month behind with registrations. I understand that some recommendations have been made to the Attorney General regarding some other method of registering deeds. Is he in a position to tell us whether any progress is being made in that, and whether any consideration has been given to it and if there is any likelihood of any improvement being made in the Registry of Deeds?

MR. CURTIS: Yes, Mr. Chairman, I might say that office is congested, and we have been trying to get some additional room up there particularly in view of the fact that they have in mind an endeavour to get a photographic outfit for photographing deeds, which will enable a deed to be immediately registered and returned. I might say that matter is under consideration, and very active consideration.

706 carried.

707—Constabulary:

MR. HOLLETT: Now, Mr. Chairman, I have nothing much to say on that except that I am very happy to know, as the Attorney General has stated, all policemen are happy about their salaries. I think I brought up the matter here some time ago, and showed there was at least one policeman on the force whose son, on the RCMP, gets about twice as much as the old man. So that I am glad to know that all policemen are happy with the salaries they are getting.

I would like to ask the Attorney General is there any pressing need for that special vote—it is only $200?

MR. CURTIS: Frankly, Mr. Chairman, it is not a vote I know anything about.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, while we are on this vote, I think I would be expressing the sentiments of the Premier and every member of this House if I took advantage of the occasion to express my own personal sympathy and of the other members to the relatives of the late Frank Stamp, whom the members of the police force thought so much about, and who died so suddenly the other day. He was a great athlete and a very popular police officer and very attentive to his duty.

I notice here there is a vote for compensation to families of deceased constables. Is that being carried on in the old way in which it was done before when there was a fund created? I notice there is only a vote of $100. There used to be a fund out of which compensation pensions were given to widows. Is that in existence now?

MR. CURTIS: I really don't know, Mr. Chairman. That is purely a token vote. It is not presumed that it will be enough, but that is a fund which will enable the Cabinet in a proper case to take steps to relieve the family of a constable who should die under any unhappy circumstances. I don't think many claims have been made on that vote in previous years, and that is the reason it is down to this token vote. I might say that my department tries to be very considerate in every case like that.

I want to thank my honourable friend for bringing up the case of Constable Stamp. I did not know Constable Stamp personally, but I have heard him spoken of by my men in the highest possible terms. I am sure we all join with the honourable and learned member in his remarks.

707 carried.

708—Royal Canadian Mounted Police:

MR. BROWNE: How many men of the RCMP are there in Newfoundland now?

MR. CURTIS: I can't say that, Mr. Chairman. We pay at the rate of $1,500 a year, and that is what it costs. It is a mathematical sum to work out two-thirds of that. There are of course a lot more RCMP in Newfoundland than we are paying. We pay $1,500 individually.

MR. BROWNE: That is roughly about 155. There are a lot more RCMP officers than we are paying for.

MR. CURTIS: The Federal Government maintain RCMP.

MR. BROWNE: Do you know how many they have here?

MR. CURTIS: No, we only pay for certain detachments in certain areas. They have additional men which they themselves pay for.

MR. BROWNE: Have we any of the police outside of St. John's, or does the RCMP look after them all?

MR. CURTIS: Everything outside St. John's.

708 carried.

709-Fire Department:

MR. BROWNE: On this the only observation I would like to make is on the remuneration rates, the salaries. I suppose it is not a good argument to say that the Superintendent only gets $4,700 and the new Fire Commissioner is getting $5,000. What has the Fire Commissioner got that the Superintendent has not? The Superintendent of the Fire Department is an intelligent man with about twenty-five years of experience behind him, and yet he does not get as good a salary as the new commissioner, who just worked into the job out of a plumbing store. Is that supposed to be a political appointment I wonder?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I regret that the honourable gentleman asked that question. I regret that the honourable gentleman had that thought in mind. Frank Ryan is a strong Liberal. He campaigned actively and energetically for the Liberal Party, as I judge certain friends of the honourable gentleman campaigned actively and energetically for the Tory Party. Now citizens who have campaigned during elections are still citizens and are not debarred from an appointment by this Government. We are proud of the appointment. We have been congratulated by the Board of Fire Underwriters on the fact that we have appointed Mr. Ryan as a Fire Commissioner. That is that. Now if the honourable gentleman does not like it he can lump it!

MR. HOLLIE: That is nasty!

MR. SMALLWOOD: He can like it or lump it! The question was nasty, as I would expect. I say he can lump or like it as he likes.

MR. BROWNE: You seem to be very sensitive about it.

709 carried.

710-H.M. Penitentiary and Gaols:

MR. BROWNE: On this matter of the prison farm, Mr. Chairman, I wonder if the Minister could give us a little more information about that farm? I take it that there are certain wardens are there out there, and to what extent is farming being done?

MR. CURTIS: There are actually, Mr. Chairman, at the moment at the prison farm—in the country we have sixty male prisoners at the Penitentiary and four female prisoners, and forty-five male prisoners at the prison camps, so that the total number of prisoners is about 109. At the Penitentiary we have a staff of 32, and at the camp a staff of eight. We need a larger staff at the Penitentiary than we do at the prison farm.

I am not in a position at the present moment to give a full report from the Superintendent of the Penitentiary. I asked for it today, and I found we have not received last year's report yet. But if I can get it while the House is in session I will table it—that will be on the whole Penitentiary. I cannot give the details now.

MR. HOLLETT: On page 96, under salaries, I notice there is one fixed personal, $2,610. Can the Minister explain what that means?

MR. CURTIS: No, Mr. Chairman, I don't carry the intimate details of all the staff.

MR. HOLLETT: I don't mean the name, but what does it mean?

MR. CURTIS: That means he was a policeman, I understand, assigned to the Penitentiary and rather than have him suffer some loss in salary he carried his salary at the time with him.

HON. DR. H. L. POTTLE (Minister of Public Welfare): As a matter of fact, Mr. Chairman, that principle runs all through these classifications, and it means they received a certain salary under a formal vote and when transferred they retain their old salary, with the cost of living bonus and the 10% etc.

MR. BROWNE: Did the Attorney General say how many female prisoners there are in the Penitentiary?

MR. CURTIS: Four.

MR. BROWNE: Is it necessary, do you think, to get a new building?

MR. CURTIS: Not if we can keep the female population down to four. Last year unfortunately we had ten and twelve off and on, and had cells for half of them.

MR. BROWNE: For any length of time?

MR. CURTIS: Too long to be doubled together, the quarters are too cramped for even a week.

Item 710 carried.

711—Miscellaneous:

MR. HOLLETT: Would the Minister tell us something about 711-08 Civil Actions $1,500? Apparently the Minister thinks that will not be enough for some reason or another.

MR. CURTIS: Maybe it will be.

MR. HOLLETT: I wonder if you would care to mention what Civil Actions?

MR. CURTIS: No, I would not care to.

MR. HOLLETT: I thought you would not care to. Fifteen hundred dollars does not seem a lot to cover that. I don't see why the Minister does not ask to have it amended right now.

MR. BROWNE: May I ask what is the practice when a vote runs out like that?

MR. CURTIS: The Cabinet is allowed generally to transfer counter-vailing savings from one vote to another, within a department.

MR. BROWNE: Is that under the Audit Act?

MR. CURTIS: Yes.
MR. HOLLETT: Would the Attorney General tell us how long it has been since the department took a civil action against any person or corporation?

MR. CURTIS: I think I would have to have notice of that question. We have taken civil actions before.

MR. HOLLETT: Not since Confederation?

MR. CURTIS: I think so—I would not say we have not.

MR. MURRAY: As a matter of fact I took some number of actions. It is not unusual for the Attorney General's Department to take civil actions.

MR. HOLLETT: In Newfoundland—could the Honourable Minister cite one?

MR. CURTIS: It also covers defending civil actions, and very frequently we become involved in civil actions.

MR. MURRAY: I have been myself in several civil actions where vehicles owned by the several departments are involved.

MR. HOLLETT: That is where some department is a defendant?

MR. MURRAY: Or where any of the property of the province is at stake.

MR. HOLLETT: Can you remember any particular one?

MR. MURRAY: I do know I was on several myself, and I know it is not unusual.

MR. HOLLETT: But there is one pending now?

Item 711 carried.

712—No vote.

713—Transportation:

MR. FOGWILL: Mr. Chairman, I wonder would the Minister make a breakdown of the vote for the Board of Transportation, $15,000, and give us some details on it?

MR. CURTIS: All I can say, Mr. Chairman, Mr. Gerald Murphy and his firm is the Board of Transport Consultant; and it provides for travelling. The rest is purely a reserve as we don't know at the beginning of the year how many applications will be made before the Board of Transport.

MR. BROWNE: How much was spent last year?

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, I believe there is a stranger in the gallery!

MR. CHAIRMAN: Is the honourable member disturbed?

MR. HOLLETT: Somewhat.

MR. CURTIS: I have not the figures here, but I think we probably spent about ten thousand of the fifteen thousand last year.

MR. BROWNE: In regard to the civil action, or to the freight rates, is the Government contemplating any civil action in that respect?

MR. CURTIS: That vote, Mr. Chairman, deals more with actions which we take jointly with the other maritime provinces. You see we are members of the Maritime Board of Trade. Now and then the other maritime provinces institute actions and sometimes we join with them and sometimes we don’t—it always depends upon the matter of the application, and this just gives us a small vote on which to finance any such action.
713 carried.

715—Fire Commissioner—Carried.

716—District Courts:

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I wonder if the Minister is now in a position to tell us when and where the district courts are to be set up, where they are to be located, and when they are to be opened for cases. They have been appointed now, I believe, since last summer or early fall, and there has been no case heard yet.

MR. CURTIS: I understand, Mr. Chairman, the judges have just returned from Ottawa, and they have not yet reported to me, but we are proceeding to get quarters for them, and one will be in Corner Brook and the other in St. John's. We have no word from Ottawa of any other appointments up to the present time.

MR. HOLLETT: Are these Federal appointments?

MR. CURTIS: Yes, Federal appointments.

MR. HOLLETT: May I ask why we have to provide offices and stenographers?

MR. CURTIS: The same reason as for the Supreme Court. Ottawa provides the judges and we look after them.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The point must be remembered that these courts are created by the Legislature of Newfoundland. All courts operated in Newfoundland are created by an Act of the Legislature of Newfoundland, all courts without exception.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, the Attorney General has decided on where the courts are to be situated? I can easily understand Corner Brook, they have the courthouse there.

MR. CURTIS: No the courthouse is not big enough. They are trying to get other quarters. That is part of the delay, negotiating for other quarters there. There are a lot of litigations in Corner Brook and the magistrate is very busy all the time, and I am told by people who know Corner Brook that there is not enough room in the Corner Brook District Court just now. We have the same position in St. John's. Frankly we are desperately cramped.

MR. BROWNE: I could suggest a place.

MR. CURTIS: That completes the list, except for 703 which might stand, Mr. Chairman.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The next one we would call is the Department of Public Works.

900—Department of Public Works:

901—Minister's Office—Carried.

902—General Office—Carried.

903—Accounting Office—Carried.

904—Registration of Motor Vehicles:

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I asked a question the other day about the number of vehicles registered last year, and I asked for the number which were registered for each district in the island, and the answer came back that there were no statistics kept showing the localities where the people who register the vehicles live. I am sure that when the application is put in each person has to give his address. Is it because of pressure of work that no record of that kind is indicated; where he lives, the number in St. John's, Corner Brook and Grand Falls? It seems to me it would be a very nice record for the department to have because they would then know where the great part of the vehicles were located, and naturally where the greater part are they would want the greater number of roads, or it would determine whether they would get more attention. Now I would like to suggest to the Minister that in the future more attention should be paid and some arrangement should be made like that so we would know the distribution of the motor vehicles over the whole province.

HON. E. S. SPENCER (Minister of Public Works) : Mr. Chairman, replying to the question raised by the honourable and learned member for St. John's West, I would like to say that the question posed with regard to vehicles recently, if my memory serves me right, asked for the number of vehicles by districts. Up to now there has been no such record kept for the simple reason that certain sections throughout the island overlapped slightly, and one might be in one district and one in another, and honourable members are well aware of that. The department has however, new as it is, been from year to year improving its methods of recording. There has been set up a system of calculating of ten particular areas rather than twenty districts, and we have records within the main which are divided into these particular areas. The honourable member can rest assured that no application and no car is registered for any part of the country that we do not know where it is.

MR. BROWNE: I am not asking for that.

MR. SPENCER: Anyway we have decided to divide communities into a certain group, and during the last few years we have been endeavouring to set up totals for the areas of St. John's and Grand Falls and Gander and for Corner Brook, one for the Clarenville area and one for the Burin Peninsula. These records are available, and we are endeavouring, I might say, to do all we possibly can, almost identically what the honourable member suggests. In fact we want to go still further. I would point out again that the department is comparatively new, the volume of work it does has increased tremendously within the last few years. We are still cramped for space although we took from the Justice Department a building which they were using and which really, I believe, they could still use to good effect. We find now we are going to have to enlarge even that. The hope is that we will also put in in the very near future an alphabetic system whereby, if inquiries come in to the department to find out, for instance, where John Jones lives, whom we don't know by the name of John Jones at the moment but by the license number, and we look up the number of the license, if that is given, and thus find the name of John Jones. These are things we are endeavouring to do to bring the department up to date, but it cannot be done all at once.

MR. BROWNE: How many vehicles are registered this year, do you know?

MR. SPENCER: Approximately twenty-one thousand. Insofar as we can compete, we can give them for ten or a dozen areas, and possibly by the end of June we may have these figures available.

MR. HOLLETT: Purchase of motor license plates: Are these purchased in this country?
MR. SPENCER: They have been imported up to now.

MR. HOLLETT: Is there no way of getting them made here? There are not sufficient, I suppose.

MR. SPENCER: That is a very good question, and I can assure the honourable gentleman we are very anxious to try and provide work for any industry that is operating in Newfoundland. That is one of the things nearest and dearest to the heart of any member of this Government; to try and provide employment in Newfoundland. Unfortunately at the moment there is nobody in Newfoundland with a press to provide that. We have gone into it very carefully, and we have had samples made, we have tried different methods only to find that the rates at which we can buy the plates from people already in the business on the Main­land are so obviously cheaper than we can produce them here that we cannot even justify the difference on behalf of the local trade. Unfortunately there is nobody at the moment prepared to produce them?

MR. HOLLETT: Not even CMIC?

MR. SPENCER: They have not a dye at the moment.

Item 904 carried.

906—Buildings:

MR. HOLLETT: 906—Is that a token vote there. I notice last year it was $1,001.

MR. SPENCER: Provision was made to employ two architects for the department, and a token vote was put in there so that, if at some future time those positions were filled then the Government would be enabled to provide the salaries. So that is really there as a token vote at $100 each. These positions are not filled.

MR. BROWNE: Have you any architects employed by the department now?

MR. SPENCER: On a contractural basis.

MR. BROWNE: As civil servants?

MR. SPENCER: No.

MR. BROWNE: Who are on a contractural basis?

MR. SPENCER: Well, we have an architect, actually a gentleman who should be classified—I am very glad this point came up as it gives me an opportunity to say it. Two years ago we were privileged to get hold of one young man who came here from Europe and was a very highly qualified architect. We did not bring him here, he came entirely on his own at a time when we found a very great need of the services of such a man. We placed him in our department at a very minor salary, so minor that I was very considerably worried when I found the gentleman's qualifications were such that I realized it was entirely out of line. Last year I managed through the good graces and co-operation of my colleagues to raise his salary, and again this year I have raised it still more. I think at the present time he is just about in the category of our first engineer, $4,600. That is a contractural salary. I am glad to say he has provided some of the most excellent work architecturally that we have been privileged to get since I have been a member of the department. He had complete charge for us for the production of plans and designs for the ferry docks at Portugal Cove and at Placentia, a work really that previous to then he had not been engaged in. He is a man from the central part of Europe where probably the only water he had seen was the width of the Rhine, a hundred feet or so flowing past the city of Bremen where he lived. But with his technical knowledge he applied himself to such a degree that I sent him to Nova Scotia to inspect the various docks throughout the Maritimes. He came back here and produced plans and designs for these four docks, one at Bell Island, one at Portugal Cove and two at Placentia, in detail. We have had them thoroughly examined by those qualified for the work. I am very happy to say we are proud to have him. We are paying him at the present time $4,800 a year. Honestly if I were to employ such a man in my own business I would really like to give him the top salary, but we can’t do it, although he is well worth it. "He can only measure the garment reasonably according to the cloth. But I am very happy to have this Dr. Steinbrink with us."

MR. HOLLETT: He is not included in this item?

MR. SPENCER: No, he is on a contractual basis. There is no architect in this at all.

MR. FOGWILL: Mr. Chairman, before we carry this item I would like to bring to the attention of the Minister the inadequacy of the lighting in this chamber. I did so last year and the year before. I don’t know what it seems like to honourable members opposite, but everywhere we turn it seems to cast a shadow. The Honourable Minister said last year he would take the matter up and see what could be done. I find it very difficult particularly in the evening to try to read in here; whatever way you turn there seems to be a shadow. Is the Minister going to do anything about the lighting in this Chamber?

MR. SPENCER: In regard to that point, I take it it is a fair question—I would be more inclined to say to the Government and to all and sundry to quit this business of working morning, noon and night. But apparently we of this Government are so concerned about carrying on the work of the province that we are not satisfied to do that. This Chamber with its present lighting system has existed here, apart from those extra lights on the wall, probably a hundred years, but I do take the question seriously, and if the honourable gentleman will observe he will see that only this day or yesterday an extra light has been added. I am quite sure the reporter over there really did deserve that extra light. It was merely mentioned to me and like a flash it was there. I don’t know whether or not I could do the same for the honourable gentleman. I don’t know if we are to do much of this evening and night work, and if extra lighting is required obviously we can get the electricians to work to look into the matter or get some advice. I am rather surprised to hear the honourable gentleman say that I promised I would look into the matter last year and at some previous time, I regret that if I did say that I certainly lost sight of it. I did not even know the request had gone in, at any rate I don’t recall it. If extra lights are necessary, however, we may have to do something about it. I don’t know how—this very beautiful chandelier and settings, as honourable members can very easily observe, are such that I don’t know how we could put in any extra lights unless we put in floor lamps, which would change
MR. HOLLETT: I wonder if the Honourable Minister could tell us if any of the architects in his department had anything to do with the planning of the birch plant and the gypsum plant and the cement plant?

MR. SPENCER: I think that question was answered on another occasion, Mr. Chairman, and I don't see that it has any bearing on the vote here. It was certainly not done under this vote.

MR. HOLLETT: It was under buildings, and these are government buildings. All I am asking is did the department have anything to do with the architectural plans for these three plants?

MR. SPENCER: The answer is in the negative—No—Carried.

MR. BROWNE: I wonder if the attention of the Minister has been brought to the fact that there is no garbage collection at all for this building or has not been for several days and there is an accumulation of garbage at the entrance downstairs which has been there for several days. I suggested many times to the people down there that it should be removed, and they tell me nobody has come to take it away. I wonder if some attention could be given to that?

MR. SPENCER: In reply to the honourable gentleman I can only state that we have several buildings arranged somewhat similarly. The system is that we have an arrangement with a contractor who at stated periods, and at the request of the caretaker of the building comes along to remove the garbage. If the matter the honourable gentleman has raised has been neglected in any way I will certainly be glad to call the attention of my department to it, and I thank the honourable member.

MR. HOLLETT: 906-03-06 Rentals—Memorial University Annex. I asked a question some time ago as to the rent and hire of this building on different occasions. I did not get any reply. I wonder if the Minister is in a position to tell us that?

MR. SMALLWOOD: There was a reply that the information might be had from the Board of Regents of the University.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, I don't want to take exception to everything the Honourable the Premier says, but surely the Board of Regents would tell the Government when they would not tell us. Our duty is to ask the Government to reply to a question which the people want to know, and it is not good enough to get up and say we have to apply to the Board of Regents of the Memorial University. We can't do it and they would not answer.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Has the honourable gentleman tried—has he asked?

MR. HOLLETT: I am not going to try.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Nor are we.
somebody, surely on the government side should tell us that.

MR. SMALLWOOD: We don’t rent it out.

MR. HOLLETT: We are voting money to pay for light and cleaning and it is being hired out and used for various things. I am asking if they got anything for it.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Who got anything for it?

MR. HOLLETT: The Board of Regents if you wish.

MR. SMALLWOOD: How about asking them.

MR. HOLLETT: We don’t have to.

MR. SMALLWOOD: We don’t either and don’t intend to now.

MR. FOGWILL: How are we to vote?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Vote against it.

MR. HOLLETT: We will.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is logical.

MR. CHAIRMAN: If the honourable member who has the floor insists on speaking to members of the committee—

MR. HOLLETT: I won’t speak to him any more, Mr. Chairman. I want to ask the Honourable Minister of Public Works as to whether any rentals are received from the Memorial University Annex or has been during the past six or eight months?

MR. SPENCER: In reply, Mr. Chairman, there are several times during the period while the honourable gentleman was asking the question when I was about to rise and give the explanation that I know to be the case—the building in its entirety is passed over by the Government or by the Department of Public Works, which has the jurisdiction over public buildings, to the Board of Regents. The records are there to prove that. What they then do with the building is entirely their business. The building is simply passed over by the Government to the Board of Regents and they operate the building as they see fit, and we do not charge any rental whatsoever.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, if we want to hire the Memorial University Annex we must approach the Board of Regents?

MR. SPENCER: That is right—you don’t ask me.

MR. HOLLETT: For instance if the P.G. Party wanted to have a ball?

MR. SPENCER: If I had charge maybe you would not get it. However I do not have charge.

MR. HOLLETT: I thought the Honourable Minister had a bigger heart.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Order.

MR. HOLLETT: There are certain members on the opposite side who might not do that, but I believe the Honourable Minister would let us have it. All I want to know is what happens if we want it. We may need it soon.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, with an election in November.

MR. SPENCER: Well, the honourable gentleman has the answer—we have no jurisdiction. But we pay for light and cleaning—we have to, of course, yes.
MR. HOLLETT: Why is not that item put in the regular vote for the Memorial University to pay for the light and cleaning?

MR. SPENCER: Responsibility for cleaning in most of these buildings and certainly for all light and heating is ours, and so we have to take care of these, and the votes are there for that purpose—but we do not collect any rental.

MR. HOLLETT: I don’t quite understand some of the financial gymnastics of the present government. They pass over the building in its entirety to the Board of Regents and yet pay for the cleaning and lighting; and if it is to be hired one must go to the Board of Regents and they may or may not give it. If the Honourable Minister were Chairman of that Board we would not get it anyway—possibly that is the answer to that question.

MR. SPENCER: I said “probably”—now don’t forget that.

906 carried.

907—Roads and Bridges:

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I notice there is a considerable increase in the staff and top salaries for roads and bridges, an increase of seventeen persons in the personnel and an average of over a hundred thousand dollars in salaries. I wonder if the Minister would give us an explanation of that?

MR. SPENCER: The answer is, Mr. Chairman, that within the past few years we have been struggling very hard to get additional engineers, and these additional seventeen persons that the honourable member sees recorded there are some additional engineers that have been employed during the past year; and a group of men who were on a contractual basis before have been put into the civil service, and now their salaries will be voted in the regular way. I don’t know exactly the number who were with us before on a contractual basis who are not under the civil service.

MR. BROWNE: What is the explanation of the footnote (c)? Six new Directors Grades I to IV, (foot note): Point of entry governed by qualifications. Vote for $32,000.

MR. SPENCER: I am informed that that particular item refers to the fact that we have been continually advertising for men, and we find it difficult to get highly qualified engineers—in fact we would still be glad to hire additional good road engineers if we could get them. Our programme calls for them—that figure is really put in to cover various classifications as we hire them. I think that might be the answer the honourable member wishes?

MR. BROWNE: The first position is Mr. French?

MR. SPENCER: Of course.

MR. BROWNE: Who is the second one?

MR. SPENCER: The assistant chief engineer in charge of the drafting of bridges, Mr. C. A. Knight, who has been with the department for some twenty years.

MR. BROWNE: There are three new directors—they have been established?

MR. SPENCER: These are some of the people I have referred to. I can’t remember the names.

MR. BROWNE: I just asked for the information.
MR. SPENCER: One of them, Mr. Chairman, I think came to us as one of the displaced persons from Europe whom we were fortunate enough to get some two years ago when we could not get men anywhere except a half dozen from Europe. I believe he is a Latvian, and a very fine fellow.

MR. BROWNE: Most of them are.

MR. HOLLETT: I take it these six directors could get anywhere from $4,800 to $6,000.

MR. SPENCER: Exactly—most of them are at $4,800.

MR. BROWNE: That means you have about twenty-three engineers there?

MR. SPENCER: I should not be surprised, we have quite a number.

MR. BROWNE: Any Newfoundlanders there?

MR. SPENCER: We hired about four or five this year.

MR. FOGWILL: Mr. Chairman, with reference to the maintenance of roads and bridges I should like to bring to the attention of the Honourable Minister the conditions of the roads in St. John’s East. Most of the main highways in St. John’s East, Mr. Chairman, have been more or less forgotten about or they have not been given much attention. For instance, Mr. Chairman, the road going from St. John’s down to Torbay on the way down to Pouch Cove—there has been very little repairs to that highway. It is an old and established highway which was being used by thousands of people every day coming to work from their homes to Fort Pepperrell and other places. I think these people down there have room for complaints of the conditions of the roads. There are a thousand people there who are taxpayers, and I believe, Mr. Chairman, they have every right to make this complaint which I am now making on their behalf tonight, in respect to the conditions of these roads which have had very little done on them during the past five years.

I would also like to point out, Mr. Chairman, the conditions of the road running to Logy Bay, Middle Cove and Outer Cove—the Marine Drive. These roads are in a deplorable condition and need attention. As a matter of fact if some attention is not given to them this year they will deteriorate to an extent where they will cost the Government quite a lot of money to put them in condition. The road down to Portugal Cove is not in as bad a condition as these others although it does need quite a lot of repairs from the outport out. Many of the other roads in and about St. John’s East, main highways and secondary roads need a lot of attention from the department. I hope that the Minister will find himself able to spend more money on the roads in St. John’s East this year than he has done during the past four or five years. I would like the Minister, if he could, to make a statement now in respect to the roads in St. John’s East, because, Mr. Chairman, they have been neglected in these past five years, and it is time something was done to put those roads in a better condition than they have been.

I would like to point out too, Mr. Chairman, while I have this opportunity to say something about roads—if the roads in St. John’s East were put in a better state of repairs it would relieve the congestion on the main roads running out to Conception Bay on holidays and Sundays when so many people take advantage of the fine weather to go out on that highway in cars. If these roads in St. John’s East were put in better condition I am sure many people would go down that way, and by doing so, Mr. Chairman, I believe that the motoring public would have more comfort in their little pleasures than they do have at the present time. I would like to ask the Minister if his department intends to do a little more this year in St. John’s East than has been done in the past five years?

MR. HOLLETT: Before the Minister answers that, I wonder if he would couple with that request so ably put by my honourable friend from St. John’s East what is to be done in St. John’s West. Last year, I believe, we had forty thousand dollars spent on the roads in St. John’s West and St. John’s East—I don’t think I need elaborate—if the Honourable Minister is to make a statement I would like him to include St. John’s East.

MR. SPENCER: Mr. Chairman, I am just as happy that the two honourable gentlemen representing St. John’s East and St. John’s West have made these comments, and made these inquiries. I am very glad that the honourable member for St. John’s East has put it in such a manner—if the roads were put in a better condition it would be most desirable—or words to that effect—that same thing applies all over Newfoundland, and where there are no roads perhaps it applies with still greater force. We have some roads and we try to get by with as little maintenance as possible, and so last year a vote was provided for both these districts and very considerable work was done. This year we plan, depending on the votes—I can’t say just yet as it has not gone through this House—but we plan to have a vote for each of these districts again. We have the figures listed for them, and we are ready to go in there with our equipment and try and improve the roads, again somewhat along the lines suggested by the honourable member for St. John’s East. I am quite prepared to say, without any fear of contradiction, that we will still not satisfy either ourselves or the people whom we must try to serve, because there just is not sufficient money to do it. But we will go as far as our money will allow us, distributed over the thirteen hundred communities that there are in the island.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the Minister if he would table his proposed programme for road maintenance for this year, and the allocations that he is going to make.

MR. SPENCER: That has not been determined as yet.

MR. BROWNE: When can we determine it if not now? We have an estimate for two million dollars. Where and how are you going to spend it?

MR. SPENCER: These are made up in two amounts, Mr. Chairman, $700,000 for improvement and reconstruction and $1,000,000 for new constructions, to be distributed, as I have already intimated, over the thirteen hundred settlements of Newfoundland and until this vote is through we are definitely unable to say just where we will put ten thousand or fifty thousand or one thousand, but we have certain engineering plans, and I can assure the honourable members of this House that we are making a very great effort in this year, and I think the Honourable Premier reported a week or two ago during my absence that I was trying to get a very substantial programme made up. That is definitely true, and I can assure the House and the honourable members in reply to these questions that we will not get sufficient money this year, next year or any other year as long as I foresee, in the foreseeable future, to build all the roads demanded. We have not the money. Our economy just does not provide it.

I think the honourable members may rest assured that we are providing votes for St. John's East and West this year along with the other twenty-eight districts of the island.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, that is not very satisfactory. I think that is a rude answer.

MR. SPENCER: It was not given with any intention to be rude.

MR. BROWNE: The honourable gentleman does not intend to be rude, but he tells us we will not get any information. Why not, if the money is to be spent?

MR. SPENCER: At the moment I can't tell you apart from the fact that one amount is in one vote and the other in another.

MR. BROWNE: On page 131—details of vote—we have here—Avalon Peninsula to Chapel Arm Bridge: Maintenance of Highroads $540,000; Maintenance of Secondary Roads $135,000.

MR. SPENCER: That is for the district.

MR. BROWNE: For the whole of Avalon Peninsula to Chapel Arm the sum of $135,000 is to be granted to cover all secondary roads and $540,000 for highroads?

MR. SPENCER: Yes, but the honourable member should know that $135,000 for secondary roads does not include all the roads.

MR. BROWNE: What would you call the Marine Drive.

MR. SPENCER: That is a secondary road. No—I am informed that it is a highway.

MR. BROWNE: Where are the secondary roads?

MR. SPENCER: The branch roads and some roads connecting one community to another.

MR. BROWNE: That is not sufficient, it seems to me, because the great bulk of motor traffic is around St. John's.

MR. SPENCER: Not entirely, we have roads travelled much more than the St. John's roads.

MR. BROWNE: The Avalon Peninsula must have at least three quarters of all traffic.

MR. SPENCER: No it does not. The Avalon Peninsula, oh yes.

MR. BROWNE: On the road from Brigus there going on to the Hodgewater road, etc. I don't know what effort the Minister is going to make to convert that into a paved highway, but it seems to me to be just a waste of money to be doing anything else other than get a paved highway. It is a main highway of the country, and I presume it is a route along which the Trans-Canada Highway is to go. Is the Minister able to tell us tonight what the position is to be, if he intends it to be applied towards the Trans-Canada Highway and will it have a hard topped surface?

MR. SPENCER: Mr. Chairman, I really gave the honourable member my reply, and he thought I was rude in my reply. I assure the honourable gentleman there was no such thought.

MR. BROWNE: I withdrew it.

MR. SPENCER: That is a help—I did not even bother to ask for that.

Mr. Chairman, the road that the honourable member referred to, the Hodgewater highway and on through to Clarenville, is part of the Trans-Canada Highway, and so does not come into this at all, except from a maintenance point of view. The $2,000,000 that the honourable gentleman is looking at there has been exactly the same for the last ten years except that there has been less money. It is divided into four districts, and that sum of money is for the maintenance of highways, divided into four districts covering the whole of Newfoundland, of which, by the way, the Avalon Peninsula gets the largest sum, and there is an increase there this year, as the honourable gentleman will see and also in the other districts with the exception of the unfortunate district which I happen to represent in the centre of the island, Grand Falls. Out of the goodness of my heart or because I am weak or some such thing, I have not been able to persuade the engineers or people in my department to increase my amount from last year. That is the only section then, in the centre, which has not been increased.

Now with regard to the Trans-Canada Highway. The fact that the road exists between Brigus and Clarenville is something, and there is no intention of trying to make that a Trans-Canada Highway yet. That we are not going into yet. The policy of the department is, together with the advice of the Federal Government, that we should try and connect up the gaps and make a road right across the island before we begin to pave to the Trans-Canada Highway standards much of what we have in effect at the present time. That is really the answer. Now I realize as the honourable gentleman and everybody else does with regard to roads, that the sooner we can make a permanent job of things and put our paving on the sooner we will reduce the maintenance costs. But to do that needs obviously a very large amount of money and this province just cannot afford to do it all at once. We are now trying to get the road through right across the country.

MR. BROWNE: There is a vote for maintenance of highroads, $540,000. Can you tell me what percentage of that will be spent on roads around Conception Bay as far as Carbonera?

MR. SPENCER: The details I don't have.

MR. BROWNE: There will be a very slight proportion spent on paved roads compared with others?

MR. SPENCER: There is very little paved road outside of Holyrood.

MR. BROWNE: To Carbonera—that comes under it of course.

MR. SPENCER: The honourable gentleman asks me if I can give a percentage—but I can say we have adopted a standard which we are maintaining pretty much on paved roads. We spent approximately $600 a mile per year maintenance on dirt roads and $450 per mile up to $7,000 per mile in some areas per year—very expensive—
MR. BROWNE: There are very great difficulties.

MR. SPENCER: You are not telling us anything new. I know only too well, unfortunately. We are unable to rebuild all of these roads at one time. If the Government of course, and the province, wants to decide to borrow thirty million dollars to put on a highroads programme that is for the Government to say—I don't know if the Government could afford it—I think we should get along as best we can until we complete this highway in accordance with the agreement with the Federal Government; and we are endeavouring to increase our own local roads and have done so in the last five years at a greater rate than this province ever knew. There is no doubt in this world about that. Hundreds of miles of outlying sections of roads have been built, but they can only be done periodically—we just cannot do them all at one time. Then again there is the factor of staff and engineers and we just have not got them.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, on behalf of the Opposition, unfortunately at the moment just St. John's, we do appeal for a larger grant for our roads in this area. It was only four days ago I drove over to St. Phillips, and it would not only break your heart but every other organ in your body—

MR. SPENCER: I advise you to keep off it if that is so; don't break your heart.

MR. HOLLETT: This is not a joking matter. Last year the Government gave forty thousand dollars for St. John's East and St. John's West, and I maintain there is not a person hardly, in St. John's East and St. John's West who does not at some time during the year go over these roads. These are roads leading out of the city, out of the capital, and I do think it would be a credit to the Government, even though we are in Opposition, to give us a little better show on roads. We are not questioning the necessity of money being spent in other districts. We know you need it and that there are some places that never got a road yet, and I pat the Government on the back for getting roads for some of them.

MR. SPENCER: That is what we are trying to do.

MR. HOLLETT: But I want to point out that it is unwise to neglect the roads we have already in congested areas like the area which we happen to represent. And after all the more people there are the more revenue is being paid to the Treasury from which you get the money to do the roads. I think I can recall places where money has been spent on roads in the last five years which even the Honourable Minister would just as soon we did not mention. I can think of one in Corner Brook now leading out of that famous mountain, and one right in the Minister's own district, which cost, I think, (and then it is just an ordinary dirt road, a little wider than ordinary) a hundred and sixty-five thousand dollars a mile, and that is more than we have had in St. John's East and West for the last three or four years.

MR. SPENCER: An ordinary dirt road. It was built to Trans-Canada standards.

MR. HOLLETT: I know it cost a hundred and sixty-five thousand dollars, just a cut-off—I think it is all right, if possible to get the highroad through as quickly as possible, but I do appeal for the people in the area we have the honour to represent; they need roads as badly as anybody else in the country. No matter where we live we need roads. I hope the Minister will take what I have said to heart and do the best he can to assist our people to walk and ride to work in peace and comfort.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Hear, hear.

MR. SPENCER: I am anxious to get through with this vote, but I cannot let the remarks of the honourable gentleman pass without at least giving the House the opportunity to know why a section of road one mile and one-tenth cost such a lot of money. But I would call attention to the fact that there are miles of road on the Mainland of Canada as near as Nova Scotia which cost three hundred thousand and three hundred and fifty thousand dollars. Possibly the honourable gentleman may be able to make some allowance and not just point the finger at the fact that we have built one mile and one-tenth which cost $165,000. I can tell you that right at Harmon Field they are building an access road to take the place of a piece of road which the American people decided to have closed, building an access road just under one mile and it cost three hundred and ninety thousand dollars. Now I can go to dozens of places on the Mainland of Canada where it cost three hundred thousand dollars a mile. But I am only trying to give the honourable member who raised the point the opportunity to visualize the difference between these various types of roads we have built. Some roads we have built for $32,000, some at $20,000 and some at $18,000, but not to Trans-Canada standards. The Trans-Canada standards are costing approximately $60,000 a mile here in Newfoundland today, and we are advised our rates are very very low in our estimates for completion.

MR. HOLLETT: What about the road to Mount Moriah?

MR. SPENCER: As for that I just don't know what you are talking about. There is a road leading past Mount Moriah, yes.

MR. HOLLETT: And what is the story—what did that cost?

MR. SPENCER: Very little, I would say.

MR. HOLLETT: Was there a road built there in connection with the gypsum plant?

MR. SPENCER: I thought the honourable gentleman must have had something up his sleeve, he usually does.

MR. FOGWILL: Before we go off this I want to thank the Honourable Minister for his promise that he is going to give every consideration to the roads in St. John's East.

MR. SMALLWOOD: May I be permitted to agree with my honourable colleague, the Minister of Public Works, and assure the Committee, as he has done, that there is every disposition on the Minister's part and every disposition on the Government's part to give St. John's both East and West a break. There is no thought at all of discrimination in St. John's—it does not exist. The honourable gentlemen opposite must not forget the Liberal Party represents St. John's East and West as well. Now I hope my honourable friends will take that in good part—the point I want to make, Sir, is that we have no desire to discriminate against St. John's so let us get through with this work.
MR. BROWNE: I want some information here. It would cost $600 a mile for maintenance?

MR. SPENCER: No, what I did say was that we spent up to six hundred dollars per mile maintenance, and on paved roads we have adopted that sort of standard, four hundred and something dollars—it varies—I did not say it cost six hundred dollars per mile.

MR. BROWNE: Taking that as an average, $600 for 75 miles to Carbonear, that leaves five hundred thousand dollars for maintenance here—now where is that five hundred thousand dollars to be spent, or at least what proportion would be spent in each of the sections? That is for the sections of the Avalon Peninsula.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The Minister has already stated that he cannot give the answer.

MR. SPENCER: Simply because I have told the House, in answer to the honourable gentleman's inquiry, that we spent six hundred dollars per mile maintenance, that that is a sort of standard. It does not mean that we will spend six hundred dollars per mile on every mile between St. John's and Carbonear. The honourable gentleman knows that. There are miles this year which we will not touch while on others we may have to spend several hundred dollars. That is just a matter for the engineers and the men who know road-building. I can assure the honourable gentleman we are getting pretty good value for the money we are spending.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, like the honourable member on my left said; I also was down on the road to Portugal Cove, where incidentally there is a road from the wharf to the highroad, which is probably costing three hundred thousand dollars a mile because it is being blasted through the rock, but the road I am speaking of is leading out of Portugal Cove, the old Broad Cove Road. I have not seen anything like the rocks down there. They are in a terrible state. I hope the Minister has already, and before this vote is passed, given attention to it, because it was simply awful, just a continuous series of potholes, and one could not drive more than five miles an hour in a car. It is an utter disgrace. In fact people have remarked that the road was far better thirty or forty years ago.

MR. SPENCER: They were not driving cars over it then.

MR. BROWNE: That is true—but it is a disgrace. That is a nice part of the country, Beachy Cove, where people coming to the country are taken by friends; and they ask, is there a Minister of Public Works in this country?

MR. SPENCER: If they are going to blame me I will have to get busy.

MR. BROWNE: Now there is another road I would like to draw to the Minister's attention, and that is the road out to Cape Spear, which is a very interesting and a very attractive drive with nice scenery, and many people would go that way if they did not have to come back the same way. Now there is a road through Petty Harbour and coming back through the Goulds, but that road is in a terrible condition.

MR. SPENCER: So are many others.

