that the hon. members on this side of the House do not give due and proper consideration to the legislation that is passing through. I may say, Sir, that I was not in the House of Assembly myself when the Highways Bill was introduced, but I was in the House when the Colonial Secretary introduced the present Bill, and I think that all will agree that Mr. Bennett on that occasion gave a very lucid explanation for the change in the Bill which he was sponsoring. And I think that none of us think anything less of the Colonial Secretary for having to come in here and explain as sponsor of that Bill that his Government has had to change their policy. I think that the Government has made a step in the right direction, and the manner in which Mr. Bennett has made and explained the reasons outlined for making this change has given satisfaction to everybody.

To a large extent the detail of this Bill so far as the rule of the road is concerned, does not effect the outport districts, but I can quite understand and appreciate that here in St. John's it may be a very important matter. The Government could not very well overlook such an influential petition as that presented by the truckmen of this city, and we do not feel that the Government has anything to be ashamed of in the fact that they have decided to alter the Bill in this particular. It was the intention of the Hon. Leader of the Opposition to introduce such an amendment if the Government had not seen fit to alter the Act in this particular.

I agree with what my leader has said—that this country has had occasion to be alarmed, and to take a very alarming view of the situation as regards the road-building policy of the Government. There have been pronouncements made, and these have been of such a nature as, in a sense, to bring us all more or less to our senses; of such a nature as to cause in our minds grave doubt, and of such a nature that we have to take the position that it is time to call a halt.

In this House last year, we voted two million dollars for roads, and we certainly never thought or never anticipated that the Government had in its mind any proposition other than that which it was proposed the two million dollars would cover. We certainly never thought that the Government proposed to embark upon such a scheme of road building as we have heard discussed, outlined and elucidated from other quarters; and the pronouncement of the Hon. Colonial Secretary this afternoon, speaking, I take it, on behalf of the Government, has done a great deal of good, in that it has put our minds at rest on that score.

The Leader of the Opposition made a reference that if we did not call a halt, we were going to be led by the nose into Confederation. Now, Mr. Chairman, I am not an alarmist as to any question of confederation, but I feel that, had the elaborate scheme which we all heard so much about, been endorsed by the Government, and had it been accepted by the Government, they would have been doing something that the Government of the country, as the Government stands to-day, had no mandate from the electors of the country for. If such were contemplated even remotely, in my humble opinion this matter was one which was of sufficient importance that the Government ought to seek the mandate of the country before embarking upon it.

The Government is content that two million dollars will be enough for their road policy; but with all due respect to the Hon. the Prime Minister and his answer handed to me this afternoon, he will find that he is not going to build roads for five thousand dollars a mile. The Government may estimate that, but by experience in road building—experience will show that five thousand dollars a mile which is estimated, will not be a drop in the bucket when the Government settles down to work out that proposition. They will require a much larger expenditure than that—an expenditure to my mind which the people of this country are not able to bear, or carry the burden of at the present time. I do not suppose there is any difference of opinion on the general principle of building good roads; I do not suppose there is any difference of opinion amongst us that we should do everything we possibly can in a reasonable way to encourage tourists to come to this country; but I am sure that we will all pause before we will give our voice to the expenditure of millions of dollars on such an elaborate scheme of road building as we have been recently reading of through the columns of the daily press.

It looks to me, Mr. Chairman, that everything we have done in Newfoundland is going to be undone; it looks to me as if the Government is going eventually to do away with a great many of our old-fashioned institutions, and a great many of the things which have helped us on the road to progress—and one of these is The Local Affairs Act. I was always a strong supporter of that Act, and I am still a firm believer in it; and I regret very much that I can only read into this Bill now before the House, that at some time or other the Local Affairs Act will have vanished from our Statute Book and that its application so far as the building and managing of roads are concerned, will be things of the past. It seems to me that the intention of the Government as embodied in this Act, is to take such matters out of the hands of the elected representatives—out of the hands of the people themselves who are on the spot, and to place them in the hands of a Commission which will be, perhaps, as far apart from them as the man in the moon. I do not think that is a thing that is going to appeal to the people of the outports, and as a representative of one of those outports, I must express my strong disapproval of any such scheme.

I would also like to say again, Mr. Chairman, that I do not like to have insinuations made against the members of this House, as to our debating legislation which passes through the House, and I think that every member of this House should resent the remarks to which I now make reference. However, as I remarked when I started, there would have been occasion, had this Bill not been altered, perhaps for some very practical discussion in regard to this whole Bill; but in view of the statement which the Hon. Colonial Secretary has made this afternoon that this Bill is to be amended, and that the Government has not endorsed any elaborate scheme of road building, I think that very little remains but for us to proceed with this Bill.

I agree with Mr. Hickman that anything which will be for the general benefit of the country is something that we shall be only too glad to support, and I thank the Hon. Colonial Secretary for the pronouncement which he has made here this afternoon.

MR. WARREN—Mr. Chairman, this Bill and a recent Bill which has passed this House, known as the Highroads Bill, are so closely akin and intertwined that we can hardly discuss one without discussing the other. I did not take part in the discussion of the previous Bill, but I think that I should make some reference to the frank and fearless statement regarding that Bill which the hon. introducer has made in this House. There was, in this House and outside, a considerable amount of anxiety as to the scope and nature of the scheme which would be put into effect by reason of these two Bills, and what the Hon. Colonial Secretary has said this afternoon will go a long way toward allaying that anxiety, and quell any ideas of any extraordinary scheme being brought forward.

I would like also to say a few words about this Bill before the House. I said some time ago that I did not see why we should be made a rubber stamp for the Legislature of Ontario. In case honourable members of this House misunderstood me, I wish to say that I have no objection to considering and discussing any legislation that happens to come from Ontario . On our Statute Book to-day are many Acts which have their origin, not only in Ontario, but in other provinces of the Dominion to the westward of us; but I do most strongly object to being told that because it is a Statute coming from Ontario, that therefore it must be passed by us. That is the position, and that is what I meant when I said that we objected to being made a rubber stamp. Because it is good enough for Ontario, therefore it is good enough for us—that is the position that I have to resent.

I am glad indeed that the hon. introducer of this Bill had announced a change in the intentions of the Government in regard to the rule of the road. That was an objection which had in a short while reached a great height of controversy, and people had almost taken a plebiscite as to whether they were favourable to going to the left or to the right. I feel quite sure that everyone will agree in the long run that the Government was wise in not pressing the change. At first I thought that I would be in favor of the change for the reason that most of the motor cars that are imported into this country to-day have what is known as a left hand drive, and I thought that it would make for safety if we adopted the rule of the road that is law in Canada. But since I have considered the number of other vehicles that are on the road, and I do not think it fair that, for the benefit of the smaller number of motor drivers, we should ask all the drivers of the other kinds of vehicles to change their habits and adopt the Canadian system. Therefore, I think that the Government was wise in not proceeding with the proposed change.

One other point. As I said before, these two Acts are more or less intertwined and closely related to each other—I mean the Highways Act and this Act, and I want to impress on the House that we ought not to get filled up with the idea that everything in future is going to depend upon motor traffic; and in these two Acts we must not be carried away with the idea that we are legislating for motor traffic, and not for vehicular traffic.

The Leader of the Opposition, this afternoon, made the proposition that any money that is raised for highways under the loan, should be divided up per capita in proportion to the districts. I do not agree with him. If that money is raised for a certain purpose, it should be spent for that purpose; and if it is raised for Tourist traffic, I think it ought to be spent on trying to encourage tourists to come here ,and if it is necessary to link up towns and villages, the Government will have to find some other way of doing it . . .

MR. HICKMAN—What I said was that some of the money should be used in some of the Districts to link up certain settlements, and I thought that was necessary first.

MR. WARREN—I misunderstood the hon. member for Hr. Grace, but have no desire to misrepresent him. I thought he said the money should be divided among the different districts. That is the line I suggest should be taken now. I do not say how or in what Districts the money should be spent, but we must get away from the idea that motor cars are to be the only means of getting tourists here. If we could provide proper hotels even in small number at first, we could do that. We have heard a lot of the fjords of Fortune and Hermitage Bays, and I freely admit that they are wonderful in the beauty of their scenery, but if I were asked what could be done there as to roads for tourists, I would say only one would be needed, that is the road where the Railway was laid from Come-By-Chance to Terenceville. The rails were taken up about two years ago, but the road-bed is there yet, and could easily be repaired, and that is the only one that would be necessary for tourists. There is only one other road in the district and that joins up places which are easily connected with by the Glencoe. I therefore, again urge the Government to forget the idea of motor cars and roads being the only way of attracting tourists, and suggest short roads to connect the different points, as these would afford the visitors much pleasure. I have been struck by reading in the London Times of what other countries are doing to attract tourists. The Times of January 2nd, has this interesting article:

TOURS IN CANADA AND U.S.—INEXPENSIVE TRAVEL.

"The movement to provide facilities for inexpensive travel outside the familiar and well-trodden paths of the Continent has been further extended by the White Star and White Star-Dominion Lines, by whom a series of tours at low rates in Canada and the United States have been arranged. These lines are working in conjunction with the Canadian and United States railways.

In these excursion tours third-class accommodation is provided at sea and first-class on land, and the itinerary from Liverpool covers, among other places, New York, Boston, Montreal, Quebec, Niagara Falls, and Ottawa, the extent of the tour being adaptable to the requirements of the individual traveller. The following is the programme of Tour No. 2, which may be taken as a specimen of the plans that have been made and the amount of time that is occupied in seeing a very large part of the Eastern side of the North American Continent:—

First Day:—Due to arrive Quebec. Accommodation at Chateau Frontenac (meals extra). Second Day:—At Quebec. Trip to St. Anne de Beaupre by electric trolley included. Third Day:—Leave Quebec by river steamer for Montreal. Fourth Day:—Arrive Montreal. Accommodation with meals at Queen's Hotel. Sight-seeing by carriage included. Fifth Day:—Leave Montreal in the morning by train. Arrive Toronto in the afternoon. Accommodation commencing with evening dinner at Queen's Hotel. Sixth Day:—Automobile sight-seeing trip included. Leave Toronto in the afternoon by steamer for sail across Lake Ontario. Connexion is made at Lewiston with Niagara Gorge Railroad for Niagara Falls. Accommodation commencing with evening dinner at Temperance House. Seventh Day.—At Niagara Falls. Sightseeing trip by Niagara Belt Line included. Eighth Day.—Breakfast and luncheon at hotel. Leave Niagara Falls by late afternoon train. Pullman berth included from Buffalo. Ninth Day.--Arrive Washington in the morning. Accommodation commencing with luncheon at Hotel Driscoll. Automobile sightseeing trip included. Tenth Day.—At Washington. Eleventh Day.—Leave Washington by morning train. Arrive Philadelphia about three hours later. Luncheon included, also autobile sight-seeing trip. Leave Philadelphia afternoon train. Arrive New York about two hours later. Accommodation commencing with evening dinner at Hotels Earle or Holley. Twelfth and Thirteen Days.—At New York. Automobile sightseeing trip included. Fourteenth Day—Breakfast at hotel."

The question of Dominion tours was raised by Sir Godfrey Lagden in a letter in The Times on February 27, in which he urged the desirability of organizing such excursions as those outlined above.

Many of those would leave a fair amount of money in this country. The Furness Withy Company are already arranging to put a new steamer on this route, and I would like to see something of the nature above mentioned done here. It is true that we have not yet got the hotels but I think with the beauties of our scenery we could arrange some tours of the sort described. These tours make practically no mention of motor cars, and it is my belief that visitors would use the cars we have already here, which would help to keep our garages, and be more profitable to us than if cars were brought in. Later I propose to move an Amendment to the Bill as to the carrying of tail lights on all vehicles which will bring it in conformity with the Municipal Act.

MR. HICKMAN—Mr. Chairman, I wish to take this opportunity to again impress upon the Government the necessity of spending some of this money to link up the various settlements. After the Bill is passed and the House is closed, we will not be consulted as to where the money will be spent, but I would like to throw out to the Government the idea that this would be a good way of spending the money. Now take a district like that represented by Mr. Lake and Honourable Mr. Long. in introducing the Bill the Honourable the Colonial Secretary said that Mr. Lake will shortly be buying a motor car, but at present there is very little road in his district that he could drive on. There are only four miles from Grand Bank to Fortune. A small amount would improve the road from Garnish to Marystown. One man has told me that for a few thousand dollars he would put in good condition the road from Marystown to Garnish, and with a few thousand more the road from Garnish to Grand Bank and Fortune, and from there to Lamaline. Spending the money in small amounts like this is the best way to spend it, and I would like the Government to take notice of what I am saying, and see that the suggestion is carried out.

MR. DUFF—Mr. Chairman, I would like to refer briefly to the remarks of the Honorable the Colonial Secretary. I did not say "rubber stamp," but I do not think we should adopt legislation because another more favoured country has done so. It seems to me that the Government is taking thought, and like the Thorburn Government is trying to do things right, and on a "strict commercial basis." We are changing our methods of spending our public monies for road repairs and getting some value. We know that our roads are not in the best condition, and that in connection with them the money has not been spent to the best advantage. I am not talking of Carbonear, as we have been particularly fortunate, but I believe there are many places throughout the country where no money has been spent on the roads for years. I would like to see the road-making taken out of politics, and put on a non-partisan basis, and I think we should spend the money correctly. At the same time there are lots of poor people who are expecting work in the way of roads repairing, and it is a very difficult matter to handle. In my District last year was a poor one, the fishery being a failure, and we have some poor people there, who though they do not wish to acknowledge their poverty, would like to see the road-making taken up as soon as possible, so as to alleviate their distress. Now speaking of Ontario of which we have heard so much, I notice that drivers there of motor cars have to pay three cents a gallon on gasolene, which brings in a revenue of three millions for the repair of roads, but if we were to tax the few motor owners on their gasolene to be of any effect we would need to tax them dollars. The Honorable Member for Twillingate in comparing the number of motors here with those of other countries thought we should have a large proportion, but I think what we should have is more wheelbarrows. what we want at the present time is industry and thrift, and not the apeing of the extravagance of other people. Some slur has been cast on my remarks as to the improvement of the fisheries, but I think this is the first step necessary, and we should be able to place our fish in the market cheaper than our competitors. A few years ago the duties were only thirteen per cent, but now they have increased.

The idea of advocating a two million road policy for roads to run alongside and compete with your non paying railway is most ridiculous in a country of a quarter million population scattered along the seacoast. Those of our people who can get away are leaving the country as fast as trains and ships can carry them, and it is a wonder to me the party that conceived this fanciful road scheme did not add to it the bridging of the Cabot Straits, and then we would have found that others who could not pay for transportation would have walked out of the country. Then again we are told it will encourage agriculture. We remember the agricultural policy of a former Government, roads were opened up all over the different districts and a bonus was paid for clearing land. All those roads are now grown over and the cleared land is a commons.

Now we are told that the Government propose to link up the Badger Road. I consider that this is a joke despite what my friend, Mr. Ashbourne has said to the contrary. You can connect your towns, if you like; but what we want is the road over the sea, and that is the cheapest road. I can imagine the politician that advocated the '98 contract and the man who advocated the buildings of branch railways talking in the same optimistic manner, but since these days we should have learnt our lesson.

I am glad, how ever, that the Government has seen the evil tenor of their way and are going to keep to the left, and not copy another country's method of traffic to our disadvantage. In other matters I would advocate them keeping to the right or rather doing the right, and I may add I have not seen much evidence of their intention in this direction.

MR. WARREN—Mr. Chairman, this is the section which I purpose to move an amendment to, but I would like to draw the attention of the Attorney General to the wording of it.

I don't want to try to be witty. All the English laws provide that either at sunset or one hour after you have got to have a light. You see on almost every calendar the lighting up time. This is very indefinite. Who is going to decide whether it is dusk or it is not. Our traffic laws at present provide that at sunset you have got to have a light. Our Municipal Act provides one hour after sunset. This Act ought to specify some time like that.

Mr. Chairman, I gave notice that when this stage of the Bill arrived I intended to move an amendment—to move that there should be added to subsection k, the following as subsection 1.

Reads amendment.

I may say that this section provided that after sunset and before sunrise, every vehicle that is on the road shall carry a light, with the exception of two wheeled vehicles. I do not do this—I do not move this so much in favour of the motorists as for the protection of the general public; that those who will not protect themselves will be made protect themselves. We have had several accidents occur here almost entirely because of the absence of a light on the vehicle. I do not refer now to any particular accident which all the members may know about; but I know of lots of accidents of which the public does not hear which have been caused merely because the vehicle carries no light which the driver of a motor car can see, particularly when they are coming round a corner.

This section is practically taken from the municipal Act. At the present time, every vehicle within the city limits has to carry a light an hour after sunset to an hour before sunrise; and this section now provides that every vehicle shall carry a light outside the city limits. I think this section makes for the safety of the people themselves. It is all very well, when a person has been in an accident, for him to say—"I have no light, because I am not compelled to." The law should make him carry a light for his own protection. As a matter of fact, most of the four wheeled vehicles that now ply in the suburbs carry lights of their own accord and for their own protection.

I think we are following other precedents in providing that vehicles should carry lights. There is no necessity to carry a light that is of any particular kind or shape. It does not provide that it shall be a white light, or anything like that, but it merely provides that it shall carry a white light to show the position of the carriage and in what direction it is going.

I commend this amendment to the House, and I think it is worth putting into effect. It will be of great benefit to all concerned, and it may be the means of saving life.

MR. WOODFORD—Mr. Chairman, I wish to add a word in support of the amendment proposed by the Honourable member for Fortune. The majority of drivers between the city and the outlying settlements: I speak particularly in reference to my own district and St. John's and Kelligrews and Holyrood, where there is a large amount of traffic, both motor and vehicular. We have a class of people on the South shore especially, a class who bring meat to town—we call them local butchers, whom I know are very particular in that way, most of them young men, and nearly all of them carry a lantern. But not every person who drives up and down the South shore carries a light on his carriage, but there ought to be some law to compel them to do so. I think the honourable member for Fogo will agree with me in that. I think all members will agree with me that to avoid danger and to give protection to all concerned, that everybody ought to be compelled to carry lanterns, both for the purpose of avoiding accidents, and for the purpose of helping the drivers who have no lanterns. I have seen more than two carriages going along in a parade—I call it—where there would be one on behind with a lantern and one in front with one, but the middle man would not have a lantern; but out of consideration for the man who did not have a lantern they divided themselves up like that.

MR. HIBBS—I would like to endorse what the last speaker has said as to the amendment, and would even go further. The Honourable Member for Fortune Bay makes an exception for two wheel vehicles, but all spring carts should be compelled to carry lights. If we exempt all two wheeled cars, we will have two wheeled spring carts running without lights.

MR. WARREN—The section does not apply to two wheel carts.

MR. HIBBS—All two wheeled springed vehicles should carry the same lights as four wheeled vehicles—white in front and red in rear. Often you will overtake a vehicle with only a lantern carried in front of the dash board, and no light shown to the car approaching from behind. If we say they shall only carry a light, they will simply carry the one in front which cannot be seen from the rear. If we put in a new section let us provide a regular light, which will not cost much and will be a better protection for all.

MR. WARREN—The Honourable Member talks of the regulations as to carrying lights, but may I point out that there are none applying to outside the city. There are none to say it shall be a red light behind and white in front. I wish to apply merely the same section as in the Municipal Act. That regulation refers only to a lamp or lantern which shows a light in front and is capable of signalling the approach of such vehicle.

MR. HIBBS—Mr. Chairman, I think if we make any amendments we should have the white and red light, which would protect the owner from cars coming in any direction, without the red light no protection is afforded. It would not cost much and it is just as well to have the regulation light similar to that carried in all other places outside Newfoundland. The holders for lights are part of every vehicle made, and its merely a matter of the owner buying the regular light.

HON. THE MINISTER OF POSTS—One would cost $15 and the other $6, and we must consider the poor man. Even if the light is carried in front you can always see the glare of it and I would be satisfied if the vehicles carried any kind of light.

MR. HICKMAN—I intended to make the same remarks as the honorable member for Fogo. If we are going to make an amendment, make it for the proper light. It will be embarrassing for the driver of a motor car to come in contact with a person carrying one light as he will not know which side of the vehicle it is on. I think the proper one is that showing the red behind which when seen tells the vehicle is going in the same direction as yourself. If we consider the amendment at all I think we should have the proper light, as it would not be very expensive and would last as long as the vehicle itself.

HON. THE COLONIAL SECRETARY—The suggestion of carrying a light is a step in the right direction, and I am sorry we cannot see the way to have every vehicle carry one. Long carts are the greatest danger on the roads today and after dark one is taking his life in his hands. I quite agree with Mr. Hibbs and Mr. Hickman that if we are to have a light let it be the proper one. I appreciate the position of the man that Mr. Woodford refers to and who carries a stable lantern which he uses afterwards in putting his horse away. But if we are making a regulation we should make it as perfect as possible provided it is not impracticable. If we say it is to be red in the back and white in front and we can agree that it is not to be a law that will be honored in the breach, then let us make it so as it will tend to the safety of all.

MR. MOORE—In referring to this matter I am considering the man from Caplin Bay, Witless Bay, Mobile or some other part of Ferryland District. Many of these have had carriages for years and now use lanterns and it would be a great hardship on them to pass this regulation, as I am sorry to say that many of them could not afford to buy carriage lamps. I disagree with the honourable member for Fogo as the purchase of the lights which he advocates would be an undue expense on the people of the outlying settlements.

MR. HIBBS—I do not insist on two lights, but think vehicles should carry one.

MR. MOORE—You can only buy carriage lamps by the pair and while the rule may be a good one it would prove a hardship on the people from outside places who drive to and from town. We cannot consider the motorists alone.

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Whilst we know that it would be the ideal condition to have the red and white lights, and also two lights on every vehicle, I think when we come to think of the difficulties which have existed for years, that the honorable member for Fortune has made a good step forward in proposing a light at all. The trouble in the past has been no lights have been carried, and if we can get to the stage now of carrying even one, it will be bridging the trouble to a large extent. The proposed amendment is a step in advance, and I think a great many persons possessed of the waggons referred to by other speakers will equip them with the regular carriage lamps. A certain number of poor people may not be able to reach on the cost of anything beyond a common stable-lamp, but even the use of this will be better than the present condition of no light at all.

MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS—Mr. Chairman, I am fully in accord with the remarks of the Honourable Minister of Justice. This rule will not alone apply to sections immediately near St. John's, but to every district and to people using vehicles in every district throughout the country, and I quite agree that if we compel drivers of vehicles to each equip themselves with a white light that it is going to be a step in the proper direction. There are people in the district that I have the honour to represent who understand now that there is an act on the Statute Book compelling them to carry a light, but I am informed by the honourable member for Fortune Bay that no such law exists. However, the greater number of people all over the country did not observe this law at all, and so I endorse the attitude taken by the Honourable Minister of Justice and the member for Ferryland, namely, that a white light is sufficient for the time being out of consideration for the man who drives a vehicle in the outlying settlements.

MR. HICKMAN—Mr. Chairman, Section (12) says that all motor cars should carry a mirror. What is the use of that section?

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—I don't believe that there is more than two per cent. of cars equipped with mirrors.

HON. THE COLONIAL SECRETARY—Apparently the Commission did not give this whole matter the care that they might have given it. I think we will let this section stand over for the present.

MR. HICKMAN—Mr. Chairman, before that passes I don't know where the Government got this act. I suppose it is an Ontario Act. There seems to be a lot of unnecessary stuff in it. How are you going to prevent smoke from coming out from the back of the car. How are you going to control it in any shape or form. I think it is beyond the means of control. And you must understand that when you make breaches of this law you are open for trouble.

HON. MR. WOODFORD—Mr. Chairman, I would like to say one word in reference to this matter. To some of us who cannot afford a motor car it is a great nuisance under certain circumstances. In driving over the road the driver has no consideration for the pedestrian at all. You can't blame the condition of the road. There is so much dust flying and the road is dry and easily ground up, and it blows into people's faces. I think that every motor car ought to be furnished with some kind of tank in the rear. This has never been considered in this country at all. I have read articles published in the United States where men have been carefully trained in running a car for the purpose of not throwing dust in the eyes of the pedestrians as it were.

MR. HIBBS—Mr. Chairman I don't want to take up the time of the committee and perhaps this is hardly the time to refer to this matter; but there are certain roads to which special attention should be given. I hope the new Road Commission will rebuild the road from Mill Bridge to Bowring Park as it is a very important thoroughfare. Something should be done to that road as soon as weather permits. It has been very fortunate for us that practically no accidents have occurred on this narrow and much congested road in the past, but what the people living on the side of that road have to endure in the way of dust is something frightful. There is no road in the country where such conditions prevail. I think, therefore, that road should be widened and properly rebuilt, and a tarvia top put on it to prevent dust, and to afford a good wearing surface for the immense traffic that goes over it.

Mr. Speaker resumed the Chair.

The Chairman from the Committee reported that they had considered the matter to them referred, had made some progress and asked leave to sit again on tomorrow.

On motion this Report was received and adopted, and it was ordered that the Committee have leave to sit again on tomorrow.

Mr. Speaker informed the House that he had received a message from the Legislative Council acquainting the House of Assembly that they had passed the Bill sent up entitled "An Act to Amend Chapter 3 of the Consolidated Statutes of Newfoundland (Third Series) entitled 'Of the Election of Members of the House of Assembly'" with some amendments, in which they request the concurrence of the House of Assembly.

On motion the said amendments were read a first time, and it was ordered that they be read a second time on tomorrow.

Hon. the Minister of Justice gave notice that he would on tomorrow ask leave to introduce a Bill "An Act to Amend Chapter 83 of the Consolidated Statutes (Third Series) and the Acts in amendment thereof."

It was moved and seconded that when the House rises, it adjourn until Monday afternoon next at three of the clock.

The Hous then adjourned accordingly.

MONDAY, March 23rd, 1925.

The House met at three of the clock in the afternoon, pursuant to adjournment.

HON. MR. SULLIVAN—Mr. Speaker, I ask leave to present a petition from the people of Argentia on the subject of a road between Argentia and Silver Cliff Mine. The distance is about two miles and now that the Mine is operating it would be a great convenience to the people of that locality if this road was built.

MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE & MINES—Mr. Speaker, I beg to support the prayer of the petition.

MR. SINNOTT—Mr. Speaker, I wish to support the petition presented by my colleague.

MR. HALFYARD—Mr. Speaker, I ask leave to present a petition from the residents of Hants Harbour, Trinity District. The petitioners ask for an allocation to make repairs to a road leading to certain saw mills and agricultural land. This road is used by a great many of the inhabitants of Hants Harbour and also by the residents of other places in that locality. I beg to support the prayer of the petition and ask that it be referred to the department to which it relates.

MR. GODDEN—Mr. Speaker, I give the petition my hearty support.

MINISTER OF ARICULTURE & MINES—Mr. Speaker, I have quite a numl er of petitions here to present from various parts of the district of Placentia and St. Mary's' on various public matters, and, with your permission, sir, and in order to facilitate matters so as not to occupy any time of the House unnecessarily, I would like to present the whole of the petitions at the one time this afternoon. The first petition is from four hundred residents of Argentia, P.B., Fox Harbour, Ship Harbour and Red Island, asking that a bridge be erected at Placentia Gut. I understand that this important matter is already receiving the consideration of the Government. The present cost is in the vicinity of five thousand dollars, and I think that the amount capitalized is sufficient to make a suitable bridge whereby a better service can be carried on than the one at the present time. I have much pleasure in giving this petition my hearty support.

The next petition is from the people of Petit Forte on the west side of Placentia Bay asking for the sum of $300 to repair an important breakwater at that place. I beg to endorse the prayer of the petitioners.

The next petition is from North Harbour and Colinet, in St. Mary's Bay, asking for an amount to complete a road. The amount asked for is $300. From my own personal knowledge of it the road is a very important one and the request of the people a reasonable one. This petition also has my support.

The next petition comes from Regina, St. Mary's Bay, and contains two hundred signatures. The petitioners ask for $1500 to erect a breakwater in that section. Such a public utility is very essential for the carrying on of the fishery at that place. I wish to register my support of the petition.

The next petition is from the people of Bar Haven, Placentia Bay. The petitioners ask for a public wharf in that section. At the present moment they have no wharf and so far as I know they never had one. Bar Haven is a growing settlement and the people there are very much handicapped for the want of a wharf with which to land their supplies on. I trust that the request of the petitioners will be acceded to.

The next petition is from Mussel Pond, St. Mary's Bay, regarding the present ferry service. Honourable members will appreciate that a stipend of thirty dollars a year is not sufficient to pay a man to carry on anything like a good service. During the past few years traffic has increased considerably and the people ask that better facilities be given them in the way of a better ferry service. I support the prayer of the petitioners.

The next petition is from the inhabitants of Dunville, P.B., asking for an amount of money to open a road between Jersey Side and Dunville and further extend it to the famous salmon pools in that vicinity. I do not think that I could add anything further to what the petition says.

(Reads petition)

I might say that on several occasions I had the pleasure of visiting the pools referred to. Although it is not generally known, it is very hard to get access to these pools, and I think that it would be well worth while to have this road opened up, particularly if we expect to get tourists to visit North East Arm, Placentia. I think the Government should give this matter their most serious consideration.

The next petition is from Colinet in regard to telephone extension. On several occasions in the past this matter was brought to the notice of the House by my colleagues and myself and I trust now that the Goverument will grant the prayer of the petition of the people of Colinet.

The next petition is from the inhabitants of Pond Head, Argentia, on the same subject and I trust that the Minister of Posts and Telegraphs will see that Pond Head will be connected by telephone.

The residents of St. Leonard's, P.B., also petition for telephone extension and the request of the petitioners has my hearty support.

The next petition is from Baine Harbour on the west side of Placentia Bay asking for an amount of money to complete a public wharf. For the information of the House I might say that in 1923 the Government allocated $1,000 to erect a public wharf at Baine Harbour. This amount has been found to be insufficient to complete the work and they now ask for an additional amount. I give the petition my hearty support.

The next petition, Mr. Speaker is from the residents of Fox Harbour, Placentia Bay, asking that a daily mail service be given between Villa Maria and Fox Harbour. Fox Harbour is a very important fishing settlement, in fact one of the most important we have, and it is at present getting a mail service only about twice a week. The cost of giving them a daily mail service would be very small compared to the benefit and general convenience to the public, which would be immense. I trust that the Minister of Posts and Telegraphs will see his way clear to accede to the prayer of this petition. I have much pleasure in endorsing the prayer of this petition.

The next is from the residents of Haystack, Spencer's Cove, Harbour Buffett, and several other places in Placentia Bay asking for an allocation of money to complete a road in that section. The road referred to is a very important one. All the places referred to in this petition are on an Island—Long Island. The people on that Island have no connection with the railroad. They ask for two hundred and fifty dollars to try and make the conditions better there than they are at the present time. I have much pleasure in endorsing the prayer of this petition.

I trust that all these matters I have brought up will receive the attentiou of the various departments. On various occasions I have pointed out to this House the unnecessary trouble that is occasioned in having these petitions brought around the districts, and then having men spend hours making elaborate speeches on them in this House, and then as soon as it goes out of this chamber, nothing more is heard of it. I always thought that there should be a committee of this House, consisting of members of both sides to receive petitions, so that time need not be unnecessarily spent, and much benefit may accrue. It is well known that ninety nine per cent of the petitions presented in this House are never heard of after they leave this chamber. I hope that these petitions will receive the attention of the departments to which they relate.

MR. SINNNOTT—I beg leave to support these petitions presented by my colleague, Mr. Walsh.

MR. HIBBS—Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present a petition from the residents of Joe Batt's Arm, in the District of Fogo, on the subject of a breakwater. It is a very important matter, Mr. Speaker, and with your permission, I will read the petitiou as it is not very long.

Reads Petition.

I would emphasise, Mr. Speaker, the necessity of something being done by the Government to remedy this great evil in Joe Batt's Arm. It is not necessary for me to say that Joe Batt's Arm comprises very large settlements of very industrious and independent fishermen. This petition is very largely signed. There are about one hundred and forty signatures on it, which do not represent all the fishermen in Joe Batt's Arm. There is a reef jutting out there on the North side about three hundred feet, and what the petition asks for is a concrete breakwater to break off the sea that comes in there and ruins that particular portion of the harbour. They want to build out a breakwater to meet that reef. I would ask the House, and particularly the Minister of Marine and Fisheries to take this matter into consideration. I think everybody should do all they can to encourage those who try to make an independent living; and the people of Joe Batt's Arm are particularly worthy of that consideration. I endorse the prayer of this petition, and ask that it be referred to the department to which it relates.

I also wish to present a petition from the residents of Main Point, Gander Bay, asking that a telephone service be installed there. I might point out that the people of Main Point are very much isolated. There are a couple of mills there, and the gentleman who is instrumental in getting this petition signed is Mr. French—the gentleman to whom I referred to the other day as having conformed with the Saw Mills Act. He himself pays about eighteen thousand dollars yearly in wages, and that is a great benefit to the people of that place. I would ask the Government to give this petition their consideration, and have the telephone extend from Clarenville to Main Point, and thus accede to the prayer of the petition.

MR. SCAMMELL—Mr. Speaker, I have much pleasure in supporting the petition presented by the honourable member for Fogo. Fogo happens to be my native district, and I know that section around Main Point very well, and I can quite realise the necessity of having the telephone there. The people there are a very industrious class of people, and the community is a very important one taken from either the standpoint of industry or population; and I cannot very well understand why this great boon has been so long delayed. I would just like to add this word to what the honourable member for Fogo has said, and I would like to take advantage of this opportunity to endorse the petition from the residents of Main Point, Gander Bay, and I trust that it will receive the serious consideration of the Hon. Minister of Posts and Telegraphs.

MR. GRIMES—Mr. Speaker, I have much pleasure in giving my support to the prayer of the petition presented by the honourable member for Fogo, Mr. Hibbs, in reference to a breakwater at Joe Batt's Arm. I know somewhat of the need of that breakwater to the residents of that place. A large amount of fishing and other gear has been destroyed there from time to time by heavy seas coming in there on that shore, and the people there have suffered great losses during the last ten or twelve years. I think the people there deserve more consideration at the hands of the Government than they have been getting. These people have been paying into the revenue of this country a large sum of money from year to year, and I think that the only consideration they have ever got was a grant of five thousand dollars, when the Government of Eir Edward Morris was in power. But that was not sufficient for their needs and I think that the Government now should give some consideration to the prayer of this petition. I dare say that the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, who is well acquainted with that locality, knows the needs of these people.

With regard to the telephone at Main Point, Gander Bay, I know that some of the people there have no means of getting in touch with a doctor, except by going several miles away from that locality. So many places of lesser importance than this have telephones that I think the Government should give this locality the telephone.

MR. HALFYARD—Mr. Speaker, I beg to support the petitions that have been presented by the honourable member for Fogo. I would especially refer to the petition asking for telephone connection with Main Point, and I trust that the Hon. Minister of Posts and Telegraphs will not only be interested in giving a telephone to Main Point, Gander Bay, but that he will, if he has any money to spend on the improvement of the telephone service, complete the circuit in that district. I have had some experience as Minister of Posts and Telegraphs, with the interruption of messages to Fogo District. They have now to get connection by Gambo. The telephone now ends, I think at Frederickton. If it were continued from Frederickton up along Gander Bay, and connect with the line that goes to Beaverton, then you would have a complete circuit, so that you would have two lines to depend upon where you have only one now; especially in the fall of the year when they are getting messages in connection with the trade and the shipping of the fish. That is the reason why I refer to the matter at the present time. We tried to make connections like this when I was the Minister of Posts and Telegraphs, and I know that the present Minister is trying to do the best that he can do. This is a very important connection and I think that it should be made as soon as possible, and I hope that the Government will see its way clear to make this telegraph and telephone connection.

MINISTER OF MARINE & FISHERIES—Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present a petition from the inhabitants of Brooklyn, Portland and Jamestown in the District of Bonavista on the subject of a public wharf. The petitioners state here that the bay boat calls at Brooklyn and that there is no wharf whatever for the landing and the taking off of the passengers, and that at the low tide the boats cannot get within a hundred yards of the landwash. This is very inconvenient for the ladies and I hope that the Government will see its way clear to grant the sum of money which I say is very needful.

MR. ASHBOURNE—Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present a petition from the inhabitants of Jenkins' Cove and vicinity on the matter of a breakwater. Practically every man in this cove is a fisherman and they are petitioning the House for the allocation of a sum of money to construct this breakwater and to show the interest that they have in this work, they say that they are prepared to contribute a certain amount of free labour for the construction work on this breakwater. On the eve of a storm they have to bring their boats to Twillingate or some other place of shelter or else when they get up in the morning they find them sunk at their moorings. I heartily support the petition and I hope that it will be received and sent to the department to which it relates.

MR. BROWN—I, Mr. Speaker, give this petition my hearty support. The need for this breakwater is very necessary and the sum of money is small, and I hope that the Government will see its way to grant the prayer of the petitioners.

MR. GRIMES—Mr. Speaker, I beg to endorse the petition presented by Mr. Ashbourne.

Hon. Mr. Cramm presented the Report of the Select Committe on the petition of the Newfoundland Textile Company, Limited, as follows:

The Select Committee appointed to consider the Petition of the Newfoundland Textile Manufacturing Co., Limited, praying that a Bill be introduced to ratify an agreement between the Government and the said Company, have considered the matter to them referred and report that in their opinion it is advisable to grant the prayer of the Petitioners, notwithstanding that full and sufficient notice has not been given and that the Rules of the House in that respect be suspended and that leave be given to introduce the Resolutions hereto annexed.

Respectfully submitted.

Pursuant to notice and on motion of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, the House resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole to consider certain Resolutions respecting the Encouragement of Shipbuilding.

Mr. Speaker left the Chair.

Mr. Puddester took the Chair of Committee.

Committee of the Whole on Resolutions respecting the Encouragement of Shipbuilding.

MINISTER OF MARINE & FISHERIES—Mr. Chairman, in introducing the resolutions in connection with the encouragement of shipbuilding I may say the idea is the encouraging of the rebuilding of ships. We pass annually in this country a bill for the encouraging of the building of ships.

During the last few years due to the small price of fish one will find that the schooners which are prosecuting the Labrador fishery in this country are of a very poor class. It has been admitted by a number of fishermen during the last few years that the number of schooners that are prosecuting the fishery to the Straits of Belle Isle and the Labrador is decreasing. I know from personal knowledge several schooners on the north side of Bonavista Bay, and I have no doubt that there are other schooners in other parts of the country like them, that have been going to the fisheries for the last two or three years, and I am sure that no other men except Newfoundlanders would dare leave port in them. But because of the small price of codfish and the high price of foodstuffs which that class of man uses, they had either go to the fisheries in these vessels or leave the country. For this reason there was a great agitation started during the last twelve months to see if it was not possible that something could be done to help out the fisheries of the country by giving a bonus for the rebuilding of fishing schooners.

All the people of this country are not so versed as to know what it means to rebuild ships. I think I may say that the northern bays of the country are the only ones that know the real meaning of rebuilt ships. They have been rebuilding ships in Notre Dame Bay, Trinity Bay and Bonavista Bay for the last twenty five years. I know that in my own home town where I live, there have been fully thirty vessels rebuilt within the last fifteen years. Some people might say that a vessel rebuilt is not as good a vessel as the vessel built from the keel, and common sense would argue that such is the case. It has been proved without a doubt on the north side of Bonavista Bay and Trinity Bay during the last twenty years and even twenty five years that the vessels rebuilt on the north side of Bonavista Bay have stood just as long as a new one that came right from the stocks. I have in my mind today a schooner that I bought myself twenty years ago at Burin. I ran it for one year then got it rebuilt, and that vessel is eighteen years prosecuting the Labrador fishery, and once or twice it has been down as far as vessels have gone on the Labrador, and during the last couple of years has been plying the coastal trade around the Island, and as most of the people who are engaged in the coastal trade know, you must have good schooners for the coastal trade as well as the fishery. You have to have the vessel running for a longer time, and much later in the Fall of the year than at the fishery. Therefore, Mr. Chairman, I have no hesitation in saying that a schooner properly rebuilt is actually as good as one that comes from the stocks with the exception of the canvas and the rigging, but as far as the hull is concerned I can prove within a very short time that we have several schooners on the Labrador that were built twenty five years ago on the north side of Bonavista Bay. A schooner rebuilt probably costs as much as one built new. The only idea, and one of the personal ideas in getting ships rebuilt this year was because we found it was impossible to buy new ships, and another reason for rebuilding ships is, in nine cases out of ten you can put back the spars and the rigging that were on her before, and in many instances they will be found good enough for two or three years more. We will not have to condemn good spars or canvas in rebuilding. These are not the intentions of these resolutions to condemn any canvas, rigging or spars or new material when the vessel is being rebuilt during the winder under the resolutions that I am bringing forward here. You will find that inspectors have got the authority to examine all the schooners and see what ones should be rebuilt. They have also got authority when they are rebuilt and fitted out for the fisheries to condemn anything not fit for serious work, and if there is anything fit for the coming year they will see that it is put back again, in this way they will save thousands of dollars of expense. As we have been told the Government of this Colony has pledged itself to do all it can afford to do for the advancement of the fisheries of this country. You may say that these schooners could have been bought for the same price as it cost to rebuild them in other countries. I may say for the information of this House that men have been sent to the United States and Canada during the last four months, and they find that it is an utter impossibility to buy any ships whatever. Men have been around this country, to different parts, seeking to buy vessels for the coming season, and have found it an utter impossibility to buy even one, and therefore, there is nothing else left to do for these fishermen who want to prosecute the fisheries next season but to start in and rebuild the old ones. We have, at the present time, somewhere in the vicinity of thirty five vessels getting rebuilt. These resolutions i have brought in here today to ask permission that a bounty of twenty dollars per ton be given on schedule A, fifteen dollars a ton on Schedule B and eight dollars a ton on Schedule C. These vessels will be built under inspection of the same inspectors that have been inspecting new vessels for the last seven or eight years.

The Honourable member for St. Barbe gave notice of a motion in reference to asking if any new inspectors had been appointed this year. I am not saying this for the information of the member for St. Barbe. I will give him that information tomorrow. But I may say that owing to the number of schoooners getting rebuilt we have found it necessary to increase the number of our surveyors. We would have liked to increase the numbers of surveyors to double what it is at the present time, and I think I can explain to this House that by increasing the number twofold we would be saving money to this country and we would be saving a lot of time to the fishermen and others rebuilding their vessels. The vessels, according to these resolutions are supposed to be pulled out of the water so that the inspectors will be able to see their keels, I have got communications from different parts of the country asking why the vessels should not be rebuilt in the water. Now I may say as far as my own knowledge serves me, and I think that I have seen as many vessels rebuilt during the last twenty five years as any other man, I want to say that any vessel that needs to have a good job done, that has to be properly repaired, and in order to guarantee to the people of the country that the money paid for rebuilding these vessels has been properly spent, I feel sure they should be pulled out of the water. I could not argue that it is not possible to rebuild vessels in the water and make a good job of it, but I say that in nine cases out of ten it will be an inferior job. I know of one vessel that was rebuilt down on the north side of Bonavista Bay last year. It was rebuilt in the water and the man who rebuilt her did not not rebuild her to save money, because he could have spent much more than he did and still have lots left; but he had his own opinion that the vessel could be rebuilt in the water, and he got it rebuilt. I may say here now that after prosecuting the fishery this season he had to get a lot of extra repairs done after it came in prior to lying up for the winter. I have my opinion and also that of Mr. Gulliford who has been inspector of ship for the past eight or ten years, and also Mr. McFarlane. After I had a meeting of the three men and myself we argued out every point that we thought necessary in reference to the building of the vessels in the water, and in reference to the other clauses in the resolutions, and the three men came to the same conclusion that if we allow the vessels to be rebuilt in the water in some instances the Government would be taken advantage of. Therefore, we came to the conclusion and recommended the executive Government that every ship that is going to be recommended for a rebuilding bounty had to be pulled out of the water so that the inspectors could see the bottom. I may say, Mr. Chairman, for the information of this House, and also for the country outside that all the vessels I have seen rebuilt on the north side of Bonavista Bay could not have been rebuilt in the water, because the timber is rotten right down to the water's edge.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I am fully persuaded that the paying of a bonus for the rebuilding of ships in this country this winter will mean at least an extra twenty five vessels for the codfishery next summer that would not have been there but for the bounty or part of the bounty paid for rebuilding, and I think that it is a conceded fact to every member of the House that our sailing fleet has been fast dwindling down, and the summer is coming, and the sooner our Labrador fleet gets back to what it was twenty five years ago the better for the country. The men who prosecute the codfishery of this country in floaters, I have no hesitation in saying that unless they get shipwrecked they do not cost the finances of this country one copper for going down to Labrador and coming back, but what do we find? These people dropped out of going down in their floaters, and they are now taken down by the coastal boats, and that way do not give the people the same chance to get their voyage of codfish as they would if they went down in the floaters. In my boyhood days people from Conception Bay who were going down would go in vessels, and if there were no fish above they would go further down the Labrador and bring back a voyage of fish. They go down and get ashore from the steamers, and if there are no fish they can't go anywhere else, and if they can't get fish the Government has to look out for them.

What would happen but for the Labrador fishery. Supposing that 45 of the vessels that went to the Labrador fishery could not go there. Three parts of these men would have been in the lumber woods or somewhere else trying their best to get a living for themselves and their families. They went down on the Labrador Coast and one and all brought enough fish to pay for their summer expenses and keep their families for the winter. Therefore, it is up to us to keep that class of men fishing. Some of the finest fishermen that we have in this country go down to the Labrador in their floaters. I do not say that they are better than those that go down on the land. But they are equally as good. And there are numbers of them in the United States who have been there for the last two years. If they had their floaters and could go down on the Labrador they would be back here and be glad to be out of the burning sun for the coming year.

MR. SCAMMELL—Mr. Chairman, of course the position this afternoon is that we have placed before us merely resolutions that, perhaps, may only mean the authorizing of the Minister of Fisheries to give effect to some scheme of paying a bounty on ship-repairing. Perhaps it is just as well that I should make no lengthy reference now, as we are all interested in this admirable scheme, and will have an opportunity for criticism when the Bill itself is introduced. From what has already been said, and from the Resolutions as introduced, I think there are many points open to criticism. With the general policy of the Resolutions, a bounty for the repair of fishing vessels, I have no disagreements whatever. The idea of granting the bounty is ideal, and I may say I think it originated from this side of the House last year. As I pointed out last summer we hope the Government would have been able to outline earlier the scheme they intended to introduce in this connection. You are coming in now with the Resolutions after the people have done what I pointed out they would do. Many of them have required their schooners and they will now be in a most unfortunate position, if they are not entitled to the Bounty under this Act. I reiterate that there is no need of lengthy discussion now, as I take it the whole House agrees with the principle of paying the Bounty, and when the Bill comes up we will have an opportunity of dealing more fully with it. I now merely wish to express my heartiest accord with the spirit of the Resolutions, and will have something more to say on the matter when the Bill comes before the House.

MR. HALFYARD—Mr. Chairman, I also rise to support the principle of the Resolutions now before the Chair, regarding the granting of a Bounty for the repairing of schooners. It is not my intention to speak critically as to the Resolutions, but rather more in the way of an appreciation than a criticism. I notice in the Resolutions that under Schedule B a vessel repaired is entitled to a Bounty of $20.00.

MINISTER OF MARINE—It is now $20.00.

MR. HALFYARD—I do not know if it is in order, Mr. Chairman, but I would like to ask at what date will Schedule B take effect.

MINISTER OF MARINE—From January 1st or for any vessel inspected before that.

MR. HALFYARD—I would like to take this opportunity to refer to the case of a vessel that was re-built during the Winter and Spring of 1924, the vessel owned by Captain Henry Miller of New Bonaventure. He hauled her up and repaired her, and no doubt the Minister of Marine has some knowledge of the work that man did. I think it was a very courageous thing for him to undertake all the expense in repairing the schooner "Melba," of which he is owner and master. When he heard of this Bounty he wrote to me and said he thought it would be an injustice if it did not revert back to 1924. I do not think the Government will have to pay for many vessels repaired during that year. He had spent four or five thousand dollars and I feel sure the vessel was as well repaired as if he had expected the bounty. I just mention this so that the Honourable Minister may take it into consideration, and antedate the time of the Bill taking effect, so as to include the schooners rebuilt in 1924. I do not think this will entail any great expense on the Government, and it will be an act of justice to those who took up rebuilding at a time when almost everybody was afraid to spend money in this way.

MR. HICKMAN—Mr. Chairman, I would like to refer to Section 6, and call the attention of the Minister of Marine to the fact that the people who now have schooners going under repairs were not aware of the conditions under which the Bounty is to be granted. Some of them did not haul the schooners out of the water, and if they did not, and have gone to much expense they will not be given the Bounty. I think there should be some extenuating circumstance, providing owners who have gone under expense of repairing their schooners to receive the Bounty, as they did the work solely with the understanding of it being granted them, and perhaps many of them could not do it without assistance from the Government. If they have done a good job without assistance from the Government; if they have done a good job without hauling the vessel out of the water, they should receive some recompense. I think the idea of encouraging the repairing of vessels is a good one, as at present there is a shortage of fishing-schooners in the country. I think that Mr. Scammell was responsible for the introduction of this subject last Session. He is a practical man evidently as to the building and repairing of vessels, and his advice has been well taken. I would like before the passing of this Bill that the Government, and the Minister of Marine should give consideration to Section 6 as to this matter.

MR. SCAMMELL—I would like to know if by allowing these Resolutions to go through we are merely admitting the general principle?

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—No, the Bill is a duplicate of this as honourable members know.

MINISTER OF MARINE & FISHERIES—Mr. Chairman, with reference to the remarks of the Leader of the Opposition I may say that early last Fall it was broadcasted over the country that it was the intention of the Government to pay a bounty on ships and up to the present time we have received only four letters from all over the country regarding the rebuilding of schooners in the water. Two of them were at Port Union before there was any talk of a bounty being paid and are not rebuilt yet. Now there was no excuse for holding them up, as I told Mr. Russell, the assistant Manager at Port Union about the matter over two months ago. Another letter that I had came from Bay de Verde district and another from Green Bay. I personally think, however, that something should be done to encourage the man who started to rebuild early last Fall. Mr. Halfyard referred to a man named Miller at Trinity. I know of another man named Samson of Bonavista Bay who has built a schooner a credit to himself and a credit to the country. We brought in this Bill I might say for this year only, but so far we have heard of only four schooners being rebuilt in the water.

MR. BROWN—Mr. Chairman, my opinion is that a vessel cannot be properly repaired in the water. She should be pulled out in order to be examined and rebuilt properly. But on the other hand I think that consideration should be given to the men who are having vessels repaired and who intended to make repairs previous to 1925 if they had been given notice to pull them out of the water before November last. In the case of the two vessels at Port Union, referred to by the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, probably if this notice had been given in November to them these vessels might have been pulled out of the water. But then it might have been that the Minister was not in a position to give them notice at that time because it did not effect more than a half dozen or so. I am in accord with the principle of the Bill.

MR. ASHBOURNE—Mr. Chairman, I am in accord with the principle of this Bill and anyone who has watched how quickly the fishing fleet is depleting will recognise that this is a move to help those who have fishing schooners. With regard to the point so much discussed about rebuilding a schooner in the water or hauling her up to be overhauled, I think that if a schooner is careened or hove down her keel is thrown out of the water and she can be examined thoroughly. All our schooners are examined in this fashion and I claim there is no necessity to haul a vessel out of the water entirely to examine her. I am also of the opinion that it would impose great hardships on some schooner owners in order for them to get a bounty of eight dollars per ton. I have not had the chance of going through these resolutions and examining them carefully. and I would like for the Committee to rise so as to give an opportunity to those interested of looking up the different schedules. Eight dollars per ton might be satisfactory for some schooner owners and it might be money out of pocket for other owners.

MR. HICKMAN—In view of the request made by Mr. Ashbourne, I would ask the Minister if he would be good enough to have the Committee rise today. Evidently he has some information that he wants to look up. Other members perhaps feel the same way. I do not think that there would be much delay in the Bill.

THE MINISTER OF MARINE & FISHERIES—What information do you want to get on this?

MR. ASHBOURNE—If you would give us information as to what is required to get the bounty under Schedule D.

MINISTER OF MARINE & FISHERIES—A thinner plank. It is not a matter of tonnage.

MR. ASHBOURNE—Mr. Chairman. I want it distinctly understood that I do not wish to hold up the House and I am just as much in earnest as the Hon. Minister as far as that is concerned, and if I can get the information that is necessary I am satisfied to proceed.

MR. DUFF—Mr. Chairman, I would like to say that I am in favour of these resolutions. It is an effort in the right direction. I also agree with the gentlemen who have just spoken. Unless the vessels are hauled up out of the water there is no chance of repairing them thoroughly. I am afraid that the Minister of Marine and Fisheries will never see the schooners come back to where they were in years past. I am afraid our fishermen in some sections are not inclined to go back to the schooners. They want to be carried in steamers.

Mr. Speaker resumed the Chair.

The Chairman from the Committee reported that they had considered the matter to them referred and had passed the said Resolutions with some amendment and reecommended the introduction of a Bill to give effect to the same.

On motion this Report was received and adopted, and the Bill entitled "An Act respecting the Encouragement of Shipbuilding" was introduced and read a first time, and it was ordered that the said Bill be read a second time on tomorrow.

Pursuant to notice and leave granted, and on motion of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, the Bill entitled "An Act to Amend Chapter 172 of the Consolidated Statutes (Third Series) entitled 'Of the Survey of Foreign Going and Labrador Vessels" was introduced and read a first time, and it was ordered that the said Bill be read a second time on tomorrow.

Pursuant to notice and leave granted and on motion of Hon. the Minister of Justice the Bill entitled "An Act to Amend Chapter 83 Consolidated Statutes 1916 (Third Series) and Act in Amendment thereof" was introduced and read a first time and it was ordered that the said Bill be read a second time on tomorrow.

Pursuant to notice and on motion of Hon. the Prime Minister the House resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole to consider certain Resolutions respecting the Dry Dock at St. John's.

Mr. Speaker left the Chair.

Mr. Puddester took the Chair of Committee.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER— Mr. Chairman, on Thursday last the Railway Commission met for the purpose of deciding, as there were three vessels coming off the dock, whether any further vessels were allowed to go on. We have before us, first, Mr. Crandell's report in which he said that the dock was absolutely unsafe, and the Report from Mr. Mitchell who cam edown as engineer, at our request, from Messrs. W. I. Bishop, and he also reported unfavourably, and finally Mr. Bishop himself was at the meeting on Thursday last, and he practically confirmed all that had been said by the other people. In fact, he gave us to understand that if the dock belonged to somebody else, if it belonged to a private company that we, as a Government should close it up and refuse in the interest of public safety to permit any further vessels to go on it. In view of that, there was nothing else to do but to flood the dock, thus it remains today, and there it will remain unless some step in the matter is decided upon by this House.

I have already announced to this House in connection with the proposition that it was a question of putting the dock back into the condition which it was before, or making a very much improved dock with much better facilities. Under any condition it will be necessary to build a coffer dam and that will put the dock out of commission for twelve months, and consequently it seemed to us that by accepting the lesser expensive proposal we would still put the dock out of commission for a year, and partly for this reason we favour it. Two propositions have been put up. We have Mr. Crandall's and Mr. Bishop's reports before us today. These gentlemen have prepared their reports without knowing of each other's ideas, and Col. Sullivan will be able to explain the technicalities to the House better than I can. The first proposition is from the Crandall Engineering Company and the amount is $242,000 plus 15% for putting the dock back in its former condition, with the same facilities as before. Mr. Bishop's Company for the same proposition figures on $263,000, so that in that case there is a sum of $15,000 in favour of the Bishop Company for the same proposition. In the second proposition of Mr. Crandall's, no renewal of piling is allowed for, and the dock is widened to seventy feet and the estimated cost is $624,000 plus 15 per cent, which is $93,000, and the total is $717,000. This proposal only reduces leakage, and does not provide steel sheet piling. In this case with the cost of unwatering not allowed for added there would be a further cost of $28,000, and that would make the total $745,-000.00. The same proposition from the Bishop Engineering Company giving a dock 600' x 70' x 30' for $896,000 plus contingencies and unwatering and allowing for the bilge blocks which brings the total up to $988.00.

If we deduct $390,000 for the crane, pumping station, capstans, ballards and quay wharf timber, jetty rock heartenings, sheerlegs roadway, the amount will be $598,000 and adding 10 per cent. for engineering which will be $59,800 the total will be $657,800. This will give us a much larger dock and it will be absolutely water tight. There is a difference of eighty seven thousand dollars in that figure and that given by the Crandall Engineering Company. If we turn to what was tendered for by the Crandall Engineering Company we find that it would widen the dock to seventy feet and that the cost would be $624,000. Mr. Crandall's Company asks for a commission of 15 per cent., while the Bishop Company has asked for $70,000 outside the cost of the operations whether these amounted to $900,000 or a million.

I think that the plans which will be laid on the table of the House this afternoon will show that the Bishop Company has given us a better proposition than the Crandall people. The Crandall people are largely manufacturers of floating docks and they have been very successful, and I have no doubt that Mr. Crandall is a very experienced and thoroughly competent engineer, but the Bishop Company seems to us to have been more thorough in the matter. They say that by deepening the dock they will get down to the bedrock. There is also, they say, a pressure of eight hundred pounds a square foot upward pressure, against four hundred pounds per square foot downwards pressure, and they considered it necessary to make some borings and so relieve the pressure. The Bishop proposition gives a new jetty and a steel wall practically from the Long Bridge right down to the end of the shed, and we would also be getting from them a pier of length five hundred feet, so that we would be able to handle all the coal that we may require. The dock gates will be widened and new gates put in the dock. The dock will also be made longer and wider, and what is more important it will be moved from its present position. The centre line of the dock will be moved six feet further to the north side and reducing the width at the top the new dock would have thirteen feet more space on the northern side. There are also concrete walks provided for round the dock. There would also be a railway carrying a travelling crane which would greatly facilitate the repairs to ships. This proposition would entail the expenditure of about a million dollars and then we would have a dock which would be able to handle anything which could possible come here. I asked Mr. Bishop, who is a practical engineer,whether he thought that our equipment was able to take care of the work which we might have, or whether he thought that it might be necessary to make another expenditure to make the equipment compose with the dock. He was over the dock today and it is his opinion that the expenditure would not have to be very large to be able to handle anw work that might come in.

I do not know if there is very much more that I want to say on this matter just now. I want to place the facts before the House this afternoon, so that the House may be able to give the necessary consideration to the resolutions which we may prepare. As I said a little while ago a more technical explanation in connection with the comparative statement of the two propositions can be better dealt with and better explained by Colonel Sullivan. It did not seem to us that we could possibly get a firm to give us a definite proposition on the dock because they did not exactly know what they would have to do and it did not seem that either company could be expected to do this unless it was at a very increased cost for their own security. We have the best reports of the Bishop Company, it may be remembered that they did their work most satisfactorily on the Humber and elsewhere. They have a good reputation to maintain and they give us a fairly good assurance that there will be no great increase over the figures estimated. We have brought Mr. Mitchell here but we were not entirely dependen on him. We have also Mr. Bishop who has proved himself an engineer of great ability and besides him Mr. Swan, a world famous engineer in Montreal, have had all the plans submitted to him, so that it can be seen that we have two or three checks on the proposition which we have before the Government and I cannot help feeling that if we can afford to do anything at all if we are to have a good dock in Newfoundland we have to take the present opportunity. It is possible that we could have found somebody else who would have offered to do this work for a smaller commission, but we have got the measurements all checked up by Mr. Joyce and the figures have been gone into very carefully, and the work that has been done has been done very thoroughly, and the Engineers have assured us that we can be content that the estimates will be correct or that at all events they will not be exceeded. We did have a suggestion from the Northern Construction Company that they might come down here and tender for the proposition, but we thought that as we had two engineers down here, already working on it, and since they had gone into the matter very thoroughly, and as the figures were very much alike,, that there was not much of an object in getting a third party down to give an opinion on it. At any rate we have come to the stage where the work must be proceeded with. At first we have to build a coffer dam and that has to be done at once. That work will take at least to next January if it is to be completed, and while we are ready to consider any proposition in connection with this matter we do not think that there is any way to avoid putting the dock out of commission for a year. I simply submit these resolutions, gentlemen.

HON. M. S. SULLIVAN—Mr. Chairman: After having studied the reports submitted by the Crandell Engineering Co. and Wm. I. Bishop, Ltd., we have all no doubt, arrived at the same opinion, namely, that the Dock is in a very serious condition, and the Government, under the circumstances, must at once take immediate steps to make the necessary repairs if the dock is to continue in operation. As it is now, with rotten wood work only supporting the dock gate, on which there is a pressure of 1400 tons, which might cause it to collapse at any moment, neither the Government nor the Railway Commission dare assume the responsibility of allowing any more ships to be put on dock for repairs, and instructions have been given by the Railway Commission to close the dock until such time as it has been put in proper repair. It is possible that the gate might stand for one year or two years, but on the other hand, it might collapse at any moment. If such a catastrophe occurred with a steamer or steamers on dock, the result would be appalling. One can easily imagine the frightful wreckage and damage that would result, entailing great financial loss, with perhaps what would be worse, considerable loss of life.

The Dock situation should be treated non-politically, and we should be very glad to get the opinion of the Opposition in deciding on the best method of deailng with this very serious proposition, and in doing so, we must be guided considerably by the reports submitted by the consulting engineers. We must decide, and decide promptly, what is to be done, because it is only by starting repairs at once, that it will be possible to complete the work by December 1925, otherwise, we would be in the months of January, February and March, and owing to the climate conditions in this country, those months are not suitable to do repair work, and if put off, work done at this season would cost considerably more than if it were done in a milder season. The closing of this public utility is going to entail considerable loss to the country, as well as a great amount of inconvenience to ship owners.

Three of four propositions have been put forward by the firms of engineers who submitted the reports. Which scheme we shall adopt is for the House to decide. There is a further proposition and that is, to close the dock permanently. This, I think, cannot be entertained for many reasons. From 150 to 200 men are employed in connection with work at the dock and around it. Wages paid out in 1924 amounted to $176,000.00. The cost of material purchased and used in connection with repair work on the dock in 1924 amounted to $115,000.00. The indirect revenue to the country from the purchasing power of the $176,000.00 paid in wages and the duty collected on the $115,000.00 worth of material used in connection with the dock repairs, say at 25%, is the equivalent of $72,750.00 per annum. In addition to this, we have, according to the General Manager of the Railway, Mr. Russell, a net profit on the operation of the dock in 1924, of $41,200.00, making a total, direct and indirect revenue of $113,950.00 per annum. From the figures quoted, I do not think we would be justified in closing the dock permanently. We must also bear in mind, that with a modernized dock equipped with machine shops and with improved facilities for doing work, and moreover, situated as we are geographically, there is every reason to suppose that with the improvements suggested, much better results would be obtained.

Now, let us consider the several propositions outlined in the two reports which have been tabled for the information of this House.

The Crandell Engineering Co. make four propositions. 1 and 2 are similar for reconditioning the Dock as it is, at a price of $357,000.00. Proposition No. 3 is to re-condition and widen dock with retaining concrete walls, including concrete gate, at an estimated cost of $624,000.00. Please note that the Crandell Co. recommends that if funds are available that proposition No. 3 has the most to recommend it. Proposition No. 4 is for a new dock, at a cost of three or four million dollars, which I think is not likely to be entertained, and it is unnecessary for me to refer to it any further. The Crandell Engineering Co. offer engineering supervision at 4 p.c. of the cost, or they are ready to undertake the construction on a cost plus 15 p.c. basis.

Now let us consider the propositions put forward by Colonel Mitchell, the consulting engineer for Wm. I. Bishop, Ltd.

Proposition No. 1 deals with repairs to existing dock, as outlined on Colonel Mitchell's report, which does not widen or deepen the dock. This is to be done at a cost of $500,000.00. Proposition No. 2 is practically the same as the Crandell Engineering Co.'s No. 3 proposition, except that considerable work is included in Proposition No. 2 by Bishop, which Crandell makes no mention of, and of which I am supplying details.

Estimated cost of Bishop's No. 2 Proposition, $1,086,000.00. Bishop offers engineering supervision at 4 p.c. of the cost or agrees to do the work on a cost plus basis of 10 p.c. inclusive. Referring again to Bishop's Proposition No. 1, which deals with the renewal of the Dock as originally built, and allowing steel sheet piling for the South Side and West end of Dock and cut offs at entrance. including—

1. Coffer Dam.
2. Renewal of entrance.
3. Renewal of decayed timber.
4. Grouting under floor to make the Dock water tight.
5. Concrete Toe Wall edge of floor.
6. Clay Puddle.
7. Steel sheet piling (costing about $72,000.00).
8. Repairing Caisson or gate.

Estimated cost of above ..	$285,400.00
Contingencies	20,000.00
Engineering 4%	11,445.00
Contractors fixed fee	28,500.00
	$345,345.00

As against Crandell's estimate of $357,00.00
Balance in favour of Bishop $11,655.00 plus addition suggested in report.

9. Roadway concrete base, granite paving.
10. Travelling Crane, 20 tons, on the north side of the Dock, with a 70' radius.
11. Bollards and Power Capstans and Mooring Rings.
12. Lowering Pumps new suction and discharge ropes.

Estimated cost	$112,500.00
Contingencies ..	6,655.00
Engineering ...	4,500.00
Contractors fixed fee..	11,000.00
Unwatering.. ..	20,000.00
		154,625.00

Total estimate outlined in report.

Proposition No. 2 covers the widening, lengthening, and deepening the dock in concrete, with masonry entrance and renewal of the upper portion in timber. The Dock will then accommodate vessels 600 feet long by 70 feet beam and entering on 30 feet draught over the sill. This estimate also provides for everything in Proposition No. 1 with the addition of Quay wall 700 feet long eastward from the Long Bridge to end of the present shed. It also includes timber jetty 550 feet long on the south side of entrance, with rock heartening, replacing shorelegs and elevating same and removing from the north side to the south side, moving, replacing and lowering present pumping station, and a new caisson or gate.

Estimated cost of above ..	$896,000.00
Contingencies	60,000.00
Engineering	32,000.00
Contractors fixed fee	70,000.00
Unwatering	28,000.00

total as outlined in estimate.

Looking ahead, I think it is the general opinion of the Government that it is in the best interests of the country that whatever we do now, should be done with a view to its being an asset to the country, and re-conditioning of the Dock as it was, is not looked upon as being a good business proposition. The type of ships being built now is altogether different from the ship which were built when the present Dock was constructed, and it is necessary that the Dock should be widened and deepened. If scheme No. 2 is carried out, we shall have a Dock which will suit our purpose as good as proposition No. 4, which was estimated to cost between three and four million dollars, and a Dock that will cost very little in repair, as it is only the top portion will be wood. To tighten the Dock it is absolutely necessary that a new concrete bottom should be put in, as it cannot be widened out from the old concrete bottom which is there now. From information obtained, it seems that there was a certain amount of skimping done on the Dock when constructed. The type of dock built at the time the Government Dock was built called for a concrete bottom with a thickness of about 6 feet of concrete at the entrance, tapering off to 2½ feet at the inside end. From investigation made, it seems that there is a uniform depth of about 2 feet of concrete in the bottom of the Dock and necessity for the deepening of the Dock is urgent, because the old Dock is not down to proper foundations. It was thought or assumed at the time that they were down to till. It is true that they succeeded in getting down to till at one or two places but not uniform. It is necessary to get down to solid foundation that is impervious to water. From experiments made by borings at the Dock, it was found that considerable water pressure was acting on this thin concrete floor on the bottom of the dock. This I shall refer to later on in my remarks, but by deepening the Dock as outlined in proposition No. 2 from experiments made, there is no doubt but the proper foundations will be reached.

I shall give you now, a comparison in cost of the two proportions which I think should be considered.

COMPARISON OF PROPOSITIONS

Crandell Engineering Company, Proposition No. 3.

	$644,600.00

leaving a difference of $89,000.00 in favour of Bishop, Limited.

No explanation that one can give this House can make clear to you the great difference in the Crandell Engineering Company's Proposition No. 3 as compared with William I. Bishop Company's No. 2 Proposition, as a comparison of the plans submitted by both parties will show. I suggest you compare Crandell's plan No. 324 with Bishop's plan No. 4, which are both drawn to the same scale, and after studying same, I am sure that every member of the House will be unanimous as to which Proposition they will select.

An examination of Bishop's drawing No. 2 shows some of the cavities existing in under the altars at sides of Dock. Drawing No. 1 shows where the four holes were put down and also shows where the leaks are in the Dock. At Bore holes No. 1 and 2 considerable water was found by Colonel Mitchell under the floor, and at Bore No. 2 the water pressure amounted to 800 lbs. per square foot, or nearly half a ton, whilst the weight of concrete only amounted to 400 lbs. pressure per square foot. To make the floor of the Dock safe this water must be shut off. This can only be done by carrying out the suggestions as outlined in Colonel Mitchell's report.