MR. BROWNE: If the Honourable Minister is going to take that attitude we are going to get nowhere. Here is a city of sixty thousand people and right here on the Avalon Peninsula there are a hundred and fifty thousand people. If the roads around here are not going to get any attention, God help the people who live in places with no connecting roads. I don’t think they are going to get any help. Here we have a road to Cape Spear and a road in wretched condition leading to Petty Harbour, a short distance of three miles. If a bull-dozer and a few men were to be put on it for a week it would make a passable road. Now it is not unreasonable when I ask the Minister to give some attention to a proposition of that kind. There are no voters on that road, and nobody is living there, but it would make a reasonable drive for people who would like to go out and see the scenery on Cape Spear. Then again there is the road on the Southside Hill. There is a considerable community up there, that is outside the City of St. John’s. The roads up there are in bad condition, and I do hope—I don’t know if any money had been spent there last year, but it was not noticeable. Some money was spent on the hill itself, but on the valley road and the other road going over there I don’t think there was any money spent.

MR. SPENCER: It is all under the main vote.

MR. BROWNE: Is the Minister in a position to tell us how much was spent last year?

MR. SPENCER: Not at this moment. I could tell you from the office records. I cannot tell you exactly but I do know there was money spent on that road.

As to the road leading out beyond Cape Spear into Maddox Cove, etc., as far as I know it has never been classified as a highroad. I did not even know about it. I have been up as far as Cape Spear and it is amongst many, many places that I would certainly like to see improved. But again I have given the answer as far as that is concerned—we just cannot do all at once. As far as Cape Spear is concerned I doubt very much if the District Superintendent had any thought in mind with regard to that. But in regard to the regular maintenance on the Blackhead Road on the Southside, that is being looked after by the City up to the bridge and we take over beyond the bridge. Maybe the honourable gentleman did not know that, but it is the case. We look after the maintenance of the road up there and there is a certain amount spent there periodically. I have been up there at least three times since I have been representing the department.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, I wonder if the Honourable Minister has given any thought to the building of a road to Blackhead which would not be so steep. I think there is a possibility of going further south.

MR. SPENCER: You are thinking about the wartime road, part of the way?

MR. HOLLETT: I don’t know anything about that. The road there I know is very steep and it is very often difficult for anybody to get up there—I wonder if the Honourable Minister has given any consideration, with the Council, to some diversion or something there?

MR. SPENCER: I can merely say in answer to that; I have gone up there myself, and have had a look at it, the so-called wartime road, to see the possibilities. I am also trying to look into the possibility of improving the road, if I can, and so have made special trips up there to that end—whether that would be the best idea or not is up to the engineers to say—I have looked at it and have taken it into consideration.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, there is another question I should like to ask—we have that vote here for what is called the St. John’s area, but it covers more than St. John’s, as I see it. It takes in St. John’s, Harbour Main, Bell Island, Port de Grave, Carbonear and Trinity South.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The Avalon Peninsula is called the St. John’s District. It is just a name.

MR. BROWNE: It is not a proper name. However, I won’t argue about that.

MR. SPENCER: There are only four districts in the island.

MR. CHAIRMAN: It is very difficult for the stenographer to take this down unless members speak one at a time. When cross-conversation occurs the stenographer can’t possibly get it down.

MR. BROWNE: I am sorry Mr. Chairman—here is the point I am making. When you have to make up the figure of that vote, don’t you get reports from the superintendent e.g. on the road to Torbay or Pouch Cove or from St. John’s to Portugal Cove etc. on all the different roads around the Avalon Peninsula—is there not any allocation to assure those gravel roads get some attention every year.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Does the honourable gentleman suppose that every mile of road in Newfoundland can get attention every year?

MR. BROWNE: Yes.

MR. SMALLWOOD: In that case we would have all the money that comes into the Treasury devoted to roads—that is what it would take.

MR. BROWNE: Oh no!

MR. SMALLWOOD: There are about seven thousand miles, and if every mile gets attention—

MR. BROWNE: They will all get the same?

MR. SMALLWOOD: To get any attention for every mile it would take the whole Treasury to do it.

MR. BROWNE: Is the Minister in a position to give his estimate for various roads?

MR. SPENCER: The two million dollars for the districts is based on a mileage basis.

MR. BROWNE: Arising out of that—take the district represented by my honourable and learned friend—Ferryland—he has a district where the road extends a hundred and twenty miles, therefore he gets a bigger grant—he needs a larger grant of course—but take for instance the road going to Petty Harbour, that road is in very bad condition and needs attention.

MR. SPENCER: And received attention, you know that.

MR. BROWNE: Then it must be recently. I drove over it myself recently. The part I am speaking about is going down into Petty Harbour, which is in very bad condition or was when I saw it. There is a great deal of traffic going over that road with buses going back and forth several times a day, and it seems to me that road should get attention on something other than a mileage basis. It is only about three or four miles,
MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Chairman, that is so obvious we should not even have to say it—because you have so many miles in a district does not mean you must spend precisely the same amount on each mile. We might spend twenty times that much on one mile and none at all on another—is not that obvious?

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I am directing my remarks to the Honourable Minister of Public Works. If he does not see fit to answer I will have to accept it.

MR. SPENCER: I have given all the answers I have. We try to make up estimates to get the most out of them and go as far as we can. That is definitely the case. The honourable gentleman refers to one particular piece of road he happens to know about. I know about hundreds of roads he does not know about at all, that are in a similar condition—and to that end we try at least to keep them passable. Perhaps that does not quite give the answer. It is quite true though many of our roads may not be exactly impassable, it is difficult to get over them certainly. It has been a soft year, which has affected this and many other roads adversely.

Carried.

908—Miscellaneous Services:

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, that $30,000 grant to St. John's Municipal Council, what does that take care of?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I understand, Mr. Chairman, that thirty thousand dollars is given to the City Council in lieu of taxes they at one time used to receive.

MR. SPENCER: That is in lieu of motor registration which now comes under the Government rather than the city.

MR. HOLLETT: May I ask then how much in motor registration does the department receive now locally in St. John's?

MR. SPENCER: I have not the figures.

MR. BROWNE: Is that under an agreement? Does it depend upon the number of motor cars?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Not if it is a fixed amount. They have not a sliding scale depending on traffic.

MR. BROWNE: It seems to me the Municipal Council should get a higher grant now than several years ago.

Carried.

909—Wharves, Breakwaters and Ferries:

MR. HOLLETT: What is that vote for $5,000?

MR. SPENCER: Actually, Mr. Chairman, those votes that are there are merely token votes. Nobody can see through a stone wall, and it so happens that in connection with the breakwaters and/or wharves the amount there is merely a token of what will be spent during the present year, as far as I can see, on the construction of ferries and docks.

MR. HOLLETT: There was no vote in there last year—how was it taken care of last year? Was there anything such as this taken care of?

MR. SMALLWOOD: It was capital account last year—the building of ferries was on capital account.
MR. SPENCER: This is not the capital account—this is merely for administration.

MR. BROWNE: In the operation of the ferry on Placentia Gut—have we any responsibility in connection with the Portugal Cove-Bell Island ferry?

MR. SPENCER: We are committed to provide the docks for these ferries.

MR. BROWNE: At Portugal Cove and Bell Island you are constructing the docks, I thought the Federal Government—

MR. SPENCER: Mr. Chairman, the honourable gentleman is a little bit mixed up there. After very considerable consideration, and effort on our part to get them to come in with us on that wharf building at Portugal Cove, the Federal Government finally decided they would build the breakwater, we will build the docks—two operations, one by the Federal and one by the Provincial Government.

MR. BROWNE: Being built by different people?

MR. SPENCER: Yes.

MR. BROWNE: In regard to the ferry on Placentia Gut, has the Minister worked out or has he any idea of the cost of operating that—is that what he meant a few moments ago when he said administration.

MR. SPENCER: In reference to that a committee is being appointed to look after the operations of the ferry—that has been under consideration.

MR. BROWNE: Government officials?

MR. SPENCER: We will be represented.

MR. BROWNE: And the Placentia people?

MR. SPENCER: That is right.

909 carried.

Department of Mines and Resources:

DR. ROWE: I don't think I need make any explanation—as I come to the points I shall deal with them.

801 carried.

802—General Office:

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, who is the Deputy Minister of Mines and Resources?

DR. ROWE: Mr. P. J. Murray.

MR. BROWNE: When was he appointed?

DR. ROWE: If my memory serves me right, June 1, 1953. He was appointed consecutively with Mr. Carter's appointment to the Chairmanship of the Civil Service.

MR. BROWNE: Who is the Assistant Deputy Minister of Mines and Resources?

DR. ROWE: Mr. Haynes.

MR. HOLLETT: The fixed personal officer there, is that someone who is given additional salary from some other department?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I think I can explain that better than anyone: that is Mr. Howse.

DR. ROWE: Excuse me, Mr. Chairman—Mr. Warren is the man in charge of the records of the department, the record office of the department.

MR. HOLLETT: What is the idea of "personal" is that an increased vote or something?

DR. ROWE: There is no increase there, Mr. Chairman.

MR. HOLLETT: Why call it personal?

DR. ROWE: Under the old scale he was receiving more than under the new scale for that, or provided for that office, so he continued on a personal basis. That procedure is sometimes adopted in a number of cases where it would impose a hardship, the salary is made personal where the scale or category is reduced. Take a case where a man is brought in at $3,000 in the past and the scale is brought in to cover that position, and the scale goes down to $2,900; rather than reduce him to $2,900 he is kept on at $3,000 personal. That is the explanation.

MR. HOLLETT: There are persons like that throughout?

MR. SMALLWOOD: About a dozen in the whole service.

MR. HOLLETT: We will ask the question again, I suppose, before the estimates are over.

Carried.

803—Accounting Office—Carried.

804—Forestry:

MR. BROWNE: Who is the chief forester—I don't know what the title is—there are so many directors now.

DR. ROWE: Actually that is rather difficult to answer. The supervisor of forestry is Mr. Charles Cahill, but the forestry engineer, a professional man whom we obtained from Norway this year, after trying in vain to get a Newfoundlander and then a Canadian, is Mr. Finn Frost, a distinguished Norwegian forestry engineer.

MR. HOLLETT: That man gets $8,000.

DR. ROWE: Yes.

MR. BROWNE: Have you any other forestry graduates in the department besides?

DR. ROWE: He is the only one unfortunately. I am compelled to say in the whole field of forestry and wildlife we have not one person who had even a week's professional training in either of those two fields. It is a terrible situation. We have lately acquired the services of a wildlife biologist, Mr. Pimlott, who will be Dr. Pimlott this year, with his degree in wildlife. We have also been able to acquire a fine technical staff in the mines branch.

MR. HOLLETT: What exactly are the duties of the Chief Forestry Engineer in this country where we all know most of our forests have been leased out to the various companies?

DR. ROWE: To take the second part of the question first—I think it is a wrong impression to give that most of our forests are leased. A very considerable portion of Newfoundland forests still belong to the Crown.

MR. HOLLETT: All over the Province?

DR. ROWE: If my honourable friend would like to have a map I will give him one showing our estimate of at least ten million cords on Crown Lands. We must not forget we took back altogether hundreds of square miles through the Timber Revision Act. Then of course there is most of the timber in Labrador which is in possession of the Crown. That is the
MR. BROWNE: Of course, if we can make use of them.

DR. ROWE: We will some day.

MR. BROWNE: Sometimes they are allowed to be there too long.

MR. HOLLETT: What are the duties of the forester?

DR. ROWE: A forestry engineer, Mr. Chairman, is a man who has spent say five or six years in a university studying forestry as a science and profession—I am not competent to elaborate on what the science is except to say that there are a great number of questions that every province, every state, every country has to know the answers to and many of them don't know at all. For instance last year we found almost accidentally that the timber on the Labrador is growing annually now two or three times as much as it did say thirty years ago.

MR. BROWNE: How do you know that?

MR. HEFFERTON: Due to Confederation.

DR. ROWE: It is very simple—we got it from Washington.

MR. HOLLETT: We got along for quite a number of years without a forestry engineer, and we had huge stands of timber under the control of the department. I do agree there is money in forests and it has contributed a large amount to the economy of our country. At the same time I do hope the Government is trying to increase that wealth. But I wonder how we ever got along without such a man all these years?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Why not move to strike the item out? Why does not the honourable gentleman move to have the vote stricken out, and have no chief forestry engineer?

MR. BROWNE: I wonder if the Minister would give us just a general idea of what a trained university man, a graduate in forestry should be doing. We have a problem here, I understand in connection with the government birch mill. I have heard it said that there is talk of importing birch for the present mill. I wonder if this forestry engineer would be in a position to advise the Government on that, to seek out stands of birch or direct the search for birch suitable for manufacture—Would that be part of his duties?

DR. ROWE: It would be practical. May I go back to what the Honourable Leader of the Opposition said just now—We got along very well—Yet it is rather strange that we are the only sizable community in the civilized world that got along. I would say my grandfather and my great-grandfather got along without a great many things, for instance, motor boats—I don't know the answer to that.

MR. HOLLETT: I did not ask any question.

DR. ROWE: I merely point out the fact we got along without a forestry engineer does not mean a single thing.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Move to cut the item out.

MR. FOGWILL: 804-18 Commission of Inquiry: I take it that is the Royal Commission. Would the Minister explain?

DR. ROWE: The Royal Commission on Forestry was set up a few months ago, consisting of General Kennedy who is the Chairman, and two commissioners, Mr. Cameron, a professional forestry engineer of the Federal Department in Ottawa and the third, as you all know, a Newfoundlander, Mr. Roland Goodyear who has a lifetime association with our forests. This fifty thousand is designed to cover their salaries and other expenses.

MR. FOGWILL: Would the Minister tell us the salaries?

DR. ROWE: General Kennedy does not receive a salary. He is not a full-time man but a consulting engineer, who I believe is at the moment doing some consultation work for the Province of Ontario. He will be given a professional fee at the end of his term.

MR. BROWNE: What is that?

DR. ROWE: I think it should be very moderate. The other two men are on a full-time basis, on salaries, if my memory serves me right, ten thousand dollars a year each. All expenses, of course, will be paid.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Chairman, I move the Committee rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again.

Motion carried.

MR. COURAGE: Mr. Speaker, the Committee on Supply have considered the matter to them referred and have passed the following items—Under heading 700 and 900 Department of Attorney General and Department of Public Works with the exception of 708 and under the heading 800, Department of Mines and Resources 801 through 803 inclusive.

On motion report adopted. On motion Committee ordered sit again on tomorrow.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do adjourn tonight at 11:30 instead of the normal 11:00 o'clock.

MR. FOGWILL: Mr. Speaker, Rule 8 says that at 11:00 of the clock unless the closure rule (SO 50) be then in operation, the proceedings of any business under consideration shall be interrupted and Mr. Speaker shall adjourn the House without question put, provided that all business not disposed of at the termination of the sitting shall stand over until the next sitting day when it will be taken up at the same stage when its progress was interrupted.

Under that rule, Mr. Speaker, I think it is in order that we close now.

MR. SMALLWOOD: To that point, Mr. Speaker, I think it is also in order to amend that by a majority rule of the House.

MR. COURAGE: I believe that rule was considered, and I believe Mr. Speaker gave his ruling a few days ago on that very point. I cannot remember the exact words of his ruling but I believe they were to the effect that the House by a majority vote could amend that rule and could extend its sitting. I can't say I remember the exact date of that, but it was two or three days ago.

MR. BROWNE: It was yesterday at 6:00 o'clock.

MR. COURAGE: Well, the same principle, I believe applies—The motion is—

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, before you put the motion, if I may, I strongly resent having to sit here until 11:30 unless something of extreme importance has to come before the House. I think it is highly unfair—
We might even be rude and walk out and leave no quorum here. I don't think it is fair on the part of the Government to expect the members to stay here until 11:30. We have to be here again and go on all day tomorrow. I am quite sure, sir, that I am not prepared to stay here until 11:30. I object very strongly to the motion and to the —

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Chairman, His Honour the Speaker yesterday, in making his ruling, stated that the House, if it desired, could sit all night. Now all I have suggested is a half-hour, and I don't see why the honourable gentlemen opposite ought not to be willing to sit —

MR. BROWNE: I will tell why—The gentlemen opposite are not willing to sit—There are only three of us, working hard all day. The other members can go out and relax but we cannot do it. And I think it is very unfair to expect us to stay after 11:00 o'clock. We should not have been here last night—and Mr. Speaker, if we continue after 11:00 o'clock I am walking out.

MR. SMALLWOOD: They have not worked half as hard. We have been here every moment and in addition when the House does adjourn I go back to work. If he can't stand it let him walk out and those of us who can, stay and earn our pay.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I withdraw my motion.

House adjourned.

FRIDAY, June 4, Morning Session.

The House met at eleven of the clock in the morning, pursuant to adjournment.

MR. M. HOLLETT (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, on a question of privilege may I speak now?

MR. SPEAKER: Yes.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, I wish to refer to the motion made last night, to sit after 11:00 o'clock, and the subsequent motion relevant to sitting this morning.

I submit, Mr. Speaker, it was 11:00 P.M. when the motion was made, and that the motion was entirely out of order. With regard to the subsequent motion I fail to see why it was made in the first place, and in the second place it was after 11:00 P.M., and entirely out of order again. And I will ask your ruling on it. There is another matter relevant to the Standing Orders: meeting of the House at 3:00 o'clock in the afternoon each sitting day.

Standing Order 2: The time for the meeting of the House is at 3 o'clock in the afternoon of each sitting day, and if there be not a quorum present by a quarter after three of the clock, Mr. Speaker shall adjourn the House until the usual hour of the next sitting day. When the House rises on Friday, it stands adjourned unless otherwise ordered, until the following Monday.

Standing Order 3: The presence of at least 12 members of the House not including Mr. Speaker shall be necessary to constitute a meeting of the House for the exercise of its powers. When Mr. Speaker adjourns the House for want of a quorum, the time of adjournment, and the names of the members then present shall be inserted in the Journal:

4. (a) Any member may direct the Speaker's attention to the fact that there is not a quorum present. A member need not remain in the House after giving notice that a quorum is not present.

I wish to draw attention to the fact, Mr. Speaker, in connection with that, at nearly ten minutes after eleven o'clock I drew attention of the Speaker, or I think it was five minutes after eleven, that there was not a quorum according to the rules. I am not referring to the House of Assembly actually but to the rules under which the business of the House is supposed to be conducted, these rules which were passed after the House of Assembly Act, I take it. They were published and have been used for a number of years, and definitely state the quorum is twelve. There was no quorum at that particular time and in the minds of this side of the House that motion was out of order—Mr. Speaker, I would like to have your ruling on that.

MR. J. R. COURAGE: Mr. Speaker, I don't believe the honourable member can really ask for a ruling on something done last night at this time.

MR. SPEAKER: I am very glad the honourable member raised the point because something in this House should be decided now—The Act says ten members constitute a quorum and the rules say twelve members. In my opinion, given for what it is worth, the Standing Orders do not supersede the Act. The Act really should take precedence over the Standing Orders. But that suggestion just raised by the honourable member is a good point, and I think this might be a good time now for the House to settle the question.

HON. L. R. CURTIS (Attorney General): Yes, Mr. Speaker, I think the point is well taken. When the Standing Orders were prepared in 1949 it was overlooked by the House and by the Committee which brought in the Orders that the Act creating the House of Assembly, which you will find in the 1914 Consolidated Statutes, definitely stated at that time, that the House of Assembly should be constituted of 35 members and that ten should constitute a quorum. Now that is an Act of Parliament passed by the House of Assembly of that day and by the Legislative Council of that day, and was assented to by the Governor, and I don't think there is anything in the House of Assembly Act to enable the House itself to have the effect of amending the Act of Parliament. I feel therefore that a quorum of this House is, and always has been, ten members even though we have amongst ourselves felt that it was twelve. Actually the quorum is ten. I felt therefore at the relevant times mentioned by my honourable friend the Leader of the Opposition there was actually a quorum.

MR. W. J. BROWNE: The principal point that I would like to make on this question, Mr. Speaker, is on a matter on which the Act is perfectly simple, and that is as regards to the 11:00 o'clock ruling. If the business is not completed at 11:00 o'clock the House stands adjourned until 3:00 o'clock the next day. Last night the Premier moved adjournment until 11:00 o'clock this morning. Now have we any rules? If we have rules remember they are to be respected—that is the question. This House is supposed to be a model for all organizations and it has its rules and if these are not carried out, well then must justify ourselves, that is what it amounts to.

MR. SPEAKER: Does any other honourable members wish to address himself to this point?

MR. F. FOGWILL: Mr. Speaker, I support the observations of my two honourable colleagues here—but would it be proper at this time now to introduce another matter in respect to the carrying out of the Rules of the House?

MR. SPEAKER: I think so, if it is relevant.

MR. FOGWILL: On Tuesday afternoon last the House had gone into Committee of the Whole and was discussing some business when at the hour of six o'clock the Chairman of Committee of the Whole, I would say through error or some little mistake, did recess the committee until 8:00 of the clock. Now it is not provided anywhere in the rules whereby the Chairman of Committee of the Whole can recess the committee until 8:00 of the clock. It is provided by the Rules of the House, and he is directed to report progress and ask leave to sit again. So that I was wondering, and I would like to point out to Your Honour and the House that, if the Committee of the Whole had no right to recess until 8:00 o'clock then perhaps it had no right to do business; and I was wondering whether or not the business which was done on Tuesday evening was entirely legal.

I would question the legality of what was done by the committee of the whole House on Tuesday evening because of the reason I have just stated.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, may I point out in connection with this point of privilege made, that the observations made by my two colleagues—I would point to Rule 8 of the Standing Orders: At 11 of the clock p.m., unless the closure rule (SO 50) be then in operation the proceedings of any business under consideration shall be interrupted and Mr. Speaker shall adjourn the House without question put, provided that all business not disposed of at the termination of the sitting shall stand over until the next sitting day when it will be taken up at the same stage when its progress was interrupted.

I would point out that at the time the Honourable the Premier withdrew his motion there was no business before the House, as it was then after 11:00 o'clock and that Mr. Speaker, therefore, should have interrupted the proceedings immediately and postponed the proceedings until today at 3:00 of the clock. What I mean to point out is that after the Honourable the Premier had withdrawn his motion to keep the House open until 11:30 p.m. there was no other business before the House, and this rule should have been adhered to.

MR. COURAGE: Mr. Speaker, if I may speak?

MR. SPEAKER: The Honourable Leader of the Opposition has, in my opinion now concluded the debate thereon, I don't think it would therefore be in order for any member to speak again, only by leave of the House.

MR. COURAGE: I wonder if I could have the leave of the House just to make one observation in answer to the question raised by the Honourable Member for St. John's East.

Leave given by the House.

MR. COURAGE: I might say that it was for many years the custom in the House for the Committee of the Whole to recess. We did that for about three years before these standing orders were passed, and that for that reason, as all that time I had been in the Chair, and many times previously had left the Chair at 6:00 o'clock p.m. until 8:00 o'clock p.m. On Tuesday past I did forget the standing order, but I read it when the matter was raised yesterday, and said I had made a mistake on Tuesday; but I believe we would have to stretch the rules very far, and we would have to be adhering to them very strictly to conclude that, because the House was recessed at 6 o'clock what was done after was not legal. I think that would be carrying the thing rather too far altogether. I just make the point that it had been for many years customary to do what I did do.

MR. SPEAKER: I have been asked for a ruling, which the House itself will recognize will be an extremely difficult problem. The House must have noticed that I was absent from the sitting last night, therefore I have only hearsay to go on.

We will take the last point first: It is clearly stated by parliamentary authority that business is transacted in the House without a quorum and no member has called attention to it, that business does stand and is legal. I would argue therefore that business transacted by a committee having recessed without reporting to the House would certainly be legal.

The argument has been offered that if a rule says something definitely it means that and nothing more. I refer particularly to that part of Rule 7 which says: "If at the hour of 6 o'clock p.m. except on Wednesday, the business of the House is not concluded, Mr. Speaker shall leave the Chair until 8 o'clock p.m. At the hour of 6 o'clock p.m. on Wednesday Mr. Speaker adjourns the House without question put. The House then stands adjourned until Thursday. If at the hour of 6 o'clock p.m. the business of a Committee of the Whole House be not concluded the Chairman is directed to report progress and ask leave to sit again."

Now if we insist on the exact letter of that rule to mean just what it says, then we could not sit nor transact any business after 6 o'clock p.m. on Wednesday. I do not think that that is the true interpretation, for this reason: if we admit that, then how shall we interpret this? If at the hour of 6 o'clock p.m. except on Wednesday (instead of except Wednesday we might mean Monday, Tuesday, Thursday or Friday) the business of the House is not concluded Mr. Speaker shall leave the Chair until 8 o'clock p.m.—Would it not therefore follow we cannot ever adjourn the House on Monday, Tuesday, Thursday or Friday until 11 o'clock at night?

I would make this observation: Rules like this (1) where they do not curtail freedom of speech permit of other interpretations subject to a decision of the House. For instance, every honourable member knows that the House of Commons at Westminster sometimes sits on Saturday and has even sat on Sunday; in times of national emergency has sat Friday night, yet their standing order No. 3 states that the hour of 3 p.m. on Friday Mr. Speaker shall leave the Chair until Monday morning. If we adhere strictly to the letter of such rules as these, purely routine ones, then the House could never sit on other days other than those specified. However, with reference to the 11 o'clock rule, it is laid down that, if the House intends to sit later than 11 o'clock the motion may be made that this House does not adjourn at 11 o'clock today.

I think it will be agreed that the point taken there is that the motion was offered after 11 o'clock, therefore, I am in no position to rule, because I did not know of my own knowledge that it was after 11 o'clock, and I cannot very well rule on a, to me, unknown case. If I were to say that a motion ought not to be made after 11 o'clock, it becomes an issue as to whether it was 11 o'clock. I do not know, and I cannot, of course, come into the House and criticize a discussion, nor a ruling made by the Deputy-Speaker in my absence. That, of course, would be unethical.

The thought occurs to me that in this matter of a quorum and the hours of sitting of the House contained in the House of Assembly Act where it says, the quorum consists of ten and the Standing Orders say, a quorum shall be twelve and the rules should not take precedence over the House of Assembly Act—Then how do we explain we have not thirty-six members in the House when the Act says there shall be 36 members.

Now I had a discussion last night with Mr. J. G. Higgins, and we were discussing this very thing—for this reason that when these Standing Orders were passed he was then the Leader of the Opposition and member of the Committee on Standing Orders. He and I worked closely to try and weld some semblance of order out of the Standing Orders of Great Britain and Canada, New Zealand and several other parts of the British Commonwealth, and the old Standing Orders of Newfoundland, and we assumed that when we made a quorum of this House twelve, the House of Assembly Act would of course be amended to bring everything in line. We discussed the proposed changes here in this House, in committee, adopted them in committee and they were afterwards adopted by the House. Mind you I am not arguing it should be twelve. Personally I do not care if it is twenty-four or five, it does not matter to the Speaker, of course. But I do agree that honourable members of the House should decide now what is to be a quorum. Is it to be ten as the Act states or twelve? I do hold that the House can decide for itself, rules to the contrary, on what days it will sit, apart from the rules, and at what hour it shall sit, 11 o'clock in the morning (because it is not usual to sit any later). However, the House may sit all night.

I don't know whether I have given the Honourable Leader of the Opposition much satisfaction. I am sure he will appreciate the difficult position in which I find myself and might let me conclude that the rules are the lubricating oil of a machine. A breach of rules is tantamount to throwing sand in the lubricating oil and the machine must suffer. I would ask honourable members from now on to adhere as closely as possible to the rules. If an emergency arises to necessitate going beyond the rules I think it might be settled by recessing the House and discussing it privately and coming back to the House. The House can always ask Mr. Speaker not to see 6 o'clock or not to see 11 o'clock if a few more minutes are needed. Would the House like to make a decision now on the matter of quorum? It could be done by amending the rule.

HON. M. MURRAY (Minister of Provincial Affairs): Mr. Speaker, is it within the competency of the House to overrule an Act of the Legislature?

MR. SPEAKER: The answer to that is no, only by another Act.

MR. MURRAY: As the matter stands the legislation on the House says the quorum shall be ten, and unless that Act is amended, my submission is, it is not competent to overrule it.

HON. J. R. SMALLWOOD (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I take it the only change we can make is to vote a change in the rules but not in the Act. We could change the number of the quorum from twelve to ten because that would not be a contravening of the Act, but we could not change the quorum of ten to twelve.

MR. MURRAY: We could amend our rules to come into conformity with the Act.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, I suggest we could not alter the quorum of ten except by an Act too—I would like to point out that in the old rules passed in 1909 at that time twelve was the quorum.

MR. SPEAKER: Obviously the House cannot override the Statute because if it could override one it could override another. So if any honourable member would care to make a motion amending the rules concerned to bring it in line with existing legislation?

MR. CURTIS: I would move, Mr. Speaker, that the rules of the House (Standing Orders) where they refer to twelve as a quorum be amended to read ten so as to bring them into conformity with the Act.

MR. MURRAY: I second that motion.

MR. SPEAKER: The motion is that wherever in the rules twelve appears as the quorum that the twelve be changed to ten to bring the rules into conformity with the existing Act.

MR. BROWNE: Before you put that motion, Mr. Speaker, may I ask if there are any provisions in the rules for amendments to the rules?

MR. SPEAKER: Yes a two-third majority of those in favour of the amendment.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, it seems to me there should be some notice of motion given.

MR. HOLLETT: It is a matter of little concern, I suppose, just how many should constitute a quorum so long as we have a substantial number. But we seem to be on the horns of a dilemma. Since 1909, according to the rules the quorum has been twelve even though the consolidated statutes of 1914 states ten. Nothing has been brought forward to show any changes made in the rules of the House. There are a lot of rules made which have not been carried out exactly in committee and this apparently was one of them. My chief objection to the rule is the occurrence last night, and I note, Mr. Speaker probably forgot to deal with a point I raised under Rule 8. After 11 o’clock a motion was withdrawn and then another one accepted, which I believe was contrary to Rule 8. If Mr. Speaker would like to rule on that we have no objection on this side to twelve or ten.

MR. SPEAKER: I referred to that when I said: not being present in the House myself I only had hearsay to go on that it was after 11 o’clock, and I could not be expected to rule on a decision the House had made. But I did urge honourable members to conform to the rules.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, I maintain it is not exactly hearsay when an honourable member gets up and makes a statement of fact which has not been denied. If it were not correct then I would expect somebody else here, who was present last night, to deny it.

HON. E. S. SPENCER (Minister of Public Works): Mr. Speaker, may I rise to a point of order? Surely when there is a motion before the House it must be out of order to discuss another point which does not deal with that particular motion?

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, I don't see anything in that point. We are on that point, the Rules of this House. An amendment has been introduced to amend the Rules of the House, surely I can refer to Rule 8 and ask for a ruling?

MR. SPENCER: I don't think that is so.

MR. HOLLETT: The honourable member is so fond of points of order we can't get anything done, and that is why we must sit at 11 o'clock in the morning.

MR. SPEAKER: Order—is it not possible even to discuss that simple rule of the House without honourable members losing their tempers?

MR. SPENCER: Mr. Speaker, if I may? I am not losing any time in any sense but was merely taking exception to a remark made by the Honourable Leader of the Opposition when he said—The honourable member is so fond of making points of order—I think in my experience in this House I have not risen to a point of order more than possibly three or four times in my five years' experience in this House—if that is too much for the Leader of the Opposition—I think he should withdraw his reference to me in this case.

MR. SPEAKER: This is all entirely out of order.

MR. FOGLII: Mr. Speaker, in respect to the motion before the Chair to change the quorum of the House from twelve to ten, there is nothing definite in the Standing Orders providing for the amendment of those rules of the House. I wonder if I would be permitted to direct a question to the Attorney General, to ask him if he would inform the House whether provision is made in the House of Assembly Act for amending the rules of the House of Assembly?

MR. CURTIS: The House of Assembly Act, Mr. Speaker, is now covered by Chapter 3 of the revised statutes, and the revised statutes provide in section 3—The House of Assembly shall consist of twenty-eight members of whom ten shall form a quorum. Later on in the same Act, Mr. Speaker, it says—The House may establish rules for its government and attendance of its members and the conduct of its business and for limiting the length of time that members may speak, and may alter, amend and repeal the same provided that no such rules shall be altered, amended or repealed, except by a vote of two-thirds of the members of such House; provided also as aforesaid, no such rules or orders or anything in this Act shall or shall be considered to limit the freedom of speech or debate of such House or any right of or privilege of such House now existing.

So, Mr. Speaker, there was no need to have an amending clause in the Standing Orders—We can amend the Standing Orders by the House of Assembly Act, and I submit it is in this case really an amendment which we must make because by the Act we have no right to make it twelve, and our Standing Orders therefore are not in accordance with this Act, and therefore we should, without any question, amend them because they were made in error.

MR. FOGLII: I thank the Honourable the Attorney General. The reason I asked was to clear up any doubts I had in mind that it would require notice of the motion.

MR. SPEAKER: I might remind honourable members we have amended rules before.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I think perhaps it might be of value to all of us if the Honourable the Attorney General would make one point clear in this matter, a point which is not presently clear, in my opinion at least. Earlier in the present debate, the Attorney General said that the House of Assembly Act set up a quorum of ten members of the House. In the same statement he said that same Act created a House of Assembly of thirty-six members, to which the Honourable and Learned Member for St. John's West replied, or perhaps it was Your Honour who commented on the fact that in one part the Act appeared to say ten members as a quorum and in another part thirty-six as the total membership. Now in a later remark the Attorney General refers to this Act as setting a House of twenty-eight members, the same as at present, and a quorum of ten—I wonder if the Honourable the Attorney General could clarify that point?

MR. CURTIS: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I looked into that matter this morning, and I found it due to bad drafting. In 1927, I think it was, when the House of Assembly membership was changed from thirty-six to forty,—my honourable friend the Member for St. John's West was in the House at the time, a member of the Monroe Government, when it was then increased from thirty-six to forty. Now when they made that amendment they omitted to change the words—thirty-six—consequently you had a House of Assembly which called for thirty-six members; you had an amendment to the same Act which set forth forty electoral districts, and obviously the two were inconsistent. The Act said thirty-six but actually the number of districts set forth totalled forty. Subsequently when the membership in the House was reduced to twenty-seven members, changes were not made in the quorum nor were the changes made when the membership increased. Perhaps some honourable member of the House might refresh my memory as to just when it was increased from thirty-six to forty. It was thirty-six during all the period I was here reporting and that was up until about 1920.

MR. BROWNE: In 1927 or 1928.

MR. CURTIS: Therefore I am afraid, Mr. Speaker, we must accuse the draftsmen of that day of erring inasmuch as it set forth thirty-six when the membership was increased to forty from thirty-six.

HON. F. W. ROWE (Minister of Mines and Resources): If the honourable member would permit me I could tell him it was in 1928, because it was at that time Lewisporte was made a district, and in the fall there was the first election in Lewisporte under that Act. It was passed in the spring session of 1928 when these sections were added.

MR. CURTIS: It looks then as though the 1928 Legislature of that day increased the membership of the House from thirty-six to forty by creating forty districts, but they did not at the same time amend the section of the House of Assembly Act, which still continued to read thirty-six. In fact I checked up this morning and found out that through 1916 to the date of the revised statutes there had been no amendments to that House of Assembly Act—I don’t know what date it was—I have only gone back to 1916—I don’t know when that House of Assembly Act was passed.

MR. BROWNE: 1913, I think.

MR. CURTIS: Could my honourable and learned friend inform the House what the membership of the House was prior to 1909 when it was thirty-six members—It must go back before 1913.

MR. BROWNE: Well, the Election Act is called the 1913 Election Act.

MR. CURTIS: My honourable friend is getting confused. There are two Acts. I agree the Election Act was in 1913. But the House of Assembly Act probably goes back to before 1902. We all remember the elections of 1908 and 1909 when there was a tie and at that time each party had eighteen, so that it must go back a good deal prior to 1913. I would not be surprised if that Act actually went back to the 1892 consolidation.

MR. BROWNE: It is not important now.

MR. CURTIS: No, the only thing of importance is that here is an Act calling for thirty-six members, and at some period (my honourable friend thinks it was 1928) it was increased to forty districts, and then in 1912, I think, it was reduced from forty to twenty-seven. Then again Mr. Speaker, they did not change Paragraph 3 of the House of Assembly Act.

MR. HOLLETT: What happened when the Commission of Government came in? Did they suspend that Act?

MR. CURTIS: Of course, everything we had was suspended in 1934. Then in 1949, of course, our constitution was reinstated as it was in 1934. But at that time, Mr. Speaker, the Terms of Union, which were an Act of our Parliament in addition to being an Act of the Federal Government and an Act of the Parliament of the United Kingdom, the Parliaments of Canada and Great Britain made it twenty-eight by adding Labrador, and apparently the committee which consolidated the statutes covered the error and amended it in the revised statutes. So that now in the revised statutes the position is that there are twenty-eight members. Now I don’t know just what is the effect of this clause in the revised statutes—If my honourable friend will refer to the Act for the Revision of the Statutes, Section 11 of the Act, No. 27 of 1952, the revised statutes state—shall not be held to operate as new laws but shall be construed to have effect as a consolidation. The reference to that section will lead one to think that the consolidation committee was perfectly within its rights in reading all these Acts as a whole. In other words, that they were within their power in reading this item thirty-six where it referred to thirty-six members, and then in reading that in conjunction with the other Act which sets forth forty seats and later twenty-seven seats and ultimately twenty-eight seats. I think the committee doing the consolidations was within its rights in declaring, under this section, that the number of members of the House would now be twenty-eight. They did, of course, continue the quorum as ten.

I was very interested to hear my honourable friend state that the previous rules of the House called for a quorum of twelve. That is probably the reason, Mr. Speaker, why that was brought into our present Standing Orders. I know I was on the committee and we, as far as possible, followed our original rules; and we just accepted the twelve as a quorum as in the original rules, and presumed they were right.

MR. BROWNE: This is a publication in 1909—But I believe the rules must have been passed in the same year as the Act, and were confirmed again in 1893—according to extracts from the Journal, where they were quoted in the back of the book.

It was published in 1909 and says: "Adopted in the first session of the Assembly and amended in the fifth session of the said Assembly."

But the extracts from the Journal says that in 1890, pursuant to the Orders of the Day there were thirty-four members in the House when consideration of the Committee of the Whole on Rules and Orders of the House was proceeded with—Moved by the Honourable the Colonial Secretary and seconded by Honourable E. P. Morris, they being then adopted, there being thirty-four members present.

Then in 1893 the rules were amended—Moved by Mr. Morris and seconded by Sir James Winter the House resolved into Committee of the Whole to consider amendments to the Rules of the House. The amendments were considered in committee, of which notice had been given and ordered accordingly. Mr. Speaker left the Chair.

Apparently that was the procedure followed then, it was considered in Committee of the Whole. I would suggest rather letting it stand over and give the matter more mature consideration.

MR. CURTIS: I think perhaps the suggestion of my honourable and learned friend is a good one. It is, I think frankly, a matter of that Standing Order being just improper, illegal and effective—But I think it is a thing that should be settled, and should be done with deliberation. Let us try to do it in an orderly fashion. If the House is agreeable, I would suggest that the motion might stand until we have had time to think the matter over.

MR. SPEAKER: It must be with the unanimous consent of the House to withdraw a motion. (Leave given. Motion withdrawn.) I must inject something here. I have been mostly amused to see in the past three-quarters of an hour members complaining of breaches of rules—our rules must be kept—must be adhered to. For the past forty-five minutes I think we have broken more rules of debate than any honourable members in any past session. May I further add that, if the House has a Speaker who makes an interpretation of the rules, to which continual criticism is offered as in this case, about which the work being done by twelve members is illegal or with a quorum of ten is illegal, we shall have a series of these interesting and very nice discussions all leading nowhere every time we sit.

I might offer a further suggestion, that the House might appoint a committee to study those old Acts and Rules and bring in something tangible and definite to put before the House so that the House can vote on it.
I am going to add also that I think the Rules of the House of Assembly for 1909, which the honourable member read have been amended, I think, twice since then. I am just offering that as a bit of history —

Does the House accept the suggestion that a committee be set up to inquire into that matter, if so would the House like me to name the Committee now?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, we might defer that and give Your Honour more time to consider who the members might be.

MR. CURTIS: Perhaps Your Honour might like to consider it during the day.

MR. SPEAKER: The motion is withdrawn by consent of the House.

Notice of Question

(108) MR. BROWNE: To ask the Honourable the Minister of Finance to lay on the table of the House the following information:

1. What was the revenue and expenditure on current and capital account by Departments for the month of March 1954?

2. What amounts of money, if any, were borrowed during the said month? Give date and source of funds.

3. What was the amount of bills payable at March 31, 1954?

Answers to Questions

Question No. 107:

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, the answers to all questions addressed to me are now in the course of preparation.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, I asked a question yesterday afternoon —A copy of the Agreement for the Construction of the Birch plant. Are these copies available. Can they be readily made available?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Copies of the Agreement for the Construction of the Birch Plant and copies of the Agreement providing for its operation—I understand these have already been tabled some time—I have not got them. We don't table them every session, and are not expected to do so. On the other hand we are willing to accommodate the honourable gentleman, if possible. If the clerk can find the copies—they must have been delivered to the Opposition at the time.