Plan No. 11 also shows a very serious condition inside the head gates. I refer to the bulges on both sides of the Dock immediately inside of gate. It also shows the position of the proposed Jetty and its relation to the old hulk "Desola."

Plan No. 3 shows proposed widening and improvements such as position of steel sheet piling all around Dock; proposed new wharf and training wall; proposed new pumping house, and track for 20 ton travelling crane.

If the House should decide on repairing the present Dock, without deepening or widening it, it will mean employment for about 100 men, probably for six or seven months. Most of the men employed will be carpenters, as it will be practically all timber work. With proposition No. 2 it will mean the employment of 400 or 500 men for eight months. In addition to the work on the Dock and the new Jetty, it is proposed to build a transit shed for freight not included by either party. To provide labor and keep the money in the country it has been decided to build a shed of re-inforced concrete instead of importing structural steel, and it has been found that a considerable saving can be effected by a building of re-inforced concrete instead of structural steel, notwithstanding the fact that a very low price has been quoted on structural steel. Construction of this shed will give employment to about fifty men for four months.

For the information of this House, I might say the Government instructed the General Manager of the Railway to have Mr. W. F. Joyce. Chief Engineer of the Newfoundland Government Railway, compare the prices as submitted by the Crandell Engineering Company and by Bishop Co., Ltd. As the Crandell Engineering Company's proposition appeared cheaper, he was instructed to estimate the cost of the extra work outlined in project No. 2 of W. I. Bishop, Ltd., and let us know if the extra amount that Bishop Company was asking for was justified. From the brief synopsis which I gave you earlier in my remarks, you will see there is a difference of $87,800 in favor of the Bishop proposition.

For the information of the House, I quote you extracts from Mr. W. Joyce's report dated March 19th. There is a slight difference between Mr. Joyce's figures and the ones that I have already quoted, as there is an amount of $28,000.00 for unwatering in Crandell's estimtae, which Crandell does not include, and other items. Now, to summarize the matter briefly and show you what has been offered by Bishop in excess of what has been offered by Crandell, I shall do so as briefly as possible:

1. Both Crandell and Bishop agree as to the need for immediate and extensive repairs, the dangerous condition of the entrance and the necessity of building a coffer dam to carry out repairs. Both recommend widening of the Dock. Bishop, through his Engineer, recommends deepening, and there is no doubt in my mind that this is a most suitable proposition, because having to build a coffer dam now, it is just as well to deepen the dock as not. If it had to be deepened in the years to come the coffer dam would have to be built again.

Crandell makes two Propositions for re-conditioning the Dry Dock. One and two are similar, and both are less costly than the estimate submitted by Colonel Mitchell for the Wm. I. Bishop Company, Ltd.

COMPARISON OF PROPOSITIONS.

Common to Both.

Coffer Dam.

Renewal of entrance and altars for 100 feet inside gate.

Renewal of Floor Decking, etc.

Repairs to Caisson or Dock Gate.

Renewal of Altars, Cut of Walls:

Crandell—Upper 12 on each side of entrance, in timber.

Wm. Bishop—Upper 15 on each side entrance and along South and West Banks in steel.

Filling:

Crandell—Around entrance only.

Wm. Bishop—Puddle Clay at entrance and all around inside face of Dock.

Piling:

Crandell—Nil.

Wm. Bishop—25% renewal allowed for.

Costs:

Crandell—15% to be added.

Wm. Bishop—Everything included.

Colonel Mitchell, Bishop's Engineer, found water under the floor under considerable pressure. (At Bore No. 2 this amounted to 800 lbs. pressure per square foot or nearly half a ton), which must be shut off to make floor safe, so he states.

Bishop includes in his estimate the following not included by Crandell:

1. Forcing Cement Grout under floor to seal bottom.

2. Concrete Toe Wall, round floor to seal edge and support clay puddle.

3. Lowering Pumps to increase their efficiency and provision of new Suction and Discharge Pipes to replace present ones, which are badly corroded.

4. Paved Roadway all around Dock.

5. Electrically operated Capstans to warp in ships; provision of Bollards and Mooring Rings, the present Mooring facilities being inadequate.

6. A twenty ton Travelling Crane, placed on the North Side of the Dock.

Scheme 3.

Crandell proposes widening only, and using present concrete floor; Bishop proposes widening and deepening and considers present floor unsafe if Dock widened. Crandell provides retaining walls, 12 feet above floor; Bishop provides retaining walls 16 feet above floor.

Crandell provides no cut off walls or sheet piling.

Bishop provides steel sheet piling on both sides of entrance and along the south and west banks.

Coffer Dam included by both.

New entrance Caisson or Gate included by both.

New width of Floor of Dock, in both cases 70 feet.

Bishop's estimate No. 2 includes following not included in Crandell's price for his No. 3 proposition.

1. 20 ton Travelling Crane on north banks, the top width of Dock being reduced to provide accommodation for it.

2. New concrete wharf on North Side of Waterford River from Long Bridge to East end of shed.

3. New Timber Jetty which can be used for the storage of coal.

4. Rebuilding Pump House, Lowering Pumps, and providing new Suction and Discharge Pipes.

5. Power Capstans, Bollards, etc., as before mentioned.

6. Puddle Clay on inside face of Dock, all round to make sides water tight.

7. Deepening Dock, consistent with increase in width and placing new floor.

8. Dismantling and re-erecting Shorelegs on new Jetty.

9. Rock Heartening under new Jetty on South Side of entrance, to act as training wall for River and prevent silting up of entrance to Dock.

ESSENTIAL DIFFERENCES

1. Crandell only reduces leakage; does not stop it.

2. Bishop has traced sources of leakage and provides means for making Dock water tight.

3. Crandell makes no provision for improvement in handling facilities; Bishop provides complete requirements.

4. Crandell widens Dock, using present Floor, with no increase in depth. Bishop considers Floor unsafe if Dock widened; deepens and widens Dock, providing new Floor.

5. Bishop provides new wharfage and modern handling facilities and stops leaks instead of reducing them.

I trust, Mr. Chairman, that the members of the House will find the remarks I have made, somewhat helpful in assisting them to make up their minds as to the best proposition we should adopt, in the best interests of our country.

MR. HICKMAN—Mr. Chairman, this is the first time I have seen these resolutions and I have not yet seen the plans, and therefore I have not yet had an opportunity of giving it any consideration whatever. We have heard the reports furnished us by the Government. I presume that the Government have not entered into any contract already. From the outline of the two propositions by the Hon. Member for Placentia I take it for granted that he and his Government are very much in favour of the Bishop proposition number two. There are a great many things that we have to say in reference to this in the way of pieces of advice to the Government. And as it is not opportune to say it at present. I am going to ask the Prime Minister if he would be good enough to have the Committee rise so that we would have an opportunity to talk it over. I presume that it is the intention of the Government to utilize the amounts voted in the Committee last year. Then you are going to take authority to raise the balance of the money required for the construction of the dock.

Is it necessary for the Government to raise a further loan upon the credit of the country if you have $600,000 provided for and you are going to do work that we suppose will cost a million dollars. We have a much better revenue and at present is there not sufficient increased revenue to take care of the work without making any further loans on the credit of the colony. Does the Prime Minister think it is possible of not having to borrow any money.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—It is quite possible that we may not have to borrow any more.

MR. HICKMAN—Well, as I said before, it is not possible to discuss fully these resolutions and to talk upon them, and I would ask the Prime Minister if he would be good enough to have the Committee rise.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—Mr. Chairman, in response to the leader of the opposition I may say that I am perfectly willing to have the Committee rise. At the same time I want him to appreciate the fact that every day is important, and if we got no further than to arrange with Mr. Mitchell to build a coffer dam we would be that far ahead. If the opposition are satisfied that we could have the question settled one way or the other definitely to-morrow then we would let the matter stand over and take the rest of the Bill through as quickly as possible. This is a very important matter. Naturally we do not expect to keep Mr. Bishop waiting around here for any length of time. I would like if the leader of the Opposition would get his whole party to consider the situation as soon as possible. Our plans are at their disposal and would they let us have their views on the matter not later than tomorrow.

MR. BROWN—Mr. Chairman, before rising I would ask the Hon. Member for Placentia if there has been any negotiations in connection with the new shed to be erected? Whether there has been allowance made for the load that shed is to corry? I understand that it is to be constructed of reinforced concrete. And seeing in Colonel Mitchell's report the difference brought about by the load of copper ore that was in there at one time some allowance ought to be made against anything of that nature happening again. I understand that all the land is made land. There is no rock bottom at all. That will, I think be matter for consideration.

HON. MR. SULLIVAN—That has been looked into thoroughly and will be provided for. I don't think that there will be any coal stored there. Provision will be made for the storing of the coal on the new shed.

Mr. Speaker resumed the Chair.

The Chairman from the Committee reported that they had considered the matter to them referred, had made some progress, and asked leave to sit again on tomorrow.

On motion this Report was received and adopted, and it was ordered that the Committee have leave to sit again on tomorrow.

MR. HALFYARD asked the Minister of Public Works to lay on the Table of the House a statement of the cost from June 9th, 1924, to date, of the expenditure in connection with the General Post Office, showing in detail the cost of painting, alterations, repairs, fixtures, new desks, and furnishings of all descriptions.

The answer was tabled.

MR. HALFYARD asked Hon. the Colonial Secretary to lay on the Table of the House a copy of the Commission of Colonel Ross, or terms of reference in connection with such a Commission; give the date of the appointment of Colonel Ross; what amount is Colonel Ross being paid daily, weekly, monthly or yearly; when will the Commission of Colonel Ross terminate; also to lay on the Table of the House an interim Report of the Commission.

HON. THE COLONIAL SECRETARY—Colonel Ross was appointed by the Government for the purpose of reorganising the Postal Department. He has been engaged at this work since Dec. 12th last and is being paid at the rate of 500 dollars per month for his services.

It is probable that Colonel Ross will conclude his work within the next few days. He has so far made no report to the Government respecting the matter on which he is engaged.

MR. GODDEN asked Hon. the Colonel Secretary to Table a list showing what persons outside of Major Byrne's Department, were given authority to recommend Relief by Dole; what salaries were paid such persons, and by whom the appointments were made or suggested.

HON. THE COLONIAL SECRETARY—In reply to the Hon. Member I am not aware that authority was given to any person outside Capt. Byrne to recommend relief by dole.

MR. GODDEN—To ask Hon. the Minister of Justice, what instructions verbal or otherwise did he in company with the Hon. the Minister of Finance, give Officials of the Truckman's Union, regarding the issue of the Dole, and if his Department was justified in punishing certain Carmen who accepted the Dole as a result of the instructions given.

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE—What I have to say is in line with the answer given by the Colonial Secretary. The Committee was merely advisory to Capt. Byrne He has charge of the issue of these orders. As regards the query whether the Department of Justice was justified in punishing the offenders. I have but to say the Department of Justice does not punish people. That is done by the court. As to whether the decision of the court was just, that is a matter of the evidence. The proceedings recently taken arose out of the fact that it was discovered certain men were obtaining relief who were at the time steadily employed. These men themselves have been the first to admit that such conduct could not be justified.

MR. GODDEN asked Hon. the Minister of Finance and Customs what amounts are due his Department, as Sales Tax and Business Profits Tax, and who are the delinquents in this respect.

HON. THE MINISTER OF FINANCE—Mr. Speaker, in reply to the Hon. Member for Trinity I may say that it is never the custom of the Finance Department to issue a statement of the amounts as in this case, but I may assure him that we have found delinquents and that we are taking every opportunity to collect the amounts. I do not think that it would be in the interest of anybody to have these amounts published.

MR. BROWN asked Hon. the Colonial Secretary why was an Inspector of Beetle Ravages appointed and who recommended Mr. Arthur English for the position, and what salary is he paid and what are his qualifications.

Tabled.

MR. HICKMAN asked the Minister of Public Works what amounts from his department have been sent to Cupids since 1st June, 1924: to whom were the amounts sent and for what purpose were they sent.

Tabled.

MR. HICKMAN asked Hon. the Minister of Posts and Telegraphs: (1) what is the cost of fitting up the new Telegraph Office at Cupids; (2) what is the Government paying as Rental for the new Telegraph Office; (3) on whose recommendation was Tobias LeDrew appointed to fit up a new Post Office; (4) why is Post Office and Telegraph Office separated; (5) what will be the salary of the Operator; will salary of present Postmistress be reduced.

MR. HICKMAN asked Hon. the Prime Minister to lay on the Table of the House: A statement signed by Mr. H. J. Russell, Manager of the Railroad, giving the amount of Marine Insurance on each of the Government owned steamers at the present time; through whom insured and at what rates.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—Mr. Speaker, I beg to lay the statement on the table of the House. Most of the information has been furnished before at the request of Mr. Scammell, and I hope that it is no reflection on me as chairman of the Railway Commission to ask to have Mr. Russell's signature in this second case.

MR. HICKMAN asked the Hon. the Minister of Finance and Customs to lay on the Table of the House: (1) a copy of the Report made to the Government by Messrs. Read, Son and Watson on the Customs Department during the year 1924; and (2) a copy of the report made on the Controller's Department by Messrs. Read, Son and Watson during 1923-24.

HON. THE MINISTER OF FINANCE—Mr. Speaker, in replying to this question I may say that the question of the Auditor's report is not in my department I may say that the decision of Government is as follows:—

(Tables document)

MR. CASHIN—Mr. Speaker, I would like to make a few remarks about the question asked by Mr. Hickman as to the Auditor's report into the Controller's Department. There has been considerable whispering of late and ever since and during the last general election in connection with myself in connection with this matter I, first of all have not asked the Government to hold back this report or had anything to do with it. Reflections have been cast upon Cashin and Company, both my father and myself in connection with this matter and as regards this matter of tabling this report I think that if possible that this report should be tabled at once. I can see no reason why it should not be tabled. Last spring when the Monroe party went to the polls to the election I am informed that Mr. Warren, at one time the Prime Minister and the Minister of Justice gave this report to the Fisherman's Advocate and that it was used in the election. It was used to considerable effect. I do not think, Mr. Speaker, that I am presuming upon my position if I ask the Government if it is at all possible in view of the fact that the name of Cashin has been used in connection with that report that it might be tabled as soon as possible to show the public that these insinuations that have been cast during the last election and since that have been scattered around are false and to show the people where we stand in this matter. I do not believe that Mr. Hickman has any ulterior motive in asking this question. And Mr. Speaker, as far as i can see there is really no reason why the report should not be tabled as the facts have been made public already in the Advocate during the election of 1924.

MR. WARREN—Mr. Speaker, as i have been referred to as having given the Auditor's report to the Advocate I just desire to say that the report was not given to the Advocate by me.

MR. CASHIN—Mr. Speaker, the fact is that the report got to the Advocate and it did not walk there itself. I do not want to say who my informant is now. But it got there just the same.

MR. HICKMAN asked the Hon. the Minister of Finance and Customs to la yon the Table of the House a statement showing why Mr. Levi Chafe, late Examiner of H. M. Customs, is now suspended; if he is still under salary; why he was suspended; and, if it is the intention of the Government to have him reinstated; if so, when; and if not, why not.

HON. THE MINISTER OF FINANCE—Mr. Speaker, in reply to the Hon. member I would like to say that Mr. L. Chafe has been suspended from the department while this enquiry is being made, and that he is going to remain suspended until the report is complete, and then if nothing has been found against him he will be reinstated.

MR. HICKMAN asked Hon. the Minister of Finance and Customs to lay on the Table of the House a a statement showing: (1) the amount of goods seized at Corner Brook at the time of his own personal visit there last autumn; (2) on what ship or ships goods were seized; (3) the names of the owner or owners of the goods; (4) if the goods are still in the possession of the Custom House; if so, to Table a list of the goods; (5) if the goods were sold or taken over by the Department of the Liquor Controller; or is it correct that a certain amount of these goods have been returned to the owners; if so, on whose authority.

HON. THE MINISTER OF FINANCE—Mr. Speaker, I have much pleasure in passing that over to the hon. gentleman. (Tabled).

Pursuant to notice and on motion of Hon. the Minister of Finance and Customs, the House resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole on Supply.

Mr. Speaker left the Chair.

Mr. Puddester took the Chair of Committee.

Mr. Speaker resumed the Chair.

The Chairman from the Committee reported that they had considered the matter to them referred, had made some progress and asked leave to sit again on tomorrow.

On motion this Report was received and adopted, and it was ordered that the Committee have leave to sit again on tomorrow.

Council's Amendments To The Women's Franchise Bill.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—Mr. Speaker, I would like to explain to the House that this is simply a typographical error that occurred when the bill was going through and we find that by this error we were disenfranchising certain people who might have been out of the country for a short time. It is not the intention to have any change, and with this mistake rectified the spirit of the act has returned to exactly the same position as it was before the ladies applied for the vote. I do not think that the members on the other side of the House need have any objections to these resolutions.

Pursuant to order and on mtoion of Hon. the Prime Minister, the Amendments made by the Legislative Council in and upon the Bill sent up entitled 'Of the Election of Members of the House of Assembly' were read a second time, and agreed to, and it was ordered that a message be sent to the Legislative Council acquainting that body that the said Amendments had been agreed to without amendment.

HON. THE LEADER OF THE OPPOSITION—Mr. Speaker, with regard to that amendment we understood that it was the intention of the Government to make some change. As it stands to-day it is the same as was put in force in 1919, when it was put in force to allow some men who had been out of the country for some years and so could not stand as a candidate to sit and it was put in force at the last session of the Legislature prior to a general election when he was a member, I think, and this alteration was made so that he could become a candidate for a district in the election. And it was because of this that we thought that the Government proposed some change.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—Mr. Speaker, I might explain that we do not want to disenfranchise any body who may have gone to North Sydney to work for a few months and then come home just before the eve of an election. With regards to the matter of men who have been out of the country coming back to stand as candidates, I do not think that we need worry about that. We will not have many candidates coming back to stand for districts two or three days before the election.

MR. HALFYARD—Mr. Speaker, it is the irony of fate that the Prime Minister has to endorse the acts of the Upper House. It is humiliating that legislation should be rushed through this House without having been given any attention whatever. I was held up to ridicule and was accused of delaying the House when the Election Act was before the Committee, and I asked the committee to rise. Some one told the Prime Minister that there was no necessity to have certain words in section 49 of the Election Act, and because someone told the Prime Minister that, and that person did not know what he was talking about, and when I drew the attention of the Prime Minister to the Election Act of 1919 and asked if it was really the intention to repeal the Election Act of 1919 altogether so that a person could not contest a district unless he had been in the country for two years next proceeding the date of the election. Now we have to submit to the humiliation of having to be told by the Upper House that we do not know what kind of Legislation is coming up. If we ask when a new bill has been introduced for the first time and just been distributed, and the introducer has moved the second reading, that the members be given time to consider the matter, we are told that we are holding up the business of the House. In my opinion the Upper House has justified its existence for once in its life because of the attention which it has been giving to the legislation which has come before it. We treat matters here too carelessly and there is always some excuse why we cannot rise the committee and consider the bill the next sitting. At the same time we allow the bill to go to the Upper House and then it comes down here again and we eulogise them for their attention. It should be a lesson to us to give some attention to the bills that are introduced in this chamber and not allow them to pass through the second reading or the Committee or the third reading and then be sent to the Upper House, and then have them sent back again for correction, and for the Upper House to rightly say that the proper attention is not being given to the business of the House.

Income Tax Bill.

HON. THE MINISTER OF FINANCE—Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to ask that that bill be removed from the order paper, and in explanation I might say that this bill has been reconsidered, and we are doing away with the income tax entirely, and I gave notice of a bill today covering this matter.

On motion of Hon. the Minister of Finance and Customs, the Bill "An Act to Amend the Act 13 George V., Chapter XXVI., Respecting a Tax upon Certain Incomes" was stricken from the Order Paper.

MR. GRIMES—Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the Prime Minister if he is in a position to name the Highway Commission?

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—Mr. Speaker, I may say that I am not in a position to do so.

MR. SCAMMELL—May I ask the Hon. Prime Minister if we understood him correctly to say that the personnel of the Highroads Commission would be entirely non-partisan?

HON. PRIME MINISTER—I do not remember saying so.

MR. SCAMMELL—I understood the leader of the Government in the Upper House and the Prime Minister here to have said it would be non-political and non-partisan.

HON. COLONIAL SECRETARY—It is a wise man that can understand all that is said in the Upper House.

MR. HALFYARD—Mr. Speaker, I pray the privilege to refer to the official synopsis of the debates in this House of Assembly. I presume there is someone regarded as an official to prepare the synopsis for publication in certain papers in the city, and elsewhere. If there is a paid official to compile the official synopsis of debates in the House of Assembly, I trust that the Internal Economy Commission will see that he does something to earn his salary.

I refer now to the official synopsis as published in the Newfoundland Trade Review. It is copied completely from the Daily News, and in the Daily News it is not put in as the official synopsis. It says that I spoke for about three hours, and the synopsis of my speech for three hours is put in ten or a dozen lines; and three or four of those lines are taken up with saying that I spoke for about three hours. At the same time, Capt. Winsor, the Minister of Marine and Fisheries who replied to me at much shorter length has about a column taken up in a synopsis of what he said. It is much better for nothing to be said. Certain remarks I made, of course, were just as well left unsaid, but they make a point of publishing those in the official synopsis. It is ridiculous in the extreme; and I trust that the Prime Minister will, on behalf of the members of this House, give his attention to this matter. We do not expect the Daily News to report us members of the Opposition without a political or partisan bias. That is characteristic of Opposition and Government newspapers in reporting what is said in the House of Assembly. But when we come to the Official Synopsis, that is another thing, and it is most unfair that they should compile the synopsis in this way; and I think the official synopsis writer should do better than copy his matter holus bolus from the Daily News.

MR. DUFF—Mr. Speaker, I would like to speak on the same subject. In speaking on the Highway Bill when it was last before the House, I mentioned that in Ontario motorists were charged three cents on a gallon of gasolene, and got three million dollars from it for repairing roads; but I said that if we were to do that in this country, it would cost a dollar a gallon, but I did not, as was reported, suggest that we should put a tax on gasolene. I have been reported incorrectly on several occasions, and it would appear as if it was intentional, and I would call the attention of the Prime Mniister to this method of making a synopsis and ask him to arrange to correct them. I would like the Prime Minister to take notice of that and correct these things.

The remaining Orders of the Day were deferred.

It was moved and seconded that when the House rises, it adjourn until tomorrow afternoon at three of the clock.

The House then adjourned accordingly.

TUESDAY, March 24th, 1925.

The House met at three of the clock in the afternoon pursuant to adjournment.

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present a petition from the residents of Logy Bay in the District of St. John's East asking for an improved launchway and a winch. In asking that this be referred to the Marine Department I would like to point out that this place is, with probably the exception of Pouch Cove, the most important fishing settlement in this section and this aid to the people is badly needed. I therefore ask the Minister of Marine give this petition Minister of Marine to give this petition provement asked for is granted.

NOTICE OF QUESTION.

Mr. Browne gave notice of question.
Mr. Godden gave notice of question.
Mr. Warren gave notice of question.
Mr. Scammell gave notice of question.
Mr. Hickman gave notice of question.
Mr. Brown gave notice of question.

Pursuant to notice and leave granted, and on motion of Hon. the Prime Minister, the House resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole to consider certain Resolutions respecting an Agreement between the Government and the Newfoundland Textile Manufacturing Company, Limited.

Mr. Speaker left the chair.

Mr. Puddister took the chair of committee.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—Mr. Chairman, I may say that these resolutions are only covering the usual agreement with a company of this kind when starting business, and the concessions are the same as given to the Knitting Mills a few years ago with the difference that the Knitting Mills were given a guarantee of 5% on their capital stock but in this case there is no such guarantee. This company expects to begin operations in 5 or 6 months and at the start will employ from 50 to 60 people and eventually double that number.

MR. WARREN—I would like to ask who are the people interested in this company.

Hon. THE PRIME MINISTER—I only know the people whose names are signed here.

MR. WARREN—What is the amount of the capital.

HON. MR. CRAMM—The capital is $50,000.

MR. WARREN—Is it subscribed.

HON. MR. CRAMM—I do not know.

MR. WARREN—Mr. Chairman, I think that the Government is taking a rather long step. Here you are giving the permission to import all the material that they might want to manufacture free of duty, and if you do that you will have a demand from all the factories in town to be allowed to import their goods free of duty also, and I do not see how you can answer them. This is going a long way. You are giving permission to import all woolens, clothes, flannels and anything else they may wish to get in and at the same time you have in the country clothing factories which have not the same protection at all and you will have to take the duty off all the clothing material that is brought into the country. They may employ fifty or sixty people or even a hundred people but there are other factories in the country which pay their taxes and duties on their raw material and I feel that if this bill goes through the House it will be necessary to accede to the request of these people to have their materials come in duty free.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—Mr. Chairman, I think that there is considerable point in the position taken by the Hon. Member for Fortune and I would suggest that the commmittee rise until we give the matter some further consideration.

Mr. Speaker resumed the chair.

The Chairman from the Committee reported that they had considered the matter to them referred, had made some progress, and asked leave to sit again on to-morrow.

On motion this report was received and adopted, and it was ordered that the Committee have leave to sit again on to-morrow.

Pursuant to notice and leave granted and on motion of Hon. the Minister of Justice, the Bill entitled "An Act to Amend Chapter 4 of the Consolidated Statutes (Third Series) entitled "Of Legislative Disabilities and the Vacation of Seats in the House of comse" was introduced and read a first time and it was ordered that the said Bill be read a second time on to morow.

QUESTIONS.

MR. SCAMMELL asked the Prime Minister to lay upon the Table of the House a statement showing: (a) the amount paid to T. Hollis Walker for his services and expenses in connection with the conduct of the Enquiry heid by him last year; (b) the amounts paid to each of the lawyers representing the Government and to each of the other officials.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—Mr. Speaker, I beg to table the information. There was an expenditure of thirty thousand dollars.

MR. BROWN asked Hon. the Minister of Posts and Telegraphs to lay on the Table of the House a statement showing: (a) the number of poles contracted for by his Department for the purpose of repairing the line from Gambo to Musgrave Harbor;

(b) give the names of the different contractors, the number of poles for each contractor and the price paid per pole whether rinded or unrinded; (c) state whether the poles have to be put in piles by the line or at some other selected site; if so, has the Minister information from the different line repairers that the poles have been so placed?

HON. THE MINISTER OF POSTS AND TELEGRAPHS—Mr. Speaker, I beg to lay that information on the table of the House. There were no contracts awarded.

MR. BROWN asked the Minister of Marine and Fisheries to lay on the Table of the House a statement showing: (a) what changes, if any, have been made in the Deputy Surveyors of Shipping; (b) if any new appointments have been made, give the names of the persons appointed, the date of each such appointment, and the salary paid each appointee; (c) have any appointments been made as Surveyors of repaired schooners or schooners that are being repaired, if so give names, the date of each such appointment, the salary paid each such Surveyor, also state whether expenses are allowed in addition to salary or not, and also whether each such appointment is temporary or not.

MINISTER OF MARINE & FISHERIES—Mr. Speaker, I beg to lay that information on the table of the House.

MR. GODDEN asked Hon. the Minister of Finance and Customs if his Department has any men employed as detectives along the waterfront or elsewhere, other than the regular Customs officials; if so, give their names and state what remuneration is given for their services.

HON. THE MINISTER OF FINANCE --Mr. Speaker, In reply to the hon. member for Trinity I would like to say that there is nobody employed in the way asked by the hon. member. But I think that there are lots of people around who seem to be acting as detectives and we are getting all sorts of anonymous letters telling us what to do. Perhaps there is somebody about here who knows something about that. But I know about nobody except Tobin.

MR. GRIMES asked Hon. the Colonial Secretary if he is aware that medical officials, in receipt of salaries from the Government, are assessing and collecting fees for their own enjoyment from patients treated at the General Hospital; if the Board of Governors have discountenanced this procedure and have been backed up by the Governor-in-Council; to produce any correspondence in this connection.

HON. THE COLONIAL SECRETARY —Mr. Speaker, that information is in the course of preparation. I may say that it has been referred to the Governors.

MR. GRIMES asked Hon. the Colonial Secretary, who constitute the Board of Pension Commissioners for Newfoundland and what in each individual case is the amount of salary and any emoluments paid individual members of the Board.

HON. THE COLONIAL SECRETARY --Mr. Speaker, I beg to lay that information on the table of the House.

MR. GRIMES asked Hon. the Minister of Finance and Customs if it is his intention in the adjustment of the Customs Tariff to recommend to the Government that a preference be given to goods manufactured in Great Britain over goods manufactured in countries foreign to Great Britain and imported into Newfoundland.

HON. THE MINISTER OF FINANCE --Mr. Speaker, In reply to the hon. member what my intentions are with regard to this matter. I have not made any decisions.

MR. HICKMAN asked Hon. the Minister of Finance and Customs if Mr. Josiah Gosse of Spaniard's Bay, (late Customs Officer in that place) is receiving a pension; if so, how much.

HON. THE MINISTER OF FINANCE —Mr. Speaker, I beg to say in reply to the hon. member that the pension of Mr. Joseph Gosse of Spaniard's Bay is $560.00 per annum and is provided for in the estimates.

Pursuant to notice and on motion of Hon. the Minister of Finance and Customs, the House resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole on Supply.

Mr. Speaker left the Chair.

Mr. Puddister took the Chair of Committee.

HON. MINISTER OF FINANCE & CUSTOMS—Mr. Chairman, before beginning to explain the different changes in the Estimates, I should like the House to understand that most of the apparent increases appearing in the departmental salaries are not real ones.

In many cases new appointments appearing this year are actually old appointments in the proper sense. These officials have been paid from Contingencies and other votes, some of them for years.

The policy of this Government is to place such amounts where they properly belong, in the salaries lists of the Departments and not hide them away as has been the custom too often in the past.

This is particularly noticeable in the Department of Posts and Telegraphs where, in many cases, offices have been opened for years but no particular salary provided for the officials in charge of them.

In fact, some officials who had passed away were still on the Estimates, and no care seems to have been taken so far as the Estimates were concerned to give the actual facts.

FINANCE DEPARTMENT.

Interest on Public Dept increased $200,000. This is to provide the Interest on four million dollars raised under the Loan Act, 1924 at five per cent.

The salary of the Minister of Education has been dropepd at the request of the Prime Minister. He acts as Prime Minister and Minister of Education at the one salary. This is a decrease of $4,000.

Printing and Stationery Finance Department increase of $250. Provision made for the printing of the Auditor General's Report. Increase in cost of telegrams $175. The Deputy Minister of Finance estimates will need this amount. Increase in sundry Contingencies, $141 is made on the basis of last year's requirements. It is quite possible that we will have credit balances on these three accounts at the end of the fiscal year.

The following salaries have been increased in the Auditor General's Department: First Clerk and Customs Auditor (Mr. E. F. Taylor) is increased $200.00; Second Clerk (J. P. Luscombe) increased $200.00; Third Clerk (K. J. Carter) increased $200.00; Fifth Clerk (A. J. Ivany) transferred at a salary of $1,500.00. Salary of fifth clerk last year was $1,000.00. Clerk-Stenographer increased $228.00; Messenger increased $100.00. Travelling Auditor is a new appointment. Mr. L. Crummey who holds the appointment was transferred from the Railway audit. The explanation of these increases is that a pre-audit has been established in some of the Departments, causing increased responsibility to be placed on the officials concerned. It was found that a Travelling Auditor was absolutely necessary, and as the Government Railway audit was no longer necessary, Mr. Crummey was transferred to the main office.

Starting with Joseph LeMoine, Tidewaiter, Rose Blanche, will be found the list of pensioners added to the list. This represents an increase of $18,357.41. On Page 10 we have increased the pension of Richard Lawton, Sub-collector at King's Cove, by the sum of $199.34, as it was found he had been unfairly dealt with under the Pensions Act. This makes a total increase of $18,556.75. As against this there were decreases brought about by the deaths of several pensioners, which amounted to $3,158.74, making the net increase to the Pensions list of $15,398.01.

In the House of Assembly estimates there is an increase in Members' Sessional Pay of $250.00 to each member. This brings the Sessional Pay back to where it has been for three or four years past. Means $9,-000.00 increase.

Printing, binding and gazetting Acts is responsible for an increase of $1,500.00 on this page. It was short voted last year, so Mr. Keating tells me, he will need all of $3,-500.00 to fill his requirements.

COLONIAL SECRETARY'S DEPARTMENT.

The salary of the clerk at Government House is increased by the sum of $152.00. This man (Mr. Cake) has been in the service for years, having been transferred from the Audit Office in the Bond Government. His work is of a confidential nature and $1,700.00 is little enough for the nature of the service performed by him.

The Secretary to the Prime Minister is increased from $2,200 to $3,-000.00 He has had perquisites annually in the past which brought his salary up to this figure, but the present Prime Minister decided to make the salary a straight one and cut out all extras formerly paid Mr. Carew.

The Assistant Secretary (Miss Bolt) has been reduced by the sum of $240.00. She is a new appointee and inexperienced, and received the $1,200.00 originally simply because it was in the Estimates for that amount. The salary for Filing Clerk of $720,-00 has been dropped, and one of the Messengers at $744.00 per annum has also been dropped. The net result of these decreases and the one increase to the Secretary works out at a decrease in the Prime Minister's Department salaries of $904.00. The Contingencies of the Department, also, have been reduced $500.00, making a total reduction of $1,404.00 for the Prime Minister's Department.

The salaries of the Colonial Secretary's Department show one increase only. Mr. Sterling, the Assistant Deputy, goes from $2,400.00 to $3,-000. This is really not an increase as it commutes all perquisites hitherto received by him just as in Mr. Carew's case to which I have referred.

A decrease occurs in the case of Census of $10,000.00. This amount will not be needed during the coming year.

Under the heading of Militia, there is an increase of $5,000.00. The Government were approached by the Newfoundland Patriotic Association for this grant. It appears that as a private body, this Association has been functioning on post-war cases of distress. They still have a number of needy cases on their hands, and their funds have reached low water mark. The Government decided to help them out for the next four or five years by the sum of $5,000 annually to carry on the good work. It is thought by that time the grant will be no longer needed.

As the recapitulation will show, the Department of the Colonial Secretary works out at a total decrease (net) of $5,652.00.

JUSTICE DEPARTMENT.

In the Department of Justice salaries on page 25 there is an increase of $400.00 to the Secretary to the Minister, and at the bottom of the page last item, an increase of $500.00 for Deputy Sheriffs in Outports. The first increase is made on the recommendation of the Minister of Justice, who is of opinion that Mr. Godden should be paid a straight salary instead of the pernicious extra system year after year. The second increase is to cover actual requirements.

On page 26 will be found an increase to Mr. Maddick, the Deputy Registrar of Deeds, of $360.00. The Registrar, Mr. Adams, has been suffering from ill-health for a long time past, and as a result Mr. Maddick has to deal with a lot of increased work. The Typist is also increased $120.00.

On page 27 the Harbor Grace Bailiff is increased $100.00.

On page 28 there is an increase in Magistrate's salaries, caused by the appointment of a Magistrate at Oderin at $750.00 per annum. There was always a Magistrate at Oderin until recently, and this is merely the revival of a necessary appointment.

There is an increase of $6,000 in the Vote for Civil and Criminal Prosecutions and $500.00 for Magisterial Enquiries. Judging from the expenditure on these accounts in recent years, the Minister of Justice thinks the increase advisable. He says they always have to take supplementary supply for these services annually, and sometimes for considerable amounts.

Further down the page under Constabulary Salaries there is an increase of $3,040.00 for first year Constables. This means four new first year Constables at $760.00.

On the next page under same heading, there is an increase to the two typists, one at Headquarters Office, the other in the Superintendent's Office of $132.00 each. They go from $468.00 to $600.00 each. It is thought that $50.00 a month is a fair rate for these stenographers.

On the same page, under the heading of Miscellaneous, the following increases occur: Uniforms, Accoutrements, etc., $600; Lodging Allowance, $480; Rent Outport Barracks, $586; Printing and Stationery, $100; Telephones and Telegrams, $100. The first two increases are naturally the effect of the increase in the force of the first constables above mentioned; the rent Outport Barracks for new barracks rented; and the last two items are to fill depleted stocks of stationery and cost of telegrams short voted last year.

The Police annuities show a decrease of $762.50 due to the death of two of the recipients.

By the recapitulation it will be seen that the net increase for the Justice Department is $13,140.50.

DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION.

Coming to the Department of Education, there is an apparent increase of $700.00 (for Mr. Butt, the Accountant), but this is not so in fact, as he has had perquisites to that amount which are now commuted, and he will be paid a straight salary without any extra remuneration. The Messenger (Charles Hamlyn) gets a slight increase of $144.00 to put him on a par with other messengers in the service. There is an increase of $900.00 for Travelling Expenses and $500.00 for Printing and Stationery, which I am informed is required to bring the vote up to the actual requirements of the Department.

In the same Department (Education) on Page 37 the Grant for Augmentation to Teachers' Salaries is increased by the sum of $15,000.00. Last year this money was taken from the Surplus Trust Fund and placed to the credit of the several denominations in the Departmental books, but it is now felt that a regular vote of the Legislature should be taken to cover the service. The cost of this service increases according to the length of service of the several grades of teachers on an upward scale.

As in the case of Augmentation, the vote for Teachers' Pension Fund was supplemented by a cheque from the Educational Trust Account of $10,000. We are now putting the amount in the estimates in the regular way, as I do not agree with placing amounts to the credit of a Trust account when the proper course to pursue is vote them in the Legislature. As a matter of fact there are now no less than three Trust Accounts in the Department of Education, as follows:—

Teachers' Pension Fund, which shows a balance in Bank on June 30th, of $4,576.68.

Minister of Education Trust Account which showed a balance in Bank on June 30th, of $12,516.41.

Special Augmentation Trust Account showing a balance in Bank on June 30th, of $6,501.78.

Or a total credit in the Trust Accounts of the Education Department totalling $23,594.87.

We are adding a vote of $10,000.00 for the Normal School and Newfoundland Memorial College. As this institution is now functioning, the above sums will be required to meet current expenses for the year.

The Departmental Recapitulation on Page 40, shows a total increase for the Education Department of $41,239.00.

PUBLIC CHARITIES.

The next increase will be found on page 48 under the title of Charitable Societies. There are three increases under this head as follows: R.N.M.D.S.F. (Royal National Mission to Deep Sea Fishermen) Hospital at Pilley's Island, granted $2,000 instead of $1,000; Grace Maternity Hospital for which we have added a new vote of $3,000; also a new vote of $10,000 for the Notre Dame Bay Memorial Hospital at Twillingate. These are all well deserving objects, and the Government are of opinion that it is money well spent. Moreover, it will save expenses of transportation of patients from these centres to St. John's.

Under the heading Public Health Salaries, the Meat Inspector, Mr. Courtney, is increased $200 per annum. The salary was $1,300 and is now $1,500. This was done in order to level the money up to the other Inspectors in the service. Under the same heading, Mr. Lewis Bartlett is raised from $1,509.30 to $1,800.00 per annum. Mr. Bartlett is Hospital Clerk, has to look out for sick patients from all parts of the island and is in a position to cost the Colony a lot of money should he neglect his job. His services have been eminently satisfactory, and the Government thought he was worth the increase.

The total increase on account of Public Charities as will be seen by the recapitulation on page 50 is $14,490.70.

MARINE AND FISHERIES DEPARTMENT.

Coming now to the Marine and Fisheries Department, we find the following increases and decreases under the head of Departmental Salaries:

The salary of Miss Calpin, the Secretary to the Department, has been increased $220.00; from $780.00 to $1,000.00. She has been years in the Department and this is a replacement of a cut in salary made by the late administration three years ago. There is an additional typist at $720.00, but further down will be seen a decrease of a typist of $780.00. The Quarantine Officer, who is paid $5.00 per ship from the Customs Department, has had an adidtional amount from the Fisheries Department of $845.00. Dr. Campbell enjoyed both emoluments but didn't look after the job as per visiting every vessel. This $845.00 is now cut out of the Estimates. The $5.00 fee is now paid Dr. Arch Tait from the Customs Department from Quarantine fees which fees are collectable from the ship owners and costs the Colony nothing.

On the same page will be found an increase for the Inspector of Lighthouses (Mr. Rogerson). Under the Bond and previous Governments this position ranked with the Deputy Minister of the Department or nearly so. And I may add, properly so. When it is considered that the direct superintendence of $218,500 of the $395,700 expenditure of the Department comes within the personal supervision of this official, the justification needs no further comment from me. The Minister of the Department will be able, no doubt, under question, to satisfy any doubts as to the position.

Another additional vote on Page 53 is the provision for two Herring Inspectors at $1,080. It is proposed at the next Session of the Legislature, probably, to pension one or two of the old Inspectors who have served an honourable term of service. These officials are too old for the strenuous winter work required in the outports to inspect the proper export of herring. Whatever blame has been attached to the export of herring, cannot be laid at their doors, but it was impossible to send aged and disabled men to the outports on this service. So that this increase will not be a permanent increase in the accepted sense of the word. Provision is made for a Telephone Exchange Clerk, who will attend when arrangements are finalized, to the communication requirements of the whole Customs Departmental Building, at $720.00. She has been there two years without vote.

On Page 55 will be seen an increase in the Protection Service of the Game and Inland Fisheries Board of $5,000. This is to pay for the service of Game Wardens, and is really not an increase in Estimates actually, as the expenditure last year on account of this service was $23,000.

Another amount on this page, under the heading of Protection, is the sum of $2,000, a new vote providing to pay the salaries of two Inspectors.

This new vote has been put in at the request of the Trade, who were complaining about the lack of proper statistics in connection with the fisheries. One Inspector is for the North the other for the South Coasts. Besides supplying statistical information to the Marine and Fisheries Department, they will see that the Fishery Rules and Regulations generally are faithfully carried out.

On the same page, under the heading of General, there appears a decrease of $885.00. This is made up of $845 for the Harbor Master's Boatman who has been dismissed. Capt. Winsor informs me that there is no need of a boatman; the other $40 was divided as a sort of perquisite for the Customs Boatman. This is also cut out of the Estimates.

Further down the same page is an increase of $30,000 on account of Bounty on Ships built and in course of rebuilding. It has been felt by the Government that some encouragement should be given our fishermen in the matter of rebuilding, repairing and re-classing of local ships. The ultimate idea of course is to benefit or aid the fisheries, as it is the set policy of the Government to do everything possible for the promotion of our staple industry.

Yet further down the same page is an apparent increase of $21,000.00 for dredging.

This is another of those cases in which the original vote taken last year was not at all sufficient for actual requirements. The amount provided for dredging in the 1924-25 original estimates was the small sum of $4,000.00. But this vote had to be largely supplemented, as the actual expenditure for the Dredging service was $27,000.00. As I had very little time last year to prepare my own estimates, I had to take the estimates prepared by my predecessor holus bolus.

Under head of Contingencies of the Fisheries Department, we have made a reduction in estimates of $800.00. It is felt by the Government that $1,000.00 will fill the requirements of this service.

The Maintenance of the Blockhouse (see Page 56) is increased $70.00, and the Ammunition Account for the Noon Gun on the same page is gone up $120.00.

The following will show the increase and decrease as they occur in the Lighthouse Accounts of the Department:

Salaries Lighthouse Keeper, Coachman's Cove Increase $100.00 (new).

Salary Gull Island Light Keeper increased $100.00.

Salary Gull Island Light Keeper Assistant increased $50.00.

Salary Gull Island Alarm Keeper decreased $500.00.

Salary Long Island Courier (new appointment) increase $40.00.

Salary Sturgeon's Cove Head Keeper decreased $500.00.

Salary Bacalhao Assistant (new appointment) increase of $500.00.

Salary Steering Island and Green Island Keepers (new) increase $100.00 each.

Salary Cabot Island Light and Alarm Keeper decreased $350.00; but an Assistant appointed to help him at $750.00; net increase $400.00.

Salary Gull Island (B.B.) Keeper (new light) increase $120.00.

Salary Western Shag Keeper (new light) increase of $100.00.

Salary Gooseberry Islands (new light) increase of $100.00.

Salary Cape Bonavista Light Keeper is reduced $100.00; his Assistant is reduced $50.00, and the Cape Bonavista Alarm is cut out of the estimates at $1200.00, making a total cut in the Cape Bonavista vote of $1,350.00. Captain Winsor informs me that the present staff is sufficient to run the light and alarm at Bonavista safely and efficiently.

Salary Ballyhack Light Keeper (new light) increase $100.00. There is a small increase on this page for the Bacalhoe Courier of $2.50 from $97.50 to an even $100.00. And Carbonear Light Keeper is increased by the sum of $660.50; but this is really not an increase. It was proposed by the late Minister to put an acetyline light at Carbonear, for the operation of which $100.00 would be sufficient. But this was never done and the difference between $100 voted and the $760.50 really paid was charged to the maintenance vote for Lighthouses. We are now putting it in its proper place by charging it to salaries. As a matter of fact many of the increases in salaries as appearing in these Estimates, are not increased expenditures. It simply means they are being charged to the proper account by the present Government and not hidden away as has been the custom in the past.

Salary Point Verde Light and Alarm Keeper is reduced $500.00 and an Assistant is appointed at $500.00. Grand Bank is reduced $300.00 and St. Jacques is reduced $200.00.

Salary Burgeo-Flat Island is increased $40.00; and Woody Point is increased $20.00.

Salary Double Island and Assistant shows a decrease of $50.00. Domino shows an increase of $150.00; and Indian Tickle a decrease of $50.00.

Salary for Lightkeepers at Cape North, Pack's Harbor, Cut Throat, Winsor's Harbor, Manuel's Island, Cape Harrigan and Ford's Harbor all show an increase of $150.00 each, making a total increase of $1,050.00.

Salary Lightkeeper for Coachman's Cove (new light) is increased by $120.00.

There is a fog alarm now at Fox Island instead of an acetyline light. The salary for the latter is only $80; while the former calls for a salary as provided, $1200. This is an increase of $1120.00.

The lights on this page have to be maintained; they are all new lights as per appointments in the Salaries list which we have just gone through and are as follows:

Steering Island increased estimate of $100.00.

Green Island increased estimate of $100.00.

Western Shag increased estimate of $100.00.

Gull Island, Cape Freels increased estimate of $180.00.

Gooseberry Island increased estimate of $100.00.

Chain Rock, St. John's (new appointment) $100.00.

Argentia Light and Alarm called in the Salaries List Fox Island Light and Alarm (new) $1,400.00.

Lighthouse Supplies shows a decrease of $1,000 which Mr. Rogerson thinks the service can stand.

As will be seen from the Re-capitulation on the bottom of Page 71, the total increase in Estimates on account of the Department of Marine and Fisheries will be $62,128.00.

AGRICULTURE AND MÌNES DEPARTMENT.

Turning to Page 75 and considering the salaries of the Department of Agriculture and Mines:

First therein is an evident increase in the salary of the Cashier and Accountant (Ryan). On looking up the Salaries List, I find that Ryan receives $1,600.00 instead of $1,500.00, so that the increase is $200.00 instead of $300.00. The history of the Department in this branch will explain the increase.

The 2nd Clerk (Mr. McLellan) has been years in the Department and from Mr. Walsh's recommendation, he has been increased to $1,750.00; and on the same recommendation Mr. Summers, a junior clerk advances $70.00 per annum. The Historiographer, Mr. H. F. Shortis, who is doing important work in his branch, is increased from $300.00 to $766.66.

Next, on the same page, are the Surveyors. In this list comes the Frst Surveyor and Assistant Deputy Minister who acts in the absence of the Deputy (Mr. William Noel). He is increased to $2500.00 in accordance with the position. Increase $500.00.

A 3rd and 4th Surveyor (new appointments) at $1,200.00 each are added. Increase $2,400.00.

And additional surveyors and Assistants account for another $1,000.00.

In addition to the above, on the same page appears what looks like a new appointment to the Government Laboratory, namely, a Messenger at $700.00 per annum. This is not a real increase, however, as he has been paid from the Contingencies of the Department last year and we merely put him where he should be,—in the Estimates. Increase $700.00.

On page 76 there is an increase for repair to Instruments of $500.00, but as this is deducted from sundry Contingencies, it does not affect the total.

There is an item of $6,000.00 added to Supplies for Surveyors in the field. Increase $6,000.00.

An Inspector is added under the Logging Act at a salary of $850.00. Increase $850.00.

The sum of $1,500.00 is added under the Head of Refunds so that all revenue shall go into the Exchequer account in gross instead of net. Increase $1,500.00.

And $15,000.00 is added for the Encouragement of Agriculture.

The next amount is really not an increase as it has been paid from Contingencies in the past, viz: $400.00 for the St. John's Poultry Exhibition and $250.00 for the Bell Island Exhibition. From the above it will be seen that the net increase on account of Department of Agriculture and Mines is $29,-686.66.

PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT.

First there is a small increase of $10.00 to Miss Phelan, Stenographer, which makes her salary $900.00.

Next is what looks like an addition in itself, namely Secretary to the Deputy Minister. But this is not so as reference to the total increase in the Departmental salaries will show. It is proposed to transfer Mr. Manning to the position vacated by Mr. Kelly, who is on the Pension List. Manning will act as Paymaster and also supervise the Secretarial end of the Department. The salary of the new appointee is to be $900.00.

On the same page further down, is an increase of $600.00 to the Architect and Superintendent of Public Works, Mr. Wm. Churchill, which is really not an increase in fact. Mr. Churchill has had perquisities for drawing plans for some years past equal to the increase. If professional architects had been engaged, they would have been paid on a commission basis. This increase is intended to commute all future payments in this respect.

Vote No. 18 a little further on reduces the Messenger from $900.00 to $500.00. The present Messenger, (Mr. McGrath) is being promoted; he was compelled to give up inside work by reason of ill-health, but now that he is well again we are moving him up and appointing a young boy in his stead. This gives a decrease of $400.00.

On Page 82 it will be seen that the Contingencies of the Public Works Department are decreased by the sum of $1,200.00. The Head of the Department thinks that $8,000 will be sufficient to carry them along.

The Insurance on Public Buildings is increased by the sum of $681.91, caused by new insurance effected.

On this page also will be seen a small increase of $400.00 in the Fuel and Light votes for Government Buildings. The details are shown and the increase is petty.

The details of Keepers, Cleaning, Taxes of Government buildings are shown on pages 83 and 84. Cleaning Government House, $150; Night Watchman Departmental Building, 70.20; Telephone Exchange Operator, $720.00; a Night Watchman Museum Building, $30.00; and an Emergency Employment Account of $250.00 very nearly cover the total increase of $1,-126.97.

There is an increase in the several votes of the Court House, St. John's, of $165.75. This vote has been carefully considered and the increase is a small one considering the many items appearing thereon.

As against this increase there appears a decrease on account of Constulary Barracks of $1,400.00.

On the other hand the Fire Department shows an increase of $3,050.00 mainly caused by the necessary repairs to barracks of $2,400.00.

The salaries of the Penitentiary show an increase to the Deputy Superintendent (Mr. Theo. Thompson), of $156.00. He is a long service man; a good official.

The other votes (same page) show a decrease of $475.00.

Under the heading of Fever Hospital Contingencies, there is an increase over last year of $2,287.75. This will be readily understood when the small sum voted last year is considered, namely $200.00 which vote has been heavily overdrawn.

As against this increase, the Maintenance of the Fever Hospital shews a decrease of $3,200.00. See votes 431 to 435.

The Fuel and Light Votes (436-437) shew an increase of $1,050.00. The total increase for the Fever Hospital is little over $100.00.

On this page from Vote 441 to 450 there is an apparent decrease of $796.73 on account of Sudbury Salaries, but this is not so in fact as the officials referred to only received $6,-532 and not $7,328.73 as in the 1924-25 column.

The Contingencies vote of Sudbury Hospital is reduced $30.000. See votes 451 to 455.

On page 106 the New Harbor-Trinity Halfway House is cut out; a decrease of $25.00, but $250.00 is added for the general repairs and upkeep of halfway-houses, making a net increase of $225.00.

The Ferryman from Deadman's Bay to Ragged Harbor is increased $125.00; Ferryman from Shambler's Cove to Greenspond increased $100.00 a new ferry established at Sydney Cove, Round Harbor and Paul's Cove at $100.00.

Clerk to Cashier (H. Wylie) an apparent increase of $500.00 but this is not the case, as although not voted he was paid this money last year. He is now being voted in the proper manner.

Expenditure Clerk (Miss Maud Thorne) receives an increase of $160.-00, bringing her salary to $1000.00. This is a particularly good official and well worth the salary.

The Assistant Expenditure Clerk (Miss Taylor) gets an increase of $60.00, bringing her salary to $720.00, the standard rate for stenographers.

The Messenger at $360.00 per annum is cut out as the post boys can attend to the work. Decrease $360.00.

Under Vote 10—Parcel Post—the foreign despatch clerk received an increase of $118.00. (The clerk's name is William Newbury).

Another addition to Head Parcel Posts is one clerk at $480.00, but this will reduce the additional help by an equal sum. (The official's name is Edward Hurley and his duties comprise making out notices re parcels for the city of St. John's).

Additional help in the Parcel Post Section is reduced by the sum of $720.00.

Vote 11 shows several increases and two decreases as follows:

One Assorter reduced from $912.00 to $664.00.

Vote 16 Outport Postmasters.

The net increase on this vote amounts to $2,032.54.

The motor Express Service $1,000.00 is cut now in the 1925-26 column, and the chauffeur now acting as an assorter.

The Contractors for Courier services are increased from $107,487.00 to $120,000.00. This is not an increase as it was short voted in recent years.

As against this the last three items at the foot of the page are cut out.

The Courier Service Vote 18 shows a net increase og $5,313.00.

Winter Postal Routes and Camps is increased $300.00. Stamping machines $300.00.

Assistant Deputy Superintendent (Acting) increased by $1750.00. This is not a new appointment as it was not voted last year.

The accountant also shows an increase of $1728.00 as in the case of the Deputy Superintendent this amount for the accountant position was not voted last year.

Vote 22 shows the Senior Operator's position not voted last year therefore it is not really an increase. (The official's name is M. Hackett) and his salary $1380.00.

The Typist, Miss M. LeGrow's salary has advanced from $540.00 to $600.00. This is made to place her on even footing with the rest of the typists in other departments.

As will also be seen the messengers vote has increased by $600.00.

Operators, Telegraph Outside shows a net increase of $8,260.10. The reason for this increase is that several offices which were opened a few years ago had not been voted.

The Repairers' vote has also increased $724.00. As in the case of several stations this is not really an increase but short voted in last year's Estimates.

Vote 28 Telephone. Salaries and upkeep outport telephones is increased by the sum of $10.000.00. This vote has always been short voted, and did not meet with the requirements of the department.

As will be seen by the Telegraph Recapitulation on this page the net increase for Telegraph Department is $21,229.90.

CUSTOMS DEPARTMENT.

Turning to page 169, it will be found the following changes in the Customs Department. They have been made with due deliberation and are consequent upon the enquiry held last year.

Provision has been made for an Inspecting Auditor whose business it will be to go into all Departments at any moment without notice. He will have to see that everything is punctually checked, that the work of the Department from a routine standpoint is not being neglected as it has been in the past. It is a necessary appointment and I have selected Mr. F. C. Brien for the positicn at $3,000 per annum. This is an increase of $3,000.00.

Further down the page appears an increase to the Cashier, Mr. Smith, of $120.00, bringing his salary to $2,160.00.

The next item is an increase for the Manifest Clerk, Mr. White, from $1584 to $1800. Increase $216.00.

Owing to the state of the records in the Bonded Warehouse Department it became necessary to appoint a Warehousekeeper. Since the four months' bond (formerly accepted) has been replaced by the payment of cash, the work in this Department has increased so much that this appointment became imperative. This is an increase of $1,500.00.

The Clerk to the Landing Surveyor (Mr. S. Winsor) is advanced from $1344.00 to $1500.00, an increase of $156.00.

The third Statistical Clerk goes from $1248 to $1440 apparently, but really this is no increase as Captain Marshall has received the larger amount since his appointment.

The fourth Statistical Clerk is a new appointment at $1440.00. The work of this Department has been falling behind and I find it necessary to make this increase in order to have statistics ready promptly.

The Registrar of Shipping, (Mr. T. R. McGrath) is increased from $1,728 to $2,000 an increase of $272.00.

The Clerk and Surveyor of Shipping (Mr. Crocker) goes from $1150.50 to $1300.00 an increase of $149.50.

On this page it will be noticed that the Assistant Examining Officer, (Mr. Carter) and 2nd Assistant Examining Officer (Mr. Gibbs) are increased $52.00 each bringing the salary to $1600.00. Increase $104.00.

Further down is a new appointment, that of Outport Appraiser, (Mr. Jeans). This is an increase of $1,400.00.

Immediately afterward a 3rd Storekeeper (Mr. Gladney) at $850.00. Since taking over the Edens' Building as a Warehouse and Examining Store, this appointment was found necessary. Increase $850.00.

Under the Head of Gaugers, Tidewaiters and Boatmen, there is a decrease on this page of $2,505.00.

From pages 172 to 176 will be found the salaries paid to the Outport Collectors of Customs. Formerly there was a scheme to pay our Outport Collectors so much salary and supplement the salary with Commission on Duties with the provisio that the total payment was not to exceed a stated amount. I have abolished the payment to Collectors of this Commission on Duties and raised each salary commensurate with the amount lost by each Collector. This means an apparent increase of $17,647.25, but the vote in the Estimates for Percentage on Duties not now being needed, it pretty nearly balances out even. This commuting of percentage on duties has been carefully done so as not to deal unjustly with the Collectors concerned.

There are two increases to Tidewaiters in the Outports on Page 177. The two men at Bonavista have been slightly increased from $480.00 each to $550; and the Tidewaiter at Grand Falls goes from $824 to $1,100, making a total increase under this Head of $516.00.

On page 178 there is a decrease on account of percentage on Duties of $13,500.00 to which I have already referred. The balance left of $1,500.00 is for percentage on Light Dues.

A reference to Page 181 shows that the net increase in votes of the Customs Department works out at $10,456.75.

There is one increase only in connection with the Department of the Tax Assessor; the second clerk, Mr. Griffin goes from $720 to $1,000.00; an increase of $280.

On page 195 there is an increase of $104 for the Assistant Filing Clerk and Messenger (S. Crane).

On page 196 the Naval and Military Pensions have been reduced by the Board $34,000.00.

I may say that the only other thing I want to refer to is that the Government has decided to increase the Old Age Pension amount to the fishermen. One hundred and seven thousand was voted last year. After due consideration the Government decided to increase the Old Age Pension to one hundred and twenty thousand.

I don't intend, Mr. Speaker, to proceed any further with the estimates this afternoon, and ask now that the Committee arise.

MR. HICKMAN—Mr. Chairman, I would like to say that last year we asked the Government to include in the Estimates the Railway, and this year on the opening of the House, I intimated to the Prime Minister that this year we expected that the Government Railway (the Government institution being like any other institution), they should have the estimates put before the House of Assembly and voted upon. Now, in looking over the Estimates given us yesterday, these are not included. To-day I asked the Prime Minister for a list of all the employees of the Governemnt through the administration of the Railway Comimssion, and until such time as we can get that we are not fully prepared to proceed with the Estimates.

HON. MINISTER OF FINANCE & CUSTOMS—I don't think, as far as I am aware, there has been any consideration of laying the Estimates of the Railway before the House, and I may say that if they have as much trouble to get them ready as I have had, we will be here until next August. However, I am merely speaking for myself.

Mr. Speaker resumed the Chair.

The Chairman from the Committee reported that they had considered the matter to them referred, had made some progress and asked leave to sit again on to-morrow.

On motion this report was received and adopted, and it was ordered that the Committee have leave to sit again on to-morrow.

Pursuant to notice and on motion of Hon. the Prime Minister, the House resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole to consider certain Resolutions respecting the Dry Dock at St. John's.

Mr. Speaker left the Chair.

Mr. Puddester took the Chair of Committee.

MR. HICKMAN—Mr. Chairman, in reference to these resolutions I want to say that on this side of the House we are very much opposed to giving the Governor-in-Council authority to enter into a contract in reference to the Dock or any other public work. The House of Assembly is in session at the present time, and the object of the session is to carry on and ratify contracts and do the work of the colony. This House being in session, and likely to be in session for the next two or three weeks, I cannot understand why we are asked in these resolutions to give authority to the Governor-in-Council. Why should not the contract be made in this House, laid upon the Table of this House, and if accepted, ratified here? Now, during the last session which was the first session of this Government, the Prime Minister and his colleagues had a good deal to say about the Minute-of-Council Government. Reference was made to the Government of the past with which I was not connected, but they had a good deal to say about business being done by Minute-of-Council, and they as good as told us here, on the floors of this Assembly, that they would not carry on the business in that way. They would do nothing by Minute-of-Council, but lay everything before the Legislature, and everything would be done and ratified in a right and proper manner. Now, between the last session and this session a good deal of money has been paid out on Executive authority, and a good deal of business has been done through the Governor-in-Council, and I say that the Prime Minister and the Government are very inconsistent when they come in here to this House of Assembly and talk about doing away with the Minute-of-Council, and then ask the House in session to give authority to the Governor-in-Council to make a contract with some party or parties with the intention of repairing the dock. Now they also ask in these resolutions to give the Governor-in-Council the permission to borrow money on the credit of the Colony for whatever sums that may be necessary for the reconstruction and repairing of the dock. Now if the Government is about to make this contract, which I suppose they are, as the Prime Minister in his speech spoke of the necessity of getting legislation through the House so as to be able to start work on the dock, as it has already been closed for some time, they should be in a position to tell us how much money they need for the repairs to the dock in addition to the $675,000 which they have set aside, less the sum of $30,000 which are intended for the construction of a concrete warehouse. Now I say that the Government should be in a position to tell us how much money they need and how much they are going to borrow, and they should have the contract finalized right here in the House of Assembly during this session. As to the estimates for the repairs of the dock, I cannot say very much. I am informed that the dock when it was built, cost $360,000. Including the excavation, building and completion, the cost was $360,000. And at the present time you come in here and ask us to consider estimates up to a million one hundred thousand dollars, to broaden the dock 20 feet and deepen it five feet and put a new gate and new abutments to the gate. I do not know what the reason is for the extra cost, but I presume that there must be some reason, and it must be a pretty correct one, as the two contracting companies made the same estimate. However, I contend that it is too much money to be paid out for the dock, and the proper thing to do is to put the dock in a sound condition so that there would be no chance of its caving in and then leave it as it is until such time as you can get some company to come here to take it over and work it and be able to accommodate steamers and give the same facilities that can be had in the neighbouring doubt the system of repairs at the dock is the same as it was years ago, and that syetem is one in which the that nothing would come in her unless cost of the repairs have been so high they were injured to such an extent that they could not get along to a farther port.

Now I understand that the system in vogue at the dock at the present time for ships that come in for repairs is that a number of men are put to work that when the repairs are completed a bill is given to the shipowners of so many men and so much material and then a percentage added on to that. There is no provision for the rushing the repairs or helping the ship in any way. Last year the Government asked us to pass a bill enabling them to borrow six million dollars and in that bill they had made provision for fifty thousand dollars for the repairs to the dock. I presume that they must have had estimates from somebody to believe that that amount would be sufficient for the making of the dock safe or else they would not have included it in the bill before the legislature. Now we find that the cost of the repairs would be about one million and one hundred thousand dollars, and the contractors ask for seventy thousand dollars commission for the work which is twenty thousand dollars more than was voted for the repairs for the dock at the last session. Now I do not know with whom they are going to enter into the contract. From the speech made by the Hon. Member for Placentia yesterday I take it for granted that the Government intends to make the contract with the W. I. Bishop Company. We on this side of the House are satisfied to have the dock repaired and put in a safe condition but we do not like to give the authority to the Governor-in-Council to make the contract and we do not feel like giving the authority to the Governor-in-Council to borrow the money for the repairs to the dock without knowing what is the amount they are going to borrow. Now our geographical position is one which should entice a great deal of ships to come in here for docking but we cannot take ships under the present circumstances, because ships cannot very well get in through the Narrows and as I said before a very necessary thing for the Government to do is to see that the entrance of the Narrows is made safe for large ships to come into the port. There are some rocks that can be taken out and the port would be made safe for large steamers to enter and take shelter and when that is done and we have the facilities for fuel such as oil and coal and the repairs done as efficiently as they can be done in other places then we would have no trouble in getting somebody to take over the dock and put it in good shape by rebuilding it and take the responsibility of running it because no Government can run a thing like the dock whereas a private company would be able to earn a good interest on their capital. The Hon. Member for Placentia told us the other day that the dock had earned the last year $41,000. We have his word for it and we presume that he is correct but we would like to have this thing shown in full and all the charges deducted and laid before the House. Now the Government also had this plan in the proposition which was laid before us yesterday. They are talking about putting a granite walk around the dock. Now I cannot see why the Government wants to go to the expense of putting a granite walk around the dock. It is alright to have a crane to lift heavy articles such as propellors and rudders and such articles but why the Government should go to the expense of putting a granite road around the dock I cannot understand. It looks as without any consideration at all they are taking everything that is laid before them and this is not the thing to do in this country where we have such a heavy national debt and we cannot afford to spend any money on unnecessary things and I am sure that a granite roadway is unnecessary. Now I would like to ask the Prime Minister since the dock is closed for twelve months what are the men who are employed at the dock going to do and the men who are employed in the machine shops in addition to the men employed in the dock itself. In connection with the dock we should have a foundry. There should be a foundry where large castings can be made so that when a ship comes in for repairs they would not have to send to England to get what ever they want done and so result in a great loss of time for the ship and the dock. We will not be consulted by the Government with reference to the contract when it is to be made. It is up to the Government to make what they think is the best contract but as I said before we will have to vote against these resolutions because we cannot give power to the Governor-in-Council to make a contract while the House is in session and we cannot vote for the raising of a sum of money unless we know about the amount of money which is to be required.

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE —Mr. Chairman, I do not propose to delay the House but I want to make a few remarks about the position raised by the Hon. Leader of the Opposition, not intentionally, I am sure. He states that the Opposition only votes against these resolutions on the grounds that they are brought in whilst the House is in session, and members opposite will not empower the Executive Government to enter into a contract which is not made public to the House. Now, in the first place the Exeecutive Government could enter into a contract and then come down to the House with it as a party measure and put the hon. gentleman in the very position which he is in now. In this case it is not what has been done at all. The Government has gone to work and put the whole matter before the House as to the condition of the dock. It has been made absolutely clear that the dock had to be closed. No person can attempt to take any other position with regard to it and it seems to be sheer schoolboyish to ask what is to be done with the men on the dock. Of course we cannot do anything at present with the men up at the dock unless we start them swimming around in the filled dock, but as soon as possible the Government proposes to put these men at the one thing that they know about, their own avocations at the work of the dock. The Government says that the dock demands immediate attention and places all the information possible on the table of the House.

It seems to me that if ever there was a case where the Government has gone out of its way to particularly tell the contract that is going to be made, and the arrangements that are going to be carried out, it is now. What ordinarily happens is that the private members of the House hear nothing of this sort of thing until the closed deal is brought down by the Executive Government. In this case the opposite procedure is taken. In other words every possible source of information has been tapped, and laid before the House, which is told that the only arrangement here that the Government can suggest is this idea of making some contract or agreement with the people with whom we have been dealing. Everyone knows that it must be done with one of these two people, because they are the only people who have been asked about it, whom we have had down here examining the dock; and the Government comes in and says that this firm has told us—"all right, we will do this dock, and our fee is seventy thousand dollars. It does not matter to us whether it is going to cost you half a million or a million—that is our fee for doing this work."

If that is the position, what contract can the Governor-in-Council enter into? Nothing but the contract which the members of this House know we have got to enter into. And what is the difference between going into the Executive Rooms to-night, drawing up a contract and signing it, and then coming in here and laying it on the table of the House, and saying—"here is our contract—pass that." What is the difference? I certainly do not see any. But the position would be different in this case—now the Governor-in-Council has come down, and is asking power to make arrangements, after having laid all the information that it has, before this House. There can be no doubt in the mind of anyone as to what is going to happen. We have got to make the arrangement, and fix its terms quickly. There are two reasons for doing so; and one of these is one which the honourable gentleman himself brought forward in his speech, when he asked what we were going to do with the men who were employed at the dock now. This is surely a case where we are going to get a profitable public work done, that is going to afford a considerable amount of employment at a time when it is most required, first to those now on the dock and next to other city labour. I understand that the second proposition will give employment to between five and six hundred men for eight months. Surely, if we can get in St. John's today employment for from five to six hundred men for the next eight months giving a total earnings for these men of about half a million dollars—surely there never was a case in which a Government was more justified in saying that we ought to lose no time in doing that.

What benefit would result in the other case? Suppose we should go out and draw up a contract, and we can draw one up overnight, and then come down here and pass it. What is the difference. The great difference in this case is that under the power that is now sought, you probably will have ever so much better results than you could possible get under the ordinary procedure—the ordinary case of a contract which is brought down here, and which you are made swallow holus bolus. No such attitude has been taken by the Government in this case, though they might well do it.