MR. FOGWILL: Mr. Speaker, I wonder would the Honourable Minister of Fisheries and Co-operatives and the Honourable Minister of Public Works indicate when they are going to bring in answers to questions 97 directed to the Honourable Minister of Fisheries and Co-operatives and later directed to the Minister of Public Works, on the Order Paper of May 28th?

HON. W. J. KEOUGH (Minister of Fisheries and Co-operatives): In addition to that there are one or two others on the Order Papers directed to me. I hope to be able to supply the answers on the next sitting day.
MR. CURTIS: Mr. Speaker, before the orders of the day I would like to give notice that I will, later on today, ask leave to move the House into Committee of the Whole to consider the amendment of certain statutes relating to advance and guarantee of loans by Her Majesty.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the Minister of Provincial Affairs, who I believe is the appropriate minister, when can we expect an answer to a request sent to the government to hold a plebiscite in a certain area regarding the sale of liquor in Mount Pearl?

MR. MURRAY: The petition has been submitted to the Executive Council—I can't say—At the next meeting of the Executive Council I will bring up the matter again.

Committee of the Whole on Supply:

MR. SPEAKER: Leave has been given for this Committee to sit again today.

Chairman of Committee—Mr. Courage.

Department of Mines and Resources:

MR. CHAIRMAN: The committee was considering item 804:

MR. BROWNE: I wonder if the minister could tell us how many survey parties are expected to be out this year? And also where they are going to operate?

DR. ROWE: Mr. Chairman, we have detailed notes here on that particular item. We are doing some forestry surveys in Notre Dame Bay. We did so last year and will continue this year, in one area in particular extending from Lawrenceton to Boyd's Cove. I do not have the exact number of parties here, Mr. Chairman, but there will be several of them including two or three for the royal commission's survey on special assignment for the royal commission. I have not the exact number here, but I am informed that there would probably be about. My own feeling is that there will probably be five.

MR. BROWNE: You have not an engineer, have you, to put in charge of these parties?

DR. ROWE: At the head of each party we have what we call a forest surveyor.

MR. BROWNE: I take it the purpose is to find out what timber there is on our Crown Lands?

DR. ROWE: And, for instance, a couple of years ago we had a terrific storm in the area roughly from Clarenville to Green Bay, with sleet, snow and wind, and in order to do some salvage work it was necessary to send in several parties to see how much damage was done.

MR. BROWNE: Is there any work being done in the southern section of the island?

DR. ROWE: We will have a survey party working on the Salmonier Line this summer.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, I believe we have been informed that General Kennedy is in charge of the Royal Commission—Could the Minister give us any information as to the possible help that can be rendered to us by General Kennedy? And could he tell us if there is any agreement—There must be an agreement. Surely the man would not work for us for nothing.
DR. ROWE: I did indicate that I expected the Bill to be around six or seven thousand dollars. In fact I have good reason to assume that the Bill would not exceed seven thousand dollars.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, while on this item, are there any other forestry men associated with the Commission besides General Kennedy?

DR. ROWE: Yes, Mr. Chairman, Mr. Cameron and Mr. Goodyear. Their terms of reference gives them powers subject to the approval of the Lieutenant-Governor in Council to employ certain other technicians and scientists as they need. Right now I believe they have two on temporary employment; one an expert on the interpretation of aerial surveys and the other an economic statistician.

MR. BROWNE: I notice in the detail of salaries there is a sum of $35,000 for extra assistance, what is that amount for?

DR. ROWE: Those are forest fire fighters, seasonal assistance taken on in the spring and summer.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, that fifty thousand dollars, is that for the services or setting up or the machinery of the commission or has that anything to do with the salaries which are to be paid to the commissioners and the bill from General Kennedy?

DR. ROWE: It is designed to cover all the expenses. It is a rough estimate. It will take care in the first instance of the salaries of the commissioners and some other help as they may have. It is a very rough estimate.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, this royal commission on forestry was announced in the Speech from the Throne in 1953, and the vote is only being set up now. When were these appointed?

DR. ROWE: I explained that earlier in the House this year in reply to a question. It is true the Premier announced it last year, but we were seven or eight months altogether negotiating with people and to get General Kennedy and it was not until February past that we were able to get everybody lined up and their appointments date, I think, from February 28 or March 1—I believe it was February 28 actually.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, I wonder if the Minister could tell us the terms of reference of that commission.

DR. ROWE: I had the complete terms of reference published in the newspapers, Mr. Chairman, and announced over the radio very comprehensively. I would be very glad now to table it in the House any time, or later in the day for that matter—it is a very long document, covering four or five pages as a matter of fact.

MR. BROWNE: I notice here an item for travelling expenses in connection with forestry. Is that the only item for travelling expenses, that thirty thousand dollars. I notice last year you spent more than forty thousand dollars. Do you think that thirty thousand is going to cover it this year?

DR. ROWE: It is impossible for me to predict. Last year we had a very good year as far as forest fires were concerned. We may have another good year this year, but it is difficult to say.
MR. BROWNE: There is an item here for $17,500 for forest fire equipment. Why? Is it necessary to get equipment?

DR. ROWE: Mr. Chairman, we have a huge quantity of hoses and of course a number of very valuable trucks and they are subject to very rough wear. For example this year we have to purchase a four and a half ton truck, and we propose purchasing additional radio-telephone sets, which we introduced last year and which proved their worth elsewhere in Canada. We introduced them here last year as mobile sections for fire fighters for the first time and they are now kept in connection with towers and headquarters etc. We have this year twenty-four hand pumps with six thousand feet of one and a half inch linen hose, at a very considerable cost, and shovels and firefighting brooms and other equipment.

MR. BROWNE: Who supplies that—do you buy it from any particular person?

DR. ROWE: We order everything through the Department of Supply, Mr. Chairman, and I have not the faintest idea—I do know we try to keep our bills uniform.

MR. HOLLETT: Possibly this is a question for the Department of Supply. But are tenders called for the supplying of equipment?

DR. ROWE: I think so—if we need a new truck we just tell Supply that we need a half-ton or a pick-up truck or whatever it is—I presume tenders are regularly called for.

Carried.

805—Agriculture:

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I notice there is an increase of staff here, for a new officer Grade V. Will the Minister explain?

DR. ROWE: I can save time by explaining that there are actually no increases in staff there at all. I believe that actually there may be a little reduction. If the honourable member will refer to the past year’s estimates he will find the two divisions within agriculture—we had the division of land development which was one organization left over from the Commission of Government’s various land settlements carried on by Cormack Development etc. Last year, in the interest of efficiency and economy both, we consolidated these two divisions and made one director, Mr. Clarence Badcock, former director of land development who became director of agriculture. The staff from that was then transferred, and what looks like a substantial increase is exactly no increase at all.

MR. BROWNE: Has there been any promotions there?

DR. ROWE: Mr. Clarence Badcock, former director of Land Development, I believe, there was a small promotion there when Mr. Badcock took over both divisions. He was raised, I think, from something like Grade II to Grade IV.

MR. BROWNE: Now this item of ten thousand dollars extra assistance, is that also taken over from the other?

DR. ROWE: These are the garage workers. We have some twenty tractors altogether.

MR. BROWNE: The vote is increased by six thousand dollars?

DR. ROWE: I think that is the transfer. On page 42–806 you will note that was $30,900 last year, for land development. It has been transferred back and has been broken down.

MR. BROWNE: I have here the Public Accounts and there is nothing in there about extra assistance for last year. I have the item for expenses, but there is nothing in there about extra assistance. Who are those persons you are going to take on? What class of persons will they be?

DR. ROWE: They are the seasonal employees who have been on for many years, garage men and mechanics etc., looking after our equipment.

MR. BROWNE: Where will they be located?

DR. ROWE: The bulk of them will be at Whitbourne and Markland.

MR. HOLLETT: How has the cost increased? You say it was the regular employees.

DR. ROWE: Most of our extra assistance was used on land development where most of our vehicles were, twenty tractors, etc. then development was incorporated into it so that all extra assistance for land development has now gone under agriculture and extra assistance on surveys has driven it up to ten thousand dollars.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It is only a transfer from one section to another, it is not an increase.

DR. ROWE: Last year it was shown under land development, extra assistance $6,139.

MR. BROWNE: It should be here somewhere in last year’s vote.

DR. ROWE: It is merely a transfer from one division last year and is now in with the agricultural division this year.

MR. HOLLETT: Would the Minister explain how the three thousand dollars for education is expended?

DR. ROWE: That is assistance to agricultural students going to an agricultural college. I believe it is $400 a year which is given to students who go to Truro, MacDonald College. I think that programme has been in effect for some years, since the days of the Commission of Government.

MR. HOLLETT: How are they selected?

DR. ROWE: They are not selected. Anybody who wishes to go to Truro and study agriculture, can do so.

MR. BROWNE: I notice the actual expenditure is $1,700 and the year before it was only $695.

DR. ROWE: There is nothing we can do there—it is just the fact that there are not enough claimants.

MR. BROWNE: Is it advertised?

DR. ROWE: It is generally known—we publicize the fact from time to time.

MR. HOLLETT: Standardization of marketing—will the Minister explain what steps are being taken towards standardization?

DR. ROWE: I don’t know why that term is used. It is an all-embracing term—what we have in mind, for example, we plan to construct a frost-proof warehouse on the West Coast at Robinsons, and we intend to put another, I think, on the east coast. We plan to at any rate on a co-operative basis with the community assisting. The idea behind it is this: Take a simple case—some farmer who is living perhaps twenty miles from the railway is going to ship a few hundred sacks of potatoes a year. He has to come up and ship them on a freight train. He will not know what time the train will be along, and he may have to either take them back again or leave them and risk the frost. The idea is to provide some place where we can hold his vegetables and products until such time as transportation is available.

We have had a number of cases where farmers received very heavy damage through frost. We also have provision for construction of a cold storage and slaughter house in the Codroy Valley to come out of that also. We hope to do something in that line to assist the people on Avalon also, something in the line of a cold storage and slaughter house. Then there is some need for temporary employment to come under that heading.

MR. HOLLETT: I think that is very commendable and I compliment the department on that. I think money spent along these lines will be well spent, there is no question about it. On the Land Fertility schemes you have $15,000?

DR. ROWE: That is agricultural limestone. I might say we experienced some difficulty in getting supplies of that last year, but it is now beginning to roll in at last. The idea is that we subsidize the farmer in the purchase of limestone. It is beginning to roll in—right now we are able to get a good many hundred tons.

MR. HOLLETT: That is purchased locally?

DR. ROWE: Yes, it is being manufactured by the cement plant on the west coast.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, in regard to both these items, does the Federal Government assist considerably in the erection of cold storages and warehouses and also in the land utility scheme?

DR. ROWE: Yes, the Federal Government pays a dollar fifty on limestone and one-third of the cost of cold storage units. Actually the working plan we have is that, speaking from memory and subject to correction, the Federal Government pays one-third, the province one-third and the local community one-third.

MR. HOLLETT: There is an item here—Demonstration and Experiments $2,000. You actually spent $1,553—I note there is no item here regarding exhibitions—is it going to be the policy of the department not to have any exhibitions—have they given that any consideration?

DR. ROWE: Yes, Mr. Chairman, that is hidden there under 805-08-04: Grants to Agricultural Organizations, exhibitions and fairs which are conducted under the auspices of some local organization. We did last year, as a matter of fact, contribute materially to the Grand Falls Exhibition.

MR. BROWNE: There is $13,000—you voted $13,000 last year and actually spent $5,000. What I mean to ask is: Is there to be encouragement to having exhibitions all over the country, Long Pond, Manuels, Bell Island, Corner Brook and other places?

DR. ROWE: We are doing just that. Last year you might recall there was a very large fair at Fox Trap embracing all Conception Bay South, and also a number of sheep fairs and a number of others, and at Grand Falls the people of the interior put on an agricultural exhibition. Then again we are only waiting for the stadium before we get going on a provincial wide basis.

MR. FOGWILL: Mr. Chairman, since 1952-53 we have had a reduction in the vote in 805-05-05—Health of the Animals including compensation, amounting to $63,730. Are we to understand by this reduction that the health of animals has improved?

DR. ROWE: Of course, Mr. Chairman, in the last two years we have, in conjunction with the Federal Government and the co-operation of the farmers, carried on an anti-T.B. campaign amongst the cows. We have been able practically to eradicate T.B. from our cows. The campaign is now in the process of completion. Last year a heavy burden fell on us because it was then the majority of T.B. cows were detected and we had to replace the cows on—

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, on that point, is there any area in the country where T.B. amongst cows is concentrated more than in others?

DR. ROWE: The answer to that now, is no. Last year most of them were found around St. John's area.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, the vote for land clearance is only $1,000 bonus—

DR. ROWE: That is a hang-over from the Commission of Government.

MR. BROWNE: Does the Minister think that is a good idea?

DR. ROWE: We do it in a different way. We are actually spending more money under 805-05-05—Land Clearing and Development.

MR. BROWNE: In regard to the improvement of livestock, I wonder if the Minister is in a position to tell us what happened to the herd of sheep brought here from Scotland about three years ago by the present deputy-minister of natural resources and put on Brigus barrens and removed them from there, I believe. Has the experiment been a success?

DR. ROWE: It was purely experimental, of course, and I think I could say, in general the experiment was a success. They are now down at Branch. But, by the way, we have disposed of a number of them to interested parties; sold them around the province. In general the experiment has shown that it is feasible to keep these breeds of sheep over the winter.

MR. BROWNE: Then you think the experiment was worthwhile?

DR. ROWE: I may say the departmental report which will go out within the next two or three weeks has a full account on that experiment.

MR. BROWNE: For what year is that report?

DR. ROWE: For last year, 1953-54.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, there is an item of $27,300 for the blueberry industry. I wonder if the Honourable Minister could tell us what results we are getting from that?

DR. ROWE: I would say in general the situation is that our blueberry industry is bigger today than ever before. Everybody concerned, I think, has contributed to its success.
Through our burning programme and our general programme last year our people got nearly a million dollars on the Avalon Peninsula.

MR. HOLLETT: How is this to be spent?

DR. ROWE: I estimate we burn fifteen thousand acres of blueberry land which costs approximately a thousand dollars an acre. We build trails and rough roads to inaccessible areas. This year we will probably spend about three thousand on that feature. Then of course we have inspection services, as all blueberries are inspected. These inspectors are taken on for the season. Then we have the supervisor and his assistant etc.

MR. HOLLETT: What area do you intend to burn this year?

DR. ROWE: As a matter of fact it has already been completed, most of the burning has been done now.

MR. BROWNE: In respect to the Commission of Inquiry, $50,000, has any agreement been made for compensation to Professor Shaw, Mr. Chairman?

DR. ROWE: Yes, Mr. Chairman, $8,000 a year.

MR. BROWNE: How much are the others to receive?

DR. ROWE: There is only one other member who gets paid, Professor Drummond. The third member is the present Deputy-Minister of Mines and Resources who is not paid at all of course for that work.

MR. BROWNE: Professor Drummond, I take it, gets ten thousand dollars?

DR. ROWE: Yes.

MR. BROWNE: Are they holding sittings now or visiting around the country? What are they doing at the present time?

DR. ROWE: Two weeks ago they were sitting. For obvious reasons I have not been in close contact with them. I believe they are now visiting around the province. A few weeks ago they held public sittings here.

MR. HOLLETT: You have a contract for just one year or two years?

DR. ROWE: There is no contract for that. We expect the Commission to complete its inquiry around the end of the year.

MR. HOLLETT: There is no question as to what time this terminates?

MR. SMALLWOOD: There has been no time limit set.

MR. HOLLETT: It could go on for years.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, ten or fifteen years.

MR. HOLLETT: I did not address my remarks to the Premier.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I am answering.

MR. HOLLETT: I would prefer the Premier to keep quiet.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Chairman, I ask the honourable gentleman to take back that remark through you.

MR. CHAIRMAN: I think the remark was in bad taste, but I wonder if he need take it back—I do think it was in bad taste.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman,
I would ask you if in your opinion the Premier should jeer at me as he did when I was asking a question?

MR. CHAIRMAN: It is in bad taste for any member to speak unless he rises and addresses the Chair—Order—

MR. BROWNE: As we pass on to 805-05—Land Clearing Development vote, I notice $125,600, which I take it is a transfer from the farm and development vote. Can the Minister give us any idea how much land was cleared last year, and was it a self-supporting proposition—did it pay for itself?

DR. ROWE: It is a subsidy to our farmers. We subsidize the farmer and he pays us $2 an hour which is the exact cost of operating the bulldozers or it is a bit above that.

MR. BROWNE: The reason I asked is that the Department of Public Works had a tractor down in Dunville, as my honourable friend knows last year and they charged, I think, about twelve or fourteen dollars an hour, and the people paid for it down there.

DR. ROWE: Not farmers.

MR. BROWNE: It was to get land cleared anyhow.

DR. ROWE: Mr. Chairman, that tractor was merely clearing ground around rows of new houses which had been built, and had nothing at all to do with agriculture.

MR. BROWNE: The charge was $12 an hour. Now on this here, could you tell us exactly how much was cleared last year?

DR. ROWE: I would say one thousand acres of land.

MR. BROWNE: In what parts of the country?

DR. ROWE: As I happen to know, in practically every district, as a matter of fact in every district except Burgeo. I know we had land cleared down in the northern districts.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, 805-05-07 is that a token vote, and for what?

DR. ROWE: That is dealing with Cormack, a token vote.

MR. HOLLETT: What construction is going on there?

DR. ROWE: The Government still owns some buildings out there in Cormack.

MR. HOLLETT: There was no vote for it last year nor the year before.

DR. ROWE: Yes, I think so, under land development.

MR. BROWNE: Is the department booked up for this year with land clearing schemes?

DR. ROWE: I would say at this given time we are probably two years behind the requests from farmers all over the province, down in St. Barbe, Bonavista Bay, Notre Dame Bay, everywhere, and we are definitely booked up.

805—Carried.

806—Land Development: Carried.

808—Crown Lands and Surveys:

MR. HOLLETT: I see here an item for National Park, $10,000, what is that?

DR. ROWE: That is for general expenses in connection with the National Park surveying and other investigations we have to make in period of several years.

MR. BROWNE: How are you spending this $10,000 for this year?

DR. ROWE: As a matter of fact the whole subject is under discussion between the two governments and I would not be able to say right at the moment in detail how that money will be spent for that matter or if at all. We have to have it there. We may be doing extra survey work this year.

MR. HOLLETT: Consumable Supplies $100—a token vote.

DR. ROWE: I asked myself that yesterday. It is some breakdown, I believe, by the Department of Finance this year, covering paper and pencils, and I was informed it was for extra tracing paper used for surveys.

MR. BROWNE: I wonder could the Honourable Minister tell us what is the situation in regard to the National Park, now that the Federal Government is going to take charge.

DR. ROWE: We have had under consideration for some time according to arrangements with the Federal Government placing at their disposal an area of land in Bonavista Bay area, a very large track of land with many attractions there. We have to keep in mind when the Federal Government sets up a National Park all rights held by individuals are cancelled, including the provincial rights in mines and water powers or anything of that kind. Last year it is true the Government was under pressure from various quarters to get this thing through, nevertheless, we could not pass over a hundred square miles or so, which could conceivably contain minerals. So we had a survey done there, and we found nothing of consequence to hold up the matter on that score. We may however very well be wrong and in five years somebody might discover a gold mine. Right now we are thinking of water-power. The Terra Nova River has a potentiality of seventy-five thousand horse-power, probably the greatest on the east coast. We have to think twice before forfeiting that potential there. That thing is being examined and studied right now. I might say the question of any National Park in Newfoundland, especially where we have such a long history, is not so simple as most people think. It is not a question of taking a great block of land and saying; here take that and make a National Park out of it.

MR. BROWNE: Are any of these survey parties going to Labrador?

DR. ROWE: I think we spent a little there last year, in Port Hope Simpson, where we sold some houses to residents at Port Hope Simpson. I think this year we may well have to send some one to Happy Valley, but that has not been decided on yet.

808: Carried.
810: Miscellaneous Services: Carried.
811: Wildlife:

MR. HOLLETT: Under 811-03-02: I wonder if the honourable minister could tell us what sort of equipment?

DR. ROWE: That would be trucks, motor boats, canoes, etc., for our game wardens.

MR. BROWNE: Who are the directors there?

DR. ROWE: One man is the chief game warden, Mr. H. Walters. And this year we are very glad to say we
MR. HOLLETT: I notice the government intends to spend $25,000 in relation to development of wildlife. Could the minister tell us what that means?

DR. ROWE: Yes. That includes the moose survey we have been making now over two years, one of the most extensive, and it has already received international attention. Also included here is a provision for the introduction of rough grouse, a decision made by the government a few months ago. We expect to have five thousand for that this year, in addition we intend to have a survey of partridge this year, or at least the beginning of a survey. It is estimated that might cost five thousand dollars. Then a general survey by Dr. Gabrielson, authority on wildlife, who while not receiving any salary for himself nor for his assistance, nevertheless there are expenses incidental to that. That estimate might well cover five thousand dollars, but we don't know that. Then there is the transfer of beaver. Travelling and salaries run about $9,000—That is how that vote is taken up.

MR. HOLLETT: Has any thought been given to a bounty on red foxes, which in my opinion destroy a great deal in the country as far as partridge are concerned.

DR. ROWE: From time to time within the department we consider that whole question, which is fraught with all kinds of danger. We have consulted New Brunswick who have in the past put on such bounties, and they always come back to us with a suggestion to be very, very careful as we could get ourselves into all kinds of trouble. As a matter of fact Dr. Gabrielson says a bounty system is something we ought to be very cautious about approaching here in Newfoundland. The thing is under study.

MR. BROWNE: I believe some one recommended that the government import white-tailed deer some time ago. Did the department drop that idea?

DR. ROWE: No it has not been dropped. It is still under consideration. There again there are other things tying in with the white-tailed deer. Nobody knows why the moose are disappearing from the mainland and from Nova Scotia and a lot have disappeared from New Brunswick; and a lot of people seem to think it is because of the white-tailed deer. We cannot take a chance on destroying our moose. What I mean is that we should in fact know as far as possible what the white-tailed deer will do.

MR. BROWNE: There is a vote here for fifteen hundred dollars for a fishing lodge.

DR. ROWE: That lodge was built by the Commission of Government for government use in Commission of Government days. It is on the Gander.
MR. BROWNE: It takes fifteen hundred dollars to operate it.

DR. ROWE: From time to time the government does send special parties there. It has to have a cook and caretaker and that kind of thing. It may not run into that.

MR. BROWNE: Any government officials spend time there?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No never. While on that question—We found that the Commission of Government had built quite a few cabins on the Salmonier Line, and each Commissioner had one, and some high officials had others. I personally gave orders that the whole lot of them be leased out to the highest bidder. Then I discovered the other one existing at Gander and was about to sell it when it occurred to us it might be good business to hold on to it and let it be used by distinguished visitors whom we would invite for the purpose of getting in some salmon fishing at the expense of the government, most of them from the United States of America.

MR. BROWNE: Seasonal Assistance $12,035 and Game and Fish Protection. I thought that was a federal matter.

DR. ROWE: That was a co-operative arrangement made at the time of union between the Federal and the Provincial Governments—That is our share of the cost of wardens, etc. We have them for six months of the year.

MR. HOLLETT: Would the minister care to say anything about the situation in regard to beaver at the present time. You had an open season last years, I believe, and I remember going out on a trip last year and standing in one place and counting about twenty beaver houses, and they are particularly numerous around there, and I could see them all over the place. I frankly suspect that every one of them was slaughtered last year.

DR. ROWE: Last year we did decide after very careful investigation that the time was ripe for another open season, and about seven or eight thousand were killed. That means of course in certain parts of the Province things were rather slack last year, some of the men there made a few dollars during the winter. This year we do not propose to open the season. What will happen is that probably in about three years time we will again open the season. The fact that this quantity was taken last year without any serious loss is an indication the beaver situation is very well looked after.

MR. HOLLETT: What is the value of the pelt?

DR. ROWE: In some cases a little bit disappointing for us, and not only for us but for all Canada. I think they ran about $12.

811: Carried.
820: Mines.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I wonder if the minister is in a position to tell us about the Asbestos Mine to which the government gave considerable assistance?

DR. ROWE: The Asbestos Mine in Port au Port, that is still working, still going on there, and as a matter of fact, we hope there will be some development there late this year.

MR. BROWNE: Is it costing the government anything, apart from the road building?

DR. ROWE: No, it is not costing the government any money other than the money advanced.
MR. BROWNE: Are they working here now?

DR. ROWE: As of this month I resume they are. They are already here now, yes.

MR. BROWNE: I understand an announcement had been made that it is a wonderful asbestos mine and could be in operation long before this. Is there any definite information about it?

MR. SMALLWOOD: They had some delays caused principally by the government’s delay in getting the road in. The road is now almost in and they hope to be shipping asbestos this year.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I notice the Deputy Minister gets an additional vote of a thousand dollars under this subhead.

DR. ROWE: Perhaps, Mr. Chairman, the honourable the Premier would better explain.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is paid to Claude Howse and has been for the last four or five years annually by the Office of the Premier or the Department of Economic Development. I am not sure at the moment which of, either one or the other, for a very special work which Mr. Howse has been doing for the Department of Economic Development.

MR. HOLLETT: May I ask why was reduced from two thousand dollars to one thousand dollars last year?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Because the salaries went up at the same time as it reduced that amount.

MR. BROWNE: Who is the director, Grade VI?

DR. ROWE: That is Dr. Baird, the provincial geologist.

MR. HOLLETT: I see here an item for $20,000 for diamond drilling. I wonder if that could not be done either by NALCO or BRINCO? To what extent is diamond drilling carried on by the Department of Mines and Resources?

DR. ROWE: We maintain drills and crews, etc., and occasionally we rent them out to private parties. Last year, I think, we lent them to NALCO, and were paid back. That came under revenue. Then there are special things which we ourselves do from time to time as a government service. It is the government’s prime duty to get production, and that is the prime interest of the government irrespective of who is doing private drilling on private property, etc. If the public interest demanded it we would not hesitate to put a diamond drill in anywhere.

MR. FOGWILL: Salt Survey $8,000. Would the minister indicate some of the results of that salt survey up to the present time?

DR. ROWE: All I can say, Mr. Chairman—Nova Scotia’s survey, I am informed, took them twelve years before they proved up their salt deposits and got their mines working. We have only been at it a year or so. It is encouraging. That is all I can say. It will take a long time unless we are very lucky. It may take several years to ascertain whether or not there is a workable deposit there. That is what we are trying to find out.

MR. FOGWILL: Will the minister tell us if they have found any salt deposits?

DR. ROWE: Nothing in commercial quantities.
MR. FOGWILL: Small deposits.

DR. ROWE: Yes, some brine and something like that, which means there is some salt. It may peter out or prove a new mine.

MR. FOGWILL: Would the Minister tell us in what part of the island the survey is being carried on?

DR. ROWE: From Flat Bay down to Codroy is the area in which the survey is being conducted. Last year, Mr. Chairman, we had a survey based on specific gravity, and that is going ahead this year—from the Nova Scotia Foundation.

MR. BROWNE: Who is in charge of the work? Somebody from Nova Scotia?

DR. ROWE: Yes, the director of the Nova Scotia Research Foundation but with no charge for salary, just a gesture to the province.

MR. FOGWILL: I notice there is a new item—Publications $5,000. What is proposed to be done under that?

DR. ROWE: That item there will be a new geological map, which will be a milestone in the geological history of Newfoundland, the first map for fifty years. The map will incorporate everything that has been done in geology in Newfoundland since 1907.

MR. BROWNE: Who is preparing that?

DR. ROWE: Our mines branch. The five thousand will be used chiefly there, but there may be other items as well.

MR. BROWNE: It is being done?

DR. ROWE: Yes, it is in the hands of the printers, and we hope to have it in July or probably late this month.

MR. FOGWILL: There is an increase, Mr. Chairman, of $11,000 for equipment. Would the Minister indicate to the committee what the department proposes to purchase under that heading?

DR. ROWE: Yes, I am told there is a change in the item up there. Formerly one was under diamond drilling and the other under field surveys, now all are blocked together and consolidated into one vote.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I move the committee rise and report having passed sundry items.

MR. COURAGE: Mr. Speaker, the committee of supply have considered the items to them referred and have passed the following items of current estimates under the heading of Mines and Resources 804 through 820 inclusive.

Report received—Committee ordered sit again presently.

On motion the House recessed until 3:00 of the clock in the afternoon.

AFTERNOON SESSION

June 4, 1954.

The House met at 3:00 of the clock in the afternoon, pursuant to adjournment.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, before we go back into Committee of the Whole on Supply I should like to table answers to Question No. 106 asked by the Honourable Leader of the Opposition to the Minister of Economic Development—with permission of the House.

(1) The answer is, yes. Ex-gratia payments were made and were made because of advances in wage rates incurred by the contractors during the period of construction-wage rates and other advances in costs.
The amounts were as follows:
MIAG
- $4,770.23 Mar. 1, 1952
- 9,284.59 Apr. 30, 1952
- 128,628.71 Mar. 20, 1952

That was paid to MIAG in respect of the cement plant.

Then to the firm of Benno Schilde the sum of $150,000 on the 14th of May 1953. That was paid to Benno Schilde in respect of their increased costs in the building of the Gypsum Plant at Humbermouth.

Mr. Speaker, on two separate occasions during the building of these plants there was a considerable increase in the wage rates which had to be met by the firms concerned—MIAG in the case of the cement mill and Benno Schilde in the case of the gypsum plant. One of these occasions was when there was a strike of workers in both plants, and was followed by a wage increase of considerable proportions. Subsequently there was a second wage increase, not the result of a strike but as the result of a threat of a strike. So both companies, not acting together but separately, approached the government with a request for additional payments over and above the amount of the contracts. The government in each case agreed to an increased payment, but not by any means the amounts requested. If I had thought of it I would have requested the Treasury to furnish me with the amounts requested by the companies concerned. If that had been included in the question no doubt I would have had the information now before me, but they got rather considerably less than the amounts requested. I am speaking from memory and some member of the Cabinet may be able to correct me, but I think it was something of the order of half of what they requested. Now there was one condition made in connection with one of these payments, the payment to Benno Schilde. We agreed to make this payment of $150,000 to Benno Schilde on a condition we laid down; that they should invest that money in the Province of Newfoundland. They agreed to do so, that they would invest all that money in Newfoundland and put more money with it. That was to be put into a plant for the manufacture of light machinery based upon the use of sheet metal by them, sheet tin and sheet metal and sheet copper and sheet zinc and sheet brass sheet metal in general, and the plant was to have been constructed at Bay Roberts.

These were the statements they made to the government when they signed our contract, that they were to invest the money within Newfoundland. They then proceeded to incorporate a company called Eastern Machinery Company, or some such name. I think there were other words also in the title of the company, but the two words I remember most are “Eastern” and “Machinery.” In the crush of business I believe I omitted to press for the building of that plant for some months after the agreement was made. Then I began to press, and in the present year, in February—I am not anticipating statements I will be making or that will be made now in another place later this year—but in February, I believe (I could easily find it because the carbon copy would be in my office) I wrote a stern and rather stiff letter to the firm of Benno Schilde drawing their attention to the fact that we had made them this ex-gratia payment of $150,000 on condition that they would establish this small plant and demanded that they either proceed at once with the building of the plant or return the money to the Treasury. That letter started something—started quite a holocaust. I know they were greatly startled to receive a letter in those terms from me. They were not expecting a letter in those terms nor any stiff terms from me. I believe they thought they had good reason not to expect me, of all people, to talk to them like that. They thought they did know me—but about that the least said at this stage perhaps the better. There will be a better and more proper occasion when that could be said. But that is the story of the ex-gratia payment of the $150,000 to the firm of Benno Schilde.

In the case of MIAG there were no conditions imposed. As a matter of fact we felt that each firm honestly was owed in equity and not legally and by contract but owed in equity in justice more than their contract required us to pay them; and that their expenses had been away beyond what they had a legal right to expect us to pay them.

Now as to the firm of William Lundrigan & Co. Ltd., we paid also an ex-gratia amount there. That is the firm that constructed the buildings of both plants, the actual structures of both mills; and we made them an ex-gratia payment of $21,520.23 on August 9, 1952. So that it appears that MIAG and William Lundrigan & Co. Ltd., were both given ex-gratia payments in 1952 whereas Benno Schilde were given their payment only last year, 1953, May of last year. I may say the reason why they were not given their payment until as late as that is that they had asked for it long before, and we had haggled and bargained with them to agree to the conditions we wanted to impose upon them. At first they demurred and in fact refused to accede to the conditions, holding that we owed it to them in equity and ought to pay them. We had paid MIAG and Lundrigan and had to pay them, we knew in our hearts that that was so, but we were anxious to establish a small light machinery plant because they happened to be famous all over the world for the particular type of machinery they do manufacture.

MR. HOLLETT: Arising out of that, I wonder if the Premier might state to the House whether or not Benno Schilde has returned that $150,000.

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, they have not returned the money. Instead they came to us shortly after they received the letter from us—the letter went to Germany to their Head Office—they came to us and confessed they could not begin to compete with CMIC who were in fact doing the same type of work because the overhead of CMIC would absorb that particular branch of their activity whereas if they established a plant of one activity it would have to absorb the whole activity of the plant and they could not compete. They said they would either pay back the money or, if the Government were agreeable, invest the money in another plant in Newfoundland; which ever the Government would say. We wanted to know where they would invest it? They told us, if it were agreeable, they would invest it in Humbermouth in a concrete products plant, for the manufacture of concrete pipes, culverts, processed concrete forms for construction and generally prepared and processed and premoulded concrete products. The Cabinet considered it, and thought that the $150,000 so invested by Benno Schilde in Newfoundland would be of more benefit to Newfoundland than to have it going back into the Treasury to be spent by the Government in the ordinary course of Government business. We felt that it would help strengthen, if only by a little, the economy of Newfoundland more than it would if we just recovered it to the Treasury. But what we were not willing to do was just to have them accept the $150,000, put it on their books and we in Newfoundland have nothing more to show for it than this gypsum plant for which they had been paid this amount.

MR. BROWNE: And did they actually invest it in concrete products?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I understand they have done so. I don't actually know, but have no doubt they have done so in partnership with Mr. W. J. Lundrigan. When the firm of William J. Lundrigan was engaged to construct the gypsum plant it brought them in close touch with the firm of Benno Schilde, as the directors of Benno Schilde came frequently to Humbermouth and had a certain degree of close collaboration, because one firm was building the mill and the other firm was building the machinery, and they came to have a great respect for one another, and that has culminated in their forming a partnership in Humbermouth, and a certain degree of close collaboration, and I am now informed they are starting in the concrete business.

Orders of The Day
Committee of the Whole on Supply.
(Mr. Courage Chairman of Committee):

MR. CHAIRMAN: When the committee rose we had reached 821. Printing and Photography:

DR. ROWE: Mr. Chairman, I wonder if I might revert for just one moment back to 804, merely to table a document.

MR. CHAIRMAN: I think the honourable minister may table the document.

DR. ROWE: Mr. Chairman, it will be recalled that this morning somebody asked me what were the functions and duties of the Royal Commission on Forestry. I have now the formal statement here. I could only locate one copy of it in the minute or two I had in the department, but I shall be glad to table any other copies.

While I am on my feet, Sir, 821 has been called. I think in view of the fact that this is an entirely new division I should make just a very brief statement regarding it. For some years we had attached to the Crown Lands Division a photographic service and we had two officers looking after it, and on occasions, of course, when heavy work demanded it we could always put in other staff. That service was designed to look after the needs of the Crown Lands Division in the first instance. However, especially in the last two or three years, increasing demands have been made on that service by other departments of government, for example, the department of Economic Development, the department of Fisheries and Co-operatives and the department of Public Works. Also we found that certain pieces of work, certain things needed by the various government departments required very considerable time to obtain. For example somebody might come and say they would like to have fifty reproductions of a map, let us say for argument's sake, the bottom of Conception Bay. To get that done by the ordinary means available to the department of the government might sometimes require a number of days or even a week.

This new division we have is an expansion of the old service in two ways. It is an expansion in the sense that the service is far wider, it includes printing, facsimile reproduction of any material, any document, any deed, any map, facsimile reproduction by photographers in the department. This may come as some surprise to the House and the public—we have almost one hundred thousand aerial photographs of Newfoundland, practically every inch of Newfoundland. So that if any honourable member were to come into our department today and say he would like to have a look at a block of ground two miles by three miles situated in the heart of the country or on part of the Great Northern Peninsula we could locate that for him in a few seconds, an actual photograph of that. Now in all these various surveys encompassing mines surveys, crown lands surveys, forestry surveys and so on, every day of our lives we get requests for reproductions of an area. The new division looks after that. The new division also is able to do for us certain things that formerly could not be done except through commercial channels, such things as the printing of pamphlets and documents of one kind and another. Last week for example our photographing division turned out one hundred and seventy-seven thousand forms for the Department of Health, Public Welfare and Education. That was in connection with toxiding, and other medical forms for the Department of Health; and these one hundred and seventy-seven thousand were turned out almost at a few hours’ notice.

I would invite any member of the House, and I think it would be educational and interesting to visit the division. The Premier and I went up there a few days ago. I invite any member of the House to go up there and see some of the most modern machinery of its kind in the world today. I might say it is located in the building on Harvey Road. This particular service was brought to the attention of the Government by the Honourable the Premier who had seen similar services in England during one of his visits. I think it is one of the finest additions to the Government service that we have. I think the Honourable the Premier is in a position to give a more elaborate description of the actual functions.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Perhaps the committee would like to have a little additional information. This is not a new division of the department but in some aspects it is a new division. It is an old division, fairly old, to which we have now added some new features, and to which we propose to add still another new feature. In the department of Natural Resources there is of course naturally a need for a map department and a blueprinting department. Under the control of the deputy-minister of Natural Resources, Mr. Claude Howse, and under the immediate and active operation of a young man named Butler, whose first name is Don, a most dependable and most resourceful young man, this division has developed into quite a sizable proportion and activity of the Government, i.e. the making of blueprints, the reproductions of maps sectional and different types of maps for the Mines Department and the Crown Lands Office and all the activities of that department and of other departments of the Government. Well then having already that nucleus of the present division and I having seen in Charlottetown, having been shown the installations of that Government under which they print their estimates and all their acts before they are printed finally for the House, print all their reports; having seen that in actual operation in Charlottetown, having been shown personally by Premier Jones the installations of that Government, I then asked the Cabinet to authorize me when I was about to visit London, a year ago for the Coronation, to visit the Crown Organization in London with a view to being put in touch with a firm that manufactured that kind of equipment in England. They did so, and I went out to the factory where the stuff is manufactured. The result was that I placed the order, as I had been authorized to do, through the Crown Agency, and the equipment came and we brought a man here from the company to familiarize Mr. Butler with the use of this Rota Printing Equipment. That Rota Printing is a very rapid system of reproduction, actually photographs a document and from that photographic plate you can print many many thousands and in fact you can print scores and even hundreds of thousands of copies. Then these forms can be held on file, and if another ten or fifteen or fifty thousand copies are needed, a phone call can get them put on the press and printed in a matter of a few hours.

There is one thing remaining to be done, i.e. the installation of a microfilm outfit to microfilm all kinds of documents. There is, I think, one but only one microfilm outfit in the whole Government service, and that is the one in the Department of Health and that one is sometimes lent to other departments or sometimes the other departments bring documents to the Health Department to be microfilmed. We feel that in this new division we should have a microfilm outfit to serve the Government in general. So that when that is added we will have as efficient and as complete division of its kind as probably any government possessed across Canada, with the exception of the Government Printing Office in Ottawa and in Washington. We have no thought whatsoever of establishing a Government printing office. I often wondered whether we should, but certainly we have no intention and no decision has been made to set up a Government map printing, photographic reproductions and microfilms, yes. These are necessary activities of the Government, and we are setting up a division that will be extremely useful and invaluable indeed for that purpose.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, this is very interesting because it costs $22,300 to get forms printed on this Rota Press.

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, my honourable friend is quite wrong, the twenty-two thousand is not just forms, it is for the whole activity of that division.