As regards the point taken by the honourable gentleman as to the amount that the Government will need to meet this proposed work. It is true that certain amounts were voted, and set aside in last year's loan Bill for this dock; certain amounts were specified for this purpose. That amount will be used on this work, but there will be a balance over and above that amount—and the Governor in Council will have to go out and borrow the money to meet that balance. What is the difference between that and what was done last year, when the Governor in Council was empowered to go out and raise six million dollars

There is nothing unusual or remarkable in such a procedure. As a matter of fact it is the other way about. The only thing that is remarkable about this present proposition is that it is the first time in my recollection where a Government has come before the House in advance, and gives the members of the House all the knowledge that it has itself, so that every member of this House is possessed of as much knowledge about the condition of the dock as the Prime Minister himself. There is nothing that the Government has got in the way of information that the humblest member of this House is not aware of. Surely that is a departure that ought to be encouraged. That is a considerable improvement upon the idea of the Executive Government going and making a contract, and then coming in and saying to the House—"this is a Government contract, and as a Government contract it is a Government measure, and as it is a Government measure we are not at all concerned what view the Opposition takes of it." I think the honourable members opposite ought to be, and I am sure they are, satisfied that we have placed before them every possible information that we could possibly give them. They have as much information, I know, as has ever been given me.

As regards the fitting of the dock for the class of trade that we are likely to get—I must say, as a lay man, that I was very much impressed with the attitude that was taken by the engineer who made the report for Bishop's on that very point. In his report he said that he recommended the second proposition, because, in his opinion, it covered the largest class of steamer that we are going to get to come here; and he supports that by giving actual instances of steamers which have been here. He practically says that it is the wisest course because, apart altogether from what we might do if we had two or three millions to spend upon putting a new dock there, if we wanted to, our harbour conditions are such, and the entrance to the harbour is such, and the swinging room in the harbour is such, that you cannot get larger steamers to come in here than those of the "Metagama" class. He says that if we build a dock of this extent, we are building a dock that will meet all traffic to the limit that we are ever going to get here in St. John's harbour. I admit that for those reasons, I think that that is a very safe line for us to take. I personally support the position that the Railway Commission has recommended to the Executive Government as regards the second plan, for these reasons.

It seems to me that to go and put the dock back in the same condition that it was before is not justifiable, in the light of the very great comment that we heard a little time ago, when certain steamers came here it was stated that we could not accommodate them, because of the size of the bottom of the dock. If we can increase the size of the dock by this extra amount, we will have a dock that will be able to handle a vessel of the largest size that is likely to come here, and I think, in view of that, the Country and the Government should avail of this opportunity to do it.

I think also that when we consider today the direct earnings that are made at the dock by the men working there, whose wages amount to a considerable sum in the course of a year; and when one considers the contribution that comes to the revenue from the importation of the material used at the dock, that we must all see that we are justified in spending one million dollars on the dock. The interest on that one million dollars, at five per cent, would amount in a year to fifty thousand dollars, but that fifty thousand dollars is more than made up by the direct revenue to the country from duties out of the earnings of those who have been employed at the dock.

As to the permanent result, I may say that the feature which has the strongest appeal to me, is that idea of the amount that will be expended on labour—that out of that million dollars nearly one half goes directly in wages to the workmen and the people here in St. John's; and surely there never was an occasion when a Government, and indeed an Opposition, would be more justified in availing of the chance of having this work done—surely there was never such an occasion to do that as we have today.

I do not think there will be any difference of opinion in this House that the expenditure of five hundred thousand dollars on labour in connection with the work at the dock will make a very considerable difference in the conditions of the working people in St. John's. The honourable gentleman asked what the Government was going to do with the men who are now employed at the dock? What can we do with them?

There is certainly one thing clear—we have no other dock to put them working on in Newfoundland; and whatever value that dock may be now, there is one thing which is absolutely certain—if the permanent employment of those men who are working at the dock now is dependent upon the conditions surrounding a dock, then that dock has got to be kept going if these people are going to find a means of living.

I think that the honourable member, upon reflection will see that this position he takes that we are returning to minute of council Government, is not quite worthy of a business man like himself. Surely he must see the way in which this matter might have been handled by the Government, if they were going by minute-of-council Government. They could have made that contract before ever this House knew anything about the dock, and with a majority in the house, they could have passed that contract regardless of the wishes of the Opposition. But that would not be the business way to do it. The Government is doing it in a business like way—the Government comes in and says—"here is all the information we can give you—here are the reports of the best men that we can get. There will be a certain amount of money required for this, and there will be certain terms to be agreed to, and we want you, gentlemen, in advance to send us off as a delegation to make the best deal we can." Is not that the business way of doing it?

I will go further and say that if it was possible for the Government always to go through this procedure before it entered into any contract like this, we could not have a better procedure; but it is not always possible. If it were possible to have such a procedure that the Government of the day, before it entered into any contract at all, could come down and give general ideas such as we have done today to the House—would not that be true Government? Is not that real Government? Is not that quite the opposite to the kind of minute of council Government that it is said we are reverting to. The minute of Council Government which caused comment was a very different thing—moneys were paid out—and when the money was spent the House was asked to vote it. This is different. We have here a valuable dock, and we have people here whom we can get to repair it. No money has gone, but we ask you now to give us that money. Of course, if you want to have no dock, it is perfectly simple for you to have none; but if you want to have the dock, and want to have work for the men you can now give us authority to go out and make the best deal we can to get that for you. That is just the opposite to what we call Minute of Council Government.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER — Mr. Chairman, I would like to say a word in reply to the Honourable the Leader of the Opposition. He asked why we estimated last year that repairs to the Dock would cost $50,000.-00 when it is calculated they will cost over a million dollars now. At that time we were not aware of the true condition of the gate, and the estimate of $50,000.00 was made because the bulges near the entrance appeared to be the only trouble, and we thought it could be remedied at that figure. Mr. Hickman has asked how the men employed on the dock are to be employed at present. The Boilermakers will have work for several months in constructing the new pontoon, which will be necessary under this new agreement. That will take care of them and the general laborer employed on the dock will still be engaged there, as the Honourable the Minister of Justice has already pointed out. I am painfully surprised to hear Mr. Hickman say the Opposition have not been consulted as to the facts of the case. We have brought down every particular available, and suggested that the only way to ascertain the cost was to secure the services of engineers, find out the amount, and have the work done to the best advantage to us. I do not think that we could do better than enter into what I may term a gentlemen's agreement with W. I. Bishop & Co. I say Bishop & Co., because their tender is lower, and that's why we favor them. If Mr. Hickman had said that we should not have given the contract to Bishop & Co. without knowing more about them than their work at Main Dam, there might have been some reason in it, but to get up and say that there should be no contract before laying it before the House is not worth considering. We have put every available fact before the House, including the reports of the experts, and have told you that the necessary work would cost from a million to one million two hundred thousand dollars. We cannot enter into any definite contracts as the Company is not prepared to do so, and even if we did it would be no more advantageous than now. The present proposition is a good one, the estimates have been checked up by competent engineers as all the work will be as it goes along, and as long as we are dealing with such a reputable firm as Bishop & Co. we will get a good job.

HON. MR. SULLIVAN—Mr. Chairman, I would like to make a few remarks in reply to the Honorable the Leader of the Opposition. He states that the building of the old dock cost $350,000.00, but he does not know if that is correct or not, as there is little information on that point. Since that dock was built wages alone have increased by 400 per cent., and does he think he could do the work now for the same price as the old one. He compares the dock which cost $350,000.00 40 years ago with one that is proposed to be rebuilt now at a cost of about one million dollars, and seems to forget that there are a lot of extras included in the new dock which were not included in the old dock. But if he would compare the costs he would find that we are getting a much cheaper bargain today. As I mentioned in my remarks yesterday, owing to our geographical position we should be getting a lot more work for the dock than we are at present. Mr. Hickman said we would get it if we could do the work economically enough. Now we lay the proposition before you, which under proper management it would possibly do repair work as cheaply as it can be done at Halifax or St. John, N.B.? We are building a dock practically of concrete, and with every facility for doing economical work. In the old dock there was wooden-sheet piling, but now we propose to have steel sheet piling. The Honourable Prime Minister has already told what will be done with the men who are at present engaged on the dock. Some of them will be engaged at the making of the caisson, others at work in connection with the railway, and still others in the general construction of the dock. Now it is absolutely necessary to deepen the dock to reach the proper foundation, and that is one of the strong points why the Dock should be deepened. We have to get down to a proper foundation, or we will have the old trouble from water all over again. This proposition has been handled in a business-like way, and I am surprised at the remarks of the Leader of the Opposition. I was formerly on the Opposition side of the House, but I used my own opinion, and if a good proposition were brought forward by the Government, I backed it. I think Mr. Hickman will find men sitting behind him who have the interests of the country at heart, and who will vote for a good proposition, even if it comes from this side. If they are convinced that Bishop's No. 2 proposal is the best one I do not believe they will oppose it as a unit simply because it is brought forward by the Government.

MR. HICKMAN—Mr. Chairman, I have listened with much interest to the addresses of the three Honorable Members on the other side, and absurd as my statements might appear to them, as theirs appear to me, I am not going to take back anything that I have said. The situation is that the Bill is on the table of the House and we see it for the first time. If it seems that we are merely obstructing, I am sorry, but we have had no time to see it. The Honourable the Minister of Justice says that by a minute of council the Government could have brought in an already signed contract. I agree they could have, but I fail to see the difference now. If you got a contract laid on the table of the House, let us see and discuss it, and then go ahead and sign it. I did not say we were in disagreement with the contract with Bishops or the other Company. The Honourable the Prime Minister seems to insinuate that I said something against Messrs. W. I. Bishop & Co., but I did not. What I said—and it was no reflection on Bishop & Co.—was that last year it was said the repairs would cost $50,000.00 while today it is proposed to pay a man $20,000 more to oversee the work than the whole cost was estimated at last year. That was all I said as to Bishop & Co. Why do we not get local men to build a cofferdam and find out what is needed Last year one was built in connection with the repairs to the Metagama, and it was done well and satisfactorily by our local men. That is what should be done now; get local men to build a coffer dam, dry out the dock and see what repairs are needed. But you simply hand us a lot of diagrams and how are we to know where the bulges or other damage is. A lot of this talk is only supposition.

HON. MR. SULLIVAN—Yesterday I mentioned that the damage had been found.

MR. BROWNE—What is to be the advantage of the cofferdam?

MR. HICKMAN—It is the first thing spoken of being built now in connection with the repairs.

MR. BROWNE—Yes, for the use in the execution of the repairs, not to find the damage.

MR. HICKMAN—But we are having the cofferdam now, and it could be built by local men. Now we do not say that we will not support the contract which may be laid on the table of the House, but our contention is that the contract should be here. I agree with the Honorable the Minister of Justice as to the necessity of providing labor, but a bargain to fix the dock is something different. I know that labor is required very urgently, but the making of a deal to ge this job done well, and as cheaply as possible, and the giving of employment are two things that should be considered differently.

Now the Honourable Mr. Sullivan seems to have become an engineer all of a sudden and he seems to have all the knowledge with reference to engineering and dock building and all the rest of it. I really do not know where he gets all this information he has given us. However, what I want to know is this: If the Governor-in-Council now have power to make a contract, as the Honourable Minister of Justice has said, what do the Government want authority from us for?

HON. MR. SULLIVAN—We thought you would like to be consulted.

MR. HICKMAN—I would like to see the contract, if you wish to show it.

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE—I know the contract I am going to tell the Government to sign is to go and get the work started on the dock as quickly as possible. That is the only contract—no contract at all. I know if the honourable Leader of the Opposition was Prime Minister tomorrow he would say "go ahead Bishop and start that work."

MR. HICKMAN—Perhaps the honourable gentleman is right and that the Resolutions are wrong, and perhaps you do not want it recorded here that we are in favor of the Resolutions.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Pardon me, we do. We want to get authority to go out and raise money to complete the work.

MR. CASHIN—Mr. Chairman, as there has been considerable debate already in connection with the subject matter now before the Chair, I want to assure you that it is not my intention to unduly delay the Committee, but, as a member of the Railway Commission, I think it is right and proper that I should make a few observations. First of all I might say that I do not want to go so deeply into this matter as my colleague, Hon. Mr. Sullivan did, because I think that all any ordinary layman has to do is to read over the reports submitted by the contractors to enable him to come to a conclusion, and the conclusion I have come to is that the proposition submitted by Colonel Mitchell is THE proposition to accept. The next thing we got to get to is this. Is it going to be profitable to the country to accept and undertake either one of the propositions? Let us take the first proposition which runs into approximately five hundred thousand dollars. That puts the dock back to where it was forty years ago when it cost, according to the Leader of the Opposition, three hundred and sixty thousand dollars. Bishop asks for five hundred thousand dollars to repair it; but we must remember that the cost of living and the cost of everything else have increased considerably within the past forty years. Forty years ago workmen could be had for forty cents a day or eighty cents at the most; today he is paid forty cents per hour.

However, the question is, will we take the one million dollar proposition, the one that I am going to vote for and the one that I am prepared to stand or fall by, and the one that will likely be a commercial asset to Newfoundland; or on the other hand will we take the dock and close it up? Personally, I think that the repairing and reconditioning of the dry dock is absolutely essential for the proper operating of the railway, as it stands today, owing to the fact that the Government own several coastal boats, which have to be drydocked and attended to from time to time, and, if the dock was operated by private interests, monies would have to be paid out of railway earnings to meet the dock expenses incurred by the boats; whereas on the other hand, if we spend one million dollars on the dock and have it last for the next forty or fifty years, we will get something for the money expended. And I would go further than that and make an additional expenditure and put the machine shops in some kind of decent shape. Last year it was thought that fifty thousand dollars would repair the dock. I was one of the individuals who said at the time that this amount would scarcely buy enough nails to fix the dock. But, of course, at that time the Government were not properly informed of conditions up there; I had been going around the dock for quite a few years and had made a study of how things were running up there. I contend that the dock taken over and managed efficiently and properly can pay. Today it is not being managed efficiently and I feel sure that the Government or the Railway Commission, will, within the next few months, make the necessary investigation and find out what has been going on in connection with the dry dock. Personally I think that neither the dock nor the railway are being operated as they should be operated. In my opinion we should have a real man in charge of the mechanical arrangements both of the railway and the dock. There are men going around in Newfoundland today, even in St. John's, who, in my judgment, would be first class officials to put in charge of the railway or dry dock mechanical department. If I was given a gift of the railway or dock tomorrow—and I believe the Government would gladly give them to me —the man I would put in charge of the mechanical end of the business would be Commander Howley, a gentleman, who, in my opinion, is second to none in Newfoundland in that line of business. Take the C. P. R. for example. There is a dry dock in New Brunswick today controlled by the C. P. R. It is eleven hundred feet long and will take the largest liners afloat. That dock is not paying and has not paid since it was built. It is in two divisions and will take two ships at a time. The C. P. R. have spent millions on that dock. But they have it there for their own convenience because New Brunswick is a terminal for their railway and the dock is used by them for their ships in winter time, so that they operate the dock in conjunction with their railway. I think that their money has been well spent; otherwise they would have to pay out considerable moneys from their exchequer by having to put their ships in other docks. Getting back to the question of our own dock again, I would be of the same opinion as the Honourable Minister of Justice, namely, to tell the contractor, whoever he may be, to go and start work on the dock right away, as the work is absolutely essential.

I have merely risen, Mr. Chairman, to give my support to the Resolutions now before the Chair and I feel sure that within the next forty eight hours, at least, something will be done to start this work at once, whoever gets the contract, whether it is Bishop or Crandell, but I think that by the look of the figures Bishop should get it. I do not think that Mr. Bishop needs any further credential as his reputation in Newfoundland or Canada is too well known.

MR. RANDELL—Mr. Chairman, I do not think there is any doubt in the minds of any members of this Assembly or in the minds of anybody in connection with the shipping business in this port as to the necessity of having some repairs done to and some money spent on the dry dock, or of having it closed up because it is pretty generally known it is not in safe condition to carry on the usual work there in regard to the repairing of ships. But, in my opinion, I cannot agree with the Government respecting the way they have gone about getting figures and given their report on the dock because I think that it should have been found out first of all what repairs were exactly needed there. You should probably have brought in somebody who is actually independent or get a report from people who are absolutely disinterested in any repair job. That is the way I look at it. Now I am not reflecting in any way on the gentlemen or the firms these gentlemen are connected with and who were brought in here by the Government to report on the dock; but I think it would be better to have some one come here and report who have no connection whatever with anyone interested with repairs. I have not the least doubt but that there should be a lot of money spent to put the dock in good shape and the question arises, of course, as to what is the best scheme and the best proposition?

There is a difference of opinion, of course, as to what should be done to put the dock into repair. We have heard various suggestions made. We have these reports made by the two gentlemen invited to come here and look into the matter. Now the question arises as to whether it would be possible to put the dock from its present shape into first class condition, or whether it would be best to spend a lot of money on it. In my humble opinion, sir, the dock, as it is now in size, can take care possibly of almost all the shipping that we are going to get perhaps in this country or this port for the next fifteen or twenty years. Of course when the dock was built, it was built for a class of ships that does not exist today. I am referring more particularly to the cargo boats. As far as passenger liners are concerned, we have had very few of those in the past. Not, I think, because there are so few ships getting into trouble, but because there are so few of those large ships, the proportion of big liners that need repairs are so small that I don't think that the Government will be justified in giving them any consideration. We had two ships apparently since the dock has been built, come into this port that we could not dock. Those were, I understood, the Grampian and the Metagama. Is it right to consider that class of ship, and spend a million dollars in the hope of getting ships like that to come in here? I have been very much interested in the two reports as a matter of fact just put forward by the two gentlemen investigating the conditions of things at the dock, and I just want to say that I feel that Mr. Mitchell has not had all his facts and figures that have been supplied to him correctly given or else he has made some mistake with regard to the draughts that he has given. He tells us about the class of ship that has a greater draft than can be handled by the dock at its present size, and he speaks of the "Empress of Scotland" and the "Empress of France" and other ships of that class as being so large that we cannot very well handle them. Well he is in error with regard to the draft because he has given the Corona here a draft of forty feet and the "Empress of Scotland" a draft of fifty feet two inches. Well, I think that may have been a typographical error, but I don't see how that could be because the printer of this report would not have sufficient knowledge of ships and shipping to make a typographical error of that sort. Now, here we have the "Empress of Scotland" with a draft of fifty feet, two inches, that is ridiculous, because although I do not know the dimensions of the ark there never has been a ship built that sails on the five oceans that had a draft of fifty feet two inches. The Mauretania has a draft of thirty six feet three inches and that ship is one of the largest afloat. When she is light, as far as draft is concerned, she could be docked on our dock as it is today.

MR. BROWNE—That is as regards draft.

MR. RANDELL—Yes, draft, not width. The beam as far as I can see is correct, but the draft of that ship here, that is given in this report, I think it must certainly be depth and not draft. The gentleman referred to the four ships that came here could not be docked on account of the draft and beam. The Grampian, the Metagama and the Clara Camus. As far as the draft of the Metagama went she could have been dock. She could not owing to her width. The Seapool could have been especially docked and discharged in this port. We had no facilities for discharging her cargo of grain. That also applies to the Clara Camus. But I am not referring to those ships in particular because in my opinion it is not absolutely necessary to have that dock deepened. And the deepening of the dock is going to mean a large proportion of the expenses of repairs. It might be claimed by some people that it would not be worth while repairing the dock without making a thorough job of it and making it fit for shipping. Of course there is a difference in the class of ships being built within the last 40 years. And I think that if the dock could take care of anything coming in during forty years that it can take care of what we are likely to get to-day.

Then again we have to consider our narrow entrance getting into this port. As has been stated it is very difficult for ships of a size say of 20 thousand tons to manoeuvre into this port. Especially if they are deeply laden and want to get to the bottom of the harbour where the docks are. That being so I cannot see why we should make provision for any ships that are larger than those we have already handled. Of course the dock, I believe, should be wider. That is if we are going to make a good job of it. But it is questionable whether we will get the work that will justify that. If you deepen and widen the dock it is going to be very much more expensive. It is going to be very much more expensive in handling and putting the ships on dock. We have a fleet of ships of our own that are more or less small. And to put three or four schooners on that dock after it has been increased in size and start to pump it out you are going to be up against expenses anywhere between 30 p.c. and 50 p.c. more; such a large volume of water will have to be pumped out.

MR. BROWNE—Would you explain in what way, please?

MR. RANDELL—If you are going to widen it and deepen it you are going to have 50 p.c. more water. And undoubtedly you are going to be up against much greater expense than ever you had before. And also if you are going to spend a million dollars you will have to pay the interest on that million dollars. That will be about $50,000 a year I suppose. The question arises as to what is the proper repairs to give to the dock. I believe that that dock can be repaired for $100,000 and last for 10 to 15 years as it is now. That is at its present size. Of course, that is the point that we have got to consider. Is it going to be a commercial asset to this country if we spend a million dollars on it? Are you going to get commensurate returns? That is the point to consider. Under the Government management I am afraid not. Now I don't propose to say much about the repairs and the construction work because I know very little about it. But I think that the bunkering and cargo handling facilities should be left to private enterprise. There are any amount of big docks where there are no bunkering and cargo handling facilities. Therefore in my opinion, sir, it is a question whether it is going to be economical.

There is an opinion amongst the greater number of shipping people here that the dock should be repaired at its present size and made efficient, and then that will be able to take all the ships that you are going to have here during the next fifteen or twenty years. That expense it is thought would amount to $100,000. The opinion may be right or it may not be so. If that dock in the year 1924 had an earning of $41,000.00 I do not see how you are going to make much money out of it by spending that large amount of money on it. It is a public utility of course. It would be just as much a public utility if it were rebuilt in its present shape. As I said before if you have money to spend, then by all means go ahead and do it, but when it is the case of borrowing the money for the reconstruction I think that you should look at the economical side of the matter before anything else. I presume that the Government will go ahead as they have outlined in their plans and if they intend to go ahead they are going to have the dock deepened, and then by all means do the job well. They should put concrete wherever possible, because concrete is a substance that will last as long as anything that can be put there. So I think that the Government would be well advised to reconsider the matter and leave the dock as it is. There is one thing that I should like somebody to tell me about. I do not know much about construction jobs. I should like to know what is the life of steel sheet piling when it is placed in a position where it is sometimes wet and sometimes dry and would be likely to rust. If the Government intends to make a good job of the dock I think that they should consider the matter of putting concrete where it is intended to put this steel piling. I should like to put myself on record as saying that in my opinion the dock should be repaired as it is at its present size and shape. But if the Government intends to go ahead and spend a lot of money on it, then by all means do the job well.

MR. HALFYARD—Mr. Chairman, it is certainly with a feeling of surprise that we read the report of the Railway Commission on the dock as submitted by Col. Mitchell. There is an erroneous statement with regard to the draft of steamers. If the mistake was made in connection with one steamer we would say that it was a typographical error, but evidently as the learned Captain Randell has pointed out, there was a mistake in preparing the draft of all the steamers. Now this is one part of the report of Colonel Mitchell that can be intelligently discussed by this House because we happen to have as a member of the House a man who understands all about the draft of steamers. If we had some engineers here it might be that this whole report would be torn to pieces. And since we know that there have been mistakes made by the learned engineer, no one can criticise us if we are inclined to be suspicious, of the correctness of the other statements which are contained in this document, but as we are ignorant in that respect we have to accept the report as being a fair estimate of the condition and the cost of the repairs to the dock. If the Government had made up their minds to be consistent and live up to their statements which they made with regard to Government by Executive Authority they would be prepared at this time to lay the contract on the table of the House. Last July or August resolutions were introduced to raise a loan on the credit of the colony for certain public purposes and an amount of fifty thousand dollars was voted for the repairs to the dock, and therefore we cannot plead ignorance of the condition of the dock when that money was required. We know that they would not take authority to enter into any contract without submitting the contract to the Legislature. It is against their principles. It is something that would not be considered by them. It is disgraceful for the Executive Government to enter into a contract without having it tabled in the Assembly. Is it possible that the Government have realised that the statements they made about certain actions of past Governments are not correct.

Have they realised that the Government cannot be carried on without executive government assuming some authority or responsibility. It is another instance of the Government acting contrary to their own pronouncements. The learned Minister of Justice said that in the past money had been spent and then the Government had to come down to the Legislature and get the money voted. Well, now I understand that money has been paid out for relief to the extent of about ten thousand dollars a week and where are they getting the money? I am sure that it was never voted in this House. And this Government will have to be indemnified for this expenditure that was not anticipated last year. The necessity for spending money on relief, by executive authority is nothing in comparison with what obtained in this country during the years 1922 and 1923. We were held up to ridicule because we spent money for the relief of the distressed and then asked the Government to indemnify us for it. The conditions re employment in this country are not as good as might be desired. The proposed employment at the dock and the railway will relieve the situation in this section of the country to some extent, I venture to state that there are thousands of people in this country living from hand to mouth, last year they managed to earn enough to keep them through the winter months. Now they have left their homes in their hundreds and have gone to the Humber areas only to find that they cannot get employment there and have to return home again. That applies in Trinity District where dozens of men, as I have been advised by the relieving officers, have borrowed the money to pay their passages to the Humber. They wandered around Corner Brook for a fortnight in search of employment and then they had to return to their homes and what will be done for them I do not know.

That is the condition that is going to exist from now until the fishing season open. There may be reason for finding employment for our people at the present time in this country, but here we are asked to give the Governor in Council authority to borrow an unlimited amount of money, which in my opinion is altogether unnecessary.

One thing we are determined to do, and that is to give you that authority by statute. We have not sufficient confidence in the present Government with regard to the spending of monies or the borrowing of monies to authorise them by an Act of the Legislature to borrow what monies they like. The short regime of your Government has not created confidence in our minds or in the minds of the electors in general as to your method of spending monies. If we had, or if we knew that the country had confidence in you, of course there might be some excuse for this legislature to give you authority to do as you please. Of course you can do as you please, but do not ask the Legislature to pass a special act for you. When you come in with such a proposition, do not think that you can expect members of the Opposition to fall in with your views in that matter. It is nearly eight or nine months since we gave the Government authority to borrow money to do certain public works, of which amount there was fifty thousand dollars voted for repairs to the dock, and now, when the work should be going ahead, the first thing that should be laid on the table of the House when it opened was a contract for repairing the dock; but now when the Government makes up its mind to do something, it has the printers up over night getting a bill ready, and they cannot sleep until that bill goes through all its stages in the House—and if that is not rushing legislation, I do not know what is.

Mr. Chairman, the loan resolutions of last year provided that the Governor in Council should have power tc apply . . . Reads . . . . . and to any other essential purpose. Of the amount of six million dollars raised by that loan, one million six hundred thousand dollars to meet the deficit. I presume all that was spent?

HON. MINISTER OF FINANCE – One hundred thousand dollars more, I expect.

MR. HALFYARD—Then for rolling stock for the railway and a new steamer for the Gulf of St. Lawrence —four hundred thousand dollars. I suppose the steamer will cost all that four hundred thousand. There will be no balance left of that. It cost more, I understand. Rolling stock for the railway—three hundred and fifty thousand dollars. I do not know whether you will supply all the rolling stock required for that, or not. The estimated cost of re-railing the railway is eight hundred thousand dollars. I suppose if you go ahead with these undertakings in connection with the railway, and the steamer that is being built now, that vote will be well spent. I suppose the only vote where there will be a drop balance, or money not expended, will be the two million dollars for roads. Now you can take authority to use the whole or part of this two million dollars for any other public purpose. I would suggest that you would take two hundred and fifty thousand dollars for roads this year, and apply the balance to the Railway, and to repairs to the dock. There is no necessity at the present time of getting a loan. I do not think that this country at present can afford to assume the burden of the additional interest. But you have that two million dollars for roads. You could not spend that two million dollars on roads this year. When I say you could not I feel quite sure that you will not spend that amount. So that you will not abolish your road policy altogether, take a quarter of a million dollars, and then you have $1,750,000.-00 left for other necessary purposes —one of which is the dock, and then there will be no necessity of borrowing any more money.

You will have the support of the country if you use that money on what is considered a public utility. We must have a dock for ourselves. We must have a dock to carry on the the work in Newfoundland, outside of the tramp steamers that happen to come in here for repairs, and we have to repair the dock. Whether the dock is under government ownership or not, I presume that it will be of greater value when we can make some arrangement with a private concern to operate the railway and the dock, if we spend about five hundred thousand dollars on it now. It will be an asset, whereas now it would only be a liability to anyone who would take it over.

We cannot afford financially to spend any money, and it is a pity that some arrangements cannot be made whereby the Government will get clear of the dock and the railway. I do not know what the Government has been doing in this respect. It was certainly considered by the outgoing Government, and every possible attempt was made to get some private concern to take over the railway; and the dock is now regarded as a necessary adjunct of the railway, since the whole transportation system by railway and steamers is under one management. I do not say that the Government cannot successfully carry on just as well as any private concern. A good many people think that Governments cannot do that. That is only a matter of opinion, but I think the majority in this country, legislators and others, have the idea that it would be better for the railway to be clear of Government control, even if we had to give larger subsidies than we do at the present time. However, that is only a matter of opinion. These last couple of years I cannot see where a private concern would have done any better under Newfoundland conditions in running the railway and steamship services than has been done by the Government.

Our debate on these Resolutions will not do any harm. It is a pity that we did not take more time to express our opinions. We are pleased to hear from the members of the Government, who have been, some of them, in a position, to have more knowledge of the actual conditions that obtain with regard to the dock, and who have been in touch, no doubt, with those who have given their reports; and, without prejudice, I am sure that we were all glad to hear the remarks of Col. Sullivan yesterday evening, regarding these reports, which were given in a lucid and clear manner. The others who have spoken have interested us, and have also given us some information; and I do not think that we should consider that the time was wasted in considering these resolutions.

I am sure the Government cannot reasonably expect the opposition to take any other attitude than that they have taken in the debate on these resolutions.

One point I would make is this— that there is no need of asking this House to authorise the Governor in Council to make a contract; and with regard to authorising another loan I do not think that the Government should take from this House that authority. I really think the Government should make up its mind not to borrow any more money than they are authorised to borrow at present. Of the six million dollars authorised to be borrowed only four millions have been raised, and so they still have authority to borrow two million more, so there is really no necessity for them looking for authority to borrow more.

For these reasons I cannot support these resolutions. I support the principle of repairing the dock, and doing the best possible we can.

Mr. Chairman, it is now 6.30 I shall leave the chair until 8 o'clock.

The House adjourned until 8 of the clock.

MR. HALFYARD — Mr. Chairman, before recess I was speaking to the Resolutions before the Chair. I may say, the Dry Dock is a public utility, and as we are a seafaring people; depending on the sea for the major portions of our revenue, the fisheries being our main industry, and so many of our people engaging in them, we must have vessels propelled by sail or steam, therefore, we must have some place where those vessels can be docked for repairs. Arguing from that viewpoint, we would all conclude that there is nothing else for us to do but make provision for the repairing or rebuilding of the dock, which we now have. But the plan of proceedure is what should interest us at present. Estimates have been tabled by those who are supposed to know what they are talking about, and without any engineering experience I am inclined to think that the dock is unsafe for further operations. It behoves us now to consider ways and means to put the dock in a condition to care for the work that we have to get done. We do not want to go outside St. John's or Newfoundland to get our vessels docked for repairs. It should not be necessary to have any lengthy debate or any controversy that would in any way reflect on our good judgment in the matter. There is no occasion for it, but in the meantime we have to consider our financial ability as a House and country. It has been stated in the reports submitted that the dock can be re-conditioned for about half a million, and put in practically the same condition as when first completed, thirty or forty years ago. No doubt a dock re-conditioned in that way would suit all requirements for the vessels of Newfoundland, but we are going outside in this project to try and get people in here, and when tramp steamers and others become lame off our shores, we should have a dock of sufficient size to repair them. So I think it is wise on our part to consider something that will meet our own requirements. Captain Randell, who has a good knowledge of shipping, expressed himself this afternoon as being of the opinion that possibly a dock of the size of the present one would meet our requirements for ninety per cent. of the ships that will come here for the next ten or fifteen years. Now whether it is wise to only spend four or five hundred thousand on the dock is for the Government to decide. As I have already remarked, we have to consider our financial abilty before undertaking large expenditures of moneys, although certain utilities are very necessary, but, as I said this afternoon, we are not altogether out of the woods financially. Still we find in the Estimates submitted today that the Government thinks they can find anywhere from four hundred to five hundred thousand dollars more. The Estimates show an increase of $438,000 in expenditure. It has been said that some of that money had already been spent. That may apply to some extent, but there has been large expenditures outside of that and probably we shall have something more to say about that when the Budget is presented. It is proposed to reduce the Bank tax from which we will lose from fifty to seventy thousand dollars. The Income Tax, from which was derived revenue to the extent of $300,000 is to be cut out, and then we have repeal of duties on different things which will mean perhaps another loss of $300,000, so that I think that another million dollars more or less will have to be found to keep the country on an even keel and balance our accounts at the end of the next fiscal year. It is proposed in these Resolutions to give the Governor-in-Council power to enter into a contract for the repairing of the dock, etc.

Mr. Chairman, we are asked to authorise the Government to enter into a contract and we would like to know the nature of that contract. What the contract really means, and I hope the Government will be in a position before the Committee rises to give us all information on that point. I don't know whether the Government has been asked to pay Mr. Crandell and Bishop & Co. for giving the reports as to the dock, and what it will cost to put the dock into condition under this scheme, but my opinion is that the Government Engineer, Mr. Hall, and the Railway Engineer, Mr. Joyce, should give us sufficient information for us to decide whether the dock should be repaired or not, and they could have told you just what is required and after that then the Government could have interested themselves in getting a competent engineer to come here and do the work. Mr. Joyce is competent now to take up the figures and give an opinion as to what the different items will cost. Therefore, he must know something about the cost of engineering in connection with the dock. The question was asked why we did not get him to survey the dock and get a report.

(Reads from paper) Prime Minister said, etc.

Well, if the Government really intend to ask for tenders for the building of the dock, I think it would have been worth while to get the third party. The Government decided not to ask for tenders, but to makee an agreement with someone to superintend and build the dock, and they would find the money.

Mr. Chairman, as I stated when I rose to speak, I did not intend to speak very long, but I would like for the Prime Minister to give us all the information we can in connection with the nature of the contract. What returns are we going to get for that seventy thousand, and again I would exhort the Government before the Committee rises to delete Section 3. There is no object of my taking up the time of the House any further. It should be a national question, and I hope you will consider the subject, and the spending of any further moneys from that viewpoint. Certainly you will have to consider our financial conditions, and I feel quite sure that the country will be rudely shocked if they hear that the Government intends to borrow any more money. The Prime Minister smiles at that remark, why, I do not know. It is said that "Nero fiddled while Rome burnt." It is something the country did not expect from this Government, therefore, they will be disappointed, and rudely shocked, and all their expectations will have gone to the four winds. We cannot afford to be increasing our debt. The incomes of our people are not such that they can afford to pay any more taxes. We are labouring under a load now that we cannot properly carry, and if you borrow money you are increasing that load. It is not temporary, it is constant. It will be with us for all time. It is not like spending fifty thousand dollars or a hundred thousand dollars this year, and there it ends, it will go on from year to year, and if we can treat the matter of finances and the matter of public debt as lightly as that, you are false to your charge. When anyone refers to the national debt it causes the Prime Minister to smile, silly smiles, that is not good enough.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Most of us like to see the comedian playing "tragedy."

MR. HALFYARD—It is a "tragedy" to hear you try to sidetrack the issue. It is a tragedy in this way that the majority of the laborers of this country find it so difficult to provide for themselves and those dependent upon them, that if they could get away from the country they would go. It is very unfortunate for them that conditions are bad in this country, and in a great many countries they are no better, they cannot help themselves. Therefore as Legislators, we should not try to burden those people more. I do not want to be a financier to find out what we are heading for. You cannot reduce taxation while the expenditure is being increased. You cannot do it and continue solvent. I am told that the first proposition in connection with the loan resolutions of last year was for $15,000,000.00; later it was decided to bring in Loan Resolutions for $6,000,000.00. This shows that they do not want the money. They could do without it. Only the other day the Government borrowed four millions. Now they are having authority to go to the money markets and get two million dollars, and they only want one million dollars to repair the dock, in fact they only want $375,000.00, and, therefore, it is bordering on "tragedy" when you have the Government ask in this House to give them authority to borrow a further million, and they don't know what to do with it.

That is the chief objection I have to these Resolutions, and I trust that the Government, before these Resolutions are committed to a Bill, will see their way clear to delete that clause. As I stated before recess, you have authority to borrow six million dollars. You have borrowed four and you can go and borrow two millions more. If you have to spend one million dollars on the dock, you certainly can take some of that unspent money provided in the Resolutions of last year. I feel sure that the Government will consider this and delete clause three of the present Resolutions altogether. With regard to clause one again. I would not be a party to voting to the Executive Government any more power than they can already assume. Now I did not really have time to study the speeches of the Prime Minister and Hon. Mr. Sullivan; but one thing I notice is that the Crandell Company asks for a commission of fifteen per cent., while the Bishop Company asks for $70,000 whether the cost of operations amounted to nine hundred thousand dollars or a million dollars. I would like to know what service will the Bishop Company give for that $70,000.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—They will bring in their own machinery to do the work and they will employ local labour.

MR. HALFYARD—But the Government would assume all liability in connection with the transportation of all machinery in the country no doubt. But what service will the Government really get for this $70,000. If I understand the position correctly the idea is to make some kind of an agreement with the engineering concern to supervise or oversee the expenditure of one million dollars for the building of the dock. Then again what is the nature of the contract that you propose to make. That is another question. If these people would take a contract to build a dock according to certain specifications laid down, and when it is built and surveyed and passed upon they would be given a cheque for one million dollars plus $70,000. Is that the position? If that is the intention of the Government there is no need of a contract, but simply to write out an agreement. And then we were told that no projects should be started which can be regarded as liabilities to the colony without the ratification of the Legislature. Where the consistency is I do not know. Mr. Chairman, I am anxious to get a reply to these questions and to get further information as to what the Government really intends to do, and I trust that the Prime Minister or the Hon. Member for Placentia and St. Mary's will afford us the courtesy of replying and telling us what the Government really intends to do about this contract.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—Mr. Chairman, in reply to the question of the hon. member as to what service will be given and what is the nature of the contract that will be given, I would like to say that the nature of the contract and the service are similar to the same kind of contract that was given by the Armstrong Whitworth Company for the building of the Main Dam on the West Coast. We understand that the case was simply the cost price plus commission with the guarantee that the commission would not exceed a certain amount. It is exactly the same proposition with us.. They are not asking for ten per cent. If the cost of the work were one million they would not get a hundred thousand dollars, but seventy thousand dollars, and if the cost of the work is seven hundred thousand dollars they are still getting seventy thousand dollars. For that they are supervising the work and are giving their services for what they think should be paid. Mr. Crandell's proposition was for 15 p.c. commission of the work that they did. In this work they will supply their best men and see that the work is done to the best of their ability. They will probably bring down their own machinery and charge us hire for it. The Hon. Member has suggested that Mr. Harvey or Mr. Joyce could have drawn up as good a proposition as this. Both Mr. Joyce and Mr. Harvey said that they were incapable of deciding as to what should be done. They said that they were not sufficiently experts on the work and advised that somebody else should be called in to give an opinion. We got Mr. Crandell, a very expert engineer, down to give us his opinion. Then we got Mr. Mitchell's opinion, and we compared the two and got Mr. Bishop along to confirm the position, and Mr. Bishop did this, and I think that we have got all the information that we could possibly have got from an engineering staff. As we go along it may be advisable for us to get a contract price per square foot of concrete work or at any rate we will have all the figures checked up by our own men. We will follow the work and all the expenses in connection with it. We would have the work checked up even if we did not think that Mr. Bishop and his associates were giving us a square deal. We are satisfied, however, that they have a great reputation to keep up, and they cannot do otherwise than give us the best service that can be given for the undertaking and their commission will not suffer if they give the best and quickest possible job that can be done. The only other point that has been suggested by the Hon. Member is the deletion of section three. The object of this section is the borrowing of the money. It is only an ordinary rule of thumb to see that if you have $500,000 put aside for a coal shed and another $100,000 left after building the shed, it can be seen that there is $600,000 for the enterprize, and if the expenditure that is involved is a million dollars then it can be easily seen that you are $400,000 short. A child could see that. And if we are $400,000 short, then we want the power to borrow it. It is most pathetic to see the tears almost running down the hon. member's face at the idea of borrowing $400,000. He was a member of a Government that borrowed fifteen million dollars in three years and have not one single thing to show for it. Fifteen million dollars borrowed and nothing to show for it. We have got the permission to borrow six million dollars, and we show the country that the money is to be used in the pursuit of a regular policy. In other words we are going to give the country something to show for the expenditure. We are going to spend two million dollars on the roads and we are going to see that the money is well spent. Again we are going to spend money on the railway. And we are going to spend money on the dock, and everything is properly earmarked and is of a onstructive nature, and so I say it is pathetic to see the attitude of the Member for Trinity. He could show no returns for the fifteen million dollars his Government borrowed, and now he sheds tears over the borrowing of four hundred thousand dollars for the completion of a job costing a million dollars, and for which we have only six hundred thousand dollars on hand. Now, gentlemen ,if we considered that we could construct this dock satisfactorily for $500,000 we would do it. We do not want to waste $500,000. We want to see a dock that will be a credit and a lasting credit to the country and be able to handle the ships that may come in here, and then I think we will be able if we wish to get some good company like Vickers to take the dock and run it. We do not necessarily want to run the dock or the railway. We cannot sell a dock when we have not got a dock. You might as well talk of selling the St. John's street railway. We were told that we could have the St. John's street railway for nothing if we would run it. The company that has it today can manage to run it because they have the electric light with it, and they can make up what they lose on the railway with what they make on the electric light. It is the same with the dock. We could not sell a dock unless we had a workable dock. It is absolutely valueless as it is today. We could close the dock up for twelve months and fix it up for five hundred thousand dollars, but we have the opinion of the experts that if we spend the million, do the work properly, we would be working in the best interest of the country. The Opposition have not offered any suggestion that is constructive. They simply tell us that the dock should have a new gate and they have not made one constructive suggestion. Even Captain Randell from whom I did expect some good proposition in connection with this had nothing to say except that we should not deepen the dock, and that we should widen it, and from what he said I could not understand what his policy in connection with the dock is at all. The Government has given every consideration to this matter. They are not experts but they are common sense men, and they have followed the best advice that can be got, and that is the very best thing that common sense men can do, to get the best advice and follow it. That is the policy of the Government tonight and that is the reason that we want to get to work on the dock as quickly as possible. Now the general plan which has been sketched out by Mr. Bishop has been considered very necessary, and when completed satisfactorily the dock will be a credit to Newfoundland. In our geographical position it is almost essential that Newfoundland should have a dock that can be used by ships in distress from the Atlantic. We are constantly getting distressed ships along the coast, but they never come in here if they can get elsewhere. If we had a new dock properly run with the suitable machinery, and the work done reasonably cheap, I believe that we would get twice as many vessels to come into St. John's as we do at the present time.

MR. HALFYARD—Mr. Chairman, I am very much surprised at the reply of the Honourable the Prime Minister. He said that the services we would get for seventy thousand dollars would be that these people would superintend the construction of the dock. At the same time I presume they would be paid a salary for their services. This would be over and above all expenditure.

The Hon. Prime Minister ridicules my suggestion that they should take four hundred thousand dollars from moneys that they already have; and that it was pathetic to hear the suggestion that I made in connection with this country not undertaking another loan. But I assure the Prime Minister that the pathetic part of it will be for those who have to pay increased taxes in connection with this further loan. There is nothing, I contend, unreasonable in the suggestion that we could get that four hundred thousand dollars from some other sources rather than undertake increased taxation necessitated by another loan. Then to back up his statements, and make my remarks appear more pathetic, the statement was made that the Government I was associated with borrowed fifteen million dollars, threw it away and got nothing in return. If the present Government had to go through the same conditions that obtained during the years 1922 and 1923, they would have borrowed twenty five million dollars, judging from their actions and what they are doing now. You are borrowing money now, and you have to look around and try to find a way to spend it. It is a statement unworthy of the Prime Minister, to say that the outgoing Government spent fifteen million dollars and got no returns for it, as if it were a pleasure for anybody to have the responsibility of handling the affairs of this country, and have to borrow money and spend it without getting any returns for it.

We kept people alive just as you are doing at the present time, you are giving out the dole at the rate of ten thousand dollars a week, and getting nothing for it. Why do you hold up the past administration or any person connected with it to ridicule, because they borrowed money, and had to give it out, and did not get full returns for it.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—There is this much improvement—that it cost seventy thousand dollars this spring as against two hundred and fifty thousand last spring.

MR. HALFYARD—Who was party to the expenditure of money during the Warren administration in St. John's?

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—I was just drawing your attention to the figures.

MR. HALFYARD—I am drawing your attention to your own expenditure. You had as much to do with the expenditures in 1923 as anyone connected with the Government.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—You pay us a very great compliment—we were in Opposition.

MR. HALFYARD—You could do more when you were in the Opposition than you are doing now when you are in the Government.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—It is a great compliment.

MR. HALFYARD—The Prime Minister wanted to treat you decently. He promised you that anything that would be undertaken by the Government for the relief of the people in St. John's would be done after consulting the representatives of the districts.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—What I am trying to show you is that as a result of observation and experience it has been possible to improve the method of relief.

MR. HALFYARD—I submit you have not improved it to any extent. The conditions that obtained in the Fall of 1924 and January of 1925 certainly were not so bad as those months in the preceeding year. You are spending the money and getting no returns. It all proves that members of the present Government who were members of this House during those trying years, should not suggest that this present Government is getting any returns for the relief they are giving. The conditions are altogether different today.

Mr. Chairman, the Honourable Prime Minister would hold me up to ridicule for the spending of monies during the years 1922 and 1923. I would respectively draw this matter to his attention. During the months of July, August, September, October and November, for about five months the sum of forty thousand dollars was spent in Bonavista district last year.

HON. PRIME MINISTER—We got good value for it.

MR. HALFYARD—I submit that it is impossible for you to know whether you got good value for that money or not.

HON. PRIME MINISTER—I saw it

MR. HALPFYARD—You could not. Mr. Prime Minister, with all due respect to you, it was impossible for you to know whether proper returns were given for that money or not. I have a list of places taken in nearly every nook and corner of Bonavista District, where money was spent and how can you know whether good value was given in each of these places.

HON. PRIME MINISTER—Can you tell me anywhere where it was not spent well.

MR. HALFYARD—I am not raising that point. But if you are going to spend forty thousand dollars every five months in each of the eighteen electoral districts, it will cost $720,-000.00—and that is practically what you will have to do if you are going to give a square deal to all. And then we have been ridiculed because we have spent money.

HON. PRIME MINISTER—You spent forty thousand dollars on a hole in the ground in Bonavista, which was not worth anything.

MR. HALFYARD—It depends upon the people of Bonavista as to the utility of that expenditure. Bonavista is one of the largest fishing outports, and it has one of the most unsafe harbours in any part of the country. Some attempt has been made by all governments to give them some sort of safety, and as to whether the money was spent wisely or not I do not know. I do know that it is only fair to make some attempt to give Bonavista a harbour.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—It all depends, in your opinion, upon who spends the money.

MR. HALFYARD—Evidently that is the opinion of the Government at the present time. But if the present Government is going to congratulate themselves on the administration of affairs during the past few months with regard to the expenditure of monies and the proposed reduction in taxation, they will have to go some other place outside of Newfoundland to get the people to believe it.

I contend that we should not borrow any more money. The statements published in our daily press showing an increase in our revenue is erroneous if we still have to borrow money. You are having increased revenue, and still you cannot rebuild the dock with the extra amount of four hundred thousand dollars, but you must go on with this crazy scheme of spending two million dollars on roads and highways.

It has been proposed to build roads all over the country. If the Deer Lake and Badger Roads were not built, the leaders of the Government in this House and outside of it would use the necessity of such roads as the chief reasons for borrowing money. I do not know what the actual cost per mile for these roads was, but certainly there were some returns got for the building of these roads. I know these roads. I travelled over the road from Deer Lake to Bonne Bay. I drove over some parts and walked a great part of the way; but with the expenditure of seven or eight thousand dollars to fix some bad places in these roads, you could drive the whole way over that road in a motor car. Of course, some sections of that thirty mile road are just as good as the road from here to Topsail.

The road is too wide. It is wide enough for two roads. That is where the mistake was made. There are some parts of that road which are in perfect condition, and therefore, we have got some returns for the money spent in that district at any rate. The same applies to the Badger Road, no doubt. And you have to consider the conditions at the time that those roads were built, and the state of mind that the people were in at the time.

Mr. Chairman, I am fairly well acquainted with the personnel of governments during the past few years, and I find that men are pretty much alike. I have not come across a superman yet. I am perfectly sure that if the present Government had to go through the same conditions, they would have spent money just the same way as was done then; and yet we are accused of borrowing money, spending it and making no returns, and we are accused of squandermania. I would have expected better than that from the Prime Minister.

While I hold a seat in this House I will protest against such statements as those made by the Honourable the Prime Minister tonight. The spending of money in this country was only similar to the spending of millions and billions in other countries, for which they got no returns. Millions of pounds were spent in Great Britain, and are being spent there today. Millions of dollars was spent in Canada, and billions in the United States in 1920-1921, and every people and country did the best under the circumstances, just as the neighboring province is doing now while the strike is on at the Sydneys. Somebody will be here after the present legislature goes out of power and talk about the monies thrown away by them, and say they got no returns. It is ridiculous and silly, and not worthy of the calibre of the Honourable Prime Minister, as he cannot justify the statement that we threw away fifteen million dollars, and that it is pathetic to hear us talking now about increased expenditure. But we should all cut our garment according to our cloth, and be governed by the existing circumstances, and if it is necessary to borrow the money to keep people alive, then do so, but do not borrow it under any other circumstances whatsoever.

MR. WARREN—Mr. Chairman, I did not intend to intervene in this discussion, because after seeing the reports in connection with the dock, I was convinced there was only one course for the Government to pursue—to make the best of a bad job, and if they spent a little more they would be justified in doing so. The Leader of the Opposition has raised the point which has bought me to my feet, that is the advisability of giving the Governor in Council a blank cheque as to the amount to be spent on the dock. It is in the recollection of every member present that for four or five years there has been an outcry by one section of political thought about the spending of money by minute of council. To some extent I confess I was concerned in that spending, but I do not think I was wrong, and can justify any part I took when I say that the Government was justified at the time. As the Honorable Member for Trinity has pointed out the circumstances were exceptional, and exceptional steps had to be taken. I agree that there may be some justification in the criticism of us for doing so much, and therefore, I am jealous of the idea of giving the Governor in Council the power to spend millions without reference to this House. A contract of this sort is governed by rules of the House, which are statutory and provide that any contract extending over a term of years, and calling for the payment of some of the money shall be ratified by this House and also by the Legislature. These rules were framed for the safeguarding against the making of contracts by the House without submitting them to the judgment of all the Members. Those on the Government side represent only one side of the public, and those on this side are entitled, if not to defeat a motion, to criticise and subject it to scrutiny. It is most unusual to give a Government of today which after all does not possess the confidence of the whole country, the power of Attorney to make a contract of that sort. Therefore, I had to consider what position I was to take in case of a division of the House on this point. Some years ago a Bill like this came before the House. There are a few bills of this kind, and I do not remember any to come before the Government with which I was associated giving a blank cheque to the Governor in Council. But in 1919 there were two bills passed giving power of this sort—one to make a coastal contract with Bowring Brothers, which was never entered into and the other with the Avalon Telephone Co. The objection to this sort of thing is apparent from the position of the Avalon Co. When a Bill comes before the House we all know what the contractor is expected to do, or just what are their rights. There is difference in respect to an operating company, but this Bill provides only for the repairing of the dock, and ceases when the work is done. I, therefore, tried to ascertain why the Government brought in a Bill of this sort, and asked for a blank cheque, and I must say that I am satisfied. There are two positions, either the Government to make a contract with whom they like, and submit it to the House, or put a Bill like this through. Before making a contract with any company, calling for an expenditure of over a million dollars, the Government should be sure of its position, and not only seek legal but expert engineering advice. Though it is imperative that the dock be repaired, I do not think the Government would be justified in passing this Bill and going ahead irrespective of the rights of either party to the contract. The Government must be guided by the best available advice, and though it may mean the closing of the dock for a time, the Government would be justified in not making haste too quickly. I am convinced that the Government is not in a position to table such a contract as is proposed. Therefore, I support the Government in this. The Resolutions provide for the raising of a loan for the work, and my opinion the section dealing with this is loosely drawn. The mere fact giving the Governor in Council power to raise a loan is not wrong, but in this proposal there is no limit to the amount and I suggest to the Honorable the Prime Minister, so that the public may be satisfied, that he fix the sum. The Government should not be given power to raise the loan without fixing the limit. We must be careful, as I am surprised to learn that of the last loan 62 p.c. was left on the hands of the underwriters, only some 30 p.c. being subscribed to the public. We should limit our borrowings, but I support the Government in this matter, and it is not necessary to argue the necessity of the repairs which we must have instead of patching up the dock, and having to do it over again in twenty years time. I, therefore, suggest to the Honorable the Prime Minister to insert something in these Resolutions in the way of saying how much money should be expended.

MR. ASHBOURNE—Mr. Chairman: It is not my intention to take up the time of the House unduly but I would like to ask the honourable introducer any suggestions made from this side of the House will be considered?

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—We would like to hear suggestions.

MR. ASHBOURNE—As the proverb says "In the multitude of counsellors there is safety." The Crandell report was first brought down and then Bishop report was brought down and now some people seem satisfied because the two reports are here. I think myself that the Government have gone the wrong way about this matter altogether. Who knows but that some other engineering firm was prepared to come here and give a lower estimate still. About August of last year the sum of $50,000 was voted here to repair the Dry Dock. I would like to ask the Prime Minister on whose recommendation that amount of money was allocated? Still between August and sometime in February of this year we find that the Government did practically nothing in this matter except get reports from a couple of men and then they expect us to give our sanction at 48 hours notice, after having done nothing themselves for five or six months. I say, Sir, it is not good enough in view of the fact that every man, woman and child in this country will be called upon to pay $4 each on this hugh expenditure. Therefore, we are perfectly within our rights to stand up here and urge that this thing be gone into throughly. We have been discussing recently the question of tourist roads and which we have been told is a capital investment. The question in my mind is whether or not we are to have a dock. At the present time the dock is a liability and the question is whether or not it is a necessary public utility. I think that practically everybody agrees that it is necessary to have a dock in St. John's. The question then arises as to the extent of the dock. Whether it is to be the same size as the present one or whether it is to be enlarged. Then are we sure that we are going to benefit by going to this large expenditure of one million dollars and incurring a debt of four dollars on every man, woman and child in the country? If we are, then we shall have to be satisfied that the revenues which will accrue from that invested money will be such as to warrant this expenditure; but personally I have not seen any figures to lead me to believe that such will be the case. In fact, as I said before, the Government has gone the wrong way about this proposition. In my opinion they should have brought down here an engineer who could be independent of any construction company and make a report. In saying this I am not reflecting on either of the companies mentioned in this House, but it is natural to expect that either the Crandell Company or the Bishop Company would come down here and make such reports as would tend to show the necessity of immediately repairing the dock. Now we have here in the country a Government Engineer, Mr. T. A. Hall, and I think that it would have been wiser to consult Mr. Hall about this matter. I learn from the Prime Minister that Mr. Joyce and Mr. Harvey said they were incapable of reporting on the dock. I would like to know what man the Government proposes to have to superintend the construction of the dock because we do not want to open up a credit for a company to spend one million dollars without having somebody capable of superintending the construction work of the Dry Dock. The next question is what size the dock is going to be and is the present dock sufficiently large to look after the requirements that will be needed in this country. We are told this evening that only a couple of steamers had to pass this port on account of the size of the dock. If that is so, we should go slowly in this matter and see that this thing is gone into thoroughly before you try to convince us that we will get commensurate returns from this big outlay of a million dollars. Reference has been made of interest at the rate of at least five per cent. which would be $50,000 a year but we must also reckon on depreciation of the dock at the same rate of 5 per cent. To my mind this is a thing that should not be forgotten. The dock will deteriorate at least five per cent. per year and we should see that the profits arising from this dock are put to a sinking fund to take care of this large amount of money. In my opinion I would suggest to the Government that they should get some expert engineer in addition to those they have consulted at present and then ask for tenders to repair the dock. I think such a method would probably save the country a couple of hundred thousand dollars. Then again they have docks at St. John and Halifax and what guarantee have we that we are going to have more ships coming in here in the future thn in the past for repairs. Within the past few years fewer accidents have occurred due to the aids to navigation in wireless direction finding, fog alarms and other ways and the number of accidents on the high seas is diminishing yearly. However, I think myself that the dock we require is a suitable dock to look after our coastwise shipping. As I remarked before, we should go into this big question of dock construction thoroughly otherwise you probably will pile on another huge amount to our national debt and thus leave a heavy burden of debt on those who will come after us. I would like to ask the Prime Minister if the Bishop Company is going to operate our dredge or a dredge of their own?

HON. MR. SULLIVAN—They will certainly use our dredge.

MR. ASHBOURNE—And this means that our dredge will have to remain in St. John's for the next eight or nine months, does it?

HON. MR. SULLIVAN—Yes, if it is needed. But it is not likely she will be needed longer than one month.

MR. ASHBOURNE—If the coffer-dam is built the dredge will operate inside I submit.

HON. MR. SULLIVAN—That is a new way. What would you put the dredge inside the coffer-dam for?

MR. ASHBOURNE—We are asked by the Government to let them have any suggestions we may have.

HON. MR. SULLIVAN—Your remark would make anyone laugh. How could you have the dredge inside of where the cofferdam would be built?

MR. ASHBOURNE—It has been said here that the original cost of the dock was $360,000.

HON. MR. SULLIVAN—The contract for the old dry dock made in 1883 was $600,000. The honourable leader of the Opposition made the same statement that it cost $360,000. That is not correct.

MR. ASHBOURNE—As I said before we must view this thing apart from politics and as a sound business proposition and the fact that it is going to cost 5 per cent. per annum for interest and a further 5 per cent. for depreciation and unless you are satisfied that the revenue that will accrue from this will be sufficient to provide a sinking fund I think that we should go very slowly and try and see whether or not we can draw up some plan.

It might be possible to save $500,000 by getting tenders. I have nothing against the Crandall and the Bishop Companies. They may be particularly good companies. But we are taking thing on broad principles. I think the Government is all wrong. You have called in two companies. Why not call in another. We have here several propositions. One calls for $260,000, another $300,000 and we have here in this report $500,000 and a million as the different contracts. And if you give the Bishop Co. the contract with carte blanche how do you know but it is going to cost 3 million dollars. There is no amount mentioned here and I would like to impress upon the Government the necessity of stating a limit so that we could know and so that we might have some idea as to the amount that we are going to be asked for. Also I would suggest Mr. Chairman that if the Government is convinced that it is not expedient to wait any further time before repairs are commenced we should be shown the contract. Because the Co. that is prepared to take $70,000 is no reason to say but that it might not accept $50,000 rather than lose the work. It has been mentioned about the dock being sold. I don't know that I would be in favour of giving the dock away for nothing or selling it. The dock is a public utility and there might come a time when it would be a national dock. The Prime Minister has spoken about some propositions that might be concluded with the Vickers Co. or the British Admiralty or some other company. I think that seeing that we have such a strategic position as the Gibralter of the North Atlantic, that it is a good plan for the Government to hold on to the dock unless they can get someone to take it off their hands at the present time. The idea of spending millions of dollars on the dock and then turning it over to a private individual would be ridiculous.

Now as I said before if a contract is to be given to any company we should have a capable engineer to superintend the work. We want to have someone who knows his business to see that we are getting good value.

I agree with the Hon. Member for Fortune, Mr. Warren when he says that any agreement concluded with a private individual should be brought in here, if the legislature happens to be sitting, for ratification. There is no reason why we should give the Government an open check to go and raise any amount upon the finances of the country in order that this proposition should be gone into and concluded. Furthermore at the present time we should cut our garment according to our cloth. We are a small country down here. It is all very well for an Hon. Member to get up here and say that a half of million dollars will be spent in St. John's amongst 5 to 600 people $1000 a piece. He must remember that St. John's is not everything. The whole country has to pay for this.

MR. BROWNE—But the whole country will benefit by it.

MR. ASHBOURNE—I don't deny that. It may, but that is a poor argument. We must not be carried away by this idea. Because you are going to give a half million dollars to the people in St. John's is no argument why a million dollars of the country's money should be spent. I think that we should know the nearest amount or the limit that is required by the company before we should vote to give the Government-in-Council power to go ahead and get any loan.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—Mr. Chairman, I would like to say that the suggestion made by the Hon. Member for Fortune and supported by Mr. Ashbourne seems to be a very reasonable one. That is that we should put an amendment in clause 3 which would limit us to some expenditure. And I would suggest that it might be inserted, and the line would read "such further sum or sums not exceeding 500,000 dollars." I mentioned $500,000 because the report proposes the expenditure of nearly $110,000 and we have only raised $600,000 towards it. The round sum of $500,000 would be a sum that would not be exceeded.

MR. GODDEN—Mr. Chairman, I had no intention of offering any comments on the resolutions now before the chair, and it would perhaps be presumption on my part to criticise the technical aspect of the building of the Dock. But there are several things that have been said with regard to the cost, and as to what is the best proposition. The Prime Minister has said that up to a little while ago, no real suggestion has been offered that was worth while by any of the previous speakers, also that the opinions of everyone in the House would be welcomed, so I intend to at least give my opinion, whether I have any suggestions that are worth considering, will be for the Prime Minister to judge. But this I do say, at this time, that during this session there have been several Bills put through this House, passing the first, second and third readings, and when they have been brought to the attention of the Upper House for the confirmation of that august body, they have criticised them and literally torn them to pieces; they have seen fit to reject some of them altogether, others have been found to be wrongly composed, and altogether the attitude of the Upper House reflects very discreditably on the ability of this Chamber to legislate wisely. Regarding criticism, I have only been a member for a very short time, and I am young and inexperienced in parliamentary procedure, but I have noticed that all the criticism in this House has been left entirely to the Opposition, outside of the introducers of the Bills, none apart from this side of the House have attempted to criticize, with the exception of Mr. Browne, member for the West End, who has seen fit to offer some comments, and rightly so. I claim that everything that is brought in here for the consideration of this House should be criticised not only by the Opposition members, but also by the members of the Government, everything should not be passed through this House simply on the plea that it is a Party measure.

But I do not want to detain the House by any remarks other than on the question in hand. There was one remark made by Capt. Randell this afternoon, which appealed to me as a business man. He said, referring to the repairs of the dock, "is it going to be a commercial asset?" That is one phase of the dock question that we have to consider carefully. As I understand it, the dock in its present capacity has been profitable as a business concern. Of course, if its returns are united with the railway, there would be probably nothing on the profit side of the Ledger, but as a dock itself, it has been a profitable business. Now I have been struck during the discussion on the question of the Dock, that of the various schemes that have been suggested by the Crandell Company and Col. Mitchell, only one proposition has been seriously considered. The Hon. Mr. Sullivan has dealt at length on the technical aspect of the propositions, and he went into them very thoroughly, for which the hon. member is to be congratulated, although his remarks struck me as being more a question of Mitchell vs. Crandell, rather than what was for the good of Newfoundland as regards the dock, and his favor evidently lent towards Colonel Mitchell's report.

Now the dock has to be, and we will admit that it has to be reconditioned, it must be made safe, and the Government thinks that extra money is required for that purpose in the vicinity of half a million dollars. What we have to consider then is shall we be justified in making this extra expenditure in view of the returns which are only probable, and the dock, it is generally admitted, is quite suitable in its present capacity but it is not wide enough; but I understand that under Mitchell's scheme No. 1, it is possible to widen the dock to a certain extent so that it could be made large enough to take care of all ocean traffic that may come this way. Referring to the dock under scheme No. 2, we are told it will cost over one million dollars, and will the result be that we shall have sufficient vessels and steamers that will come to St. John's, and dock for repairs to justify this extra expenditure? I do not think so, supposing we do get from ten to fifteen per cent. more ocean-going traffic, will that extra business pay us, when we consider the extra expense pertaining to a larger dock, the expense must necessarily be greater, and also we must take into consideration the interest on the additional loan. And so I say that the proposition as outlined under Mitchell's scheme No. 1, has not been given sufficient consideration. I think that that particular report should be gone into much more thoroughly before the Government commits itself to any particular proposition.

The Government says that they must have the authority to borrow the money for this work. I was under the impression, Mr. Chairman, that the Government already had the authority to borrow six million dollars, and that only a certain portion of that six millions had been earmarked for certain purposes. . . I thank the Minister of Justice for his explanation, but I have not the necessary legal mind to understand it. But now that we are on the loan subject, I notice that Section No. 2 on the resolution paper calls for a half million dollars for the building of a coal shed at the dock, is that for coal sheds only or for bunkering? . . . . It is for coal sheds and bunkering in connection with the dock. It is not necessary that the dock should have a bunkering station connected with it, that can be a separate business by itself, and I know various business men of the city who have considered the advisability of erecting a bunkering station, and it is not necessary for the Government to do so, unless they think they should enter into the business of bunkering and fuelling vessels. A large amount of money for extra machinery will be required under scheme No. 2, but under scheme No. 1 all the machinery that is necessary for the dock is provided for, and I want to emphasize to-night that I do not consider that scheme No. 1 has been given the attention it deserves, and I hope that the Government will not decide to enter into any contract under No. 2 scheme before giving further consideration to No. 1 scheme, because, as I have suggested previously, I believe it advisable that the dock should be and also could be sufficiently repaired under No. 1 scheme. The drawback at the present time is that the Government have been all considering the one proposition only. With regard to the offers made by The Engineering Companies, I take it that their representatives have based their proposals on what they think would be accepted, as good salesmen they have sounded out their prospect which is the Government, and sounded them out as to how far they were prepared to go, and certainly, if they thought that a million dollar proposition would be accepted, they were not going to propose a half a million, and so I uphold the suggestion of a previous speaker that someone else should be invited to give advice. I do not know of anyone in this House with the exception of Capt. Randell and Col. Sullivan who have any technical knowledge of the matter, and they are not experts, because they have not had very much experience in matters like this, so I think we should get some independent party down here to give us advice. And when all reports are considered, I would ask the Government to accept the report which is for the best interest, not only for St. John's, but for the whole country. I believe that the dock should be reconditioned according to its present capacity, and be made suitable for any traffic that we can conveniently handle, and it is my opinion that a sum of money over and above a quarter of a million dollars is not necessary to do this.

HON. MR. SULLIVAN—Mr. Chairman, in reference to the remarks that have been passed by the member for Trinity, dealing with my address here yesterday making comparisons of the two propositions outlined in the reports tabled, the hon. gentleman has made some insinuations that I had some interest in featuring the Bishop Company in preference to the Crandell people.

MR. GODDEN—Mr. Chairman, I did not make any insinuations.

HON. MR. SULLIVAN—I can assure the House that it is in the best interest of the country in having the Bishop proposition No. 2, in preference to the Crandell proposition, No. 3. The report of Col. Mitchell is done more thoroughly than the Crandell one. And the recommendation that I came in and made here was made after careful study of both propositions and in the best interests of the country. The hon. member for Trinity wanted to know if consideration has been given to Proposition No. 1. We have gone into everything, and that is why we are here to ask you people which we are to decide upon. It is my idea that we should take No. 2 because it is the best one. It will be found out to be the best one. No. 3 Proposition suggests the widening of the dock but the dock cannot be made tight unless it is deepened down to the solid foundation. I made that statement three separate times here in this House. It has to be deepened three, four or five feet. The reason the dock has to be widened is that the type of vessels which we are to accommodate to-day is not the same as was in vogue at the time the dock was built in 1883. No. 1 Proposition does not include widening or deepening. It does not provide the facilities that are necessary to have a thoroughly modernized dock. It does not include the building of the shed. It does not include the jetty and the pier that we are to have. If we were to recommend the spending of five hundred thousand dollars now, in another twenty-five years we may have to deepen the dock, and since we have to have the dock closed for some considerable time it is just as well to have the thing done properly now instead of having it done again, in fifteen or twenty years time. I am of the opinion and there are a great many other people of the same opinion that this No. 2 Proposition is the best one to take. The Bishop No. 2 Proposition is the same as the Crandell Proposition No. 3 with the exception that the Bishop Company will deepen and widen the dock and other extras, besides placing about twice the quantity of concrete in the side walls as provided for in Crandell's estimate. Now there were some references to the six million dollar loan. Out of the six million dollars there were $1,600,000 earmarked for the payment of the deficit which was left to us by another Government, and instead of the $1,600,000 we find that it is now $1,700,000. We are not responsible for it. Still we have to pay it. So that we have practically only four millions left out of the loan of last year. There is a remark of the Hon. Leader of the Opposition that the dock cost originally $360,000. That is not correct. The hon. gentleman was misinformed. The money that was voted for that dock was six hundred thousand dollars. There is a classified specification in existence somewhere that shows that $550,000 was the amount that was paid for the construction of the present dock. At the time that the dock was built, the price charged for plans, specifications and engineering was $24,470.00. That was for plans, specifications, and engineering. There is $550,000.00 accounted for out of $600,000.00 by the different work classified in the prices fixed in contract.