MR. BROWNE: That is the cost of this new vote. Now I take it the Government went ahead without any authority from the House and appointed a staff, I believe, of five additional, a director and grade one officer, a grade three and a grade two. It seems to me, Mr. Chairman, this press is certainly not going to be working eight hours a day for three hundred days a year, and is going to be tied up for a long time. Where is the purchase price for the press? That is not included in this figure at all. How much did we pay for the press?

MR. SMALLWOOD: That has been bought and paid for. That would not be in these estimates.

MR. BROWNE: What estimates? The department was not there last year. I would like to know how much this cost.

DR. ROWE: I am afraid off hand I cannot recall. The Department of Supply purchased it.

MR. BROWNE: How is it going to be generally beneficial to set up a department costing $23,000? Are we going to save $23,000 a year by it?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Many times over.

DR. ROWE: I have not a balance sheet here, but I can assure the honourable gentleman that we went into this thing very thoroughly, and we had our technical staff go into it. It was not merely an administrative decision, we went into the economy of the whole thing. Let me say also that is not entirely a new expenditure. We have had two permanent persons of the five shown here for years, and from time to time other supplementary staff transferred from other divisions at times of heavy pressure. So that I might say two-fifths of that expenditure, as far as staff is concerned has been a permanent feature of the department.

MR. BROWNE: Where did the other two come from?

DR. ROWE: They were with the Crown Lands Division in previous years. As far as the benefits are concerned, the benefits will be more administrative than economic. Sometimes in the past very important activities have been held up because we had to wait for the reproductions of maps and blueprints etc. when they had to be done either here by commercial, private enterprise, or as sometimes happened, sent to the mainland. We had to take our turn, and sometimes it would be five or six weeks. I remember sometime last year on something very important we were six weeks getting it done in Ottawa. Today we can get it done in six hours in our own division. As far as the actual dollars and cents are concerned we went into that and we are convinced that this will, in addition to giving a greater degree of efficiency and more satisfactory service actually save us money. I know very few things like this ever save the Government money, but we are convinced it will be done in this particular case.

MR. BROWNE: Who is in charge?

DR. ROWE: Mr. Donald Butler. He was the man in charge of the photographic division all along in the department. He is very efficient; as a matter of fact he is one of the most ingenious persons I have met in this particular field. I would be very happy to take any member at any time up to that division. Mr. Butler had been overworked in this division and went to hospital for some weeks but is now out, and when he gets back again I would be very happy to take any honourable member up to that division, because it is really an education in itself.

MR. BROWNE: How large a map can that machine print?

DR. ROWE: The Roto Printing Machine is 13 x 17 and makes a map 36 ins. x 40 ins.

MR. HOLLETT: Do I understand it can reproduce any part of a map that there is a copy of?

DR. ROWE: I might explain to the honourable member for St. John's West that in addition to the aerial photographs we purchased last year, I forget the amount we spent, but we purchased from Ottawa original copies which are all on file in our department and of course in use every day by our Crown Lands and Mines Branch you may see hundreds of them laid out. Now it is the reproduction of those we are enabled to do with our own press up there, the reproductions of these photographs themselves.

MR. HOLLETT: Am I to understand the honourable minister said the Government purchased photographs from Ottawa?

DR. ROWE: I am informed that all provinces purchase them. The Federal Government takes the photographs and the provincial departments purchase them from Ottawa.

MR. HOLLETT: I thought in the Terms of Union the Federal Government was to assist in all surveys which were made. How could we have to purchase these photographs from them afterwards? That is the point I want cleared up.

MR. SMALLWOOD: These are not surveys but photographs.

MR. HOLLETT: Aerial surveys, I suppose—what is the difference?

MR. SMALLWOOD: If the honourable gentleman does not know, this is not the place for finding out the difference between photographs and surveys, a school or a dictionary is the place.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, I was speaking to the honourable minister.

MR. SMALLWOOD: You were speaking to the House.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Honourable members speak to the House. Honourable members are in Committee of the Whole on Supply. The honourable member has the floor.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, I shall take my time and shall not be rushed by anyone except the chairman.

MR. CHAIRMAN: The Chair has no desire to rush.

MR. HOLLETT: I know that, Sir. To get back to the point—it was the stated policy in our terms of union that the Federal Government would assist in all surveys at any time whatsoever, tending to development. Now I am informed by the Honourable Minister of Mines and Resources that we have to purchase from the Federal Government any aerial photographs which have been taken. Furthermore I recall that Newfoundland spent about two hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars, I believe, on aerial surveys—are these in the possession of the Department of Mines and Resources? I wonder would the Minister assure me of that.

DR. ROWE: All the surveys that have been made by this Government are in the possession of the Department of Mines. Just one final word on this, Sir, as far as I am concerned. If we had to conduct these surveys ourselves they would cost us many millions of dollars. All we do actually is pay for the print. We don't pay for the survey. What we pay for is the piece of paper it is on, that is all.

MR. BROWNE: There is just one question, Mr. Chairman, that means now the department has no other expenditure for printing beyond what is allowed here, and in addition they have certain revenues from other departments for printing done for them.
Will there be a revenue coming in from the other departments?

DR. ROWE: No.

MR. BROWNE: What about this one hundred and seventy-five thousand forms?

DR. ROWE: No, we don't charge any other department of the Government.

MR. BROWNE: Don't you think they should pay you?

DR. ROWE: We would want to be bookkeepers for that.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I wonder if the Minister could tell us the colour of that machine, and while he is at it, the shape, how much it weighs and if it is made of iron, steel or copper.

MR. BROWNE: Or small wood.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Or is the colour brown, or is it the shape of Brown's corner, for instance?

DR. ROWE: I have already answered that we do not charge any other Government department at all. Whether we will have any other printing costs at all is another question. The answer to that is, yes, I am quite sure there will be certain things it is not feasible to have done up there.

Item carried.

DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH:
1001—Minister's Office—Carried.
1002—General Office.

MR. BROWNE: Who is the Administrative Assistant Grade III, $500 over grade, personal.

HON. P. FORSEY (Minister of Health): Mr. Butler.

MR. BROWNE: Where is the person who is head of the actual service now—is he in the General Hospital vote, Dr. Wilson?

MR. FORSEY: The superintendent of the General.

MR. BROWNE: I see—he is in the General Hospital.

1003—Accounting Office—Carried.
1004—Registrar of Vital Statistics.

MR. HOLLETT: I wonder if the Honourable Minister could give us any idea of the rate of increase in population in Newfoundland over the past four or five years?

MR. FORSEY: I have no idea—it is increasing.

1004—Carried.
1005—Registry:

MR. FORSEY: Mr. Chairman, that is an office set up for and operates a joint service for both Public Health and Public Welfare.

1005—Carried.
1006—Ambulance and Transport Services:

MR. BROWNE: There seems to be a large item there for new or replacement vehicles, what is that for?

MR. FORSEY: For cars and ambulances.

MR. BROWNE: How many of each?

MR. FORSEY: I would say about one ambulance and about four cars.

1006—Carried.
1007—Headquarters Medical Staff:

MR. FORSEY: That is for the Chief Medical Health Officers and Pathologists.

MR. BROWNE: Dr. McDermott. Who is with him? I think there is a new doctor there.
MR. FORSEY: I forget his name now. He is a chap who recently came over from England.

MR. BROWNE: Do you know the names of the other two?

MR. FORSEY: Dr. Josephson, I imagine, would be included there and also Dr. Knowling—no that is not right—I don't know their names, Mr. Chairman.

1007 Carried.

MR. BROWNE: We would like to know sometime.

1008—Nursing Service:

MR. BROWNE: What is the situation now in regard to nurses? Does it apply to hospitals? Do the nurses in training get any pay at all at the present time or do they get allowances at all of any kind?

MR. FORSEY: Yes, I think something of the order of $30 a month.

MR. BROWNE: Are you sure?

MR. FORSEY: I am not sure but—Institutional Officers Grade VII are on the same vote as last year with thirty new ones put into a higher scale.

MR. BROWNE: These are nurses. Are they all at the General Hospital?

MR. FORSEY: No, also at the Mental Hospital and the Sanatorium.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, in connection with that item, I have an answer here to the question as to how many student nurses are presently in training. There are 105 student nurses at the General Hospital—what I want to ask is this; it is understood these nurses get, not including their board and lodging, $300 a year, less than a dollar a day. On what grounds do we arrive at the conclusion that they are getting better pay than any nurses in Canada. They get $300 a year over and above their keep, and in addition to their eight hours on duty they have to work long hours studying. I think that is very small pay, less than a dollar a day; three hundred dollars a year in this day and age, even though, as this will indicate, they may be paid better than anyone else on the mainland. I wonder if the Honourable Minister would like to comment?

MR. FORSEY: The whole point is that they are getting an education.

MR. HOLLETT: They are working for it. I am wondering if the Minister has considered any increase in the salaries of these nurses. I mean? I should think the nursing profession is badly in need of nurses in this country and they are certainly not being over-paid, and I don't think that is wise—if, as the Minister says, they are getting an education that may stand them in good stead, but to pay less than a dollar a day to hold these nurses there for three years seems hardly sufficient. I was wondering if there might be any possibility that the Minister might recommend to the Government some increase.

MR. FORSEY: Not while the law of supply and demands is in operation. They have doubled the number of students and there is no point in putting up the rate if they are satisfied to accept that; and it is higher than elsewhere in Canada. I know, I would like to increase everybody's wages—but, can we afford it? We must cut the garment according to the cloth.

MR. HOLLETT: They can't afford it—that is the answer I am getting. The Government are not in a position.
MR. FORSEY: I will waive this question, Mr. Chairman.

1008 Carried.

1009—Tuberculosis Control:

MR. BROWNE: I note there is some increase, although not very much it is true, but $2,500 in this vote over last year, but an increase of about five thousand over the previous years actual expenditure. Is the Minister now in a position to tell us if the incidence of TB is declining so that we might expect from this on, there might not be a need of so much. I know there has been a wonderful campaign conducted for a great number of years, starting back in the years of the Commission of Government and of course the fact that the people are enjoying a higher standard of living has had a lot to do with it, but it seems to me TB has been very much under control recently.

MR. FORSEY: Five years ago 128 people died with TB in St. John's—last year it was in the 20's. But the increase and most of the money now is spent on prevention and seeking out the disease and preventing it before it progresses too far.

MR. BROWNE: I take it this is Dr. Knowling here under this item. Who is his assistant?

MR. FORSEY: Dr. Lewis.

MR. HOLLETT: I notice grants to non-government hospitals, International Grenfell Association $45,000, which brings to my mind a question raised by one of the members on the other side of the House relative to White Bay. I don't know whether this is the right time, but I might as well bring the question in here as anywhere else. Is it the intention of the Government to implement the wishes of the people in White Bay to secure a cottage hospital there in the future?

MR. FORSEY: I am not in a position to answer that question, Mr. Chairman—that would be at the discretion of the Government. The Department of Health's only interest is in implementing any decision the Government may make in the future.

Carried.

1010—Health Inspection:

MR. BROWNE: I notice on this item the travelling expenses are only $1,000. Where are the health officers located? Are there any outside the City of St. John's, and if so, how many?

MR. FORSEY: At Corner Brook, Grand Falls.

MR. BROWNE: Do they do any travelling? That does not seem like very much.

MR. FORSEY: They do some travelling, but they have their own vehicles for travelling.

MR. BROWNE: Then they get paid out of this vote for travelling?

MR. FORSEY: No.

MR. BROWNE: How do they get paid for their travelling if they have their own vehicles?

MR. FORSEY: They would be departmental vehicles.

1010 Carried.

1011—Business Management: Carried.

1012—Central Laundry: Carried.

1013—Central Pharmacy: Carried.

1014—Central Stores:
MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, there was a report from the Auditor General to the effect they had recommended certain changes be carried out about supplies, and he reported that after a certain period they checked up and a lot of things were found to be unaccounted for—is there any improvement in the management of the stores as he recommended?

MR. FORSEY: Mr. Chairman, some of the personnel have been retired and replaced and according to the latest check of the Auditor General everything is carried on satisfactorily.

Carried.

1015—Unallocated Equipment and Supplies: Carried.

1016—Prosthetic Service: Carried.

1017—General Health Services:

MR. HOLLETT: Fees for professional services—would the Honourable Minister tell us what these are?

MR. FORSEY: That would be operations performed by various city doctors for the indigent poor, non-paying patients. They have a set scale, for instance the removal of an appendix, $30. I don't remember all of them but the charge is very low.

Carried.

1018—Venereal Diseases Preventative Service:

MR. BROWNE: These are just part-time. You would get no doctor for that amount?

MR. FORSEY: Yes—the other officer would be just an ordinary civil servant.

Carried.

1019—Public Health Laboratory:

MR. BROWNE: Who is in charge of that now?

MR. FORSEY: Dr. Josephson.

MR. HOLLETT: Could the Minister tell us whether or not the supply of blood to the various hospitals is ample generally, or is there generally a shortage?

MR. FORSEY: There was a shortage, but we have entered into an agreement now with Ottawa whereby our supply here can be supplemented from other provinces.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Instead of Ottawa drawing blood out of us we draw it out of Ottawa.

MR. HOLLETT: Do you pay for it?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, we get it free.

MR. HOLLETT: That brings me back to another item. I remember, Mr. Chairman, how much I was ridiculed about this particular item. The item, I think, was $37,000 for mouth wipes. And I tried to prove, and I did prove, I think, to the satisfaction of the Honourable the Premier, there was something wrong in Denmark somewhere. Anyhow I put up with ridicule by the members opposite and one on this side, and finally I remember the then Minister of Health getting up and saying they had discovered a typographical error amounting to ten thousand dollars in that particular item. In other words, it was not $37,000 but $27,000. I do hope the Honourable Minister will not allow any typographical error like that to slip into the bookkeeping of the General Hospital nor any other department.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I am looking at the vote for the General Hospital in 1952-53 amounting to $1,100,000, and the vote this year is $1,800,000. Can the Minister give us any idea why the vote has gone up so high?

MR. FORSEY: Because there is a different accounting proceeding being carried on, board and lodging is included and shows up in the revenue so that the net possibly will be the same, apart from the increases to the civil servants, which they got this year.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I just want to make an observation about the General Hospital. I was at the General Hospital on Sunday. At the emergency entrance I saw a man being brought in unconscious. He looked to me like a man either dead or dying, and we tried to telephone outside for the police to come and investigate the case and could not get any answer from the switchboard. Both I, and the police that came there afterwards, had to go over to the Old Ladies Home across the street and phone from there to get an answer.

MR. FORSEY: The girl was suspended this morning. She was caught asleep a couple of nights ago.

MR. BROWNE: It is a very serious thing as there were several emergencies there.

MR. FORSEY: There had been quite a few complaints. But the girl has been suspended.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I had the same thing happen to me when I tried to get through and could not. I got mad and rang the superintendent. I might say it was 1:00 o’clock in the morning and I could not find him, and I had to draw it to the Minister’s attention. The result was that he found out the cause.

MR. BROWN: I think Mr. Chairman item. I notice that some newsman, the Minister might take a little time to explain that half million dollar papers are making inferences from some remark of the Finance Minister in the budget speech that somehow the Government are trying to collect another half million dollars a year by charging board where they did not charge it before, and that there is a net increase of half a million dollars. My understanding of the budget speech as I heard and read it is that the item is a mere bookkeeping transaction. The salaries now include board and lodging, but they are charged with it, so that the net difference is exactly nothing. Would the Honourable Minister explain that?

MR. FORSEY: Prior to this year the people living in these institutions were receiving their board and lodging with no accounting kept of them, and consequently the true picture was not shown. This year we increased the salaries—for instance a person was getting $1,000 and got an increase of ten per cent and is now getting eleven hundred. Then another $360 was tacked on to the salary, which would then read $1,460. But there would be deductions by the Department of Finance of $360. That was merely to show the true picture of the cost of maintaining the various institutions, which was not known before.

MR. SMALLWOOD: A straight matter of accounting and nothing else.

MR. BROWNE: I notice a very substantial amount here for legal fees. That seems to be an enormous amount of money to be paying out for legal fees.
MR. FORSEY: We have passed over some 290,000 old uncollected and uncollectable accounts. As I understand it the amount to come out of that collection is set by the Law Society.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, there is one item there for $840,000, provisions. Is that inclusive of supplies of fresh fish. As you know the fishermen coming down from the Narrows sell their fresh fish for $\frac{2}{3}c., as the case might be, to various firms. I notice the General Hospital has to pay 7c. per lb. for fresh fish. Now the only thing that has to be done with that fish after it is purchased from these fishermen is to put it aboard trucks and bring it to the General Hospital for delivery. If you give them three cents a pound it would mean a difference of four cents, which now goes to some commission merchant at 7c. a lb. That price of course to fishermen would be a Klondike. I suggest these fishermen ought to get together and form some sort of a corporation and tender themselves to the Government for the supplying of fresh fish. The supply is not frozen, it is fresh, just brought to the hospital with the guts out, and the General Hospital, I suppose, uses it right away. It seems to me the price they have to pay is exorbitant i.e., the difference in the price on fresh fish in Steer's Cove and at the General Hospital is from $\frac{2}{3}c. to 3c., which is quite an item.

There are one or two things I would like to refer to on this item. The price of provisions: For instance ham, I notice it was supplied to the General Hospital and the Sanatorium at 8c. per lb. and was later increased to $1.01 per lb., and raw ham was increased from 64c. when they started to 81c. per lb. Then there was bacon. Bacon and ham seem to be the big offenders, bacon, contract price under tender, 55c. and I notice before the end of the tender it went up to 57c. per lb. There were a few more of these things, but I am more interested in the fresh fish and the ham and bacon advances in price to the General Hospital. I am wondering if the Minister could give any explanation for these large increases particularly on ham and bacon and for the difference between the prices for fish paid by the merchants on Water Street, or on Duckworth Street, I think the difference between 7c. a lb. and $\frac{2}{3}c. a lb.?

MR. FORSEY: Well, Mr. Chairman—

HON. S. J. HEFFERTON (Minister of Municipal Affairs and Supply): Mr. Chairman, if the Honourable Leader of the Opposition is prepared to listen to me I will try to give the answer because it came through my department. Take fresh fish: It is quite true the fishermen sells it from the boat and only gets $\frac{2}{3}c. and we pay 7c. because in the first place we ask for tenders and any fishermen or group of fishermen who wanted to do so and were in a position to tender and could guarantee a supply in line with what we wanted, i.e., the variety and the delivery, we were prepared to accept it. Now that is the first thing that comes into consideration not only the price but the delivery and variety, and I think the Minister will bear me out, it is not as satisfactory as a rule to deal with fishermen who have fish today but it would possibly be two or three days more before they can get out again—that is one factor.

Now it seems to me the Honourable Leader of the Opposition has followed very little the market trend particularly in the hog industry during the Conditions have been abnormal. Our tenders when they were accepted, I may say, were on the basis of an escalator clause whereby market conditions governing the price upward and downward (and there have been several instances where they have been downward) were accepted in the tenders during the year. That accounts for the advance in the prices from time to time. For instance, only a few days ago we had a request showing that ham has again gone up. Now we don't accept any request that comes to us from any merchant or anyone else, we check on every possible avenue that we can to ascertain the facts, and more than that, I may say, I keep a very close watch on market conditions, and have been doing so for many years. Only when we are convinced from all available evidence a markup is justified do we permit it. Sometimes too we try to get a reduction when that is possible. I hope I have answered the question.

MR. HOLLETT: I thank the Honourable Minister for a very satisfactory answer. I might also add that the prices for fresh fish except cod are considerably lower than the prices for which it is on sale—roast fish fillets and other types of fish, considerably lower.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, the two last items there seem like a new vote, what is the reason for them?

MR. SMALLWOOD: There is a tendency to have a much greater subdivision of the accounts for the purpose of the estimates year by year, and I think that several of these votes are not new although they appear now for the first time in the estimates as a result of this strong desire on the part of the Treasury to show the estimates in ever greater detail.

MR. FORSEY: Mr. Chairman, last year that would be included under furnishings and equipment.

MR. BROWNE: Is $60,000 a reasonable grant for furniture and equipment.

MR. FORSEY: Yes.

1020 Carried.

1021 Fever Hospital:

MR. BROWN: Have there been any patients in the Fever Hospital during the past year? I understand there are very few cases of infectious diseases.

MR. FORSEY: Yes, there are quite a few patients there all the time. Sometimes during the past year it has been filled. I think we had to use part of it for the overflow of polio patients there one time last summer and last fall.

MR. FORSEY: Has there been any polio cases reported this year, and could you give the number of cases?

MR. FORSEY: I have heard, I think, of three cases lately.

MR. FORSEY: In St. John's?

MR. FORSEY: One in St. John's and two in outlying places, in Grand Falls and around that area.

MR. HOLLETT: I was wondering, Mr. Chairman, if the Fever Hospital is filled practically all the time then $13,000 provisions seems very small. How many patients can that hospital hold?

MR. FORSEY: I would say around thirty.

MR. HOLLETT: I thought it would be more than that—I see.
MR. BROWNE: One other question in regard to polio, Mr. Chairman: I notice the United States Government, I believe, made polio vaccine available to some Canadian hospitals. (I believe the Province of Alberta is interesting in taking it.) Has the Newfoundland Government had the opportunity of doing that?

MR. FORSEY: It is under consideration at the present time.

MR. BROWNE: You have the offer?

MR. FORSEY: Yes.

Item 1021 Carried.

1022 St. John's Sanatorium:

MR. HOLLETT: Would the Minister tell us approximately the number of patients in the sanatorium at the present time?

MR. FORSEY: Six hundred.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, I'm wondering if the Minister would make a statement relative to the success or otherwise of the improved treatment, the new treatments that have been instituted for TB patients—a statement as to whether or not these people are having some measure of success, and then also with regard to the rehabilitation scheme or plans, are they having the desired effect with regard to putting the patients then come out of the sanatorium back into jobs again?

MR. FORSEY: The instance of TB treatment and the various forms of treatment vary and are having a marked effect. As a matter of fact for the first time in our history we now have vacant beds at the sanatorium, whereas three or four years ago we had to have a waiting list as long as your arm. Somebody who wanted to get in would probably have to wait two or three months. Today there are vacant beds.

With regard to rehabilitation; yes we have a lot of rehabilitation and I know quite a number of ex-patients are working with government departments. As a matter of fact in the Department of Supply there are a couple, I believe, and last year an ex-patient held the record for the least number of days on sick leave.

MR. HOLLETT: Is that TB rehabilitation organization under the TB Organization or under the Government?

MR. FORSEY: The Government and the TB Organization work jointly and co-operate in an effort to get individuals placed.

MR. HOLLETT: Who is the person in charge of the work?

MR. FORSEY: Mr. Edgar Howse, former principal of Bishop Feild College.

Item 1022 carried.

1023 West Coast Sanatorium:

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I wonder if the establishment of the sanatorium on the West Coast has been largely responsible for the vacant beds here at the St. John's Sanatorium rather than the new drugs? It has something to do with it, I feel sure. How many beds are there in the West Coast Sanatorium?

MR. FORSEY: Two hundred. It would have an effect of course.

MR. BROWNE: I wonder if the figures are right there then. The cost for the two hundred would be $645,000 and the cost of the six hundred here only $990,000.
MR. FORSEY: The cost of supplies are approximately fifteen to twenty per cent higher in Corner Brook than in St. John's.

MR. HOLLETT: The prices?

MR. FORSEY: Yes.

MR. BROWNE: Who is the doctor in charge of the West Coast Sanatorium?

MR. FORSEY: I don't know his name. He is an English or Irish doctor. I forget which.

MR. HOLLETT: Does the Minister mean that remark about prices to apply to such things as provisions or linens or services, when he says they are fifteen to twenty per cent higher on the West Coast?

MR. FORSEY: Provisions mainly and also general furnishings.

MR. HOLLETT: Is there any explanation for that?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Just that theirs is a richer economy out there.

MR. FORSEY: And you have not the same type of competition you have here in town.

MR. HOLLETT: Will the Honourable the Premier explain what he means by his remark?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No I will not explain it—it is fairly obvious.

MR. HOLLETT: I was of the opinion you could not go other places other than Water Street if you wanted to find a rich economy.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It is rich down there too.

MR. HOLLETT: Is it not a fact it gets richer and richer in Corner Brook, it is all they talk about out there.

MR. SMALLWOOD: See the wages of the wood and pulp and paper. Forty-three millions this year easily. Mr. Chairman, I think the committee might be agreeable to a short recess.

Before you call the recess, Mr. Chairman, I would like to call the attention of the Committee to the presence inside the bar this afternoon of a former district member of the House of Assembly in the person of Mr. Thomas LeFeuvre from the old town of Burin.

Mr. LeFeuvre was elected to be a member of this House from the district of Burin in a by-election that occurred in the year 1911. He was re-elected in a general election in 1913, and sat here for the eight years from 1911 to 1919. In 1919 he did not offer himself as a candidate for re-election.

Mr. LeFeuvre is one of the few remaining old time Tories. He was elected from Burin District as a Tory Member. I believe in those days that district was so strongly Tory that the party of Bond, the Liberal Party, did not even bother to put up a candidate against Mr. LeFeuvre when he ran as the candidate of the Tory Party of that day, under the great Sir Edward, later Lord Morris. It was rather a coincidence that his visit this afternoon coincided with that portion of our proceedings during which the present member for the same district of Burin was, as Minister of Health, piloting the estimates of his department through committee. I am sure that all of us present are delighted to have the presence here of a veteran and a real veteran of the House of Assembly, and I am sure that I speak for both sides of the House when I say that.
MR. HOLLETT: Hear, hear!
Although Mr. Chairman, the Premier spoke for both sides I would like to say a word from this side, because I was born in Burin, and Tom LeFeuvre (Tom I call him, he is young enough yet to be called "Tom")—we think there is nobody else like Tom, never has been and never will be. But I was surprised to learn he was a confirmed Tory, and I think it highly unfair of the Honourable the Premier to call a man that to his face, without his having the privilege to respond.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I did not mean to insult him. I said "An Oldtime Tory"—they were pretty good people.

MR. HOLLETT: Anyway I am very happy to see my old friend "Tom" LeFeuvre here inside the bar. I hope he will be here, if he is a Tory, as the Premier says, representing Burin on that side of the House the next time—after November.

Committee recessed for ten minutes.

1024—Hospital for Mental and Nervous Diseases:

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I wonder if the Honourable Minister would tell us if there is any waiting list for this institution?

MR. FORSEY: There is quite a waiting list. There are six hundred presently there, and according to Canadian standards we should have hospitalized fifteen hundred, so that there must be quite a few around the country.

MR. BROWNE: There are a lot of patients loose then?

MR. FORSEY: Yes.

MR. HOLLETT: In regard to the Mental Hospital I should like to ask a question: Sometime ago, Mr. Chairman, certain people were laid off prior to an inquiry which was held some time ago. Some of these people, I understand, were completely exonerated but have not since been re-instated. As a matter of fact I believe some of them have not been even paid, back pay they are owed. I am quite sure the Minister has some knowledge of that. I have had occasion to go into it, and I wonder if the Minister would care to make a statement in regard to that. There were some 14 people laid off altogether, and some of them were exonerated completely of any charge which had been made. I deem it rather a hardship that these people are not re-instated. It has been over two years now since this happened, and I wonder if the Minister would like to make a statement on it now?

MR. FORSEY: Well, Mr. Chairman, I don't know if any of them were completely exonerated. But there had not been enough against them to warrant court action, but all of them certainly did things they should not have done, and they were unfortunate in that the thing was long drawn out, because in most places they have been replaced by people who have given better service that these people concerned were giving. It would be, I think, just as much a hardship to dismiss the ones that have been hired on and in some cases people who have been dismissed we are trying to place and will place them when the vacancies occur in the various other institutions.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, that has been at least two years ago now, and I am only referring to the charges made against them, and the Royal Commission set up under Mr. Hunt, and I am referring to a few people who were exonerated according to Mr. Hunt and the Royal Commission. It says so in that report, I read that report, the Government tabled it. I wonder if the Government would consider re-instating these people who were exonerated by Mr. Hunt. I am not referring to those with suspicions against them nor unproven charges against them, but I am referring to those who Mr. Hunt said in his opinion were not guilty of any offences.

MR. FORSEY: Mr. Chairman, they were exonerated from law-breaking but not from negligence in the strict legal sense of the term. And surely the Honourable Leader of the Opposition would not have men replace reliable employees presently in the hospital with some who have proven unsatisfactory and did not give good service when at the hospital.

MR. HOLLETT: That is not the point. I agree with you there. If you take on a man or a woman who gives good service surely you will hold on to such a person. But I am thinking of the individuals who are hurt in their minds and would be with regard to charges made against them and who were, as I have said before, completely exonerated by Mr. Hunt and the Royal Commission. I feel quite sure the Government would want to do something about that. It is highly unfair, and I think the Government will admit that the position in which some of these fourteen people have found themselves is largely not through their own fault but rather through the fault of somebody higher up who had apparently neglected to insist upon and enforce proper discipline, I think it is highly unfair that any person exonerated by Mr. Hunt and the Royal Commission should be overlooked and neglected by the Government. I would now make the request that the Government do consider these cases.

MR. FORSEY: They are being considered, Mr. Chairman.

MR. HOLLETT: Thank you very much.

MR. BROWNE: There is a new position, Grade VIII. Who has been appointed to that position?

MR. FORSEY: Dr. Walsh.

MR. BROWNE: He has been there a couple of years?

MR. FORSEY: Yes, but he would be promoted, and there has been a new medical doctor hired on in the institution.

MR. BROWNE: There seems to be other medical men down there, under professional, two directors at $7,000 and four directors at $6,000, do you know these? There is also one director at $4,000? That seems to be a very big staff.

MR. FORSEY: Yes, but still inadequate.

MR. BROWNE: You don't know who they are, do you?

MR. FORSEY: I don't know all their names. I know most of them are living-in on the grounds in there.

MR. BROWNE: There is one matter that I would like to mention, i.e. an item for which there is no vote, and for which there has not been a vote. The Board of Commissioners in Lunacy which was set up under the Public Health and Welfare Act, 1931, carried the legislation for the creation of this board. I know about it because I sat on it about fourteen years, as Chairman. Dr. MacPherson act as secretary and Mr. Roy Mercer had been one of the members. I don't think they ever received any recognition of their services. I know I did not. It seems to me they have to do an enormous job for which they should receive some consideration. I know Dr. MacPherson was most faithful in performance of these duties and was very interested in the welfare of the institution and the people concerned there—I think this matter has been overlooked.

MR. FORSEY: Mr. Chairman, they have never made any request.

MR. BROWNE: Have they not?

MR. FORSEY: No.

Carried.

1026—Gander Hospital.

MR. BROWNE: We often see references in the paper to patients coming out and being treated at Gander Hospital—people coming on planes—do we get anything in grants from anyone else to assist in the running of Gander Hospital?

MR. FORSEY: The air transportation is paid for by the Federal Government.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Does not the Federal Government also maintain a number of beds at the hospitals or pay for a number of beds to be held in reserve for them at the hospital at Gander?

MR. FORSEY: Yes, for the Department of Transport, and also for the professionals and for the residents.

Carried.

1027—Botwood Hospital:

Carried.

1028—Cottage Hospitals and Nursing Stations:

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, have there been many requests from other localities for hospitals?

MR. FORSEY: No the only request I am aware of is from White Bay, but it is intended to extend the hospital at Come-By-Chance and also to build two or three more to take care of the present needs.

MR. BROWNE: Come-By-Chance is very central.

MR. FORSEY: One of the largest hospitals in Newfoundland.

MR. HOLLETT: Has the Government any plans for the erection of any cottage hospitals particularly in the north where there are certain areas inaccessible at the present time?

MR. FORSEY: I am not aware of any, Mr. Chairman, except that I do know the Grenfell Organization are going to extend their services.

MR. BROWNE: I suppose no consideration has been given to the erection of a cottage hospital in Ferryland District—there was some talk of it several years ago.

MR. FORSEY: No.

Carried.

1029—Grants to Non-Government Hospitals:

Carried.

1030—Expansion of Existing Health Services:

MR. FOGWILL: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the Minister now if he would like to make a statement on the extension of existing services and what form it is to take, in the present year?
MR. FORSEY: This is comprised mostly of a Federal Health grant, and will cover all phases of health in Newfoundland, and will represent extra machinery, polio grants, hospital beds and everything, covering several aspects of health.

Carried.

1031—Geriatric Centre:

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, where is the Geriatric Centre?

MR. FORSEY: In the Orthopaedic Hospital.

MR. BROWNE: Would the Minister say what it means?

MR. FORSEY: The chronically ill, senile people—for diseases of the aged.

Carried.

Department of Public Welfare XI:

1101—Minister’s Office—Carried.

1102—General Office:

MR. BROWNE: Who is the Assistant-Deputy Minister? I notice four new positions there and an increase in the vote of seventeen thousand.

HON. DR. H. L. POTTLE (Minister of Public Welfare): Mr. Stewart Godfrey, Mr. Chairman, is the assistant-deputy minister. There are four increases (1) an officer Grade V being a person who has lately graduated from the school of Social Work and has had much experience in our public welfare work and is attached presently to the City Welfare Office, but is on the general office staff. (2) The increase in the officer Grade III category is due to a transfer from the Department of Health, in as much as we have taken over the transportation of indigent people from various parts of the province to St. John’s for various forms of treatment. The new Grade III officer there has been set up for a special review of records of statutory allowances so that there will be less overpayments and stricter administration and control. There is also a shorthand-typist who was transferred from 1109, Public Assistance, which is unchanged. In the meantime we have integrated that division with the Division of Mothers’ and Dependents’ Allowances.

MR. HOLLETT: What are the functions of an Officer Grade I, $1,200-$1,500, what is the work involved?

DR. POTTLE: That would be a doorman, Mr. Chairman.

Carried.

1103 Accounting Officer: Carried.

1104—Registry:

DR. POTTLE: Mr. Chairman, that is a joint service operated with the Department of Health. In other words this registry serves both departments. It might be of interest to learn that the department carries now no less than one hundred thousand files for the purpose of records. Honourable members should note that the figures for 1953-54 column should be corrected as follows: Disregard the figures there, or take them as I read them from the top down they should read, 1-2-2-5-2-1-1-1.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, if that is so, as I read them, that means two officers both at $6,710.

DR. POTTLE: Mr. Chairman, that will be adjusted accordingly. The figures I read are last year’s figures, and I just read them for the record.
MR. HOLLETT: What is the discrepancy there?

DR. POTTLE: There is no discrepancy, Mr. Chairman, because the salaries have been stepped up since last year, and some posts are not always filled. I read the figures, and believe they are correct. 1-2-2-5-2-1-1-1.

MR. HOLLETT: It would appear then as five officers, Grade II, at $1,500—that makes it worse.

DR. POTTLE: It might make it worse as far as the figures we have here are concerned, but the estimates have been revised for promotions within the service.

Carried.

1106—Regional Welfare Services:

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, could the Minister tell us where these welfare officers are located?

DR. POTTLE: Mr. Chairman, we have a strength of about seventy welfare officers in all for the province of Newfoundland including Labrador. These are in forty-nine different regional welfare centres where there are either one, two or three welfare officers each, depending on the concentration of the population and upon the spread of the districts. In St. John's, which is obviously the largest, we have a superintendent, a supervisor and twelve welfare officers and in addition a clerical staff.

MR. BROWNE: Maybe the Minister may now tell us the report from one welfare officer.

DR. POTTLE: Mr. Chairman, I rise to a point of order—I shall have no further reference to that matter in this House. I shall ask for a ruling immediately, without any further reference. I would like the support of this House.

MR. BROWNE: I would like to tell the Minister what I referred to.

MR. CHAIRMAN: I did not get the gist of what was being said, but if the reference is what I think it would be, it might be better if—

MR. BROWNE: I might restate my question then, Mr. Chairman, as it might clear up the objection. In the course of a previous speech the Minister referred to "unfinished business" and referred in one place to where he had received a report from a welfare officer.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The point of order the honourable gentleman knows. And no one knows more completely than he does that it is completely out of order for him to refer in this debate to anything said in a previous debate in the present session. He knows he is out of order, Mr. Chairman, and Your Honour ought to rule him out of order even before he gets the words half through his teeth.

DR. POTTLE: Not another word, Sir, I ask.

MR. CHAIRMAN: If the honourable members will just consider my position for a moment. As every honourable member knows, there should be no reference to a previous debate. That is a very old and well-established parliamentary rule. Furthermore if the honourable member is making a reference to a report of a welfare officer, which may possibly have some reference to a matter which may come before the Courts, I do rule it is out of order altogether, and I would suggest that the committee not lose its sense of proportion.
DR. POTTLE: There is no sense of proportion being lost from this side.

MR. CHAIRMAN: There is nothing personal in any of my remarks.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, I accept your ruling, but I do think they will have to be very careful.

MR. CHAIRMAN: That is just what the Chair said.

MR. HOLLETT: I think you will have to be very careful about how far you are going to go in respect of freedom of speech in this House.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, to a point of order—is the honourable gentleman in order now in debating your Honours' ruling? Can he go on expressing his opinion on it and drawing inferences from it? Is he in order? May we now have a debate on Your Honour's ruling?

MR. CHAIRMAN: No.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Then as the Honourable Leader of the Opposition has begun a debate—

MR. CHAIRMAN: I would suggest to the committee—

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, I am not going to be ordered by anyone on the opposite side. I am not going to be bawled at by any person on the other side of the House.

MR. CHAIRMAN: I suggest we consider now the estimates, the salaries and various welfare officers.

DR. POTTLE: Mr. Chairman, as a Minister of the Crown, I am saying here, now, there will be no reference to this matter—the estimates stop right at this point unless I can be assured.

MR. CHAIRMAN: We are considering now the estimate of salaries.

DR. POTTLE: Mr. Chairman, there are again here a series of typographical errors which I should like honourable members to take notice of so they will have it for their permanent records. The figures should read, on the left-hand column: 1-1-1-1-6-1. The side note in brackets is a reference to a welfare officer at Corner Brook who is being transferred from the constabulary and remains at his former rate of pay.

MR. BROWNE: Where are the officers on the higher scale located?

DR. POTTLE: That provides for supervisors of welfare workers, that list we have not been able to fill thus far. Last year we sent two people to the University of Toronto for training, which, in addition to the work we had already been able to do, would, we thought, qualify them for this larger rank, so that we have two or possibly three people who are qualified for that rank. Now we propose to send two others this fall to the same institution in order that they may be so qualified. At the present time all the offices in that rank have not been filled, but there are supervisors.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, would the Minister tell me how many welfare officers there are for Placentia East District?

DR. POTTLE: As a rule, Mr. Chairman, (and I should have said that at the beginning) welfare officers' districts do not coincide with electoral districts. They sometimes overlap. I cannot say at the moment how many correspond to Placentia.

HON. G. POWER (Minister of Finance) : I would say that probably in Placentia District, Placentia East, there are two welfare officers. One whose territory comes into Placentia East on the north side and also has, I think, something to do with Placentia West on the other side of the bay, but all told there are two operating.

MR. HOLLETT : In reference to that amount of $1,100, what is that?

DR. POTTLE : That is an allowance for living on the Labrador, hard-living allowance.

DR. ROWE : Perhaps, if the Honourable Minister would allow, some three years ago the department experienced considerable difficulty in recruiting staff for Labrador, and the Government decided to give what is called technically a hard living allowance to these welfare officers who went to Labrador. That, incidentally corresponds with Federal policy towards the RCMP and other Federal organizations in all northern territories.

Carried.

1107—Mothers' and Dependents' Allowances:

MR. FOGWILL : Mr. Chairman, would the Minister inform the committee of the number of persons receiving allowances under both these headings?

DR. POTTLE : The figures change from month to month—take at the end of February, for instance, at the end of this year, figures will not vary very much. There were 3,031 Mothers' Allowances broken down into various classifications—if the honourable member wishes these? I think I should draw attention to one classification which is very significant, i.e. the number of mothers with incapacitated husbands, which is practically one half of that total number. Mothers with incapacitated husbands make up the largest single quantity of Mothers' Allowances received. If the honourable member wishes to study the matter as a whole I should be glad to give it to him. Now for the same months for dependents' allowances there are 903.

MR. HOLLETT : I expect this is the last time they will appear in this form now that the new Act has been passed.

DR. POTTLE : The Honourable Leader of the Opposition raises a good point, Sir. They will stay in this form until the Social Assistance Act is passed and has become law, and comes into operation because we don't want any suspension of payments. Consequently the Mothers' Allowances and Dependents' Allowances may have to stay on the books for a while until the Social Assistance Act really gets into operation, but as soon as it does then these allowances as such will disappear, and they will fall into one category under the general heading of Social Assistance.

Carried.

1108—Child Welfare:

MR. BROWNE : Main theme of Children $125,000—are these children kept in foster homes?