Take the Coffer Dam. That cost $28,810. In 1883 the coffer dam cost that amount of money. That was when timber was probably about $30.00 a thousand. At that time cement cost four dollars. Yellow pine, beech, birch, elm and maple cost $35.00 per thousand. For the information of the House, I may say that we are not giving anything away when it is decided to enter in agreement or a contract with the Crandell Company or the Bishop Company, or any other Company; and we will take steps to see that there is a proper supervision over the job, to see that everything will be as well done as it possibly can be. If a definite contract is going to be made it would mean that plans and specifications would have to be drawn up. Proper surveys would have to be made. It is very doubtful that we will be able to get any contract except on a cost plus basis. If it is decided to enter into a contract on a cost plus basis, there will have to be engineers of the Government to keep tab on the contractors, to see that everything they have undertaken to do will be done, and there will be an auditor, who will see that every payment is proper, and will keep a check on the contractors.

MR. BROWN—Mr. Chairman, in say a few words regarding the dock I do not intend to hold up the House very long. In the first place, I wish to say that I think the Government has acted wisely in closing the dock. In my opinion that dock should have been closed two years ago; and I am surprised that more accidents have not occurred. The dock was almost dangerous for those who had to work around the ships, and I think the Government has done the wise thing in closing it.

Regarding the dock, Mr. Chairman, I might say that I would be in accord with the widening of the dock, if it is to be rebuilt, but I cannot say that I would be in accord with the deepening of the dock. The honourable member for Placentia, Colonel Sullivan, has pointed out that it is necessary to deepen the dock. That may be. I think the report speaks about the deepening of the dock being necessary for ships which were in years gone by built like the Sachem—narrow and deep. That is alright, but to-day they are built in most cases with more beam and less draught, so that, in my opinion there is no necessity for the dock being deepened. The dock at the present time, I understand is twenty five feet deep, and you will not get any ship, I do not think, that will go in that dock that will draw anything near to twenty five feet with no cargo in it. Therefore, there is no necessity in my opinion for deepening the dock.

Now, regarding the engineers who have given their reports on this dock. There have been two companies whose engineers have given these reports; and I think it would be right if we had a disinterested party make a report. I do not think it is fair to have engineers come from any company or firm and make a report, when their company or firm is likely to tender for the contract of rebuilding. I do not think it is fair. If you had got a disinterested party to report, then you could have called for tenders, and you would be in a better position.

Regarding the building of a new dock, Mr. Chairman, a lot can be said on that point. If you are going to build a new and up-to-date dock in Saint John's, you must also put in up-to-date machinery, and that would cost you at least $150,000.00 or $200,000.00, if you outfitted that dock to-day as other docks that I have seen in many parts of the world are outfitted. We have no machinery here. Take the Sachem, which was in here lately to have her rudder post repaired. All the castings for her had to come from the Old Country, or from New Glasgow, and she had to wait here until those castings came. If you built a new dock, you would be called upon to put in first class machinery, so that all parts can be turned out there at the dock premises.

I quite agree that the Government is making a right move in repairing the dock. It certainly should be done. But if the dock which was there today was a wooden structure which lasted for forty years, why can't we put just as good a wooden structure there now that will last for forty years more. At the end of that forty years it will be for others to supply another dock, and by that time we may be in a better financial condition, if Canada does not own us body and soul. I think, Mr. Chairman, that a wooden structure would be alright; and if we put one forty years ago which has stood till to-day, why can't we put in one to-day that will stand for forty years more, and then there is no need to come and ask us to vote a big sum of money for repairs to this dock. It is in need of repair, and if you build a dock the same as is there to-day, without deepening and widening it more than it is, it will take almost any ship that we will get to go there. In the report it speaks of a ship of fifty feet, two inches.

HON. MR. SULLIVAN—That was a mistake in the report.

MR. BROWN—Mr. Chairman, I am quite in accord with the need of repairs to the dock, but don't let us borrow any more money. If we want to do the repairs, let us use up some of the money that was borrowed for roads, and keep from borrowing any more. I am not speaking now because my leader has told me to speak like this, but this is my own opinion; and I think that a wooden dock will very well do us for forty years more, and by that time I hope the country will be in a better position, financially.

HON. COLONIAL SECRETARY—Mr. Chairman, I think the Government has reason to be grateful to the House for the way in which they have received this measure; and I also think that the Government has reason for congratulation on the procedure which they have adopted in regard to this matter.

As one who has been identified with this matter from the start, both as a member of the Railway Commission, and as a member of the Executive Government, I might say that I have watched very carefully and closely the development of this whole position. As one who had an opportunity in years gone by of seeing the construction and opening, and the many years of working of the old dock in the West End of this town, naturally one looks back and wonders whether the people forty years ago had sufficient perception of the future; and I claim, Mr. Chairman that the dock which we had in St. John's has done good service. I think I am correct in saying, Mr. Chairman, that when Simpson & Sons built that dock in 1883, the only guarantee they gave was for twenty years, and it was allowed to run for forty. In 1885, the Tenados was the first ship to enter the dock, and it has been working continuously ever since. It has not received the repairs or attention that it should have, and, particularly, in these last few years, it has become defective and decayed. The Railway Commission immediately, as soon as it had an opportunity of investigating affairs in connection with the dock, made the discovery that the dock was in a dangerous condition; and immediately got in touch with a firm of dock, or marine, engineers. Crandell and Company sent one of their engineers down here, and we had a very exhaustive survey of the dock made, and we received a report. But the Railway Commission was not satisfied with the report of one firm, but wanted some one to corroborate or check all the figures or specifications that were put forward. We were fortunate in having in this country a firm of engineers, who have done excellent work on the Humber, and the construction and finishing of the Main Dam will be an everlasting memorial to the efficiency of the W. I. Bishop Company, who are naturally interested in Newfoundland, and I am glad to say that they want to continue their interests here. They were asked if they would help the Government in this connection, and we were fortunate in having such an eminent engineer as Mr. Mitchell come down here to examine the Dry Dock.

The report laid on the table of this House, I think will show that the Government and the Railway Commission wanted to take this House into their fullest confidence. It is an unusual procedure, and I have never known in my experience as a member of this House, of resolutions of this nature ever being brought in prior to the passing of a bill or the making of a contract. But we wanted to get the benefit of the assistance of the members of this House, and I think the debate has been conducive to that end. The point that is to be decided is an economic one. The question that we have to decide to-night is whether we can afford to rebuild the dock; and whether the funds of the country will warrant an expenditure such as is proposed to make. We have got to decide one of the two things. We have either to abandon the dock—and throw it in the junk heap, or we have to rebuild it. Now what is the position? What would a business man do if faced with the same position, in connection with his house. Wouldn't he repair it so that he might still continue to have comfort for the remainder of his life. It is true a large sum of money is involved and the Government fully realizes it. We are well aware that the country is put to its utmost at the present time to meet its obligations and the times are not as flourishing as one might wish. But we got to look at this matter from an economical viewpoint and we have to decide whether we are to abandon the dock or rebuild it. That is the point. I have not yet heard a single member on the other side of the House say that we should not continue the dock. And I would be surprised if he did as it is an absolute necessity and we simply cannot do without it. No dock? why the whole trade of the country would be paralyzed if it were abandoned. Again there is the matter of dealing with the large number of people employed there. What would we do with the engineers and the labourers if the dock were closed down permanently. Therefore from an economical standpoint the dock must continue to operate. Now I have carefully gone into the plans submitted by the experts in connection with the dock. I saw the Crandell and Bishop plans and I also asked Mr. W. F. Joyce for his opinion on them. He made his deductions from them and his report has frequently been quoted in the debate here since it was tabled. He has no interest in the matter beyond Newfoundland's interest and I have not the least doubt but the report of Colonel Mitchell is the best as it is the most thorough and we would do the best by working under his specifications. We have here a dock that is not surpassed except by those of the very largest ports. The dock at St. John, N.B., is a different type—it is a double dock, but the one here is able to meet the requirements and is sufficient for our needs. If it cost $600,000 in the first place, then it is not a great jump to a million dollars for which we will have a brand new one that will be larger and better in every way. Under the Bishop plan we will have better piers, better piling and better facilities all round. At present the dock gate is leaking thousands of gallons of water an hour and it will never be tight or as it should be unless the repairs as now proposed are carried out. Therefore this House should realize that we do not want it to be going abroad that we are undertaking this merely to benefit the Bishop Co. We are not jumping to accommodate Bishop & Co. or anyone else. I hold no brief for Bishop or Colonel Mitchell in this matter, and I certainly do not want such an erroneous impression go abroad. I am inclined to think that the Government will decide on Bishop & Co's No. 2 proposition, and I am convinced that if we accept it the dock will be properly rebuilt, as Bishop's have a high reputation which they will endeavour to maintain. The proper re-fitting of the dock to give more employment than ever, as it will be the means of bringing more damaged ships here, and with up-to-date machinery installed in the shops, there is no reason why we should not perform repair work here as cheaply as in any port in the world, and no reason why we cannot induce such ships to come here. If we are to do more business, we have to get up-to-date machinery, and reference has already been made to a big crane which would be an essential piece of apparatus. The proposition means the outlay of much money, but such expenditure is justified, and we will get better returns than from the old dock. Not alone will the new dock bring more ships to the country, but it will also bring extensive trade, as the crews and others who may be on board will be living in St. John's for the time being, purchasing all kinds of goods, and therefore proving a source of great revenue. The money so left here will amount to a very considerable sum in the course of time. As one of the representatives of the Railway Commission I claim we have been perfectly frank in connection with the whole situation; we have taken the House into our confidence, asked approval of the scheme which we deem is in the best interest of the country, and if there are any justifiable criticisms, we would be glad to hear them. It is clearly evident that the House is unanimous in the opinion that the dock must be repaired. We have adopted the proposition which from every viewpoint is the one most desirable in the interests of all, and that is the one which we recommend for approval.

MR. HIBBS—Mr. Chairman, I think we all are agreed that the dock must be repaired. The one there now is falling to pieces, and I concur with the hon. gentleman that in its present condition it is unsafe. But the question now is whether we shall repair it as it stands at present, or take advantage of the opportunity to make it more modern in every way. I do not propose to take up much of the time of the House, because to be candid I have no technical knowledge of such matters as dock-building, but speaking in a general way, I know something of the need of repairs, and of the economical side of the question. One thing we should ask ourselves at the beginning is if there will be any considerable number of damaged ships coming here, if we have up-to-date facilities for repair work, instead of going to St. John, N.B., or Halifax. It has been said that only a few ships that have come here that were too large to go on dock. But that is no criterion of what will hapepn in the future, as I think that most of the Atlantic shipping if they knew we had proper accommodations, would come here when damaged. The next question is, can we by making the dock a modern one attract shipping that would not otherwise come here. Like everything else there are things we are not certain of, but in dealing with which we have to build on faith, and use common sense. I have always been of the opinion that situated as we are geographically, if we had the facilities here for repairs, ships if damaged nearer here than Halifax would come in here. That appears to me to be a common sense view of the matter. Now a dock or anything else that was built forty years ago must now be becoming obselete. This applies perhaps more to a dock than anything else, as I have already pointed out, the present dock cannot accommodate ships of wide beam, such as are constructed at the present time. It occurs to me, to be frank about it, that if we spend one and a half millions to improve the dock, and have reason to think that we can attract more shipipng than comes here now, it will be the most economical plan.

Take the financial side of it. I am sure that the Prime Minister and every member of the Government, particularly the Finance Minister, would deplore the fact of having to seek another loan. I wonder how much money the Government have to-night left out of the six million dollars that was authorized to be raised by load last year. You earmarked at that time, I remember, two million dollars of that loan for the building of roads—a policy that I concurred in. At the same time I understand that you are not going to spend all that money this year. Now I merely throw out this suggestion that might prove profitable. If you have two million dollars earmarked and you are not going to spend it for the next three years, as previously outlined in this House, why not take temporarily $411,000 from this road money. I understand that this $411,- added to the $675,000 that you raised last year for repairs to dock, cost of building sheds and repairs to pier, St. John's West, and estimated cost of construction of plant for coal and fuel, etc., is what you require to meet the present dry dock construction proposition. Of course, I can readily understand that there is going to be a lot of employment given out on roads, re-railing of the railroad and on other erections and your expenses will increase accordingly.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—What about a bounty on fish?

MR. HIBBS—If you do that you would only be redeeming your promise. As I was going on to point out, Mr. Chairman, the Government could take part of that two million dollars for roads and refund it again, as, no doubt, the Finance Minister will have surpluses for the next few years that will enable him to make a refund in connection with the road scheme. It is not my desire to knock the present scheme of the Government, and perhaps I might be thought crazy to attempt to do so. I know that you have to rebuild the dock, and then the question arises as to whether you should repair the dry dock as it is now, or to widen it. I daresay the Government has made up its mind as to what their programme is in that regard, although we are being given an opportunity to discuss it. Personally, I cannot say that I do not agree with the re-conditioning of the dry dock. If the Government is convinced that there is a certain number of ships passing this port every year that should have arrived here, then there is a necessity of widening the dock and with that idea I concur. With regard to deepening it, I do not know. As far as concreting the bottom or sides of it is concerned, I do not think there is any question about the necessity of that being required, even at the risk of differing with some of my colleagues. Any structure to-day made of concrete is more permanent and lasting than a structure made of wood. But, in my opinion, the Government has to do more than equip the dry dock in order to attract shipping here. First of all you must make up your mind that you must be in a position to cater to foreign shipping here and afford them the same facilities here as are afforded them in other parts of the world, otherwise they will scare shy. Not only have you got to give them the necessary docking facilities but you got to give them as good a treatment with respect to harbor charges and light dues as they get elsewhere, and certainly not in excess of what they get in Halifax. I understand from some nautical men who visited here that they were not treated as generously as they might have been. Then,again the most important question of all is, after you get your dry dock built and equipped you are not going to attract any more shipping here and ships used to coming here are not going to continue to come here unless you are prepared to repair them as cheaply and as efficiently as they are repaired in Halifax and St. John, N.B. I heard stories which I am not going to repeat now, because it must be recognized that the staff at the dry dock here have not got the modern machinery with which to work as are available at docks elsewhere. I feel sure that the work of repairing ships here can be done as efficiently as cheap, and as expeditiously as in any other place; but without reflecting on the staff of workmen here, I think that honourable gentlemen will agree with me that there has been criticism made about the work done at the dock, so that unless you have the proper supervision of a first class mechanic to see that every man fits in on his work and then sees that the work is done as cheaply here as it is done in Halifax our dry dock will be boycotted by outsiders. I was struck by a remark made by the honourable Mr. Sullivan in reply to Capt. Randell. Speaking of the earning power of the dock he said that the net profit was $41,000 a year. If it is to be regarded more as a public utility than as an earning proposition, then I do not know if the Government is justified in spending a million dollars upon it, and I think it would be just as weli to repair it as it is now. I do believe that, if we have the dock properly equipped with modern machinery and put in condition to handle all the shipping that is likely to come here, secure the proper man to superintend it and give good harbor treatment, the dock will be a paying concern. As I have previously mentioned, I have no technical knowledge of the subject matter before the chair, and I do not wish to discuss the matter any longer; but, as I have outlined a few minutes ago, if you could borrow money from one scheme and put it to the credit of the other, you might be able to obviate the necessity of raising a further loan, but of course that will depend on the amount you have on hand now. If you have this money raised and you are paying interest on it, of course there is no reason why you should raise another half million dollars. But I have to say, that, personally, without any good knowledge of the subject, I would support No. 2 proposition in preference to proposition No. 1.

MR. W. J. BROWNE—Mr. Chairman, As I happen to be one of the members who have the honor to represent the constituency of St. John's West, where this dock exists, and as the hon. member for Trinity (Mr. Godden) has seen fit to remark my interest on this subject, I feel that I ought to explain a little more fully, though not at any unnecessary length, my opinion on this matter. The dock is in the West End, where I belong, and which I have the honor to represent; and I have known it ever since I was a child. I have played around the place and am familiar with conditions there, and I don't know on looking back, when that dock was in a safe condition. The hon. members talked about the length of the dock. They have spoken about putting it into first class condition and about putting it in a "safe and sound condition," as if it is only a matter of words to do that. I don't remember when there was not a leak in that dock. The report of the Prime Minister has shown, after an investigation, that there have been leaks there of considerable magnitude for some time, and reports show that one of these at least, was observed shortly after the completion of the dock. This was due apparently to lack of supervision on the part of the Government when the dock was built in 1885.

Honorable members who have studied the reports,—although I was sorry to see from the discussion here that evidently certain honorable members did not give it the attention which they merited,—particularly Colonel Mitchell's, that there has been serious damage done to the piling around the dock, and within the dock itself. This is obvious. It has been there for a considerable length of time. I remember very well two years ago when the hon. and gallant member for Trinity, was in the Government, and sitting on this side of the House, when he was approached by an hon. member of the Opposition at that time he was an authority upon the state of decay into which this dock had fallen. He has more recently said that if he had been consulted about the Government's taking over the dock, he never would have voted for a transfer. He knew almost two years ago that the dock was in a very unsound condition. I don't think that the hon. member can now refuse to support immediate and drastic action to put the dock in good modern condition. What do we want this dock to be? The hon. and gallant member for Ferryland said it should be a national asset. I agree with him. It is one of the best things we have. St. John's should be the repair ship of the North Atlantic. How often do we not read in the papers of such a steamer passing by, and going to St. John, New Brunswick, Halifax, or Boston to be repaired, when it would have been just as easy, or easier to come here if we had the facilities to give them? Those persons who possess technical knowledge of this matter know that when that dock was built, it was built for a different kind of ship than is in use to-day. It was built for ships of greater length and lesser width and lesser depth in proportion than any in use to-day.

The Government has wakened up rather at a late time, I must say. There had been criticism upon the urgency of the matter, although some persons thought that some great catastrophe was going to happen in the West End. The Government, after giving the matter consideration and consulting the authorities that they had at their disposal, the Government Engineer and the Railway Engineer, decided to invite some outside authority, a specialist on dock construction, to investigate and ascertain what was the matter with the dock, and what was needed to put it in good condition. Therefore they did the right thing. Mr. Crandell came here in February under winter conditions. He went to work as well as he could, and made an estimate of what he thought was necessary to do this work for. They sent later for Colonel Mitchell, because the Government thought it would be advisable to bring in some other person and have his opinion on it. Colonel Mitchell is an authority on this work. That is what I thought after reading that report.

I must say that I have a little knowledge of engineering. I spent four years in the studying of civil engineering. I know a little about a report of this kind and I must say that it is only one engineer in a thousand that could write a report of that kind. I trust—and this is the only recommendation that I have to make to the Government—that they will see their way clear to recommend to the Bishop Company or demand from W. I. Bishop that Colonel Mitchell be kept here to superintend the progress of the work. Now the Government has brought down two experts to ascertain the extent of the repairs that were necessary. They got several propositions put before them. The hon. members on the other side have no reason to complain that these were only brought up here yesterday. It was a matter of public knowledge for several months that something was going to be done at the dock. We have got these reports. Now which are we going to adopt. Are we going to put the dock back to where it was forty years ago? You might just as well try to put the clock back. We have to try and make facilities in this port compatible with the demands of the shipping of to-day. We can't do that if we are going to put the dock in the same condition that it was in 1885.

In Mr. Crandell's report there was no provision made to prevent damage through the leaks which to a large extent have been responsible for the state that the dock is in to-day. There have been many serious leaks. Consequently we have to try and get some scheme that will eradicate the causes of the old damage, and that scheme is number two proposition of Colonel Mitchell which calls attention particularly to the damage done to the dock by those leaks.

We are going to have the dock partly built in concrete—that is the bottom part where the more serious leaks are, and that proposal which will tear up the old floor seems to me to be the best one suited for this country. Now as to the dock, I don't know whether the honourable member who introduced these resolutions was speaking from information that he had received or speaking off-hand when he spoke, as I thought rather depreciatingly of the Crandell engineering scheme. But no doubt there was a great deal in what he said. The Crandell Engineering Co., did not apepar to consider the leakage at all. They did not seem to know about that at all. Perhaps it was because they made their investigations in the winter time when the conditions were more unfavorable that they had to work under. Perhaps they did not make allowance for those things. Still I don't think that his proposals are so bad as the hon. gentleman described them. Both gentemen are experts on work of this kind, and this scheme of the Bishop Company—Proposition No. 2 gives us what we want. It enlarges the dock, lengthens and widens it. The chief thing that is needed for large steamers is to have a dock sufficiently wide, particularly at the entrance for steamers of that kind to enter. Now we can't very well widen it without considering the effect of the change of width and the condition of the banks on both sides. Colonel Mitchell has recommended that by widening the dock it will be necessary to make considerable alterations in the floor of the dock and this will entail the deepening of the dock and the construction of a new concrete floor and a retaining wall around the whole structure. I think that is the proper thing to do. That bad floor must be torn up since with the pressure of water now acting on it, a mere extension will suffice. You will see that he has done a good job by widening the dock. We must also deepen it, because we are widening it, and therefore we have to put a retaining wall all around the dock and I think that will come up to a height of 16 feet and from that the sides will go up at the same angle and will narrow the dock on top. That accounts to a great extent for what the Hon. and gallant member for Trinity means by the increase of the volume of the dock. I don't think that there will be a great increase in the volume of the dock. I think that if the Hon. Member was wishing to be convinced on this point he could have given us more figures to show where the difference was. I have tried to find where the difference is and cannot find any reason for it. And what with the more efficient pumps we will be able to empty the dock more quickly than it is done now.

Now there is one point more which I wish to refer to and that is that certain objections have been made to the cost of the dock. I think that some hon. members on the other side of the House showed more than a slight trace of jealousy this afternoon when they made unnecessary reference to St. John's West. That district is a very important one to this country. It is a district comprised to a great extent of the men of the industrial class, and these men have been getting their employment from the dock, and it is only right that they should do so, and I do not think that it becomes Hon. members of this House to criticise and say that it is merely relief. We have been giving the dole and it has been suggested by Hon. Gentlemen inside and outside this House that we might have the men working, manufacturing the stone for the dock, and they mention that we might get the concrete pourer during the winter. Now that we have started a scheme which is not relief, but a practical business proposition there is not much room for criticism. It will not be only St. John's West that will benefit by this, but the whole country. It is the people of St. John's who get their living directly from the dock, and it is but right that they should, the increase in business and decrease in unemployment will benefit the whole country. The Hon. Member for Harbour Grace brought that point out very well, though briefly. I do not think that the sum of a million dollars is going to be so great an expenditure as to make it a burden on the people of this country. If the earnings of the dock were forty one thousand dollars in its present condition, I think that if it were enlarged with a greater capacity and more efficient, its earnings would be increased more than twice the amount of what they are at the present time. In conclusion I would like to say a word of appreciation of Colonel Mitchell. I have met a great number of engineers, but never one of the type of Col. Mitchell. The men that I have met have been rough and ready men. You do not often meet men of the class of Col. Mitchell, in the engineering profession. They are generally men without any literary ability, but he appears to me to be a man of great ability, and I hope that the Government will consider the advisability of retaining him here. While the construction is going on I would like to have a careful checking up by our own engineers of the weekly records of the work showing the cost of the work, to see that the specifications have been carried out at the estimated value.

MR. GRIMES—Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the leader of the House if he would be prepared to raise the Committee and have the discussion on the resolutions continued tomorrow. There are other members who would like to discuss them.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—I think that there is no reason why we should delay.

MR. GRIMES—Mr. Chairman, in connection with the resolutions, I would like to say I am not in favor with them for two reasons. The first is because I consider it improper for this House to give the Executive authority for making an arrangement for the rebuilding of a dock, when we have already been informed that the arrangement has to be made as early as possible in order to have the work done this year.

If we are to accept this, then the Government can make the arrangement and present it to this House for examination, seeing that the House will be in session for three or four weeks longer. The House should be fully informed. Any other course is contrary to the spirit of democracy. Every member of the House is elected for the purpose of caring for and protecting the interests of the country, and he will be derelict in his duty to it, if he fails to carry it out, which he does when he permits the Executive to do that for him.

The second reason is that there is no justification for the House to give authority for the raising of another loan of $500,000. We are heavily burdened with taxation today and instead of making the burden heavier, a business Government is supposed and expected to make it lighter. It was largely on this issue that the present government came into office—the reduction of expenditure and taxation. It is not only the members of this House that are concerned with the proposed loan, but every man, woman and child in the country, who are already loaded down with debt, which makes it extremely difficult to meet the demands of present day needs. We should hesitate to enter into any obligation which makes it more difficult for the bread-winners of this country to satisfy even the common wants of those dependent upon them.

Last year authority was given to raise a loan of six million dollars, adding $300,000 yearly in interest charges, and bringing the debt of the country up to sixty-six million dollars, or thirteen hundred dollars per family. Out of that loan, two million was provided for building highways, a sum out of all proportions to the very limited means of this country, particularly when we know that we will never see the returns of it during the lifetime of the present generation.

Remembering this loan, and knowing there are other needs of greater importance, and the dock is one of these needs, you should divert $500,000 from these highways to the rebuilding of the dock, if that sum is required in addition to the $675,000 you are diverting from the sources you provided for last year. You have therefore the means at your disposal without asking this House to give authority for another $500,000 loan.

It is indeed surprising that a party elected to power, calling itself a business government and loudly proclaiming itself as desirous of establishing economy in public expenditure, is pursuing the very opposite course, and plunging the country deeper and deeper into debt.

One of the reasons given for the hastening of the rebuilding of the dock is .the relief of unemployment. It is a late time for the Government to wake up to such a need. Ever since last July it was known that the dock required prompt attention, also that there would be large unemployment during the winter season, yet the government did nothing to provide work for the unemployed either on the dock or elsewhere, and we have the authority of the member for St. John's West, Mr. Browne that a thousand men in St. John's were getting able-bodied relief this winter from the government.

The last government was denounced in the bitterest terms for expenditures on the public roads, which it did to give employment, and from which, it was claimed, there was no returns, but we have a worse spectacle shown us today by Mr. Brown, that the present government gave no employment, but satisfied itself with giving doles to a thousand men, costing thousands of dollars, and getting nothing in return either in labour or in the making of a road.

The present Government has eclipsed the last in this misuse of public monies, that brings only shame and discredit upon it. These men who received this dole were not wanting charity. They wanted work. You disgraced them when you forced them into the shameful act of taking doles. The Government could have provided employment to the extent of the money spent in giving doles, and helped the people to maintain a spirit of independence, which was their wish. I repeat, the Government knew about the condition of the dock last July, and the need for repairs or rebuilding, and it is only now, after the long winter is over, that they start to give employment to the people of St. John's.

MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Don't you worry about the people of St. John's.

MR. GRIMES—They are my countrymen as well as yours, and are entitled to better treatment than they received.

MINISTER OF JUSTICE—They are quite satisfied with the measures taken to relieve them.

MR. GRIMES—There are numbers of them, I know, who feel otherwise. They have told me so.

MINISTER OF JUSTICE—They will talk to you in that way, knowing who they are talking to.

MR. GRIMES—These men are capable of giving an honest opinion.

HON. MIN. OF JUSTICE—They all can. You don't have to go to the outports to get an honest opinion.

MR. GRIMES—But you said just now that it was only natural for them to give an opinion that would meet with the political views of the person to whom they were speaking.

MON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—If a man goes around with a long face looking for sympathy and advice, he will usually give the opinion that will please him. Why should he fall out with your opinion. You are looking for something to say against the Government, and he will say "Sure this is a terrible Government."

MR. GRIMES—The honourable gentleman knows that the people of St. John's are quite capable of giving a straight opinion.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Yes, and they did it pretty effectively last election.

MR. GRIMES—And in return they got a dole. Do you think it would be fair or would you consider it a business proposition for any person or company, if they saw there were repairs necessary for any plant that they had to do with, for someone to come in and say—"We are able to effect repairs to this plant that will cost one million dollars, we want you to give us one million dollars " You would say "No, we are not going to consider any such proposition. We must first know the repairs to be effected, the plans on which you are prepared to do it, and the cost, and if alright we will contract with you then." That would be the more correct position to take. Instead we see no contract for the doing of that work which is unnecessary at the dock, and we have no idea what it is going to cost the Government. We say, we want you to make that arrangement and lay it before the House, and then we can better deal with it.

HON. MIN. OF JUSTICE—The man is not yet born who could give you more than an estimate of the cost.

MR. GRIMES—I think the Minister of Justice will agree with me that it is only fair that we should see the contract and know its terms before we go any further.

HON. MIN. OF JUSTICE—The point that I think the Hon. member will appreciate is—that all we can get is an estimate, of what the people believe these repairs will cost.

MR. GRIMES—Then do you not propose to enter into a contract with this firm? Are you going to take their mere word?

HON. MIN. OF JUSTICE—No, we will not take their mere word. We shall make some arrangement with them for the repairs.

MR. GRIMES—Then go and make the arrangement with them and bring it down to this House where we all may see it.

HON. MIN. OF JUSTICE—It is down now.

MR. GRIMES—No, that is not a contract.

HON. MIN. OF JUSTICE—That arrangement is before you now.

MR. GRIMES—That is a mere estimate.

HON. MIN. OF JUSTICE—That is all we can ever get.

MR. GRIMES—The Hon. Prime Minister said that he would be prepared to accept a suggestion to make five hundred thousand dollars the limit of the loan that may be required. I repeat that it is not necessary to give authority for raising more loans. Take five hundred thousand dollars out of the Highways Allotment, put it towards the construction of the dock, if it is necessary, and carry out the work without borrowing. The people of this country today are shouldering a very heavy debt. A debt of about sixty-six million dollars, the annual interest charges of which cut a big hole in the earnings of the people, and the Hon. Minister of Justice thinks that another four hundred thousand dollars loan is only a fleabite.

HON. MIN. OF JUSTICE—As compared with some of the things that I have seen done.

MR. GRIMES—That does not justify you. What you want to do is to set an example. If you confine yourselves to the money that you borrowed last year, then there is no necessity of another loan at all

HON. MIN. OF JUSTICE—You have heard the Hon. Prime Minister say that unless that loan was required it would not be raised.

MR. GRIMES—Yes, he said that.

HON. MIN. OF JUSTICE—I have that much respect for the statement of the Prime Minister, that I believe he means what he says.

MR. GRIMES—The Prime Minister may mean well, but it is another thing as to whether he is justified in further expenditure. You have sufficient authority by the "Loan Bill" of last year to get sufficient money to pay for the dock, and I think that there is no necessity whatever for raising more money.

What I intended to say was that this country, today, is saddled with a heavy expenditure. The people of this country have been looking to you to reduce taxation, but instead you are increasing it. The people in the past have been chastised with whips, but now you are going to chastise them with scorpions.

HON. MIN. OF FINANCE—You did your part to bring the debt to sixty million dollars. You brought it up by twenty-five million dollars during the past few years.

MR. GRIMES—And by the Government that you were associated with, and you are going to outdo them according to the progress that you are making now. In 1908 the public debt of this Colony was twenty-two million dollars, and now it is up to sixty-six millions, an increase of three hundred per cent., while the earning power of the people has not increased to anything like the same extent. There may be a few getting more money in wages, but the purchasing power of their wages is not within fifty per cent. of what it was in 1914.

HON. MIN. OF JUSTICE—That is a fact which is admitted all over the world. It is not confined to Newfoundland.

MR. GRIMES—That is all the more reason why we should be very careful of how we spend out money, and not add to the burden of the people whose income is not increasing in value, but is going in the other direction.

HON. MIN. OF FINANCE—Do I understand you to say that the dock ought not to be rebuilt?

MR. GRIMES—No. I am saying that you ought not raise any more money on loan. You ought to use the loan that you got last year.

HON. MIN. OF FINANCE—I have a letter that you wrote, in the Dept. If you will come down to-morrow morning I will read it to you, in case you have forgotten it.

MR. GRIMES—Alright, I shall be glad to go down. But that does not alter the fact of what you are doing today. It does not alter the fact that the people of this country today, are bearing more than they are able to bear. There are many people in the country who are living just a bare existence, and the Government proposes to make it still harder for these people. Every loan that you raise, means added interest charges on the people, which they have got to carry, and the longer you go on with the raising of loans, the worse it will be for the people and for yourselves. It brings the day of reckoning sooner or later.

HON. MIN. OF FINANCE—We are reckoning with it now.

MR. GRIMES—And you evidently are not learning a lesson. You want to make it still harder.

HON. MIN. OF FINANCE—Well, you say you are not opposed to rebuilding the dock—unless you can show us how we are to rebuild without money.

MR. GRIMES—Are you going to spend two millions on motor roads?

HON. MIN. OF FINANCE—We are going to have a look at it.

MR. GRIMES—I think you should devote some of the loan money for motor roads, which will make it unnecessary to provide for new loans.

Now, Mr. Chairman, the position that I take is this, first, that we have a right to see the arrangement to be made, and the second is, that the the House should be assured that no new loan is going to be raised. If the Government assures us of those two things, then we might be prepared to consider voting for these resolutions; but as they are now, I cannot vote for them.

MR. SCAMMELL—Mr. Chairman, the hour is getting very late, and the question before the House is a matter of such importance, and as the members of the Government side of the house seem to be in a lethargic condition as regards their attention to the matter, I would like to move that the Committee rise. I would ask the Prime Minister to be good enough to assent to that motion.

HON. PRIME MINISTER — Mr. Chairman, I think I have explained that it is the plan of the Government to go through with this. This is a very important measure that we want to get through, but if we can be shown how we can get any further by adjourning to tomorrow, we shall give it our consideration. We have a Motor Traffic Bill that we want to get through as quickly as possible. We do not wish to hurry any legislation, but on the 1st April the Municipal Council has to start collecting the taxes on motor vehicles, and if we cannot get that Bill through before April 1st we cannct begin the new system of collecting those taxes through the Commission. That is one of the reasons for debating this subject tonight.

MR. SCAMMELL—Mr. Chairman, on the motion to rise the Committee the Hon. Prime Minister has impressed upon us the importance of the Legislation that is now before the House. He has often emphasised the position that he does not wish to rush legislation. As has been remarked here this afternoon, no men here are supermen. We have no supermen today. We are not capable at this late hour of the night of giving to this important legislation the attention which it ought to deserve. I maintain that this matter is of sufficient importance. If this matter merits the importance which the Honorable the Prime Minister attributes to it, I think the House would adjourn now, and we could come again tomorrow with fresh minds and discuss it to better advantage. Nothing would be lost, and much would be gained by acceding to the motion to rise the committee, at this stage. The object of the Honorable the Prime Minister is obvious. Despite the protests of the Government Members and of the Honorable the Prime Minister that there was no intention of rushing through this Legislation, this afternoon he brings in one of the most important subjects for Legislation ever introduced or dealt with in the annals of the country. He comes in today with these Resolutions to which by the arguments advanced we should give a blank cheque, and at a quarter to twelve in the night, despite the Honorable the Prime Minister's previous statement, he thinks the minds of Members of this House are clear, and we are able to carry on and discuss the matter after dealing with it for hours. The Honourable the Prime Minister may be a super-man, but if so it is only tonight that I have discovered it. Now that he has decided to go on with these Resolutions tonight, I wish to place myself on record, as totally opposed to them. I do not care if any Member of the Opposition, the Opposition as a whole or any single Member of the House votes against those Resolutions I am determined to do so. I will go on record as against them, because in my opinion you are asking the Legislature to go too far. I realize fully that any remarks of mine since the Government has decided to carry out this dock policy, will only amount to so much breath wasted. I am also reminded of a few lines of poetry,

Full many a flower, is born to blush unseen,
And waste its sweetness on the desert air;

and I think the atmosphere here, judging from the conduct of the Government side, is that of nothing but a desert. In his cross-firing with Mr. Grimes, the Honorable the Minister of Justice said that he was satisfied with the ballots as cast in St. John's East, but I wish to say that a difference of only four hundred would have altered the status quo and it might have happened that I would now be on that side of the House and he on this. I do not support the Resolutions, because I do not agree with the principle of passing any contract that the Government feels like making. I think you ought to place the contract on the table. The Government claim that they need not have brought in these Resolutions at all, but could have passed the contract without consulting us, but I doubt if there is any sound argument for doing even that. They claim they have done us the courtesy of bringing in the Resolutions, and giving us a chance to express our views on them. But what is the use of extending a courtesy or asking advice of a person if you are not prepared to accept and act upon it. There is no doubt but the Government have made up their minds to put this Legislation through, no matter what we may say. Now as to the widening of the dock, and other such matters, I cannot speak as one qualified, because I have no technical knowledge of the work, but I wish to place myself on record as opposed to giving the Governor in Council power to enter into a contract, and expend whatever money they like as implied under these Resolutions. The Government knows despite all that has been said that they will make the contract, and I am convinced that the doors of this House will not be closed fifteen minutes before it is signed by the Executive, if it has not already been discussed and signed by them. Now, when I was on the Government side of the House, it was said we did things that were wrong, and in the last election we were defeated on these things.

How, therefore, can you now condone the very thing which you claimed was wrong for us, and which defeated us. If minute of council Government was wrong, as was made an issue in the last election, and we were put out of offie for it, is not the Honourable the Prime Minister now in the position of repeating the mistake which we made. It may not be critically correct that this present contract is being put through by minute of council, but it amounts to the same thing, as you are giving power to the Governor in Council to spend whatever money they way wish. The Honorable the Prime Minister has impressed upon us the urgent need of passing these Resolutions, and also his desire of doing the best for the country. But he might have delayed the matter of making the contract for a month, and there is no argument against entering into it, and placing it before this House. If the contract had been arranged we would be in a better position as to knowing what plans are going to be made. The Government must think we are very credulous if we do not oppose Section 3, which gives power to the Governor in Council to raise any more sums that may be needed on the credit of the Colony. This is going too far, and the Honorable the Prime Minister does not credit us with even common sense, if he thinks he will agree to it. We agreed last year to the raising of a loan of six millions, and the country was flabbergasted when the news was learned. There is $675,000.00 in these Resolutions earmarked for special purposes, and he now asks to take it for the Dock. As to the Government having the authority to spend it, we do not question, but we do claim that they have no authority whatever to raise more. The Hon. the Minister of Finance states there is a deficit of $100,000.00 greater than was expected last year, but there is no explanation as to how it is to be made up. It may be a moot question as to whether the figures are justified by the facts of the case. If they are justified by the report of the Auditor General it is alright. Now you say there is another $100,000.00 short. Despite all this we are asked to give authority to borrow more money, a thing we could not dream of. Two millions were allocated for roads, and a certain man in a certain place has stated that the road policy will not be developed in one or two years. Therefore, the Government could easily take $500,000.00 of that money to embark upon this scheme, which apparently they have fully decided to adopt. If I were one properly qualified to discuss such technical matters about the Dock as contained in the Resolution, and to which others have done justice, I would try to do the same, but I am not foolish enough to enter into a dispute without the necessary technical knowledge. I would not however be fair to the people whom I represent if I did not voice my strongest opposition to these resolutions. As I have already pointed out the contract should be brought down here, and there is no argument against the delay of four weeks. I also wish to place myself on record as protesting against the raising of another loan on the credit of the Colony. How this matter affects St John's is no concern of mine, but when I come to face the people of my district I will make my position clear to them in connection with these resolutions as I have endeavoured to do here tonight.

MR. DUFF—Mr. Chairman, I quite agree with the contention of previous speakers that the dock is a necessity in a country such as this, and to be of any value it must be in good condition. I have no technical knowledge as to dock building or repairing, and what I may say now may not be considered of much value. But the only trouble to my mind is in connection with the raising of this money, and I agree with the idea of Mr. Grimes as to the taking of some of the money allocated for the building of roads for this purpose. The raising of loans only brings the Colony further into debt, and I hope the Government will endeavour to avoid this. Unfortunately the dock became out of condition just as they came into power and the fact that it ought to be repaired cannot be questioned.

There is one thing that appeals to me in connection with the giving of the contract to Bishop and Company, and that is that Bishop and Company are operating their business under the British flag, and, after all, they should be given the most consideration. With regard to the question of raising more money by loan, I would like for the Government to consider this matter seriously. I would suggest that they take a part of that two million dollars earmarked for roads and use it for a more useful purpose—the repairing of the dock. Take the harbour of St. John's which is now almost blacklisted as far as foreign shipping coming in here is concerned because it is generally known that ships coming in here have been salted. Those of us who are closely identified with the shipping business know full well that ships have been overcharged no matter what part of the world they go to and we know that St. John's is no exception. Then again we have no facilities at the dry dock here for forging and rolling plates, and the least bit of machinery or material required there for repairing ships have to be sent away for, often causing great delay and expense to ships. I hope also that when the Government decides to begin work on the dry dock they will make arrangements whereby master and owners of ships that come here from outside will get a different impression than they now have of the town of St. John's. But the main point I want to make is that we should consider the dollars we are wasting and put the money to this useful purpose.

MR. HICKMAN—Mr. Chairman, it seems that it is the intention of the Prime Minister to have these Resolutions pass the House at this session, and that it is his determination to empower the Governor-in-Council to enter into a contract or arrangement with any responsible person, firm or corporation for the repairing of the St. John's Dry Dock and all such extensions, building, repairing, installation of machinery, labour and work whatsoever as may be incidental thereto or necessary in connection therewith and including the building of sheds and repairs to pier. In the discussion that has taken place here there has been quite a diversity of opinion on the subject matter of debate. I am at sea myself to know exactly what the Government intends to do, and I would like to know from the Prime Minister if it is the intention of the Government to employ an engineering concern to oversee the construction of the dock at the Colony's cost?

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—It is the intention of the Government to let Bishop's engineers take charge of the proposition and carry out the work according to the schedule and according to the cost of the work, and it will be checked up by other engineers.

MR. HICKMAN—You do not intend to enter into any contract with any concern to do the work.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—There will be no definite contract. There cannot be one.

MR. HICKMAN—You are going to pay seventy thousand dollars to have the spending of one million dollars supervised. That looks to me like an outrageous proposition. Why in the name of common sense should any construction company come in here and, after we paying their bills, charge us $70,000 for supervising the spending of one million dollars of our money. If they have to bring in some machinery that they have in the Humber district it may be alright because the Government are in a position to bring it in free over our own railroad.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—This is no more ridiculous than that in connection with the main dam at Deer Lake.

MR. HICKMAN—I am not conversant with that dam, but it is ridiculous to pay $70,000 to this company for supervising the expenditure of a million dollars of our own money, I repeat, but I doubt very much whether the Government ever tried to realise that fact. I cannot see anything in any shape or form to justify such an act. The Prime Minister has told us that it is not the intention of the Government to enter into any contract which would tend for cheaper work. Now I think that this job of constructing the dock is going to cost a great deal more than a million dollars. I got some illuminating figures to night from the Honourable Mr. Sullivan. He tells us that the dock originally cost $650,000, with profits, or $550,000, and he tells us the reason why it cost that amount. That amount had to cover the cost of excavation as well as the actual building of the dock. He tells us also that at that time cement was $4 a barrel; well you can get cement landed here today for $3.77 a barrel. He tells us that lumber then cost $30 a thousand feet. You can get the same kind of lumber today to build cribbing for concrete work for $30 a thousand. Sand can be bought today for $2 a ton and that is much cheaper than when the dock was first constructed. Further, the Government could utilize today by the mere paying for the hauling of fifteen thousand tons of broken rock that they have on their hands in the East End of the city. Basing my argument on the facts and figures submitted by the Honourable Mr. Sullivan, the Government does not need to spend one million dollars to do the dock what is outlined in number two proposition. I am very glad to have from the Prime Minister's own lips that it is not the intention to give anyone the contract of reconstructing the dock at this figure of a million dollars because I contend it is not going to cost that amount unless all the members on the Government side of the House satisfy their friends and supporters with jobs. I know there will be no opportunity for members of the Opposition to get jobs for any of their supporters, and certainly it will look like everything else a pure political work. Now we all agree that something has to be done with the dock, but the question is what is the most economical way of handling the situation. The profits of the dock the Honourable Mr. Sullivan says is $41,-200 per year, but he does not know if that included interest charges or not. If such was not included it should have been. After the dock is completed and the same amount of work is carried on there each year as in the past with the same amount of profits that would leave us in the hole $40,000 because we have to figure on at least five per cent. for interest. For instance take off $20,000 last year after deducting the interest on $600,- 000 and you are $40,000 in the hole on the operation of the dock for last year.

There is not much extra business in slight for this dock after all. We have two cases here. We have the two steamers that came into our port here. They could have been docked only there was no place to discharge their cargo. Another expense in connection with the dock is the pumping out of the water. It is going to take about seven or eight tons of coal to pump out the dock after it is widened and deepened. Figuring that out at seven dollars a ton that would be 56 dollars. Now the dock as it is at present is all right for docking small schooners. I have often seen two or three on the dock with an average tonnage of 70. Now the dock receives 25 cents a ton for putting schooners on the dock. That is about 40 or 50 dollars. And it is going to cost 50 dollars to pump the dock out. So under the circumstances every schooner of that class that goes on the dock it is going to cost more to pump the dock out than the revenue that the dock will derive from the schooners. But if the dock is to be constructed for the accommodation of schooners and large steamers, then it will be necessary for the Government to provide a slip to enable schooners to be taken up and repaired without going to the expense of putting them on the dock. And the only benefactor under that scheme will be the British Empire Steel Co., who sends the coal down to be burnt. I claim that we have here in Newfoundland a capable man, a man who is just as well able to fix and repair the dock as any stranger that comes here. We should utilize our own local engineers and our own local men to do this work without going to the expense of having this country pay somebody outside to oversee the repairs to the extent of 70,000 dollars. Now these people never expected to get $70,000. As I said before, you never took the trouble to reduce the amount.

Now in connection with another point. A considerable amount of money is to be used in the construction of the roads. Two millions have been put aside for that purpose, and as you are not going to spend two millions this season why not use that money and then if you have a deficit afterward at the end of the year when the House is open next session why then you can come and raise a loan if necessary. It is not a difficult matter to get a temporary loan from the Bank of Montreal, if it is needed. But it is still hard to ask us to permit the Governor in Council to raise further loans upon this already overburdened country. A country that has no resources in sight and depending more or less on the fisheries how can they bear such a burden. As it was said at the opening of the House in August; the Prime Minister stated on the floors of this House and so also did the Minister of Finance that from now on we were going to live within our means. And before the session is over the Prime Minister comes in and asks us to give him permission to borrow six million dollars, and not only that, but the intention was to borrow ten millions.

I can't understand so much borrowing of money, at the present time, when the revenue is increased and we ought to try if at all possible to live within our means. Now if it is the intention of the Government not to make a contract in regard to the construction of the dock, then there is no necessity for the word contract in these resolutions. If it is the intention of the Government to employ a concern to oversee the repairs of the dock why there is no contract to it. You say go ahead and construct it and we will give you the 70,000.

If the Prime Minister intends to make an agreement during the time we have been debating the subject an agreement might have been drawn up by some of the men on the other side of the House and placed on the table, and we could be discussing that instead of these resolutions. There is no contract to be made. We have the Prime Minister's word for that. All you want is an agreement for some people to oversee the construction or the widening of the dock.

Now I do not want to be a party to giving the Governor in Council authority to borrow money upon the credit of the colony, and no necessity whatever for the clause put in this to give the Governor in Council authority to enter into a contract and agreement. Now the Prime Minister and his colleagues must not be offended at our giving due criticism to the Bills that come before the House. We have already, as it has been said here before, had insinuations thrown out from the Upper House that the Bills down here are not properly debated. We do the best that we can on this side of the House to point out what may be good or what may not be good in these Bills. And as I said before, if anything comes before the House that we think is in the interest of the country we will give it as great support as the members on the other side. It is our duty to the people that we represent. We represent constituencies just as important as those on the Government side and it is our duty to do our duty to these constituencies and look out for their rights in connection with any resolutions or bills that may be brought before the House of Assembly.

We have had bills before this House before this session, and when they have passed this House they go to the Upper House and then they disappear altogether, and there is no wonder why the Upper House should criticise us because we are not giving any attention to these bills which come before us. They should not be able to pass this committee stage here and then go to the Upper House and have to be corrected and criticised up there in the way that they are. All the members on this side of the House have said that they are in favour of repairing the Dock, but they are not in favour of giving the Governor in Council the power to enter into an agreement without laying the contract on the table of the House because that is what the House of Assembly is for and the agreement could be drawn up in a few days and we could get through with this measure in a very much quicker time. As to the accuracy of the report that we have before us I cannot say. It was pointed out today by Captain Randell that on page twelve the draft figures given there are altogether wrong. This report has been gone over and sent down here for the House of Assembly, and then we find that there are errors of that kind in it, and we are not in a position to say whether there are more in it or not. Captain Randell discovered this one and it shows that there is no great trouble taken with it. Now if the Hon. Member for St. John's West wants to have anything to say he can do so when I am finished. I say that the Government has not given sufficient consideration to that report. It has not been submitted in a practical manner. Anyhow we have not as much faith in the report as if we had not found it. Of course, if the Government intends to expend a million dollars on the widening of the dock and deepening it there is nothing that we can do about it, under the circumstances.

I think that the Government ought not to ask us to pass these resolutions unless they are prepared to tell us what the seventy thousand dollars is for. The company will not have more than one engineer here in St. John's for the construction work. Might I ask the Prime Minister what this Company has to do to earn this seventy thousand dollars, particularly when we consider that last year the Government was going to vote only fifty thousand dollars for the repairs to the dock. We do not see the reason of supporting Number 3 of the resolutions and we do not see the necessity of passing Clause No. one under the circumstances. So we think that if the Government is really in earnest and want to do the right thing they should try to have the agreement made as soon as possible for the supervision of this House. I would like the committee to rise until we get this agreement, and then we should be able to go on with this business in a very short time.

MR. HALFYARD—Mr. Chairman, I wish to place myself on record as voting against Section three of these resolutions, and I think that sufficient reason has been given by those speaking on this side of the House to convince any right thinking person who has any knowledge of the situation at the present time that the undertaking is not a good one. There is no necessity for us to undertake the rebuilding of the dock at a cost of a million dollars. The provision already made in the loan bill last year for the two million dollars for roads was bad enough, but now the Government is coming in here and asking that we give them authority to borrow another million for rebuilding the dock. It is all camouflage to say that the loan of six million dollars was earmarked for other purposes. In the loan resolutions of last year there is the following provision:—

(Reads)

We have not got that two million dollars spent, and I do not think that anyone will find fault with the Government if they spend that money on the building of the dock at a time like this when such a large amount of money is necessary. I think that it would be a much better thing to do to spend this money on the dock than on an experimental thing like highways. It is not because the suggestion comes from this side of the House that the Government should not act upon it. There is no reason why clause three should not be deleted. We all agree that the dock must be fixed. If we thought that the best way to go about the work would be the manner outlined in the Section three then we would give the Government the power to go ahead and do what they want to do. But I think after all that it would be wiser on the part of the Government to rise the Committee and give the members of the House the opportunity to think over these resolutions and give the matter more consideration.

It is only small politics; it is not statesmanship to turn down a proposition because it has been made by the Opposition. If you will accept the suggestions of the Opposition you will accomplish the work that you want to do much more quickly. You will have the support of the people who have to supply the revenue if you would delete this section three and spend this two million dollars that you have for the highways.

Mr. Chairman, I would again ask the honourable introducer of these resolutions as to what position he will take now after hearing the opinions as expressed by the members of the Opposition.

HON. PRIME MINISTER—We have heard the members of the Opposition on this subject, and apparently they have made up their minds definitely to vote against these resolutions. We had no new matter put before us to induce us to change our minds in regard to these resolutions, and now we propose to put them to the House. It is in no way a reflection on the members of the Opposition—but we cannot get very much further by rising the committee this evening. The Opposition has told us definitely that they are going to vote against these resolutions, and we as a government have staked our reputation on these resolutions; and we believe that this is the correct way to approach the matter; and therefore we propose to go ahead with them now.

MR. SCAMMELL—Did I understand the Prime Minister to say that a contract will be entered into?

HON. PRIME MINISTER—Of course—but a contract or agreement cannot be entered into until we start to talk about it. We want to start talking about it. We have told you that we are not going to enter into a contract, but into an agreement, and now we want power to start entering into an agreement.

MR. HALFYARD—But the clause in the act mentions entering into a contract?

HON. PRIME MINISTER—Or an agreement.

MR. HALFYARD—Or an arrangement?

HON. PRIME MINISTER—It is all the same.

MR. HICKMAN—What is the necessity of having the word contract in there if the Prime Minister states that they are not going to enter into a contract?

HON. PRIME MINISTER—Possibly we may have to enter into certain contracts for certain concrete work, in connection with this arrangement.

MR. HICKMAN—That is a different thing altogether. I asked you if you were going to enter into a contract for the dock, or for any part of the dock . . . .

HON. PRIME MINISTER—You did not say anything about any part of the dock . . . . .

MR. HICKMAN: . . . . and you said no. Then I asked you if you were going to employ anyone to oversee the spending of our own money, and you said yes. Then there is no necessity for having the word "contract" in these resolutions.

HON. PRIME MINISTER—We think there is—that is all.

MR. HICKMAN—There should be an agreement as we said before—and that agreement should be on the table of the House.

Mr. Speaker resumed the Chair.

And it being now past twelve of the clock, midnight.

March 24th, 1925.

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Mr. Speaker, I would like to have that bill read the second time on tomorrow. Members will have a chance to consider the matter before then, and copies of the bill might be distributed now. Shortly, with regard to the bill it is in connection with the A. N. D. Company and having taken over the rights of the Terra Nova Sulphite Company at Alexander Bay the expenditure that was to have been made there is now to be made at Grand Falls. The timber that was cut at Terra Nova will be sent to Grand Falls and manufactured there. I would suggest that the bills be distributed now.

On motion it was ordered that the said Bill be read a second time on tomorrow.

Mr. Grimes gave notice of question.

Mr. Duff gave notice of question.

Mr. Ashbourne gave notice of question.

Mr. Ashbourne gave notice of question.

Hon. the Prime Minister presented the report of the Select Committee appointed to consider the Bill entitled "Of the House of Assembly," as follows:

March 25th, 1925.

To the Honourable
The House of Assembly,

Your Select Committee appointed to consider the Bill to amend an Act entitled "Of the House of Assembly," beg to report that they have considered the Bill, and several suggested alterations and additions to the terms thereof, and now beg leave to report to your favorable consideration the draft Bill hereto attached, containing several amendments which, in their opinion, should be made in the Bill referred to them.

Respectfully submitted,

(Sgd.) W. S. MONROE,
W. J. HIGGINS,
T. J. POWER.

While I agree with the principle of the bill I assume no responsibility for the proposed division of the present electoral district of Fortune Bay.

Respectfully submitted,

(Sgd.) W. R. WARREN.

On motion it was ordered that the said Bill be referred to a Committee of the Whole House on tomorrow.

Mr. Speaker informed the House that he had received a message from the Legislative Council acquainting the House of Assembly that they have passed the Bill sent up entitled "An Act to Amend Chapter 25 of the Consolidated Statutes (Third Series) entitled 'Of Light Dues,'" with some amendment, in which they request the concurrence of the House of Assembly.

On motion the said Amendments were read a first time and it was ordered that they be read a second time on tomorrow.

(1) MR. BROWNE asked the Minister of Agriculture and Mines: (1) if he is aware of certain alterations which were made to long established boundaries of certain properties on the Thorburn Road, near St. Philip's, or of errors made by officials of his Department in laying out same; (2) if the alterations were made contrary to the wishes of and in spite of the protests of the parties affected; (3) if any compensation will be given by his Department for damages done thereby; (4) if he is prepared to order that where errors have been made by officials in his Department, compensation will be given and the mistakes rectified.

Reply tabled.

(2) MR. GODDEN asked Hon. the Minister of Finance and Customs to lay on the Table of the House a statement showing in detail how the amount of $11,074.92 as referred to in the Auditor General's Report (under Section 33 (b) of the Audit Act) and classed as miscellaneous, was expended.

HON. THE MINISTER OF FINANCE—Mr. Speaker, the answer to that question is in the course of preparation and will be ready tomorrow.

(3) MR. WARREN asked Hon. the Prime Minister to lay upon the Table of the House a copy of the Report made by Messrs. Price Waterhouse Co., to the Squires Government a few years ago.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—Mr. Speaker, I beg to lay that statement on the Table of the House. I would like to ask the Hon. Member not to take the book out of the House because it is the only copy that the Government has.

(4) MR. SCAMMELL asked the Minister of Marine and Fisheries to lay on the Table of the House a detailed statement showing how the sum of $6599.91 was expended and classed under the heading of 'Labrador Fishery Commission Account' as referred to in the Audit General's Report under Section 33 (b) of the Audit Act.

(5) MR. HICKMAN asked Hon. the Prime Minister to lay upon the Table of the House a list of all employees of the Railway, Government steamers, Dock and every other branch under the Railway Commission. To give the names of the employees and the salaries paid; to lay upon the Table of the House the Report of the Railway Commission from January 30th 1924 to December 31st, 1924, showing the earnings and expenditure.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—That question will take about ten days to complete. The railway officials tell me that they have begun to prepare it.

Mr. Speaker left the Chair.

Mr. Puddester took the Chair of Committee.

Order of The Day

Committee of the Whole on a Bill entitled "An Act to Regulate Travel on Highways, and the Speed, Load and operation of vehicles thereon."

Mr. Speaker left the Chair.

Mr. Puddester took the Chair of Committee.

MR. WARREN—Mr. Chairman, were not some questions left over for decision when this Bill was under discussion last?

HON. COLONIAL SECRETARY—There may be more as we go along, so we will come back to them all at the end of the reading.

MR. WARREN—Since the House was last in Committee on this Bill, I have given it some consideration, and I want to say that, while I agree with the bill in principle, there are parts of this bill that are totally unnecessary. It is all very well for us to take a bill that is applicable to cities like Toronto, or Montreal or New York, or places like that, and apply it to a little country like this, but the result is in some cases ridiculous and absurd.

Let me give you a few instances. Under this Bill if you happen to be going somewhere with your car, and you do not happen to be fortunate enough to have a chauffeur to take your car away for you, you have to leave your car outside wherever you may happen to be with all the lights on. That means that you will have to get your batteries charged every two or three days; unless, of course you like to go to a motor agent and buy a stop light and affix that to your car. It is all very well to have that sort of thing in a busy city, where traffic is very heavy and very dangerous, but if I point out a few cases which might happen in St. John's I think you will see how unnecessary these provisions are in St. John's.

Suppose you happen to go out to your club and bring your car with you. You have to leave your car outside. If you go to the B. I. S. you will not be troubled because you have a courtyard outside, to which you can get from Garrison Hill, and as you are not on a highway you can leave your car there without lights on. But take some of the other places. Take the Knights of Columbus, for instance. Every night you will find three or four cars outside there, with an electric light right opposite. There is no necessity to have the lights on a car parked opposite the Knights of Columbus. Then take the City Club —you have Baird's Cove there, where the men as a rule park their cars but this Act says that if they park their cars there, they will have to keep their lights on. Such a position is absolutely absurd.

I think another part of this Bill provides that you have to park your car facing in the direction in which you are going to go. Think of the cars which are left outside the Masonic Lodge, or the Masonic Club. Under this Act you would have to park those cars facing down towards the Museum. If you have to do that, you will find some of those cars in the Museum some day when you come out. The practice now is to park the cars facing across the road, but that will not be allowed under this Bill.

There are many things in the Bill which are very necessary, such as rules of the road, but there are a whole lot of unnecessary things in the Bill which will, if passed, make the Bill unpopular, and will only result in putting motorists to unnecessary trouble and expense. We have already passed one section, which I propose to move that we reconsider, and that is the section referring to the lights.

I refer now to subsection (f) of section 10, which reads:—

"A motor vehicle while standing "upon any highway at such times as "lights are required by the provisions "of this section for such vehicle may, "in lieu of the lighting equipment "specified in this section, show one "light carried on the left side of the "car in such a manner, etc. . . . ."

That provides for this new light that every motorist will have to buy, unless he cares to use all his lights when his car is standing still. Section (a) might be amended so that it will provide that every car will have to carry the regular lights only when in motion.

Take the position that is going to occur when someone is down on Water Street with a motor car shopping you happen to park on the left hand side above Baird's, and you want, when you are finished at Baird's, to go across to Gray and Goodland's, you have to go away up to the Bank of Montreal in order to turn and come down to Grey and Goodland's, so that you may be facing in the proper direction, facing east. These things are all very well for big cities, but for us it is as the Minister of Justice says, putting the trappings of a Rolls Royce on a Ford.

Therefore I beg to move that subsection (f) and subsection (a) of section 10 be reconsidered, and stand over with the other sections that are to have reconsideration.

HON. COLONIAL SECRETARY—Section A is just the same as the law today. I presume that you do not have all your lights lit when you are stopped. Section A provides for carrying of lights when the car is in motion, and when you have a subsection providing for the lights to be carried when the car is parked, it is obvious that section A does not apply to that.

MR. WARREN—No, subsection (a) provides for the lights that are to be carried when the car is on a highway, no matter whether it is in motion or not. Section (f) only provides for the light that may be carried instead of the lights mentioned in (a). This stop light may be put on instead of the ordinary lights.

HON. COLONIAL SECRETARY—It is obvious that it must only refer to cars in motion, because later on you have a special provision for cars that are stationary.

MR. WARREN—Subsection (a) only provides for the lights to be carried and makes no mention of parking. It simply means that when a car is on a highway it has to carry these lights.

HON. COLONIAL SECRETARY—But the provision is made later on for the lights to be carried when the car is parked.

MR. W. J. BROWNE—That is only what may be carried instead of the other.

HON. COLONIAL SECRETARY—It is obvious that it does not refer to parked cars.

MR. W. J. BROWNE—I had already drawn attention to this particular section when the bill was last under discussion; and when I drew attention to sub section (a) I was informed that that subsection applied both to cars in motion and parked cars. I remember that distinctly, because I brought up that point.

MR. WARREN—Whether the car is in motion or not when on the highway, it must carry three lights.

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE—I agree as to parking in the City, but I think that cars parked on the side of the country road should have a light shown.

HON. THE COLONIAL SECRETARY—It is my belief that the great trouble will be in connection with motors in town. The whole object of the Bill is the safeguarding of the lives of citizens. It may have been done under a Municipal Regulation, which I think was well thought out and which is a good idea, as otherwise the cabs might be a menace to the safety of the public. I think also that a light may be found to use on motors that will not burn out his batteries as quickly as the Honorable Member seems to fear. A change in this matter of carrying lights may result in one motor becoming a danger to others, and I would not like to see the alteration made. I quite appreciate that the Bill is a lengthy one, and perhaps somewhat complicated, but it is drawn up mainly to safeguard the public. Of course we are open to suggestions, and it will be remembered that at first it was proposed to change the side on which the car should be driven, from the left to the right, but when it was pointed out that this would be an inconvenience to many, and representations were made by truckmen and others, that it would impose a hardship on them, it was changed. That is one important alteration that has been made in the Bill, and I think that any other reasonable change will also be made, as we want to make it workable. I must say I appreciate the Honourable Member's suggestion, as it is made in good faith, but still I am loath to make the proposed change.

MR. WARREN—Mr. Chairman, all I can do is to repeat my objection to this section, and I think we should put in an amendment covering cars when outside of St. John's. But here in the City I think this section would entail unnecessary expense, as there are lights everywhere. One can often see the Honorable the Colonial Secretary's car standing in front of his door almost directly beneath an electric light.

MR. BROWNE—The Municipal regulations provide for the very thing the Honorable Member object to. If a car is left standing without lights, the owner is infringing the Municipal regulations.

MR. WARREN—Under these circumstances, I withdraw the proposed amendment.

MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS—Mr. Chairman, am I to understand that any car standing still on a road outside St. John's is to keep three lights burning?

HON. COLONIAL SECRETARY—That is provided for in Sub-Section F.

MR. BROWNE—Mr. Chairman, Section 17 Sub-Section A reads "No person shall operate or drive a motor vehicle on a highway unless licensed so to do, and no person shall employ anyone to drive a motor vehicle who is not licensed." I think that in previous discussion it was suggested that tourists coming here would employ non-licensed drivers.

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE—The addition of another subsection will cover that matter.

MR. WARREN—Mr. Chairman, that is one of the sections to which I refer. Of course it may be necessary in big centres like St. John's and Toronto to have these regulations, but in little places like London, where there is a small amount of traffic they are not the rule. You do not have to turn around to park your car there. It is a dangerous thing to do to have the rule put in to park the car in the direction in which you are going. I think that it is a dangerous thing to do and I am not going to vote for it.

HON. THE LEADER OF THE OPPOSION—I do not agree with the hon. gentleman about what he says about London. As far as London is concerned you are not allowed to park the car at all.

MR. ASHBOURNE—Mr. Chairman, with regard to this section, I understand that it is the intention of the Government to allow places outside St. John's to incorporate municipalities, and the chances are that the Bill will come up at this session of the House. I would like the Hon. Colonial Secretary, if he sees fit to let this section stand over.

We have on the Twillingate Islands six motor cars, and I think our case is rather a peculiar one, as we shall probably be unable to transport our cars in order to enjoy the benefit of the tourist roads; and I think that some provision should be made now, in case Twillingate Island should not become incorporated into a municipality, that the Road Board should be allowed to get some part of the fees that would be collected for licenses under this Act. At present we have to pay for a driver's license. We have to pay it to the Municipal Council office in St. John's, so that we may get a license to drive in Twillingate. While up to the present time we have not to pay license fees for the car itself, we have had to pay a license fee for driving.

There is another point that I would like to bring up to the house. At the present time it is imperative that a driver's license should be renewed each year, and I would urge that when this matter comes before the Commission they would give attention to the question of considering that. Perhaps we are in a peculiar position in Twillingate, and I hope the Commission will give us all the consideration they can.

HON. COLONIAL SECRETARY—I may say in reply to the honourable member that I do not see how that comes under this section at all.

This is merely a provision made for places where municipalities are established, they would be allowed to collect fees in the municipality under their jurisdiction. As regards road boards that is a question for the people of Twillingate to decide for themselves.

MR. ASHBOURNE—May I point out that we have no municipality there, and the administration of such affairs is in the hands of the road board.

HON. COLONIAL SECRETARY—This is merely making provision for what may be done in the places where municipalities are established, but where no municipality is established it would not apply, and your case would not apply until such time as you establish a municipality. It is up to yourselves to have a municipality. By virtue of the Bill coming in, any section of the country can do so by a vote of the people in that section. It is entirely a matter for themselves, and all the rights of citizenship will be conferred upon them by this Bill. I am not quite sure whether it is going to come in this session or not. Is it, Mr. Prime Minister?

HON. PRIME MINISTER—Yes.

HON. COLONIAL SECRETARY—With reference to his contention about taking out licenses. Licenses are not taken out every year. He first passes an examination, and then he gets his license. Then after that he merely pays his fee, and get his license re newed.

MR. BROWNE—Mr. Chairman, I would like to refer to the section dealing with the making of arrests. I think the principle is new to this country and to every other, that any person may arrest one committing a breach of the motor act, and give a right to every individual that he should not have. The police are the proper authorities to make arrests, and there are other officials appointed by the commission to carry out the act. Therefore, I think we should not allow the introduction of such a section. I believe it should be dropped, or the wording changed to read "Every police-officer, or person appointed by the commission to make an arrest." I never heard the like of such a proposal before, as the giving of the power to a civilian to arrest another, and I must ask that it be immediately withdrawn from the Bill.

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE —Mr. Chairman, I may say the Honourable Member for St. John's West has drawn attention to the matter of giving the ordinary power of a policeman to anyone who knows another has committed a breach of the act, that it is not to my liking. I do not like this idea of arrests by private parties at all. If the police can arrest without warrant, I think it would be sufficient for the private party to draw the attention of the commission to the breach of the act. I do not see the occasion for the making of arrests by private individuals. As a matter of fact it will result to a large extent in that it would only be a scrapper who would take on the job. I do not think the Bill would be hurt by dropping that sub-section. It gives too extensive powers to the private individual, and would only result in rows on the road.

HON. THE COLONIAL SECRETARY—I agree with both the Members for St. John's East and West, as to this matter of arrests. I think it is somewhat absurd, and agree to have it stricken out.

The two clauses that are in abeyance sub-section J of section 10 which refers to Spot Lights. (Reads). In connection with that, the use of the spot light really depends on what side you are driving on. For a left hand driver the lights should be on the left hand. It would be on the right hand for anyone driving on the right.

I propose to strike ou the words "To the left" in that section.

Reads Subsection J Section 10.

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Mr. Chairman, I think that so far as this is concerned if the driver of the car does any damages the owner of the car will be responsible civilly so that in that respect there is nothing new. (Reads section.) The idea of the section is that the owner of the car would be liable for criminal breaches of the Act for the acts of the driver. That does not go so far as to say that he would be held responsible for manslaughter. (Reads) The rule is a stringent one. If the owner is sitting in the car and the driver is speeding along the highways the driver of the car is not going to speed along if the owner is not agreeable to his doing so. The owner should be liable. There is no owner of a car today who is sitting in his car whose driver exceeds the speed limit without his permission. I think that it is a wise provision to have in the bill. It is the only way to protect the lives of the pedestrians, and there is no other way to do it unless you make the owner of the car liable. It does not mean that the owner will be proceeded against criminally. In the present act if a car does damage to a person's property then that person could take action against the owner of the car for the damages. As far as I can see there is no reason why the section should not be left as it is.

MR. W. J. BROWNE—Mr. Chairman, I cannot agree with the Hon. Minister of Justice if he is referring to Section A. Sub-section 8 says that—Reads Sub-section 8. Unless the car is in the possession of somebody other than the owner without his consent. That is unless someone takes the car away from the door or steals it out of his garage. But now suppose he loans the car to somebody or suppose that the Hon. Member's wife or his children were in charge of the car, is the Hon. member liable because they go on the wrong side of the road. If the Hon. member's chaffeur goes on the wrong side of the road should the Hon. member be liable for it? I suggest that the words "without the owner's consent" be left out. Why should a man be liable for a man who has a license in the proper form and who has passed the very severe examination that is given by the commissioners and then comes to that man with the certificate from the commission. It is not that man's fault that the commission did not find out that he is not a competent chaffeur. The Hon. Minister of Justice says that the owner of the car cannot be proceeded against in the case of manslaughter. I think that he can be proceeded against if this section is retained.

(Reads.)

If a man goes down to the Department of Justice he will be punished for the offences of his chaffeur, and I do not think that it is right, and I am not going to vote for it.

MR. WARREN—Mr. Chairman, Section 75 provides punishment without the option of a fine. Now take the case of a woman who has employed a chaffeur. He has come to her with a good recommendation, and then this chaffeur when he is driving this woman becomes intoxicated, and then the woman has to be punished with imprisonment without the option of a fine.

HON. THE LEADER OF THE OPPOSITION—Mr. Chairman, I agree with what has been said by the member for St. John's West. I intended to make the same remarks only they would not be with the same legal phraseology. It holds the owner of the car responsible for everything that happens in the car and also holds him responsible for the chaffeur's actions. Both the owner of the car and the driver of the car are held responsible for the car, but most of the responsibility rests on the owner. I do not think that he should have that responsibility. I do not think that the owner should be responsible for everything that the chaffeur does when he has the car out. I think that it is something that the owner might have to regret. Even the Hon. Minister of Justice might have cause to regret it.

Mr. Speaker resumed the Chair.

The Chairman from the Committee reported that they had considered the matter to them referred, and had passed the said Bill with some amendment.

On motion this Report was received and adopted, and it was ordered that the said Bill be read a third time on tomorrow.

Pursuant to order and on motion of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, the Bill entitled "An Act Respecting the Encouragement of Shipbuilding" was read a second time and it was ordered that the said Bill be referred to a Committee of the Whole House on to-morrow.

Second reading of a Bill entitled "An Act to Amend Chapter 172 of the Consolidated Statutes (Third Series)" entitled 'Of the Survey of Foreign Going and Labrador Vessels.'"

MINISTER OF MARINE & FISHERIES—Mr. Speaker, in regard to the Bill that is now before the House, I would like to say for the information of this House and the country at large, that in the present seal fishery there has been quite a difference of opinion as to whether we could have an inspection of the ships that were going to prosecute the seal fishery or whether we could not; and it was the opinion of a number of people that the Government could call upon the owner of the ships in this country to have a special survey made before those ships went to the seal fishery, but after going through all the different rules and regulations referring to the seal fishery, we found that that was not correct. According to the law of the land, a ship, if inspected once a year and granted a certificate of fitness to go to sea, that ship can go to the seal fishery or anywhere else, and therefore I have brought in this Bill to protect the sealers of this country, and not only the sealers, but those who are dependent upon the sea for a livelihood.

I have been going to the seal fishery for the last thirty eight years, and I do not consider that any old ship is fit to prosecute the seal fishery. I do say here that if some amendments were made to the law as it is now in force, it would be possible in future to see that the ships that went out to the seal fishery were safe to go out to prosecute that industry; and I am surprised that some law to that effect has not been introduced before.

We have in this country a number of men—a class of men who go to the seal fishery, and they are prepared to go out in any vessel as long as they get out there, and I am sorry to say that I myself have been one of them. That is a bold class of men who know no fear, but if the government then allowed them to go out then, it is my privilege now to bring in a bill that will offset these things. I am now asking the House of Assembly to consider this Bill.

I have been placed in a very awkward position during these last few weeks, because I was trying to carry out the laws of the land and at the same time safeguard the sealers of the country. Therefore, I have brought in this Bill which provides for a special survey to be made on all ships going to the seal fishery, and I think as a practical sealer that this ought to go through. I consider that we have ships in this country today that are good ships. They are as good ships as you will get to go out and keep clear of the ice floes. But we have ships in this country at the present time of such a kind that they are not fit to take a number of men out to the seal fishery to prosecute that industry, or if they get out there, are not fit to bring them back safe to the land. Therefore this Bill will enable a special survey to be made of the ships that are going to the fishery.

MR. HALFYARD—Mr. Speaker, I understand that Chap. 172 of the Consolidated Statutes is the authority under which the Minister of Marine has undertaken the survey of vessels prosecuting the sealfishery at the present time, and I understand the Minister has had occasion to look up the matter. I agree with him that it is time this act was amended as to the survey of sealing vessels. Now in the case of the surveyor under Chap. 176.

MINISTER OF MARINE—An amendment to that will be brought in in a few days. As it is now there is only one surveyor and he may take sick and I am inserting a clause providing for a deputy.

MR. HALFYARD—That is reasonable as there should be someone else.

Under Chap. 172 this was not certain. I may say that I agree with this bill.

MR. HICKMAN—I would like to ask the Minister of Fisheries if there are any regulations as to sheathing, etc., of sealing vessels by which the Inspector is to be guided.

MINISTER OF FISHERIES—None that I know of.

MR. HICKMAN—Then the whole matter depends on the discretion of the Inspector. Surely there should be some rules as to the strengthening, etc., of the vessels. The Bill will come before the House in committee in a few days, and if anything of this kind suggests itself to honorable members now, I think it ought to be dealt with now.

MR. SCAMMELL—Mr. Speaker, as to the general principle of the Bill just outlined by the Minister of Marine & Fisheries I am in accord, but I think the point made by the Leader of the Opposition is well taken. As far as I can see the Inspectors have large discretionary powers, and it is now proposed to extend these powers so that they may say whether a vessel is to sail to the seal fishery or not. Therefore I think the point raised by the Leader of the Opposition is all the more forceful. Did I understand the Minister of Marine to say that he had difficulty in discovering the powers of the Inspector at present.

MINISTER OF MARINE—They were discussed in connection with vessels engaged in deep sea fishing.

MR. ASHBOURNE—Mr. Speaker, coming from the North, as I do, I am interested in this Bill. Last year our firm had vessels to the sealfishery. With regard to the surveying of schooners I am in thorough accord as I think it would take the responsibility off the owners if anything happened on the voyage. Does this Bill provide that every schooner going to the Labrador must undergo an annual inspection?

MINISTER OF MARINE—No, unless she carries extra passengers.

HON. THE MINISTER OF FINANCE—For the information of the honorable member for Twillingate I may say that schooners taking passengers are inspected by the Customs officers.

MR. ASHBOURNE—Will this Bill apply this year?

MINISTER OF MARINE—Not till it passes and receives the approval of His Excellency the Governor.

Pursuant to order and motion of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, the Bill entitled "An Act to Amend Chapter 172 of the Consolidated Statutes (Third Series) entitled 'Of the Survey of Foreign Going and Labrador Vessels'" was read a second time and it was ordered that the said Bill be referred to a Committee of the Whole House on to-morrow.

Pursuant to order and on motion of Hon. the Prime Minister, the Bill entitled "An Act Relating to the St. John's Dry Dock" was read a second time and it was ordered that the said Bill be referred to a Committee of the Whole House on tomorrow.

The remaining Orders of the Day were deferred.

Hon. the Prime Minister gave notice that he would on tomorrow ask leave to introduce a Bill to amend Chapter 74 of the Consolidated Statutes (Third Series) entitled 'Of Old Age Pensions.'"

It was moved and seconded that when the House rises, it adjourn until tomorrow afternoon at three of the clock.

The House then adjourned accordingly.

THURSDAY, March 26.

The House met at three of the clock in the afternoon pursuant to adjournment.

HON. COLONIAL SERCETARY — Mr. Speaker, I crave the indulgence of the House to have the Motor Traffic Bill read for the third time before proceeding with the Order Paper. I ask to have this done because the Bill comes into operation on April 1st, and I ask that it be read the third time now so that the Upper House may have time to discuss and pass this Bill so that it may be completed before April 1st.

Pursuant to order and on motion of Hon. the Colonial Secretary, the Bill entitled "An Act to Regulate Travel on Highways and the Speed, Operation and Load of Vehicles thereon" was read a third time and passed, and it was ordered that the said Biill be engrossed, being entitled as above, and that it be sent to the Legislative Council with a message requesting the concurrence of that body in its provisions.

PRESENTING PETITIONS.

HON. MINISTER OF POSTS AND TELEGRAPHS—Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present a petition from the inhabitants of Kitchuses, a part of the harbour known as Conception Harbour. The petitioners ask that a sum of four or five hundred dollars be granted for the rebuilding of the main road running through that settlement, known as Kitchuses Road, which is in very bad condition, and could be put in good condition with the sum of money asked for. I think this is a very humble request sir, and I give this petition my hearty support, and I hope and trust that when I bring the matter before the Government later on that myself and my colleague will endeavour to secure the grant of the amount asked for, or to get as much as we can for the good people of that place. They are a very industrious and thriving class of people—fishermen farmers, and I would like to give them all the encouragement I can. This petition is largely signed by all the people of that locality and also by the people of Conception Harbour. I beg that this petition be referred to the department to which it relates.

MR. CAHILL—I beg to give this petition my very hearty support.

HON. COLONIAL SECRETARY — Mr. Speaker, I beg to lay on the table of the House the answer to the question of Mr. Grimes—number 6 on the Order Paper of March 24th. This file of correspondence is taken from the report of the Hospital Commission, and is comprised maintly of original copies, and I would ask the honourable member, though he is not present at the moment, if he would be good enough to return it to me after he has had an opportunity of taking what notes he desires.

GIVING NOTICE OF MOTION AND QUESTION.

Mr. Duff gave notice of question.

Mr. Scammell gave notice of question.

Mr. Hickman gave notice of question.

Mr. Warren gave notice of question.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE laid on the table of the House the answer to the question of Mr. Hickman on the Order Paper of Fel ruary 23rd.

NOTICE OF QUESTION.

(1) MR. GRIMES asked the Minister of Marine and Fisheries how many vessels will be proseecuting the Bank Fishery from the South and West Coasts the coming season.

MINISTER OF MARINE & FISHERIES—Mr. Speaker, in reply to the honourable member for Twillingate district I may say that I do not know of any vessels clearing for the Bank Fishery yet, and I may say that it would be impossiblee for me to give any information on this matter until about the end of June.

(3) MR. ASHBOURNE asked Hon. the Minister of Posts and Telegraphs to lay upon the Table of the House a copy of the Report submitted by Colonel Ross.

MINISTER OF POSTS AND TELEGRAPHS—Mr. Speaker, in reply I beg to say that we have no report yet, but we expect to have a report later on.

MINISTER OF MARINE & FISHERIES laid on the table of the House answer to question of Mr. Scammell on the Order Paper of March 25th.

MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS laid on the table of the House answer to question of Mr. Brown on the Order Paper of March 25th.

Pursuant to notice and leave granted, and on motion of Hon. the Prime Minister, the Bill entitled "An Act to Amend Chapter 74 of the Consolidated Statutes (Third Series) entitled 'Of Old Age Pensions'" was introduced and read a first time, and it was ordered that the said Bill be read a second time on to-morrw.

Pursuant to order and on motion of Hon. the Prime Minister, the House resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole to consider the Bill entitled "An Act to Amend an Act entitled 'Of the House of Assembly.'"

Mr. Speaker left the Chair.

Mr. Puddester took the Chair of Committee.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER— Mr. Chairman, since this Bill was before the House a committee was appointed to report to the House on it and they have brought in their report. It is signed by myself, the Hon. Mr. Higgins and Mr. Power. Mr. Hickman did not sign it, but Mr. Warreu did with some reservations in connection with his own district—a suggestion that Garnish be taken into Burin District, and while the people there at first consented they afterwards demurred, because they could not take their member, Mr. Warren, with them. Therefore he did not feel like committing himself. I understand from the Leader of the Opposition that they consider there is no hurry to pass this Bill, as it will not come into operation for three years, and they see no reason why it should not be considered by a committee out of session. With regard to the amendments mentioned by the committee, I may say they are hardly worth referring to, as they are merely descriptions of the boundaries to definitely decide which a surveyor was sent from the Mines Department to several districts. In the District of Harbour Grace we received a protest from one place, Tilton, which wanted to be taken into Bay Roberts, instead of remaining in Harbour Grace, where it formerly belonged. As the people decided they wanted to be in Bay Roberts, and it divided up the districts better numerically, Tilton is now included there. There are one or two other districts in which the alignments of the boundaries have been somewhat altered, but these are the only changes made since the Bill was previously before the House.

MR. HICKMAN — Mr. Chairman, what the Honourable the Prime Minister has told us in reference to the stand of the Opposition is more or less correct. We have had a party meeting or two, principally on this Bill, and we have come to a conclusion which we think is right, and any fair-minded man will agree that this is an important matter, and as it will not come into effect till the next General Elections, three years hence, it should be referred to a Select Committee, who would sit out of session of the House to deal with it. It affects in many ways the denominational standing, and the people throughout the country have had no chance to consider it or offer any suggestions in connection with it, and that's why we think it should be given to a Select Committee, enlarged if necessary, and who would meet out of session of the Legislature. If it is rushed through, as is evidently the intention of the Prime Minister, judging by the fact that it is brought up before important legislation, there seems to be some ulterior motive, because while this Government may divide the country as they see fit, other Governments will later have to make changes, particularly if the denominational division is not satisfactory. When the Honourable the Prime Minister dealt with this Bill before, he told us that the Honourable Mr. Morine had been working three years on it. Therefore, I think the least we can do is give the people one year in which to consider it. This Bill will make for much greater expense in the carrying out of elections, as there will be more districts, more Returning Officers and more members. Instead of increasing the membership of the House of Assembly, I think it should be reduced. It now takes thirty-six men to conduct the affairs of a country with a revenue of eight or nine million dollars, and I agree with the statement of Commissioner Walker that the business of this country should be done after hours. Therefore there is no excuse for making the membership of this House forty instead of thirty-six. I would now ask the Honourable the Prime Minister if he would be pleased to have the Committee rise so that proper consideration may be given the Bill, as it is too important to be rushed through under the circumstances, and in view of the explanation given by the Honourable the Prime Minister.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—Mr. Chairman, it appears to me that in connection with every proposition brought before this House, the Opposition have one set policy, that is, to give it a hoist, asking for delay, and claiming there is no hurry about anything. There is no good reason why this or any other Bill should be delayed. The Leader of the Opposition says there is no hurry, and we should take time to consider this measure out of Court, but we generally find that out of Court there is very little work done. He speaks of the Honourable Mr. Morine giving this Bill consideration, but that gentleman is not the only one who has given it attention, as the Government have been dealing with it for months. They have considered it from every viewpoint, gone into the matter of alignments, and except from White Bay, from which place we have not heard in full, there has been nothing but plaudit of the Bill. Even if we are increasing our membership, which we all deplore, how are we going to continue the denominational and parochial interest by changing the districts any more than at present. I do not think this Bill can be improved upon, and even if the Opposition had two years to deal with it, I don't believe theirs would be as good. Mr. Hibbs thought that he could bring in a scheme which would be better, but I think that he himself is satisfied now that he could not do so.

We do not know whether we will be in power for four years. We think we will be, but there are a great many changes and turmoils in public life in this country and we believe that if we were to go out of power to-morrow that the proper scheme for the redistribution of districts is the one we bring before the House to-day. We think we should take no risks and we think that this Redistribution Bill should go into force right away. If we are of the opinion that it is good legislation, why postpone it? Even the honourable Leader of the Opposition, I do not think, has abandoned all hope that another general election is going to take place within the next three and a half or four years, and I think he has got an idea that he is going to break up this Government before that period expires. But if a general election does take place, why not start now and see that the different electoral districts are properly served. Take the district of St. George's, which is represented by Mr. Power. We have now the Humber region adding an enormous number of people to St. George's district represented by one man; whereas we have two men representing the district of Ferryland with about half the population of St. George's. The same anomaly obtains throughout the country. We have had a rehash of this thing here for many years and the fact remains that we want a redistribution of seats, and why not have it now. I cannot see any sense or any object in the Opposition asking to have this thing shelved for the purpose of having it considered by a Select Committee while out of session and to report back to the House at next session, because that would not bring us any further ahead than we are now. For that reason and with every due respect to the Opposition and with every intention of meeting them in any proposition they will put forward, we are, as I have already told them, going to have this legislation put through the House at this particular session. I believe that the Opposition members have had ample time to consider this Bill. They had the proposition put before them, as it was thought they might be able to improve upon it. In fact the member for Fogo thought he could improve upon it, but he is now satisfied that he could not. It did not take Mr. Morine all of three years to work out this scheme, although it may have taken him three years before bringing in any suggestion to the Government; and while Mr. Morine was considering this scheme for three years I want to tell this House that Sir William Coaker was associated with Mr. Morine the first time he considered it, and Sir William Coaker gave the scheme great consideration and was very much in favor of it, and, I have no doubt, the members of his party have also given great consideration to this Redistribution Bill. This is not a new matter that is being heard of for the first time. It has been a question of many years standing, and if other people had their views about it why did they not bring it to a head before this. They had the same opportunity as Mr. Morine or anybody else had. The Government has carefully considered the alignments of the boundaries of the different districts, and from what we can learn the people generally throughout the country want to see this Bill go through at this session of the House because they are perfectly satisfied that it is good policy and good legislation.

MR. WARREN—Mr. Chairman, the Prime Minister has already spoken on my attitude to this Bill and I merely rise to emphasize my position because of the report of yesterday's proceedings in this morning's paper and I presume a similar report will be in this evening's papers. I was on the Select Committee to deal with this Bill and I attended the meetings of the Select Committee and I signed a report on the terms, namely, that whilst I agreed with the principle of the Bill I was unable to assume responsibliity for the proposed division of the District of Fortune Bay. The Prime Minister has stated in very complimentary terms why I have not been able to assume that responsibility. What I did say was that I was in favor of the principle of the Bill and no man who is a member of any district west of the district of Placentia and St. Mary's could do otherwise than support the Bill. I do not claim that the District of Placentia and St. Mary's is what we call on either the South West or West Coast, because it is more or less on the Peninsula of Avalon. I again state that I only put my signature to the report for the reason that Garnish do not want to go into Burin District now, but at first they did want to be connected with Burin district. I am entirely in favor of the Bill, and every member west of the District of Placentia and St. Mary's must support the Bill. As a matter of fact in the year 1919, when the Government that I was associated with was in power there was a loud cry from the people on the South West Coast for better representation in this House. Even in this Bill now before the House they are not getting the representation that they are entitled to, but, after all, I suppose "a half loaf is better than no bread." It has been suggested by the Leader of the Opposition that this Bill be referred to a Select Committee to sit out of session and to report back at the next session of the House. I am opposed to that suggestion, because I believe that if anything turned up in the meantime the South Coast will not get what they are entitled to. Let me say that from Rushoon—which is the boundary line between the District of Placentia and St. Mary's and Burin District—to Cape Ray there are 32,500 people with four representatives, my own district representing 11,272 people; while on the other hand the districts of Port-de-Grave and Carbonear with a population of one-third of that number are represented by one man each. Take the district of Harbor Grace, which has a population of only 300 more people than Fortune Bay, is represented by three members. Then there is the district of St. George's with 9,200 of a population represented by one man, so that from Rushoon down to Bonne Bay you have 41,700 people represented by five members, whereas the rest of the island have more members than they are really entitled to. Consequently, those of us who represent the South and West Coasts have no alternative but to support the Bill, and whatever imperfections that might appear in the Bill now can be rectified when the different districts get the proper representation in this House that they are entitled to. As regards referring the Bill to a Select Committee, I might say that there is a great deal in what the Prime Minister has said. I know that nearly everybody in my district heard of this Bill, and I have heard of no adverse comment about it. On the other hand they want it. In 1834 the District of Fortune Bay was the District of Hermitage Bay, the only difference being that when it was Hermitage Bay District it ran from Point May, the nearest point to St. Pierre, around to Bonne Bay. The change was made on account of the French Shore Question. But I really think that we should dispose of this Bill right away, as I think it is a step in the proper direction. And, after all, the way to look at it is: if this Government is not going to be in power at the next session of the House or the session afterwards, then I am anxious to see that the West Coast gets its proper representation as soon as possible. Therefore, I want to have this Bill passed at this session. But if the Government is in power at the next session and the session afterwards and then any discrepancies are found such as any particular member have been injured by the Bill or that any particular district has not been properly treated, I feel quite sure that the Government will take the earliest opportunity to remedy any such discrepancy by bringing in an amendment to make the Bill more perfect. Even now we on the South Coast are entitled to another man as compared with Conception Bay. Look at Conception Bay including Bay-de-Verde, Bell Island, Bay Roberts, Hr. Grace, Hr. Main, Carbonear, Port-de-Grave and the outlying portion of St. John's West. The total population of these places is 52,800 people with nine members representing them. Whereas Burgeo, Burin East, Burin West and Fortune Bay with a total population of 32,500 people are only represented by five members. So that in the same proportion either the West Coast is entitled to another member bringing it up to six or that Conception Bay is only entitled to eight members. But, as I said before, that may be altered in due course. It cannot be done now, but I do say that so far as the West Coast is concerned, if they want this Bill they are entitled to better representation than they are getting at present; and further that this is the reason why I have subscribed to the report of the Select Committee, but the main point so far as my own constituency is concerned, is that I assume no responsibility.

MR. HALFYARD—Mr. Chairman, I have not been able to give this Bill much attention. This is the most important Bill that has been brought before the House this session. It is one of the most important Bills that can be brought before any legislature. I am not here to speak on this Bill to-day, because yesterday afternoon when it was proposed that the Bill be submitted to a Committee of the Whole, I asked that the Bill be distributed, and the Minister of Justice was good enough . . .

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—I would like to explain. I thought the Bill was distributed until just now. We agree that if this Bill was not distributed this notice would be given.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—Mr. Chairman, I want to say further that even if the Bill had been distributed, Mr. Halfyard would have asked for another day's delay. We are not trying to hurry the Bill but we object to considering the Bill out of session. If any member wants more time to consider the Bill we are only too pleased to give all the time he wants.

MR. HALFYARD—I thank you very much. Perhaps it is just as well to take advantage of the point that has just been made, by mentioning that the Prime Minister has made reference to the change made in Hr. Grace District. He said that Tilton had been attached to Bay Roberts instead of Hr. Grace District. Hr. Grace being so near St. John's there is an example of a change that has been made since the Bill has been distributed.

HON. THE COLONIAL SECRETARY—On the request of the people concerned.

MR. HALFYARD—Yes, on the request of the people concerned, and I feel sure, quite sure the people in the Eastern Districts have not had an opportunity to discuss this Bill. They might not know what it means,—the majority of the people,—some few might. I would mention that this has been a great argument in favor of the proposal made by the Leader of the Opposition that if there was sufficient time given for the people of the country to become acquainted with all that this Bill means. But I feel that if the Bill is put through the Legislature now, some section of the country will ask, "Why did you not ask for the Bill to be deferred for some time so that the whole country could have an opportunity of discussing its merits or demerits?" Now, as the hon. introducer of the Bill has no intention of going on with it, I will say nothing further, but an opportunity will be given tomorrow or next day.

MR. HICKMAN—Before the Committee rise, I would like to say that the Prime Minister evidently thinks that there is some personal reason of mine for standing up here and talking as I do, but the responsibility simply falls on me as Leader of the Opposition, to make a movement in these matters, a movement in the interests of the country, in the districts which we have the honor to represent. Districts just as important, as I said the other day, as those represented by the members on the other side of the House, and when I am making a motion to have the Committee rise in order that further consideration be given, I am simply voicing the sentiments of those behind me.

Mr. Speaker resumed the Chair.

The Chairman from the Committee reported that they had considered the matter to them referred, had made some progress, and asked leave to sit again on to-morrow.

On motion this Report was received and it was ordered that the Committee have leave to sit again on to-morrow.

Pursuant to order and on motion of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, the House resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole to consider the Bill entitled "An Act Respecting the Encouragement of Shipbuilding."

Mr. Speaker left the Chair.

Mr. Puddester took the Chair of Committee.

MR. HICKMAN—Mr. Chairman, I am going to ask the honorable Minister of Marine and Fisheries if he will be good enough to have an insertion put into this Bill. I think the proper place would be in No. 6 (C) we will call it "C".

Reads "C".

That is the subject that was discussed here the other day, and I think to which the honorable Minister must agree. He must give it some consideration, because after all the word was given out last Fall that a bounty was to be given on vessels repaired, and the Act has not been drafted, and nobody knows exactly what the act just contains. The vessel owners who went to the expense of repairing their vessels and did not take them out of the water understood they were going to get the bounty. The fact of the matter is they never would have undertaken repairs unless they felt quite sure that the bounty was forthcoming, and therefore it was a great hardship to any man who had gone to the expense by using his own money or perhaps by having to be supplied by us merchants to the extend of the repairs to have to bear all that on his own shoulders. Now I have no particular reason. There was no merchant or fisherman of mine who ought to be favoured with the bounty, but I think, on the general principles, it is a great hardship, and this amendment which I propose does not affect the Bill in any way except to empower the Minister of Marine and Fisheries to pay the bounty on vessels which are now under repairs.

MINISTER OF MARINE AND FISHERIES—Mr. Chairman, in reply to the Leader of the Opposition in reference to Section 6, I think that I very plainly declared the other day that personally I am not going to give any man a bounty for repairing vessels in the water without their being pulled out. My opinion has not been based on last year or the year before, but there have been many vessels repaired during the last thirty years, and I have seen as many as any man in the country, being repaired. I made up my mind years ago that whether they were given a bounty or no bounty they should be pulled out of the water to make a good job. I am still of the same opinion that it is a bad thing for any Government to encourage people to rebuild old vessels without being pulled out of the water. When you repair vessels in the water you not only cannot see the bottom, but you cannot see whether the timber is good or bad, and it would be a bad job in nine cases out of ten. As to those who are repairing vessels in the water this year we had communications from three or four, but since then I find at least two pulled their vessels out of the water. I have had no cry from any part of this country that the people are repairing their vessels in the water to any great extent. It is not the idea of this Bill to save vessels that are worn out as far as the top sides and underneath the water line. If they are worn out they should be properly constructed.

The idea of this Bill is to insure that the vessels are properly built so that the country will have an asset. These ships will be an asset to the country. They will be as good as new except the rigging and sails. Therefore, I am sorry to say that I cannot agree to paying a bounty on ships rebuilt and repaired in the water. I doubt if you will find very many vessels being repaired in the water today. As I stated before I don't know of any except the two at Port Union and they can very well haul them up as well as any one else if they want to. I think that it will be a greater hardship for anyone who has hauled up his vessel a couple of years ago and has given her a thorough rebuilding and spent a great deal of money on her than to the man who started this year and I doubt very much whether every city man has not heard that there was going to be a bounty on rebuilding ships for the last two or three months and have known perfectly well what the requirements are going to be. I sent out two hundred copies of a letter telling the men who are interested about this and I was talking to most of the Northern fishermen during the months of October and September and practically every merchant on Water Street rung me up and asked me if there was not going to be a bonus on rebuilding vessels and I told them that as far as I was concerned there would be and that I understood from the Government that there would be a bonus. I also told them that they had to be built out of water. I told them word for word as this bill is before the House now. Personally I would never be prepared to pass a bill paying the bonus to vessels that are rebuilt in the water.

CAPT. RANDELL—Mr. Chairman, the few words that I intend to say on this matter are rather looking for information than giving any to this House. I would like to know the extent of the repairs that are necessary for a man to get this bonus. I believe that the bill is that the ship must be built "brand new." But the bill before the House does not seem to me to state as to how much the repairs must be. As far as I can see the vessel just has to be hauled out of the water and the owner can get the bonus. I may be wrong but according to the Schedule A or B or C it looks to me that the amount of the repairs is not stated. As far as I can see the man who gets his vessel repaired from the streak up gets the same bonus as the man who only does a much smaller repair. I may be wrong to take that view of the matter but that is what the bill looks like to me. I would like to get some information from the Minister of Marine and Fisheries.

MINISTER OF MARINE & FISHERIES—Mr. Chairman, I think that the matter to which the hon. member for Trinity refers is answered in Schedule B and section 8. That is the very reason why Mr. Gulliford, Mr. Moss, Mr. MacFarlane, the Newfoundland Government surveyor and myself came to the decision that we did. We thought that any man who was going to make repairs would not get a ship built at the cost of a couple hundred dollars and undergo the expense of the breaking of ropes and all the other expenses unless the repairs were to be worth while. He would not take the ship out of the water for the sake of the Bounty unless he had to make considerable repairs. Mr. Dobbin was in my office and we found that the sixty ton vessels had cost from four to six thousand dollars to rebuild; the forty-five ton one cost three to four thousand dollars; and the twenty ton ones cost from eight hundred to a thousand dollars to rebuild. I do not believe that any man is going to take his vessel out of the water for the sake of a few hundred dollars bonus. Suppose he took the vessel out of the water he would have to stand the expense of the handlines and the ropes that would break and if the extent of the repairs was only say six hundred dollars then the bonus would be one hundred and twenty dollars under the first schedule or ninety under the second. Surely no man is going to take the spars out of the vessel for the sake of that sum. The owner of the vessel has to satisfy the surveyor that the timber is as good as it should be and that it will do as long as the surveyor thinks necessary and it is not until he has received this certificate that he can get the bonus. I have no other information that I can supply to the hon. member.

CAPT. RANDELL—I do not see anything in this that compells a man to take the spars out of his vessel when he is going to have her repaired. You can repair a schooner and still have the spars in her. Then again in answer to the comments made by the Minister of Marine and Fisheries I feel that there should be some limit to the amount stated in comparison to the value of the schooners. If a man wants to, he might very well go to the expense of hauling the vessel out of the water at say a cost of about two hundred and fifty dollars and he can then make whatever amount of repairs that he thinks necessary and as little as he likes while another man strips the schooner right down and then he gets the same as the man who just does as I mentioned and both of them in the case of a sixty ton schooner with the bonus at twenty dollars a ton get twelve hundred dollars. I think that there should be some limit put on the valuation of the repairs that the owner must make.

MINISTER OF MARINE & FISHERIES—Mr. Chairman, I have to say that during my life I have seen a great number of schooners repaired in Newfoundland, I daresay as many as any other man. I have never seen a vessel rebuilt without the spars having been taken out because as far as I can see the spars will not stay in the ship if the beams and sides have been taken out of her and sometimes the head and the stern with them. With regard to one vessel casting more than another, I agree with Capt. Randell that there is a great deal in what he says. The Board considered this matter and we found that it was unfair as far as the men themselves were concerned.

It would cost the colony twice as much to do what Captain Randell suggests. I know two cases in my own harbour where two men repaired their ships and one cost fifteen hundred dollars more than the other even though the vessels were both sixty tons. That was because one man came up to the city and bought the planking for $130.00 per thousand and seventy-five dollars a thousand for decking. The other went to Carbonear and paid thirty dollars a thousand for his decking and then he went into the bay and got the planking. After taking all things into consideration the Board thought that as the country would be called upon to pay ten or fifteen thousand dollars a year under the other system that it would be best to go under the manner described in this bill. But I cannot conceive why any man in this country should go to the trouble to haul up his vessel and then make a very small repair because the bonus would not pay him. He will not get enough out of the bonus. I believe and I am prepared to say that if you go around the country for the next ten years you will not find a vessel repaired with the spars in her. There is no fisherman going to the expense of building a slip for his schooner when she does not want the spars taken out of her.

I should like the members of this House to be able to see the vessels that are being built at Goose Bay.

We are trusting a good deal, no doubt to the surveyors, but these surveyors, as I have said, are men that have themselves built schooners, and rebuilt vessels. It was not of my choosing that they were appointed. They were appointed years before I went there, but I found that they were good men, and I still held on to thm, and I feel sure from what I know of them by speaking to them and by the correspondence that I have had with them, that these two men are doing their duty to the country. I know of one instance where one of these men had pressure brought to bear on him by some one in the outports to have a certain thing done, but he did not think it was quite right to do it, so instead of giving in to him, he came back here to the Board and told them about it, and he carried out the instructions given him by the Board. Therefore I am quite sure that the vessels that will be rebuilt under this new Act this winter will be inspected by the inspectors appointed for that purpose, and they will be a great asset to this country, and to the Government, and to the people interested in the cod fishery. Therefore I cannot see anything that should be put in this Bill which would benefit the country at large; and as fas as the amendment of the Leader of the Opposition goes, I can see no object in putting that in.

MR. DUFF—Mr. Chairman, I just want to say a few words in regard to this Bill. Under certain conditions it is not an expensive matter to haul schooners out of the water. At Hr. Grace and Burin, for instance, it is quite inexpensive, when they have marine railways to do this work, and where a vessel can be hauled cut cheaply and only requires, perhaps, a new bolt streak and two or three other streaks of plank on the top sides to re-condition her, the owner would be entitled to $20.00 per ton bonus or $12.00 for a sixty-ton schooner, and another party who has a vessel that needs to be thoroughly overhauled and costs very much more money obtains only the same bonus.

And as regards the Hon. Minister of Marine and Fisheries remarks regarding the necessity of taking out the spars, I cannot agree, as I know vessels that have recently had new decks and deck beams, stanchions, etc., and where, as in the position of the Hr. Grace shipowners, it certainly would not be necessary to remove spars, as they have all the facilities to take a vessel out of the water complete; and with a small amount of repairs and expense, as compared with other schooner owners not so conveniently situated, I understand they would be entitled to the full bonus. I am of the opinion that there should be something in the Act to provide for the bonus being paid on a certain expenditure, and I suggest that this point be considered.

The reference to the quality and cheapness of Carbonear lumber, by the Minister, is just as it ought to be, and no doubt he will recommend the purchase of some to his friends.

MR. BROWN—Mr. Chairman, a few days ago when I was speaking on the resolutions in connection with this Bill, I stated that I was absolutely in accord with the princ[illegible] of the Bill, as regards the pulling up of vessels before they were repaired. I repeat now what I said then. But for the people who are to-day repairing vessels, who did not pull them out of the water, and did not know that the Bill was coming in in the form that it has, I would ask that they should not be excluded from getting this bounty. I do not think it is fair that they should be excluded. These people should get something. I myself have had letters, the names of the writers of which I do not for several reasons think I ought to disclose, saying that the people were not notified regarding the kind of legislation that was going to be brought in, but the Minister has made a statement that he wrote about two hundred letters to various people . . . .

MINISTER OF MARINE & FISHERIES—I did not say I sent letters, I sent copies of this Bill . . .

MR. BROWN—Perhaps you would not mind giving the names of the people that you sent them to . . .

MINISTER OF MARINE & FISHERIES—Certainly . . . .

MR. BROWN—So that we can refute any statements that have been made in regard to it. There are several vessels in this country that are being repaired but have not been pulled up, but are being repaired in the water; and the owners of these ships are surprised now to find that they will not get the bounty. I do not think it is fair. Speaking on behalf of those people, I think that they should get a bounty, and some provision should be made for them.

MR. SCAMMELL—Mr. Chairman, I want to avail of this opportunity to record my support of the principle of this Bill, and also I want to say that I am in total accord with the amendment proposed by the Leader of the Opposition. There is not much use in having any repetition on this point. The position we take is that there are schooners being repaired in the country to-day that are not hauled out of the water, and the owners of those ships did not have any idea that the Bill was going to provide that the ships had to be pulled up. And this is so despite the fact that the Minister of Marine and Fisheries says that he sent out two hundred coipes of the Bill. I am almost sure in the case of Port Union at any rate that they were not informed in time that they would be required to haul their vessels out of the water. If they did get that information it was not until January, and after that it was very difficult to get the vessels up, even if they might have been prepared to undergo the expense. I do not wish that this section should be incorporated in the Bill permanently, to remain there as part of the Bill, but that it should be put in now to cover such cases as those to which I refer. I want to go on record as sympathising with those people who, having repaired their schooners are going to lose the bounty if this goes through, because they did not pull their vessels out of the water.

There is another objection to the Bill which I would like to point out. The Minister stated that in the reports which his deputy surveyors had sent in, the average amount of repairs required on a sixty ton schooner would be about four thousand dollars worth. I maintain that the bounty is altogether out of proportion to the cost of repairs. If a man has to do four thousand dollars worth of repairs on a sixty ton schooner, I do not see that twenty dollars a ton will be sufficient encouragement for him. Therefore, I think that there should be provision made for some greater amount. On account of these two suggestions, I have to record myself as in favor of the amendment proposed by the Leader of the Opposition.

MINISTER OF MARINE & FISHERIES—Mr. Chairman, in reply to Mr. Duff, I may say that the repairs to which he refers would not be regarded by the surveyors as repairs at all. Therefore that ends that question.

In reply to Mr. Brown, I would say that I would be much obliged if he woud give me the names of these people who are repairing vessels in the water this winter. I mention that because, as I have said, no one has ever written to me about it, with the exception of one man at Old Perlican or New Perlican, I am not quite sure now, but I can find out; and a man named Snow at Harbor Grace. He has spoken to me about it, and I just told him that that was the law that was going to be brought in, and that we did not think that it was a good policy to encourage people to repair schooners in the water, because we did not think it was a good practice; and he agreed with me. He said his schooner was quite heavy, and he did not know if he would be able to get her out of the water. Then there was a man named John Curran who had a very large vessel, and he thought she should not have to pull her out of the water, but after we had some conversation, he practically agreed with me, and said he thought he would leave the repairs until next winter, when he would pull her up.

Mr. Scammell says that he doubts whether Port Union was notified in time about this; but I think Mr. Russell will be man enough to say that I did tell him, and that I was good enough to go up and tell him . . . .

MR. SCAMMELL—In January?

MINISTER OF MARINE & FISHERIES—In the first part of January, if not in December, and after I had spoken to Mr. Russell, I could come to no other conclusion than that the people who had left those schooners to be rebuilt—that they were under the impression that the schooners were going to be rebuilt. I did it out of loyalty to Mr. Russell, so that he could get a chance to get the schooners pulled up if he wanted to. The same applies to the sending out of the two hundred copies of the Bill. In a way I had no right to do it, because it had not been passed, but I felt sure that the Prime Minister was going to do what he had promised in that matter as well as in all others.

MR. HIBBS—Mr. Chairman, it is just possible that some schooners have been repaired in the water, and I ask the Minister if such be the case to recommend to the Government that the owners be given the bounty. There are some places where there are no launchways, and the schooners cannot be hauled up, and must be repaired in the water. I agree with the principle of the Bill, but ask that this privilege be given any who have gone to the expense of repairing in the water.

MR. ASHBOURNE—As the Minister himself has stated there may be isolated cases, perhaps not many, where schooners have been repaired without being hauled up. He says it is expensive to take the vessels out of the water, and I think if the Government insists on this being done, it will entail much expense and hardship on the fisherman. In very many cases vessels can be examined as well by being hove down as by being taken out of the water. I think the Minister will agree with me on these grounds, and also that repairs very often are necessary only between wind and water, as the schooners bottom may be in good condition. But according to the law she has to be hauled completely out of the water, and rather than injure those who have gone to expense already, or debar them from the privileges extended under this Bill, I think the Government should go out of its way to see that such a vessel owner is not unjustly treated. What has been done to encourage the fisheries, and there are only thirty thousand dollars given for bounty on schooners, and if there are any cases where repairs were made without the vessel being hauled up, I think the bounty should be given. I have heard of one schooner at least from Twillingate District which is going to be repaired, or may be under repairs even now, and I think it would be most unfair to bar this man from the benefits of the bounty, particularly under the circumstances as mentioned by the Minister this evening. I agree with the principle of the Bill, but think that the bounty should be given this year even if the vessels have not been hauled up.

MINISTER OF MARINE & FISHERIES—Mr. Chairman, I am as much in sympathy with the fisherman as anyone in the country, and will do everything in my power to help him. I am prepared when I find out from the surveyors, and make sure that the people who have repaired their vessels without hauling them out of the water were not aware of the Bill, to assist them. But if we extend the privilege of the bounty this year, without full consideration of the cases, we will have to be altering the Bill again next year. I do not think that any blame can be attached to me for what I did in notifying the people, as I only wanted to help them and took the word of the Honorable the Prime Minister that the Bill would pass. Every merchant and their dealers had heard of this early in October, and knew the Bill was to be brought in, though they may not have known its details, and in deference to the Honorable Members on the Opposite side of the House, I am prepared to ask the Government as long as we know the schooner owner is not getting the upper-hand of us to give him assistance.

MR. HIBBS—Mr. Speaker, I am glad to hear the view taken by the Minister, as he has admitted the principle of our argument, and evidently sees the justice of our claim. Now as he has gone so far I think he could put the proposed amendment in. It does not mean the drafting of a new Bill and will save him the trouble of going back to the Government, and asking for the Bonnty for those who repaired their schooners in the water. I know he realizes the difficulties of the poor fisherman in connection with the repairs to their vessels, and believe that if he puts in this amendment everything would go on without a hitch.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—Mr. Speaker, in defence of the Minister of Marine, I wish to say that it leaves loopholes for trouble if the bounty is given now for repairing vessels in the water. As the Minister has pointed out a schooner cannot be properly repaired unless she is taken out of the water. If she is hauled up a surveyor can see that the work is done properly, and that new material replaces the old. But he cannot see this, or the condition of the bottom, unless the schooner's keel is out of the water. Therefore, we cannot acced to this request. As far back as October last the Minister of Marine was approached by merchants and fishermen as to what the Bounty was to be, and he gave them to clearly understand that there would be no bounty granted for vessels repaired in the water, and unless they were hauled up. Consequently no one has been deceived, and no one has been given to understand that they would get the Bounty if the vessel were not hauled up. I can see no necessity for treating the man who repaired his schooner out of the water this winter any differently from the man who repairs her next year, according to the regulations.

MR. HICKMAN—Mr. Chairman, the Minister of Marine bas been on his speech several times and each time he revealed his soul, which I may say is bigger than that of the Honorable the Prime Ministers. The Minister of Marine recommended that those who have repaired their schooners in the water should get something.

MINISTER OF MARINE & FISHERIES—I said I would recommend it if we were satisfied those repairing schooners did not know of the regulations.

MR. HICKMAN—Well, we put it your way that they would be given something if they didn't know the vessel had to be hauled out of the water. That speaks well for the Minister, and shows that he has something in him. But after the Bill passes he will not be able to recommend anything, because it states in the Bill that the vessel must be hauled out of the water, so that the keel may be examined. So whatever good intentions he may have of helping the men who were not in possession of the facts of the regulations, I do not think he can do anything after the Bill passes. In bringing in the Amendment, I have no personal interest, but my object is to help the poor man who was not aware of the rules and started to repair his schooner in the water. I take it there are no supporters of the Minister repairing their vessels in the water, as he had the chance to give them information. But if there are one or ten vessels being repaired in the water, the owners should get some compensation, as every vessel repaired will be an asset to the country. As to whether it is necessary to haul the vessels up for repairs, I leave to the Minister, as he is a practical man, but Mr. Ashbourne says the keel can be seen by vessel being hauled down or careened as well as out of the water. The member for Carbonear has told me of an instance in Trinity Bay where a schooner was hauled out of the water, and it cost $590.00 to get her up. That is a lot of mony for an ordinary fisherman. A vessel of fifty or sixty tons is a very heavy weight, and a lot of tackle is required to take her up. We agree with the principle of the Bill, and in fact urge the Minister to bring it in, as we wanted to get this matter of repairing vessels finalized.

We are not against the principle of paying the bounty for the repairing of vessels and I am of the same opinion as the Minister of Marine and Fisheries that a vessel repaired is an asset to the country. I might say that I had no knowledge of what the conditions were going to be like in the Bill. Several people were speaking to me about this matter but I was unable to give them any information, as I was unaware of the conditions of the Bill, but I think that some provision should be made in the Bill whereby those repairing vessels could avail of the bounty without having them hauled out of the water. I merely suggest this to compensate the men who now have vessels under repairs. However, it has been emphatically pointed out by the Prime Minister that it was not the intention to accept this amendment of mine. Consequently, there is nothing left for me to do but to withdraw the amendment because the Bill is purely a party measure and the majority is on the other side of the House to vote it through, and I will let the Prime Minister and his Ministers assume the responsibility for the Bill as it is.

MR. RANDELL—Mr. Chairman, I would like to point out that the Government is giving a lot of power to Surveyors in putting this Bill through. Take for example a man who has spent several thousand dollars in repairs to a vessel. He will get $20 a ton bounty on the recommendation of the Surveyor; while another man who would only spend a thousand or fifteen hundred dollars on a vessel would get the same consideration. I think there will be a lot of dissatisfaction on this account.

MINISTER OF MARINE & FISHIES—Who are you going to trust if you do not trust the Surveyors?

MR. RANDELL—Well they are only human you know.

MR. HALFYARD—Mr. Chairman, as the Government has decided not to accept the amendment proposed by the Leader of the Opposition I thought that possibly some amendment on another line may be accepted by the Government and I would therefore move that there be added to the Bill the following section: "That this Act shall apply to all vessels repaired during the year 1924 and in conformity with all the sections herein contained."

MINISTER OF MARINE & FISHERIES—What about those that were repaired in 1922 and 1923? Where are you going to draw the line?

MR. HALFYARD—We cannot go back as far as that. Here is a case in point of where a vessel was repaired in 1924. Captain Harry Miller of New Bonaventure, T.B., owner and master of a vessel, pulled his vessel out of the water in January 1924 and started to repair her. He was hoping against hope that something would be done so that he would get a bonus on the work he did in connection with that vessel. He is hoping still and that is why I am speaking now. There may be other such cases that I do not know of.

MINISTER OF MARINE & FISHERIES—There are scores of others.

MR. HALFYARD—Do you think there were scores of vessels rebuilt in 1924?

MINISTER OF MARINE & FISHERIES—No, but as far back as 1920.

MR. HALFYARD—I am speaking of 1924, which was a period in this country when it was a courageous act to spend four or five thousand dollars, as Capt. Miller did, on rebuilding his vessel and then taking the risk of supplying her for the Labrador fishery. Surely a man like that deserves some consideration. Men of that class are the wealth producers of this country and this country will not amount to a great deal if we lose this class of man. I do not think that it would amount to a great lot of money if this Bill would include vessels rebuilt in 1924.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER — Mr. Chairman, I would like to explain to honourable members that we are not trying to throw down every amendment brought in by the other side of the House, but at the same time the honourable member who has just sat down will be able to see that the whole Bill will need to be altered in order to conform with the requirements of his amendment. To begin with, the Surveyor has to see the vessel three times while she is in course of repairs. That could not be done on vessels repaired during the period he mentioned and we would have no proof that the work was done and no proof to justify the paying of a bounty. We would only be able to assume that the vessel was repaired according to schedule and that new wood was put in to replace old wood; but you could not get any definite information for that other than that given by the man who owns the vessel. I think that the suggestion of the honourable member is probably the outcome of some firm that thinks it was hard hit. At the same time it is not very different from a gentleman in the Legislative Council who has been pleading to members of that Chamber because, after he had imported a lot of pork and beef, the duty was taken off these food commodities by the Government and he thinks he did not get the proper protection prior to the Act being put in force. It is quite possible that he was hard hit. I know that our firm was hard hit too. Somebody has got to be hard hit when things of this kind happen. I would like to say that Captain Randell's suggestion is a very reasonable one and I quite agree with him that a great deal of power is being given to the Surveyors, but then we have to consider who else can we give the power to if not to the Surveyors. After all, if you made all the stipulations possible to protect yourself you are still in the hands of the Surveyors. They can go around and pass anything they like if they choose to do it; but I think, as the Minister of Marine and Fisheries has pointed out, and I agree with him, that we have had good Surveyors and there will be nothing wrong about the carrying out of the Act. The Surveyors are men who have been in office for a considerable time now. They are good men and know their business as shipbuilders and I feel quite satisfied that the surveying of the vessels will be done thoroughly and well. However, if there is an infringement on this Act it is easy to have it altered afterwards and if it is found that there are any loopholes in the Act it can be made thorough next year. At the same time this is the best we could do. There were members of the Executive who thought we ought have a stipulation whereby the cost of a vessel's repairs had to amount to a certain percentage before it could get a certificate for a bounty, the idea being to prevent any person from hauling up a vessel merely to make himself eligible to get the $20 per ton bounty; but Captain Winsor pointed out to the Executive that it would mean a certain hardship on people keeping accounts of their repairs.

One fisherman comes along and gets his lumber at a hundred dollars a thousand and another at one hundred and fifty dollars. In any case in order to make the labour Bill sufficient to enable him to get the fifty dollars bounty he can put on a lot of extra labour to make up the expenses. Consequently it would be difficult to check up. I believe it is best to leave the Bill as it is at present to safeguard all concerned and I am inclined to take their word for it.

MR. HALFYARD—Mr. Chairman, in reference to the schooner built at New Bonaventure I don't know whether she was hauled out of the water. It was placed in the stocks in 1924. Now all that I require is that this Bill should be effective and include the year 1924. And I think that the Surveyors or the Deputy Surveyors know all about the schooner Melba of New Bonaventure as to the way that she was built. The timber that was put in her—they might not know this by actual inspection. And I also think that they were quite convinced in their own minds as to the bounty that the owners should get.

MR. HICKMAN—Mr. Chairman, I have to agree with the hon. member for Trinity. There is no date in this Bill from which the repairs must start to enable the men to get the bounty. Now we infer from what we have heard from the Minister of Marine and Fisheries that the date is Jan. 1st, 1925.

You will find that most of the vessels had their repairs started last fall, in November and December, and in accordance to this law or act that nobody must get the bounty except those who started repairs after the first day of January, 1925. In that event there are very few in Bonavista Bay entitled to the bounty. What is going to happen? They are not entitled to the bounty but they are going to get it. While you have got this Bill before the House you should make this clear. Everything possible should be specified. If you cannot make it retroactive from the fall of 1924, certainly you must go back to the date at which repairs have been commenced. Now the Minister of Marine and Fisheries tells us that he does not know of any schooners under repairs that have not been hauled out of the water. That makes it all the more easy for the Government to have some consideration for the two or three who have had due regard for the law and who, under the impression that they were going to be compensated, started to reconstruct their vessels whilst in the water. If there are four vessels and they cost a thousand dollars a piece that is only four thousand dollars. That is what the Government calls encouraging the fisheries. The Government can see their way clear to outline a project to build roads all over the country, costling millions and millions of dollars, and when it comes to a small matter of encouraging the fisheries and producing an asset to the country that will not cost more than 3,000 or 4,000 dollars. We should give some consideration to the fisheries and make this Bill retroactive for 1924, so that the man who had no knowledge of what this Bill entailed should be able to get at least what they expected. We have not objected to most of the Bills. We helped out the Lobster Fishery Bill although we felt that some parts of the country were not being properly treated by closing the lol ster fishery. And now when after some people have suggested that they are going to help those who are prosecuting the fisheries they do not see their way clear to take this suggestion. However, if the Government do not feel that they should take this suggestion which we think is in the interest of this country the only thing left is to take it up as a party measure and carry it through as they intended.

MR. SCAMMELL—Mr. Chairman, the Leader of the Opposition this afternoon came in here to propose an amendment to this Bill, and he made some suggestions to the Minister of Marine and Fisheries who has not seen his way clear to act on the suggestion, or otherwise we have not put up a sufficiently strong case in behalf of the amendment. He has now withdrawn that amendment. It would be, it is, useless on our part to oppose brute majority. He has brought in another amendment now asking that this legislation be made retroactive in order to give those who went to some expense last year the opportunity of qualifying for this bounty. Mr. Halfyard dwelt upon those cases and pointed out that in the district of Trinity, Capt. Harry Miller, last year, of Bonaventure, had gone to considerable expense to effect extensive repairs to his schooner. The Prime Minister stated the other day that he was aware that some of the Samsons of Flat Islands had also spent considerable money in repairing their schooner last year. Capt. Harry Miller is one of the ablest fishermen in this country. He is independent and is a man who has done much in building up this country. And I feel that last year, had he known that this year we were going to pass this legislation, he would have seen his way clear to delay the extensive repairs that he made to his schooner.

I think this country and this House owe it to the men of the type of Capt. Harry Miller that they should receive some consideration at the hands of this Legislature. The Government says it is trying to do everything possible to advance the interests of the fishermen of this country. If so, here are two cases where they can do some good. These cases have been cited, and I have no doubt that the members can tell of others of their constituents in their districts who have repaired their schooners during the last year. Why are not all of these men given an opportunity of benefitting by the bounty? I maintain that these men are an asset to the country and that there is a very good reason why they should. We would not be asked to give any great deal by this, as there have been only one or two outstanding cases that have been mentioned, and I should like to take this opportunity to express the hope that the Minister of Marine and Fisheries will give every consideration to the amendment or the late amendment which was proposed by the Leader of the Opposition. Mr. Halfyard has cited, as I said, two cases, and as I pointed out that there are other cases which I am sure that other members of this House are aware of; other cases which should be attended to, if the Government wishes to confirm its policy of doing everything toward encouraging the fishermen, and this amendment accepted. The fishing classes are after all the backbone of this country. The Government can spend all the money it likes on tourist traffic; we can have all the Humbers and all the Ganders we like, but we want to keep the independent class of fishermen. We want to keep them in this country. These men are now preparing for the fishery of next year. Most of them are fitting out their schooners and getting their codtraps ready for the fishery, indeed a great deal earlier this year than last year. I do not think that it reflects any credit or kudos upon the Government that they have discriminated against these men. I would ask the Government in all fairness to accept the proposed amendment and give those fishermen referred to an opportunity of getting some compensation for the schooners which have been recently repaired.

MR. GRIMES—Mr. Chairman, with the other members of the House who have already spoken in favor of the amendment, I also wish to give it my hearty support. It will give courage to the producers concerned with the main industry of the country—the fishing industry.

Boot and shoe industries, clothing industries, flour, paint, and other industries, which thrive because of the fishing industry, get all the concessions they want from this House. If they are entitled to receive concessions, how much more entitled to a like consideration is the fishing industry, which employs over 45,000 persons engaged in productive work.

There is no industry to compare with it for the amount of employment it gives. There is no industry to compare with it in developing pluck, perseverance, courage and daring, which qualities are possessed by the average Newfoundland fisherman to-day. We therefore cannot neglect or ignore any proposal such as is embodied in this amendment, which seeks to encourage not only the maintenance of the present position of the fishery in the industrial life of the country, but to advance it beyond its present confines.

There has been much to discourage the prosecution of the fishery the past few years. With the exception of last year very little has been derived from it by the average fisherman, so as to provide him with income to maintain his family decently. Were it not for the development of the Humber industry, even last year would have had the same hard story to tell, of having toiled all summer and having failed to get returns to provide for the family's needs. The Humber industry saved this situation by withdrawing a number from the fishery, and giving the opportunity to those who remained to secure larger catches and better prices. With less fish caught, better prices were obtained.

The acceptance of the amendment will do much to encourage shipbuilding on a larger scale, for the amendment, while it concerns only the repairs of fishing vessels, will give a double assurance to every fisherman wanting a vessel of his own, that, not only can he expect a bounty on the building of a vessel, but he can look forward with confidence that when there is need of rebuilding, he will have some financial assistance toward the cost. If they can be assured of this, there can be no doubt it will prove a tremendous impetus for the creation of a fishing fleet like that of old times.

What a contrast the fishing industry presents to us to-day, as compared with the good old times. Think of the banking fleet, the Labrador fleet, both together comprising about six hundred vessels, and when you think of the banking fleet to-day with less than fifty vessels, the Labrador fleet with less than two hundred, surely it ought to awaken us to the serious condition, which is in our power to remedy.

The proposal of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, good in so far as it goes, does not go far enough, and he should be willing to assist in the restoration of the banking and Labrador fleet. The amendment has it in the germ of restoration, and the Minister has the power to give it growth.

What interests me most is the encouragement it gives towards creating more producers. It is the producer upon whom the prosperity of the country is built. Its permanence depends upon them, and in all matters of legislation they should have the precedence for they are the real wealth producers.

Three or four hundred more vessels means, not only employment in building, but constant employment for riggers, sailmakers, blacksmiths, and more employment in the prosecution of the fishery.

It is these considerations that lead me to support the amendment which I trust will be favorably considered by the Government.

MR. HALFYARD—Mr. Chairman, I think that I should read Captain Harry Miller's letter to the House. It was sent to me in the month of January, 1925, and I have no doubt that what he says in this letter could be reproduced by many other men in this country who own vessels.

(Reads the letter.)

Captain Miller is in the same position as several others in this country and his letter will show the situation better than any words of mine. He explains the position well. He has put the savings of his life into his vessel and risked all on the fishery to the Labrador. I think that the Government would be doing the right thing to have the bonus paid to the men who had vessels rebuilt in the year 1924.

Mr. Speaker resumed the Chair.

The Chairman from the Committee reported that they had considered the matter to them referred and had passed the said Bill without amendment.

On motion this Report was received.

On the motion for adoption of the report Mr. Halfyard moved and Mr. Hickman seconded in amendment that a new section 11 be added to the said Bill, viz., 11 "That this Bill be retroactive for the year 1924."

Whereupon the House divided and there appeared for the amendment:

so it passed in the negative.

so it passed in the affirmative, so it was ordered accordingly, and it was ordered that the said Bill be read a third time on tomorrow.

Pursuant to order and on motion of Hon. the Prime Minister, the House resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole to consider the Bill entitled "An Act Relating to the St. John's Dry Dock." Mr. Speaker left the Chair.

Mr. Puddester took the Chair of Committee.

Committee of the Whole on a Bill relating to the St. John's Dry Dock.

MR. HALFYARD—Mr. Chairman, there was an amendment made to section 3 of this Bill when it was in the form of resolutions that the sum of five hundred thousand dollars be named as the sum to be raised on the credit of the colony.

I do not know if anything can be gained by any lengthy debate upon the Bill, as all the members on this side of the House gave their reasons for not supporting the resolutions that were being considered, and the Bill is practically the same as the Resolutions. But really I was hoping that the Government would upon further consideration have been convinced of the wisdom of not asking for any further loans upon the credit of the Colony. Section 2 gives the Government power to apply to the said purposes as set forth in section one the amounts of fifty thousand, one hundred and twenty five thousand, and five hundred thousand dollars. Now really you should go a little further and also include the estimated cost for the rebuilding of highways. If you did not feel like putting in the full amount of two million dollars, you could have got five hundred thousand dollars from the vote for highways, and apply that sum of five hundred thousand dollars for the purposes of this Bill; and I think you would have the support of the whole community—of the whole community.

There are numerous reasons why we should hesitate to increase our debt. The estimates that have been submitted show that we are not reducing our expenditure. We will have to find nearly half a million dollars next year more than the year before, and as there will be a remission of certain taxes will result in a decreased revenue; and when you have an increase of expenditure and then attempt a decrease of revenue, I do not know what the end will be. Nothing but bankruptcy.

The spending of large sums of money on the rebuilding of the dock will give employment, and indirectly some of that money will come back to the revenue during the next fiscal year. Unfortunately the condition of the country is such that most of the men who would work on the dock would find it difficult to find remunerative employment from any other source, so therefore it savours of providing a public utility. But you are finding money to relieve unemployment. The Government has not admitted that, and from what has been broadcasted, one would imagine that we were living in prosperous times, and there is no occasion for the Government to undertake work of a non-remunerative kind to relieve the unemployment situation. But I believe that the Government must have at the back of their heads that they will want the five hundred thousand dollars to find employment for the people of this country during the next year. If that was admitted I would never vote against a loan that was to give employment to keep them alive; but if the conditions of the country are such that we can in any way do without any further loan, we should certainly not add this extra burden to an already overburdened people.

I am of opinion that the Government will act very wisely if they do not spend that two million dollars on roads during the next year, and from remarks made by the Hon. Colonial Secretary I would gather that it is not the intention of the Government to spend two million dollars next year, or half of two million dollars—that being so, there will be a surplus amount on that vote. Why not take five hundred thousand dollars from that and devote it to the dock. There is nothing unreasonable about that proposition. And if you should find that you require more money do what other Governments have had to do. Go to your bankers. Go to the Bank of Montreal, and they will be only too glad to give you a temporary loan. The very essence of this clause three anticipates a necessity to borrow five hundred thousand dollars. This is contrary to our expectations. It is not consistent with the statements made by the Finance Minister showing an excess of revenue over expenditure from month to month. That being so, from every line of argument, there is no necessity for any further loan, unless the Government intends entering into expenditure that we know nothing of.

From what has been said in the Upper Chamber we are inclined to believe that the Government anticipates guaranteeing the expenditure of money in connection with an hotel; and that is not a personal opinion this time, because the leader of the Government has stated, and it is published in the newspapers, that he is speaking officially, and this is not his private or unofficial opinion, as it was when he was speaking of making miles of roads. This time he has said that he was authorised to enter into negotiations with monied people outside this country to get them interested in an hotel project; and he states that the Government is prepared to guarantee capital or assist them financially in some way.

If that is so, before the House closes of course, we will hear more about it; and if you want five hundred thousand dollars then, lay your cards on the table, and say you want five hundred thousand dollars for an hotel project, and then we will be able to debate the Bill from that point of view. But as I see it, Mr. Chairman, there is no necessity of clause three in this Bill relating to the St. John's Dry Dock, unless the honourable introducer of the Bill can give us some further enlightenment as to the necessity for this direct authority to borrow five hundred thousand dollars.

I therefore move, Mr. Chairman, that section three be deleted.

MR. SCAMMELL—Mr. Chairman, I wish to point out that there is no other course left open for us but to find ourselves in agreement with the proposal of Mr. Halfyard. I think it was made clear from this side of the House when we were debating this Bill the other night that we saw no necessity for borrowing any other sum to be expended on this proposition. I do not think I am violating any confidence when I say that the Hon. the Minister of Finance has stated privately that there is no necessity of the country borrowing any money extra. It is patent from the utterances made — utterances that have the semblance of authority on the Government policy—that the Government is not going to spend Two Million Dollars earmarked for road construction all at once. If that be so, and the repairs to the Dock are so urgently needed, why not take $500,000.00 of that amount and devote it to that purpose. There has to be a limit somewhere to this matter of borrowing, and the idea that has gone throughout the country that the Government is seeking to borrow more money unnecessarily will not improve their position in the eyes of the people. But that position is of their own making, and the Honorable the Prime Minister has said that he is prepared to stake everything on the dock proposition. You are going to engage in a large undertaking in connection with the dock, and you will have a number of supervisors and officials of one kind and another to oversee the work done. I would like to make a suggestion this afternoon on behalf of one who is well known in Newfoundland, and who in my opinion should be given every consideration when you are looking for supervisors for this work. If there are to be officials there to see that the money is spent in the interest of the country, then give him some attention. I refer now to Mr. M. E. Hawco, who perhaps is not a friend of the Government, and as a matter of fact in the last election was an opponent. But it is a long cry since then, and it is my belief that he probably has no political affiliations now. By the fact of his training he is worth consideration. He has had vast experience in matters pertaining to dock construction, and before he returned here a few years ago from Canada he was drawing $5,000.00 a year from a large construction firm there. I would like to throw out this suggestion to the Government and hope it will not be treated with contempt because it comes from this side of the House. I remember that a few years ago when the Government of which I was a Member, was appointing a Railway Commission, the suggestion was put forward by the then Opposition who was not connected directly with the Government. The Administration of the time were big enough to accept this suggestion, and they appointed the Honorable Tasker Cook, who may have been termed a Government Nominee. Now if Mr. Hawco has the necessary credential, as there is no doubt he has, and moreover he is a Newfoundlander, he should be given some position in connection with this dock building. I feel that if the Government need a representative up there he would be able to give first class service in any position to which he might be appointed. Now reverting to the Bill it has to be made technically correct in this House if we are not to be brought to book by the Upper Chamber. Section 3, I may point out, does not say whether the five hundred thousand is to be pounds, dollars or francs, and I would like to see the word dollars put in, so as to make sure of the amount. I would further like to reiterate Mr. Chairman that there is no substantial argument in asking us to give authority to borrow more money as we are already deeply enough in debt.

MR. GRIMES—Mr. Chairman, I arise to support the amendment or suggestion put forward by the Honourable Member for Trinity, and wish to reiterate that the Government is acting unwisely in keeping this clause in the Bill. It has been stated that two millions have been cut out to be spent on motor roads, and I would suggest that a half million of that amount be ear-marked if required to complete the dock. My own idea as to the proposed raising of another loan, is that if you get it, there will be many demands not calculated on now that will be made on it, whilst if you do not raise it you will be safeguarding the interests of the country. As I have pointed out already, the tax-payers of the country are now overburdened, and this new loan would be only increasing the burden. The income of the ordinary man is not increasing in proportion with the cost of living, and when you ask for authority to raise a further loan you are doing something that will make the burden of the average man still heavier. As far as I can learn flour is going up, provisions of every kind are advancing, the same applies to clothing, and when you consider all these increases in the cost of living, what do you think the people will get in return for increased taxation. You ought to be endeavouring to lighten the burden of taxation, and I admit some progress has been made in this direction, but not in proportion to the increase in the cost of living. Supposing you have reduced taxation by half a million, that is only two dollars a head for the people, but the cost of living in the last twelve months has gone up more than that, and I venture to say that if the figures were tabulated correctly it would be shown that it costs every man now fifty dollars more than formerly each year to provide for his family. Flour has increased from fifty to seventy-five cents a barrel, not to speak of the other articles which have also gone up in price. When we take clothing we find that it has increased from ten to twenty per cent., cotton goods about twenty per cent., and woollens fifteen per cent. since last year. I cannot understand the Government which professes to practise economy in expenditure, asking for authority to raise this loan when the cost of living is going up, and we are not reducing taxation in proportion. I admit that it is not very easy to arrange the finances for a program of that kind, but you are increasing the burden of taxation, when you raise another loan, and you will have demands made on it which may not be apparent now. The Honorable Member for Fortune pointed out the other day that sixty-two per cent of the last loan had been left on the hands of the Underwriters, and I think that is a very serious matter for the House to consider, and remember when dealing with the present proposition. It shows that our boast of prosperity is not so great as we would like to see it. I hope we are on the turn of the tide, but it does not seem to outside investors that Newfoundland is in such a position that they can take up her bonds as readily as they would those of Canada and other places. I think these things ought to be seriously considered. We are a long suffering people, and apparently the Government is taking advantage of them when it refuses to keep within the loan of last year.

MR. BROWN—Mr. Chairman, when last I spoke on this measure I stated I was in accord with it, and I agree with the idea today that the dock should be repaired; but I am against spending such a large amount of money that the Government proposes to spend on the dock. I claim that a dock built of wood such as the dock at the present time is good enough for the next forty years. Then why should we want to spend the money asked for in these Resolutions. It is not a question of whether the dock will stand 40 years or 100 years by such a large expenditure; but the question is are we in a position to pay it? My main objection is that when the dock is rebuilt with this large amount of money we are asked to vote the next thing some future Government will be bringing in is a Bill asking for money to purchase machinery to equip the dock because at the present time there is not machinery there to do any work worth while, and to install new machinery there would mean a further outlay of another couple of hundred thousand dollars. Regarding the money to be spent on roads, I understand from a man that he has the contract to build a road from Grand Falls to Badger. That is something that I am strictly opposed to.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—He is building that in his mind.