DR. POTTLE : That vote, Sir, is to take care of foster children who are described as families. There are 511 children in foster homes receiving rates such as I described to the House recently in answer to a question. There are forty-seven children receiving allowances through the Public...
Welfare Department in the denominational and other orphanages. There are 558 children receiving foster family allowances; 511 in foster homes and 47 in orphanages.

MR. BROWNE: On that vote for handicapped—are they blind or deaf and dumb?

DR. POTTLE: Mr. Chairman, there are both blind and deaf mutes there, 88 of them in all; 39 who are taken care of at Halifax Institute for the Blind and 31 in the Halifax Institution for the deaf mute, and 28 at the McKay School for the deaf and dumb in Montreal; 88 in all.

Carried.

MR. HOLLETT: May I ask, Mr. Chairman, what steps are taken for the education of these children—do they go to school in the institution or what?

DR. POTTLE: Well the children's education and maintenance are taken care of in each institution where they are boarded at the Government's expense. The cost per child is roughly $1,000 a year, and this vote will have to be increased in the course of the years in order to take care of the total number we have under consideration, which we believe, Sir, is the total population of children who need that kind of help.

MR. FOGWILL: Mr. Chairman, with respect to handicapped children I would like the Minister to inform the committee; when they have completed their education and have been fitted to take their place amongst the civil population, is it correct to say that quite a number of them are able to earn their own living?

DR. POTTLE: I could not answer the honourable member from the point of view of percentages, Sir, because I do not know that, but a number of them have; an encouraging number of them have found their way into positions where they can earn their own living; with the help mainly of the Canadian Institute for the Blind, and our own division does an excellent piece of work in that respect. Now I may say this work has been going on with children, and it takes about nine or ten years for a child who has been taken up, say at six years of age, before that child should normally begin to work. These children require anywhere up to nine or ten years training, and consequently we have not been at it long enough, shall I say, to grow an adult population. But those who were taken in somewhat later along the line and have become adults, a number of them have gone into the society and are earning their own living or partly their own living. But it is not an easy row to hoe. It is hard enough for a young man or woman in this competitive society to find his way, but it is even more so with regard to any person who is handicapped. But I may say the attitudes of society are much better in this respect because of the great weight of support brought to bear on their behalf by private societies together with what we have been able to do by way of financial assistance, and in that way a great deal of good has been done.

MR. FOGWILL: When I raise the point, I am personally acquainted with several deaf-mutes who have developed into good citizens, which takes a lot of courage. Quite a few of them are earning their own living today, some of them in shoe-repair departments.

Carried.
MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, could the Minister tell me if any of these officers are connected with the regional welfare services in St. John's, or where they are located?

DR. POTTLE: Sir, the Officer, Grade VII post has been abolished, or shall we say, at least it is not filled. That post was held by Mr. Taylor and it was abolished on paper at least as a result of his going into the Civil Service Commission, and also because we had it in mind, as the House well knows, to integrate some of our allowances into a general scheme. I should like here to pay a tribute to the services of Mr. Taylor who along with Mr. Jardine was one of the chartered members in the sense of the old Public Health and Welfare Department, and gave his services very generously and very faithfully in a very difficult post, the post of relief. He had to carry on the service in many lean and hungry years, and it was not always a "thank-you" job to administer relief in those days. But, as I say, Mr. Taylor did an excellent job. I should like here also to pay tribute to the senior officers, Mr. Jerry Power, Grade V, under Mr. Jardine and the next officer Grade IV, Mr. Slade.

One typist was transferred to the general office, and that makes a total of a reduction of two in the staff.

MR. BROWNE: Could the Minister tell us how the situation in as far as able-bodied relief is at the present time, the report on unemployment? Is there a great deal of unemployment?

DR. POTTLE: I can only speak again generally, because the reports are always late in being tabulated at departmental headquarters. But the amounts for relief have been going up, as they do during the winter months, and they did take a precipitous rise somewhere between December and March, but we expect that rate will begin to fall, and there has already been an indication in that direction.

MR. HOLLETT: Would the Minister be able to tell us how much was paid out?

DR. POTTLE: $422,000, Sir.

MR. HOLLETT: Do you think $350,000 will be sufficient for this year?

MR. SMALLWOOD: This is to be a much better year than last.

MR. BROWNE: What are the reasons for that?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mainly the fisheries. A couple of thousand men will be fishing this year who were not fishing last year; prices will be quite a bit better this year than last year.

MR. HOLLETT: That is a statement such as we all love to hear. We would like for the Honourable the Premier to give an extensive statement on that—our fishermen today need all the encouragement they can get, and in fact can be given to indicate the price of fish will be much better than last year, I would love to hear the Premier.

MR. SMALLWOOD: And if I were wrong the honourable gentleman would benefit from it in November.

MR. HOLLETT: I can't see how anybody could benefit from that.

1110—Old Age and Blind Persons' Allowances:
1392

HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY PROCEEDINGS

DR. POTTLE : May I say for the information of the committee that there are 5,124 persons on old age pensions and 336 on blind pensions.
MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Ohairman, there is a most astonishing con•trast ,in that matter between today and the days before we became a Province of Canada. There were 2,999, exactly one person •b elow three thousand who were in receipt of old age pensions, and the ·total amount was one quarter of a million dollars, speaking £rom memory, the total amount paid out per year was a quarter of a million dollars, $250,000.
Now we find, according to ,the Minister, 5,124 between the ages of sixtyfive and seventy, but not reaching the age of seventy, receive a total of two million dollars or 1.9 million dolla·rs. Then in addition, according to Federal figures the number receiving old age pensions is twelve 1housand, (I think it is twelve thousand) or I am told it is fift,een thousand.
That is twenty t:housand old persons and a total of nine million dollars against something under a quarter of a million. That is an almost unbelievable contrast, an almost incredible improvement in the status of thousands of us who have reached the age of six•ty-fJve and are in need, and aU of us who have reached the age of seventy whether in need or not. lt .is an astonishing, and, altogether astonishing improvement. It is that and many things like it which make thousands of us who fought for Confederation feel ve,ry humble and very grateful to God that we saw the light. It makes us very thankful to God that we saw the light and saw our great dream of making Newfoundland a Province of Canada come true.
H is rh'is £or which I firmly beUeve tfalt hundreds of thousands of Newfoundlanders in Heaven must ,h ave been praying for us while the Confederation campaign was on. It was a great thing. Even the humblest Newfoundlander, the most unimportant Newfoundlander in the most unimportant little cov,e in the most unimportant little bay who voted for Confederation did more for his native Newfoundland just by voting for Confederation in the referendum than four-fifths of the public men who have become famous, have done for the common people of Newfoundland, the ordinary people of Newfoundland;

by just voting for Confederation-this alone is evidence of that.
MR. BROWNE :
Mr. Chairman,
every time Lhe Premier gets an opportunity he wishes to rub in about the patriotic spirit of the people who votetl. for Confederation. Well, there is another side to it. He makes this statement, but he knows ·h e does not want to go into it, or enter into a debate on that sll'bject~it is a wonderful thing the p,eople are getting these old age pensions-but he knows too that i[ another govl!nm1t:nt had carried on they would not have allowed the old age pensions to remain at the figure they were; they could not do it. The trend all over the world is toward security, every country has it and not only in the past few years even in Canada the United States, and in England. So that there is another sid,e to it, and I do not think he is justified in making the accusation that he does about the incompetency and lack of patriotism of those who did not support his campaign.

llll-Home for the Aged and Infirm:
MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I wonder if the Minister could tell me how many inmates there are in the poor asylum at the present time?


DR. POTTLÉ: There are 118.

MR. BROWNE: Can the Minister tell me how many people are eligible for the home for the aged and infirm and are located in boarding houses outside the city?

DR. POTTLÉ: I am not sure whether the question is asked in the right form. That information I might say was given in answer to a question asked by the honourable member for St. John’s West on May 18, and a copy of the full answer has been given the Opposition Members who have all this information.

MR. FOGWILL: Yes, I have the answer.

DR. POTTLÉ: The Government has been very, very concerned over this whole question of proper care of the aged and infirm, and we are hoping to make a substantial move forward this year towards improving these facilities and provide better care. I would say anything that is done or any improvements made by the public at large either through denominational effort or any other private source is good news indeed for the aged and infirm in Newfoundland. This problem along with the problem of the care of the mentally defective is one of the primary social and humane problems we have to concern ourselves with in Newfoundland. So I say we in this Government are very much heartened by the moves which are being made in the communities at large towards improved care for these very needy people.

MR. SMALLWOOD: May I add to what my colleague has said my own personal feeling of satisfaction that we have in our midst an ecclesiastical statesman who, if I may say it without being misunderstood or being offensive, is a second statesman in Newfoundland today; one a political statesman; and one ecclesiastic statesman deeply concerned in these matters of social welfare. Thanks to the great energy and great vision of the reverend gentleman to whom I have referred at this moment, this community is shortly to have not one but several institutions engaging in the work which to my honourable friends and my own belief is a great labour of love, and to the reverend gentleman to whom I refer it is, I happen to know, also a matter of a great labour of love.

A government after all only provides those social institutions because and only when others fail to do so. There was a time when the only hope you had of getting an education was from or in a school provided by a church; the only alms you got were the alms provided by a church; the only recreation you got or entertainment you had, the facilities were provided by a church; and the only succor in old age or in great infirmity was what you got from a church. Now that disappeared to an enormous extent, leaving it to the state almost entirely to provide these things for the people who needed them. To see churches re-admit, re-accept their responsibility is a satisfactory experience, and we in this country have seen in the past year or so a most definite trend in that direction. For one I will commend it. I feel that all of us in this House, on both sides, will commend that trend and welcome that move. I believe that the Treasury, the Government, will be asked to assist in that good work, and I am sure that the whole House would wish, if, as and when we are asked, that we would accede to all reasonable requests for help from the public funds for work of that character carried on by religious bodies of whatever denomination they may be, and on equal terms as between one religious body and another.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I am sure we all appreciate the words the Premier has said about the movement instituted by His Grace the Archbishop for the erection of a home for the aged and infirm which will accommodate about one hundred and sixty people and cost about one half million dollars. His Grace has the support of the Catholic Community in all his social efforts. About three hundred thousand dollars have been collected towards the project. For those who are familiar with the conditions under which those people are presently living I think it will be good news because the institution as comprised will give them every care and every comfort and place them on a scale far better than what they are receiving at the present time either at the Home for the Aged and Infirm or any of the other institutions.

DR. POTTLE: In the meantime we are carrying on as well as we can in a very outmoded setting. The institution is no credit to any administration. The question is when will its turn come? We hope it has come now. In the meantime we are trying to extend our staff here, and I would like to record two things (1) my tribute to the staff who have carried on in such circumstances for their energy and their devotion to their work. The staff of the infirmary are wonderful people, and they deserve the tribute of this House which I am trying to express now. The second thing I would like to say is that we have been very encouraged also by the support of the various bodies such as Rotary, the Civil Service Association and the Newfoundland Government Employees Association and other groups as well who from time to time, in season and out of season throughout the year, have made the lives of these inmates more comfortable and enjoyable than they otherwise might have been. I should like to pay this tribute, Sir, both to the staff and to the community who have expressed their beliefs in such encouraging and useful ways.

1112—Infants Home:

MR. BROWNE: I believe, Mr. Chairman, these are all covered by salary increases as given before?

Carried.

1113—Boys' Home and Training School:

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Chairman, I don't know if the Minister intends to mention it, but he ought to say that every Newfoundlander who visited the new Boys' Home and Training School at Whitbourne is just bursting with pride in its magnificence. Every such Newfoundlander just puffs his chest out with satisfaction and pride. It is splendid; a beautiful building. The grounds are beautiful and the work that is being done is excellent. If he builds no other monument than that one, he, the present Minister of Welfare, has built that monument to his name.

MR. BROWNE: How many boys are in there now?

DR. POTTLE: There are accommodations, Mr. Chairman, for forty
MR. BROWNE: Of what ages?

DR. POTTLE: Eleven and twelve to seventeen. They go on beyond seventeen up to eighteen and nineteen. The average age is fourteen plus.

MR. BROWNE: How long are they kept there?

DR. POTTLE: That depends on individual progress. Sometimes the institution finds it is not the place for the boy at all.

MR. BROWNE: Who is the man in charge?

DR. POTTLE: Mr. Johnson Brown and Mrs. MacCormack.

MR. FOGWILL: It must have a very efficient staff?

DR. POTTLE: They are a good working team. I may say in addition to the training which we may think of, say, as academic, it takes various forms, farm training, leather work, wood work, hobby shop and photography which we are introducing shortly. The report, which is extensive, is now in the course of preparation and should shortly be released, in which case honourable members will have a chance to see the whole picture. I may say they have 93 hens and produced 1,075 dozen eggs last year, and 375 barrels of potatoes, 25 tons of hay, cabbage, carrots, and other crops. I may say we have just settled in there and are trying to get maximum results from the facilities we have there.

MR. BROWNE: Is it located on Sir Robert Bond’s Estate?

DR. ROWE: I think the Minister has been almost a little over modest in describing what is happening out there. I feel about it myself very deeply because I was the lucky, and I say “lucky” individual selected by the Government to take over that estate from Bond and also the Minister who selected the site out there on which the school is built. In my opinion, the training these lads are getting out there, while some of it may fall on barren ground, in general, the training these boys get on that beautiful estate, working in the fields, raising livestock and with recreations which are almost ideal, and the training, many of these unfortunate boys get if not the best is certainly amongst the best in all of Canada.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I would suggest that any member of the House on either side who could spare a day should take a drive over to Whitbourne and see that school. On a Sunday a few weeks ago I arrived there just around lunch time. They got up a lunch for me and for my party, four of us, and I believe any member of the House who arrived over there would receive a meal. Unless it is meal time it will probably be a cold one, but it will be a good meal. And I am sure any member of the House would be made welcome and would be shown over the institution. I think every member ought to visit that institution and go through it.

MR. FOGWILL: I would like to ask the Minister how large is the area surrounding the Boys’ Home and Training School? I understand it is quite an area.

MR. SMALLWOOD: About four square miles.

MR. FOGWILL: There is quite a bit of birch on that?
Mr. Smallwood: Some, yes, which is being cut for the plant.

Mr. Smallwood: Mr. Chairman, I move the committee rise and report progress, and beg leave to sit again presently.

On motion the committee rose and reported having passed items 800 through 821, Department of Mines and Resources; under the heading of Public Health all the estimates and under the heading, Public Welfare items 1101 through 1115 inclusive.

Report received. On motion committee ordered sit again presently.

Mr. Speaker: It now being 6:00 of the clock, and the Orders of the Day not being completed I now leave the Chair until 8:00 of the clock.

House recessed until 8:00 P.M.

NIGHT SESSION
June 4, 1954.

The House resumed at 8:00 of the clock.

Mr. Courage (Chairman of Committee): The item that the committee has under consideration is item No. 11, Department of Public Welfare, page 59, item No. 11 to 14.

Mr. Browne: How many girls are in this home?

Dr. Pottle: The number of girls at maximum accommodation is fifteen but the number goes down as far as five and six. The last count they had nine. I may say with regard to this institution that it is a small institution as the vote indicates and has over the years since the institution has been set up taken care of a variety of girls including neglected girls from homes where neglect was established as well as outright delinquent girls. Unfortunately, in a sense therefore, we have had to make the institution house different and somewhat incompatible classes of girls. The numbers have been very small. My own hope would be that we could do without the institution altogether. My own hope would be that until our plans for treating adult women develop we might abolish this home and house our girls in special private homes under special probation care and in the case of the most difficult girls, we may have to find some other means of institutionalization, whether outside of Newfoundland or otherwise. I am not in a position now to say but it is conceivable that if our probation services are well carried out we might be able to do without this institution problem altogether. I would like to think that was so in any case because we are carrying on a fairly heavy overhead for a very few girls. That is my answer.

Mr. Browne: If you did not have the number of girls there, you did not spend all that money.

Mr. Higgins: Might I ask the Minister one question, is there any charge made to the people who go to that home? Is there anything in the way of recovery realized?

Dr. Pottle: Normally no, although provisions are made in the Act for parents to make contributions. As our financial records show, we did take in a considerable sum from the parents of children committed to us.

Mr. Fogwill: Who is the officer in charge of these girls?

Dr. Pottle: The officer in charge is Miss Rendell.
MR. FOGWILL: How long has she been in charge?

DR. POTTLE: She was the Assistant before the Superintendent left. Miss Murphy is now in the States.

MR. FOGWILL: Miss Murphy was a very suitable person.

DR. POTTLE: Yes.

Items carried.

Item 15 carried.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I hope the Committee has taken notice of the fact that the grant for orphanages has been increased. The rate of the grant has been increased from $12.50 a head to the sum of $15.00. Now I feel that although this is an improvement of $2.50 a person it is not sufficient of an increase and if we come back to the House a year hence asking endorsement of our Act beyond $15.00 I hope we will receive that endorsement.

I can't say, I have not consulted with my colleagues in the matter and I really don't know what will be the reaction but if we do come back a year hence I hope we will have our action approved.

DR. ROWE: I seem to recall that it was increased two years ago.

DR. POTTLE: Yes from $10.00 to $12.00.

MR. BROWNE: There is a matter of family allowances. Have any steps been taken by the Government with the Department of National Health and Welfare to have family allowances instituted?

DR. POTTLE: In common with other provinces we have made representations with the proper authorities about this matter but we cannot advise the Federal Government respecting family allowances which will not regard institutions as parents. We have to go on as we are I am afraid unless there is a concerted effort made by the other provinces to approach the Federal Government. The Federal Government has not yet recognized these institutions as parents and consequently we are in the position of other provinces which operate these institutions.

Item No. 16.

MR. BROWNE: There is a vote of $6,500 for the John Howard Society. I do not think the organization is new. It has come under the Department of Welfare before, has it not? I seem to remember it.

DR. POTTLE: The entire vote described generally as miscellaneous is a very good illustration of the way the Department or the Government relates itself to the efforts of these bodies. If the Government had to carry on these services they would cost a great deal more than these bodies who depend in their several ways on the generosity of the public. The Canadian National Institute for the Blind receives a grant of $15,000.00 annually. We made the grant of $15,000.00 in November and since that vote was set in force we have raised the vote to $20,000.00 and we shall have to ask to raise that amount. The Cowan Mission records our contribution in another field with regard to the care of aged people. Professional training speaks for itself and illustrates our continuous concern in preparing our staff to do a special job here as we go by. The rehabilitation of T.B. persons is another to which we are happy to subscribe $15,000.00. It is a vote for rehabilitation of people who have been discharged from the Sanitorium. There is very lively interest and excellent progress being made to enable these people to come back on their feet in more ways than one.

With regard to the vote which the learned member across the way mentions, the John Howard Society, it enters here for the first time as a separate vote. We have covered it in another way ever since it began. It began under the Department of Public Welfare and came within the jurisdiction of the Department, but our view is that while we started it, or helped to start it, our thought was to move out as fast as possible, as fast as we could from direct involvement in the society and to permit them to go on as if they were on their own. That is easier said than done. This Society works in a public field and it is not easy yet for the public to catch all of this question of rehabilitation of prisoners. They have ample claims made upon them and it is one of the liveliest societies we have. Up until this year we provided from our own Welfare Officers the executive officer of the Society. We gave them Mr. Arthur Hurley as executive officer of that organization.

We also provided the Society with rent free rooms on Duckworth Street in our Family Court, City Welfare building. We gave them also a grant of one thousand dollars which they will use for the rehabilitation of prisoners. The time came when they felt they should be given a little more independence and if they were given a vote to hire their own man and go their own way it would leave them free to develop their own organization a little more independently of government fostering. We were glad to do that. The vote now appears for the first time in the estimates.

MR. BROWNE: Has the Minister got anything to say how it is getting on?

DR. POTTLE: I thought I already indicated. The report of the Society is published in the press and it is not over optimistic to say they are doing a most constructive job in a difficult field.

Item 1119:

MR. HOLLETT: What was the revenue for those affairs?

DR. POTTLE: See Rentals and Revenue.

MR. HOLLETT: It states $365,000.00.

DR. POTTLE: This is the first full year we have tried this and the difficulties have been worked out, so we are trying to operate—

MR. HOLLETT: Film, radio and library have been cut out. Does it come under some vote?

DR. ROWE: A word of explanation will be in order. I happen to know that the Department of Education, through the Audio Visual Division, is doing a very splendid service on the Labrador with these films and it would seem that this cutting out of films from the Department of Welfare is based on the fact that Education is doing a good job. I would take this opportunity as the Member for Labrador District to express my appreciation to the Department of Welfare generally and the Department of Labrador Affairs in particular for services they are giving to the people who occupy that tremendous stretch of coast on the Labrador. During the last half hour I have looked at the books in the library, books provided for our own Eskimo people and I could not help but recognize the neglect among these Eskimo people and the general care and service we are giving our people in the northern part of Labrador.

MR. BROWNE: I wonder is the Federal Government taking full responsibility for the Indian population on Labrador?

DR. POTTLE: We face an unusual problem in regard to the Indian population. It is an unfortunate one. On the Mainland the Indians are wards of the Government and here they are full fledged settlements and as the member for the District has indicated on other occasions, their welfare is being at least reasonably well taken care of and this is an undertaking of the local authorities. I had intended to say and occasion now arises, that in the Department of Public Welfare we are merely the pools of information from the various parts, so it is not one Department working, it is one Department focusing the efforts of a number of Departments. We have five at least concerned and we have a capable committee of Ministers who are continuously watching the development of Labrador settlements. Two or three or four features I should mention on that point. First with regard to supplies to the different depots, we have the stock, we have better stock there now than ever before both with regard to variety and volume. The volume of stock supplied to Labrador depots has doubled since 1939. While up to this very year the Government has been in the shipping and transportation business in the Northern Labrador, I would say no to permanently carrying on in this manner because we are not qualified to do so. This year the C.N.R. has taken over the whole transportation service for Northern Labrador Area, and details have been worked out and the whole scheme will get into operation this year.

Now there is another point I wish to make: This year, also beginning April 1, the Government of Canada will undertake a ten year general health rehabilitation programme in Northern Labrador, not least of all for Indians, who are most susceptible to diseases but including Indians and Eskimos, and conduct a particularly vigorous anti-TB campaign, and a general health programme, which will be the first comprehensive step towards rehabilitation. Another point is that the Government of Canada, up to a limit of two hundred thousand dollars, will share the expenditure on health, welfare and education as to capital investment down there such as schools, nursing stations, and the like. The Government of Canada is subscribing two-thirds and we one-third. I mention this as an indication of the continued interest we have in that very considerable section of our province.

I just have one more comment to make, Sir, and that is as to where it looks on the surface as though there had been a very considerable increase, i.e. an increase of staff from 16 to one of 25. That is now shown here for the first time. Hitherto it was shown in a block vote for Labrador, and the details had not been shown.

1120—Corrections:
MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, where is this carried on, in institutions?

DR. POTTLÉ: Mr. Chairman, there is a Director of Corrections. I gave the honourable member the information but I shall have to refresh his memory again: The Director of Corrections is Oliver J. Walling of the University of British Columbia who was recommended highly to us by a person who knew our situation at first hand, and he is doing a very fine piece of work with us not only in collaboration with the Attorney General but also in the community. The idea there Sir; the Director of Corrections takes his authority from an Act of the Legislature, i.e. the Corrections Act; the division is set up within the Department of Public Welfare, but his business is, amongst other things, to assist in the proper training of children who have been committed to the training schools, so that the training schools come under his notice. He also has to have special regard for the training and rehabilitation of adult offenders, so that he works in very close co-operation with the institutions for adult offenders and acts as a liaison officer between us in this field and the Department of the Attorney General. The prevention of crime and delinquency falls under his direction also. There is a correction to be made in the second line. It should be Officer Grade IV and not Grade V.

Board of Liquor Control, XII:

1201—Administration: Carried.

1202—General Office.

MR. BROWNE: Is that the normal increase there? Is there anything special?

MR. POWER: No, it would be in line with the increase given in those grades, Sir.

Carried.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the Minister why the Board of Liquor Control does not engage more staff at times like Christmas, just take on a temporary staff. I have myself gone to the controllers sometimes and have seen a line-up there, and one has to wait hours before getting served. I wonder would it be a reasonable suggestion to make, to suggest that the Board take on more staff at these particular times.

MR. POWER: Well, we considered that many times. But the difficulty is, that, if you take on extra staff at Christmas you must have trained staff, and they are not easy to get for a temporary staff. We would certainly have to keep them on once we have them at all for twelve months. Apart from special seasons such as Christmas and Easter there would be very little for them to do. The staff there now is sufficient for the normal work, and people should get there a little earlier around Christmas time.

MR. HIGGINS: Mr. Chairman, I take it this Director Grade II is the General Manager?

MR. POWER: That is Mr. French, yes.

MR. HIGGINS: I notice this year he has had a healthy increase in salary, but I notice he is amongst the very lowest directors. He is a man who to my knowledge is a very competent person, and has been in that particular job for a good many years. Is that as high as he can go in the service? Can he move up to Grade III or anything else? Is that the maximum for him after all these years?

MR. POWER: No. Mr. French was getting, I think, when he was there $4,600 a year, and since then he has been raised to $5,300. I think that is the top of the scale. I agree with the honourable member for St. John's East, Mr. French is a very excellent man. When I went to the Board of Liquor Control I found that the administration there was excellent, and he was responsible for setting it up.

MR. HIGGINS: Would the Minister perhaps give some consideration to Mr. French's future?

MR. POWER: I will.

MR. HIGGINS: Thank you!

1203—Sales and Miscellaneous:

MR. HOLLETT: Under this item, could the Minister explain the distribution of beer through the country. There are agents in various part of the country who distribute the beer, I have been told. I wonder would the Minister explain just how it happens?

MR. POWER: Up to last year the brewers appointed their own agents all over the country. We decided to change that because it would give us more control over the item. So that now they have probably a couple of hundred agents operating all over the country, and these agents are responsible for their conduct to the Board of Liquor Control now rather than to the brewers. The imported beer is sold directly by the Board to the agents. Two agents of mainland breweries are on the Board and they sell to the Board without any in between and the Board sells to the public without any in between.

MR. BROWNE: I notice here an item for extra assistance, $27,000. Is that seasonal assistance or what?

MR. POWER: During the rush season we sometimes have to take on additional help, temporary workers, trucking too.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the Minister, there is a Trade Commissioner visiting now Portugal and Spain—we used to get a great deal of Spanish wine, I know, and still get some. Would it be possible to include in the purchases we make abroad an order for Spanish and Portuguese wines and spirits?

MR. POWER: Well, the famous Newman Wine is Portuguese Wine, and I think that is the biggest seller by far of any European wine.

MR. BROWNE: If it were made a little cheaper, there would be more of it used.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Who wants more of it used?

MR. BROWNE: Wine is not as intoxicating.

Department of Municipal Affairs & Supply, XIII:

1301—Minister's Office:

MR. BROWNE: I wonder, Mr. Chairman, if this would be the proper place to raise the question of a problem that exists at Jerseyside Placentia between a person who has a home in the vicinity of Larkins Pond—is there any way of getting these councils to come together periodically, the Placentia, Jerseyside and Freshwater Councils, in order to solve any problems like the one I mentioned.
MR. HEFFERTON : Mr. Chairman, that does not come under 1301. I cannot give any answer to that except the answer I gave some time ago. The matter is under consideration and for the moment we are held up by the matter of compensation for the property.

Carried.

1302—General Office:

MR. BROWNE : There is a new appointment there?

MR. HEFFERTON : That has not yet been made. It is under consideration.

MR. BROWNE : Has the work of the department decreased with the removal of the price control?

MR. HEFFERTON : The removal of the price control has not made very much difference because other factors have taken up the slack caused by the removal of price control.

1311—Municipal Affairs Administration:

1312—Local Government Affairs:

MR. HOLLETT : Mr. Chairman, I see an item there (03) Plebiscites, $500. I wonder if the Minister would inform us under what particular clause of the Act was the plebiscite ordered in Bonavista Area relative to the town council there?

MR. HEFFERTON : Under the Election Act, I believe, Mr. Chairman.

MR. HOLLETT : Which Election Act?

MR. HEFFERTON : The General Election Act.

MR. HOLLETT : Is there provision for it in the Election Act? Provision for holding plebiscites under town councils?

MR. HEFFERTON : Maybe.

MR. HOLLETT : I wonder if the Minister would tell me what section?

MR. HEFFERTON : No, Mr. Chairman, I cannot. I may say under the Election Act a plebiscite may be held for any particular purpose.

MR. HOLLETT : I am referring to the plebiscite held in Bonavista last year. Would the Minister be able to say on whose advice it was ordered and the reason for it?

MR. SMALLWOOD : Under my advice.

MR. HOLLETT : I was asking the Minister but the Honourable the Premier answered. Perhaps the Premier would tell me under what particular section it comes? Or under what particular section of the Act the advice was given?

MR. SMALLWOOD : Any council created by fraud, yes.

MR. HOLLETT : Is that an admission that the one in Bonavista was created by fraud?

MR. SMALLWOOD : It is not an admission. It is an assertion.

MR. HOLLETT : That it was created by fraud under Government supervision?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Exactly, precisely, indubitably.

MR. HOLLETT: Well, I won't have anything more to say. If it was created by fraud under the supervision of the Government I don't need to say anything more.

MR. BROWNE: You would not wish to elaborate, I presume?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No—I would not wish.

MR. HOLLETT: Had there been a promise made to the people?

MR. SMALLWOOD: The promise was made after the matter was discussed in Cabinet.

MR. HOLLETT: I put it to the Honourable the Premier that the matter was raised during the Federal election.

MR. SMALLWOOD: At least eighteen months prior to when the announcement of the plebiscite was made. Prior to the election and during the election both.

MR. HOLLETT: Why was not that announcement made eighteen months before?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Because we took time to consider and investigate.

MR. HOLLETT: I see it was purely coincidental.

MR. SMALLWOOD: More or less. Timing is always important.

Carried.

1315—Price Control: No vote.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, is there a rent control now? I don't see any vote.

MR. HEFFERTON: No. Rent control has gone out and has been transferred to housing.

MR. HIGGINS: Would the Minister, Mr. Chairman, break down this remuneration to the rent board. Is that one, two or three persons?

MR. HEFFERTON: There are more than one person on the rent control apart from civil servants. There is the chairman plus one or two members, it may vary. At the present time, I believe, there is only one. The chairman, I believe, received $1,500 and members $1,200.

1315—Housing:

MR. BROWNE: There are a number of new votes here. Housing Director Grade I, $4,900, etc. In all the vote has increased from $32,000 to $88,000. I wonder would the Minister explain the reason for the large increase there?

MR. HEFFERTON: First of all there is the director who is the person in charge of the price and rent control boards. Officer Grade V is the accountant in our office. Houses and Subsidies: $17,500 represents the part we pay for subsidized rentals of which we have roughly 340 at Westmount and 145 at Empire Avenue.

We have a sort of arrangement with the Municipal Council whereby we have at the present time a staff of three planners and two assistants, and we have given a vote of $15,000 towards that. The amount of $26,000 is explained by the fact that when the St. John's Housing Corporation started, the St. John's City Council voted and invested, I believe, one million dollars in the project, and sold a bond issue for that amount. Within recent years the Government has taken over that part of the City Bond Issue because the city has given up its interest in the corporation as such. That amount of $26,000 there is our payment against all that bond issue. Interest, Co-operative Housing $6,000—of course these are the various payments made.

MR. HIGGINS: Mr. Chairman, if the Minister would allow me to revert to Municipal Planning? I think it is a fact, Sir, that this municipal planning and these three officers referred to have arrangements with the St. John’s Municipal Council. In fact their services are available to all municipalities throughout the province, that is not just the city.

MR. HEFFERTON: That is right. I am sorry if I omitted that. It is not entirely municipal.

1331—Supply Administration:

1332—Purchasing:

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, on this vote could the Minister tell us if there are any rules about what shall be tendered for, how high a figure has to be or the volume of articles before tenders are called? Are there any rules on that?

MR. HEFFERTON: Only the general rule, Mr. Chairman, every single item is tendered for. I want to make this exception. Suppose we get a manufacturers price list as we very often do, suppose we get a price list today and we want some similar article tomorrow, we don’t send out and get another price list for every order. As a matter of fact everything goes on tender supposing it is only a dozen matches.

MR. HOLLETT: That does not seem to correspond to the feeling we had relevant to supplies to institutions in places like Corner Brook. I believe we were informed that arrangements for purchases were made by arrangements with local merchants and no tenders were issued.

MR. HEFFERTON: That is perfectly correct. If there is an apparent inconsistency, I was thinking of supplies which are needed for all establishments around St. John’s. In regard to outport stations we are just not able to do that, and so have to depend on the local supply.

MR. HOLLETT: I am going to raise the point—I feel you are in error there. Is it not possible that the goods for the cottage hospital at Corner Brook, Twillingate and other places could be gotten by tender? After all if you are going to make such an arrangement you are putting yourself in the position where you could be accused of politics. I know you would not be guilty of such a thing. I suggest that through tenders is the only possible way for supplies of that nature to be purchased.

MR. HEFFERTON: As far as hospitals are concerned many of the hospitals have their own purchasing agent appointed under the supervision of the Health Department and those purchases are based on competitive prices on particular articles in a particular area. Here there are only certain larger supplies that come from Supply, and then it is a matter of general tenders.

MR. BROWNE: Who is the deputy-minister of Supply now?

MR. HEFFERTON: Mr. Crummey.

Carried.
MR. BROWNE: Would the Minister say the new roto printing machine in the Crown Lands Department will cut down on this?

MR. HEFFERTON: When fully operating it may possibly cut down but certainly it is not going to take care of all our demands.

DR. ROWE: May I say it was only about two weeks ago this new machine actually started production, and we really have had no time to see how it will—

MR. BROWNE: I know the machine, and know it is an amazing machine and can do a lot of work.

1421—Fisheries Administration:

MR. HOLLETT: The deputy-minister of Fisheries—I note there is some change from last year—are these contractual officers and the deputy-minister of Fisheries one and the same person?

HON. W. J. KEOUGH (Minister of Fisheries and Co-operatives): Yes.

MR. HOLLETT: Would the Honourable Minister explain why it is put in in that particular way?

MR. KEOUGH: The deputy-minister is contractual at $15,000 a year. The honourable member will note that under the year 1953-54 the salary was set down at $12,000 and also contractual officer $8,000. This year in order to set down in the same way, the deputy-minister's salary, which you will find in the back of the book, $8,500 and also we have the contractual officer placed at a figure to make up the balance. We have not reduced the salary.

MR. HOLLETT: He still gets the fifteen thousand dollars, I see. It is just another way of putting it there.

MR. KEOUGH: Yes, a financial arrangement for the estimates.

MR. HOLLETT: For what period is that?

MR. KEOUGH: Began in 1951 and was made for five years.

MR. HOLLETT: The deputy-minister has been absent from the province for some time. Was he on particular business, does the Minister care to tell me?

MR. KEOUGH: The Minister would not care to tell beyond saying he was on government and departmental business.

1422—Fisheries Production Engineering:

MR. FOGWILL: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask who is the director of fisheries?

MR. KEOUGH: Colin Story.

Mr. FOGWILL: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask who is the director of fisheries?

MR. KEOUGH: Colin Story.

MR. FOGWILL: What are the duties? What do they do?

MR. KEOUGH: The duties of this division, they are rather long. It may be boiled down to this, to keep in touch with the development of all new types of fishery gear, equipment and machines and depots and keeping in touch with new technical developments in filleting processes and in the fisheries industry generally and the duties of the Director would be accordingly.

Item 1422 $16,000.00.

MR. KEOUGH: You will recall that in 1953 the Government made an advance of $1.50 a quintal on salt codfish. All of that advance could not be paid in 1953 because there were some fishermen who had fish of 1953 production who would not be able to sell it until 1954. This is to clean up any over balance carried on by fishermen.

MR. FOGWILL: What is the total amount advanced on 1953 production approximately?

MR. KEOUGH: The last time I checked it was somewhat over $900,000 possibly $920,000 or $940,000. Our calculation is that it will cost about $1,000,000 on 700,000 quintals.

MR. FOGWILL: Have any recoveries been made from the Federal Government?

MR. KEOUGH: Not as yet. Proceedings for recovery are being worked out.

MR. HOLLETT: On that point I have said that is one of the wisest things the Government has done. They have helped many a fisherman over the winter. In view of that fact and in view of the present situation throughout the country in fishing areas, I was wondering if the Government would be able to make any statement which would give some encouragement to those men who prosecuted the fishery last year and those two thousand extra men?

MR. KEOUGH: That would be a question concerning overall Government policy.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I am only prepared to say at the moment that the fishermen of Newfoundland are well aware, if for no other reason than the reason we did make an advance of one million dollars — they need not fear, the Government of Newfoundland are quite willing and quite eager to stand behind the fishermen in any pinch. They are also very well aware that the Government of Canada are equally with them and stand behind them in a pinch and with two governments ready to stand behind them I think the people of Newfoundland, with some exceptions perhaps, have a feeling of confidence that will carry them through the fishing operations of this year.

MR. HOLLETT: I take it that their efforts this year will be rewarded in that the market will not bring a limited price, and that the Government will not fall down on their obligation to them. That is the substance of the statement and I am sure we are glad to hear the Premier say that.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I am sure I must not allow the other gentleman to put anything in my mouth.

MR. BROWNE: The vote has been dropped last year for Vocational Training. Is there any vocational training going on at the present time?

MR. KEOUGH: You will find it under another heading.

Carried.

Item 1423:

MR. BROWNE: Who is the Director of Economic Research?
MR. KEOUGH: Mr. Bruce Feather.

MR. FOGWILL: Item 1423, (03), (01), Market Research and Consumer Education. What does he mean by Consumer Education?

MR. KEOUGH: Consumer Education would be the education of the public to eat more fish.

MR. FOGWILL: To eat more fish foods?

MR. KEOUGH: Yes, demonstrators for women's groups and restaurant operators.

MR. FOGWILL: Will any pamphlets or booklets be issued on those lines?

MR. KEOUGH: Not by the Department but perhaps to assist some other organizations.

MR. HOLLETT: On the item Fisheries Research I noticed the salary is $7,500. I was of the opinion it was more than that. There is no post laid down in the estimates to cover the duties of Assistant Deputy Minister. If this is done by the Deputy Minister what does he get for that and where is it shown?

MR. KEOUGH: The fact of the matter is that he is contractual at $7,500. He performs the duties of Assistant Deputy Minister with additional remuneration. That is why the post is not shown.

Carried.

Item 1424:

MR. BROWNE: Vessel Construction and Inspection. There are two new appointments. One administrative Officer with salary of $5,000 and another officer Grade 7 with salary of $4,500. Where are the vessels being constructed?

MR. KEOUGH: Actually the Department is not constructing any vessels. The Government pays a ship building bounty of $90.00 a ton on fishing vessels and $30.00 a ton on trading vessels. Part of the duties of this Division is administering the Ship Building Bounty Act under the Minister. The Loan Board, the Fisheries Loan Board, is acting for the Federal Department of Fisheries for the payment of subsidy on vessels for the dragger and long liner class from forty-five to sixty feet. This subsidy is $65.00 a ton. Usually the Department, that is the Federal Department, before paying this subsidy will require specified plans but by agreement with the Department which will expire in 1955 the Federal Department is prepared to accept lines drawn and so forth, in place of fully prepared plans. The Division also advises the Fisheries Loan Board re the suitability of vessels that come before it for prospective loan applications and of things having to do with fisheries vote.

MR. BROWNE: How much bounty was paid last year?

MR. KEOUGH: I do not know off hand. Did I not supply an answer to that already?

MR. BROWNE: The shipbuilding plant at Clarenville has stopped operating. Does the Minister know that?

MR. KEOUGH: I was quite aware of that. It is a private operation.

MR. HOLLETT: I was wondering if that item, Fisheries Economic Research, if that will not eventually come under the newly appointed fishery authorities.

MR. KEOUGH: Mr. Chairman, the honourable gentleman has put his finger on quite a problem. The Fisheries Development Authority has not settled in the job long enough for its functions to be fully rounded out. While estimates were being prepared the question was raised whether or not some functions presently being performed be more appropriately transferred to the Fishery Authority. Some will be transferred and votes will then appear under Authority vote. By introducing that bill in the House I might have gone a long way to voting myself out of a job. Mr. J. A. Currie is the Director.

MR. HOLLETT: You will hardly be out of a job?

MR. KEOUGH: I just say it may.

Item 1426.

MR. HOLLETT: Where are these training schools? Are these the ones where they go around the country teaching?

MR. KEOUGH: Cecil White is the Instructor for Diesel Engineering.

MR. HOLLETT: There are four officers there and the total is only $6,800.

MR. KEOUGH: That is a misprint. That four should be a two.

Carried.

Item 1451.

MR. BROWNE: We come to the Co-operative Branch of this and there are three votes. I wonder if the Minister can give an idea what has been going on?

MR. KEOUGH: I too have to put it that way. In November 1951 or 1952 I announced at a conference held in Grand Falls that the government would withdraw from the field of Co-operatives in favour of co-operative unions as rapidly as possible, as these organizations gave evidence of being able to take over these functions and the government would stay only in the field of Registry which deals with Registry Inspection. Since that time we have been gradually taking off the staff of the Co-operative Extension Division and building up the staff of Registry Division. The Co-operative Extension Division is really carrying on a holding operation which would be servicing the existing movement to the extent that it can give advice and other assistance required and to hold the line until the extension department can take over.

MR. HOLLETT: Who is the Director of Co-operative Extension?

MR. KEOUGH: William Compton.

Carried.

Item 1452:

MR. BROWNE: Are there any field workers now engaged in co-operative societies?

MR. KEOUGH: There are six men in the field.

Carried.

Item 1453.

MR. BROWNE: Has the minister the figures giving the number of societies registered in the different branches, credit societies and so forth?

MR. KEOUGH: Not at hand. It could be secured from the Registry in a number of days. The Registry is functioning under difficulty. The head of the Registry has been seriously ill. He has been with the cooperative movement for a long time and performed good service in the Registry. I hope he recovers as he would be a great loss to the movement.

MR. HOLLETT: I join in this expression. I know him, and he is very good and very efficient. The Department would suffer greatly if he cannot return to work soon.

Carried.

Item 1501—Departmental of Economic Development.

Carried.

Item 1502:

MR. HOLLETT: I note the Deputy Minister of Mines, that is Mr. Howse, is it?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I referred to that this afternoon.

MR. BROWNE: What is the position of the department as to the Development Programme, has it slowed down? Would the Honourable Minister care to make a statement?

MR. SMALLWOOD: The Department of Economic Development was never created to deal solely with industrial development. It was created to be a department whose responsibility was roundly, widely, general economic development of which industrial development would form one part, but only one part. The industrial development side of economic development, as the honourable and learned member suggests, slowed down in the sense of creating new industrial enterprises, but only in that sense. The other activities of the department continue on the broader general economic development and it is, although small, quite streamlined. It is an extremely busy department and I hope it will always be an extremely busy department.

MR. FOGWILL: The Honourable Minister was asked if he cared to make a statement. I would like to ask a question regarding the Gypsum Plant. Is the Gypsum Plant in full operation at present?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, it is not in full operation at present and is not likely to be in full operation for another two years. The position is rather obvious to any one who is at all familiar with industrial processes. It is a plant that is designed to operate in three shifts, twenty-four hours a day around the clock. That, of course, calls for three shifts of workers, skilled workers, efficient workers. They begin with one shift and with certain key skilled men, key technicians in charge of that one shift. They then took on Newfoundlanders to make up the shift, that one eight-hour shift. The problem was to get that one shift trained with sufficient skill, experience, speed and dependability generally to operate one shift with at least fifty per cent capacity. You can operate one shift with the machine running at a certain speed; all the machines are geared together, the machines that grind up the gypsum rock. There is no point in grinding more rock than you need.

As the process goes right along from the crushing of the rock to the finished wallboard emerging from the great dryer which is about two hundred and fifty feet long. At every stage in the processes all of the equipment must be geared together, not by keys and gears but geared together by co-ordination and speed. Equipment that may turn out say 50,000 square feet for a shift may be running at a speed whereby the staff of the shift will turn out 20,000 square feet in eight hours. The job is to get that same shift trained to turn out thirty and forty thousand and fifty thousand square feet. But if you do that you have to do the same thing with a second shift, because if you produce your maximum on one shift, you are producing one-third the capacity of that plant. If your two shifts turn out what it is capable of turning out then production is two-thirds of capacity. To get full production you have to get three shifts working at maximum. You must have the shift crew trained so that every man is virtually perfect or reasonably so and then you have your plant hitting on all cylinders. They began with one shift but by the month of August 1953 they had trained the one shift sufficiently to be able to take some of them off that shift as key men on a second shift and take on green men on the first shift, and some green men on the second shift. They trained enough men on the first shift to divide them into two shifts, enough for the first and second. By Christmas they had gone so far as to take on a third shift. The men they had trained on the two shifts could be spread over the third shift by taking on some green men. Now since they have begun operations this present year in February or March, after the winter shut-down, they have been working three shifts but not getting maximum production in either one of the three shifts because the men had not attained the degree of perfection necessary and therefore we are not getting maximum production. We will not get it in 1954. I would hope that before the end of 1955 the plant will be turning out maximum production by having all the machinery operating at maximum speed because of the fact that the crews are able to keep up with the machines going at maximum speed. I hope that answers the honourable gentleman’s question.

MR. HOLLETT: Since we are on the gypsum plant, can the Premier tell us whether they are represented here now?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, but under their contract they were to start operations and deliver it to the Government and the Government was to accept only if it was satisfied the plant was a good and workman-like job and operated satisfactorily. They operated the plant for a couple of months under supervision and they ironed out the mechanical kinks that come from a large complicated plant and that has two hundred and fifty electric motors. It is a young plant and the honourable gentleman should go to Corner Brook and make it a point to be shown through the plant. There is one machine in that plant that is five hundred feet long, it is an immense plant.

MR. HOLLETT: In that case you say there is not, Mr. Chairman, operating in this country at the present time anybody looking after the interest in the investment of one hundred thousand dollars.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I did not say anything about having anybody in the province nor the country.

MR. HOLLETT: I did not mean to ask if operating it.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Asked exactly that—are they operating the plant?

MR. HOLLETT: I mean in the country.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Province or country—in the province I believe they are. I believe they invested money in this prefabricated or processed concrete plant at Humbermouth.

MR. FOGWILL: Mr. Chairman, the Minister of Finance—I don’t see him here tonight—said in his budget speech that three of the fifteen new plants were in full production and eleven in part production and one not yet finished. I was hoping the gypsum plant, one of the first plants built, was one in full production. Which one of the fifteen plants is in full production?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I think there is a sense in which it would be accurate to say the gypsum plant is in full production, at least it is on a full three shifts, but is not yet producing at the maximum capacity of which the machines are capable.

MR. BROWNE: I heard the Premier's statement. It is very interesting, and I gathered that the plant is something like the paper plant.

MR. SMALLWOOD: If I might explain that—you take your gypsum rock, of which we have in Newfoundland perhaps the largest quantity in any part of the globe and certainly of the purest and finest quality. It is not substantially but considerably, better than the gypsum rock of Nova Scotia which was the best hitherto in the western hemisphere, but now of course is somewhat better—you take the gypsum rock and put it through great crushers and crush it into a powder and it automatically goes through the conveyor on up into the rotary kiln which really bakes it, and then it is piped off and led along into other machinery where water is forced on it and then other chemicals are added and finally it is agitated into a foam which then is thickened and thickened until it is just thick enough to flow but no thicker. By the time it has reached the main machinery you have two rolls of paper, very much like on a newspaper press, and these great rolls unrolls and the paper runs along on great rubber conveyors about five hundred feet long. The two sheets of paper run along and the stuff is in between. It is like plaster-of-Paris, and it is squirted between the two sheets of paper, and as it goes along it comes closer together until it reaches exactly the thickness you want. It goes on fairly fast but will go on at the maximum speed only when the men are able to handle it at every step of the process. If you touch the board at this point you can leave your finger print in it, as it is still soft. As it goes down the great conveyor it hardens quite rapidly, until when it gets down at the end it is quite hard. It is an endless process, never stops completely, an endless flowing along and there is an endless line of plaster board and there is a great knife revolving which cuts it without stopping the line. Then there are brushes which revolve swiftly and brush away the dry gypsum that has come on top of the face of it from the cutting knife.

Now it is at the end and automatically at the right angle and goes into the oven which is parallel for 2/9 of the distance of the conveyor belt. It then goes through this great dryer, for which Benno Schilde is famous in the world, and comes out at the farther end as a sheet of board. The speed of all of that depends on the competence of the men to keep up with the machines at every point of the long and complicated process. Our men are learning it very fast. They are acquiring the skill, and it is a pleasure to see the way that Newfoundlanders from fishing settlements, from Placentia Bay, Fortune Bay, Bonavista Bay—these men who work in the plant are typical of Newfoundlanders all over the island, north, south, east, west, right out of the fishing boats and the potato gardens, now working in this modern plant. They have caught the spirit of it, and it is a pleasure to see Newfoundlanders learn that skilled trade of making this high-class plasterboard.

MR. CHAIRMAN: If the honourable member would forgive me, all this is most interesting but hardly strictly relevant, and might more properly be properly discussed further on.

MR. BROWNE: There must be some place in the estimates for the Department of Economic Development where we can ask about the industries owned by the government; i.e., the ones we do own.

The minister stated that it was closed for the winter. How long was it closed and why was it closed so long?

MR. SMALLWOOD: It was not closed long. It was closed and always will be closed for about a month of the winter for two reasons: (1) because they want to overhaul the machinery and because that is precisely the time of the year when you cannot sell it, can't ship it. What is now being used has been made in the previous summer and fall and what will be used in the coming fall and winter will be made in this late spring and throughout the summer. Actually the last thing that goes into a house is the plaster. It is an inside job and most builders aim to have their housing covered in by the fall and then start to do the inside work through-out the fall and winter, and in the spring lay down their new foundations. So that in the winter there is virtually no sale for plaster board.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, I believe we are still on 1502—General Office. And I certainly must agree with the ruling you made a moment ago.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Just a reminder.

MR. HOLLETT: I must agree, and I think my colleague on my right and the Premier are completely out of order, both of them, as there is no mention of a gypsum plant here. Getting back to that 1502, I think the fact that there is a Secretary of Research and Conservation $1,000 would indicate there must be some form of conservation setup.

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, there is not.

MR. HOLLETT: What does a secretary to that mean?

MR. SMALLWOOD: To a board, if there should be a board.

MR. HOLLETT: And where do you get your authority for that?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No authority except what I described here this afternoon.

MR. HOLLETT: Which was?

MR. SMALLWOOD: The honourable gentleman's memory ought to be good enough to remember what I said this afternoon, surely he does not want me to say it over again?

MR. HOLLETT: Yes. It has been so long since I have seen the Honourable the Premier so much stirred up. I would like him to get that steam off.
MR. SMALLWOOD: I don't think I would.

MR. HOLLETT: I will get on to the other, the birch plant, in a minute. But there is no such board. Is not that putting the cart before the horse to begin by getting the secretary and then by next year perhaps get the board of conservation.

Carried.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, before that goes through may I be allowed to ask if the minister, if he can recall the agreement regarding the birch plant, for the construction and the operation. I asked the clerk and he could not find any copies of the agreement. Perhaps he can tell me from memory what the agreement is.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I must admit quite candidly I don't remember. All documents are in the Department of the Attorney General where they are kept in vaults, or else the department of Finance where they are kept in the vaults there. In our department we keep no original documents. We have the facilities in Canada House. In fact we are very much jammed down there for space although we are quite a small department but we have two departments, the Office of the Premier and the offices of Economic Development. If I had it I would gladly table it. It has been tabled. It is not too much trouble for them in Finance I will ask them to type it again and table it. Although I do suggest when we table documents for the Opposition they ought to have a little tin box or something to keep them in from year to year so that they won't have to ask for them every year. Why don't they just keep them in an empty file cabinet or a shoe box something and not have to keep asking for them again and again.

MR. BROWNE: There is a filing cabinet downstairs and I have been trying for two weeks to get a lock but it has not been fixed yet.

Carried.

1503—Tourist Development.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, in regard to this particular item I would like to bring up a matter that concerns travelling expenses of the tourist director. He gets a salary of ten thousand dollars a year, and his travelling expenses last year, I think, amounted to five or six thousand dollars. I have here some of the items. This deals with an item of $3,690 for one trip which lasted for eleven days. Another trip took thirty-one days and cost $1,433.61 and a trip to Montreal lasting thirteen days cost $581 and another trip to Montreal—Halifax and Montreal and New York—cost $1,013.12. Now the first one averaged $52.67 a day, the next one $44.71 and the next $42.21. So I took the trouble to go up and look at some of the vouchers. There is one thing about the Tourist Director and that is, he lives well. Any man who can take $1.80 breakfast and $2.50 lunch and $3.50 dinner or $4.50 dinner and then have a snack at $5 or $6 before going to bed is living well and being treated generously by his boss. Now one night he had a very good dinner costing $7.50. I don't know where he dined that time, but in New York. It seems to me, Mr. Chairman, that he should bring back vouchers on these trips for each expenditure that he has made. I don't think it is expecting too much to ask civil servants to give vouchers for their expenses at such times. It should be either that or limit him to a certain amount a day. I think he ought to be limited to, say, ten dollars a day or whatever it is, $12 a day. Surely he could live very well on $12 a day.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Where?

MR. BROWNE: As far as meals are concerned—now for taxi bills in New York they were $7, $8, $10 and $12 a day. And for a great many of the items, especially meals, there were no vouchers at all. I noticed that on one trip he entertained at the Canadian Club. That is a club for Canadians situated in New York, and occupies certain floor space there. He gave a film entertainment, I presume a Newfoundland film. He hired a room for $25. He entertained the people not only with pictures but with beverages and then there was a little refreshment from the restaurant costing $60. Then this big-hearted gentleman gave tips to the value of $30, and throughout all his bills there is a lavish distribution.

MR. SMALLWOOD: At that one function.

MR. BROWNE: Well, I must say his gratitude at this time amounted to $26. Then there is an item for $5 immediately underneath, which I presume is part of the tips. Wherever he goes I am sure they must be glad to see him he is so generous with these tips.

I think, Mr. Chairman, this gentleman, as he travels so extensively, should be asked to bring back vouchers to show the actual expenditures. It is not sufficient to put down $7.50 for gin and $4.50 for rye without bringing the bills to show that he actually paid it.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Chairman, what the honourable gentleman has said has a certain amount of plausibility about it. Of course if he did very much travelling—he did live and eat in parliamentary restaurants in Ottawa, where every meal a member eats is subsidized for him by the public of Canada, and he would not be accustomed to the rates one has to pay in hotels across Canada and more especially across the border in the United States. You cannot go into a restaurant in New York and get a lunch for less than $1.50 at the cheapest. I am sure of that. Dinner at night costs from $5 to $7 or $8 for one person. And try to get a breakfast in New York under $1.70 or $1.80—try to do it. Unless you leave the hotel and go down town somewhere off in the Bowery Section and try to find a restaurant in the poor section, otherwise it cannot be done.

Another thing to remember about Mr. Vardy is this: Over and above the travelling he has done as Tourist Director is the travel he has done for me, on my behalf. I have used Mr. Vardy as a sort of personal ambassador. I have found that I was not very much interested in travelling except when it came to the establishment of industries, or where an industry was concerned. I would go half way around the world. But in regard to dozens of other things I did not want to travel. I was not interested, was fed up. I have had enough now to last me the rest of my life. You cannot drag me now beyond Roche’s Line. I have sent Mr. Vardy instead. He likes it.

MR. BROWNE: I can see that.

MR. SMALLWOOD: He positively likes it, really revels in it. He is at home in it and likes it. I have sent him up to Washington several times on private and extremely important and very often delicate missions on my behalf as Premier of Newfoundland and on behalf of the government of Newfoundland. Mr. Vardy has done extremely valuable work. I wish I could tell the committee about it.

MR. BROWNE: Do.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I wish I could, but I know I cannot. He has done extremely valuable work for Newfoundland on these visits to Washington and these visits to New York and these visits have resulted in returns for Newfoundland running into many hundreds of thousands of dollars of business and additional business done by Newfoundlanders with the Americans operating here in this province. There was one particular occasion, I may say, when he went to Washington when even the Secretary of the Treasury received him and sent to his hotel a private car with a special uniformed driver—The Secretary of the Treasury of the United States Government, who then took up a phone and sent for the Secretary of the Army and the Secretary for Defense to come in and for the Secretary for Air to come in. These cabinet ministers of Eisenhower's Cabinet sat and discussed these matters with Mr. Vardy. Mere generals there were a dime a dozen. There were military aircraft whisking Mr. Vardy from Washington down to their headquarters in Virginia, and he ended up back here in St. John's with three or four generals who flew with him down here in a U. S. Army aircraft. Now we are not charged for that. My honourable friend did not find any bill for a U. S. Government aircraft although they flew him down from Washington.

MR. BROWNE: What trip was that?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I don't retain. My honourable and learned friend ought to ask me sometime to table vouchers for my trips. I would like him to go very carefully into all the vouchers for my trips for the five years I have been travelling, because I am out about five thousand dollars, about a thousand dollars a year, which I was ashamed to put in. I was a fool. I bet if my honourable and learned friend were in my position and travelled around as I did I bet every copper that he spent officially would have gone in to the government. I was a fool, and if I were not a fool I would do the same. I am out about five thousand dollars hard cash, which I was ashamed to put in. If I invited someone to dinner I paid like a fool, out of my own pocket. Perhaps I am the only one foolish enough to do that. If he goes away and has to entertain someone and talks over the business at dinner, which costs $7 or $8, to some people it sounds awful. But there is nothing very bad about it, or I don't think there is.

MR. BROWNE: I must say the Premier is not so experienced a traveller on behalf of the Government as Mr. Vardy, as he had only $1,500 in the same year, but he made more trips and his average per day was about $10 a day less than Mr. Vardy.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, and I am poorer on that account.

MR. BROWNE: Now the Premier has made a good many more trips than I have made to New York, certainly in recent years, but when he says you cannot go into a restaurant in New York and get a breakfast for less than $1.70 or $1.80 he certainly exaggerates. That, of course, depends upon what kind of breakfast. Now, Mr. Vardy is a big, robust man, and I am sure he must be a hearty eater. But I could go to "Childs," who are very distinguished people, and I did the last time I was there, and I met the Chief Justice of Canada and his wife there. If it is good enough for them it is good enough for our 'embassy'-Ambassador Vardy—As for lunch, I am quite sure there must be places in New York where one could get lunch for less than $3.50. As far as $7.50 a meal, well I think, Mr. Chairman, that Mr. Vardy is entitled to a good substantial meal, such as he is used to in his home, and I don't think he is entitled to anything so elaborate as a dinner at $7.50.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Was that for himself or for himself and guest?

MR. BROWNE: How would the Honourable Premier know that. It is put as an item.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I think the honourable gentleman might have had two or three people at that dinner.

MR. BROWNE: There is no sign of that, perhaps he had, but he did not say anything about it. He would be entitled, I take it from the observations of the Premier, to do that. His expenditure was $5,784.04, and there is a little item outstanding still of $39.68 for a couple of days he spent at the Mount Royal Hotel for which he had no vouchers. He has been asked to furnish the vouchers, but I don't know if he could or not. I must say he seems to stay around the hotels pretty well when in Montreal and Toronto but when in New York he is on his own.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, it seems to us that Mr. Vardy is an expensive man; like the Premier, he is somewhat expensive too. Now getting back to the subject under dis-
MR. HOLLETT: I know that last year, Mr. Vardy for travelling for the Department of Tourist Development was allowed $1,800. On one particular night Mr. Vardy spent $276, still I would repeat he is a somewhat expensive man, and these are a lot of travelling expenses we could go into. What I am going to ask now is, on page 123-1503 we have a director—that is Mr. Vardy, who gets $10,000 a year. We have next a director Grade II, contractual, and there is a token vote there. Is it the intention to appoint a second director?

MR. SMALLWOOD: That has not been filled.

MR. HOLLETT: Is it the intention to fill it?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I think we had that in last year too as a token vote. We have thought to bring into Newfoundland a man who is a thoroughly experienced hotel man to go about for the Tourist Board visiting every place in Newfoundland where visitors and tourists are accommodated and advise and assist and to help such establishments to operate in connection with their food and meals, in the way that tourists are generally accommodated. We did have half in mind to bring in Norman Squires. He has had remarkable training as a hotel manager. He worked in Sydney and in Paris. After the war he was maître d'hôtel for a hotel in Niagara Falls. He was manager of a chain of motels. I do not know what the title was but he was quite high and he managed a chain of motels so he had had remarkable experience in catering to tourists and we have half thought, and we have in the back of our minds what the amount is there to give him. The amount is shown there in the total. The scale is shown there.

MR. HOLLETT: You would not get that man for that scale.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Perhaps not.

MR. HOLLETT: We had Mr. Vardy as Tourist Director and we had to get rid of him, he was so expensive.

1503—Development: $15,000.00.

Would the Premier tell us what is being done along those lines?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I am informed regarding that vote $15,000 that since it began four or five years ago it has in fact been spent on general publicity. That vote was transferred to the vote that precedes it or the one that follows it.

MR. HOLLETT: How much have we spent last year on general publicity and development?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I have not the figures here. We spent $35,521.00.

MR. HIGGINS: Item 1503. Two officers Grade 6, $7,954.00 would those two officers be Mr. Woodland and Miss Godden?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes.

MR. HIGGINS: It would appear these two people are rated on the small scale but Miss Godden has been in the tourist industry for twenty-seven years and Mr. Woodland has two or three years experience. Is there any reason for classing a comparatively new comer on the same basis with a person who has had the unlimited experience of Miss Godden. Either Mr. Woodland is being overpaid or she is being underpaid?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I would say... both are being underpaid. Miss Godden is a remarkable public servant. There is no doubt of that and to her it is a labour of love. Mr. Woodland is a very able newspaperman, journalist and writer and it is not fair to compare them, or to compare their salaries. They are not comparable.

MR. HIGGINS: They are lumped together in the same classification in the same office.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Whether we took Mr. Woodland or any one else in the same capacity we would not get them for less than that.

MR. HIGGINS: I am not reflecting on Mr. Woodland at all. I worked in the office with Miss Godden away back in 1931, 1932 and 1933 and I can not only support what the Premier says but emphasize it. She was recently recognized in a national magazine.

MR. HOLLETT: Could you tell us if, Chairman of Publicity $20,000, would be included in the figure spent by Mr. Vardy for his election in the west end. He did quite a lot of travelling around in that election.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I think possibly it is. I think also the expenses of the honourable gentleman who was defeated might have come out of the same vote.

MR. HOLLETT: I think the Premier is very candid on that. We can take it for granted that some of the $20,000 was used in the west end.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I would take what it was to pay the expenses of the man who was liked and the man who won and perhaps it went in the east end also.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Vardy is quite a man to have there?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Quite a man. If the honourable gentleman insists on being opposed to Mr. Vardy the Government might be induced to part with him as Tourist Director and become director of Hollett activity in the west end.

MR. HOLLETT: I think we can handle the situation very well. We had him before and he was so very expensive we could not keep him.

MR. BROWNE: As a matter of personal explanation, Mr. Vardy had nothing to do with paying my expenses. He did take part in the campaign both east and west but not on my account.

MR. SMALLWOOD: To good effect.

MR. HOLLETT: What about the question of $1,000.00 for local tourist boards? Have any been set up?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, at Gander, Corner Brook, Grand Falls and Port aux Basques, and Channel. The $1,000 is to make a small vote to each of the boards.

MR. BROWNE: It appears not every year is there a vote for documentary films. Year before there was none. Is it the intention to set a similar amount this year as year before last?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes. They made one which I think all members of the House should see. "You are Welcome" is the title and it is in colour and its premiere, the first showing, was at the Newfoundland booth at the Trade Fair in Toronto early this week. It is an excellent picture and I hope when shown locally all members will make a point to see it.
MR. HOLLETT: I wonder would you consider striking out the word "development"? There has been no development along tourist lines. If it is all publicity then we better change the word. If there is any development we would like to know about it.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is what it is there for and we hope to spend it on that. It takes the form of tourist development. It is so widespread an activity you can confuse it unless you call it development, one word, and put all the vote under one word. Unless you do that you have to do what we have done, break it down into various items.

Carried.

Item 1505:

MR. BROWNE: There is a vote for $10,000 general investigations. Would you state what you have in mind?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, something might happen in the next twelve months for tourist development in Newfoundland in some direction or other, something might crop up which needs to be investigated, inquiries to be pursued and somebody would have to be sent up or brought here. It is hard to say what it might be.

MR. BROWNE: Travelling expenses are cut down to $1,000. I take it that is a suggestion?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Unless the Deputy Minister travels more than he has done and unless the Director General of Economic Development travels more than he has done I think the amount for travelling is sufficient. My travelling is paid for by one or either of the two departments, rather two votes. In the Premier's office or Economic Development.

MR. BROWNE: I take it the Director General, Mr. Valdmanis, got a vote last year?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, he was not Director General last year. He resigned in 1952. It might be for part of the year.

Carried.

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Chairman, I wonder if before we take up the Labour Department if the committee might revert to an item in the Attorney General's Department which has not been passed—Page 94-703. I was asked by the honourable and learned member for St. John's West to detail the position of Mr. Stirling and Miss Page. I find Mr. Stirling and Miss Page are blocked together in this item here—officer Grade IV. I find that Mr. Stirling has recently been appointed to that, or has recently been promoted, and as part of his promotion he received an increase so that he is now on the scale of $2,900. Miss Page is on the scale at $2,800. The Grade III is now down at $2,121 and not $2,700 as stated. I might say that when these estimates were prepared no appointment had been made, therefore provision was made at the full amount of $2,700 in case a person were transferred from another department, which would put him up at that scale.

Item carried.

Department of Labour XV:

1601—Minister's Office:

Carried.

1602—General Office:

MR. FOGWILL: Will the Hon-
Honourable Minister inform the committee as to who are these gentlemen?

Hon. C. H. Ballam (Minister of Labour): The Director, Grade I, is Labour Relations Officer, Mr. Malone, the Officer Grade V is Mr. MacKay, who is the secretary for the Labour Board and chief executive officer of Labour Relations Board. The officer, Grade IV, is Mr. Blanchard who does all of the office work, including what accounting there is, etc.

Item carried.

1603—Labour Boards, Committees and Enquiries:

Mr. Browne: The vote for 04, Woods Labour Board, is there any salary for that or is it just expenses?

Mr. Ballam: There are no salaries attached to that, Mr. Chairman, that is expenses paid to them annually for annual conventions.

Mr. Higgins: Mr. Chairman, 05, Conciliation Boards, could the Minister tell the exact amount spent last year for conciliation boards?

Mr. Ballam: Yes, the exact amount spent last year was something over six thousand dollars. The vote is being reduced, as it is hoped we may be able to get by with less, if not we will have to find sufficient money from some other vote or get this extended.

Mr. Higgins: I wonder, Mr. Chairman, if the Minister could tell us whether the incidents of labour conciliations this year are higher than last year. Have you had as many requests for conciliation boards as at the same period last year?

Mr. Ballam: I don't think we have had one since April. The 31st of March was the end of the year.

Mr. Higgins: There was no conciliation for the garage strike.

Mr. Ballam: No.

Mr. Higgins: If I might, I would like to express a word of commendation to my good friend the Minister of Labour. I think he did an admirable job in solving a serious situation in that garage strike. I don't know if he is entitled to all the credit, but he must have been to a good portion of it.

Mr. Foggwill: In respect to minimum wages, would the minister care to make a statement in respect to that—Is there a minimum wage set for any area in the island, or what is the purpose of the vote?

Mr. Ballam: I think my honourable friend asked that same question last year, and the reply was that there had been a minimum wage set at that time. It has not been changed. However, the work of the board is contained in a report that I tabled here in the House, not only for the minimum wage board but also a labour relations board report and a report of labour conciliations done under my department under the Labour Relations Board. These reports were tabled, and my honourable friends might have a look at them at their leisure.

Mr. Foggwill: What prompted me to ask the question in respect to the minimum wage, is that I believe there were minimum wages set for the area in St. John's, hourly rates, but I have a recollection that some people when they were required by the regulations to pay a minimum hourly rate put some personnel in their employ on a weekly basis, therefore got away from it in view of the fact that the weekly rate was lower. than they would have to pay under the hourly rate. Is the Minister aware of that situation?

MR. BALLAM: We have had a few incidents in that matter, and our officers have investigated these cases. I may say since last year, since this minimum wage was instituted, it was not set only for St. John's Area but for the whole province. Within recent months the Board made another order, which up to the present has not come before the Lieutenant-Governor in Council, but will be dealt with shortly, having to do with weekly rates and hourly rates for females etc. It has not been dealt with as yet.

MR. FOGWILL: In other words where hourly rates are set for certain classifications of work they won't be able to get over the fact by paying less by the week?

MR. BALLAM: That will be done.

MR. HIGGINS: 07-Labour Legislation Review Committee—I note in the last year and the year before there was no vote for that. Would the Minister be able to tell us what that envisages?

MR. BALLAM: Yes, Mr. Chairman, that is a new vote, but is now only a token. It is customary in most provinces, and we may find it necessary to do it here. After a period say five years to ten we review our legislation, i.e. Labour Legislation and have it reviewed by a committee or commission appointed to review that legislation and all of the proposals we have had from different sides, both from labour and from the trade regarding proposed amendments, and suggestions as to what they would like to have in our existing legislation. It is thought sometime during this year we may set up such a committee, and because of that we have this heading in here. Although there is not vote for it, if the Government sees fit to do so, I think we will find the money somewhere.

MR. HIGGINS: Thank you, Mr. Chairman, would the Minister be able to tell us if that would include a possible widening of the scope of the applications of the Workmen's Compensation Board benefits, and include any category not now included—would that committee have any power to review that particular aspect of the situation?

MR. BALLAM: Well the committee would review all of our existing legislation, and it could do that if we gave it to them in their terms of reference, together with all the other proposals we have for changes in the existing legislation, which would come under review.

Carried.

MR. HOLLETT: Before you carry it, Mr. Chairman—Industrial Enquiry Committees—what would be the functions there? Is that an enquiry into disputes? I thought industrial enquiries belonged properly to the Department of Economic Development.

MR. BALLAM: No, that has to do with disputes under the Enquiries Act in any industry where a dispute is likely.

Carried.

1604—Boiler Inspection:

MR. FOGWILL: Mr. Chairman. I would like to ask the Minister, who is the director, Grade IV.

MR. BALLAM: The Director, Grade IV, is our chief boiler inspector and examiner of engineers, Mr. Cardwell.

Carried.

1605—Apprenticeship:

MR. FOGWILL: There are two new officers, Grade IV, I wonder would the Minister care to inform the committee who these people are?

MR. BALLAM: Well, as the department is not fully organized as yet, we have only one recently appointed. The other vacancy will be filled sometime.

MR. FOGWILL: What is the name of the person you have appointed?

MR. BALLAM: His name is Mr. Rodgers who was formerly one of the head instructors of the Vocational Training School.

MR. FOGWILL: What particular branch of instructions did he look after in the Vocational School?

MR. BALLAM: I think he was more or less a mechanic, but I think he was competent in a lot of trades, a quite competent person very well qualified.

MR. FOGWILL: A Jack of All Trades.

MR. BALLAM: Actually I think his specialty was mechanics.

1606—Minimum Wage:

Carried.

MR. CHAIRMAN: This is the end of the estimates on current account.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Chairman, we might turn to Page 14 and begin the revenue side.

Current Account — Department of Finance IV:

460—Dominion of Canada:

MR. SMALLWOOD: I may say, Mr. Chairman, this is merely for the information of the House. The Authority to spend, on the expenditure side, has to be sought from the House and the House has to give it before it can be spent, but revenue is automatic because this revenue is a result of legislation already enacted. So that it is only for the interest of the House that these estimates are given in detail. Honourable members may ask questions but no vote, as I see it, is required because the vote was taken when the legislation out of which this revenue flows was enacted, and it was then the authority was given.

MR. BROWNE: May we ask questions on it?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, of course, Mr. Chairman, for information.

MR. HOLLETT: When does the transitional grant peter out?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Twelve years from the beginning.

MR. HOLLETT: Payment on Tax Rental Agreement, that is more or less guesswork?

MR. POWER: That is on information from Ottawa.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, did not the Government give some consideration to removal of that social security assessment on some of the necessities of life? It seems to me to be a very harsh tax on so many of the necessities and foods used by poor people who have to pay this tax. Has the Government given any consideration to limiting some of the articles of food?
MR. SMALLWOOD: No.

MR. BROWNE: I think they should.

MR. FOGWILL: On gasoline tax, Mr. Chairman, I notice the Minister estimates an increase in collections. Perhaps this is not the proper time to bring it up as I understand there is to be an increase in the tax, and we can speak about that when it comes before the House.

MR. HOLLETT: On that Social Security Assessment. I take it the estimate is based on what the Minister estimates as what went into peoples' pockets.

MR. SMALLWOOD: There is no connection at all.

MR. HOLLETT: I figure out that $6,700,000 represents 3%.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Does not the honourable member realize the same money is spent repeatedly throughout the year.

MR. HOLLETT: I don't see that. Suppose I receive $5,000 a year, how do I spend that three or four times a year? Can the Premier explain that to me?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I thought my honourable friend studied economics. I thought he had a master's degree in it. Now he wants me to educate him in economics.

MR. HOLLETT: I want you to tell me—

MR. SMALLWOOD: My degree is in law, civil law.

MR. HOLLETT: It is quite evident you have not read a book on economics. I ask the Honourable the Premier how does a man earning a thousand dollars spend it over and over during the year. Now I know the whole secret of the economic development plan of the Honourable the Premier. I don't say of the Government but of the Honourable the Premier; it must be based on that particularly arbitrary statement he has just made. Does the Honourable the Premier realize; he says that if the people earn, say, $270,000,000 in the run of the year, they spend that over and over and over. You only have to apply that to your own economy, Mr. Chairman. How many times are you allowed to spend a hundred dollars a week?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Did I really understand that it was in economics the honourable gentleman got his degree?

MR. HOLLETT: I don't know where you got yours, nor the words for it—certainly not "Economics."

I do know there is to be $6,700,000 to be taken out of the pockets of the people in this country, which is quite a figure, more than half the family allowances.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The customs duties used to be twice as much.

MR. HOLLETT: We don't pay much in customs duties these times because we get all our goods from Canada, and most of these things are manufactured in Canada. But I am not so sure we do not pay just as much customs duty today as we did in the pre-confederation days.

MR. POWER: You can be sure we do not.

MR. HOLLETT: I would like to see the figures produced to show that we do not.
MR. SMALLWOOD: The honourable gentleman would not believe them if they were produced.

MR. HOLLETT: If the figures were produced by the Minister of Finance, I would be very much inclined to believe them, because I have a very high respect for figures brought in here; but I have a greater respect for the money he is able to juggle around and make black appear white and white black which is a pretty good idea for any finance minister. I congratulate him on that.

It is absolutely essential to be able to show when there is a deficit, by going back to the other thing. I do wish the Honourable the Premier would tell me how he is going to spend what he earns this year over and over again. Would he tell me that?

MR. FOGWILL: o'clock, Mr. Chairman.

MR. CHAIRMAN: I move the committee rise and report having passed certain legislation.

The Committee of Supply have considered the matter to them referred and have passed certain estimates on current account, namely, under heading (7) Department of Attorney General 703, (11) Department of Public Welfare from 1114 to 1120.

The House passed following estimates under heading (12) Board of Liquor Control, (13) Department of Municipal Affairs and Supply, (14) Department of Fisheries and Co-operatives, (15) Department of Economic Development, (16) Department of Labour. The Committee made some progress.

MR. SPEAKER: The Chairman of the Committee of the Whole reports on matters to them referred and passed certain estimates. Committee asks leave to sit again.

MR. SMALLWOOD: We are going on until midnight with agreement of honourable gentlemen opposite and meet again Monday. I move the House do not adjourn 11 o'clock tonight.

Carried.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I move the House go into the Committee of Supply.

House goes into Committee again.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I think it will be more proper if consideration of revenue which has not to be voted were given in the debate on the budget and if we therefore proceed with Capital Account Expenditure and if there is nothing particularly controversial in Capital Account Expenditure it might be possible for us to complete the debate on this heading before midnight. If it is not possible for us to do so then it is not possible. There is no desire whatever on the part of the Government to rush the matter or to deny the House all the time and opportunity desired to debate the matter thoroughly.

MR. BROWNE: $1,885,000 guaranteed. Is that done in the form of a loan?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes.

MR. BROWNE: There is a document produced?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes.

MR. BROWNE: Will the Government pay it out of a loan that it will raise?
MR. SMALLWOOD: Out of surplus, financial surplus.

MR. HOLLETT: At the 28th of February 1954, the Atlantic Hardboards was guaranteed a loan of $146,000, it must have been since the 28th of February.

MR. POWER: That one matured on the 1st of May, 1954.

MR. HOLLETT: I asked the question for all guaranteed loans and the amount owed or borrowed by Atlantic Hardboards as of February 28, 1954, was given as $40,000. In other words $278,000 is advanced to Atlantic Hardboards.

MR. SMALLWOOD: They had not drawn the balance of that. They have since drawn the remainder of the loan.

MR. HOLLETT: The only amount guaranteed was $40,000. How could they draw $278,000?

MR. BROWNE: What is the situation regarding Atlantic Hardboards. About how much do they owe?

MR. HOLLETT: Before we leave I am not satisfied. As of February 28, 1954 the amount guaranteed was $40,000 and the amount borrowed was $40,000 and the amount owed was $40,000 as of that date, and now we are told it was $278,000. Can we have that straightened up?

MR. POWER: I can't give you much information on that now.

MR. BROWNE: Is the $500,000 on the Newfoundland Hardwoods now?

MR. SMALLWOOD: That was already answered in this session.

MR. BROWNE: It was $150,000. I do not know if that was paid off but it was owed at February 28.

MR. HOLLETT: Can we have the amounts guaranteed named out and the dates?

MR. POWER: Springdale Fur Company $7,300. It does not say when it will mature.

MR. BROWNE: It has already matured.

MR. POWER: The Atlantic Films $50,000 maturity is 30th of April, 1954. Newfoundland Hardwoods, $500,000 will mature on the 30th April, 1954. The Atlantic Hardboards matures at May 1st and the next one will mature October 1st 1954.

MR. BROWNE: That means the Government has paid the bank these amounts on April 30th and the 1st of May.

MR. SMALLWOOD: On the maturing dates. I do not know whether they have paid the bank but they were due to pay the bank on the dates named.

MR. BROWNE: The Government would be in default if they did not pay the bank?

MR. SMALLWOOD: They would try to pass legislation in this House.

MR. BROWNE: There is interest due on these notes?

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is paid by the borrowers.

MR. BROWNE: Has it been paid?

MR. SMALLWOOD: By the borrowers.

MR. HOLLETT: Atlantic Films $160,000 outstanding April 1954?

MR. POWER: All outstanding now is $50,000.
MR. HOLLETT: In other words $100,000 has been paid by the Government to the bank. The amount was guaranteed.

MR. POWER: What dates are shown there.

MR. HOLLETT: That was a cash loan. The amount outstanding was $150,000 as at February 28th, 1954.

MR. FOGWILL: With respect to the $500,000 that is Newfoundland Hardwoods. Was that guarantee made in the past fiscal year?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes.

MR. FOGWILL: There was a $150,000 bank loan which was guaranteed by the Government. This is in addition to the other items. The total investment in the Birch Plant is nearly $3,400,000.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Around $3,000,000.

MR. FOGWILL: A little over.

MR. SMALLWOOD: They have been given the guarantee for working capital. These amounts are not all added together.

MR. FOGWILL: At March 31, 1953, the cost was $1,780,000. Advance for working capital was $640,000 and the bank loan of $150,000. That was March last year. In addition to that there is another $500,000.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The larger amounts swept up the small one.

MR. FOGWILL: Which larger and small one? According to the Premier the $500,000 loan would make an addition to what the Auditor General has in his report $150,000. That would make it a little over $3,000,000.

MR. BROWNE: The Bonavista Cold Storage, a guaranteed loan of one million dollars. Are you going to guarantee a loan on that?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes.

MR. BROWNE: A certain amount is voted by the House that you foresee and you ask the House to vote these amounts or vote you authority to spend these amounts but in the course of the year something comes up, say larger fishery development, for which no money has been voted by the House. You have no funds?

MR. SMALLWOOD: All we can do is to see if the bank will lend the money. We will guarantee the loan until the House meets. We are not too sure when the House will meet, sometime around the winter or spring. How long will the loan have to be? well as long as the bank will give it, five, six, eight or ten months. The bank agrees so we give the guarantee and the date falls due and the bank gives the money and the construction begins on the money given by the bank. They are short term loans from the bank, not to the Government, to the concerns named but they are guaranteed by us.