MR. BROWN—I am glad to hear that, because such a thing is a waste of money. The road today between Grand Falls and Botwood is worthless and if you put a road between Grand Falls and Badger you wont get any returns either. The Government has already been petitioned this year and asked for $15,000 to repair the Botwood road. I think the Prime Minister has stated that whatever bills the Government brings in they are opposed by the Opposition. I do not oppose bills merely for the sake of criticism, and if the Opposition do not criticise they are not worth being here. It is not my policy to offer opposition for the sake of criticism. I am against the spending of this money for the dock because in my estimation a wooden dock would serve us at the present time just as well as a stone dock or a concrete dock, and I am not in favor of the borrowing of any more money.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—Mr. Chairman, I would like to occupy the time of the Committee for just a minute or two to reply to some of the observations made by members on the other side of the House. They have belaboured the Bill, covering the same ground as they did the other night, and have not got any further. Some members, particularly Mr. Grimes, suggests that if we borrow more money and it is not wanted for the dock, some other interests would be after us. This Bill clearly points out that $675,000 apportioned for other purposes is to be used for the dock, and we take power to get another $500,000, if we require it. I quite agree that it is not likely we are going to use up all the money we have earmarked for roads this year, but the very fact of the money for roads being earmarked is sufficient proof that we cannot use it for any other purpose. We could borrow it from Roads Account and pay it back to Roads Account, if need be; but if we find that the dock is going to cost $1,100,000—and we have got $675,000 already—there is nothing extraordinary about asking for the additional amount required to complete the work. I may say that I had a talk with Mr. Bishop and he assured me that this sum would not be exceeded. Mr. Bishop said that Mr. Swan, who is a world wide famous dock builder, had gone through the figures and checked them over carefully and that after Mr. Swan has approved the plans in connection with this project the Company are perfectly satisfied that what they put on paper will be lived up to. He said that he may be able to surprise us as the work goes on in the reduction of expenses. On the other hand, he pointed out that if the Government were going to put on everybody they liked, the job was going to cost a couple of hundred thousand dollars more than the estimate. I assured Mr. Bishop that such would not happen; although I would not say that the members for St. John's would not be asking them to put on some men. It is only reasonable to suppose that members of the Opposition would ask to have some o f their friends and supporters put on to work, but I told him that the work would be done entirely under the contractor's jurisdiction. As I said before, we are getting a proposition as good as could be got for the money to be expended, and the amendment offered by the Opposition, namely, that we should not borrow five hundred thousand dollars but go in debt and come here by and by and look for money to meet any deficit that might be incurred, is ridiculous.

Somebody has said that the money is all there and it has to be spent. But in this case we are not going to spend any more, and we are not going to borrow any more than is actually required to pay the Bishop people and whoever he may arrange with to do the work. Now I quite sympathise with Mr. Brown's views on this matter. He takes the hard and fast stand that the dock is good enough, and we should not raise so much money. Everybody has given consideration to it. Now what Mr. Hibbs said entirely disagrees with that. He says that if you are going to build the dock build it in comfort. The general concensus of opinion has been that we should make a concrete dock and make a good job of it while we are at it. He, I think, still calls the concrete work essential to have a good dock. That is the reason why we propose making this arrangement. There was one other point brought up by the member for St. Barbe. He said that we ought to employ Mr. Hawco to superintend the dock. I don't know whether he meant he should take charge of the work, but at least he thought that Mr. Hawco should have a very important position. He may be a very excellent man, but I would not care to leave the superintendence of the dock construction to Mr. Hawco or any man of his experience. The only work I know that Mr. Hawco was the supervisor of was at Old Days Pond, Bonavista. Mr. Hawco was a year or more in charge of that work. I don't say that he was to blame, but there was a proposition to carry ships into a pond that was 10 or 12 feet above the sea level. When the channel is cut from the pond to the sea the pond will empty out and another pond has then to be dug. I say I don't know that Mr. Hawco was the engineer, I don't think that he was, but it is doubtful if the best expert advice on engineering was obtained in this connection. In Mr. Bishop we have got a good reliable engineer and contractor. He will give us the same deal exactly on the dock as he gave to the Armstrong Whitworth Co. The Leader of the Opposition laughed at the idea of entering into a proposition of this kind. Contracts covering costs of eight million dollars have been carried through by these same people, and under the same arrangements as we propose to make with them.

HON. THE LEADER OF THE OPPOSITION—Mr. Chairman, before the bill passes I want to give my support to the resolutions of Mr. Halfyard that number three of the bill be deleted. There are a great many reasons why this should be. We were told yesterday by the Member for Fortune Bay that 62 p.c. which this country had underwritten of the loan was still in the hands of the underwriters. If that is the case it looks as if the Newfoundland Government loan will not be much sought after by the public. There are a great many corporations and individuals who are looking for investments to-day. And usually the issue of a Government or a municipality it looked upon as the best security for money. And the fact that two and a half million of dollars of that loan is still in the hands of the underwriters shows that this country is not looked upon very favourably in reference to its securities. Now the result is going to be this. If the Government decides to raise another loan of five hundred thousand dollars the first difficulty it will have is that the brokers and the underwriters will not want to underwrite the loan, and if you do induce them to underwrite it they will do it for about ninety or ninety-two. If this is underwritten for ninety that will mean that if the Government borrows five hundred thousand dollars they will get four hundred and fifty thousand dollars on which they will have to pay five per cent. on five hundred thousand. I know a concern in Canada that had some money to invest. This was an insurance company that invested five hundred thousand dollars in utility bonds. When a concern like an insurance company invests five hundred thousand dollars of its surplus capital in a utility and leave Newfoundland Govt. bonds out of the market it looks as if we are not in a position to float another loan. Now according to the estimates that we have placed before us by the Minister of Finance and Customs our bonded debt at the 30th of June, 1925, is $66,404,000. Practically sixty six and a half millions and if you intend to borrow another half a million that will make the debt 67 millions. Then there is the two millions for the roads which you have yet to raise and that will make the loan $69,000,000 plus ten million guaranteed to the Humber project. That is in the vicinity of eighty million dollars which the people of this country will have to shoulder. The population of the country today is about two hundred thousand men, women and children, and that means over $300 per head for every man, woman and child that is in the colony of Newfoundland. There is no necessity to take the authority for raising this loan. It is stated here that the amount of two millions is set aside for the construction of highways during the next one, two or three years, so why not take authority to transfer some of that money for this matter if you need it. If you say that it is already earmarked for roads it is a quite easy matter to make it so that you can utilize any sum that you require out of the two millions and save the trouble of raising another loan and save this country the humility of having to place a loan on the market and sell it far below the value. Now some of the cities of Canada have five per cent. loans that they raised at par, and the Newfoundland Government bonds cannot be sold on the market at several points below par. Now all the property which is in this country is responsible for the debt which is held by the bond holders, and it is a serious matter when we come to continue to borrow on an overburdened people. We have not any resources that we can expect to develop and make an addition to our revenue. Our per capita debt is not larger than some other countries, but as I said before these countries have their resources. Lots of room for people to come to their countries to produce things. After all a country's wealth depends upon the things that are produced.

It is no difference how small the thing might be. Every egg that a hen lays helps to improve the value of a country. Everything that is produced is what goes to make the success of the country. A country like Canada has a bigger field for development, and therefore the debt that looks large to them looks nothing as large as it looks to us, as we have nothing in sight to develop that we can depend upon to increase our revenue. As far as the tourist policy goes other countries have developed a considerable amount of revenue from it and it has been good value to these countries and provinces of Canada, but the tourist traffic is a thing that has to be worked up. Nobody can tell whether the tourists will come to this country or not. It is all very good to go and spend two millions of dollars on roads, but it is a venture that any country might take if it can afford it. It is not a venture for Newfoundland to take. We have to go slowly to see what the result will be. Everybody who comes to this country has to come by water and our country is different from other countries where people go for pleasure and rest, because in most of these countries there is a certain climate that can be depended upon. If a man goes to Florida or California he knows what kind of weather he is going to get for two or three months, but if he comes to Newfoundland he might find a summer like I have seen here where scarcely a day for the season can a person go out without an overcoat, and then it rains two or three days every week. When the tourists once come here and find these conditions they go away and they tell others what the weather is like and these will not come here, and that is the big drawback. I would like to tell the Hon. Minister of Justice that the climate of Bermuda is better than Newfoundland. If the Hon. Minister of Justice wants to make some remarks he will get the opportunity when I have finished. I am really serious and I am surprised that the Hon. Minister should say what he has said here tonight. He says that the climate of Newfoundland is equal to the climate of Bermuda. Was the Hon. Minister of Justice ever in Bermuda? No? Well I was.

Now this is too nonsensical to talk about as Bermuda has a climate where there is not a day during certain seasons but the sun shines. Of course they have a rainy season, but you do not catch tourists going there when that is on. There is a certain period there when the sun shines every day for months. Now I am only stating facts as we are going into this venture. Now if a man has ten thousand dollars to spare and goes down on the Stock Exchange and loses it is gone and that is all there is about it. But if he has borrowed the money and lost it, where does he stand? If a man borrows money and invests in say C. P. R. stock and it goes down, he loses. That is just what we are doing now. If we had two millions to spare I would say, yes go on and spend it, but when we have to borrow it, it is a different matter. I am talking about this money for highways, but it is relevant to the matter before the Chair, and when I come to the question of the Dock I will give some further information on it. I will say right now that I think we can get a contractor to do the job for $500,000. As I was saying, we cannot gamble this two millions as a venture, and it should be included in the Bill that some of the amount be taken for the work in connection with the Dock.

If you are going to build a dock such as spoken of this evening, with deepening and widening, you will have to get improved machinery for the making of repairs. The steamer Snyg was here yesterday. A few weeks ago she was damaged and put into St. Pierre and the underwriters had to get a steamer to tow her to Halifax to have repairs made. When she got to Halifax it was found that the propellor she had on board would not fit and a new one had to be cast. It was cast right there on the dock. Now if that happened here the ship would have to wait till the propellor was cast in England or New Glasgow and brought out here. Now if you spend one and a quarter millions in enlarging the Dock you will have to go further and provide equipment, and so will want more money. The Honorable the Prime Minister said this afternoon that the estimate by Bishop & Co. was a reasonable one. I have been trying to figure it out as well as I can with practical people, and I cannot discover what is going to cost $1,200,000. Now the first thing to be built is a coffer dam to dry out the dock. I understand that when repairs were being made to the "Metagama" a coffer dam was fitted tight to her side, and it cost only $20,000. If you lay that amount out you have that part of the job completed. Then you got to take up four or five feet of earth, and I think the present concrete floor could be blasted out and the whole taken up by the dredge. That will not cost many thousands, then take the earth away from the sides in connection with the concrete work, and all you need do is put up the cribbing and pour in the concrete. The lumber for the cribbing will not cost any more than $30.00 a thousand and will take about forty thousand feet. Now take the extreme amount of cement say five thousand barrels at $3.00 a barrel, which would be brought in duty free, $15,000; three thousand tons of sand at $2.00 a ton, and ten or fifteen thousand tons of stone, which you have already broken up, and which can easily be carted up to the dock. All this will not cost much more than $100,000.00. Plenty of ordinary labour can be found at $3.00 per day, and it would take a lot to cost a million and a half. The steel sheet-piling is estimated at $72,000.00 and still we are a long ways short of the million and a quarter, and the tiling is one of the most expensive of the lot. But still you are giving $70,000.00 to Bishop & Co. for merely overseeing the work. My contention is that local men can do the job as efficiently as any other, because after all there is nothing much to it. It is nothing more to put concrete into the side of the dock than into a house. Supposing it even cost $28,000.00 for the coffer dam, you have still a long way to go to make up the million and a quarter. I think it is a big mistake on the part of the Government to bring in two engineers who are strange to the country, and know nothing of the existing conditions and ask them to make an estimate. It may be alright to ask them to give an estimate, but the Government ought to go further and ask local men to figure on the job. We have men here who will have to do the work after all, while the other is merely supervising, and is not so capable, and will not be on the job half the time. I claim now that before the Government enters into an agreement to pay this $70,000.00 they should give some consideration to practical local contractors like Mr. John Taylor, or Mr. Butler, who can do the work as efficiently as any engineer you may bring in from outside. I feel sure that a contract could be entered into to do the estimated repairs for at least $500,000. Who is getting the rest of the money? A strengthening of the place at a cost of $25,000 is quite sufficient for this country to undertake at present. The whole thing savours of squandermania.

When you think it over it is something worth while considering. You are going to pay seventy thousand dollars to a man for overseeing a job of this kind when you can get hundreds of extra good men who could well look after the same work for ten thousand dollars. So I think that the Government should consider well what they are doing before rushing into an agreement—it is no contract—with Bishop and Company to spend our money. The Government simply says to Bishop and Company, if you think you do not want as much as $1,200,000 to do the work, go ahead anyhow and spend it, it is our money and when you have the job through we will hand you out your $70,000 for overseeing the work. Then you come along and in this Bill you ask us to give you authority to go out and float another loan for $500,000 to complete the job. Now if you would let that job out on contract to-day I feel quite sure that you would get people to undertake it for $500,000 and glad enough to get the opportunity, and would make money out of it, but to give a stranger who comes here a blank cheque to spend $1,200,000 of our money to repair something that originally cost $600,000 is ridiculous. In view of the condition of our country's finances abroad, and in view of the fact that sixty two per cent. of the loan already raised this year is still in the hands of the underwriters, I think that the Government ought think well before they decide to put another loan on the markets, because they would be up against great difficulty of finding brokers to underwrite it, and if they did get another loan underwritten they would not get any more than 95, in view of the two and a half millions that are still for sale, and for which there seem to be no buyers. I am offering this to the Government in all sincerity, and I believe that the dock job can be done very much cheaper than is estimated, so that there is no necessity of incurring a further liablity on the people of this country by seeking authority to float another loan.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Mr. Chairman, just a few words more for the purpose of an apology for the Leader of the Opposition than anything else. As one who has sat in Opposition for several years, I can understand the viewpoint from which an honourable member on that side speaks, and on this occasion the remarks of the Leader of the Opposition are a bit too transparent. It is all very well for those of us who know, but strangers coming in the House might not appreciate the part being played by Mr. Hickman, who is such a well known sound business man, and might not know that he was not at all serious, and the best proof that he was not serious is the vein in which he spoke. As a matter of fact he did not touch the main point of the subject under discussion at all, but merely, by way of a painful duty, registered his opposition to the Bill. When the House was in Committee on the Dry Dock Resolutions he recorded his strong objection to this idea of encouraging the raising of money and predicted all the desperate things that were going to happen if a further loan was raised, because we are not going to follow out the custom that has prevailed within recent years, namely, of going out spending the Colony's money, and, having spent it, coming back looking for authority from this House. The honourable member was not quite serious when he dished out this kind of talk and this bemoaning tale about the frightful climate in this country. As it is quite possible that such a statement regarding our climatic conditions might get into the newspapers, when the actual facts are quite different, I think a word by way of explanation is due.

MR. HICKMAN—There are no papers that publish what we say.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Therefore, there cannot be anything in what the honourable member says. He admits himself that no paper will publish what he says. I remember when some of us sat on the Opposition side of the House for five or six years and it is a funny thing about it that, although not having the Government, two papers in the town used to print what we said. But I do feel for the honourable member seeing that his own paper will not print what he says.

MR. HICKMAN — Prior to the last session of the House the newspapers were paid to publish all the debates.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Not the Opposition papers. They were never paid; and no paper was ever paid to publish the daily synopsis, as that was done by the daily papers themselves. However, I do think that, in justice to the Opposition, a little enterprise ought to be shown by the paper that I thought was supporting the cause of the Opposition in getting together the important remarks of the Leader of the Opposition this evening for publication, as I have no doubt that they would be very interesting reading for the huge number of Newfoundlanders in Boston who are arranging to-day to have an "Old Home Week Excursion" to their native land this year and who, I am sure, will be delighted to know that our climate has become so changed. If there is any one thing I am strong on it is this. Whatever else we may lack we certainly have a climate that cannot be improved upon during our summer season.

MR. HICKMAN—You are strong on drawing red herrings across the trail. That is one thing I know that you are strong on.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—That is not to be wondered at because I feed largely on herring at this particular season; but yet when the question of tourist traffic is borne in mind, it is hardly a fair way to discuss and encourage this tourist policy by slamming your own country. There is a common expression, which is apropps to-day, namely, "It's a dirty bird that fouls its own nest." I do not apply this to the Leader of the Opposition; but to one who does not get out and boost his own country. We forget—and I am sure that Mr. Hickman will be one of the first to recognise this fact—that the march of modern events is the boosting of one's own country. With regard to this idea about looking for tourist traffic, I might say that every place to-day is taking on a new vein of thought in this direction. People are boosting their own countries and their own attractions everywhere, and that is the secret of the tourist traffic, and there is not a man in this country who knows that better than Mr. Hickman himself. What is the history of his own business While he was talking this evening about the absence of attractions here and suggesting as if nobody would come here there is a big extension going on to his own business premises—and I am proud to compliment him on it—right in line with this very idea in connection with the modern growth of tourist traffic.

MR. HICKMAN—That is not for tourist traffic roads; that is for the displaying of motor cars for our own people.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—"I

thank thee Jew for the word." Out of the mouth of the gentleman himself have I got the suggestion that with the present administration in power people are satisfied that we are going to have better times in this country and people are providing for more motor cars to be used by our own people. Just a word about the dock. No one knows better than the honourable gentleman himself that with regard to the arrangement to be entered into that it is hardly likely to be an arrangement on the lines that he indicates. He gets up here to-day and he suggests that this is a programme in which the firm receiving the contract will be told "bale out all the money you can and when you are done spending we will hand you out $70,000."

Just as if the firms were to be told: "Here get busy, bail out all you can, and when you get the thing going there is the $70,000." We are surrounded now by quite a different atmosphere from the time when this kind of thing was done. This is not a question of a scramble. This is a question in which the Government simply comes down here, and they say that repairs have to be made to the dock, and this is not denied on any side, and that the necessity of keeping the dock open is not denied on any side of the House, and that the necessity of fixing the dock up is not denied on any side. And having admitted all these principles, there is only one course left open. And no one knows better than the honourable gentleman that you can't make a contract for repairs, that all you ever get will be what is given in this case. We get the estimate, we get the figures from a man who simply says "I have a reputation to keep and to make. I have a reputation here that preceeded me before coming here, and I estimate that this job will not exceed a certain figure." That is the best you can expect, and as far as that is concerned I will say that for any figure, whether it be less or more, whether it exceeded that figure which according to estimates and all information we can get, and the checking up of the engineers can't do. So far as I am concerned our fees are so much. What happens every day Take the honorable gentleman's own case. Let him go and add to his buildings up there. Why the man who draws the plans gets the percentage fees on the cost. If the same man draws the plans and supervises the work also his percentage is increased. And so far as this proposition is concerned the fees are simply substituted for percentage charge. I suppose it is hardly likely to expect Mr. Bishop to do it for a gift. It is hardly likely to expect that man to come down here and to say that if your finances are short, don't raise a loan, I will give it to you as a present.

Now there is a lot of talk about raising a loan. The man has got to be paid his bill. We are seeking authority to be in a position to raise a loan if required. In any event it is only authority to raise a loan not exceeding five hundred thousand dollars. The honorable gentleman talks about the difficulty of raising loans. He talks about a portion of our last loan being left on the underwriter's hands. It is not uncommon in the Old Country to have 90 p.c. of the loan left on the underwriters' hands. Now as far as that part is concerned everyone knows this. The best answer that can possibly be given to the talk about the credit of the Colony is that the Government was able to go over and raise a loan. The Leader of the Opposition seriously thinks that we have arrived at a stage in this country when we are so poor that we can't repair our own dock. As far as I am personally concerned I have absolutely every confidence that apart from the direct results coming to us by way of the labour as regards this road building there will be a great big portion coming back to ourselves. But apart from these returns I look forward with confidence to the fact that we are going to benefit considerably in the way of visitors to this country. We must get this trade. Here we are situated right along side that great big republic of the United States. There are thousands of people there who do nothing but travelling. They have no Bermuda to go to, for at summer time Bermuda is no good to them. We have got everything to attract them. There is not a man in this House who thinks that we cannot offer something that these people want, something different. They want to come here and take advantage of our extraordinary summer air. There is not the same appeal in the ruggedness about the country to us as there is to them. Sometimes we don't appreciate the beauties of nature that God has surrounded this country with. They want to get and can't get so readily as we do the things that we despise and turn down. There are other attractions in the way of fishing and things of that kind. And ask the Hon. member does he consider this. If we only had a fraction of the travelling public available it would more than justify this expenditure. But the Hon. Member is not serious. He is only saying this, not so much that the people may think that he is serious, but he is saying this for the purpose of going on record as being opposed to the Bill. The Hon. Member is not serious, and he is less serious still when he suggests here that the Government can do other than what they are doing in these resolutions. I stated the other day, and I repeat it now, that a decision must be made because every day means not only a loss in the sense of those who are immediately concerned in the regular dock labour, but it is also deferring a chance to include others who can't get any work. There are two things before us today. There are a certain number of people who are concerned as to what is going to be the future of the dock. And in the second place there are other people who are anxiously hoping for some opportunity for work to turn up. The Government is doing the only thing that it can do. We have got to get this work started at once. We have got in touch with the best firms that we can get. We have got the public reports that they made. And now we seek authority to go on with it. As a matter of fact what really happened is this. The conduct of the Government is so extraordinary, so different from what has been the practice in the past, it has been so abnormally honest, so perfectly frank that as no other way can be found, and as something must be said, the only thing that the opposition can say is that it is too bad that we have to raise money again. The Government has not said that they have got to raise five cents. We don't know. We only say that the outside estimate indicates that we may have to get a loan. But it is only when the Bills come to be paid that we will know that. The Hon. gentleman knows that as far as the $500,000 is concerned that we can handle that. The Prime Minister has fortunately got the confidence of the business and the banking institutions behind him. He does not necessarily have to go on the market and borrow a loan, he can get a temporary loan overnight from any of the banks, he can telephone for it. That is the confidence I got in the feeling that is abroad in regards to the changed conditions of the country. The Hon. gentleman knows quite well that conditions today are such that the poor people are looking forward to the future with hope, and he himself is looking with hope and with much more confidence than if his own administration were returned to power. He says to himself "It is one good thing to know that now that I am leading the Opposition my business will be better under the administration now in power, than if my own party had been returned.

MR. HICKMAN—There are a few points that I want to make clear. Now there is no doubt about the fact that every member sitting in this House and every member who has listened to the Hon. Minister of Justice, and we are all well used to listening to him, we all know that he is very good at drawing a red herring across the trail. Now I said when I stood on my feet before that I was serious, and the Hon. Minister of Justice said that I was not serious. Now you have my word against his. I am very serious. I am very serious because I don't like to see any more money borrowed in this country, and I don't like to see a loan thrown on this country for which there is no market. Now the Hon. Member errs when he made the remark that "a dirty bird fouls its own nest." That does not fit me. A remark like that is like water on a duck's back as far as I am concerned. It might fit the Hon. Minister himself.

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Any man who knocks his own country is that.

MR. HICKMAN—I did not knock my own country. What I said was this. I said that we have summers in this country that cannot be depended upon. If you go down to Bermuda you get three or four months and every single day the sun shines. There are summers in Newfoundland that we don't get much sunshine in. You cannot depend upon the tourist traffic. If a man comes down here and strikes a bad summer, he is going back and advertise this among his friends. We are bound to have our bad summers. And what I say is that while it may not drive people entirely from this country it is going to have a bad effect upon the tourist traffic. You cannot look for the same volume of people as they get in Bermuda, Sanfrancisco or Florida. You are going to spend two millions without knowing whether you are going to get results or not.

We have plenty roads radiating from St. John's to satisfy the number of tourists we can expect to get during the next few years. There are roads to our salmon pools. If a man wants to go fishing in Salmonier, where some of the members of the Government catch three or four hundred salmon before breakfast and haul some of them in by the tail and a great many other ways, he can get there by road, and then it is a place where you can get two or three hundred salmon a day or several hundred a week, and I think that if this is the case that you have roads enough at the present time for the tourists that come until such time as we work up the tourist traffic. Now what I contend is this. Those who come here have to have a place to stop at. We must have a hotel in St. John's first, and this place where we have the hotel must be the centre, and you must build all the roads so that they will all radiate from St. John's. The Minister of Justice wants the hotel in St. John's East. I say that St. John's East is the worst place to build the hotel because if you go for a motor drive up the Waterford Valley in the evening and everything is nice and fine, and when you come down to go around Quidi Vidi you will probably find the fog coming in and then you get chilled to the bone. And therefore I say that although the member wants the hotel in St.

John's East it is not the place to have it. The proper place to have the hotel is up near that place where you have the liquor saloon in the West End. And the Hon. Minister of Justice knows in his own heart and mind, and since he is a legal man he must have a practical mind, and he has been born and bred in Newfoundland, and most Newfoundlanders are practical, and he knows very well that the estimate on the dock is not correct. He knows very well in his heart and soul that the estimate for the dock is not correct when they say that it is going to cost one million one hundred thousand dollars. Now the Hon. Minister of Justice says that we are delaying the chance to give the men a chance of employment. There have been hundreds of men walking around St. John's for months.

They have been walking around since January and have been compelled to go and get the dole and have their sense of independence taken away, and then how can the Hon. Minister come in here and say that we are keeping these men from getting employment because we are discussing the measure before the House. This is what the Hon. Minister has said and I am only bearing out his argument. He said that we were deferring the chances of employment. We would like to see the employment given. I think that the Hon. Minister's argument falls very short after men have been walking around the city look for work so long. I think that the Government should have given these men employment long ago. What might they have given them to do. They might have built one or two bonded warehouses in St. John's. It could have given the men work since January. Instead of that the Government has given out money and got nothing in return. The Hon. Minister says that we would have to borrow the money to build the warehouse. But where did you get the money you paid out in dole, I say that it would have been better for the Government to have built the warehouses than to have given the men money for which we could not get any returns. You say that the money that was handed out for the dole was charity. But if you had built these warehouses it would not have been necessary for this dole. The money was taken from the "chest" anyway. I say that the Hon. Minister's remarks fall very short when he says that we are deferring the chances of employment. We know how necessary this employment is and there is nobody who would more like to see the men get employment. I give all the employment that I can to the men of St. John's. Now the Hon. Member knows that the present Government has not got the confidence of the people today. The Hon. Minister says that the people have confidence. I do not know whether they have or not. A matter of four hundred votes in the election last year would have given us the same majority that the Government has today. I do not think that the Government has the confidence of the people as they think they have. I would like to see an election taken in the East End and see what majority the Hon. Member would get. However, I suppose that we will soon see. I suppose that we will have an election soon. Of course I am only taking the Prime Minister's word for it. I had thought seriously of settling down to business for the next few years because I thought that we would not have a general election before the next three or four years. However, we are not afraid of a general election, and when the time comes we will not be afraid of what will happen. We know what confidence the people would show in the Government if they got a chance. The Hon. Minister said that they were afraid to build the dock. Does the Hon. Minister say that he did not say it? I wrote it down myself. Perhaps the reporter can tell us what you said. You made these remarks about being afraid to build the dock. That is what you said. I wrote it down myself. The Hon. Minister says that I wrote an article that was detrimental to the country. I never wrote anything that was to the detriment of the country. This is the country where I belong and where I was born, and I intend to stay here, so that there is no reason why I should say anything that is to the detriment of the country. I think that it is the best country in the world. The Hon. Member says that he will bring the article into the House and read it. That reminds me of something that I saw in the telegram. I will read it for the House. It is reference to the passenger steamer that the Government has given the contract for to the Dutch. I will read the article to the House:—

London, March 10.—"British ship builders while still smarting under the loss of large contracts to German shipyards have had salt rubbed into their wounds by the Newfoundland Government. Newfoundland has ordered a steamer from a Dutch firm which in turn placed an order for castings with the Skoda Works of Czecho-Slovakia."

But what I say is this that the Government have made a mistake by going too fast, and the Government ought to take their time now and see that no further mistakes are made. You ought to try and reduce the expenditure instead of putting another $500,000 on the market which you can't find purchasers for. The Hon. Member must certainly understand that, because he knows if he is in touch with financial matters that any loan in Great Britain or the United States is taken up 24 hours after it is put on the market. I know that is so.

HON. MR. SULLIVAN—Can you account for the fact that the Australian Government put a loan of six million pounds on the British market and 92 p.c. of it was left on the underwriters' hands. It was not left on the underwriters' hands because of the insolvency of Australia, but it was left on their hands because the people over in England could get better yield for their money. 92 p.c. of six millions was left on their hands. They could get better interest elsewhere. You could purchase good bonds payable in New York that would yield 5 p.c. in London. And for the information of the Leader of the Opposition I will tell him that if we wanted 10 millions we could have got it. They were not afraid of the credit of Newfoundland.

MR. HICKMAN—I can only take what the Minister of Justice has said about the American loan. I have no reason to contradict it. But that does not get away from the fact. I don't know what interest was paid on the American loan. It must have been 4½ p.c. That is what the most of the Government loans are raised at. The Canadian Government put one on the market at 4½ p.c. The Quebec loan was at 4½ p.c. The Australian loan was at 4¾. Well then you know that you cannot expect a man who has money to invest, to go into the market and pick up a 4½ p.c. loan as readily as he would a 5 p.c. loan. And the Province of Quebec are getting more for their loans than we are getting for our Newfoundland loan, and I say that even if you have to float another loan you will not get it except at a very small price. Perhaps in the vicinity of 90 or 92.

Now I only just want to make myself clear in reference to some of the things that were said by the Hon.

Minister of Justice, and I must tell the Hon. Minister that I have as much confidence in Newfoundland as he has or anybody else. But I don't think that we are going to find our feet while any Government continues borrowing. And whatever the object might be. If the object might be to cripple the country. I am not saying the Hon. Minister has that in mind. But if it is in the mind of anybody and we are absorbed by any other country we won't have enough to pay the interest.

MR. DUFF—Mr. Chairman, in regard to the rebuilding of this Dock: Although we know that it is entirely for the benefit of St. John's, and that it will never pay, and the whole country has to furnish the wherewith-all, yet we are not opposed to it. There is no question that this country needs a dock to repair shipping, as we are placed out in the mouth of the St. Lawrence between the Old World and the New, where all shipping has to pass; and St. John's happens to be the most suitable port for this purpose.

All the Opposition asks is that you erase Section 3 from these resolutions when you desire the power to raise further loans. If you have the need for more coin for this purpose, take a part of the two million dollars you have earmarked for the "Tourist Roads."

St. John's has to-day about 1200 families getting the "Dole" they have all the Government institutions and patronage and now, in this Dock, they will have the opportunity to give their idle work that the remainder of the country has to pay for, and, although we have very needy people in the Outports, they will neither get work nor dole.

It is scarcely necessary to tell the Government and Prime Minister, in particular, that they went to the country during the last Election with a very different idea altogether. I can assure you that this country to-day is very much disappointed in the Prime Minister, and, I may add, I am very much disappointed myself because I expected something altogether different. We looked upon the Prime Minister as one that desired to lead us up to higher things; I could picture in the words of our school book as "A youth who bore through snow and ice

A banner with that strange device—
Excelsior."

Since our school boy days, we discovered that Excelsior is a thin shaving that is used for packing bottles and furniture. The Mirage of the Sahara Desert is no more deceptive than the Prime Minister's pre-election promises.

To-day, with a debt of 66½ million dollars as a millstone round our necks we are asked to support this "wild cat" scheme of Tourist Roads. We have been in this country a long time, and why they did not discover before, this profitable Tourist Traffic, beats me. Who is the father of this mighty thought? We are told there are hundreds of wealthy people ready to come down to our shores and enjoy our climate—how absurd!

It cannot be said of me that I do not appreciate my native land, because I do. I love her, snow storms and frost even, and she was and should be the best poor man's country in the world; but the fact that we are a population of one-quarter million people in debt 66½ million dollars and still piling up, gives us food for reflection, and the idea of Tourists helping to lessen our financial troubles is most ridiculous. I should like to be convinced that there was the slightest hope of the Tourist Traffic helping out our finances, and I would "throw up my cap" for it; but, as I see no hope of this, I would suggest that you scratch out Section 3 from these Resolutions, and, if you need more money to complete your Dock, take it from your two million Road Loan.

The Dock is necessary and you cannot have it too good, although we know beforehand, it will never be a paying proposition. The amount estimated, $70,000, for the supervision of the Dock repairs seems to me an immense amount, and I feel that a great deal of cement work and inside repairs could be done by our own engineers and so lessen this amount. It is said of the people of the Shetland Islands. "They make a precarious living by washing each other's clothes." We are somewhat similarly situated, as our apparent prosperity comes from continuous loans. This Government will not fall down politically on their sins of Omission, but rather on their sins of Commission. They have the Liquor Commission, Railway Commission, Road Commission and the Lord knows how many more to follow.

The Road Commission only means that the work of "Road Boards" of the Outports will be confined to the City and they will get the pay as they get practically everything else in the City.

"Road Boards" way of distributing money with little, in many instances to show for it, does not appeal to me. At the same time we have many poor old folk around this Island that depend upon such. Then we are informed that there are going to be imported men to show us how to make roads, but I would inform this house if you were in Cape Breton, Prince Edward Island, or even portions of Massachusetts to-day you would need snow shoes on to get over their soft and muddy roads, and yet our Government would go there for road makers. A former Government did something similar when they sent to Winnipeg for a man to handle our Railway Service and ships. We discovered we made a mistake and I am glad to see to-day that Newfoundlanders are managing our Railway; men that know the jibboom from the rudder.

Then again the latest we hear is that the Government is going to guarantee the building of hotels. Hotels is a venture for private citizens and are not for Governments. Former Governments did too much of that kind of thing and did not get or deserve the good will of the people.

I ask the Government to consider their ways and be wise and not be carried away with their visionary schemes that will land us further in debt, and for Heaven's sake don't ask for any more loans.

MR. ASHBOURNE—Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the Honourable the Prime Minister if any contract has been entered into.

HON. THHE PRIME MINISTER—Absolutely none.

Mr. Speaker resumed the Chair.

The Chairman from the Committee reported that they had considered the matter to them referred, and had passed the said Bill without amendment.

On motion this Report was received.

MR. HALFYARD—Mr. Speaker, on the motion for the adoption of the report, I beg to move an amendment, that section 3 be deleted from the Bill.

MR. HICKMAN—I beg to second the motion.

Whereupon the House divided and there appeared in favor of the amendment:

Mr. Hickman,
Mr. Halfyard,
Mr. Hibbs,
Mr. Grimes,
Mr. Scammell,
Mr. Brown,
Mr. Randell,
Mr. Duff,
Mr. Ashbourne, (9)

and against it:

Hon. the Prime Minister,
Hon. the Colonial Secretary,
Hon. the Minister of Justice,
Hon. the Minister of Posts,
Hon. Mr. Sullivan,
Hon. Mr. Long,
Hon. Mr. Cramm,
Hon. Mr. Bradley,
The Minister of Agriculture,
The Minister Marine & Fisheries,
The Minister Public Works,
Mr. Moore,
Mr. Lake,
Mr. Sinnott,
Mr. Power,
Mr. Puddester,
Mr. Browne. (17)

So it passed in the negative.

Whereupon on the motion for adoption of the report the House divided, when there appeared in its favor:

Hon. the Prime Minister,
Hon. the Colonial Secretary,
Hon. the Minister of Justice,
Hon. the Minister of Posts,
Hon. Mr. Sullivan,
Hon. Mr. Long,
Hon. Mr. Cramm,
Hon. Mr. Bradley,
The Minister of Agriculture,
The Minister Marine & Fisheries,
The Minister Public Works,
Mr. Moore,
Mr. Lake,
Mr. Sinnott,
Mr. Power,
Mr. Puddester,
Mr. Browne, (17)

and against it:

Mr. Hickman,
Mr. Halfyard,
Mr. Hibbs,
Mr. Grimes,
Mr. Scammell,
Mr. Brown,
Mr. Randell,
Mr. Duff,
Mr. Ashbourne. (9)

So it passed in the affirmative and was ordered accordingly. On motion it was ordered that the said Bill be read a third time on to-morrow.

Second reading of Bill "An Act to Amend Chapter 83 Consolidated Statutes 1916 (Third Series) and Acts in Amendment thereof."

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Mr. Speaker, it is not my purpose to do more than suggest that as the Bill is only now being distributed, it be deferred till to-morrow This Bill is to amend the Judicature Act in certain respects, which I will deal with more fully tomorrow. The amendments have been requested by the Rules Committee which was appointed by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court. There is one point I would like to call the attention of lay members to, and that is the qualification of jurors. Alterations have been made in the status of Grand Jurors in the sense of the qualifications being an increase rental and property value. It has been found in practise that almost everyone at present is on the Grand Jury, and this alteration will reduce the number. As to petty jurors, instead of having to serve the whole term, they will now be called on the same as other trial jurors. The balance of the Bill is in connection with the duties of sheriffs, etc. It has been found that considerable expense is placed on the debtor where processes have to be served outside St. John's, as there is no allowance now made for it, and the debtor has to pay for the sending of the special man, it is now the intention to ask for an amount covering the serving of processes. This will obviate the need of sending a man from here to places such as Grand Falls or Corner Brook, and allow the work to be done by someone on the spot. The allowance for mileage is slightly increased as it has been found at present that the man who has to pay for the serving of the process incurs further debt.

Pursuant to order and on motion of Hon. the Minister of Justice the Bill entitled "An Act to Amend Chapter 83 Consolidated Statutes 1916 (Third Series) and Acts in Amendmend thereof" was read a second time and it was ordered that the said Bill be deferred to a Committee of the Whole House on tomorrow.

Second reading of Bill "An Act to Amend Chapter 4 of the Consolidated Statutes (Third Series) entitled 'Of Legislative Disabilities and the Vacation of Seats in the House of Assembly.'"

Deferred.

Second reading of Bill "An Act Respecting a Tax on Certain Incomes."

Deferred.

Second reading of Bill "An Act to Amend the Terra Nova Sulphite Company Act, 1920.

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Mr. Speaker, this is a matter which I will also leave to the House as to the second reading or not. Briefly the Bill amounts to this. The Terra Nova Sulphite Company made a contract with this House in 1920 and undertook to erect mill and certain other work at Glovertown, Terra Nova. Certain mills have been constructed, and the Anglo Development Co. took them over. Under the Bill the Mill had to be operated at Alexander Bay, but now in lieu of the expenditure there an equal expenditure will be gone into elsewhere. The Anglo Company have made additions to the plant at Grand Falls to even this up. As to the labor there will be the same amount in connection with cutting and barking at Glovertown. The wood is then hauled over the railroad and manufactured at Grand Falls. The plant at Glovertown will remain in the same condition until matters are such that until what was originally intended can be done. If the House is willing I think we might take the second reading, and if members wish to debate the matter they can do so in Committee. As far as the Government is concerned, we are making the best of a bad bargain. The original company went out of business, and the question was whether we should give the other the rights at Grand Falls instead of Glovertown.

Pursuant to order and on motion of Hon. the Minister of Justice the Bill entitled "An Act to Amend the Terra Nova Sulphite Company Act 1920" was read a second time and it was ordered that the said Bill be referred to a Committee of the Whole House on tomorrow.

Mr. Speaker informed the House that he had received a message from the Legislative Council acquainting the House of Assembly that they had passed the Bill entitled "An Act to Provide for the Construction, Reconstruction and Maintenance of Highroads," with some amendments, in which they request the concurrence of the House of Assembly.

On motion the said amendments were read a first time, and it was ordered that they be read a second time on tomorrow.

The Minister of Agriculture and Mines gave notice that he would on to-morrow ask leave to introduce a Bill entitled "An Act respecting the records of 'Pure Bred Animals.'"

MR. ASHBOURNE—Mr. Speaker I would like to ask the Hon. Minister of Posts & Telegraphs if he is aware that Colonel Ross has made any report to the Government in connection with Postal affairs?

HON. MINISTER OF POSTS AND TELEGRAPHS — I understand that Colonel Ross will make his report from Toronto. Colonel Ross left for home a few days ago. His health has not been good of late. He will send along his report as soon as it is ready, and then I will table it.

It was moved and seconded that when the House rises, it adjourn until tomorrow afternoon at three of the clock.

The House then adjourned accordingly.

FRIDAY, March 27, 1925.

The House met at three of the clock in the afternoon, pursuant to adjournment.

MR. POWER—Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present a petition from the residents of Grand and Little River, Codroy Valley, asking that special attention be given the roads in that section. It is an important farming district and with the promise of new markets being opened and the Government paying attention to the roads the people are hopeful of extending their agricultural activities. I therefore ask that this petition be given every consideration and referred to the Department to which it relates.

HON. MR. LONG—Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the honourable member for the District of Burgeo and LaPoile, Mr. Chambers, I beg leave to present a petition from the residents of Cul-de-Sac asking that that place be made a port of call for the Glencoe. The petition is signed by practically all the residents of the place and I ask that it be referred to the Railway Commission for their consideration.

HON. THE COLONIAAL SECRETARY—Mr. Speaker, I beg to lay on the table of the House the report of the Cashier of the Government Savings Bank for the year ending Dec. 31st, 1924.

Mr. Warren gave notice of questions.

Pursuant to notice and leave granted, and on motion of the Minister of Agriculture and Mines, the Bill entitled "An An Act respecting the Records of "Pure Bred Animals" was introduced and read a first time, and it was ordered that the said Bill be read a second time on tomorrow.

Notice of Question

(1) MR. SCAMMELL asked the Minister of Marine and Fisheries to lay on the Table of the House a list of the Game Wardens employed in the District of St. Barbe last summer showing salary paid in each case, and the locality over which each Warden presided.

MINISTER OF MARINE & FISHERIES—Mr. Speaker, I beg to table the information.

MR. HICKMAN asked the Minister of Public Works if there is a man by the name of Baggs, a resident of Harbour Grace District, under salary from the Government, if so, what is his position, what salary has he been receiving.

MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS—Mr. Speaker, in reply to the honourable member I beg to say that I am not aware of any man by the name of Baggs or James Baggs being under salary from the Government in the District of Harbour Grace.

(3) MR. WARREN asked the Hon. Minister of Posts and Telegraphs if there is any mail service or freight service to the Islands of Sagona and Brunette, Fortune Bay, if so, who has the contract, and to table a copy of same and when and how often is the mail delivered.

HON. THE COLONIAL SECRETARY—Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Honourable Minister of Posts and Telegraphs, I ask that that question be deferred.

(4) MR. DUFF asked Hon. the Minister of Finance and Customs: (a) if it is the intention of the Government to operate the "Daisy" on the Revenue Service this year; (b) why was Capt. Couch suspended; if he was not suspended, what was the reason for his resignation; and if he is not pensioned, why; (c) if the "Daisy" is to be operated, who will be in command of the ship; and when does the Government intend to start the service; (d) if the Government are not putting the "Daisy" in commission this year, what steps are being taken to protect the herring fishery, the lobster fishery, and the Revenue Service on the South and West Coasts.

HON. MINISTER OF FINANCE—Mr. Speaker, in reply I wish to say that the Government has come to no decision yet as to when the "Daisy" will operate on the Revenue Service; Captain Couch resigned and was not suspended, and he was paid his salary after that, but he is not pensioned, and as Mr. Duff is of the same turn of mind as I am he does not believe that people ought be pensioned after three or four years of public service; no decision has yet been arrived at as to when the "Daisy" will operate or who will be in command of her. With regard to that part of the question dealing with the herring and lobster fisheries, that is a matter for the Minister of Marine and Fisheries to decide. As to whether the "Daisy" will do Revenue Service on the South and West Coasts, that is a matter that the Government will decide upon shortly.

Second reading of Council's amendment to "Light Dues Bill."

HON. MINISTER OF FINANCE—Mr. Speaker, the amendment does not materially affect the Bill beyond that it allows vessels to go to Prince Edward Island once a year, and it is quite satisfactory to the Department.

Pursuant to order and on motion of Hon. the Minister of Finance and Customs, the Amendments made by the Legislative Council in and upon the Bill sent up entitled "An Act to Amend Chapter 25 of the Consolidated Statutes (Third Series) entitled 'Of Light Dues'" were read a second time and agreed to, and it was ordered that a message be sent to the Legislative Council acquainting that body that the said amendments had been passed without amendment.

Second reading of Council's amendments to "Highroads" Bill.

HON. THE COLONIAL SECRETARY—Mr. Speaker, as I intimated last night, there are quite a number of these amendments, although they are not important, and I have had copies of them made so that honourable members can have them on their desks to follow them as they are read. The first amendment is in section (2) to strike out the words "its corporate" between the words "sued in" and "name" and substitute therefor the word "that."

The next amendment is in sub-section (f) of section (2) and strikes out the words "salaries and" between the words "The" and "compensation." The next is in section (5) sub-section (a) and strikes out the word "five" between the words "within" and "days" and substitute therefor the word "thirty."

The next amendment is to sub-section (b) of section (5) to add the following words: "and the amount shall be within thirty days." The next amendment is to strike out the last four words of sub-section (b) of section (6).

The next amendment is in the first line of section (110) to insert the words "and undertake" between the words "may direct" and "the removal." The next is to renumber section (14), as 14 (a); and as section 14 (b) add the following: "The Commission must first obtain the consent of the Municipal Council before any work can be commenced in the City of St. John's.

In section 21 of the Highways Bill, a very serious error has been committed in that that word "highway" has been decorated with a capital

"H". This is very improper, and in all cases the capital "H" must be omitted, and the word spelled with an ordinary "H".

In subsection (c) of section 21, the word "may" in the third line is to be deleted, and the words "shall where necessary" are to be added, so that the new section will read:

> "(c) While the construction, repair or improvement of a highroad or any work authorized by this Act is in progress, the Commission shall where necessary . . etc."

In section 27, between the words "any" and "person" in the first line. the words "contractor or." It will be seen that that is a proper amendmend. In section 27 also between the words "shall" and "with" insert the words "conspire." These two amendments merely involve the contractor and the members of the Commission in the penalty clause.

It is proposed to add the following section, and number it 28:—

> "28. 'Any offence against this Act for which no penalty is provided by regulations hereunder shall be punishable by a fine not exceeding twenty dollars nor less than five dollars and in case of default by imprisonment not exceeding one month nor less than ten days, upon conviction in summary proceedings before a Stipendiary Magistrate.'"

That is evidently an additional precaution against the breach of these rules and regulations.

Then you remember section 29 as section 20 and section 30 as section 31.

Section 28 is renumbered as section 29, and the words "placed by the Governor in Council" are stricken out in the third line of the section. Those words are not necessary in the Act. The Commission has the power without having it given them by the Governor in Council. The Commission has the power under the Act itself. I do not see anything, Mr. Speaker, that will alter the principle of the Act in any way, and I move that these amendments be now read the second time.

MR. WARREN—Mr. Speaker, the amendments on the first page of this printed document may be alright, but I have to strenuously object to the twelfth amendment on page two. It may be all very well for our local House of Lords to prescribe penalties for the infraction of an Act they know nothing about; but they do not represent what we may call the proletariat. In this House we are supposed to look after the ordinary common people.

Now I see nothing the Highways Act which would render a breach of it so important that we should take away from the magistrate the ordinary discretion which he has as to the amount of the penalty that he is going to impose on the prisoner convicted of an offence before him; and I would like to know why, although we have various Acts on our statute book of much more importance that the Highways Act, under which the magistrate has a discretion left to him, this House is now asked to pass an amendment to this Bill providing that in case of any infraction of this Act the magistrate is to have no discretion, but must fine a man at least five dollars, or put him in jail for at least ten days.

What is there so important in the Highways Act as to take away from the magistrate his ordinary discretion? After all, our magistrates may not be very learned in the law, but they have a great deal of common sense; and it is going a long way for this Legislature suddenly to decide that a magistrate should have no discretion in a matter of this sort.

I draw this matter to the attention of the honourable gentleman who introduced this Bill, and I would like him to tell me before I vote for any such amendment, why such a drastic step is being taken.

I may say, Mr. Speaker, that I did not debate this when the Bill was before the House, but if you look at section 28 of the Bill you will see that it makes certain breaches of the act felonies. That itself is rather drastic. and even a judge of the Supreme Court cannot give less than one year, whilst in cases of manslaughter he can use his discretion. Under this Legislation that we are passing now the discretion of Judges and Magistrates is taken away; and under this amendment a man, even though it is his first conviction, has to pay five dollars or go to jail for ten days.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE-- Mr. Speaker, the introducer of this Bill, the Hon. Colonial Secretary, has asked me to say a few words in reply to Mr. Warren, the honourable member for Fortune. As to section 27, I think it is quite proper that such an offence should be made a felony; but I wish to say now that I agree with the attitude he takes as to the other clause. Section 27 makes it a felony for any contractor to conspire with the members of the Commission to defraud, etc. I think that it is a clause that ought to be there.

With regard to his objections to the twelfth amendment, it is peculiar that the magistrates' discretion should be taken away in that case, because under section 22 of the Act:

> (b) No person shall injure, destroy, cut or prune any trees within the limits of a highroad without the consent of the Commission first had and obtained under a penalty not exceeding one hundred dollars.

Even under that section the magistrate has a discretion. The point that the honourable member makes is quite correct. I think that all will agree that it is proper that the magistrate should have a discretion in such a case as would be covered by the section I have just read. He hears the facts of the case. Suppose for instance that a child innocently broke off a part of a tree on a highway, he should be treated very differently from a man who maliciously cut off a tree that was, for instance. in a park.

I notice that in section 12 in the amendments it is proposed that there shall be no discretion left to the magistrate as to the minimum fine. I think we will all agree that that is a principle which, in this country. has worked considerable hardship. In going through the history of the famous Prohibition Laws we met several absurdities. If, for instance, some one had innocently manufactured a little drop of hop beer without any intention of breaking the Prohibition Law, the magistrate found himself in the position that the smallest penalty he could inflict was a fine of one hundred dollars. I quite agree with the honourable member as to the conditions in this country. Generally speaking the magistrates are to be trusted to use discretion, and in cases where judgment has to be used as to the penalty to be imposed, I think we can rely upon the magistrates to make that judgment properly.

I think, if the Honourable Colonial Secretary will excuse me saying it, that I agree with the honourable gentleman's suggestions, and I think that the words "nor less than five" and the words, "nor less than ten" should be stricken out. I think that will meet the requirements.

HON. COLONIAL SECRETARY— Mr. Speaker, I may say that I asked the Hon. Minister of Justice to explain this point, because it was more or less a matter of law. The Minister of Justice made some reference to breaches of the Prohibition Laws. I remember now a case that came before the magistrate, of an old woman for selling some intoxicating liquor without a license. It was home brew, and the Judge found himself in a peculiar position. He said "If I send you to the Penitentiary you can't get in, because there is no room there. If I fine you a hundred dollars, you can't pay it because you have not the money. What am I to do with you?" Eventually he said "I will send you home on suspended sentence."

I am quite satisfied if the Honourable Member should make an amendment to this Bill. I am sure that the Upper House will readily see the justice and fairness of not having the magistrate's discretion taken away in a matter of this sort.

MR. WARREN—Mr. Speaker, I would like to have permission to take this opportunity of drawing the attention of the House to legislation of this sort. It is an extraordinary thing that there are only two acts on the Statute books of this country where the minimum penalty is not left to the discretion of the magistrate. One is the case of the smuggling and the other is the sale of liquors against the act. When we are in committee it should be left to the discretion of the magistrate as to what the penalty is that he is to give. I would like to tell the House of a case that I ran up against a great many years ago. I was on circuit and it is because of the thing that happened on that trip that I want to stop this in the bill to-day. I was on circuit on the Southern Coast; I will not mention the name of the judge. We were at Marystown and we were walking around the deck in the evening. A very poor man came along and asked to see the judge. He was very poorly dressed, evidently he was very poor and seemed as if he were in great distress. He saw the judge and after he had left the judge sent for Mr. Martin Furlong and for me, and told us that the man whom he had just seen had been over to St. Pierre about a week ago, and when he had been getting ready to go a friend of his gave him some money to bring him over some rum. He himself did not get anything out of the transaction, but he had been discovered when he was bringing it over, and the magistrate of the place had no option but to give him the penalty, which at the time was four hundred dollars. It was a breach of the Customs Act and that was the penalty, and as I said the magistrate had no option. He did not have the four hundred dollars, but he had a schooner that he was fishing in, and when he was not able to pay the fine the schooner was taken and put up at auction and sold, and the last of his troubles was that his youngest daughter had fallen in a well and had been drowned and he had not got enough money to buy a coffin for his child, and he had come to the judge to ask him if there was anything possible that he could do to upset the verdict of the magistrate. And the judge asked Mr. Furlong and myself to go into the case, and if there were any loophole whatever on which the judgment of the magistrate might be appealed against he would bear us out, but we went into it and there was no appeal. The man had brought in the bottle of rum and was fined four hundred dollars, and he had lost his schooner, and the end of it was, I think, that Mr. Furlong and the Judge applied to the Government and the fine was either refunded or made a nominal amount. I shall never forget that, and I think that the House should go very slowly before it takes away from the magistrate the use of that discretion which the Government and the Colony repose in him when they consent to his appointment and vote his salary.

Pursuant to order and on motion of

Hon. the Colonial Secretary, the amendments made by the Legislative Council in and upon the Bill sent up entitled "An Act to Provide for the Construction, Reconstruction and Maintenance of Highroads" were read a second time and agreed to, with some amendment, and it was ordered that a message be sent to the Legislative Council acquainting that body that the said amendments had been passed with some amendments, in which the House of Assembly requests the concurrence of the Legislative Council.

Pursuant to order and on motion of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, the Bill entitled "An Act respecting the Encouragement of Shipbuilding" was read a third time and passed, and it was ordered that the said Bill be engrossed, being entitled as above, and that it be sent to the Legislative Council with a message requesting the concurrence of that body in its provisions. Pursuant to order and on motion of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, the Bill entitled "An Act relating to the St. John's Dry Dock" was read a third time and passed, and it was ordered that the said Bill be engrossed, being entitled as above, and that it be sent to the Legislative Council with a message requesting the concurrence of that body in its provisions.

Pursuant to notice and on motion of Hon. the Minister of Finance and Customs, the House resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole on Supply.

Mr. Speaker left the Chair.

Mr. Puddester took the Chair of Committee.

HON. THE LEADER OF THE OPPOSITION—Mr. Chairman, we have no desire to delay the passing of the estimates, but I asked the Prime Minister a question the other day about the railway, and as I was not in the House I do not know what answer the Prime Minister gave.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—Mr. Chairman, I answered that it would take a week or ten days to prepare. I might say while I am on my feet that the Railway Commission and the Government are considering the question as to whether we should answer it at all. I have had a letter from the manager of the railway and he takes the position that the Canadian Government refused to answer questions that were giving the particulars in connection with the railway as they said that it was a separate unit and they would not give any particulars as regards salaries. It is for that reason I say that the Railway Commission and the Government are considering as to whether they should refuse to answer the questions that are being asked in the House or not. The railway is being run as a separate unit and just exactly in the same manner as when it was under the Reids, and it is for this reason that the Government is considering the matter, and I think that the Hon. Leader of the Opposition might defer the matter until the Government has come to some definite decision on the question.

MR. WARREN—Mr. Chairman, if the Government is considering this matter I think that they should look up the authority under which the Railway in Canada refuses to give this information. The Government should look up the acts and let us know if they are going to refuse to table the information. What is the law in Canada pertaining to the operation of the railroad. There is no legislation in Newfoundland on it.

HON. THE LEADER OF THE OPPOSITION—Mr. Chairman, in the event of the Prime Minister's refusing to table the information in connection with the railway which is a public utility and which without any doubt has a deficit every year when all charges are made up then it is no use to have the House of Assembly open at all. What control will the House of Assembly have over the affairs of the country if they cannot get this information in connection with the railway. The railway is an expense and it is not included in the estimates like other public expenditures, and if the public is demanding information about this utility they should get it. That is the reason why I asked the Prime Minister for this information before the estimates came up. As a matter of fact they should have been given without asking. That is my opinion. I understand from the Prime Minister that he is prepared to have the Committee rise until they have a chance to come to this decision.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—I cannot see what this has to do with the other estimates.

HON. THE MINISTER OF FINANCE—Mr. Chairman, I would like to tell the Hon. Leader of the Opposition that it is almost impossible to estimate the amount of railroad expenditure. A steamer might come in one year and have to have fifty thousand dollars spent on her for repairs. Then again you have the dock and at one time you have a hundred and fifty men, and another time you have five hundred, and so it is impossible to estimate the expenditure.

HON. MR. SULLIVAN—There are probably about fifteen hundred men employed by the Railway Commission.

MR. HICKMAN—I suppose the honourable member suggested about five hundred of those.

HON. MR. SULLIVAN—I have not been responsible for the employing of any men there.

MR. HICKMAN—It is not much use for us to try and look after the country's affairs, unless we can see what is going on and get the information that we ask for. I think the information asked for is reasonable and necessary.

HON. PRIME MINISTER—You have not been refused it.

MR. HICKMAN—Could the Honourable Minister of Finance and Customs tell me the due date of these loans mentioned on page four.

HON. MINISTTER OF FINANCE AND CUSTOMS—I have a fairly good memory of things, but I cannot really tell you what date these loans are due. You are giving me a very large order now. I cannot give you the dates now, but they are probably down in the department.

MR. HICKMAN—Perhaps you would not mind furnishing the information on the next day?

HON. MINISTER OF FINANCE & CUSTOMS—Not at all.

MR. WARREN—Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the Hon. Minister of Finance and Customs what the last loan is selling at?

HON. MINISTER OF FINANCE & CUSTOMS—97.385.

MR. WARREN—It is a most extraordinary thing; and I am not saying this in any way of adverse criticism, but I think that the Hon. Minister might make some enquiries.

In 1923, the Government of the day, the Government with which I was associated, gave to the Reid Newfoundland Company two million dollars in bonds, which they immediately put on the London market. Those bonds were five per cent. bonds, and they are selling today at from 101½ to 102, while the recent loan which was put on the market a few months ago is selling at 97, and 62 per cent. of them are left on the hands of the underwriters. There must surely be some reason for that. I will tell you a few of the things that might cause that.

When the Reid loan was before the House, the solicitors for the people who were going to take over the loan, took steps to provide that the act should be different from ordinary Loan Acts that we had been in the habit of passing. It was specially provided that the proceeds of the loan should be trust funds, and that Trustees in England should be able to invest in them as trustee investments. Furthermore, it was provided that there should be a sinking fund created.

These Reid bonds are now selling at 101½ to 102, while the loan that was issued three or four months ago are only selling at 97, and 62 per cent. of them are left on the hands of the underwriters. There certainly must be some reason for that; and if we could amend the Act now so as to make the bonds trustee funds, I think we should do so.

HON. MR. SULLIVAN—That was included in the 1924 Act.

MR. WARREN—Does it provide for a sinking fund?

HON. MR. SULLIVAN—Yes.

HON. MINISTER OF FINANCE—Mr. Chairman, in reply to the hon. member for Fortune, Mr. Warren, I may say that in regard to these so-called Reid Bonds, it is a very difficult thing for any man to be able to say what is in the mind of the purchasing public where bonds are concerned. I may tell the hon. member that the Victory Bonds of Great Britain is at par to-day; and why anybody should pay 102 for Newfoundland Bonds when they can get British victory bonds for par I do not know.

In regard to sixty-two per cent. of the loan remaining on the hands of the underwriters—that happens in ninety nine times out of every hundred. I remember when a loan was raised in 1919, I think it was but I cannot be sure now, but I do know that there was one million dollars lying in the hands of the underwriters for a long long time, and they never disposed of it, and a great deal of it was purchased in our own country. How you are going to explain that I am sure I don't know. You say that the underwriters have sixty-two per cent. left on their hands, and then we hear of another country which has ninety-two per cent. of a loan left on the hands of the underwriters.

MR. HICKMAN—What country is that?

HON. MINISTER OF FINANCE—Australia, I think.

HON. MR. SULLIVAN—Australia. Ninety-two per cent. of a one million pound loan.

MR. HICKMAN—It is a four and a half per cent. loan.

HON. MINISTER OF FINANCE—But four and a half per cent. for a country like Australia in comparison to five per cent. for a country like Newfoundland. Nobody can possibly say why Australia is left with that loan, while we to-day can get 102. I can't find any explanation.

MR. WARREN—I think the Minister admits the point of what I said. I am not saying this by way of criticism at all. If you look up the London Times you will find that the Newfoundland two million five per cent loan is selling at 101½.

HON. COLONIAL SECRETARY—What period?

MR. WARREN—Twenty years. And what I cannot understand is why a person who wants a five per cent. money loan will go and pay 101½ for it, when he can go to our underwriters and get it for 97. There must be some explanation, and I think we ought to ask what it is.

HON. COLONIAL SECRETARY—Are you sure that it is not the War Loan?

MR. WARREN—No, I can show you the "Times." It says "due 1943." It identifies the Bond. It is the two million loan, given to the Reids at five per cent. Why should a man give 101½ for that, when he can one of Sir John Crosbie's for 97?

HON. MINISTER OF FINANCE—I I must admit that it is very difficult to explain.

MR. HICKMAN—If what the member for Fortune says is true, and he is the only authority for it, but if it is true, I certainly think that as he suggests, there should be some enquiries made as to why 62% of that loan still remains on the hands of the underwriters.

MR. WARREN—It has appeared in the Montreal papers, and I have seen it in the London Times and the London Daily Mail.

HON. MINISTER OF FINANCE—I do not think anybody is responsible for that. The position is this—the underwriters have underwritten this loan, and now they have started in to sell it, and in about six months time they will have sold it.

MR. HICKMAN—The position is this—that the brokers have underwritten the loan, and have been unable to sell it to the public. That is a very important thing.

HON. PRIME MINISTER—More important for the brokers than it is for us.

MR. HICKMAN—It may not be very important for us at the present time, but if you contemplate putting another five hundred thousand dollars on the market shortly, the brokers will not be in a hurry to take it up.

HON. COLONIAL SECRETARY—Of the loan that was raised in New York in 1920 there was ninety per cent. on the underwriters' hands for a time.

MR. HICKMAN—For how long?

HON. COLONIAL SECRETARY—I do not know, but I don't suppose this one will be left there for long.

MR. HICKMAN—It is an index that the bond is not looked upon as a good bond, because there are today hundreds of companies — insurance companies and trust companies, who are every day collecting thousands and hundreds of thousands of dollars for premiums, which they have to invest in something; and all these companies are looking for some good means of investment, and are grabbing up everything that comes on the market that is supposed to be sound. The Minister of Finance and Customs tells us that in ninety nine out of every hundred cases bonds are left on the underwriters' hands. It is the other way around if the bond is a good bond—it is taken up within twenty-four hours of its being put on the market.

HON. MINISTER OF FINANCE—That is a matter of opinion.

MR. HICKMAN—I make this comparison. The Canadian Government put a loan on the market last year—the Canadian Government Refunding Loan, at four and a half per cent. I think the amount of the loan was sixty million dollars. That loan was all taken up, and you can buy that loan at 97 and a fraction. The Newfoundland loan gives a much greater interest return, and is left on the hands of the underwriters, and cannot be sold on the market. I submit that when a man underwrites a loan he tries his hardest to get rid of that loan, and sell it, because in his business he wants to be in a position to underwrite another loan next week; but while he is financing one loan to the extent of two and a half million dollars he is not in a position to finance another loan right away, unless the brokers happen to be a concern that is worth millions of money.

There is something radically wrong when a loan of five per cent cannot sell on the market much more regularly and at a higher price than a four and a half per cent. loan. The Province of Quebec has issued a loan at four and a half per cent., which is looked upon as an absolutely sound investment. There must be something wrong with our country's finances if that loan is still on the hands of the underwriters; and I think it is well worth while for the Minister of Finance and Customs to take the advice of the hon. member for Fortune, and make enquiries.

MR. WARREN—This is not like the Reid's Act, and if the Honourable Minister will go into it, I think he will find it different and that Trust Funds cannot be invested.

HON. THE MINISTER OF FINANCE—The Act was brought in to cover everything required. The point I take is that in placing that loan we thought the Trust Fund Investments were alright.

MR. WARREN—There is no Registrar on the other side.

MR. HICKMAN—What about raising the money for the Dock?

HON. THE MINISTER OF FINANCE—I am not sure that we will want that loan at all. If we can finance the proposition without the loan, alright, but we got to have the powers to go on with the loan if necessary.

MR. HALFYARD—This vote of two hundred and fifty dollars for printing and stationery calls for some remark. We were told last year that we were creating a department in this connection, but this year you asked for a vote of $250.00 for one Department alone—The Finance Department. It seems to me that the charges made against the previous Government as to extravagance in printing were not well founded.

HON. THE MINISTER OF FINANCE—In explanation, I may say the increase is a provision for the printing of the Auditor General's Report. I fear that Honorable Members did not read this Report as much as they should, so we decided to have it printed, and we hope to have it ready in a few days.

MR. WARREN—Who is the travelling Auditor?

HON. THE MINISTER OF FINANCE—Mr. L. Crummey—An excellent man who has done good work.

Government Engineer's Department.

MR. WARREN—Mr. Chairman, I thought these last two items in the vote were cut out. Are not the Inspector of Masonry and Inspector of Rolling Stock under direction of the Railway Commission. Who is the Inspector of Rolling Stock?

HON. THE MINISTER OF FINANCE—The Inspector of Rolling Stock is Mr. Croke, who has been in the position for years. The Inspector of Masonry is Mr. Whelan, who is building bridges all over the country.

MR. HALFYARD—I take it the services of these men may be engaged, should the Highway Commission begin to function.

HON. THE MINISTER OF FINANCE—That's what I understand.

MR. HICKMAN—What is this $10,000.00 for the High Commissioner in London?

HON. THE MINISTER OF FINANCE—That amount includes his salary and the salaries of the Office Staff, Typist, Clerk, Messenger, etc. There is also a vote of $640.00 for office equipment, etc.

HON. THE COLONIAL SECRETARY—Mr. Chairman, I may say in connection with this matter, and it must be borne in mind that Mr. Gordon, the High Commissioner cannot get along as becomes his position on the salary voted him by this House, and he is not paid at all commensurate with the value of his services. Fortunately he is possessed of private means, but I believe that the time will come when we will have to increase his salary. All who have visited London are aware of his worth as representative of Newfoundland, and the very valuable services he is rendering, and I do not think it is fair that he should have to go to his own purse to find the means to meet his official expenses.

MR. WARREN—Mr. Chairman, the reason for this vote being in as it is, is that Sir Edgar Bowring, when he was High Commissioner, asked the Squires Government what he should pay the officials in the London office. Captain Gordon, the present High Commissioner, was then Secretary to Sir Edgar Bowring. Thereupon Sir Edgar divided up this amount among the various officials in the office. To be perfectly frank I think that Captain Gordon received first of all seven hundred and fifty pounds a year. Then it was raised to eight hundred pounds and he was given an allowance as well. When Captain Gordon was appointed High Commissioner it was understood that he was to carry on with the same salary that he had as Secretary. He is, therefore, getting the same salary as High Commissioner as when he was Secretary.

MR. SCAMMELL—Mr. Chairman: I would like to find out from the Finance Minister if there is any hard and fast system under which pensions are allocated? Are they given on the basis of salary earned or are they given because of the number of years a man puts in the service? The reason I ask the question is because I think the time is coming when we shall have to concern ourselves over this matter and the granting of pensions will have to be done on a business-like basis and have discrimination done away with.

HON. MINISTER OF FINANCE—Mr. Chairman: I agree with the honourable member for St. Barbe that the time is coming when the matter of pensions will have to be taken up and settled in an equitable way to all concerned. I look upon the matter as a serious one. I know of a case where a man was put into a Government building and was there a year when he was pensioned. As a matter of fact we have men now looking for pensions, men who have been from nine months up to ten and fifteen years in the public service. I think that the Government ought to make a scale whereby a person should have to put in so many years of service before he is entitled to a pension at all. As Mr. Halfyard well knows all those pensions are made up on a two-third salary basis and some of them are like Chinese puzzles to handle.

MR. HIBBS—Mr. Chairman: I am glad to hear that the honourable Minister of Finance is going to see that the Government considers the matter of readjusting pensions. I would like to point out a most glaring case where a man's services has been ignored. Mr. Ambrose Fitzgerald, Postmaster at Fogo is getting $325 a year, after serving this country for fifty years. Fogo is an important place and Mr. Fitzgerald's work is strenuous, especially during the winter time, and on behalf of Mr. Fitzgerald, I would ask the Minister to kindly remember his case, if any readjustment takes place. It must be obvious to every member of this House that a man who has served this country for fifty years is entitled to more consideration and more pay than he is getting now.

MR. HALFYARD—Mr. Chairman: I presume that all those men down here asked for pensions. I notice that George Saunders, line repairer, is down here for a pension. Now I do not know whether that man is incapacitated or not, as a couple of years ago I thought he was one of the best men we had in the civil service. It is unfortunate to have to get rid of an excellent servant unless he desires to be pensioned. I merely cite this case because there are some cases in which men were put on the pension list to give place to others.

HON. MINISTER OF FINANCE—The Minister in charge of that department can explain that matter. I have nothing to do with it.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—In the case of Mr. Saunders I might say that he is well up in years and he asked to be pensioned.