MR. HOLLETT: These are the only loans which will fall due this fiscal year?

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is right.

MR. HOLLETT: I was told that the Gaultois Limited had been given a cash loan of $125,000 whereas under Guaranteed Loans they had been guaranteed a loan of $125,000.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is the same thing. They were financed by us in precisely the same manner. We guaranteed a loan at the Bank of Nova Scotia and accepting our guarantee the bank lent the company the money. The loan matured and we then paid the bank. So it appears twice, once as a guarantee and once as a cash loan. It is only the one amount.

MR. BROWNE: According to this cash loan outstanding $425,000 but in 1952 it was supposed to be $170,000 at Gaultois. Amounts guaranteed is $425,000 and amounts outstanding is $170,000, but it says here on the 28th of February this year that the full $425,000 was still outstanding. Down below under guaranteed loans it is Down as $425,000. Is it transferred from guarantee to a loan?

MR. SMALLWOOD: These amounts are on our accounts at the moment to make up $1,885,000. We have not lent them that money at all. It has not left the Treasury. It left the banks following on our guarantee. We asked the House to authorize these amounts; these bank loans guaranteed by the Government. They are short term loans.

MR. HOLLETT: That $1,800,000 is included in the one and a half million the Government will spend next year?

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is right.

MR. HOLLETT: You have in there the money guaranteed last year?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes. It is a common thing to guarantee money and ask the House when it meets to approve it. In a Government so interested in economic development it is likely and especially between sessions of the House it is more likely to happen. I tell the committee quite frequently, if what appears to you to be sound come to us before the House meets again. If it requires a quarter million or one hundred thousand or something we think will strengthen Newfoundland economically, even though we know nothing about it this session, and have not asked the House to authorize us to spend it we will ask the bank to advance the loan and ask the House when we meet to justify our action. We have done it every session.

MR. HOLLETT: We know that and the reason why you harp on it. I wonder where we are going. While the Premier is there he intends to grasp every opportunity that he thinks will strengthen the economy. While he has been there we have spent fifty-five million dollars.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Seventeen million dollars.

MR. HOLLETT: You have spent seventeen million dollars, or we will spend seventeen million this year.

MR. SMALLWOOD: We have spent seventeen million on these industries.

MR. HOLLETT: You could not get it to add up to that if you tried. The Government has borrowed ten million and this year they are borrowing another twelve million and if the present Government is in power next year they will have to borrow another twelve or fifteen million and if they are in power the following year they will have to borrow another ten or twelve million. Where are we and whither tending as a small province with not too many people to pay all this and are we in danger of some day waking up to the fact we have a huge government debt of eighty or one hundred million and we have to keep on raising the taxes to pay the interest.
on that. It has been pointed out here—

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is a speech for Ways and Means.

MR. HOLLETT: I want to point out that every dollar which the Government pays out on the guaranteed loans helps to increase our national indebtedness.

MR. SMALLWOOD: And also helps to build up the province.

MR. HOLLETT: Helps to lift its debts. But we do not build it up if we do not give people employment and so far we have not been successful and the Premier must admit that.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The budget is specially provided to debate these matters.

MR. HOLLETT: I want to speak on this $1,800,000. The question of the amounts of money invested in the Birch Plant. This amount of $55,000 was guaranteed last year, that is in addition to the $150,000 they already had. I think the Minister should make explanations of these loans. They are confusing.

In the Auditor General's Report the Fisheries had a loan with a corresponding loan to Fishery Products Limited. In some instances new people are taking over the loans. Is the Bonavista Fishery and Oils Limited the same as the Bonavista Fishery and Cold Storage?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Not the same but the same ownership largely.

MR. HOLLETT: It is an additional amount. In other words, loaned the Atlantic Films $5,000 since February this year.

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, guaranteed a bank loan.

MR. HOLLETT: I was under the impression Atlantic Films were doing exceedingly well.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, but they are just now getting into the black.

MR. HOLLETT: That is the Grand Bank Fish Plant. Why call it Bonavista Cold Storage?

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is the name of the company.

MR. HOLLETT: No relationship with the cold storage?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No—the same company built another big plant at Grand Bank.

MR. HOLLETT: Out of that loan—they transferred?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, they operate in both places.

Carried.

MR. HOLLETT: A man came to me a couple of days ago looking for a loan because he could not get it. He wanted two or three thousand dollars. He was a mill owner. He had the engine but said he wanted some ready cash to start paying his men, so he went to the Industrial Loan Board but did not succeed in getting a loan.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Of course not, the Act creating the board specifically forbids lending money for anything other than plants and equipment.

MR. HOLLETT: I can't see why.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Maybe he could not meet the conditions the statute requires.

MR. HOLLETT: I don't think that was the trouble.
MR. SMALLWOOD: Maybe not. exactly, Mr. Chairman. I could undertake to find out for the honourable and learned gentleman.

MR. HOLLETT: They have loaned a big lot of money.

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, it is disappointingly small. But then a man before he can borrow has got to be able to meet the conditions that are treated by statute.

DR. ROWE: I have sent several of my constituents to the Board and they have not been able to get a loan.

MR. HOLLETT: I think he was constituent and a strong supporter of a member on the opposite side of the House. I did meet him some years ago. He did want a tractor.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Maybe we ought to amend the legislation, under the Act as it stands now not too many can get a loan. Why not talk about it in the budget speech where time is not the essence.

Department of Provincial Affairs—Department of Education—

MR. HOLLETT: May I ask the Honourable Minister what kind of machinery is to be purchased and all the equipment and plans for the university?

MR. BROWNE: That is all recoverable.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Half from the Department of Ottawa.

MR. BROWNE: Is this the one under which school desks are supplied? It must be, it is the only capital account for Education. Could the Acting Minister of Education tell us how much school desks cost the Government?

MR. MURRAY: I could not say exactly, Mr. Chairman. I could undertake to find out for the honourable and learned gentleman.

MR. BROWNE: The reason I would like to find out is that I believe they have been supplied very cheaply to schools, something like $2.50 a desk.

MR. MURRAY: My understanding is that they are supplied locally by CMIC.

MR. BROWNE: Do you know how much they cost?

MR. SMALLWOOD: There are different types and sizes. There is the type with arms in three sizes and then the type with the desk in three sizes, with six different prices, I would say around $17 and $18. They are very solid, made of birch and kiln dried.

MR. BROWNE: A party informed me he wanted some desks. He could get them for $2.50 each, but had to pay $16, I believe, to import them.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Horwood Lumber never, Gosse did.

MR. MURRAY: I think we did have the prices to import and they could be supplied cheaper locally.
DR. ROWE: I could say the type of desks CMIC makes were formerly imported, but they could not be compared locally at all. We compared prices for the exactly similar desks and our prices compare favourably.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Not only that but they are probably the best desks being made in Canada today. The honourable gentleman ought to go in and see. They have about 25 men at it eight hours a day.

MR. HOLLETT: I would never get out of the place again if I went in there.

MR. SMALLWOOD: If the honourable gentleman likes he could come with me. I will protect him and show him through the plant, and see the plant making school desks.

MR. HOLLETT: Have you a gun with you?

MR. SMALLWOOD: If you come with me I will be your gun man, I am sufficient gun.

MR. HOLLETT: This is a pretty thing. The big CMIC plant costing five million dollars, now they have to set themselves up making school desks. I wish to goodness the Premier would find something for the machine plant to do. Perhaps he will some day.

MR. SMALLWOOD: We might get them making chamber pots.

Carried.

MR. HOLLETT: I am still on my feet, Sir.

MR. SMALLWOOD: And with your back to the wall.

MR. HOLLETT: I am not sitting on anything—and CMIC won’t need to supply—I do say it is rather a pity though that this company should have to get down to the level of making ordinary school desks, and I do think it is a pity any Minister of the Crown should get to his feet and say nobody in Newfoundland could make desks.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Who said that?

MR. HEFFERTON: Mr. Chairman, may I make a little explanation. Probably I know as much as anybody about it. We have been importing desks from quite a number of concerns as long as I can recall, from firms in New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, and we have had one firm locally making desks for the last twenty-five years, one type of desk which proved most unsatisfactory, and as a matter of fact my board of education would not have them. Three or four years ago we found ourselves in a difficult position in as far as trying to get delivery of supplies of desks when we wanted them. We then went to CMIC and asked them whether they could put up a desk, and told them what we wanted, gave them dimensions and material requirements. They saw the type of desk being used in the schools, and gave us a desk which in price ranged roughly $15, $16 and $17, a shade lower than we could import similar desks from outside. As far as I can see there was nothing at all wrong with our employing a firm to give us desks, employing our own men, and obtaining desks as good as we could import. That is the situation on the desks.

MR. HOLLETT: May I ask the Honourable Minister did he take that same desk and plan, to Gosse and Sons at Spaniards Bay? Did the Minister ask them if they could turn out similar desks?
MR. HEFFERTON: I certainly did not, because Gosse could not supply that.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Now may I give an answer?

MR. HOLLETT: One is enough.

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, two is better.

MR. HOLLETT: I asked the Minister of the Crown.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Order. The fact that the Honourable Leader of the Opposition asked the Honourable Minister does not prevent the Premier from answering nor any other member who so desires.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I personally asked that firm of Gosse & Sons and appealed to them to accept a loan from the Government to set up for the manufacture of furniture. The reasons why they would not were no doubt to them good. I could not quarrel with them, and just would not quarrel with their reasons, but the reasons were such that in their view they could not and would not and did not accept a loan, which I urged them to do in my office where we had a talk about it. I saw the opportunity here now to make one to two million dollars worth of furniture yearly. Why not? Can anybody tell me why we can't make tables like that here in Newfoundland as well as they can in Quebec?

MR. HOLLETT: CMIC? Why don't they?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Never mind why they don't. I have other plans for that. Nobody can tell me that you can't make perfectly fine furniture here in Newfoundland, all you need is machinery, that is all, and the skilled men and a bit of capital. It may take a half a million dollars but if you get a good furniture plant it would employ two or three hundred people and would be worth it. That is one thing everybody should be in favour of. We have the wood. We are now paying about two million dollars a year for our furniture in Newfoundland; the Newfoundland people are paying about two million dollars yearly, retail value for furniture. It is big. There is a glorious opportunity for some one to start a completely modern furniture plant, make half a million dollars worth a year and sell it—that is a big turnover for furniture.

Now the negotiations have collapsed with Gosse, but they can be resumed at any time Gosse & Sons want to do so; and if not I got someone else willing to jump at it.

MR. HOLLETT: The Honourable the Premier has not added anything at all. It is all very nice to go to CMIC with a picture book from some firm in the United States and say; "Here is a nice school desk. We want you to make some desks for us." So CMIC makes those desks. I maintain Gosse & Sons and other firms, if the Honourable Minister had gone to them could have made these desks just as well and just as cheaply as CMIC, but these industries were in the air, and certain people were trying to throw everything—even our garages could feel the effect of the CMIC taking a lot of their work.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Not taking one dollar's worth of work from the garages. The honourable gentleman is just talking trash.

MR. HEFFERTON: May I add one or two things, Mr. Chairman? We were dealing with William Dawe & Sons and subsequently Chester Dawe and could not get a satisfactory desk. Then we dealt with Mr. Max Dawe who imported some of the steel fixtures and had the wood imported and again we did not get a satisfactory desk. They could not give us what we wanted. I might add that Gosse & Sons could not even supply the desks they were constructing and kept us tied up so much we were forced to get CMIC or trust to importing them, with a long delivery.

DR. ROWE: If what the honourable gentleman says is true, why did every educational board in St. John's import tens of thousands of dollars worth of desks. I happened to be associated with the Board of Education, which has since 1943 imported tens of thousands of dollars worth of these very desks the honourable gentleman says could be made here. I tell him they could not, and whether they could or not they were not, and we as a board could never get them. Go to any school or college in this city and you will find thousands of dollars worth of these desks which were imported.

MR. HOLLETT: Will the Honourable Minister tell me our people cannot make school desks?

MR. SMALLWOOD: He is not saying they can't. He is saying they were not making them.

MR. HOLLETT: They could. Why did they not? If they went around and asked them could they make one like this or that like they did with the CMIC. It is nonsense to talk like that, as if our Newfoundlanders could not make school desks.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Newfoundlanders are making them. Who, in the opinion of the honourable gentleman, is making them at CMIC if not the Newfoundlanders. There are 25 Newfoundlanders in there making these very desks—he can put that in his pipe and smoke it. The CMIC is employing Newfoundlanders. They have only got about twenty non-Newfoundlanders in there.

MR. HOLLETT: What about Gosse & Sons and Dawe, they employ Newfoundlanders also, from Bay Roberts or someplace—talking nonsense, that is what you are talking.

Carried.

Department of Attorney General:

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, there is a prison camp warden’s residence being constructed on the Salmonier Line. Have they not a mill there, and why could they not build a house there themselves and save considerable on that expenditure of $25,000?

MR. HEFFERTON: They are doing so, Mr. Chairman, more than that they are sawing the lumber.

MR. BROWNE: What is the vote for $25,000?

MR. HEFFERTON: You just must remember the residence has to accommodate quite a number and they will want different offices in that building. Apart from the labour they can use themselves it will also cost considerable for facilities for heat and lighting and for equipment.

Carried.

Department of Mines and Resources:

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, Farm Development Loan Board $100,000, is that the loan fund out of which money has been already loaned?
DR. ROWE: I believe that $30,000 should be down a line there. It looks like a typographical error. We got $20,000, I believe, voted last year.

MR. BROWNE: For loans?

DR. ROWE: Yes, for farm loans.

MR. BROWNE: These are actual cash loans are they? Because I wonder if those people have been advised by the Farm Approval Board?

MR. SMALLWOOD: All the branches here now advertise that actually amongst the farmers.

MR. BROWNE: Do these people make applications for these loans? There seems to be a certain amount of overlapping.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I may say my son-in-law now has no fewer than two, if not three at the bank here, guaranteed by Ottawa for capital etc.

MR. BROWNE: I am glad to know it is being taken advantage of. I know I have talked a good deal about it myself. This is a very good thing—no doubt about it.

MR. BROWNE: There is a vote for fur farming.

DR. ROWE: A token vote in case we do get going on mink development.

MR. BROWNE: What became of the mink we had?

MR. SMALLWOOD: That was disbanded years ago. That was one of the serious mistakes this Government made on bad advice, and we are now trying to work up interest in a great mink raising programme about which Newfoundland and all Canada may hear a little more in the course of this year—it is quite an idea.

MR. BROWNE: It is not easy to rear mink.

MR. HOLLETT: Can you say just what was the cause of the failure?

MR. SMALLWOOD: What failure?

MR. HOLLETT: What caused the failure of the mink?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Nothing has failed that I know of—discontinued. I said it was one of the serious blunders of the Government, I hold, our action about five years ago, in disbANDING the government mink farm.

MR. HOLLETT: Oh!

MR. SMALLWOOD: I think it was a serious blunder.

Carried.

MR. CHAIRMAN: I must advise the Committee it is now five minutes of twelve.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It does not seem possible—I move the Committee rise report progress and ask leave to sit again.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole have considered the matter to them referred and have passed the following capital account estimates—Consolidated Fund Services, Department of Finance, Education, Attorney General, and Mines and Resources.

Report received—Committee ordered sit again on tomorrow.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I move the remaining orders of the day do stand deferred.

Carried.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of the House, I don’t know, quite candidly, until some members of the Opposition, at all events some of us are going at some time tomorrow to Argentia to proceed to St. Lawrence to be present at the opening of the hospital there donated by the United States to the people of Newfoundland. When we will be back is more than I know. Perhaps we would be just as far ahead if we did not rush it too much. I don’t mind confessing to the Opposition I am torn between swearing on them for taking so much time and trying to hold my tongue so they won’t get angry and get stubborn and prolong it. We are trying to get the estimates through because, frankly, we have run out of interim supply. It is as simple as that.

I move the House at its rising do adjourn until tomorrow Monday at 3:00 p.m. of the clock.

On motion the House adjourned until tomorrow, Monday, June 7, at 3:00 of the clock.

MONDAY, June 7, 1954.

The House met at three of the clock in the afternoon, pursuant to adjournment.

Answers to Questions

Question No. 108—Stand.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the Minister of Economic Development could say a word about the copies of the agreement I have asked him about—the birch plant—

HON. J. R. SMALLWOOD (Prime Minister): I have asked the Department of Finance to get the copies.

MR. SPEAKER: I wonder if before we call the Orders of the Day we could give the Minister of Finance an opportunity to see if it is ready.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, may I ask the Premier whether Mr. Doyle of Canada has applied to the Government for permission to build a spur on the Wabush shore of the Labrador railway?

HON. J. R. SMALLWOOD: Yes, they have applied.

MR. BROWNE: Has any decision been made about it?

HON. J. R. SMALLWOOD: No decision has as yet been made.

Orders of The Day

Committee of the Whole on Supply:

MR. SPEAKER: Leave was given yesterday for this Committee to sit again today. I do now leave the Chair.

Chairman of Committee, Mr. Courage:

MR. CHAIRMAN: Page 76—Department of Mines and Resources—02: Last clause carried.

Department of Public Works:
MR. BROWNE: In the details given on page 129, I notice there is a revote of $293,700 out of the $500,000 voted last year—could the Minister tell us how the balance was spent last year?

MR. SMALLWOOD: In the absence of the Minister of Education I can say that none of it was spent last year, in the financial year just past only what was paid to architects. Actual construction has not as yet begun and may not begin in the present calendar year. They are just waiting on plans and specifications. This amount is inserted in the hope that the amount can be spent.

MR. BROWNE: There was some money spent, you had $500,000.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It is simply a revote of that portion of the half million. Virtually none of the half million was spent.

MR. BROWNE: Does the Minister possess any details of this $293,700?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, neither of us does. It possibly would be in connection with one of the buildings they are hoping to commence this year.

MR. BROWNE: Well, does the Minister of Public Works know anything about it?

HON. E. S. SPENCER (Minister of Public Works): Mr. Chairman, I would assume part of the payment for land came out of that particular $500,000 vote. How much was spent I would not know. To the architects there has been paid on account about fifty thousand dollars to date—it is likely in anticipation of building this year.

MR. M. M. HOLLETT (Leader of the Opposition): Does that same explanation apply, Mr. Chairman, to the vote for the vocational school? Has any of that been spent?

MR. SPENCER: That particular vote is in connection with the present extension to the Memorial which is the vocational high school.

MR. HOLLETT: Is it hoped that this $150,000 will take care of this year's operations?

MR. SPENCER: As far as we know, yes. The contract for that building is, I believe and speaking from memory, around $120,000. We bought the steel frames and it is a concrete block building, but not a very extensive job.

MR. BROWNE: But you will need more money than that?

MR. SPENCER: That was earmarked for this year. If they need more they have to go back to the Government and ask for it, but I don't happen to know of anything more at this time.

MR. BROWNE: Where is the magistrate's residence being built?

HON. L. R. CURTIS (Attorney General): At Twillingate. That was a very old building bought by the Government many years ago, and very large. It has been demolished and a new one is being built there.

MR. BROWNE: Do magistrates pay rent?

HON. CURTIS: All magistrates pay $30 a month. Those who have not houses supplied by the Government rent houses outside and the Government pays anything over $30 in that event.

MR. BROWNE: Garage, Fire Patrol, Whitbourne—perhaps the Minister would tell us what that is?
MR. SPENCER: It is merely to take care of unforeseen demands, Mr. Chairman. We find every year that things come in we know nothing of at the time of the estimates.

MR. BROWNE: Is it to be used on capital account?

MR. SMALLWOOD: This whole vote is capital account.

MR. BROWNE: Can it be diverted?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No.

MR. FOGWILL: I notice there is a vote for the Home for the Aged and Infirm. Is it the intention of the Government to begin construction or consider plans for the construction of the new building for the aged and infirm this year?

HON. DR. H. L. POTTLE (Minister of Public Welfare): Mr. Chairman, the Government has approved in principle the idea of replacing the present institution as early as possible.

MR. FOGWILL: Would the Minister care to inform the Committee if the site has been selected.

DR. POTTLE: No site has been selected.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I wonder if the Honourable Minister of Public Works could tell us the amount of money involved in rebuilding the General Hospital since the start of the rebuilding about ten years ago?

MR. SPENCER: That is a question of which I must have notice. There has been quite a sum of money spent in the remodelling of the old building, and there is still much more money to be spent there to take care of the situation, which at the present time is still very desperate, particular-entitled to know, and this gives us an opportunity, without taking too much time, to give the answer. Every year for the past ten perhaps the department has been requesting a machinery vote, and every year without exception, as far as I know, they get a machinery vote. But in no year has it been anywhere nearly sufficient to supply the needs. This year the request was for half a million dollars, and the Government stretched their funds as far as they could and agreed to set the vote at $350,000. I might add, for the information of the honourable gentleman, that where we do not have an opportunity to get the necessary equipment it follows that when work must be done additional equipment must be hired. That policy is followed and we hire a certain amount of equipment as we never have enough on hand in the department to do the work.

MR. HOLLETT: I wonder if the Minister could say at what rates per day?

MR. SPENCER: Standard rates set all over the Dominion.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, sometime ago, I think it was April 6th, I asked the Minister a question. The main question was about advertisements for tenders for road construction or bridge construction during the past fiscal year. I received an answer dealing with Pynn's Brook—South Brook, Middle Brook to Fishells Brook, Codroy Pond to 12 miles east of South Branch, etc. Now one of the questions I asked was; how much money had been spent for work up to date, and in some cases the answer was nil—

MR. SPENCER: That is standard practice, Mr. Chairman. It could very well be some contracts were let late in the year—there are several outstanding at the moment, with very little if any work performed during the past year, or it could happen there had been a certain amount of work performed and payment had not been made for it. It is usually made up on vouchers by our engineers in the field, on the basis of their returns the payments are made for the construction. There are no major outstanding payments on that account.

MR. HOLLETT: I wonder if the Minister could tell us if plans have been made for new construction to cover this item of $1,300,000? Could he give the House any idea as to where the new construction is to take place?

MR. SPENCER: I have referred to it, Mr. Chairman, on several occasions, perhaps not in the House. The honourable gentleman will note there are two amounts there—improvement and reconstruction and new construction. On one or two occasions I have endeavoured to explain to my honourable friends opposite. I remember last year going across the House during a recess and giving them reasons why only $40,000 appeared for St. John's. The reason is that there are four different accounts for road work around the island. First of all there is the maintenance vote for which there are two million dollars, not coming into this at all, but in current account, and then local roads — another vote of about $250,000, that appears too in current account, which the House has already passed. These two votes are accounts towards which money can come for road construction 941-02 (01) and 941-02 (02), one for improvement and reconstruction $700,000 and the other for new construction $1,300,-
I feel that I have voiced my sentiments regarding that previously, but if not I do so now. I would say that of the applications listed in our department or demands that are made to us and petitions received from all over the island this year we have listed amounts which would require perhaps three and a half million dollars instead of two million dollars as in these two votes. We have been as yet unable to determine the exact location of any major job, but we have two million dollars to spread around in thirteen hundred settlements more or less, in and around Newfoundland.

MR. BROWNE: Had the Minister a definite programme last year? As I recall he did give a public statement in which he said where the work was going to be done.

MR. SPENCER: That programme is not completed as the estimates are not yet through.

MR. BROWNE: But in making up the estimates you must have in mind certain roads.

MR. SPENCER: Mr. Chairman, if you will allow me—I have just stated that for these amounts listed we would require three and a half million, and two millions are being voted, unless the House could see its way clear to give us more. If we could vote the amount we could prepare a list then as to where we are prepared to spend it. But inasmuch as I have not got that, if we have two millions where we require three and a half, we have to distribute that amount as best we can and to the best advantage, as we see it. That is the answer. There is no plan to spend the two millions, but there is a plan to spend three and a half millions if we had it.

MR. JACKMAN: Mr. Chairman, I wonder if the Honourable Minister could tell the House how much if any amount has been put aside for new construction on roads on Bell Island?

MR. SPENCER: In reply to the honourable gentleman from Harbour Main-Bell Island I would say we have a plan there, yes, it is true. But there again at this moment I cannot say just how much as I don't know how much we will have to spend there. I have the figures here in front of me of how much we want to spend, but as to how much we can spend when we distribute the amount, at the moment I am unable to say. Now the House must understand these statements do not refer to maintenance, that goes on just the same. The question now is for improvement and reconstruction and new construction, and I cannot say until I know how much we have.

MR. BROWNE: Improvement and reconstruction is a pretty broad item, and certainly many of these roads are in a pretty bad state of disrepair and need reconstruction. But this two million dollars the Minister is asking for seems to me a blank cheque for up to two million dollars which he can use where he sees fit.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Where he sees fit? No.

MR. BROWNE: Where the Government sees fit then. The House has no say as to where it is to be spent at all. Why could not the Minister come to those decisions before he came to the House, or the Government come to these decisions before coming to the House, and tell us where he proposes to spend, a hundred here and a hundred there. We know we are voting for new construction to be spent afterwards wherever the Government and the Minister decides. And I can imagine the Minister and the Premier getting together and saying: we put it over on the Opposition; and we won't spend a cent in their district.

MR. SPENCER: In that case we had better wipe out the amount for St. John's East and West. Perhaps the honourable gentleman wants me to do that?

MR. BROWNE: No—but I say it is possible that could be done.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The honourable gentleman is very suspicious.

MR. BROWNE: I know it is nothing in proportion to the amount of revenue which the Government gets from St. John's.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The honourable gentleman suggests the amounts we spend ought to bear some relationship to the amount received by the Government.

MR. BROWNE: I am not referring to anything at this time, but it is a well known fact that in the City of St. John's there are thousands of motor cars and heavy traffic and wear and tear upon the roads, and in consequence it is obvious there must be repair work going on all the time. That is only to be expected.

I want to refer in particular now to a petition which was sent in to be referred to the Department of Public Works, from Fairhaven in the district of my honourable friend in the Department of Finance. The petition asks either to build a road to the railway or go on to the highway, which I believe has been under consideration. That is certainly an isolated place and they are under terrific hardship in getting back and forth to hospital.

MR. SPENCER: We have that in mind.

MR. BROWNE: I am glad to know that.

In regard to that construction, there was a road built from Trepassey to St. Shotts to Peters River two years ago. It is a very good road or at least was last year. I was astonished when I was told it only cost two thousand dollars. To me it seemed incredible that a road of that length could be built for such a small amount of money—it must be ten miles long, in good condition, wide and straight over the hill. They must have had very good ground to work upon. Possibly the Minister remembers the cost of that. But if a road could be built like that there is no reason why every community could not have them.

MR. SPENCER: I agree with the honourable gentleman. Apparently the expenditure on that road he referred to was for one year. It is quite obvious, as everyone in the House knows, a road ten miles long cannot be built for two thousand dollars. That road has been under construction ever since I went into the Department of Public Works in 1949. I recall very vividly arranging a meeting with the Honourable the Premier and the executive committee to discuss the matter with a delegation from Peters River. That delegation was well received, and I was instructed to do what I could by the executive committee, and for the past four years have spent money on the road. I am very proud the honourable gentleman went over it and thinks it is a good road.
MR. BROWNE: I hope to be able to go over the road between the high-road and Fairhaven and say the same thing.

MR. SMALLWOOD: If the honourable member hangs around a little longer he will find we are the greatest road builders in Newfoundland.

MR. SPENCER: I do not wish to delay the Committee any further but when we were putting through the current accounts the other day the honourable member for St. John's West referred to roads, and this is the same topic. On that occasion he pointed out for my information and perhaps for the information of the House that there was a section of road leading from Cape Spear, off towards Maddox Cove, which the honourable gentleman was pleased to say would provide a very nice piece of pleasure driving and a nice little loop around to connect these two sections of road. I have looked into that as I told the honourable gentleman I would do, but I have to point out again that we have still only 360,000 or 380,000 people in this island, and it is a physical impossibility, which will shortly be shown when the records are presented to the Federal Government in connection with the reviewing of the terms of unions—that this island with 380,000 people can just not possibly provide sufficient money to make pleasure roads. Now I admit, as I did in a recent talk to Rotary, where I was talking to most of the St. John's people or most of the audience were, I take it, St. John's people, I pointed out our aim was and still is and will be as long as I have any voice in the road work in the department over which I now preside, to provide a loop out of St. John's in addition to what we have at the present time, at both ends. I am very anxious and my Department of Public Works has plans in mind to provide a loop of the west end to come back possibly by Witless Bay. We don't know as yet, whichever is the cheaper, into Holyrood Road and back via Topsail Road. For the East End we want to go out, say, along the lines suggested by my honourable friend from St. John's East the other day, through perhaps, the Marine Drive to Pouch Cove and back by way of the Bauline Line and Portugal Cove Road. These two loops will provide two very fine outlets. But in the main, Mr. Chairman, these will be for the pleasure of the people concerned here, and I agree, I am one of the people who would like very much to drive over them; but unfortunately we have a small revenue available from 380,000 people, and I think it follows service roads must come before pleasure roads. I do hope the House will note my comments in that regard—the roads to service the people must come before pleasure roads, although we must realize we must try to give some pleasure too. I am satisfied from the very fine service we have received from the Department of Public Works within the past two years that a great deal is being accomplished, and people are beginning to realize that a great deal of pleasure is being given them through the provision of roads in Newfoundland.

MR. FOGWILL: Mr. Chairman, I have listened very carefully to the Honourable Minister, and he did refer to one particular road which may be classed as a pleasure road, but the road that I referred to a few days ago, and also to which some reference was made a moment ago by the Honourable Minister in respect of St.
John's East, the Marine Drive and Logy Bay Road, are not pleasure roads. These roads are utility roads used by thousands of citizens down in that area to come to St. John's who use these roads for business purposes every day, and possibly over a thousand people come to work in St. John's besides other people who come up for other business they may have to do. I just want to point out the fact that these are utility roads. Special parts of the little road which goes down for a part of the Marine Drive may be classed as a pleasure road, but there are many people living all along these roads.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Hear, hear!

MR. HOLLETT: I am under the impression that not as much money was spent on roads last year as was voted by this House.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I think we spent more.

MR. HOLLETT: On certain parts of the programme.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Over all.

MR. HOLLETT: I don't think so. I meant all around the island, throughout the country.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Much more—we spent more.

MR. HOLLETT: What I do want to point out, Sir, speaking of pleasure roads and service roads, I think the service roads between the sections are absolutely essential for the people to carry on their day to day duties and that sort of thing. The road which was brought up by my honourable friend on my right is not in my opinion a pleasure road at all, although he may have inadvertently referred to it as a pleasure road.

MR. BROWNE: The section I am most interested in is that section between Maddox Cove and Petty Harbour, a distance, I think, of less than a mile. I remember distinctly getting in touch with the Department last year when this road was made practically impassible after a very heavy storm of rain, and I was informed that nothing could be done. Now they have there, I think, twenty odd families in Maddox Cove who are unable to come east to Cape Spear and have to come into the city via Petty Harbour. Now that certainly is not a pleasure road. They have to use that road every day, and I fail to see how or why the Honourable Minister can bring up the matter of pleasure roads. We in St. John's East and West are not looking for pleasure roads, but we are looking to utility roads to the various sections such as this road in the west end and Portugal Cove and St. Phillips and Petty Harbour and the road up over the hill to Blackhead, and to Maddox Cove. Now the Honourable Minister will remember that road was built there many years ago between Cape Spear Road and Maddox Cove. Now I am not asking for any great improvement on that particular section, but I am asking that some consideration may be given to that small part of the road leading from Maddox Cove to Petty Harbour, as after all, their isolation there is made much more so if the road is impassible.

MR. SPENCER: Mr. Chairman, the honourable gentleman may be glad to know, if for the first time or not, that particular road like a good many others which come under the maintenance of the Department is considered a secondary road, from Petty Harbour out to Maddox Cove where there is a community existing, and to that extent does receive maintenance from our department. Now again I merely repeat the great need is there. There are still many many greater needs and demands than—with all due respect to my honourable friend—Maddox Cove—I know some people out there, I have had them in my office—very fine people, and I am very glad we are able to do something for them. There are, as the honourable gentleman says, about twenty or thirty families out there. I could name many communities around the island where we have fifty, and perhaps a hundred families with no road whatsoever. Now I don't want to stress that point. The honourable gentleman knows as well as I do that is so, but I merely want to point out that I might point to the efforts of the Department since it has been my pleasure to serve in it and to the fact that there have been more of these communities connected up within the last four years than within any other twenty-five years or so of government road building throughout Newfoundland. I am not asking for compliments, but I do think that is so.

MR. HOLLETT: I realize that, Mr. Chairman, and congratulate the Minister on the work he has done. I must say it is a pleasure to deal with the Department of Public Works although we don't always get what we come for and don't expect to do so. The reason I referred to this particular road was that I did not want the House to have the impression the honourable and learned member on my right was asking for pleasure roads for St. John's. I do repeat that I think the Department of Public Works has done very excellent work with the money it has at its disposal, and I would like through the Minister to congratulate him and also his assis-

Canada standards. Now there are another perhaps couple of hundred miles which have to be brought up to Trans-Canada standards, and there are about 125 miles which have not yet been touched. We hope to close one gap of about thirty-five or thirty miles this year. The main gap will be between Clarenville and Gander. It has been found that our costs have mounted steadily year after year in accordance with demands for wages and equipment until today our cost per mile is from fifty to sixty thousand dollars for grading.

MR. FOGWILL: By grading, Mr. Chairman, the Honourable Minister means, ready for paving?

MR. SPENCER: Rough grading is the building of a road to grade, out of the material which the terrain supplies. The greater part of the soil throughout Newfoundland unfortunately does not give the building material required for the building of a road to HS20 standard—that is a technical term. Now I will give it in everyday language. In other words, for traffic to carry that load a certain standard base is required. Our soil does not ordinarily provide that, so we have to put on what is known as a granular sub-base, or if you like, crushed rock over many miles of that road. This will cost another five or ten thousand dollars per mile depending on the thickness. Then the paving will cost from twenty to thirty thousand dollars a mile for standard 22 ft. paving. If we add sixty thousand dollars maximum for grading and fifteen thousand dollars where we must put on a rock base and, say, twenty-five thousand, in round figures, our Trans-Canada Highway will cost today one hundred thousand dollars a mile.

I would just add this word, and then I am finished. On this point recently in comparison with our sister provinces in the Maritimes, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, some of whose conditions are somewhat similar to ours, we have been advised that our estimate, as it is placed at one hundred thousand dollars per mile, is below what it will cost them to do the work; in spite of the fact people think we are spending more than Nova Scotia for road construction. I am in a position to supply the actual figures. I have the tabulated figures for the last number of years, where I find they estimate their Trans-Canada Highway is to cost about $125,000 per mile.

I think that gives the answer to the honourable gentleman. But for this year, I might add, under current account we plan to spend $2,700,000 on roads for both maintenance and improvements and reconstruction, and under capital account our vote is seven and three-quarter millions, round figures. In other words, eleven and a half million dollars to be spent this year. There is a tremendous amount of work to be done. It is a matter of funds, which is something the honourable gentlemen opposite know as well as I do—it just cannot be tackled all at one time.

MR. FOGWILL: Is the Department going to do any paving this year?

MR. SPENCER: Very little, possibly six or seven miles.

MR. BROWNE: Does your department publish an annual report?

MR. SPENCER: No.

MR. BROWNE: I know it is rather late in the day, but would it not be a good idea if in the future the Department of Public Works published a report showing the work done during the year. We did have a report of work done largely by voluntary assistance, but that only deals with a comparatively small amount of money, but this would be very much more important to the public and the House, to know how much money is being spent out of this eleven million dollars.

MR. SPENCER: If it becomes statutory it is okay with us.

MR. BROWNE: The Attorney General is not present, but I think it should be a matter of routine every year for every department to give an account of what it is doing. I don't see how the members of the House can intelligently discuss what is going on otherwise—the Minister knows better than anyone just how little we know.

MR. SPENCER: The honourable members got all the information asked for.

MR. BROWNE: I know. We should not be expected to ask. It should come in printed form.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Then the Opposition would not have anything to do but could just stay at home and read the reports. Then what would the Opposition do if they did not ask questions, and if all the answers were given before the House opened—why open the House except to pass the estimates?

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, the Premier knows this is, the place for discussion. In other places the basis for discussion should be laid down, the work should be laid down, and we should have a report. The Minister of Labour gave a report of the work of his compensation board, for example—we wanted to know if the Minister of Public Works would tell us where he spent his money. Now going back to that answer dealing with sixty miles of road and only $320,000 spent. Now can the Minister tell me if this was the construction programme, the whole construction programme for last year. The question I asked was for copies of all advertisements for tenders for road construction or bridge construction during the past fiscal year, or where the tenders issued the year before—was there a programme for last year amounting to two and a half million dollars?

MR. SPENCER: I speak from memory as I have not the figures I gave you now.

MR. BROWNE: If that was the programme only three hundred thousand had been spent. What happened to the other two hundred thousand dollars balance? And the Minister also told us that in the last year not a sod had been turned on much of that work. Does that mean we are tied up on that?

MR. SPENCER: It does not. In reply to the honourable gentleman, the contracts may be let on which very little work was accomplished last year, that is quite true, and more contracts are let now on which nothing has been done to date. The actual figures the honourable gentleman has there, I am not in a position to say just what he is referring to. I repeat, the contracts, some of which were let as we got the survey work done and ready to call for them, we called for as quickly as we can irrespective of the time of year. He was told, in answer to his question what mileage was done last year. Contracts might run into hundreds of thousands of dollars over and above the figures that were given up there. For instance I have told you the programme was for two and a quarter millions last year for Trans-Canada, of which the Federal Government, after we complete the work, will contribute half of that contract cost. Now whether or not the sixty miles of road you referred to here and the total expenditure is only three hundred thousand dollars—I am at a loss to find out just what that is—but I would say it is the amount of money due contractors at the time the last returns were sent in at the end of the fiscal year, and there might be some still outstanding. At the end of the fiscal year we will very definitely have contracts out which will not be completed within the year, I am quite certain of that.

MR. BROWNE: You are not able to do that work this year. You have here seven millions voted, but you are not able to do that work this year?

MR. SPENCER: We will now. Our contractors have been requested to step up to that extent. The big one we are very anxious about this year, as the House has been told before, Mr. Chairman, is to endeavour to close the gap between Port aux Basques and Corner Brook, in connection with the agreement between the Federal Government and the new ferry. To that end we are planning to build a total of thirty-four miles I believe, speaking from memory of the Trans-Canada Highway in that area this year. In addition to that we will utilize several miles of former roads in order to make the connection through from Port aux Basques out to Robinsons, through farm roads and back to the Trans-Canada Highway on through St. Georges by the present road system. So that in that area alone this year we hope to build thirty-two and a half, I think it is, Trans-Canada Highway miles to ordinary grade. That is not paved road. We have not paved one inch of the Trans-Canada Highway yet, not one inch, and have not started paving on the Trans-Canada Highway. I think that just about gives your answer, and if it does not, it is all I can give.

MR. BROWNE: The Minister could add whether all this work is in process of construction now.

MR. SPENCER: They are not but they will be very soon.

MR. HOLLETT: I wonder if the Honourable Minister could tell us whether it is the intention to complete the road between Buchans and Grand Falls this year?

MR. SPENCER: Yes, we do hope so. The contracts are ready for it now.

MR. FOGWILL: Mr. Chairman, I have one more question to ask. The Minister spoke of a road connecting the highway between Corner Brook and Port aux Basques. Do I understand that bridges on that section of the highway will be completed also?

MR. SPENCER: Some of them, not all.

MR. FOGWILL: Will the long one be completed?

MR. SPENCER: We plan a through road. Some bridges will be built, but others will not.

Carried.

941-03—Wharves and Ferries:

MR. BROWNE: Ferry construction $10,000, Mr. Chairman, what does that mean?
MR. SPENCER: Mr. Chairman, that ten thousand dollar vote is the balance outstanding against the Placentia Gut Ferry, last year, and we had to vote a certain amount this year to take care of the winding up of that particular construction vote. Now perhaps the honourable gentleman would want to know what the $490,000 is for? I think the House is well aware, Mr. Chairman, we will be building two docks for Bell Island Ferry and two docks for Placentia Ferry. That sum is voted to take care of these two particular docks, four in all, of course, one in Portugal Cove, one at Bell Island and the two at Placentia, one at Placentia and one at Jerseyside. These docks are to be completed this year, and it is our very sincere hope that we can complete them for the summer.

MR. BROWNE: What is the cost of the Placentia one?

MR. SPENCER: The contract is for $269,190.