MR. HICKMAN—Mr. Chairman: I would like to ask if recommendations for pensions have been considered more recently than in the past because all the pensioners whose names are down here were pensioned since the present Government assumed office. There is only one case I can speak of from my district and that is Josiah Gosse, of Spaniard's Bay. I know that Mr. Gosse has never asked the Government to be pensioned. He is not an old man and was well able to do the work he was at, but he was pensioned to make room for another man, Solomon Gosse and I presume all the other pensioners have been pensioned on the same principle. I submit that there should be some scale laid down whereby a man has to meet certain requirements before he gets a pension. Some of those pensions mentioned here are very high. There are cases here where light housekeepers are pensioned at six and seven hundred dollars a year. In addition to their pensions these men earn as high as three hundred dollars at the fishery every summer. A fisherman has to live on from $200 to $300 per year.

MR. DUFF—With regard to these pensions. $300 for Mr. Kennedy. I don't know Mr. Kennedy. I don't know whether he is young or old. But I do say that there is no great value in having a light on Salmon Cove Point. Its benefit to the country is nil. There are no ships that go to Salmon Cove. And if a lighthouse keeper is an excuse for giving pensions it is about time that the Government put their foot on it. The same thing applies to the lighthouses on Labrador. In fact I never saw the reason for so many lighthouses on Labrador. The light house is of most value to the lighthouse keepers. And I am sorry to see this list of pensions. I regret to see this great big expense added to the other expenses. As a matter of fact the Labrador light keepers are not on the coast in the early summer when the fishing vessels go North and they manage to get along without these lights, but the value of these lighthouses to give political jobs cannot be gainsayed.

HON. MINISTER OF MARINE & FISHERIES—Mr. Chairman: I made a statement the other day that I considered that I always thought there was only one lunatic asylum in this country. Now I realize there are two. And now I am fully persuaded that this House should be called another one. Mr. Duff sees no occasion for a lighthouse on Labrador. I think any man who says such a thing is a fit subject for the lunatic.

MINISTER OF JUSTICE — The Chairman has called the Minister of Marine and Fisheries to order. I think the remark was quite proper. What he said was the man who said such a thing was a fit subject to be called a lunatic.

HON. MINISTER OF MARINE & FISHERIES—I am afraid, Mr. Chairman, if Mr. Duff was amongst these fishermen and had to trust to a line for his life, he would have a very poor chance of getting clear of their clutches. I was more than surprised to hear this man make such a statement. I claim that lighthouses are needed on Labrador just as much as in any part of the world. We have had as many as three or four hundred schooners going to Labrador. I make a statement here that the men who go down there endure untold hardships. They have to stay at sea at night time, sometimes for two or three days owing to there being no lighthouses in certain harbors, where they might have got in the first night when the storm was approaching and would have got out of trouble and would be warm and comfortable. Whereas they have to stay out for days and lose motor boats and traps and here I want to say I am prepared to back up any vote for lighthouses. Anyone who makes the statement that these houses are to make jobs for people are making a wrong statement. This Government never put up any lighthouse, but there is one going up next sumeer and if I am to be on the floors of this House of Assembly as a member of the Monroe Government for the next three years there will be more than one lighthouse put down there. It is the duty of any Minister of Marine and Fisheries to put all the lighthouses he possibly can on Labrador for the safety of the fishermen of this country—the men who are keeping nearly all of us in comfort.

I made no job for any person on Labrador, and I put no lighthouse there so far, but I am putting one there next summer. Someone has got to fill it. In nine chances out of ten it will be a fisherman who has been going there for many seasons in order to catch fish to maintain his family and himself as well.

As far as a pension is concerned. If a man gets sick and is not able to do his duty, and is keeping a lighthouse for eight or ten years there is no reason why he cannot get a pension as well as any civil servant that never spends hours in the dark with lots of lives in his charge. I am surprised at any Newfoundlander making objections to lighthouse keepers (when they have become old and disabled) getting a pension. I say without fear of contradiction that they deserve it ninty nine per cent. more than any government official. He spends at least six hours in the night keeping the light going so that any ship may be enabled to make port and get in out of the storm and all the other civil servants at five o'clock and some of them at four o'clock, can go home. At ten o'clock they can go to bed if they want to with nobody's life to look out for. And therefore I say again as I claimed before that the lighthouse keeper is a big asset to this country while he may not be a financial asset he is an asset in saving the lives of hundreds around this coast.

I am of the opinion, Mr. Chairman, as far as I am concerned that the class of people that are being put in some of the lighthouses should never have been put there. They were worn out when they were put there, consequently, after two or three years they were unable to do their work, and they have to be pensioned. I argue that no man should take charge of a lighthouse over forty years of age, and after he has spent over fifteen years in it he is entitled to a pension.

MR. DUFF—Mr. Chairman, the Minister of Marine and Fisheries in talking about lighthouses mentioned that I had never felt the salt water in my eyes. Well I am not here to talk about that. The point is this that we can't afford the great big expenditure. We can't afford these pensions in my opinion. I look upon them as very costly expenses. Especially having to pension a man after he is a few years in the service. No doubt the Government in the past have done the same thing. And I would suggest to the Government that these men should work out their time and not make jobs and put other men in their place for purely political reasons.

MR. WARREN—Mr. Chairman: I understand there is another pension being paid by the Government which does not appear on this list. I would like the Minister of Finance to say why it is not there. It was referred to in the Auditor General's report—a pension to Mr. Piccott. There is no provision in the estimates of 1924 and 1925. In that case there should be a provision made in the estimates for 1925 and 1926. I would like to know why that is not properly and regularly put in the pensions list.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—This is a matter that the Government is considering and the amount has been paid to Mr. Picott in the meantime. Whether a pension will be given him or not is a matter for this House to decide.

MR. WARREN—I just want to say that I mentioned this because I did not see this matter in the estimates and I thought if the Government had settled on paying Mr. Piccott $1,000 I thought he should be on the pension list.

PRIME MINISTER—That is perfect-true. The matter was brought to our notice. Mr. Piccott has been a member of the House and at one time Minister of Marine and Fisheries, and when it was reported to us that he was absolutely on the rocks we felt that we should try and give him that little amount.

I think this is a matter for the consideration of the House before we go out of session. I don't want to continue this if the House thinks that it is wrong legislation. In one way it is wrong. But on the other hand I don't like to see a man that held the public position that Mr. Piccott has held, left absolutely a pauper. We thought that the proper thing to do was to continue it until the House was in session and then have it considered by the House.

MR. MOORE—Mr. Chairman, I rise to support the amount that has been given to Mr. Piccott that is a hundred dollars a month. This is a hard case and one that the members ought to consider. I did not know until just now that Mr. Piccott was receiving a hundred dollars a month. He has been a member of this House, an ex-Minister of Marine and Fisheries and an ex-Minister of the Board of Works. His case is to-day, I think, in no way comparable with any other members, that had a seat in this House, and so we now for the remainder of his days ought to grant the gentleman that.

MR. HALFYARD—I rise to support the pension to Mr. Piccott. This is a move in the right direction. The Government have acted very wisely in doing it. I don't think that there is any member that is going to say anything against this pension.

MR. SCAMMELL—Mr. Chairman: I want to say that I am also in accord with the idea of giving Mr. Piccott a pension. As has been pointed out here, his case is a particular and peculiar one. I think that in whatever department of public life Mr. Piccott found himself, he served his country faithfully and well, though he has always laboured under a handicap. As Mr. Moore has pointed out. Mr. Piccott's case is a peculiar one, and it may be perhaps that not for fifty years will the Legislature be called upon to discuss such a case as we are now discussing, and I think that the Government is only doing what is right in giving Mr. Piccott some small pension to help him out for the remainder of his days.

MR. HICKMAN—Mr. Chairman, why was not Capt. Bonia put on the Board of Liquor Control, instead of paying him a pension of $2400.00?

HON. PRIME MINISTER—The man has been down at the hospital for some time, and he is a very sick man indeed.

HON. MINISTER OF FINANCE—Capt. Bonia has had a lot of trouble with his eyes, and I do not think he was very keen about the job at all. I saw him the other day at his home, and he is very much run down, and could not see at all.

MR. WARREN—Mr. Chairman, may I ask if anything has been done with regard to the printing under the Act that was passed last session, under which all printing was put in the care of the Department of the Colonial Secretary.

HON. PRIME MINISTER—The Hon. Colonial Secretary is not here now, but he will be able to tell you when he comes.

MR. WARREN—Now that the Hon. Colonial Secretary is here—the question I asked was this—If anything has been done under the Act that was passed last session providing for the control of printing being left in the hands of the Colonial Secretary; and if nothing has been done, why has it not been done, and why has not the Act been put into force?

HON. COLONIAL SECRETARY—There has been nothing done outside of the fact that the printing of the Acts has been transferred to the paper known as the Newfoundland Gazette, and Mr. Thistle has been appointed as Printer. On going into the matter of public printing it was found that the Act would necessitate the employing of at least two officials. We would need to have the King's printer, and he certainly would require a stenographer or clerk; and the King's printer would have to be called upon, of course, to edit the Newfoundland Gazette. That would probably entail an expenditure of from three to five thousand dollars a year; and after the whole matter was taken into consideration, it was decided to let it stand for one year, so that it might be seen if the printing could not be better looked after. That has been done, and I do not think that to-day the printing bills of any of the departments are excessive; and Mr. Thistle, the King's printer and publisher of the Newfoundland Gazette is not receiving any remuneration outside of the ordinary remuneration of that office.

In regard to the printing of Legislation and Debates, that is under the control of the Internal Economy Committee. The internal Economy Committee has always looked after that; and I do not know what that is costing this year, but I certainly am of opinion that, judging by the debates which we have read from the Upper Chamber, the cost of publishing those debates is going to be far in excess of anything in the history of that Chamber.

MR. WARREN—Mr. Chairman, I was not referring so much to the printing of Debates as to the printing of the Acts. Can the Minister tell me who prints the acts that come before this House, and those which come before the Upper House; because in the late government, we made a change in regard to that, and I want to know if the present Government has continued that?

HON. COLONIAL SECRETARY—The Daily News prints the Bills for this House, and the Evening Telegram for the Upper House; and then finally the Acts are printed by the Newfoundland Gazette.

MR. WARREN—With regard to that I would like to explain the system which was started in the time of the Government with which I was associated. It had been the custom before then to have the Acts printed for one House by the Daily Star, and for the other by the Advocate, and, then, after the Acts were passed they were sent to the Royal Gazette for final publication, not only in the Gazette, but also in the ordinary book form. Then, at the suggestion of Mr. Harry Winter, who was then Clerk of the House, and to save expense, the printing of the Acts was taken away from the Daily Star and from the Advocate, and were given to the Royal Gazette, who had to do the printing then from the beginning to the end. The type was set by the Royal Gazette and was kept in form and altered by them as the Acts were amended. When the Acts were sent to the Upper House there was not another concern doing the work, and when the Acts were finally gazetted and published, the type was still in the same form. I think the Government has made a wrong step in altering that system. You have three people now doing the work that could be done much more efficiently by one; and you are paying three bills for the same work.

As a matter of fact the system in the Canadian provinces is that the Royal Gazette originally prints the Bills, and they are bound to keep the type in form from the time that the Bill is given them until it gets back; and then they have to keep the type in form for a period of so many months. They have printed from that one form all the Acts that are required for both Houses of the Legislature, for the Gazette, and for the books afterwards.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Mr. Chairman, in the case of the Canadian Government, it is a regular Government printing office, from the printer's devil up. The Royal Gazette here was really privately owned. The point that the honourable member himself will not lose sight of is this; that if we want to follow the Canadian principle we will have to buy a Government printing press. That is the Canadian position; and it will be a very expensive proposition to set up a Government printing press. You will want a regular staff, and a regular department. There is some force in the suggestion he has made as to double printing; but I think the honourable member will find that the printing bills of the last year and this, as far as we have gone, compare very favourably with those of previous years. There is a quite considerable reduction.

MR. WARREN—Mr. Chairman, it stands to reason that if you have to have somebody put up the type for Bills that come before this House; and then when they leave this House and go to the Upper House somebody else has to put up the same type again; and then when it leaves the Upper House it goes into the hands of the Royal Gazette where the same type has to be put up once more—it surely stands to reason that that is going to cost more than it would if it were left in the hands of one person from start to finish.

HON. COLONIAL SECRETARY—Mr. Chairman, I might say that when Acts are printed by the Royal Gazette, the same type that is used then is also used in putting the Acts up in book form; and even after that the type is kept in form for a certain length of time; so that there is only one setting of type for the printing by the Royal Gazette.

Then if we should have a long session, as this is likely to be, if one office were to keep all the forms, you would have a tremendous amount of type kept in form in one office. They would have a very large amount to keep in form at one time; and I think it is very questionable whether the Royal Gazette would be able to do it.

MR. WARREN—I am sure we had long enough sessions during the last three or four years.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Was it actually done during a lengthy session?

MR. WARREN—Yes.

HON. COLONIAL SECRETARY—It was only when you were Prime Minister.

MR. WARREN—No, before that. I know it was when Mr. Harry Winter was law clerk. That was in 1923, I think.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Was not the history of that that a certain paper at the time had such a big job handling the census that they had too much to do?

MR. WARREN—This was done by the Internal Economy Committee. I only mentioned this bècause it much cost less to have one person doing the printing, than to have three people doing the same work.

MR. WARREN—Mr. Chairman, with regard to that vote. It has been the time honoured custom for us to vote these salaries for the officials of the House; and after the session is over the Internal Economy Committee would vote about fifty per cent additional as bonus. I would like to know whether the Government intends to stop the estimate here, or whether it contemplates confirming any votes, or bonuses that the Internal Economy Committee may award to the officials of the House?

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Mr. Chairman, is not the practice in a way really better. Does not the bonus really depend upon the length of the session. It would be rather difficult for us to fix a bonus, because I can quite see that there might be a session in which a bonus was quite deserved, but again there may be a session in which no bonus should really be granted. The practice for years has been to leave that matter to the Internal Economy Committee, and I think that has been found to work out as a very good practice.

MR. HALFYARD—Mr. Chairman, if the Internal Economy Committee intends to grant a bonus, I think they should take into consideration the efficiency of the different reporters. I think you could do without one or two of them, and get better returns.

HON. COLONIAL SECRETARY—Mr. Chairman, I think the reports this year are certainly a great improvement on last year. I think that, in justice to the reporters, I should avail of this opportunity of saying that the reporting this year is away ahead of what it was last year. I do not refer to all the reporters, but I think that some are more efficient than others.

MR. WARREN—Mr. Chairman, I must say I have made a great many speeches this session, and I agree with what the Colonial Secretary has said; but all the reporters are not of the same calibre. I am not mentioning any names, but I think there is something in what Mr. Halfyard has said—that the efficiency of the reporters, as well as the length of the session, should be taken into consideration in fixing a bonus.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Mr. Chairman, there is only one way to encourage a reporter. I have said it repeatedly. You have got to make the remuneration sufficiently attractive to warrant a man making up his mind that he is going to devote himself to reporting and nothing else. Court reporting and parliamentary reporting are in a class by themselves. Parliamentary reporting is totally different from even newspaper reporting. Generally speaking your newspaper reporter, with some parliamentary experience makes your ideal reporter. The real trouble is this—to-day you allow the reporters two hundred and ten dollars each. It is not sufficiently attractive to warrant a man saying, "I will lay myself out to be free for that season of the year." What actually happens is that you are only able to avail yourselves of those who on account of their particular business are able to attend at the particular time that the House is open. When you get a first class shorthand man, he is gobbled up by big business houses, and you would not be able to get him to come down here for two hundred and ten dollars a session. If you want good reporters you have to make the salary sufficiently attractive to induce men to train as parliamentary reporters.

I want to say here that the reporting has been very satisfactory this year, and a very great improvement over last year.

MR. HALFYARD—Mr. Chairman, I quite agree with the remarks made by the Hon. Minister of Justice, that to get good services, and have the reporters give their best, you will have to give them proper compensation. I have spoken quite a lot, and afterwards I have to read it all over. I go through certain pages and I find them alright and I do not want to correct it; but when I get down a little farther, it seems that some one else has come in then and did not take me, but somebody else. That has been my experience in reading through what I said this session. I quite agree that it is very difficult to get efficiency in every respect. Of course, some reporters may be able to take rapidly, but it should not end there. You must have men that have some knowledge of the English language; and if they do not get all our lengthy remarks they can get the sense of it anyhow.

MR. WARREN—Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the hon. member for Trinity if he does not think that the reporters get a little tired of reporting the same man for four hours at a time?

MR. HALFYARD—They come on every quarter hour; don't they?

MR. GRIMES—Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the Prime Minister with regard to any bonus to be paid officials of this House, if that would include the messengers and doorkeepers?

HON. PRIME MINISTER—There is no custom at all . . . .

HON. MINISTER OF FINANCE—It is a matter for the Internal Economy Committee.

MR. GRIMES—The reason why I asked about the messengers and doorkeepers is that if this is all the amount that they are to receive for their services, I think that it is a very small compensation for these men, most of whom are family men and this is the only means they have of getting the wherewithal to provide for their families. I think the Internal Economy Committee ought to take notice of that, and ought to give some consideration to those men when settling any bonus.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—That is a matter for the Internal Economy Committee to consider at the latter part of the session. It all depends upon when the Opposition is going to let us close.

MR. HICKMAN—Is that amount for the door keeper—$100—reduced from last year?

HON. MINISTER OF FINANCE—Whatever they got last year they are getting this year.

MR. HICKMAN—That is hardly enough for a man.

HON. COLONIAL SECRETARY—They generally get a bonus.

MR. GRIMES—I understand that they received nothing over the $100 last year.

HON. MINISTER OF FINANCE—There were no bonuses last year. It was á short session.

MR. SCAMMELL—I would like to ask with regard to this very expensive publication—Hansard—how many copies are published?

HON. MINISTER OF FINANCE—One hundred and twenty-five.

MR. HICKMAN—This amount for debates—what debates does that mean?

HON. MINISTER OF FINANCE—Hansard.

MR. HICKMAN—Does the Government pay anybody for publishing the speeches in the Upper House in the daily press?

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Mr. Chairman, I would like to say that the Upper House will have no Hansard this year. Their idea this year is that they will have what they call the Official Synopsis as their Hansard. The Internal Economy Committee considered this matter as discussed at the last session of the House. Last year it was felt that there ought to be some definite publication, and honourable members will remember that at the beginning the Hansard was to be abandoned. However, it was finally decided to revert to the Hansard, and this year we have repeated the decision of last year, and, as far as this House is concerned, the Hansard will be published as usual. The Upper House is not issuing a Hansard, but are having their debates go through the papers. In other words, the official report of the Upper House is what appears in the papers, while the official report of this House will be Hansard.

MR. HALFYARD—By whom is the Hansard published?

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—By the Telegram.

MR. HIBBS—Do I understand that the papers that are now reporting the speeches in the Upper House are being paid for that?

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Yes. The length of them has been rather a surprise to ourselves. The Upper House did not want a Hansard, but wanted what they called an Official Synopsis, and that is what is now appearing.

MR. HICKMAN—That is not the sort of official synopsis that was given us last year.

MR. HALFYARD—I fear that we are getting the same dose this year so far as the official synopsis is concerned. Who is the compiler of the Official Synopsis of the House of Assembly?

MR. BROWNE—Mr. Chairman, in regard to the Library, I would like to point out that the present one is altogether inadequate. As a matter of fact it is not a library at all, but rather an archives. I have sent out repeatedly for such works of reference as the report of the Economic Conference only to find that it was not available. I think that the House ought to subscribe to various publications which would be useful for reference in conducting the debates, and also be helpful in connection with legislation. As to the Economic Conference Report—perhaps the Hon. Colonial Secertary may have one—I know that its contents will be of great interest to members of the House in dealing with such matters as arose here in the discussion about ordering our steamer in Holland. I think that this matter should be given consideration and that the Library Committee ought to subscribe to various publications in England and Canada which would be of value as reference works, and I believe the money would be well spent.

MR. SCAMMELL—Mr. Chairman, I agree with the idea put forward by Mr. Browne, and would like to add a word in support of his suggestion. There are official publications in other parts of the world which we ought to be able to get at a moment's notice. Of course it is rather difficult to draw the line as to just what publications should be obtained, but I think the Committee could easily decide as to this matter of reports and documents which should be in the Library. I fully agree with the suggestion of the hon. member for St. John's West, and I think the matter should be given attention.

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Mr. Chairman, I may point out for information that a few years ago there was a vote for the maintenance of the Library but this has been cut out for some time now. To-day the only amounts voted in connection with the Library are the salaries of the Librarian and Engrossing Clerk and an amount for printing and stationary. There is no vote for the Library and Miss Morris has not five cents with which to buy a book. All she can do is put in whatever books or documents may be sent in free. If we want to maintain the Library properly there should be a vote for it. The point that has been taken by the honourable member for St. John's West cannot be doubted as correct because as a matter of fact we have not a library in the country to-day though we should have one. Take the case of the Colonial Secretary's Department. When we were in Ottawa Deputy Archivist Smith told me that we have in that department here the foundation of a splendid library. In Ottawa they have a library which any student can visit and procure any kind of reference on any subject that he may want. Of course that is a library in the true sense and one which we could not possibly hope to copy. We are hopelessly behind here in the matter of preserving documents of value and historical records. This has been sadly neglected and the reason is that there is no vote for the Library. I think that it would be particularly convenient for the members of the Opposition to be able to obtain at short notice a copy of the Report of the Economic Conference or other such publication, say at three o'clock in the morning.

HON,. THE. COLONIAL. SECRETARY—Mr. Chairman, in connection with this matter I would like to say that it is all very well for us to say that we must have these things. The report of the Economic Conference, for instance, is a document that we must preserve and we have the copies of it in the Colonial Secretary's Depoartment, but they are kept in the vault to preserve them against fire and until we have a proper library they must remain there. We have even the minutes with the report of the Economic Conference and they are available at any moment if necessary. As the Hon. the Minister of Justice pointed out, in Ottawa they have a magnificent library and an amazing amount of money is spent on their archives. The building itself is as big as this House and it must have cost thousands to fit up. There is a large staff of officials and as the Hon. the Minister of Justice remarked, students may go there and obtain any reference work they need. A proper library would be alright but at present we have to drag along as best we can.

MR. GRIMES—Mr. Chairman. I would like to endorse what has been said by the previous speakers in this connection as a library is very necessary and it is most important that we have works there dealing with questions which we may be discussing here. I concur with the honourable member of St. John's West as to the value of the Report of the Economic Conference and I may say that there are also many other documents which to be found in the Library dealing with the fisheries which are of such vital importance to this country. should be there which we have not now. For instance there is very little Books of that kind may be obtained at a very small cost as can others also dealing with subjects that may come up for consideration here. Take the social legislation abroad which has been referred to here—if any information were needed as to what is done elsewhere there are no books to be referred to in trying to find out what should be adopted here. I think a vote of $500 or $600 would equip the Library so that it would be of service to the members of this House and of value to the country as well.

MR. HIBBS—Mr. Chairman, I beg to support what the previous speakers have said as to the Library and in doing so I beg to be excused for referring to the vote for the Engrossing

Clerk. We all know that she is a very exacting and painstaking official and has been a familiar figure here and I think her salary should be at least $400. This would be only an act of justice as she has been a most efficient worker and has been engaged here for many years. I therefore hope that this matter will be taken into consideration and that she will be given the increased amount.

MR. GRIMES—Mr. Chairman, I agree with the honourable member for Fogo that this is a matter that should be given every consideration.

MR. MOORE—Mr. Chairman, I rise to support the suggestion that this lady's salary be increased. As has been said she is a most efficient official and has given every satisfaction here and I consider is worthy in every way of the proposed advance.

MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS —Mr. Chairman, I would also like to add a word in favor of the proposal to increase this lady's salary. The services of this lady have been very satisfactory to this House for a number of years and I beg to support the suggestion of an increase in her salary.

HON. THE MINISTER OF FINANCE —I think it will be looked after.

MR. CAHILL—Mr. Chairman, I wish to say that I agree as to the increase in salary for the Engrossing Clerk as she deserves it, but as to the matter of the vote for the Library itself I would like to see it granted. I would like to see the Library improved as it would be of value to the members in connection with referring to documents and if nothing else the older members at least would be able to go there when not busy in the House and enjoy themselves perusing the literature.

HON. THE MINISTER OF FINANCE —It is impossible to make a vote for the Department now but it may be dealt with in Supplemental Supply.

HON. THE COLONIAL SECRETARY—I think it can be left in the hands of the Library Committee.

MR. HICKMAN—Mr. Chairman, I have been told that there is no room in the Library for another volume, but there is room in the W.P.A. quarters downstairs.

MR. ASHBOURNE—Mr. Chairman. I notice there is an additional amount of $1,500 for printing, binding and gazetting the Acts. Now I would like to ask when the Acts will be consolidated again?

HON. MR. BRADLEY—In 1936.

MR. ASHBOURNE—Mr. Chairman. It seems rather strange for members coming here not to be able to get Acts that were consolidated in 1916 and are not able to get amendments to Acts since that day. I think the Government should see that a sufficient number is printed each year.

HON. THE COLONIAL SECRETARY—They are printed at the office of the Newfoundland Gazette.

HON. MR. SULLIVAN—And can be bought any time.

MR. HALFYARD—I agree with what has been said by the member for Twillingate. I was trying to get a copy of an Act myself but was not successful. I do not know whose business it is to look after this matter, but I think it is worth while considering by the Government.

HR. HALFYARD—Mr. Chairman. With regard to the salary of the Assistant Deputy Colonial Secretary which has been raised from $2,400 a year to $3,000 a year. I agree with the increase. It has been stated, however, that some of the increases are not actual increases and that certain moneys are received from other sources. I know of $300 that Mr. Stirling got from other sources but I do not know of $600. Now there never was such a great discrepancy between the salaries of the clerks. I presume, however, the whole matter has been considered by the Colonial Secretary and possibly he has done the best he could under the circumstances; but it has been intimated to me—and not by my nephew—that one of the clerks thinks that there is no possibility of an increase and he is considering resigning. There is a vote in the Estimates for a fourth clerk and accountant. There is no such official existing. When I was there I recommended to the then Minister of Finance that that vote be divided up among the other officials.

HON, THE COLONIAL SECRETARY—Mr. Chairman. As the honourable member for Trinity has brought the matter up, I may say that Mr. Fred. Stirling, the Assistant Deputy Colonial Secretary, has never, at least within the past few years, been given that consideration that his services warrant and I do not think that there is a better official in the whole civil service than Mr. Stirling. He has become so valuable in that Department that he cannot be spared out of it; and he has the qualifications to fill any position in the public service. He laid a very strong case before me and he stated that for the past twenty-seven years he has been in that Department and that there are people in the civil service now who came in there a few years ago and who were getting a bigger salary than he is to-day. He said further that he had come to the age when his family have to be educated and he wanted to try and give them as good an education as he could and that he could not live and support his family properly out of what he was earning. Well, after all, that is a poor return for a man of such unquestionable ability. I thought his case deserved special consideration and I laid the matter before the Executive Government with the result that they readily agreed to the increase. His salary is now fixed at three thousand dollars. With regard to the matter of fourth clerk. That vote has been taken for the last couple of years and the amount has been utilized because we have to pay for extra services in the Department. I know that during the War there was a tremendous amount of work done in that Department and the officials did it as efficiently as possible for men to do it and the entire staff, I feel sure, deserve more than they are getting now, but I thought it best to recommend Mr. Stirling for this year and to see that something is done for the balance of the staff next session. The Government wanted to cut down expenses and if next year's finances warrant it they will receive favorable consideration.

Mr. Chairman, I would like to make a brief explanation in relation to the vote of five thousand dollars for the Patriotic Fund. It will be remembered that in the early days of the War a public subscription was raised here. That was before the Government had organized any Department and I think that somewhere in the vicinity of one hundred and twenty thousand dollars was subscribed and was passed over to what is known as "The Patriotic Fund." That fund was consolidated and placed in the hands of a Committee consisting of a number of gentlemen in St. John's and of which Sir P. T. McGrath was Secretary. Since then they have been using money to accommodate the families and dependents of deceased soldiers and returned soldiers.

That money is practically all spent and they contended that for the next three years they would want five thousand a year to keep going. After that they think that it would practically all be over. They made requisitions to the Government and already they have paid $2,500 for this year and we are now making a vote of $5,000 for this purpose. This will be agreeable to the House because they are doing a tremendous amount of good. They are doing it in a way that no other organization is doing it and we hope that this will be acceptable to those who receive it.

Mr. Speaker resumed the Chair.

The Chairman from the Committee reported that they had considered the matter to them referred, had passed certain Resolutions and asked leave to sit again on to-morrow.

On motion this report was received and adopted, and it was ordered that the Committee have leave to sit again on to-morrow.

Pursuant to order and on motion of Hon. the Prime Minister, the House resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole to consider certain resolutions respecting an Agreement between the Government and the Newfoundland Textile Manufacturing Company, Ltd.

Mr. Speaker left the Chair.

Mr. Puddister took the Chair of Committee.

HON, THE PRIME MINISTER –I just want to explain that since the Hon. member for Fortune called our attention to some points in this Bill that we have made the necessary alterations. Regarding the point that he made that anybody, according to the Bill as it read, could have gone to the West End and started a sewing circle and made free entry material into petticoats without starting a mill at all, the Bill has now been altered so that it reads "The manufacture of woolen, cotton and knitted garments," and that in the opinion of the Company's officials, Mr. LeMessurier and others safeguard the right of these persons to import free, cotton, fleecy cotton, flannelette, etc., simply for use and assistance in the manufacture of knitted garments. This Bill, as I stated before, gives exactly the same concessions as were given to the Newfoundland Knitting Mill, except that this Company is not looking for 5 per cent. guarantee and I doubt if we would be much inclined to give it to them if they were.

MR. WARREN—Mr. Chairman. I propose that there be an ammendment to this contract. In the first place 20 years is too long to be offering any protection to anything of this sort. Ten years is quite sufficient for them to get on their feet. Now as to the importation of material free of duty, I quite agree with Section A. The industry is a new one and the idea is already provided for under the Revenue Act. But I don't see how the Government has altered its position with regard to sub. sec. B. sec. 1.

Is that word left out on purpose. The word "fleece?"

Threads, Woolen and Cotton Yarn, everything down to the paper that you wrap your parcels up in; everything is allowed to come in free of duty. I repeat what I said before that if you give so much protection to a factory of this sort even down to the wrapping paper, I don't see one answer that the Government has to give to her classes of factories if they come to the Government and say "We have already given a great deal of employment, we import threads and cotton yarn and wrapping materials for this class of factory and we ought to get some consideration, though we don't get it now." I don't see what answer the Government has to the request of the other classes of factories if they are going to allow this free duty even on wrapping paper. I desire to express my opposition to this Bill.

MR. GRIMES—Mr. Chairman. This Bill has to do with an industry that went out of existence about two years ago. Every member of this House would like to see it re-started, for the more industries at work in this country, the greater will be the employment given, and the more money there will be in circulation, all of which makes for greater prosperity. But it must be shown that any company requiring concessions from the Government, for the starting or restarting of an industry, is prepared to give an equivalent.

The policy of protection can be carried too far, as is shown in the case of other industries which obtain large profits at the expense of the people, and we should examine the Bill carefully to see that it has in it, nothing that will in its working out be found to deal unfairly with the rights of the consumer.

If I am informed correctly, when the Knitting Mills were operating a few years ago, it imported the material required for making Fleece Lined Underwear, already knitted, so that all that was required to be done here, was cut the webbing, and sew it together according to the kind of garment required. In other words, they did not import the cotton in its raw state to be woven into a knitted article here, consequently only a few employees were needed to make the underwear, as compared to the number that would be required if the raw cotton had to be woven into cloth here. In the making of the wool underwear, the wool was spun into cloth here, from which the woollen garments were made, and this gave a larger number employment.

What I desire to know is whether the material required to make the fleece lined and woollen underwear is to be imported into the country in its raw state, and woven here from which the garment is to be made.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—That is as I understand it.

MR. GRIMES—It makes a big difference as far as employment goes, whether the company is to be allowed to import a partly manufactured article, to be completed here, and if it comes in duty free, it is a protection too great to be of benefit to the consumer.

MR. SCAMMELL—I understand that here we are not giving any more concessions than were given to the Knitting Mills before. Well, Mr. Chairman, when this Bill was brought up here the other day I did not know very well what to make of it, but now I notice that there are changes since then, and I am inclined to boost the proposition because I think that anything that can be done to encourage any likely industry ought to be done. After all it will solve itself into a matter of competition and if it is not able to put the same goods on the market as the goods that are imported, then the public will have its own judgment to use as to whether they will buy the thing that is manufactured in Newfoundland or the thing that is imported. If the company is given this concession of importing these goods named they will in a short time be employing a large number of people and looking at this from that viewpoint and from the encouragement that it will give to home industry, I am in favor of these resolutions. Of course the question of protection in a matter like this, is a big one, but we have granted concessions before when they have been asked, and they have been more than those that are asked in these resolutions. I am glad to support these resolutions after I have heard the explanation of the Prime Minister, when he says that the Knitting Mills got more than it asked in these resolutions because the Government gave them a five per cent. guarantee. Therefore, Mr. Chairman, I am prepared to support the Bill for the reasons that I have outlined.

HON. PRIME MINISTER—Mr. Chairman, I am not very clear on this Act myself, and I must say that I would like to know a little more about it, and so, for that reason, I would move that the Committee rise. Whilst I do not agree with the hon. member for Fortune Bay, that we should treat this company just the same as we would any company that sews cloth together, but if the knitting would give more labor than is given at the present time by those who simply bring the cloth into the country and sew it together, then I think that this company should get some concessions. But if it is just a case of bringing the flannel or the flannelette in and making a garment out of it, then it is a very different thing. But I think that with the Act reading as it does, the company can only manufacture knitted goods. It was for that reason that we made the resolutions read as they do. But I would like to be satisfied that we are not granting anyone permission to bring in material and then just sew it into a bit of flannel and so make a garment. I can quite understand the force of the hon. member for Fogo. I move that the Committee rise and we will consider the matter.

Mr. Speaker resumed the chair.

The Chairman from the Committee reported that they had considered the matter to them referred, had made some progress and asked leave to sit again on to-morrow.

On motion this Report was received and adopted, and it was ordered that the Committee have leave to sit again on to-morrow.

The remaining Orders of the Day were deferred.

The following Library Committee was appointed: Mr. Speaker, Mr. W. J. Browne, Mr. Cahill, Mr. Grimes, Mr. Ashbourne.

It was moved and seconded that when the House rises, it adjourn until Monday next at three of the clock.

The House then adjourned accordingly.

MONDAY, March 30th, 1925.

The House met at three of the clock in the afternoon, pursuant to adjournment.

MR. BROWN—Mr. Speaker: I beg leave to present a petition from the inhabitants of Tilt Cove, Caplin Cove and Shoe Cove in the district of Twillingate, and, with your permission, Sir, I would like to read it to the House.

(Reads Petition)

This petition is signed by about sixty people. It seems as if the fisherment of Nipper's Harbor and vicinity, who have a law governing their own grounds, come down there and set trawls. It does not seem hardly fair and I support the prayer of the petitioners.

MR. ASHBOURNE—Mr. Speaker: I give the petition my hearty support.

MR. GODDEN—Mr. Speaker: I beg leave to present a petition from Sibley's Cove in the district of Trinity. The petition is signed by practically every man in that place and asks for $300 to repair a local road. I might point out that this particular local road is one very much used by the people of Sibley's Cove and is very essential to the fishermen there in their daily avocation. I would also like to point out that out of the local grant only $27 is allowed Sibley's Cove for the upkeep of some three-quarters of a mile of local roads. I would particularly ask that immediate consideration be given to this petition.

MR. HALFYARD—I have much pleasure in supporting the prayer of the petition.

Mr. Hichman, Mr. Ashbourne and Mr. Scammell gave notice of questions.

NOTICE OF QUESTION.

(1) MR. WARREN—Asked the Hon. the Prime Minister: (1) what are the functions of the so-called Railway Commission; (2) by what authority were they appointed; (3) do they function under Minute of Council; (4) who are the members of the Commission; (5) have any of them received or are any of them receiving any pay, emolument or money directly or indirectly from the Commission or from public funds or railway funs; (6) do any of the members of the Commission receive or have they received any money or payment, either as principal or agent, for any goods, wares, merchandise, services or otherwise from public funds or railway funds; (7) if so to lay upon the Table of the House a statement showing all amounts paid to any member of the Commission either as principal or agent and for what the said amounts were paid; (8) under what authority any such amounts were paid; (9) if any payments were made to any company, firm or person was it revealed to the Commission that any member of the Commission was a shareholder, director or agent of such company, firm or person or had any interest therein; (10) are the net or gross receipts from the operation of the railroad and steamships public funds; (11) by what authority salaries and other payments are made; (12) if there should be a deficit in the operation of the railroad system from what funds (public or not) would the deficit be met; (13) who is the present proprietor of the railway system operating in the Colony; (14) does the Hon. Prime Minister consider those employed on the railway system as public servants or civil servants; (15) into what account are the receipts of the railway system paid eventually; (16) if not into the Newfoundland Exchequer Account by what authority are they paid into any other account and has such account been authorised by the Legislature; (17) is the so-called Railway Commission a public body or public board; (18) are the profits (if any) from the Railway part of the revenue of the Colony; (19) has the legislature of the Colony any control over the appropriation of any moneys paid by or to the Railway system whether as salaries or otherwise; (20) is the Railway a public service or a part of the public service; (21) by what authority does the Governor-in-Council or any other body or so-called Commission or any person pay out any public moneys on account of the railroad; (22) has the Auditor General drawn attention to any irregularities in this respect; (23) has the Auditor General any control over the so-called Railway or Railway Commission or its payments or receipts; (24) do the Commission keep any minutes or record of their decisions or meetings; (25) to lay upon the Table of the House a copy of any such minutes or records; (26) who is the Solicitor or Counsel to the Railway Commission; (27) is he paid a standing retainer and what is the nature of such retainer and amount; (28) is he paid for any services in addition to such retainer; (29) to lay upon the Table a statement showing all amounts paid such solicitor or counsel from June 30th, 1924, to date; (30) does the Government propose to lay before the Legislature of the Colony a Balance Sheet showing the financial transactions of the Railway system for the past year duly audited, and any report as to its operation.

MR. WARREN—Mr. Speaker: I desire to say that in reading over that question since I asked it I find that numbers six and seven really go further on paper than I intended, as I know and the public know that there are certain articles sold on commission by firms, perhaps, whose shareholders are members of the Railway Commission.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—Mr. Speaker: I hope to have a reply to that question ready on to-morrow; but I would like to draw attention to part (9) of that question which says: "If any payments were made to any company, firm or person was it revealed to the Commission that any member of the Commission was a shareholder, director or agent of such company, firm or person or had any interest therein." I am personally a shareholder of the Colonial Cordage Company and the Imperial Tobacco Company, who, perhaps, sold a considerable quantity of goods to the Commission.

MR. WARREN—Mr. Speaker: May I say in explanation that that part of the question would come in the same category as the other two that I mentioned. I did not mean petty details or things of that sort.

(2) MR. WARREN asked the Hon. the Prime Minister: (1) What is the salary or director's fee paid to the director appointed by the Government on the Board of the Newfoundland Power and Paper Co., Ltd.; (2) is the Government directly or indirectly liable for the payment of such salary or fee during the term of the guarantee given by the Government.

HON. PRIME MINISTER—Mr. Speaker, I beg to table a reply to this question.

(3) MR. WARREN asked the Hon. the Prime Minister: (1) have any members of the Board of Liquor Control received any pay, salary or other emolument directly or indirectly from the public funds of the Colony; (2) upon what authority has any such payment been made; (3) are the receipts from the Board of Liquor Control public funds; (4) if not, to whom do such receipts belong; (5) if these should be a deficit in the accounts of the Board of Liquor Control would the public funds of the Colony be responsible for the payment of such deficit; (6) are the members of the Board of Liquor Control and the others employed in that service public servants; (7) are they paid out of public funds; (8) if not, who pays them; (9) into what account are the receipts of the Board of Liquor Control paid; (10) do the funds or receipts of the Board of Liquor Control form part of the Consolidated Revenue Fund; (11) if not paid into the Newfoundland Exchequer Account into what account are they paid: (12) do the receipts from the Board of Liquor Control belong to the Colony, if not, to whom do they belong; (13) are the profits, if any, from the sale of alcoholic liquors part of the revenue of the Colony; (14) has the Legislature any control over the appropriation of any moneys paid to or expended by the Board of Liquor Control, if not, why not; (15) is the Board of Liquor Control a public service or a branch of the public service; (16) has the Auditor General drawn attention to any irregularities in regard to the Board of Liquor Control or to any payments made by or to them; (17) has this House any control over the Board of Liquor Control and if so, how can that control be exercised; (18) does the Government purpose to place before the Legislature of the Colony any Balance Sheet showing the financial transactions of the Board of Liquor Control to date duly audited.

HON. PRIME MINISTER—I hope to have a reply to that question ready on to-morrow.

(4) MR. GODDEN asked Hon. the Minister of Posts and Telegraphs why Mr. S. Bradbury was disrated from the position of Superintendent of Mails and Mail Clerks; what his present position is, and his salary, and if it is not a fact that he has given eminent satisfaction during an uninterrupted period of over twenty years in the Postal Service.

HON. MINISTER OF POSTS AND TELEGRAPHS—I beg to table the formation.

(5) MR. WARREN asked the Hon. Minister of Posts and Telegraphs if there is any mail service or freight service to the Islands of Sagona and Brunette, Fortune Bay, if so, who has the contract and to table a copy of same and when and how often is the mail delivered.

HON. MINISTER OF POSTS AND

TELEGRAPHS—I beg to table the information.

The Chairman from the Committee of the Whole on Supply reported certain Resolutions, which were read a first time as follows:

Finance Department	$3,667,390.57
Col. Secretary's Dept. ..	61,527.00

The said Resolutions being read a second time, it was moved and seconded that the House concur with the Committee therein, and the said Resolutions were agreed to.

Hon. the Minister of Finance tabled the following documents:

Statement of Customs Revenue collected in the Colony during the year ended 30th June, 1924.

Statement of the Imports and Exports of the Colony for the year ended 30th June, 1924.

A Comparative Statement of Goods, wares and merchandise imported into the Colony during the years ended June 30th, 1923, and 30th June, 1924, showing increases and decreases for the year 1923-1924.

A Comparative Statement of Revenue received at each outport for the years 1922-23 and 1923-24.

A Comparative Statement of Light Dues, showing collections at each Outport for the years 1922-23 and 1923-24.

A Return of the Bank Fishery for the year 1924.

A Statement showing the Revenue collected on goods, wares and merchandise imported through the Post Office.

Statement showing the movements of Shipping during the year ended June 30th, 1924.

An Abstract of Shipping for the year ended 31st December, 1924.

Mr. Speaker informed the House that he had received a message from the Legislative Council acquainting the House of Assembly that they had passed the Bill sent up entitled "An Act to Regulate Travel on Highways and the Speed, Operation and Load of Vehicles thereon," with some amendments, in which they requested the concurrence of the House of Assembly.

On motion the said amendments were read a first time and it was ordered that they be read a second time on to-morrow.

HON. COLONIAL SECRETARY—Mr. Speaker, I would ask that the second reading of these amendments be deferred until to-morrow. I have only just seen these, and I have not had time to look into the matter. It appears that most of the amendments are merely renumbering of sections on account of sections being added. I think before we pass them, we would like to have an opportunity of going into them, and explaining any alterations that may be made.

Pursuant to order and on motion of Hon. the Prime Minister, the House resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole to consider the Bill entitled "Of the House of Assembly."

Mr. Speaker left the Chair.

Mr. Puddester took the Chair of Committee.

HON. THE LEADER OF THE OPPOSITION—Mr. Chairman. I just want to say a few words in connection with Bay de Verde District. As I have already intimated to this House there is going to be a great deal of confusion throughout the country when this Bill goes through this House. Nobody knows what are the lines of the districts, with the exception of what we see here in this Bill. The Bill I understand is going to make the dividing line in proportion with the population. I was told by a man from Bay de Verde district a few days ago that Broad Cove is divided so that the line goes through the settlement. This looks as if Broad Cove Church is in Carbonear District. I am merely saying what I have been told. Perhaps the Hon. Member can give us some information. Is not the Methodist Church in Carbonear District? He also told me of one case where a man had his home in Carbonear District and his barn in Bay de Verde District. The Bill is confusing to the people living in the outports and the result is going to be confusion all through. Every Government in the future is going to make some alterations in this Bill and unless the people are given an opportunity to express their opinions on this measure as to the divisions that are to be made the confusion will be all the greater. I suggested the other day that the Bill be referred to a select Committee to sit out of session and this suggestion was made for the sake of the Bill. I am not against the Redistribution Bill. I am quite satisfied to have the districts divided up but I think that the people throughout the country should have an opportunity to see what it means and to see how it effects the different settlements in which they live. The matter is not so important that it should be rushed. That is what it looks like. The Prime Minister told us the other day that nobody could tell as to whether we would have an election within twelve months or not.

Something must have taken place on the other side of the House because this side of the House had no intimation of anything like it. The Prime Minister gave us to understand this. I am only repeating what the Prime Minister said. I say that there must be some ulterior motive to have to rush this Bill through the House of Asembly. What should be done is that there should be a Select Committee chosen from both Houses and copies of the Bill should be distributed throughout the country so that all those places in the northern districts where they get a mail every week or so will get an opportunity to get an idea as to what the Bill means. It is going to cause a lot of confusion and a great deal of legislation for future Governments.

HON. MR. CRAMM—The statement made by the Hon. Leader of the Opposition that Broad Cove Church would be in Carbonear District under the Redistribution is not correct. If it were correct it wouldn't be very serious as about one-third of the people who go to that Church will belong to Carbonear District. Broad Cove Church will still be in Bay de Verde District. . The other descriptions are not as accurate as they might be. Instead of starting at a point "north" of Lead Cove, it should be a point "northeast" of Lead Cove. Instead of the mouth of the brook running into Broad Cove Pond, it should be the mouth of "the main brook" running into Broad Cove Pond. Instead of to the "mouth of the Brook running out of" Broad Cove Pond, it should be the "outlet" of Broad Cove Pond. With these changes the description is, I think, quite accurate. Bay de Verde District will run from Old Perlican inclusive to Lower Small Point exclusive.

MR. HALFYARD—Mr. Chairman, with regard to the redistribution of seats I am entirely in accord with it. It is something that has been looked forward to for several years past. I presume we all are unanimous in this respect. But now that the Government has decided to make the redistribution I do not think that there is any need for undue rush. The bill has been but a short time before the House still it has been brought to the attention of the Government the alignments of some of the Conception Bay districts are not altogether correct. The Hon. Member for Bay de Verde, Mr. Cramm, has just said that boundaries of the district of Bay de Verde are wrong and the section should stand over. Now if the Boundaries of the district of Bay de Verde are not correct and the Hon. Member asks that the section should stand over, does it not follow that the majority of the districts calls for investigation and scrutiny so that the bill when placed on the Statute Books will be as correct as it it is possible for it to be. It has been intimated by the Hon. the Introducer of the Bill that there have been some alterations made already in the districts of Harbor Grace and Bay Roberts, and I really think that it is only reasonable that we should give the country as a whole the opportunity to read the bill thoroughly and scrutinize it in every possible way. There may not be any radical changes but when you have consulted the people you can come back and say that you did not do it without consulting them. No doubt there is sure to be a difference of opinion but after the people have been given an opportunity to express their opinions they are more satisfied even though there may not be many changes. There is something sentimental about it. You may think that it is a matter of detail but after all I think that it is a matter that is worthy of consideration. The suggestion given by the Leader of the Opposition that the bill be considered out of session by a Select Committee of both Houses and report at the next session of the Legislature in a reasonable one. If it were the last year of the term of Government then there might be some reason for putting it through. We think that the redistribution of seats is desirable if not all over the country at least over the greater part of it. Now as far as Trinity district is concerned you have formed a new district and if I am a candidate at the next election and stand as the candidate for the district of Trinity Bay I do not know what my friends of the North Side of the district from Melrose down to Lancaster, which includes Port Union, Catalina, Little Catalina and Elliston will think. I do not know whether these people will appreciate being the constituents of a new district under the name of Bonavista. I think that they would prefer to go under the name of Trinity. All their associations have been with this district and there may be a certain sentiment about that.

Perhaps Spillar's Cove, Lancaster and Villa Verte, from a geographical, social and a business point of view should be attached to Bonavista. You are cutting out a part of Fogo district, and attaching it to a district called Bonavista North. I don't know what our friends in Fogo district will think of coming under the name of Bonavista district. On the whole, I would support the redistribution Bill; but I would prefer if the number of districts was less than we already have, rather than more.

Now, with regard to the population in proportion to the number of representatives. The population is scattered. It covers a large section of the country, geographically, and from that point of view there is a reason for dividing up the districts. But everyone knows that Bonavista district has a very large section of the country even for two members. Further south, in the Southern districts there is no need of having so many representatives—around Conception Bay, particularly. There is no need, however, and instead of forty there should be about thirty. Your basis of population is altogether too low. It should be increased, instead of six thousand, it should be ten thousand. That should be the basis the Redistribution should be worked on. There is another mat- in proportion to the number of representative for Labrador, and why should you not have Labrador represented.

MR. WARREN—There's no boundary settlement.

MR. HALFYARD—If we haven't a boundary now, it is about time we did have one. This has been in dispute since 1908. At that time the Canadian Government made an issue of the question. The Newfoundland Government have been spending money in connection with Commissions since then. I don't think we should give the Canadians any reason, at the present time to think that we have any doubt of the ownership of Labrador. I don't think that there is any doubt in the minds of any one who has studied the question in Newfoundland; and in advocating that a district be put in this Bill for Labrador I would give my reasons for it.

There is no occasion for anyone in this House going into the history of the Labrador Boundary. That is well known to those who have taken up the Newfoundland side of the case. I took the trouble to look up the opinions of those who tried to gather all the information they could in connection with the Labrador Boundary Question, and I just dotted down a few facts which are well known to the hon. member for Fortune District who has been interested in the question. They are known also to the hon. Minister of Justice and possibly to others.

We have to go back to the year 1670, when the Hudson's Bay Company obtained a charter from Charles II., then by the conquest of Canada in 1760 Labrador fell into the hands of the English and this was confirmed in 1763 by the Treaty of Paris.

The question may be asked here what territory the Hudson Bay Company possessed. They possessed all that portion of the peninsula drained by the rivers that fell into the Hudson Bay, and the Straits, and then it became necessary to divide the balance, and the Province of Quebec was bounded on the Labrador coast, by the River St. John and from thence by a line running west from the head of that river. It was stated that all the coast from the River St. John to the Hudson Straits with Anticosti and Magdalen Islands was at one time under the inspection of the Government of Newfoundland, and in 1763 Sir Thomas Gray, the Governor of Newfoundland assumed that the residue was Newfoundland territory. Then with regard to the point raised in connection with the representation we collect duties on Labrador and have been collecting them for years, and the collection of duties without representation, causes revolutions. This lost the British Government the North American colonies. I don't suppose the natives of Labrador are in a position to revolt against taxation; but still if they had the power they certainly would.

(Quotes from History).

So much for the history connected with Newfoundland-Labrador and Canada.

Now, Mr. Chairman, quite recently the Prime Minister and his colleagues went to Canada upon the invitation of Premier Taschereau, of Quebec, to talk about the sale of Labrador, and I think that roving commision was initiated by a Mr. Du Champlain. who hold interests in some timber lands on Labrador. The Newfoundland Government did not know anything about Labrador or about what they had to sell. They should have courteously replied to Premier Taschereau and said that as they had a very strenuous year they would like to have a holiday, and take in the sights and scenery of Montreal, Quebec and the other cities of the Dominion.

We graciously accept the invitation and if Premier Taschereau could arrange while we are there for curling matches and other side shows, it would, of course, brighten our holiday.

The money spent on that commission could have been used to greater advantage in the appointing of a geological survey to go down and cruise the Labrador and find out just what we want to sell, because we know very little about Labrador.

Mr. Chairman, I regard the Labrador Boundary Question as a most serious one. We have no idea of the potential wealth of Labrador. What little information we have is from the reports of the geological surveys of Canada between 1892 and 1896. We gather from that report that thirty per cent. of the Labrador disputed territory is timber land, that the total area under dispute is 120 thousand square miles.

And the Newfoundland area is forty thousand square miles. As estimated by the authorities at Quebec, six cords of wood to the acre, and six hundred and forty acres to the square mile gives us 153,650,000 cords of wood which, valued at $1.00 a cord, equals $153,650,000. That being so it behoves the Newfoundland Government and people to seriously consider the selling of this territory unless they can get sufficient money to at least whipe off the national debt. Anything less than $50,000,000 should not be given a second's consideration, as that sum is only one-third the wood value alone. As to the water power at Grand River, Muskrat Falls, there is four million h.p. A commission appointed by the House of Commons went to Ireland and estimated the water power there at three-quarters of a million horse-power, valued at ten million pounds. At that rate the water-power of Labrador is worth two hundred million dollars, and with the pulp wood valued at one hundred and fifty-three millin, the total is $353,000,000.00. In today's issue of the Daily News, there is an item on the electrification of farms, which reads:

ELECTRIC FARMING GROWS.

"BERLIN—Electric farming is making progress in Sweden, which is reported to have 52,000 electrically equipped farms, 37 million out of a total of 94 Million acres of arable land being electrified. The annual consumption is 120 million kilowatt hours out of Sweden's total production of 2,800 million kilowatt hours."

Now looking at the possibilities of our water power in electrifying farms in this climate where it is cold, it will be seen that by this heating, the ground would become arable and fertile. As to the transmission of electric power, we do not know how easy it will be in future to transmit it from Labrador to Newfoundland. The Leader of the Opposition suggests that it is already being carried eight hundred miles. In Hamilton Inlet there are sections which are most prolific of vegetation, and though of course I do not know one million part of the information concerning that place. I throw out these suggestions as to the potentital wealth of Labrador. It is too valuable at present to consider any sale, and till we know more about it I feel that no Government should undertake to dispose of it. Now we depend on the fishery there, and the overlord of the sea-coast should also be the overlord of the hinterland. We cannot have a duel jurisdiction, as whoever owns the coast much also own the inside territory. Products of the soil must be brought to the sea coast. We talk of boosting Newfoundland and its scenic attractions, and speak of it as a thing of beauty and a joy forever. The same has been said of Labrador. Sir Patrick McGrath in "Newfoundland in 1911" quotes Sir William McGregor and many others, and what part of the Continent can be described in more glowing colors for it's a salubrious climate and as a health resort. My nephew spent a winter in Sandwich Bay two years ago, and he says the climate was beautiful, and altogether different from that of Newfoundland. He was living up in the Bay and he said there was no humidity there like near the coast, and the snow never hardened like in Newfoundland, as the climate was affable all through the winter. There would be drifts as the snow was very fine, but there was the same temperature all through the winter, and one could not be languid, as there was that in the air which caused one to feel bright and active all the time, and not half dead. He gave me an idea of how the people lived there in the winter, and said it was wrong to say they are not thrifty. They were never in bed in the morning after daylight. They had their own work to do, and they kept at it from daylight till after dark. They never had a day's sickness—his wife and child were with him—and he spoke in the highest terms of the Labrador winter. Sir William McGregor visited Labrador officially in 1908 and negotiated Hamilton Inlet in the cruiser "Fiona," and he reported to the Secretary of State for the Colonies as follows:—

(Quotes Report)

It is not my purpose Mr. Chairman to delay the Committee, but I think it only right to give my opinion on the possible potential wealth of Labrador. We have to govern ourselves by experience, and it has been said by historians that Labrador is akin to Alaska in all its characteristics, its geographical situation, and its geological formation are the same as Alaska, and many persons predict that its mineral possibilities are great, whilst its peltries are the finest in the world and fetch the highest prices. Comparing Labrador with Alaska, what do we find. Alaska was bought by the United States from Russia in 1867 for £1,440,000, and they thought they made a good bargain when they sold it. It contains 20 million acres of merchantable timber. Its resources in gold and other metals cannot be estimated. Its coal resources are put by the United States Geological Survey at a minimum of 150 billion tons. Oil of high quality has been discovered at widely separated points, what this discovery will bring forth, no one yet knows. Alaska's fisheries produce from 40 to 50 million dollars a year. Alaska carries on a trade with the United States amounting to 80 million dollars a year. Already Alaska's exports come to a total of over a billion dollars!

So that in considering representation for Labrador we also should appreciate the potential wealth of Labrador. We should never consider the selling of it unless, as I said before, we get fifty million dollars for it; certainly we should never consider selling it for a small amount. Now that we have the matter uppermost in our minds, that, as soon as we can get the Quebec Government under way to submit their case to the Privy Council, about ten or twelve months after the Labrador Boundary dispute will be settled in favor of Newfoundland and that before the next general election there will be no question about the ownership of the Labrador, I think it advisable that we should now make arrangements about representation, and, if this Bill is referred to a Select Committee to sit out of session and report back within a short time, I think greater satisfaction will be given to the country as a whole.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—Mr. Chairman: As there has been nothing new brought up by those who have spoken this afternoon on this Bill, I do not think it is necessary for me for the third time to record the policy of the Government with regard to it. Members of the Opposition think it a great mistake to have the Bill go through before the people of the country have not had time to know the boundary lines. We are perfectly satisfied that the people have had time and we want to see the Bill go through at this session. With regard to Mr.

Halfyard's address on the Labrador, I might say that it was very interesting and I have no doubt that it would be a good thing to have a member for the Labrador, if we own it. We believe we have an interest on the Labrador but the question of boundaries has yet to be settled before the Privy Counc'l I would not suppose that there are many members of this House who would want to go and canvas that district late in the fall of the year.

MR. GODDEN—Mr. Chairman: I was rather interested to hear the Prime Minister say that he had made up his mind to put the Bill through at this session of the House. In that case I do not propose to waste much time in dealing with the matter. I might say, however, that the idea of one man districts throughout Newfoundland is one which meets with my entire approval, and I believe everybody in this country is favorably inclined to that idea, but that is no reason why the first Bill calling for redistribution should be passed at this session of the House of Assembly. The Bill may prove to be satisfactory; but on the other hand it may prove to be unsatisfactory. There are many reasons why a Bill of this nature should be proceeded with cautiously, and without undue haste, and with all due respect to the honourable introducer of this Bill, I claim that it will do no harm to delay this measure for redistribution until another session, and I will endeavour to explain why. Rightly or wrongly, denominationalism has a distinct bearing on matters political in this country. Representation in both branches of the Legislature as well as appointments in the Civil Service are made with the idea in view of comparative equality regarding the different religious bodies; and rightly or wrongly, each denomination is frankly jealous of the other, and are on the lookout all the time for evidences of political discrimination. I do not suggest that this Bill for redistribution has been drawn up with a deliberate intention of unfair dealing in any part of the community. For that matter I understand that care has been taken to obviate any such thing, but when a Bill of this nature is brought to the attention of the country, the first question asked on all sides is: Who is responsible for the Bill? Are the parties who are responsible for this Bill, as we have it presented to us to-day, well enough informed of general requirements, and, above all, are they approved representatives of everybody. If not, then I say that in order to have a redistribution Bill which shall provide for the satisfaction of all parties, a committee should be formed comprised of officials appointed by the various denominations to go into this question of district representation before we discuss the matter further in this House. Another suggestion I would like to make is that an effort should be made to lesson the number of representatives instead of increasing them by four and let all districts be one man districts. Divide St. John's just as you divide all the outport districts so that there will be one district, one representative, one man, one vote.

MR. DUFF—I would just like to make a few remarks. This is a very important Bill. Under this Bill we will require thirty four returing officers, deputies and all the rest of it instead of eighteen formerly which is unfortunate. I think we should reduce the membership instead of increasing it.

As regards the district of Labrador, my friend, the member for Trinity Bay, spoke of it. Now there is one that I would suggest and that is that the people belonging to the Labrador should get the jobs as lighthouse keepers. It would save the passage money to and fro, which you have to pay formerly. I think it would be only fair to appoint the Labrador people to these positions.

I would like to bring to the notice of the House again what I said in connection with Mr. Guy. This redistribution Bill is very important but is much more important to give a square deal to the representatives of the people. I mentioned the fact that the man is well passed middle life. He had three sons in the war. One was killed, one was decorated for bravery, one returned, and this man is thrown aside like an old boot. We all know what these boys fought for. It was right against might. The Government of to-day is acting in the same way as the Germans acted in Europe. I would like the Government to reconsider this matter. I talked to several of the Government heads and I find that that they are not inclined to make this thing right. And as I go over the estimates I find that you have money for everything, even some of the old members who were in this House a few years ago are pensioned. Men who squandered hundreds of thousands of dollars. Yet a man whose boys fought in the great war was thrown out of his job for pure spite. It was nothing more or less. A man who has done his work thoroughly. There was no man in Carbonear who could do it as well. And when the war was on some of us can remember very distinctly when the boys were at the front the anxiety and the worry that was felt from day to day. Everyday they were expecting to get news that their son was killed. Fortunately I did not. And then to find after the war is over that the Government is going back to the same old tricks that the Germans played in 1914, is scarcely what one expected.

Now Mr. Chairman, if this redistribution Bill is valuable for goodness sake have a thought and be fair to the principle for which our boys died in the Great War. That is all that I have to say. I am quite satisfied with the one man districts. Carbonear is going to be extended. But I have nothing to say to that. I don't know whether I will ever come back to this House. Whether I do or not it does not make much difference, but I certainly trust it will be the means of giving the districts representatives from their own districts and not as now city men to represent outside districts with no interest in same.

MR. GODDEN—Mr. Chairman, might I ask why the District of Harbor Main was not divided up the same as the other districts.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—Mr. Chairman, in reply to the hon. member the reason why the district of Harbor Main was not divided into two one man districts was the desire to maintain the 13 Roman Catholic seats, and this would be very difficult without giving Harbor Main two representatives. As it appears now the Roman Catholic Denomination has 13 seats out of forty. But numerically they are not entitled to more than 13 seats. We want to arrange it so that they will not get less representatives than before with the 36 members.

MR. HIBBS—Mr. Chairman, with regard to the redistribution of seats, I would like to know how you are going to manage it. I want to say that I am in entire accord with the principle of the Bill I quite agree with it. I quite agree that the whole system should have been obliterated long ago. I fully appreciate the great amount of labour the distribution of the various districts will entail. I know it is very difficult to get everything to fall in line with the views of the various speakers. I did not think that I would be saying anything on this matter because I understand the Government has made up its mind to put this thing through in spite of what the Opposition might say. But what the Hon. Member for Trinity has said has just raised a point that I would like to pursue a little further.

The Prime Minister was asked why the District of Harbor Main being an outport has not been treated the same as the other districts.

In reply he said that in order to keep the same denominational proportion it was necessary to make it a two man district. I don't agree with that. At the same time denominationally speaking I don't suppose that the Government could do anything else. But I am the only man in the House who happens to be a native of Harbor Main I don't think that I would be doing my duty if I did not stand up and say something in behalf of that District. That District I know is very well represented by Mr. Woodford and Mr. Cahill. It is well taken care of by the members in the House. But I am the person to whom a petition was entrusted in 1920 asking for the division of that district. Now it is the irony of fate that the district of Harbor Main is the only district in Newfoundland that has ever petitioned for a division. Now it happens to be the only district that is not divided.

I wonder Mr. Chairman can we ever happen to get out of the grip of denominationalism in this country. I don't see any hope of it. Because the people whose duty it is to make a step in this direction are falling down on the job. And we all admit it is high time, if we have not got to work, to make a step in this direction. There is not much hope of this. The great trouble is that we are prepared to cater and to pander to that thing and to foster it and of course it is going to grow. What is the difference. Is there any difference, whether you belong to the Roman Catholic or the Methodist or the Church of England. It is most unfortunate. Mr. Chairman, I want to be absolutely frank about it.

Now when I say this I mean to be absolutely frank and open about it. I feel sure that I voice the opinion of all the members of this House. I do not want to place obstacles in the way when I say that something could have been done quite easily because I believe we have not sufficient courage. When Mr. Walsh and Mr. Woodford can go down to Bonavista to contest the district and Mr. Monroe and Mr. Hibbs can go to Placentia that will be the time that we can consider that we no longer are running along the denominational lines. I do not think that the people of this country want to go on in this way. But we do it because we are afraid that we are going to lose votes. We want to pander and cater to this thing so that we may be able to please everybody. If there is anything in this world that I do detest it is this habit. Here we are to-day sitting down here seriously considering how to divide this country of ours into sections so that each denomination can be properly represented. I am sure that I am not afraid to trust the Church of England into the hands of a Roman Catholic or a Methodist. I say this because that is the church to which I happen to belong. That is how I feel. We have not sufficient courage. There is no country in the world in which they divide the constituencies as they do in Newfoundland. Pardon me Mr. Chairman, I am not speaking sectarianism. I do not want to be taken that way. I really deplore this thing. This matter of the one man district has been advocated for the last ten or fifteen years. I am very glad that we are to have a redistribution. I know that it means a great deal of work and I want to take this opportunity to congratulate the person who has gone to this trouble. I know what it must be like and I would not like to have to do it myself. But I think that the Government ought to give us more time. I am really in earnest about this.

The Leader of the Opposition suggested here this afternoon that a larger committee be appointed to consist of members of both Houses and he said that they should sit out of session and report back to the House at the next sitting. There is nothing wrong about that. There will not be an election next year at least I hope to goodness that there will not be an election next year because we do not want to put you out now. We want to give you a chance. We want to give you a chance to see what good you can do. So I do not think that there is going to be an election or at least any general election within the next twelve months. I think that the suggestion of the Leader of the Opposition should be followed out. I do not see any reason why we should not give the matter more thought. I think that it would be a mistake to decide the matter too quickly. We should regard this thing as a national matter. I hope that there is nobody small enough to look at it as anything else. I am glad to see the one man district scheme come into force. I think that the principle of the one man district is the principle that will serve the interest of this country best. I believe that and I do not feel that there is any discrimination in having made St. John's East and West and Harbor Main two men districts. Now we come to the outports. I suppose that there must be some reason why the district has not been divided. I am sure that Mr. Woodford feels that if the district had been divided he could have gone down to the Eastern End and have been elected. I know that Mr. Woodford could have done that. You do think that yourself don't you Mr. Woodford?

HON. THE MINISTER OF POSTAL TELEGRAPHS—I think that I had one half of your friends at the last election.

MR. HIBBS—That just bears out my argument. But I think Mr. Chairman that the Prime Minister should take the advice of the Leader of the Opposition. That is raise the Committee and give the members a chance to sit down and view the thing from every standpoint. We have only had these bills for a short time and we have not had time to go into them as they should be gone into. We want some time to go into a matter like this. We have to attend to our business in the day and try to carry on and so we should like to have more time. I know that I have hardly time to attend to my Legislative duties. I would like to get another opportunity myself. I say that the hon. gentlemen on this side of the House should be given an opportunity to go into the matter and see if they cannot make some better arrangements. I am under the opinion that a district with Catholic representation could have been arranged on the West Coast. I think that the matter was considered in 1923. I think at the time the population was sixty Protestants to forty Catholics. I do not know whether there has been any change since then or not. I think that the one man constituency is a good thing in the outports. But, Mr. Chairman, I want to be perfectly candid and I think that there is a lot of hypocrisy. We are here fixing this thing and condeming our country to it for the next hundred years. I think that we should take the trouble to do this thing now as best we can. I say, Mr. Chairman that I am not afraid to trust my religion in the hands of any man of the opposite religion. I hope that I can say the same thing about every other man in this House in this connection. I would like to ask Major Cashin if the regiments in France were divided denominationally.

MAJOR CASHIN—No they were not. But we had no politicians over there. They were all behind the lines in soft cushy jobs. We eliminated the politicians.

MR. HIBBS—I quite agree with what you say. But I say that the present case of the denominational division of the districts is not only deplorable but it is absolutely ridiculous. I do not care what the thing you can find the same condition. I have been talking to men in the police force who have been there for forty years. I have talked to them myself and they are still ordinary constables and when they are asked why they are still there, they say "oh, there were so many Roman Catholics advanced and I had to stay behind because some of the other religions had to be advanced." It is a painful subject to talk about Mr. Chairman. I regret very much to have to make these remarks. I feel like saying a lot more about it but I know that it is a delicate question and I would not like to have my remarks misconstrued. I suppose that this thing must go on. Now I would like to refer to the District of Harbour Main again. This is the district that sent a petition to this House of Assembly in 1920 asking to have the district divided at Maher's Bridge and so make the two districts one East and the other West. The Government of the day was looking forward to the time when there would be a redistribution of seats and now it is the irony of fate that the one district that petitioned this House is the one district that is not to be divided. They desire to have the district divided. This petition came to me and was very largely signed. The number of signatures was one thousand. I did not take the petition officially before the House of Assembly. I presented it to the Prime Minister of the time but I knew the absolute futility of it and so it did not come before the House. I passed it along to the Prime Minister. I knew that it was absolutely useless to talk about it. I do not wish to make a point about Harbor Main but I wish to talk about the principle of the matter.

However, Mr. Chairman, if it is the intention of the Government, according to the statement of the Prime Minister to go ahead with this thing I think that it is alright. I believe that I voice the sentiments of every member of the House. But I think that the majority of the people of the country should and would like to get a chance to go into this matter and I think that the Government should give them the opportunity that they ask for.

HON. MINISTER OF JISTICE—There is nothing to prevent me under a Redistribution Bill from going over to Bay Roberts or to some district in Bonavista Bay. There is no law against that.

MR. HIBBS—You do not seem to be preparing for it.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—There is no occasion. I never believe in the man who gets ready for an election four years in advance. Something always crops up overnight and spoils all his preparations. We, on this side of the House, are not bothered with elections now; we have several other things to bother us. Elections are things that sometimes crop up overnight, but this idea of getting ready years in advance is of no moment now.

But ,as regards the feature the Hon. Member has introduced, I think that in introducing this Bill it was openly said that the Government had certain conditions which had to be met; and this Bill was introduced in an endeavor to meet with a situation that we cannot wink out of sight. For instance, I was familiar with this matter of Harbour Main District. I remember it quite well. I remember when there was a petition talked of, but I think you will find that that talk started after the bye-election of 1921. There was a general soreness in a particular section of the district where our friend had considerable influence, because the two Opposition members, who were familiarly known then as the "hang-'er-down's" were elected again; and it was following that bye-election in which these two candidates were returned, that the end of the district which saw the value of having one man in the Government started the petition; and I really thnk it was a compliment to the honourable member himself that the people there naturally felt—if we sensible people down here had a member for ourselves, we would be in the Government. That was the petition and I do not think there was anything of a denominational character about it at all.

MR. HIBBS—I wonder why the Hon. Minister of Justice will not talk about the principle of the thing at all.

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—I am dealing with the point you raised. You raised this position about Harbor Main District. You said that there was a petition brought forward, and I am merely telling the history of the petition. It was common knowledge at the time up there. The honourable member himself will remember that it was suggested at the time that he had considerable influence there at this end of the district on account of the road work.

As regards the suggestion made here that this Bill should be given further consideration, I cannot see what object can be gained by further delay. I have been listening to the remarks that have been made, and it appears that every one is agreed upon the principle of having one man districts. There appears to be a general acceptance of that position; and as I understand it, when the Bill was introduced, copies of it were given to every member of the House. Surely, then, it was the business of any member who had any other form of district representation in mind to have brought it forward before the Select Committee or now. To-day there has not been a single criticism of the manner in which the Districts were laid out. No one has suggested that any of the districts have been wrongly divided, or that any of the northern districts for instance, should have any other boundaries. Such a question as that has not been raised; and frankly, I must say, that it is not a matter of supporting it as a Government measure, but it is a question of supporting a Bill that is brought in in an endeavour to meet a situation, and it is merely trying to curtail the areas of districts; and it seems to me to-day that we have had this Bill before us sufficiently long to be able to make good criticism, or offer some alternative suggestions. I do not think that we should turn round and send this Bill to a Select Committee, unless we are faced with something in the way of evidence that some other scheme would be more advisable, or that some other allocation of districts would be better. There has not been a suggestion that any Northern district has been wrongly divided, and I do not see that there is much value in the idea of sending it back to a Select Committee. It has gone to one already, and has been reported on. The Hon. Leader of the Opposition merely took the position that he did not sign the report, and that, therefore, he had not reported upon the Bill. Of course, we can understand that. He did not wish to bind his Party to any responsibility for the Bill. But that cannot be sufficient reason to come along here after three or four weeks and say that the Bill ought to be referred back for further consideration, or that it should go to somebody else.

Once you have admitted the principle of the Bill, there is no object in referring it to a Select Committee again, unless you have in mind some other divisions of the areas of the districts that will be best applicable to the districts that are meant to be served.

MR. HICKMAN—Mr. Chairman, having listened to the Hon. Member for Fogo, Mr. Hibbs, this afternoon, what he says bears out very strongly one of the reasons why I say this Bill should be deferred until such time as the Committee and the people have had time to give the matter their consideration. Take the District which we are now on—the District of Harbour Main. He tells us that a petition was once presented to have the District of Harbour Main divided. Well, I say, when this Bill passes this House, how soon will it be before there will be another petition to this House to divide Harbour Main District. It will be two districts before the death of this Government, or of another Government . . . .

MR. CAHILL—I do not think you need worry about Harbour Main District.

MR. HICKMAN—I might tell the Honourable Member that I am not going to worry about it. and he need not worry about what I am going to say, because he will not always represent Harbour Main District. This Bill at present going through the House is only going to cause confusion, and every new Government in this House is going to legislate to make changes in districts different from what you now have in this Bill.

Now the Honourable Minister of Justice says that the Opposition have placed no arguments before the Government or the Se'ect Committee as to what changes are to be made. The Honourable gentleman is aware that we do not know where the Districts divide. We may be shown on a map, but as in the case of Bay de Verde District ,a man's Church may be in one section and his house in another, or his store in one place and his barn in a different one. The people should have a say as to the drawing of the lines. We only know that Mr. Morine spent three years in drawing up the Bill. He has probably gone into it closely, and perhaps had the divisions made as to his own ideas, but my opinion is that every section should be consulted before the lines are drawn. The Honourable the Prime Minister said he had numerous—perhaps not numerous but considerable—correspondence all in favor of the one man districts, and none for dividing. I would now ask the Honourable the Prime Minister to lay that correspondence on the Table of the House, or if it be necessary I would ask the formal question. If there be sufficient correspondence to prove that the people favor redistribution, and the drawing of the lines, we will have no further objection. Members of this side have said they are not against the one man districts. I am not against it, and I firmly believe it will bring a good class of legislators into this House, and that outport men of some intelligence and ability will be sitting here to frame our Legislation. But I am sincere in saying that this Bill should not be rushed, but that the people should be given a chance to know the dividing lines, and that these dividing lines should be so drawn that no future Government will have to bring in further Legislation on the matter. There is one thing that might be considered and that is whether we will have too many members, and I think instead of the number being increased it should be reduced. The Bill in itself is a step in the right direction, and is getting away from the old order that has pertained for years. But now as the changes are to be made they should be made in a way satisfactory to the country ,and so that no alterations will be necesary in future, as if such are made in one, they will have to be made in many districts. Mr. Halfyard, the Honourable Member for Trinity, has suggested a representative for Labrador, and in reply we are told that the Government are not sure if we have the Labrador to represent. I think, if for no other reason but to claim it, a representative should be appointed for Labrador It is not good politics to make statements on the floor of this House as to whether we own Labrador or not.

MR. WARREN—Mr. Chairman. The Leader of the Opposition will excuse me, but it was I who interrupted the Honourable Member for Trinity, and I made no such statement, but only asked as to the boundary line.

MR. HICKMAN—I did not have the Honourable Member for Fortune in mind when I said that.

MR. WARREN—I interrupted Mr. Halfyard first.

MR. HICKMAN—Anyway, I think we should have a representative for Labrador as it would help our claim to it.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—Mr. Chairman, there is just one matter on which I would like to respond to the Honourable the Leader of the Opposition. I said that I had received a number of letters from various sections approving the principle of the Bill, and he says that I should lay them on the Table of the House. I do not propose to do anything of the kind, as they are from private individuals, and perhaps may not convey views of all the people of the Districts in question. If I had fifty from individual men they would not indicate what boundary lines are desired by the whole people of the district. Therefore, I do not intend to bring them in. I stated that Members of the Government had heard nothing but approval of the Bill. Even the Members of the Opposition themselves tell us they have nothing against the principle of it, and the Leader of the Opposition has just said that it is a step in the right direction. Now, I believe in taking steps in the right direction, and, therefore, let us take this one.

MR. HICKMAN—Mr. Chairman, I do not wish to interrupt the Honourable the Prime Minister. but he has told us just what I expected. In arguing in favor of the Bill before going through as it was, he said he had correspondence from dozens of people. Now he says he had one or two.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—The Honourable the Leader of the Opposition does not take down what I say. If he can find any reporter who says that I said I had one or two letters I will take back my statement.

MR. HALFYARD—Mr, Chairman, in my opinion very little has been said by the Government side to establish the idea that this Bill should go through as it stands at present. The Honourable the Prime Minister says that he has private letters which do not approve the Bill as it is now, and it is agreed that even the people living near St. John's have not yet been able to form an intelligent opinion on the question of redistribution. Only a few members have spoken from this side of the House, and they endorse what the Leader of the Opposition has said, that we should give the whole people an opportunity to find out exartly what the Bill stands for. The people do not understand it at present, and the Government will not give them a chance to learn its provisions, and there is nothing fair about it. There is no use in the Government saying they are trying to bring in a Bill to suit the people after refusing to consult them .and simply saying this Bill should be on the Statutes. The inference from this kind of conduct that there is nothing to be gained by letting the people debate it, or by getting the concensus of opinion of the people which can only be obtained by letting them get together, call meetings, and discuss it. The Government is determined not to give them this opportunity ,and in their wisdom think the Bill is perfect ,and they can no longer tolerate the idea of consulting the people. Therefore we have got to submit to the ultimatum. I cannot understand how the Government can have greater knowledge of the wishes of the people than we have. We have had no chance to consult the people, and we are only groping in the dark. I admit the principle of the Bill, however. As Mr. Hibbs has referred to Harbor Main, it is a two man District, but I cannot see the necessity for it, and it will cause discussion and create much difference of opinion as to why it is not divided. These are things we cannot see, that while Harbor Main continues to be a two man district, other districts are divided. That is our reason for asking that the passing of the Bill be deferred till next year and put on the Statutes perhaps in an amended form, after consultation with other parts of the Island.

HON. COLONIAL SECRETARY—Mr. Chairman, I think that this section is one of the strongest points and should be borne in mind in considering this Bill. We have reached a point in the conduct of our affairs here when certain anomalies that exist should be corrected and the Government, ever since they have taken office, have seen that the earliest possible opportunity should be availed of to correct these anomalies. Forty years ago representation in this House was the same as it is to-day and naturally with the ordinary increase of population there have been discrepancies with regard to representation here, and I think that the Government have made a bold, yet justifiable, step in bringing in this Bill at this juncture, particularly in view of the fact that the Section of the Bill just read refers to a new community that has grown up in our midst within the past twelve or eighteen months. There are other communities that have grown up and they have been practically without representation, although they are very important in the industrial life of the country at the present moment.

I have listened this afternoon to the arguments put forward by the hon. members on the other side of the House, and they seem to hinge on the pivot of the District of Hr. Main. Now it must be remembered that the matter of readjustment of representation in the proposed Bill required a great deal of care and a great deal of consideration in view of the fact that this country, divided as it is denominationally, receives its representation on denominational lines. Now this House of Assembly represents districts where the predominating denomination is either Methodist, Roman Catholic or Church of England, and it is peculiarly fitting that, in the readjustment we have before us this afternoon, either of these denominations will come out in the ratio as they exist to-day. I have gone into the thing carefully as to what effect this Bill will have with the people of the different denominations and the belief was expressed that the present system ought to be changed. There was a little pivot, however, on which the Roman Catholics may not have their proportional representation because there is a district where the Roman Catholics have a large portion of people, but still have no representation. Now I refer to Burin District. Burin to-day is somewhat in the same position as Harbor Main, except in the reverse way. It is not proposed that any Catholic representatives will represent Burin and a condition had to be created whereby one district would offset the other. If you divide Harbor Main to-day, as everybody knows—it is just as well to speak frankly—you would have one section almost entirely Roman Catholic and another section almost entirely Protestant. That is the only exception outside of St. John's that an adjustment had to be made by which the Catholic people could get the representation that they are entitled to. Now with regard to the Church of England or Methodist denominations, the other two large denominations in this country, I might say that if one will look at the figures in the Census, he will find that the Church of England and Methodist bodies will receive their quota of representation. In some districts the majority might be Methodist or vice versa but on general lines it works out in due proportion to each and the anomalies created at election periods is responsible for this House not being always represented denominationally. As a matter of fact the district that I have the honor to represent in this House is not represented on a denominational basis. The majority of the people of Harbor Grace to-day are Church of England, yet the district is represented by two Methodists and one Churchman. There is no trouble over it, as I daresay the district can be looked after by either Mr. Hickman or Mr. Russell just as well as myself. We lay down the principle and the people look after their choice of representatives. A man may be a Roman Catholic and may go into a district where the people are mainly of Church of England or Methodist denominations. But the people have the power and must be given their due representation on the other hand the same applies to Harbor Main district, where the majority of people are Roman Catholic, but it is quite competent for a Protestant to contest this district for the same reason. We all must admit that, under this Bill, members who have to go to constituencies will have only one-third of the ground to travel over and canvass that they have to-day, and it is going to boil itself down to individual work instead of team work. One man may be an excellent man and he may have all the industry and all the desire to do everything possible in the interests of the people of his district; but he may have two colleagues absolutely indifferent and who would drag him down perforce when the time came around, but this Bill provides for the individual and it will provide for better representatives because the people of the smaller sections will know the men they have to represent them better. What is the position of a place like Green Bay to-day? Take my friend, Mr. Ashbourne, a very estimable young man and a very creditable representative for any part of the country. He will have a much easier time than he has now because he will represent the environment of his own home and will not represent any other part of the Bay, and it would be better for him and for the people he would represent. And in that Bay we have the district of Exploits under this Bill. Now I am not quite sure whether it is wise in calling it the district of Exploits. Perhaps it may be wiser to call it Grand Falls or "Harmsworth" or some other appropriate name. Now that part of the district of Twillingate is covered and governed and have to submit to what the people of the other part of the Bay has under present conditions. Mr. Brown might consider himself the representative of the workingman of Grand Falls or Botwood, but it is a matter for question at present; but if he is made the representative for that section under this Bill his standing cannot be questioned. Therefore, Mr. Chairman, I think when you come to consider the very grave difficulties confronting a Government that undertakes to divide the districts and find the results so equitable and so satisfactory, I think at least that it is worthy of the unbiased consideration of every member of this House. There are changes to be made, I know. Harbor Grace will be divided into two parts. This district will lose a member but that is owing to the evolution of circumstances. The district has lost some of its population and is not entitled to three members. Take the district of Fortune Bay which is represented by Mr. Warren. Fortune Bay has only one representative but has got fifty per cent. more people than has the district of Harbor Grace. Well that is one of the anomalies that must be corrected. Take that big industry on the West Coast which makes it absolutely imperative that something ought to be done in that part of the country. There you have a town with eight or ten thousand people, and with all the rest of the district the whole place is represented by only one man, Mr. Power, who is a man I am sure who can represent a district of any proportion, but at the same time the people in that district have not got the same say that their number warrant. Therefore, it cannot be gainsaid that the time is not opportune to bring this measure to a conclusion and put on the Statute Book. I agree that there are some discrepancies, and I agree that the boundaries may not suit every member, but I do not agree with the remarks of some honourable members because a boundary line may divide a man's house from his barn. One cannot dispute the fact that you can divide the districts of Ferryland, St. John's West and Harbor Main by a single step, and the same must of necessity apply to other districts. There must be a boundary line. The demarkation line is invisible and it is not to be wondered at that a man's house is divided from his barn. I might say that I have given this matter as much consideration as I could, and I feel sure that the redistribution scheme will be a great improvement and that the representation in this House will be such that the country will understand and members will be better able to understand because they will have to come into contact with people whom they will represent in their own environment.

It will be a great blessing for men that have to go over large districts night and day for weeks at a time to try and visit constituencies that are almost unattainable. Try to go to meet people and hold meetings at a time of the year when travelling is neither comfortable or safe. The Bill will have this advantage. The men who will represent the sections will be known to the people of these sections and the people will be able to pick out their own man, the man belonging to their own particular quarters or environment. And that is as it should be. This House should be represented by people coming from all parts of the country. No man will be going from St. John's to represent an outport without leave or license. In that way we will get better outport men. Stronger outport men. I do not mean to say anything derogatory to any of the members at present in this House. I am speaking now on behalf of the people who once they realize what this means and appreciate it, will gladly avail of the opportunity of endorsing it. I do not want to delay the Committee, but I thought it right to make these few remarks. I have got the denominational population before me and I can't see any possibility of any unfairness to any denomination.

MR. BROWN—Mr. Chairman, I may say that I am in accordance with the principle of this Bill now before the House. But I don't think it is the right time to rush it through. And now that we are touching on Lewisporte, I think that I will say a few words. When you read out latitude and longitude, Mr. Chairman, it is not every man in the outports and outside the districts that knows just what it is. Or he can't go to the map and take it up and say where he is, and I think, Sir, that we should have time to consider this Bill before it goes through the House. I have not seen the map, and I have not seen how the districts are divided up. It only read in the newspapers about it. But the average man cannot find out or understand from the map how it is divided. I don't think that it is fair to the country. This is a big issue. It affects every district in this country, and every voter. To rush this through at this particular time without giving the people ample time to consider this redistribution Bill, in my opinion is going a little too far. And I ask, Mr. Chairman that this Bill do not go through for a while until the people get time to consider it, and that will take some months. I repeat that I am satisfied with the principle of the Bill, but I am not in accordance with rushing it through at this particular time.

MR. SCAMMELL—MR. Chairman, Before proceeding to discuss this Section of the Bill, I want to ask the Prime Minister if he would be good enough to refer to the memorandum that he read on the opening day with regard to the distribution of the seats on the basis of population. What is the number of voters in St. Barbe and in White Bay?

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—St. Barbe, 5,500. White Bay, 6,500.

MR. SCAMMELL—We all realize, or at least I hope that we do that the measure that we are to discuss this afternoon is of the utmost importance. And I state frankly that I would like to speak sincerely and without prejudice of this legislation, and so I say that I support the principle of the measure as has been stated by the Leader of the Opposition that all the members on this side of the House intend to do. But that is the very reason why we can well afford to allow the bill to remain until another session of the Legislature for the better discussion of the Bill. On the principle of the redistribution there has been no question. There has been no division. We have all agreed that the principle underlying the Bill is the right one. As regards the district of St. Barbe, I might say that it was part of the Manifesto of the Premier of that day, Sir Richard Squires, under whose leadership I went to the district of St. Barbe, that the district of St. Barbe should be made into two districts. I made that a part of my platform, and it was no fault of mine that the district was not divided under that administration. We had the position that the district was composed of a population of twelve thousand people who live in one hundred and fifty-five small settlements. Not that the population is a very large one. If the district were more compact and were included in a small area, and if this were the case it would not be a very difficult district to handle. It is not a very difficult district to handle from the standpoint of population.

With regard to the delineation of the district, I may say that the boundaries appear to me to have been made in the right way. I can quite see the force of the Prime Minister's argument the other day when he said that the Government has tried to get those parts of the districts which had something in common, in business, socially and otherwise, under the same representation. I think that the district of St. Barbe has been very well divided, from that point of view. The political division is of no consequence to me. It will cut probably both ways, and I am not concerned now as to the political view of the situation. Although the Government might have included Broad Harbor, which has a population of five hundred and ninety people, but that might have taken in some people which have nothing in common with the people of the district of St. Barbe on the West Coast. I have no objection to the division. I have nothing to say about the division of the district as it stands today. But while the principle of the Bill is accepted by the Opposition, I think that the opportunity ought to be given to the people to look into the bill. I realize as was said just now that the Government has taken a bold step in bringing this Bill down to the House at this session. I am of the opinion that not only is the Government taking a bold step, but I also believe that the Government is also hauling chestnuts out of the fire for somebody else. The Prime Minister stated that the Hon. Mr. Morine had spent about three years in the preparation of this legislation. There has been some question as to what the Prime Minister did really say when he mentioned Mr. Morine in this connection. Now, if Mr. Morine spent three years in the preparation of this legislation, and if this idea gets abroad, in my opinion, that is going to be one reason why the people will want to look into the matter very carefully. Are the people of Newfoundland to be satisfied with the assurance that Mr. Morine has spent three of the best years of his life on this proposition? Is that any argument why the proposition should be rushed through the House? Surely what has occupied the genius of Mr. Morine for three years should be given at least twelve months for the people of the country to examine carefully. That is the argument as far as Mr. Morine is connected with this measure. The Prime Minister stated the other day that he had correspondence from all over the country in relation to this Bill, and he says that the correspondence has satisfied him that the people of the country are in favor of the principle of the Bill. I submit, Mr. Chairman, that the people of the country are in favor of the principle of the Bill. In principle the people of the country are in support of the Bill because it must be remembered that a redistribution of seats has been advocated for a number of years. On no occasion when the matter came up before the F.P.U. Conventions, did I let the opportunity pass without urging the necessity of the redistribution of seats. Now we have got the redistribution, and as I said just now I believe that the present Government is pulling chestnuts out of the fire for somebody else, but at the same time I am of the opinion that the people of the country should be given an opportunity to go further into the measure and see just how it affects them. For that reason I would ask the Leader of the Government to consider the amendment of the Leader of the Opposition. The hon. members themselves have had barely time to go into the alignments of their own districts, and I think that the present rushing will cause a great deal of confusion which will be experienced throughout the whole country, and the people of the country are expecting the Government to give them an opportunity to examine the Bill themselves and to allow them to inform themselves of its provisions. "What alternative," says the Prime Minister, "would we suggest?" No alternative is suggested as regards the redistribution, but it seems to me to be right that a work of the best brain of the country which has taken three years to complete, should at least have the inspection of the people of the country before it becomes law on the Statute Books.

Take a case in point. You have the district of Exploits. Exploits is not in the district. But the people of Exploits will very naturally think that they are in the district. But they are not. Even the matter of nomenclature has a mistake in it. And for these reasons I think that the Prime Minister should allow this Bill to rest over until the next session. Now I am not getting into any unnecessary heat over the matter, but I want to view it fairly and clearly. I know that opinions have been given, very influential opinions that this very important measure should first be submitted to the people of the country, and let them have the opportunity to note the provisions and the alignments of the districts. We do not anticipate any general election. I fail to see the point in rushing the matter through the House, and I think it my duty to ask the Prime Minister to reconsider the position taken by the Leader of the Opposition here this afternoon and see if it is not possible for this legislation to be postponed until the next session of the House of Assembly. If, however, he is determined to put it through the House then there is nothing that we can do. It will only be a case of having to go over the whole thing again at a later day. We had the District of Bay-de-Verde discussed here this afternoon, and the Leader of the Opposition asked a question in connection with the boundaries, and the hon. member for the district said that the section was unsatisfactory, and asked to have it deferred. The Prime Minister or some one responsible on the other side of the House said that they hoped that the hon. members would take the opportunity to come forward with suggestions with regard to the alignments of the district. Now that is the very point. It is all right for me to get up here and discuss the boundaries of the District of St. Barbe and say that they are all right because I have gone into the matter years ago. But how about the members who represent outport constituencies and are not in the same position that I am, because the question of redistribution has never come up, but that I have been interested in it. Now, Sir, I am going on record as having said that if the Government is going to put this Bill on the Statute Books without giving the people of the country an opportunity of looking into the measure, they are perpetrating an outrage on the outport people. It is nothing but an outrage. And that is practically all that I have to say. I am satisfied as to the alignment of the District of St. Barbe, because years ago I have asked myself what should be done to my district if the present situation were to arise.

MR. BROWNE—Mr. Chairman, I feel that an important measure like this deserves some consideration from the hon. members on this side of the House apart from that given by those who have already expressed their opinions. I cannot refrain from expressing the view that it seems to me that there has been a lot of apathy everywhere in connection with this measure. It is one of the most important measures that have come up for discussion here this session and yet we find from members of the Government few suggestions of a remedial nature such as might be expected if there were drawbacks in the Bill. Perhaps, the fact that there has been little opposition is a sufficient guarantee that it has gained the general approval of the people. If the Bill contained unsatisfactory elements the people would have been here in greater numbers to hear the discussion and very likely there would have been a much more determined opposition from the members on the other side of the House. Now, every member of that side who has spoken has expressed his approval of what is termed the principle of the Bill. But there is more than one principle in this Bill. The first—and the one with which all the members seem in accord—is the giving of one man districts instead of the old system. That is, where there are now three representatives the district will be partitioned and each section will have one representative. But there is another principle to which consideration should be given and that is the principle of representation. We are a representative Assembly and are supposed to represent the people, each member representing a certain proportion of the population, and I think a principle which helps to push forward this Bill is that which makes for equal representation. That one district should have the same representation as another is, I think, an idea that is generally accepted. If the hon. introducer of the Bill had shown that this difficulty was insurmountable I would give it my heartiest support but at the present time there are things about it of which I have not yet heard a full explanation though I may be convinced of their fairness before the matter is finished. In the district which I have the honour to represent—and about which the section dealing with it is about to be read—it will be remembered that a few weeks ago I was instructed to present a petition by the residents of the Ropewalk section with regard to the boundaries of the city. The people of that locality are without sanitary conveniences, though they are expected to pay taxes because they are in the city limits. Since the boundaries of this Bill will be similar to those of the city divisions, at least as far as the North-West corner of the town is concerned, and as by this measure they will be more fixedly part of the city, I think I would only be consistent for me to point out what the Government will be doing if they put this Bill through. St. John's city will not be the same as the Municipalty of St. John's as the Southside will belong to the extern part of St. John's. I am not concerned with that and am only dealing with the case of the people who came to me some time ago and agitated in the matter which I have already pointed out. That is one thing I would like to see fixed in this Bill. Another is the disproportionate representation in some districts and I think this should be given much more consideration. I do not think that this means such a great difficulty that there will be any big agitation against the Bill—we are not sure that there will be any—but if the hon. members will consult the memorandum presented by the Hon. the Prime Minister in introducing the Bill they will see that Bell Island with a population of 4400 has one representative while Bonavista has only one for 8200 people. Ferryland has one for about 6000 and St. George's one for 4500. St. John's city, West, has two for 19000 and St. John's City, East, two for 17717. I would like to point out that in St. John's West—which I presume will be the district I will contest next election if I live long enough and desire to go there after sitting here for one, two or three sessions—one vote in some districts will be equal to more than two votes in others. Why should one district with 4500 people have half the representation of one with 19000. That is a point that deserves consideration and I feel that the Government has already given it, but I have found no argument to convince me why St. John's West with 19000 should have only two representatives, and a district with 4500, one. That is a principle that has not been carried out as fully as it might have been. In general the distribution is one member to about 6500 people and that seems to be the number acceptable to most of the members here. Another principle is as to whether we shall increase the membership of the House or not. This has been referred to by speakers on the Opposition side and I will not now go into it in detail except to express my opinion that the number should be decreased. An increase of membership is of no benefit and we have seen by this session that the large number has not assisted in the putting through of legislation, and that ten men can represent the country as well as forty except in that large work of representation which is done outside of the House. Under the present plan there is going to be a great deal of uncertainty as to what a member will have to tell his constituents when this Bill goes through. The man who represents Burin East for example can tell a man who comes to him for anything to see the member for Burin West as he is not going back there any more. In St. John's West I am sure I shall be inclined to tell people from the outside settlements it is best to see the Hon. the Minister of Finance as he will represent them at the next election. I think a good many will take this opportunity to escape their obligations as they will not be going back to the same people and will frame their plans accordingly. They would be poor politicians if they did not do so. Before sitting down I feel I should congratulate the Hon. the Prime Minister on having the courage to introduce a measure of this kind and though there is no great demand for it, at the same time there is reform to be done and it is a big one to alter the anomalies of the past few years. Though these are smaller matters to which I have referred and which might be considered I do not propose to say more about them now; but I trust the future will prove that those who introduced the Bill and spent their time on it here were justified in doing so. Still I think it is possible to devise another system just as good and as beneficial as this one, at the same time the principal of the measure which has received the approval of the members of the Opposition is the main one, and therefore there is not much more left for me to say.

MR. ASHBOURNE—Mr. Chairman: Seemingly every member has had something to say as to how this Bill affects his particular district and I think my turn comes now. This is a matter of many aspects and one that can be viewed from many angles. We are told that there are several principles involved in this Bill. The first is, so we are informed, that we are to have one man districts. That is a principle that is being carried out to some extent, but that principle does not run right through the Bill or else the whole country would be divided up into one man districts; but instead we find that there are several two men districts. I want to say that I endorse the view of my colleagues who preceded me and I am also in accord with the principle of having all one man districts, because I believe it will have a very beneficial effect on this House and also a correspondingly good effect on the constituencies which are severally represented by every member here. I do not agree, however, that it is a wise move to increase the number of candidates from thirty six to forty; in fact I think it would be a wiser move to reduce the number. I do not know but that I think the best thing that could happen Newfoundland would be to revert to the status of a Crown Colony and I feel assured that twenty men, perhaps, could manage the affairs of Newfoundland much better than they are managed to-day by thirty six. The Government of the country is conducted chiefly by an Executive of ten men. They formulate the plans for the country and any measures that they consider advisable are brought into this House from time to time are generally carried; I do not think that it is a wise move to increase the number of representatives, particularly as I believe that considerable difficulty will be experienced in trying to get eighty men who will interest themselves sufficiently in politics in the future. I wish that there were men, public spirited men, who would enter political life for the good of the land and not, perhaps, for what they want to get out of it. But there is one reason more than any other why I am in accord with this Bill and that is that it gives the outports better representation, as I claim that the outports do not get the square deal to-day or their share of what is going that they should get because they have not at present their proportionate representation here and I think we will find in this Bill a remedy for that. There will be a greater incentive to the outports to return local men and then they will be able to insist that they get a square deal. Large numbers are often difficult to manipulate and in consideration of the arguments that have been put up here today in regard to this Bill, I think myself that the time has come when the outports should have a say as to who is and who is not going to represent them.

The policy in the past has been that the campaigns have been all arranged in St. John's, the result being that most of the outports had two men sent to them and they have to choose one, and probably if they had their way they would not want either of them. On the other hand, in my opinion, it would be more difficult to form a strong party with forty members than with six. What is to prevent an Independent standing in any District and being returned with split votes? And I claim, Mr. Chairman, that this is a matter that should be gone into thoroughly, and, if necessary, under a microscope. We don't want to rush into this quickly, without giving it ample thought and consideration; and as far as we can see, there is not likely to be any election within the next two or three years, and why not delay the measure so that we can go through it and thoroughly examine it in order to see that the different boundaries are as they should be.

The honourable member for Carbonear, this afternoon, spoke about a case in his own district, which, if that is any criterion of the doings of the present Government, I think is one which should cause all to look up and take notice. From the remarks of the honourable member, I think, in passing, that every member in this House, whether Government or Opposition, should question a matter of that sort. If this is done for political spleen it is not going to bring you anywhere, it is not going to get the country anywhere and it is not going to get the Government anywhere.

There have been several items mentioned with regard to this Bill. As I said before, it can be viewed from many angles. It gives the outports greater representation and for that reason it is that I say I am in accord with the principle of this Bill.

I have a suggestion to make to the Prime Minister in regard to the part about the Black Island, the word "Adjacent," should be inserted after the words "Black Island," in Twillingate District, as there are at present two "Black Islands" and this one should be distinctly shown to be the island near Tramp Island.

MR. BROWN—Regarding the name of the District in Twillingate, I think, as it stands to-day, its name is Exploits, Twillingate, Grand Bay and South Island. I would like as the present member of that District to ask the Prime Minister if he would change the name of that Exploits District, as it is not in that District at all. It is on the Southside; you might call it the District of Grand Falls, I think that is reasonable. The islands will be knows as Twillingate, the north side will be known as Green Bay District.

I think these names will be much more suitable. Therefore, I would ask it as a favor to change the name.

HON. THE PRIME MINISTER—In reply to the Honourable member, I was going to suggest before the Bill went through that we should get another name for Exploits. I was going to suggest Exploits Valley. I am perfectly satisfied to change it to Grand Falls or any other name.

MR. GRIMES—Mr. Chairman. I am fully in accord with the principle of this Bill. I don't think, Sir, there was any question at all in the mind of any member of this House as to the necessity for the redistribution; but the basis upon which redistribution has taken place, in my judgment, is not fair to the people of this country. Over the world to-day, in every country where people have the right to vote, the question has been how to register the will of the people, particularly in the matter of representation. You may remember that a few years ago in the British Comonwealth they made some alteration there in order that the will of the people may be more satisfactorily represented in the House of Commons, and in Canada something occurred with regard to the redistribution that took place some years ago. The idea has been that every man should have an equal vote with every other man. Now, I don't see how that is being carried out in this Bill, regarding the principle of an equal vote for every man; because, after all, when we favor manhood suffrage, we favor it because we believe that every man of twenty-one years of age should have the very same as any other man, whether rich or poor. But this Bill does not suggest that. I have hurriedly taken down the number of voters in the different districts. In the first instance, take the District of Bell Island, the number of voters there is forty-four hundred; St. John's, East, seventeen thousand; therefore, eight thousand eight hundred votes are required to elect one man in St. John's that is elected by forty-four hundred on Bell Island.

MON. MR. HIGGINS—You cannot add anything on to the Island.

MR. GRIMES—I question whether the districts can be better than they are when you allow a Bell Island voter to have his vote equal to two of a man in St. John's. St. Mary's, Placentia Bay, with 4800 voters, has the same value in voting as the 8900 in St. John's West. In other words 4800 in St. Mary's can elect a member which requires 8900 in St. John's West. Port au Port has 4300 and Fortune has 6000; so the two men in Port au Port have equal value as three men of Fortune. And the Humber area, with a population of 4700 is equal in value to Bonavista East with 8200 and in the Humber area with about 4400 is equal in value to the voters of Bay de Verde with 7100. In other wards the people of the Humber have a value in voting about twice as much as the people of Bay de Verde. St. John's, with 5300, elects one representative which requires 7900 in Bonavista North to do the same. And 5500 in Bay Roberts can elect a reperesentative which requires 7700 in Conception Bay and 5500 people in St. Barbe elect a man while it requires 7500 in White Bay to do the same.

Now I have tabulated the values. The Humber has 4700 voters, Bell Island, 4400, Bay Roberts 5700, St. Mary's 4800, St. Barbe 4500, Port au Port, 4500, St. John's 5500, St. John's East 5300. The estimated total is 66,600 voters in these eleven districts. They elect twelve men. St. John's West has 19,000 and elects two men; St. John's East has 17,700 voters. Bonavista North 7900, Bay-de-Verde 7700. Here we have a population of 60,000 and they elect seven men. In these five districts with a population of 60,500 they elect only seven men. While the 12 other districts that I have named with only the same population, can elect 12 men. That is where I consider there is a great inequality in the value of the voting as provided for in the Redistribution Bill. I want to see why greater consideration was not given to this aspect of the question. I think it is one of the most important. In fact the most important section in connection with the redistribution Bill. The whole thing is to arrange the districts in such a manner that the people can have themselves represented in the House of Assembly properly. But when you give 60,000 people 12 men to represent them in the House of Assembly and only allow 60,000 people to elect seven men, I do not recognize the principle of polling equality. I consider it is very unfair to the voters in these districts to place the value of these voters so little in comparison with the rest of the people that I have named. I think the Government ought to take time before they rush a matter of this kind through. And I think that the hon. member on the opposite side recognises that time should be given the voters of these districts. I did not have time to go through all these other districts but when the voters become acquainted with the fact that in the 8 or 9 other districts that a man has twice the value in voting that they have they are not going to take any too kindly to the proposition embodied in this Redistribution Bill.

I submit, Mr. Chairman, that the best way to deal with the situation is to let the matter stand over and let the people in these districts have an opportunity of deciding for themselves just as to how the representation should be. As I said before I do not agree with rushing into this measure. It is for this reason that you do not establish political equality in this Bill, and I think that when the people of the districts find this out they will make those who are responsible for this rue the work they have done. It is not in the least interest of the country to give one district a greater voting power than another.

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE —Mr. Chairman, I would like to say that we appreciate the earnestness of the hon. member in his discussion on this Bill, and the point that he has raised is one that the Government has particularly well considered. We are very well aware of the anomolies to which he refers, and the only answer is one that I am sure will be apparent to him when it has been given to him to consider. It is this. It is the peculiar way in which the people are scattered over the country and widely distributed because of the sinuosities of the coast line. It is almost impossible to control representation perfectly under our conditions. Of course the utopian conditions which would make every man wherever he voted in the country have the same voting power in the state of affairs that we would like to have, but as I say that it is practically impossible, under our conditions. I am sure that the hon. member can appreciate the position. The thing that we had to consider was the fact that our people are distributed over such an area. Now hon. members on both sides of the House can understand that you can compress little districts like Port de Grave or Brigus or some sections like these places, but in other sections the people are spread over miles and miles of coast line. Now as an illustration take the case of St. John's East (city district). Here the population is seventeen thousand, and there are eight thousand five hundred voters, and the hon. member opposite pointed out the voting power of a person is less than the voting power of one in a district where the electors number say five thousand. The explanation is that the people are more compressed in the city. And as a matter of fact it is a very much easier population to handle as compared with the territories that are composed of settlements that are scattered along a coast line. I do not think that there is anyone in this House that can disagree with the principle that this Bill lays down. I think that when the hon. member considers the application of the principle he will appreciate the difficulty which has faced the Government. Take the district that Mr. Chambers has to represent. This district is stretched out over a particularly long coast line. We would like to have every man's vote in this country of the same power, but I do not see how it is possible to work that out in Newfoundland when you are at the same time trying to reduce the areas. We have also been considering the peculiar conditions attached to the East section. Take the district of Bell Island, and the same thing applies to Grand Falls. These districts have nothing in common with the remainder of the present districts, Bell Island has nothing in common with the Shore or with the city. The districts of St. John's East and West, (city) will perhaps be the only districts that might be said to have purely parliamentary representatives in so much the Municipal Council administers the affairs of the city. Again as regards short population at present it must be remembered that in Bell Island the population of Bell Island will be very much more than it is now. I am looking forward to the time when the population will increase very much, when these foreign shipments have been resumed. We cannot help getting the increase. Either it is going to go up as I have said or it it is going to go down altogether.

It will go to much more than it is now, or it will go down to what it was before the mines came. Now take the districts of the West Coast. I am of the opinion that of necessity these districts must develop. You have over there the Humber industry and the other development possibilities of the St. George's District which have been referred to, and it is apparent that these districts are bound to increase. The districts that are likely to or may possibly decrease are those at present larger districts that may have the people migrating to the larger industrial areas. At the same time I just say to the hon. member that on the point that he has just raised there can be no disagreement. The Government has given very serious consideration to it. The anomalies are due entirely to the manner in which the people of the country are scattered.

Mr. Speaker resumed the Chair.

The Chairman from the Committee reported that they had considered the matter to them referred, and had passed the said Bill with some amendment.

On motion this Report was received.

HON. THE LEADER OF THE OPPOSITION—Mr. Speaker, I beg to move an amendment.

MR. SPEAKER—I would like to point out to the hon. member that the amendment is not quite in order. A select committee cannot sit out of session.

HON. THE LEADER OF THE OPPOSITION——The Solicitor of the House made this amendment out for me. I think that he ought to be able to do it.

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE —Mr. Speaker, I would suggest to the Hon. member, we are not objecting to the amendment. If he wants to get his point put on record, he should alter his amendment to read "a commission." A select committee has not the power to sit out of session. But if he wishes to just have the amendment put on record then that is the best way to do. As far as I am concerned I can discuss the idea of an amendment freely because I have no intention of supporting it.

MR. WARREN—Mr. Speaker. If I might be allowed to intervene I think the suggestion of the Minister of Justice is a good one. As a matter of fact I have just made the suggestion to Mr. Grimes that this might be done so as to have a record of the division. It might be that you would have a Select Committee and not have it report before the prorogation.

HON. THE LEADER OF THE OPPOSITION—Mr. Speaker, I beg to move the following amendment.

Reads the amendment.

On the motion for adoption of the Report, Mr. Hickman moved and Mr. Halfyard seconded an amendment as follows:—"That this Bill be referred to a Commission to take evidence thereon and report at the next session of the Legislature"

Whereupon the House divided and there appeared in its favor:

Mr. Hickman,
Mr. Halfyard,
Mr. Hibbs,
Mr. Grimes,
Mr. Scammell,
Mr. Brown,
Mr. Duff,
Mr. Godden,
Mr. Ashbourne, (9)

and against it:

Hon. the Prime Minister,
Hon. the Colonial Secretary,
Hon. the Minister of Justice,
Hon. the Minister of Finance,
Hon. the Minister of Posts,
Hon. Mr. Sullivan,
Hon. Mr. Long,
Hon. Mr. Cramm,
Hon. Mr. Bradley,
The Minister of Agriculture,
The Minister Marine & Fisheries,
The Minister Public Works,
Mr. Moore,
Mr. Lake,
Mr. Sinnott,
Mr. Power,
Mr. Puddester,
Mr. Cahill,
Mr. Browne,
Mr. Warren, (20)

so it passed in the negative.

Whereupon on motion for adoption of the report the House divided, when there appeared in its favor:

Hon. the Prime Minister,
Hon. the Colonial Secretary,
Hon. the Minister of Justice,
Hon. the Minister of Finance,
Hon. the Minister of Posts,
Hon. Mr. Sullivan,
Hon. Mr. Long,
Hon. Mr. Cramm,
Hon. Mr. Bradley,
The Minister of Agriculture,
The Minister Marine & Fisheries,
The Minister Public Works,
Mr. Moore,
Mr. Lake,
Mr. Sinnott,
Mr. Power,
Mr. Puddester,
Mr. Cahill,
Mr. Browne,
Mr. Warren, (20)

and against it:

Mr. Hickman,
Mr. Halfyard,
Mr. Hibbs,
Mr. Grimes,
Mr. Scammell,
Mr. Brown,
Mr. Duff,
Mr. Godden,
Mr. Ashbourne, (9)

so it passed in the affirmative and was ordered accordingly.

On motion it was ordered that the said Bill be read a third time on tomorrow.

Pursuant to order and on motion of the Minister of Marine and Fisheries the House resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole to consider the Bill entitled "An Act to Amend Chapter 172 of the Consolidated Statutes (Third Series) entitled 'Of the Survey of Foreign Going and Labrador Vessels."

Mr. Speaker left the Chair.

Mr. Puddester took the Chair of Committee.

HON. THE LEADER OF THE OPPOSITION:—I would like to ask the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, if he were called upon to survey any steamer for the ice what rules or regulations would he have to follow?

MINISTER OF MARINE & FISHERIES—I would not be called upon to inspect a sealing steamer.

HON. THE LEADER OF THE OPPOSITION—If there are not any rules and regulations then as far as I can see the bill is of no use whatever. If a man is sent from the department he has to use his own opinion as to whether she is fit for the fisheries or not. He has nothing whatever to go by. His opinion might be biased or it might be given according to the man or the ability of the man himself. It certainly seems to me that there should be some rules or regulations governing the inspection of these vessels if this bill is to be of any use. Am I to understand from the Minister that sealing steamers were never inspected before?

MINISTER OF MARINE — They were inspected under the deep sea act, but it has been argued that that does not cover them. Formerly you could not go aboard the ships and ask that anything be done, but you can do so now.

MR. LAKE—Do I understand that there is no inspection on Labrador vessels.

MINISTER OF MARINE—They are surveyed only if they are to carry passengers.

MR. LAKE—Isn't there a survey on foreign going vessels.

MINISTER OF MARINE — They come under the act already and are not affected by this.

MR. LAKE—I thought that under this Bill Labrador vessels had to be properly fitted up.

MINISTER OF MARINE—There is no such idea in this whatever.

Mr. Speaker resumed the Chair.

The Chairman from the Committee reported that they had considered the matter to them referred, and had passed the said Bill without amendment.

On motion this Report was received and adopted, and it was ordered that the said Bill be read a third time on to-morrow.

Pursuant to order and on motion of Hon. the Minister of Justice the House resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole to consider the Bill entitled "An Act to Amend the Terra Nova Sulphite Company Act, 1920."

Mr. Speaker left the Chair.

Mr. Puddester took the Chair of Committee.

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Mr. Chairman, as I explained when this Bill came up for second reading, its purport is to make a couple of amendments to the Act of 1920. At that time a contract was made between the Government and the Terra Nova Sulphite Company. The Act is particularly indexed under the head of "An Act relating to the Manufacture of Wood Products". In the 1920 Act, Section 2 of Schedule A. reads as follows, and I invite the attention of the honourable members to it:

(Reads Schedule A.)

This reads "25 cents per horse power developed" and we now propose to put in the words "per annum" so as to make it clear that it is a yearly charge. As honourable members will see the effect of Section 1 is to provide that if within ten years from 1925 they do not develop the water powers of Grant's Falls, these will revert to the Government. As I said before, the operations at Alexander Bay have been allowed to rest and it was felt that 10 years was a reasonable time to allow to see if the company could go on. Section 10 amends Sections 9 of the old Bill.

(Reads present provision.)

It will be noticed that they are now enabled to comply with the terms by an alternative which reads:

(Reads Bill.)

The point of that section—and what has really happened—is that instead of manufacturing at Alexander Bay, the timber is now to be exported to Grand Falls where the plant has been extended, and the wood manufactured there. Section 11 reads with regard to the mill to which I have just referred—

(Reads section.)

This section is recast to say the company shall operate the mill or "such extension of the mills." I hope I have made it clear to the House that this Bill is to take advantage of this proposition and allow them the time of ten years to see if they can develop the plant at Alexander Bay.

MR. GRIMES—Can they close up operations there altogether?

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE—No, the Bill says they must continue to produce. They are not bound to continue at Alexander Bay but when they extend at Grand Falls the other place will be only a supplying point. I understand there will be the same labor given now in cutting and shipipng to Grand Falls as would be given in the plant at Alexander Bay.

MR. BROWN—Mr. Chairman, I take it that the Company can refuse to operate the bill at Alexander Bay they can close it down for that matter; and, further, they can close down operations at Terra Nova and divert the whole thing to Red Indian Lake. I do not see anything in this Bill that would prevent this Company from discontinuing operations at Terra Nova and confining them to Millertown and Badger. Now, as I see it, this is a Bill that members of this House should give the fullest consideration to before passing because I think it is an A. N. D. Company Bill. Is it not, may I ask?

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Yes. It is not a Government measure; it is brought in at the request of the A. N. D. Company.

MR. BROWN—Now I want to inform honourable members that in dealing with this Bill they are also dealing with the smartest man in this country, perhaps, in the person of Mr. Harris, the Manager of the A. N. D. Company. Mr. Harris is one of the cutest, if not the cutest, men that ever stepped on Newfoundland soil; and if the requests asked for in this Bill are granted, it might have a far-reaching effect on this country. When Mr. Harris sits in his office with his able lieutenant, Mr. Laycock, at his elbow and wants the Government of Newfoundland to grant them something, they usually know what they are about, whilst we might come here and, not seeing the technicalities of this Bill, allow it to pass, and then after it is passed we may have great cause to regret it for the rest of our lives. I do not think it is a square deal to the people of Bonavista Bay to let the A. N. D. Company or any other company get this Bill sanctioned by this House in its present form. I know what plans the A.N.D. Company have for making another extension to their plant at Grand Falls. I worked there for eight years. They made an extension last year and that is the only extension they purpose making apart from the installation of another paper mill. Under this Bill they can make an extension to their mill at Grand Falls if it pleases them, but they are not bound to do it. Now I am against giving this Company any more concesssions, and when I say this I think I know what I am talking about, and I think I know some of the individual members of that Company, and particularly the manager of it, pretty nearly as well as anybody in this House. The manager, Mr. Harris, is a shrewd, cute man, and everything that is in this Bill is to the benefit of the A. N. D. Company. Last year I introduced a Logging Bill in this House, and about the time of the introduction of that Bill, trouble occurrerd at Corner Brook and I, with my friend Mr. Scammell, was accused by the Prime Minister on the floors of this House with bad faith, and I think that to-day the Prime Minister has since found out to his entire satisfaction that his accusations were wrong and that Mr. Scammell and myself were as innocent as he was, and I think that it is only fair that he should say so now. To-day we are clear of it and we can honestly say that we knew absolutely nothing about the incident we were blamed for. That Bill for loggers was defeated in this House last year and was referred to a Commission of Enquiry, and I think the honourable member for St. John's West, Mr. Linegar, the man who congratulated himself on being the first labour representative in this House, voted against the Bill, as well as other honourable members on the Government side. After the Bill was discussed at length here it was decided that a Commission be appointed to go into the whole matter of logging and Mr. Warren was appointed as the Commission, and I certainly did not begrudge him the job. He did his best, but it seems to me that he was held back until late in the Fall before starting on his mission.

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE—That is untrue.

MR. BROWN—I accept the statement; but at all events it appears that conditions are better in the lumber woods now and men are getting a better showing than they did last year and the years previous. Why? Because this Bill was introduced on the floors of this Chamber last session. But what should have been done is that instead of having one man on that Commission there should have been five men appointed on it, and, further, not leave the thing until November month to start the work of investigation. The Commissioner could not at that time of the year go to all the camps around the country that was necessary and see every man individually and find out from him the treatment he was getting and the amount of money he was working for in the lumber woods. If he wanted to get information properly he would have to visit the camps; but, as the honourable member for Fortune Bay stated in his findings, the men were careless about coming to him because they did not want to lose any time. I would not lose my time either to give such evidence unless I was paid for it, and I quite agree with the attitude taken by the men. But then again, the investigation was not full enough. At least two-thirds of the men working in the lumber woods are from the northern districts and they should have been consulted on the matter and their views taken with regard to it. I do not know who was to blame, but I do know that the Commission should have been comprised of more men, and I do know that the northern men were not given a square deal. This year, I understand, the men worked at a scale and they made fairly good money; but, in my opinion, if the Logging Bill had not been introduced in this Assembly last year, the men would not be getting anything like fair returns for their work this year. The A. N. D. Company had their own way for years, but since the Humber started matters are different. Many of the A. N. D. Company's good men are gone to the Humber and in order to get others to replace them they got to offer attractive propositions. Mr. Goodyear stated in his evidence to the Commissioner words to the effect that I stated here last session, namely, that the Company at Grand Falls took advantage of the country's condition at a time when considerable unemployment prevailed. Now if I stated that last year I am prepared to repeat it and emphasize it this, namely, that the A. N. D. Company took advantage of the unemployment situation and put into force the subcontract system for men to work on, and with the result that men made little or no money out of the venture. But, fortunately, times have got altogether different since the Logging Bill was introduced last year. Besides, the French Canadians that came here were well paid and it would look too scandalous if the Newfoundlanders did not get paid better than before. It is long, so long ago, however, that some officials of that Company absolutely ignored the old Logging Bill that was in force altogether. I refer now to the Bill that was put through this House some years ago by Sir William Coaker, and at a time when Sir William Coaker was in opposition. I heard that one of the camp inspectors said last year, when a report was brought to his attention that the conditions of a camp were not fit for a dog to live in, that neither he nor his Company recognised the Logging Bill. This is from a man who is an assistant manager of the A. N. D. Company and who boldly says that he ignores the law of our land; still we are asked to pass bills here to the advantage of the A. N. D. Company. Evidently because a man comes from Canada and wants a Bill passed here we got to pass it, and no matter whether the Bill is common sense or nonsense, when the House is divided every man on the Government side of the House votes for it to a man. It is only two years ago when members of the Opposition sat on the other side of the Houses and when the then Opposition were treated with courtesy and decency; but the same satisfaction and courtesy is not being meted out to us by the Government members; but although few in number we do not intend to allow everything to be put over on us. As I said before, this is a Bill, Mr. Chairman, that should get very serious consideration before passing. When you are dealing with Mr. Harris of the A. N. D. Company and his assistant you got to be very careful, and you must remember that you are not dealing with the two gentlemen who directed the affairs of this Company in the past like Mr. Scott and Mr. Thomas Judge.

These were two gentlemen without a doubt. Men that nobody could point the finger of scorn at. Men perfectly willing to give the working man a square deal and listen to his grievances when he had one. But what is it to-day. The same can't be said of the men to-day there. In those days if a man had a grievance; if he was a logger or an employee of the plant he would go to the office with his grievance and he would be listened to. But to-day if you have a grievance and you go to see the manager, you are met at the door by the secretary. The first thing that you are asked is "Who do you want to see?" And then you are asked your business. You have even got to tell your business. And then in many cases you are told that the Director is busy and can't see you. These are some of the men to-day who are bringing in a Bill for us to grant them permission to withdraw the necessary plant from Alex. Bay and place a mill in its stead. When that mill was erected it was orected to give employment to the people of that district. But what happened. The company went insolvent. They went to the wall. The A. N. D. Company bought it.

And here they bring in a Bill asking us to pass through this House for them to be free from the obligation of operating there providing that the town of Grand Falls will have that extension there. In my opinion they do not have any more as regards machinery. I think that they are looking for machinery. Now that won't give us a chance to keep this mill or monument. That is what I would call it just where it is and it does not give the people a chance to earn one dollar in that mill.

Mr. Chairman, I think that it should be stipulated in this Bill that these people should cut at least enough wood to manufacture 100 tons of pulp for each working mill. It is only provided in the Bill that they should be working the mill. Now I ask to be corrected if I am wrong. I believe that these people were compelled to put machinery at Bishop's Falls within a certain time.

I think that they were. If that is the case they have been excluded from that. Now they are asking us to pass a Bill through this House so that they would not have to operate all round the bay. I don't know but in 48 hours after this Bill is passed they will be taking the employment out of Bonavista Bay and moving their operations west. I do not think that this is a move in the right direction. And as far as I am concerned I am not inclined to support it.

Getting back to the report of the Commission. I must say that though the number of men who have given evidence is in favour of this system still there are as many men who are not in favour of it. They are not very much inclined to say that they would rather have wages.

Now I come to Mr. Harris' report. And he still says that the only grievance he has with the men is that the dark comes too soon. The day is not long enough to work. I claim that a man who is brutal enough to make a statement of that kind is not worth the consideration of anybody. After all if a man works all day and he has got to work all day he must be at least a machine. And if this is the kind of man that he is looking for that can work six days and nights continually for six days of the week he is different from any other man that I have ever met. Then he says in another part of the report, the men don't want to work.

Reads the report.

That is a pretty good statement for a contractor to make.

Mr. Chairman, the Bill that is now before the House undoubtedly will be debated at some length, and it should be, because the Company who are asking to get this Bill through the House are not prepared to yield anything to the working men of this country or the Government. They have always held a stiff hand. They are manufacturing paper as cheap as any company but they are not prepared to give the conditions and the wages that other companies give. They want all themselves and they want the country to have nothing. They do not want to pay the workman but they come to this House of Assembly and ask us to put this Bill through that will cover them and give them carte blanche, and let the working man and the country suffer. I am against it Mr. Chairman and I believe that if the hon. member knew as much as I do after 8 years experience he would give it more consideration than he is giving it now. After all the man who works with anybody or any concern for 18 years knows what that company or concern is. In the meantime I don't want anybody to think that I am against any man in Grand Falls.

The Logging Bill has been working for 4 months. The report of the Commission will be accepted. As far as the Commissioner is concerned, I have nothing to say against him. He went out and did his best and he got all the information that he could, but it was not the right time of the year to go and get information.

The Government of Newfoundland has given every consideration to the A.N.D. Co. They have done everything that they could for it and they still come back and they want us to do more. I am not in favour of the Bill as I already stated. If there was a man running the A.N.D. Co. like the days when Lord Northcliffe was alive. a man who was prepared to give a square deal to the working man and who was only too ready to listen to their grievances, I would support this Bill. And I would do anything to help this Bill and get it through the House, but under the present conditions I cannot do it. I have reason for what I say. I am prepared to back up what I say and when I make statements I just know what I am talking about.

HON. THE MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Mr. Chairman, this is very refreshing indeed. I thank the honorable member for his very fine discourse. It is a pleasure indeed to see so much interest evidenced particularly by the Opposition. As far as the Government is concerned they are not a bit particular as to what form of criticism there may be on this measure at all. It is rather refreshing to find some little "pep" being introduced into the debate. It seems to me that the main object of the honourable member was to assure the House that he was not a lover of the gentleman named, he said nothing against this Bill, nothing whatever. Now it is this Bill that we are concerned with whether we will put it through the House or whether we will turn it out. I can quite conceive that the honorable member for Twillingate decided to convey to the House and to the country that he had certain opinions and reasons why this Bill should not go through. I think, after all, we should hear his reason why this Bill should not go through. Now the position about the whole thing was this, that the industry was started at Alexander Bay by a company, and it collapsed. A complaint was made that the Government of the day had not given it the support that they might have done when the money market was bad because of high exchange. However, I do not want to go back to past history. The fact of the matter is that it went "bust" and the act was left on the statute book. They left their property there. The Government had no intention of going into the timber business and nobody suggested doing anything. Now the Government takes the position that when the A.N.D. Company came along and said as far as the operation of that factory is concerned it is unpractical and unsound under the present conditions in the markets but it may alter during the next ten years and so we would like an option on this water power for that period. In the meantime we will take the lumber and instead of manufacturing the pulp here we will have it manufactured at the Grand Falls Plant extension. That is all about it. As far as the Government is concerned it is a question of doing what they think best. If the property is there, if employment can't be found we say that they ought to amend the Act accordingly. As to whether Mr. Harris is qualified, whether he is good, bad or indifferent has nothing to do with this Bill, and certainly not with the Government and not with any individual.

I would like to tell the honorable member this, that I should be very pleased to know if he does not care to tell me publicly, his reason why to-day the A.N.D. Company should be regarded as a crowd of pirates trying to put something over on this country. I would like to know it here now. The country gave it concessions years ago in the days of Sir Robert Bond, but if there could be any serious reason apart from the present opinion of the gentleman as regards the man in charge of that plant that the honorable member knows, I want to say right here now that this Committee can rise and need not do a thing further in the matter.

I would like to tell the hon. member that if there have been any breaches of the Logging Act they have never been reported to the Department of Justice. This is a very serious business in which the Government is practically asked to step in and salvage a wreck. That is what it is. This company had gone insolvent. The Anglo Newfoundland Development Company has taken over the holdings of the Terra Nova Sulphit Company. It is not a matter of charity. It is purely a business proposition. The Governmtnt finds itself in the position that they say to us "we cannot hope under the present conditions to carry on the mills at Alexander Bay and we want to be allowed, as an alternative, to make extensions elsewhere." If there is anything wrong with the proposition well then we are prepared to hold the matter up and make enquiries. I want to tell the honourable member that if he has any personal dislike for Mr. Harris, it is not like him to be so unkind, that is no reason why this bill should not go through. It is evident that there is no love lost by the hon. member on Mr. Harris, but I would not like to have anybody talk about me as the hon. member for Twillingate has spoken this evening. I happen to be in charge of this bill just because the matter was taken up with the Government. I did not personally undertake to put this bill through, and if there is any serious matter in connection with it I would like to hear it now. I have no desire to rush this thing through the House. If the hon. member thinks that he would like to look into the matter then alright; I am quite prepared that the bill be deferred until it has been examined. But I cannot for the life of me see what his opinion of Mr. Harris has to do with the merits of this Bill.

MR. WARREN—Mr. Chairman, the hon member made some reference to me. I will not keep the House very long, but I have some personal interest in the debate and this is my excuse for getting up. I did not hear all that the hon. member for Twillingate said but I think that it is but right that I should make some explanation as far as I was connected with this matter. It will be remembered that this House did not adjourn until late in the summer. I was then asked by the Prime Minister if I would undertake the logging commission. I told him that I would for a certain rate per day which is the ordinary professional fee charged everybody else. If that were not paid I would not undertake the work. He agreed. Soon after my law partner went to Montreal and I could not shut down the office altogether and I had to wait until he came back. After his return I was retained in an important case of murder and I was kept busy on that case for some time . After that I was ill and so I could not possibly go. I had a slight operation but as soon as I could possibly go I went and that is the reason why I went at that particular time of the year. Now with regard to my not seeing a sufficiently large number of loggers I say this;

I repeat what I said before early in this session. It is my opinion that the result of the Commission would have been the same if I had done what I did do seeing the few that I did see as if I had been sitting in this chamber for the whole summer with every loggers expenses paid on his way to and from here to give his evidence. It is only a matter of human nature. The result is the same as if I had consulted a hundred per cent. of the loggers because it is as I said before a matter of human nature. They did not want to make forty-five dollars as was in the logging bill of last year but they wanted to make as much as they could every month. Some of them wanted to get sixty-five dollars a month and found. Those in favour of the contract and were making sixty-five dollars a month said that they were prepared to go on wages if they made up what they were earning overtime. All of them were in favour of wages if the wages were sixty- five dollars or seventy dollars a month and found. Now let me refer to what the hon. member said as to the law of supply and demand. The year before last when work was scarce and men were plentiful the logging companies could pay practically any wages that they liked. That cuts both ways. As regards the labour and supply and demand it is the same as in any other branches of industry. Back in 1916 and 1918 when the times were good and the fish was a tremendous price the companies found it very difficult to get men with the result that they had to pay wages as high as eighty dollars per month but afterwards when the conditions were not so good men became more plentiful and wages went down. There is an incident that may be of interest to the House. I did not put it on record because it was not a part of the evidence. I was at Badger Station and I was waiting for the train that was to come in the next morning. At three o'clock I heard a train that was coming in from St. John's or somewhere in that direction and I heard considerable row. Next morning I asked Mr. Gilmore about it and he told me that Mr. Gillingham had been around Fogo district picking up a hundred men, to whom he had promised sixty-five dollars a month and board, but when they had arrived at Badger the night before they said that they were going on over to work on the Humber supposing that they got only thirty dollars a month. What can you do with men of that sort? Here was the Power and Paper Company at the Humber that had a minimum wage of thirty two dollars, and if there was anything done over it was paid for. And here was Mr. Gillingham with a hundred men to whom he had promised sixty-five dollars a month and their board and yet they decided to go to the Humber, so that it can be seen from that that there are a number of people who are in a position to ask practically what they like. The law of supply and demand will come into force and the companies will find that according as the industries get bigger and more extensive the greater will be the demand for labour, and the result will be that the loggers will be in a position to demand a higher wage than they would otherwise be getting. I just mention these facts to prove that I do not think it would have made any difference whether I saw ten or a thousand. That is the explanation why I did not go until the month of November.

HON. MR. SULLIVAN—From the remarks of the Hon. Member for Twillingate I fear that he is not very familiar with the conditions in connection with the Terra Nova Sulphite Company. I do not think that he is or he would never have got up here and made the statements that he did, and I can only assume that he failed to understand what this bill really means. What are the facts? A few years ago a Norwegian Company started building a Sulphite Mill at Alexander Bay. The war came on and they could not get sufficient money because of exchange and other things to finish the work. At that time sulphite was in fair demand and it could be manufactured at a price so that they could compete with the Scandinavians. The conditions are different to-day. The A. N. D. Company cannot manufacture sulphite and sell it abroad in competition with the Scandinavians. Now what are they asking for in this bill? Very little, simply the rights of the the water of Grant's Falls, six miles up on the Terra Nova River. They own the other water powers. They have bought them. They own the timber lands. They are not asking for any great concessions after all. They have assured the Government that when the conditions are favorable that they are prepared to complete the mills for the manufacture of sulphite. The mills at Terra Nova are not completed at the present time, and are not likely to be until market conditions change, and there is some hope of being able to compete with Scandinavian markets.

And the A. N. D. Company realizes and those who know the paper business, and I am sure Mr. Brown, the Hon. Member for Twillingate, will realize that it is much better for the labouring people of this country to have the wood cut at Terra Nova River and manufactured into paper at Grand Falls, than to send it out to the other side only as sulphite pulp. Manufacturing the wood that is cut around Terra Nova and Gambo will mean considerably more to this country when it is manufactured into paper, than it would if it were manufactured into sulphite pulp at Glovertown. There is going to be more labour at Gambo and Terra Nova than there ever would be at Glovertown. Those places are in Bonavista Bay, and the people of Bonavista Bay will get employment, because the A. N. D. Co. had given an assurance to the Government that they will cut practically as much wood as the railway can haul. They will also put up a rossing plant, at Terra Nova and Gambo, and they intend to bring the wood that is cut at Gambo and Terra Nova over the railway into Grand Falls and make it into paper there.

Now when you come to consider that—the concessions that they ask for is the right to this water power at Grant's Falls for ten years, it is very little, because if they are going to compete with Scandinavia surely it will be within the next ten years. They own the other water powers, and if they want to close down they can close down the whole operation, and this would be the worst thing that could happen for the people of Bonavista Bay.

MR. SCAMMELL — How much wood did the Company haul over the road last winter?

HON. MR. SULLIVAN—Twenty thousand cords; and they are prepared to haul over the road in years to come from twenty to thirty thousand cords, provided we can supply the necessary rolling stock to handle the timber.

MR. SCAMMELL—At what freight rate?

HON. MR. SULLIVAN—I do not know what the freight rate is.

MR. K. M. BROWN—I thought it was thirteen thousand that they hauled over the road last year?

HON. MR. SULLIVAN—I do not think we could handle it all. This winter, I understand, they had to stop cutting because of the snow going so early on this side of the country. But the A. N. D. Company is prepared to cut all the wood that we can possibly haul over the railway; and I think there is more money in it for the railway and for the people of Newfoundland in getting those rossing plants put up and in getting the wood hauled over the road and brought to Grand Falls, and there made into paper, and there certainly will be more men employed in Bonavista Bay, than there would be if the wood was handled at the seaside at Glovertown

I regret that Mr. Brown should so far forget himself as to make such a personal, unparliamentary and ungentlemanly attack on Mr. Harris, or on any gentleman outside this House? It is most uncalled for, and it is a most cowardly thing for any man to get up here and make an attack on any man outside the House, because the person attacked has no redress. If Mr. Brown had made that attack on a public platform outside this House Mr. Harris would then be free to take steps to vindicate his character. I am sure that if Mr. Brown had given careful consideration to the words he used, he would not have so far forgotten himself as to say such things about any gentleman on the floors of this House.

MR. SCAMMELL—Mr. Chairman, I am glad to see that such an innocent looking Bill as this should provoke such a deal of discussion. I did not have the pleasure of hearing Mr. Brown's remarks in toto, but I have some idea as to the spirit that animated him when he stood up here to-night. He has a grievance, and the grievance is not with him a personal one, but it is a grievance on behalf of his fellow men, because of the treatment meted out on the floors of this legislature to certain legislation which he introduced on behalf of one of the most important and one of the most deserving classes of labouring men in this country. He got scant thanks from this Chamber for his efforts in that direction; and he has only suffered being dubbed as a man who hatches plots and revolutions. If it is hatching plots and revolutions to try and get a better wage for the labouring men of this country, then that is a crime that I shall always be proud to plead guilty of, and when Mr. Brown brought in that Bill last session I stood four square with him for the rights of the loggers, and I am still four square with Mr. Brown in the fight that he is putting up to-night.

I want to say that as far as the A. N. D. Company is concerned and as regards that Commission on the logging Bill, I have to say, in spite of the efficiency of the Commissioner, that the report is only so much piffle. I still maintain, despite all the Commissioner says, that the real body of men who should have given evidence before that Commission got little or no opportunity to give that evidence. These labouring men could not afford to give up their two dollars a day or two dollars and a half, or their cord and a half of wood, or whatever it was—they could not afford to leave their work up in the woods, and come down to the railway junction to give evidence before that Commission, so then, from the labourers' point of view what after all is the worth of that report?

The Minister of Justice wants some suggestions as regards this Bill, and he wants some opinions as regards the Bill, and he wants to know some reasons why the Bill should be opposed. Now, I am going to presume to speak on behalf of some thousands of men in Bonavista Bay. Those men may not be represented on that side of the House, but at any rate they have some representation on this side of the House. There were thousands of men in Bonavista Bay who believed, who hoped and prayed that when the Terra Nova Company Act went on the Statute Book that it would mean the operation of a mill at the waterside in Bonavista District. That hope, I say, is shattered for all time tonight by this legislation that is before us. The most that the labouring men of Bonavista District can hope for now is that they shall go into the woods as lumbering men; but there will be no industrial development at the bottom of Bonavista Bay, which was the thing that they expected, and the thing that the Government had in mind when it put the Terra Nova Sulphite Company Act on the Statute Book, and made concessions to the Terra Nova Sulphite Co.

The position in effect to-night is that the A. N. D. Company comes in here and tells the House and the country that they want certain water powers for ten years, and if at the end of that time they find that they do not want them, then the country can have them back. I cannot say enough, or Mr. Brown could not have said enough to eulogise the shrewdness of Mr. Harris, who does not come here to-night and say that they want this water power for the A. N. D. Company.

HON. MR. SULLIVAN—They own the timber.

MR. SCAMMELL—That is alright, but that is not the principle that I am fighting. The principle that I am fighting is that instead of making a deal tonight with the Terra Nova Sulphite Company, ... where is that Company today, can the Hon. Minister of Justice tell me?

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—Gone bust.

MR. SCAMMELL—Who are the principals of this Bill?

HON. MINISTER OF JUSTICE—What happens is this—they are simply taking over these areas. The situation is that this other Company got a certain amount of money, but could not get any more, and had to close down—that is all. The A. N. D. Company took over the areas, and what the Terra Nova Company could not do they are going to do—that is all.