MR. JACKMAN: Mr. Chairman, I certainly don’t wish to disturb the Minister, but as a matter of interest to all the people on Bell Island, I wonder if the Minister would give any indication as to when this landing on Bell Island will be finished. I understand the one at Portugal Cove is practically finished. But the one at Bell Island has not been touched as yet. I wonder if the Minister could give any indication as to when work is to begin on the construction of the new landing at Bell Island?

MR. SPENCER: In reply, Mr. Chairman, I would like to say I have this very day had a discussion with the company that is to operate the boats there, and I was able to tell him, as I can now tell the honourable member, the tenders have either been publicized or are about to be publicized for the completion of the Portugal Cove dock. After that is completed the tenders will be called for the one on Bell Island. The plans are ready, and I would be very proud to have the pleasure of showing these to the honourable gentleman and to my honourable friend who represents the Government, who has not seen them. The Portugal Cove dock will perhaps be completed in two months—now that is pulling a figure out of the wall—I would think the one on Bell Island would take until pretty late in the fall. I would not be too sure, but perhaps up in November—no one knows. The plans are ready and we propose to call for tenders to construct that dock within the next few weeks.

MR. JACKMAN: I hope you will have that dock completed before Christmas anyway. I have a very special reason for that.

MR. SPENCER: We will strive towards that end, I assure you.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Chairman, far be it from me to delay the progress of the Committee, but I feel I ought to say just a word or two on this question of ferries, ferry construction and ferry landings. It is our hope also as a Government to make headway this year, this calendar year, 1954, if we can, with a new ferry service on the Humber Arm, or on the very low part of the Lower Humber River, to connect both sides of Bay of Islands. I cannot add much to that except that it is the Government’s hope in this calendar year to make some progress in the matter of a ferry service connecting both sides of Bay of Islands.
MR. BROWNE: Is the Federal Government footing any of the bill for the ferry to Bell Island?

MR. SMALLWOOD: For the landings, no.

MR. BROWNE: I wonder if the Minister is in a position to tell us when the ferry landings will be finished in Placentia and when the ferry will be in operation?

MR. SPENCER: I cannot say, in this present year. The ferry is to be launched on the 16th of this month. The dock, I understand, on the Jersey-side is well advanced, and the material is in place on the Placentia side to begin the construction. I am merely guessing, and the honourable gentleman is just as good at that as I am, but I would think possibly, if one were prepared to stick out one's neck a little, I think we ought to have it in operation by the end of August. That is just pulling a date out of the air.

Carried.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Chairman, I would suggest the Committee rise for a ten minutes recess.

Department of Health:

1071—Fixed Assets:

MR. BROWNE: I wonder if the Premier would like to make any observations on the ceremony at St. Lawrence?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Chairman, I don’t know if I could add anything to what the press and radio account gave. There was a very large crowd of people, the largest I have ever seen on the Southwest Coast in any one place and at any one time. The fog was as thick as I have ever seen it. The destroyer was for two and a half hours outside the entrance of the harbour in the thickest fog you could imagine waiting for an ore boat to come out, because they could not go in until the ore boat was out. She then nosed her way in an inch at a time. So we got into the harbour and inched up to the wharf. A few minutes later the fog rose and we saw the town and harbour for the first time. From the top of the hill at the end of the harbour we had a most magnificent view overlooking the harbour, where we could see the shipping and the destroyer bedecked. The whole thing was very beautiful. The sun came out for about twenty minutes when the fog again settled in until we could not see a sign of the harbour. It came to the edge of the crowd and blotted out the people and we were surrounded in just a little circle by the fog. The fog was cold and raw, nevertheless there was a very fine spirit, a very good spirit indeed. The ceremony was quite impressive, and the people of Lawn and St. Lawrence were very proud of it and their record, and, I believe, at the same time were very grateful to the Americans for the extraordinary fine hospital. There was a good spirit all around.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, if I might say a word now—in regard to that hospital I am very glad that the Honourable the Premier and some of his associates were able to attend that function because, well, I come from up there in that District of Burin and I can assure the Honourable the Premier and the Government they can turn out the finest fog in the world.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I would not say the finest—I would say the thickest.
MR. HOLLETT: A good spot to start a new industry on fog. What I want to say is that I think we all join in paying a tribute to the generosity of the Americans for this wonderful and noble gesture which they have made on account of the efforts of the people of Lawn and St. Lawrence and other areas nearby in doing their utmost, as naturally they would do, to save the lives of American sailors and soldiers on that day during the war. It was a very tragic affair when two ships almost at the same time ran into the cliffs there. At that time the people of the area did everything possible to save lives and to provide the comforts which were necessary under the circumstances. I can assure you, Mr. Chairman, I join with the whole House in expressing our heartfelt thanks to the American people for this noble gesture.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Chairman, perhaps it would be agreeable to the Committee if all of us present were to stand and express our congratulations to the people of St. Lawrence and Lawn for their great heroism ten years ago and our gratitude to the American people for their fine generosity in donating the hospital—if we could all just stand and show our feelings.

Applause.

MR. BROWNE: This $100 for furnishings, cottage hospital is a small vote—I take it a token vote?

MR. SMALLWOOD: It keeps the vote there. The honourable gentleman probably knows by now, if not before this year, we have set up certain votes whereby we vote any money under the heading of that vote in any given year, and we hold the vote there sometimes by putting in a token.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, would the Honourable Minister care to state the number of cottage hospitals now in the province?

HON. P. S. FORSEY (Minister of Health): I can't say offhand—somewhere over twenty, twenty-three, I believe.

MR. HOLLETT: I take it, Mr. Chairman, these cottage hospitals are all adequately staffed. Could we have some assurance on that point—adequately staffed as to nurses and doctors?

MR. FORSEY: Perhaps I would not say adequately. They are when we can obtain the nurses. At this particular moment I don't think there are any cottage hospitals understaffed, but next week maybe the position may be different.

Carried.

1074—Other:

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, what is the arrangement between non-government hospitals and the Government regarding the construction of hospitals? What percentage does the Government pay. I notice here $395,000 in connection with the Grace Hospital?

MR. FORSEY: This is the grant for the Grace Hospital made three years ago, and was made in three parts, forty-five per cent is reimbursable by the Federal Government. It is so much a bed, somewhere in the neighbourhood of $2,000 a bed.

MR. HOLLETT: How much, Mr. Chairman, altogether has now been paid over to International Grenfell? What is the total amount, somewhere near a million dollars?

MR. FORSEY: No.
MR. HOLLETT: Over eight hundred thousand some time ago.

MR. FORSEY: That is since Confederation and includes Federal health grants.

Carried.

Department of Public Welfare:

MR. BROWNE: Could we ask the Honourable Minister what is that—Northern Labrador?

DR. POTTLE: These are for exactly what they say; buildings and boats. It may be anything—enlarging of depots or building of new schools. Now these are capital costs which may be shared with the Dominion of Canada—two-thirds—one-third basis up to two hundred thousand dollars. That is to say agreed proposals in the field of health, welfare and education will be shared two-thirds being paid by the Dominion Government and one-third by us as our share. We will have to put in the gross, possibly, for the time being.

MR. BROWNE: Is that the gross?

DR. POTTLE: No, that would be net, our share.

MR. HOLLETT: Does the Department of Welfare build any schools in Labrador?

DR. POTTLE: We have not built any lately—rehabilitation of Labrador, the building of schools and for instance a resident school at Nain might be one of the projects, and we are anticipating that may be the one.

Carried.

Department of Municipal Affairs and Supply:

MR. BROWNE: For Town Councils I notice the vote is three times that of last year. Could the Minister say a few words about that?

MR. HEFFERTON: All I can say, Mr. Chairman, is that we have three times as many and the requests are three times what we had last year. It arises from this. Town Councils may want some considerable work done, not heavy enough to call for a bond issue, and consequently they appeal to the Government, and if the request is granted then the Government makes them loans as councils.

MR. BROWNE: This is an expenditure?

MR. HEFFERTON: It says loans.

MR. HOLLETT: That item Co-operative Housing—I think I raised this question before, Mr. Chairman—with regard to the assessment for rental purposes, and I pointed out that in some instances family allowances amounts were added to the earnings of the father in order to—

MR. SMALLWOOD: These have nothing whatever to do with rental—this is ownership of houses. The man owns it outright. It is not rental housing. That comes later, but not under this item.

MR. HOLLETT: All right, Mr. Chairman, if you want to defer it, I will raise it again.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I want to speak on co-operative housing. I want to know if any places outside the City of St. John's have houses being built on the co-operative plan in which the Government are assisting?

MR. HEFFERTON: At the present time, Sir, there are some nine co-operative groups in town and one outside. Corner Brook, is under consideration at the present time. Or to the best of our knowledge, there are seven, and three in the process of being formed in the immediate present at Gander. Just how many there are to be during the year I am unable to say. We are hoping this amount may be decreased this year by means of a plan we are negotiating with C M & H at the present time.

MR. BROWNE: Very good.

1341—Investments:

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, I wonder if the Minister would state whether there is any intention of altering the system of financing the rental. The way I look at it the man who has children and is getting some family allowance it is rather unfair to have that added to his earnings in order to make a higher rental. It would mean that a man with four or five children would have to pay a higher rental than a man and his wife in a similar home. The family allowance, of course, is meant for clothing of the child and I think it is rather unfair to add it into the husband's income and thus raise the rental which has to be paid by the father. In that particular matter I wonder if the Minister would care to make any statement?

MR. HEFFERTON: Mr. Chairman, first of all let me deal with the vote, there are three projects mentioned there.

In answer to the question raised by the Honourable Leader of the Opposition, the conditions are laid down by the Federal Government, remember we are a minor part, 25%, and consequently we have to accept conditions, and that is why the family allowance is included as part of the income for assessing the total income of the person.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I would like the Minister to tell the Committee how much money is actually involved in housing in these figures. Is that the gross on which we will get reimbursement or do you add three-quarters to this total to make it three times as much?

MR. HEFFERTON: This involves this year possibly $750,000, but that is recoverable when these jobs are done, because C M & H reimburses us and takes a mortgage on the work.

MR. FOGWILL: The offset here of revenue is very high.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The honourable gentleman does not follow my point. Take the half million, for example, in co-operative housing, that half million cash expenditure by this Government in turn is an expenditure by the Government of Canada for three or four times as much, or much more than that, because what we do, I think, is to advance four or five or six hundred dollars per house, and if you divide five hundred thousand by, say, five hundred dollars, that is a lot of houses. On that number of houses the Government of Canada has to advance enormous sums, because they take over the mortgages on the houses as roofed in, they advance all that has been spent up to there, they reimburse the Newfoundland Government and every one concerned; that is largely the Newfoundland Government but not entirely. They advance in addition to that the full remaining costs of the house. So that, if we spend half a million dollars as advances in co-operative houses, what is involved is a much larger sum on housing. Now that half-million is not an expenditure by us at all but merely an advance. So that the net expenditure by us, I am surprised to find, is one hundred thousand dollars, because this is all loans and investments.

MR. HEFFERTON: Under 1341 (01) all we are dealing with is projects partially completed, except landscaping, and is held back until the contractors complete the whole thing. The only new project at the present time would be 1341-03 (03), which is a Federal project—that is slum clearance here in St. John's.

MR. HEFFERTON: 1341-02 that is capital account $7,500, capital, part of the interest taken over by the Government on a one million dollar investment that the St. John's City Council had.

Carried.

MR. HEFFERTON: 03-(1) that is the completion of the project in St. John's—03 (02) in Corner Brook and 03 (03) is the beginning of the one in the central area of St. John's, slum clearance, I assume that will start this year. Burin is the completion of a land assembly job which is already partly done.

MR. BROWNE: They were all blocked together last year. There was nothing spent on 03-(03) last year, was there?

MR. HEFFERTON: No, nothing. But there was quite a heavy expenditure on Corner Brook.

MR. BROWNE: Why is the bracket put around it?

MR. HEFFERTON: Because it is a land assembly.

MR. BROWNE: What does that mean?

MR. HEFFERTON: Servicing the land, getting ready for housing projects, water and sewerage. 04 is merely a housing project. Nothing has been done on it as yet.

Carried.

1344—Other: $347,000.

MR. BROWNE: May we have some information on that? It is a big item.

MR. HEFFERTON: It is quite a big item. It must be borne in mind, however, we have thirty-four town councils at the present time and somewhere around sixteen community councils, and we are negotiating for another four or five. The same thing applies as to the amount to which I made a reference a few moments ago—projects come up where town councils are not able to raise a bond issue as the amount involved is too small and we accede to their request and give them a loan, and sometimes we may give them a grant. For instance last year we gave twenty-five thousand to Corner Brook as a special grant for fire fighting apparatus. You can see where there are quite a number of grants which have to be made in the course of the year.

MR. BROWNE: How did you make that grant, not under the vote?

MR. HEFFERTON: No, there was a block vote for it.

MR. BROWNE: Who is this $370,000 to be given to?

MR. HEFFERTON: That is allocated amongst the different town councils, in accordance with what we consider the urgency of their particular requirements.

MR. BROWNE: But how many of them will get money?
MR. HEFFERTON: Maybe five and maybe ten, I cannot tell.

MR. BROWNE: It would help the Committee, I think, if information like that were brought in in advance. Who is getting it? We have no idea where that is going now.

MR. HEFFERTON: I might add also, Mr. Chairman, that several of the town councils which have been given authority to raise bond issues, the Government there obligates itself to pay 60% of the interest charges. That is included, of course, in this special vote.

MR. BROWNE: Do you remember any of the town councils which will get this money?

MR. HEFFERTON: No. I could give you some of the town councils.

MR. BROWNE: Could you bring in the information, say, tomorrow?

MR. HEFFERTON: We have not decided yet who is to get it or what is to be given.

MR. BROWNE: That is what gets me. I do not understand—how is it carried out—is there so much for Corner Brook—I don’t know if Bonavista will get any or not?

HON. G. J. POWER (Minister of Finance): May I add a word? That amount was determined by taking the total vote in the current year 1953-54.

MR. BROWNE: Where did you find that?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Private notes.

MR. BROWNE: That was the amount actually loaned last year?

MR. HEFFERTON: As a matter of fact—this may help a little bit—last year our estimates were included in special assistance—$280,000 in current account. This year we thought that belonged to capital account. We transferred it out of current account. We have some seven, eight or ten additions this year, so that acting on that we put down this amount.

MR. BROWNE: This is not returnable?

MR. HEFFERTON: Well, look at Capital Revenue and we can see whether or not that is so.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, just what form does that assistance take, to satisfy what expenditure or shortage or what not?

MR. HEFFERTON: Mostly interest on bonds.

MR. HOLLETT: Does the Government then pay the interest on these municipal council bonds?

MR. HEFFERTON: Half.

MR. HOLLETT: What is the total amount that has been issued by all the town councils in bond issues?

MR. HEFFERTON: I could not tell without checking. I could find out.

MR. HOLLETT: Could we have the information tomorrow?

MR. HEFFERTON: Yes, I will get the information for you tomorrow.

MR. BROWNE: I wonder if the Minister could give me details of the amount spent last year under this heading, which the Minister of Finance said amounted to $300,000.

MR. POWER: $347,000.

MR. BROWN: That is in addition to the $80,000 that is here. But he says the figures he has show $347,000 as special assistance to town councils last year?

MR. SMALLWOOD: He did not say that—I have the same note here as he has before him, and he could not have said that. He said that amount of $347,000 has been fixed by taking the total of the authorized expenditure in the year 1953-54, deducting bond issues and adding the per cent to the bond issue payment made in 1954-55. He could not say this is the amount which was spent last year.

MR. BROWNE: Well was it?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I don’t know—I doubt it.

MR. HEFFERTON: Here is the note, Sir, which I want—the amount is being determined by taking the total of authorized expenditure of account in 1953-54.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is the same note I just had.

Carried.

Department of Fisheries and Co-operatives:

MR. HOLLETT: Under 1440-01, I wonder if the Minister would tell us what this $330,000 takes care of?

HON. W. J. KEOUGH (Minister of Fisheries and Co-operatives): That $330,000 is to take care of two commitments made by the Government in fisheries development, and henceforth all such commitments will appear under the budget for the Fisheries Development Authority. The reason these two appear here is because these two commitments were given by the Government before the Fisheries Development Authority was appointed. $300,000 is to cover a commitment, or part of a commitment to Fisheries Products. The House may recall that in last year’s estimates there was authorized in capital account for the expenditure of the sum of one million four hundred thousand dollars. Subsequently the Government entered into agreement with Fishery Products whereby they undertook to make that sum available to Fishery Products. Six hundred and fifty thousand of it was to be for the general purpose of the company and seven hundred and fifty thousand of it was to be invested in capital assets that would enable development of commercial production of block frozen fish at various places around Newfoundland, to be further processed at Trepassey. This six hundred and fifty thousand was paid out last summer, July, and the seven hundred and fifty thousand was to be paid out in monthly instalments of fifty thousand dollars per month, and that ran to four hundred and fifty thousand dollars, and the three hundred thousand is to cover the balance of that commitment, fifty thousand dollars a month for April, May, June, July, August and September. The making of that loan available to Fishery Products enabled the company to purchase a plant at St. Anthony from Northlantic Fisheries, Job Brothers, and to install therein two plate freezers. I am not quite sure if there is a filleting machine there or not. They completed the installations last fall. There was some production last fall but it was too late to have any great production of block frozen fish last year. They go into production this year as soon as conditions open up down there. Then in the plants at Long Harbour and Greenspond there are plate freezing plants with bait and filleting machines. This enabled considerable expansion of the facilities at Trepassey to further provide block frozen fish and enable somewhat of an expansion of the facilities at Burin further to enable the production of block frozen fish, and provided for the equipping of a refrigerated carrier, and the equipping of a carrier for offal. The $30,000 is to cover a commitment given by the Government to O'Brien Brothers of Witless Bay in respect of the erection of a small frozen fish plant there for that place.

MR. HOLLETT: I wonder if the Minister would care to say just how much has been loaned now to Fishery Products. I have a reply but this seems to make it a somewhat different statement—I wonder if he knows the total amount?

MR. KEOUGH: As of this moment roughly two million dollars. In the succeeding item 1444, there is a proposal under fisheries development to loan the Fishery Products another million and a half which would bring it to three million six hundred dollars.

MR. HOLLETT: That $800,000 is included in that, or is it in addition?

MR. KEOUGH: No, that figure I gave you would be exclusive of that.

MR. FOGWILL: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the Minister—

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, has the Minister any idea when the Trepassey Plant will be working?

MR. KEOUGH: My latest understanding is that Greenspond, Long Harbour and Trepassey will go into production this month or early next month.

MR. FOGWILL: I was going to ask, the fifty thousand that was loaned is that to be given to the fund?

MR. KEOUGH: As the honourable gentleman knows, the Government in setting up the Fisheries Loan Board made available to it the sum of half a million dollars. That is the estimate of the Board of the working capital they would require to enable them to meet the loans they anticipate during the coming year. In other words; if this vote passed, this money is made available to them.

MR. HOLLETT: They have loaned about $170,000.

MR. KEOUGH: I think it is more than that, around $275,000.

MR. BROWNE: This $330,000 has already been loaned, has it?

MR. KEOUGH: No, it is committed. Fifty thousand dollars of it has been made available out of temporary supply, voted to the department, and another two hundred and fifty thousand has to be paid.

MR. HOLLETT: All right.

Carried.

1444—Other:

MR. HOLLETT: I wonder if the Honourable Minister could explain what that Fisheries Experimental Grant means?

MR. KEOUGH: Some eight or ten thousand dollars of that is to be provided for an experiment that is being conducted at the Memorial University, an experiment which it is hoped will assist possibly in the setting up of an economic dryer for light salted fish. The Federal Department of Fisheries are carrying on experiments mostly at Bonavista in the drying of light salted fish in commercial quantities and quality. These experiments are being conducted at the Memorial University to eliminate a lot of tests which would otherwise have to be carried on at Bonavista, and could be eliminated at the Memorial University laboratory, and so would not have to be covered at Bonavista where the actual experiment is being carried on.
That $25,000 is for that. The other is a provision in case that sometime during the year the Government may see fit to make a grant to some company to carry on such experimental work in fisheries—there has been nothing decided on that as yet.

Carried.

Fisheries Development Authority,
$3,000,000:

MR. KEOUGH: Mr. Chairman, that three million dollars is voted for the Fisheries Development Authority.
It is proposed to have the vote broken down in the printed estimates right here, but I have here now a breakdown of this three million dollars vote which I would like to have circulated to the House to assist in the discussion of the matter.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman,
I am sure we are very anxious to know just how this three million dollars is to be spent.

MR. KEOUGH: It is all there.

MR. HOLLETT: Do I understand that the full amount to be spent in LaScie this year is $853,000?

MR. KEOUGH: LaScie development is to consist of installations put there at two stages, first of all the preliminary work of preparing a site, breakwaters and what not, which is to be done by the Federal Government.
When that is completed the Provincial Government will proceed to erect a salt fish plant, a salt storage for salt and a plant for electric power development. It is anticipated that these three would cost three hundred and thirty thousand dollars. Now at the moment we do not know whether we will get far enough ahead to proceed beyond that stage in this year, but the next stage will consist of the erection of a fresh fish plant and a fish­ meal plant. In the event that we do get far enough ahead this year, then we would have to draw upon this.

MR. HOLLETT: Who is to perform the work at Seldom and Valley­ field, is that to be done by the Fishery Development Authority?

MR. KEOUGH: Except wherein Fishery Products name is set down.

MR. HOLLETT: And they take half of the grant, one half million dollars. It looks very much, Mr.
Chairman, as if the members of the board and the salaries of the gentlemen amount to well over one hundred thousand dollars, and general expenses another fifty thousand, and in actual fact the amount of money to be spent in that great experiment at LaScie is small indeed compared to what we were led to believe. Meras­ sheen general working capital $25,000
—St. John’s—I wonder if the Honourable Minister would tell us just what is proposed to be done with St.
St. John’s?

MR. KEOUGH: If the honourable member would not mind—first of all with regard to LaScie: The extent of Federal participation, the site of the breakwater is expected to be in the order of $790,000, the provincial expenditure for the salt fish and subsidiary installations and fresh fish and subsidiary installations will be of the order of $700,000, then housing development, water and sewerage, which is something we will have to go into at a later stage, and this will not enter into the picture this year, it may or it may not.

With regard to St. John's this is a provision to enable the Fisheries Development Authority to acquire a site in St. John's on the waterfront where the Federal department will erect a fishermen's wharf, and $250,000 is also contemplated to cover the marketing installations that the Provincial Government will place on that wharf. There will be some sort of marketing facilities there. We have not decided on what form, but it will be a fishermen's market.

MR. HOLLETT: Could the Minister say just where the wharf will be?

MR. KEOUGH: I am unable to say that now.

MR. HIGGINS: Will the Fishery Products Limited be given that amount and asked to spend it or does the Authority supervise what they are going to do there?

MR. KEOUGH: It is contemplated as a loan, and authority for it will be sought later in the Loan and Guarantee Act of the House, a loan of one million five hundred thousand dollars to the Fishery Products Limited to enable them to put plants such as I have already indicated in the places named. Mostly they are plants for the production of block frozen fish, with a fishmeal plant at Catalina and Twillingate. That money will be made available to Fishery Products, and the Fisheries Development Authority will have to watch for the Government to see that the money goes into the installations of such plants in these places.

MR. HIGGINS: Might I ask, Mr. Chairman, are these to be regarded as loans, and are there any securities to be given for them, or is the position to be that the Authority exercises a watchful supervision—is there any security for the money?

MR. SMALLWOOD: If the Committee would regard this as the budget for the coming year of the FDA which they submitted to the Minister, and the Minister to the Cabinet and the Cabinet to the Committee of the House, this is the budget of FDA. Now it consists principally, as the Committee will see—this is their first budget for their first year after becoming a legal institution—of loans from them to Fishery Products Limited to enable Fishery Products Limited to finance in whole for the most part these plants on the Northeast Coast and in Trepassey on the East Coast or Southeast Coast and Bay de Verde on the East Coast. These loans to be made by the Fisheries Development Authority after they have received the applications for these loans from the Fishery Products Limited, and after they have examined their applications carefully, after they examined the balance sheet of Fishery Products Limited carefully, after they have considered each individual part of the whole programme, or rather each individual project put forward by Fishery Products Limited; after all that careful consideration, the FDA then submitted this request to the Government with their recommendation that the Government submit it to the Committee on Supply with the Government's recommendation, and the Government's request that these amounts be authorized for the Fisheries Development Authority for the purpose named in these FDA estimates.

MR. HIGGINS: Mr. Chairman, might I again repeat the question: These are loans; is there any security for the loans? It would appear that in these areas at least Fishery Products is doing the work of the Fisheries Development Authority this year or apparently for some years to come—is there any security?

MR. SMALLWOOD: A complete chattel mortgage.

MR. KEOUGH: The securities are the assets created by the loan.

MR. FOGWILL: What interest will the FDA charge on this loan?

MR. KEOUGH: On this loan it will be 4%.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I may say in that connection that the Government decided that as the Northeast Coast and East Coast, but particularly the Northeast Coast, was the part of the island that attracted capital least of all, because of geographical and climatic conditions, the Government, as an inducement to private enterprise to move in on that coast, ought to make its own special contribution not only in the form of loans but loans at an especially low rate of interest. Because it must be clear to the House that loans made to the Fisheries Development Authority and by them to private enterprise at 3% are loans made at a rate lower than the rate at which the Government itself can obtain the money by borrowing; the difference between the two rates then being, of course, a subsidy. If we do this in Newfoundland then obviously the less said about it the better.

MR. HOLLETT: About what?

MR. SMALLWOOD: The difference in the cost of the money to the Government and to the firm to whom the money is lent. We would not want to be accused of subsidizing our fisheries. That is the last thing in the world we intend to do.

MR. HOLLETT: The point that struck me about the 3%, Mr. Chairman, if any firm, I won't say on Water Street, but in St. John's wants to go to the Northeast Coast and start a plant and had to go to a bank they could certainly have to pay appreciably more than 3%.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It is doubtful if the bank would lend it.

MR. HOLLETT: Why not?

MR. SMALLWOOD: The banks to begin with don't lend money for capital account expenditure except on very short terms, a year or a half year.

MR. HOLLETT: The loan then is for experimental plants. What sort of plants are they going to build for $237,000?

MR. KEOUGH: That is only a small balance of a large amount which we have paid already.

MR. HOLLETT: You are adding this amount to it?

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is the balance due under the original loan.

MR. HOLLETT: You will agree, Mr. Chairman, it is difficult for us, just having gotten this, to analyze anything herein. We don't claim too much competence. It lists, for instance, Valleyfield and Badgers Quay, nobody knows what that is all about.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is clear enough: That is a Federal project in which there may well turn out to be some activity of a provincial character, and ought to be conducted there—that is a token vote.
MR. HIGGINS: From what the Minister said I understand this item from Trepassey only represents a small portion of a loan already made?

MR. SMALLWOOD: The unpaid balance, the remainder of the total amount promised.

MR. HIGGINS: Did we already vote the original token amount?

MR. SMALLWOOD: The House voted some, I believe, last year, and the Government has since promised the additional amount.

MR. HIGGINS: This is really now in excess of what has already been voted?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, it is.

MR. HIGGINS: We are not voting the same amount over again.

MR. KEOUGH: The House last year voted $287,000 and in the agreement that we made, based upon the House's authority to spend $1,400,000 of which I just spoke, there was another one hundred thousand dollars spent for a further increase of facilities in the Trepassey Plant, and this will be for a further increase in the facilities, so that actually the Government is enabled at the Trepassey Plant to lend something over seven hundred thousand dollars, by the time it is all added together.

MR. HOLLETT: Will the interest rate based on the whole be 4%?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Most of it. Some of these loans were made to Fishery Products Limited a couple or three years ago at higher rates.

MR. HOLLETT: I was thinking of Trepassey, that will be 4%?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I think so, a good bit of it.

MR. KEOUGH: As far as I can remember offhand this much only would be at 3%. I believe previous amounts were for 4½%.

MR. HOLLETT: Are all such loans to other fish companies at that rate or similar? I don't mean on the Northeast Coast—

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, there is no need to give that special inducement.

MR. HOLLETT: Surely there would not be much difference between Gaultois and Trepassey.

MR. SMALLWOOD: We will do it for any one along the Southwest as well as we have done it for Trepassey.

MR. HOLLETT: In other words the interest rate in Trepassey to Fishery Products Limited and the people in Gaultois will be the same?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Well, the agreement with Gaultois was made several years ago.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the Minister if the plants at Quirpon and LaScie, Seldom-Come-By and Merasheen will deal with block freezing of fish and fresh frozen fillets?

MR. KEOUGH: Quirpon no. At LaScie this provision here is only for salt fish. When we get around to installing a fresh fish plant there the decision will have to be taken at that time as to what its nature will be. At Seldom-Come-By and Merasheen it is all salt fish.

MR. BROWNE: Well, it looks like Fishery Products Limited are carrying out their original intention of getting a monopoly in the fresh frozen fish trade. Were there bait depots at
MR. SMALLWOOD: It is the first I have heard of Fishery Products Limited desire to have a monopoly.

MR. BROWNE: Well last year the Premier announced he was going to make an agreement to have Fishery Products Limited take over fourteen or eighteen depots to establish plants, but was unable to carry out the plans because the Federal Government stopped them.

MR. SMALLWOOD: There was never any intention of a monopoly in the fresh fish industry.

MR. BROWNE: I was asking if there were bait depots in these places?

MR. SMALLWOOD: In some of them.

MR. KEOUGH: I think we had them at some of them. I could not say at the moment.

MR. SMALLWOOD: There is not at Change Islands, and there is not at Quirpon and not at Joe Batts Arm, that is three, and there is not at Mersheen, which is four, and there is not at Catalina, five—in five of them there are no bait depots.

MR. BROWNE: At any rate Fishery Products will get the bulk of this money this year, and they will set up their own plants and the Fisheries Authority is going to, from what figures I can make up, spend about $680,000. So that Fishery Products will do more than twice as much as the Fisheries Development Authority, and it won't cost us anything.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is not quite so. I thought I did detect at the end of the honourable gentleman's remarks some satisfaction that private enterprise was doing this, if so I welcome that note from him because clearly it would be better for Newfoundland, far better, if the fisheries were carried out by private enterprise—period. Private enterprise whether a group of private enterprisers or a co-operative group of fishermen, but private enterprise rather than government. We would prefer that infinitely. The only difficulty is that there is not enough private enterprise or not sufficient enterprise even with government financial assistance, and there are not enough enterprising, profit enterprisers in Newfoundland today to accept financial assistance from the Government to carry out fishery development, consequently the Government, with its own money and with the help of federal money have to engage in fisheries development in certain places. So that we have two types of development proceeding simultaneously, some of them in public enterprise, government enterprise, federal and provincial jointly, at Quirpon, at La Scie, Seldom, Mersheen. These are government enterprises, joint federal-provincial, and private enterprise in all these others. Now the pity of it is that there are not enough private enterprisers with enterprise to come to the Government, as Fishery Products Limited has done, and as other fishing companies have done, and get loans to carry on fisheries development—that is the pity of it—

MR. BROWNE: Don't you think the Fishery Products are up to the maximum now?

MR. SMALLWOOD: In what, activity or money?
MR. BROWNE: They are carrying on with twelve and a half million this year, you cannot expect them to do any more.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Quite so. I referred not to them doing more but to other enterprisers doing something.

MR. BROWNE: How far is Seldom-Come-By from Change Islands and Joe Batts Arm?

MR. SMALLWOOD: They are all pretty close together, but it is a great fishing area.

MR. BROWNE: What is the difference between conditions at Seldom and Change Islands?

MR. SMALLWOOD: The public enterprise going on there is salt fish.

MR. BROWNE: As far as private enterprise going in there?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Private enterprise has shown no desire to get in there.

MR. BROWNE: Was it not private enterprise that established there a freezing plant in Seldom-Come-By and have taken it away.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Monroe's operated there. They have quite a big plant down there. That is the building at Joe Batts Arm. They did operate during the war, but it has not operated since the war, and they had to move their equipment out. There is nothing at Change Islands.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, I think it almost looks as though the Fishery Products are the Fishery Development. Last year $1,400,000 was voted for fisheries development, and then later was passed over or loaned to Fishery Products, and now of the three million voted this year they also get one million five hundred thousand. In other words they get two million nine hundred thousand of the total in two years voted by this House for Fisheries Development. $4,400,000 has been voted in two years and of that amount nearly three millions have been loaned to Fishery Products. Now when the Honourable the Premier spoke of there not being such private enterprisers with private enterprise, I wonder if there is not a sufficient number of private enterprisers with government capital at 3%. We have to remember that if John Jones, a merchant on Water Street, can't get a loan from the Government he has to go to the bank and probably pay 6% or 7%, but if he has the ear of the Government he can get it for 3%.

MR. SMALLWOOD: He cannot get it at the bank at any rate, high or low, not for capital account investment.

MR. HOLLETT: They have been known to have given guarantees.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Government guarantees.

MR. HOLLETT: They don't get it for 3% there?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No.

MR. HOLLETT: I am not objecting at all. I hope Fishery Products will succeed. But I am really pointing out that it is very difficult for other private enterprisers to be enterprising, following the Premier's line of thought, when Fishery Products come to the Government and get three million dollars, you may say out of a vote in two years of $4,400,000.

MR. SMALLWOOD: And the pity of it is they have not a half dozen firms more like them.
MR. HOLLETT: Would you give it to them?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Certainly! Does not my honourable friend agree it is incomparably better for Newfoundland that fisheries development be carried out by private enterprise than by Government? Now that private enterprise may be a Water Street firm or an outport firm, a private fish merchant, a co-operative society, or it may be any community or group of producers—all private enterprise. Does he not agree it is far better that it be done by private enterprise than by the Government? Does he not agree—the whole Opposition there is the private enterprise party?

Now secondly, if private enterprise is enterprising and has the drive, has the energy and ambition but not the capital then, in an industry so basic to our very way of life in Newfoundland, is it not the Government's proper part to lend that capital, and to lend it at as low a rate as possible? Is not that a proper function for the Government? Now if it, and the answer to both of these questions is, yes, there is one remaining fact to be settled: the means, the technique, the machinery you set up to scan the applications for such loans, and the supervision of the loans when they are made. Hence, in our view, if the FDA—

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, if there had been no FDA these applications could be brought in and granted the same way as you loaned four million four hundred thousand in the last two years.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, in addition the FDA spends money on its own account in government enterprise at Quirpon, LaScie, a gigantic enterprise which will run probably to many many millions; and at Seldom. These are places where government enterprise will be carried out by the Fisheries Development Authority which has this double function: lending money to private enterprise and following it up and supervising it and spending money itself on these government enterprises in collaboration with the Government of Canada.

MR. HOLLETT: Is the spending of this million and a half dollars which you loaned Fishery Products this year to be under the supervision of the FDA?

MR. SMALLWOOD: As the House and the Committee must be aware we cannot debate the Fisheries Authority Bill all over again, but surely the honourable gentleman remembers they were entrusted with supervision of all fisheries loans, past, present and future.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I understood the Minister to say the Trepassey Plant would be in operation by the end of this month or early next month. I take it then this money will be loaned to Trepassey already.

MR. KEOUGH: No, the money has not already been loaned, but I would imagine that possibly the great bulk is to be spent for equipment and the purchase will be rather rapid.

MR. BROWNE: It is quite late.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It might be working capital.

MR. FOGWILL: Mr. Chairman, I did ask the Minister some time back to table an answer to a question in respect to the quantity of fresh fish processed in Newfoundland in all these plants. I think it would be of interest to the Committee—as I said before I was wondering if the Minister would like to give that information for, I understand, somewhere between twenty and thirty plants for the processing of fresh fish around the island. Well production is based on a hundred day year, eight hour day. I might be wrong. It is not out of idle curiosity I am asking. I would like to know the approximate figures at least.

MR. KEOUGH: Mr. Chairman, my department cannot take responsibility for saying what the fish production figures are in Newfoundland. That is a function of the Federal Department. My department has certain statistics available but, before I could say publicly what the production is, I could not take the responsibility for making a statement publicly on my own behalf. All I could do would be to refer the honourable member to the source where he could get that himself.

MR. HOLLETT: The Federal Fisheries Department?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I can tell the honourable gentleman now where the plants are: St. Anthony, Englee, Bonavista, Harbour Grace, St. John's, Fermeuse, Burin, Fortune, Gaultois and three up the coast. Ramea, Burnt Island and Isle Aux Morts and Burgeo, that is thirteen.

MR. FOGWILL: I am not going to dispute that, perhaps I do know, but anyway I understood the Minister to say when debating the Fisheries Authority Bill, once the fish comes out of the water and comes on the land it is a provincial responsibility coming under his department until the fish are exported from the island. I should think that means we should at least know the scope of these plants, particularly these plants into which the Government has invested money and in which we have such large amounts of money as we have been talking about—we should know the capacity of the plants. And, Mr. Chairman, I would like to point out there is a safety factor in the operation of these plants. If a plant can produce say—I have a note here somewhere—fifty thousand pounds per day, well they could produce for probably a maximum of one hundred eight-hour days—what is the safety factor—fifty million pounds—where is the point?—is it in the red or the black. They have to produce a certain amount of fish to make a profit or break even. These are things the Committee, I think, should know about, Mr. Chairman.

MR. KEOUGH: I disagree—that is why we have the Fisheries Development Authority to pass on these purely technical matters. I don't think the House is in a position at any time at all to pass an expert opinion on matters of that nature.

MR. FOGWILL: Mr. Chairman, I am in entire agreement with the Minister. We are discussing the matter now, and the House is passing at the present time three millions to be spent on fisheries development, and these things if not brought in in great detail, we should have some indication of the production capacity, the safety factor in production and where is the margin. We understood from the Premier that a certain kind of fish product is unlimited, but we have no evidence, but only know from what the Premier told us. Surely there ought to be more evidence than that brought before the Committee.

MR. HOLLETT: As to the salaries of the three men, may I ask if they were paid since June last year, and if so, from what vote were they paid?

MR. KEOUGH: They were paid from the department last year, and they were paid by special warrant which will be covered in Supplementary Supply Bill to be brought into the House later.

MR. HIGGINS: Mr. Chairman, I would like some information from the Minister. There is a special vote there, unallocated, $344,000, are we taking it that there are certain suggestions in the air that the Authority is considering now or are these just provisions for things that may come up?

MR. KEOUGH: Mr. Chairman, the Authority ever since last September has had a certain number of positions come before them, and some of them are being culled out, and some have been accepted, but are not at the moment to the stage where the Authority could submit them to the Government, and this unallocated portion here is just in the event there are other proposals the Authority will eventually decide on recommending to the Government to assure that some money might be available for that. And if the Authority should make recommendations to the Government in excess perhaps of this four hundred thousand dollars they may have to take the action of seeking further money by special warrant covering it by asking the House for it in a Bill next year.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is extremely likely to happen. That amount might run up to four times that.

MR. HIGGINS: One other thing—I don’t see any reference to market research?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I doubt if they will do very much market research this year.

MR. HIGGINS: I thought that would be one of the big jobs?

MR. KEOUGH: It would be covered there if at all.

MR. HOLLETT: There is an item there for salaries—could the Minister tell us just what the salaries are for, and who they are for?

MR. KEUGH: I cannot tell you who they are for because certain appointments have not been made yet. The three members of the Authority have secretaries, on a scale of $100 less than Deputy Minister’s secretaries. They are Mr. Storey, Mr. Thistle and Mr. Mercer. $2,600 Mr. Storey, $2,400 Mr. Thistle and Mr. Mercer. The balance is to provide for new staff not yet appointed.

MR. HOLLETT: Under demonstration, I wonder if the Minister could give us any idea of what that is?

MR. KEOUGH: Well, there is nothing specific decided as yet, other than that the Authority can either perhaps later in the year try to carry on an experiment to prove the commercial feasibility of scallop beds off the south coast, or maybe to enable other operators, fishermen or firms to put equipment on their vessels to demonstrate its effective use.

MR. HOLLETT: To me, Mr. Chairman, this seems to be a most extraordinary statement—there is nothing definite about it. Seemingly nobody seems to know just what these things are for. Somebody made a guess, and said we will put that down for general experiments, and somebody else said—gear and equipment, and so it goes on, throughout the whole thing—technical services a token vote—there does not seem to be anything working except the Fishery Development Authority, and the whole thing, as far as I can see, is still in the air, and when it comes to vote for these things, and the Minister is unable at this moment to tell us what it is for, maybe a scallop bed or to try out experiments—we are supposed to say okay, fifty thousand dollars. So it goes on. I must say I am afraid I am a bit disappointed in this whole statement particularly in view of the fact I don’t see anything much there for the Fisheries Authority to do except to draw their salaries.

MR. BROWNE: The plants at LaScie which are being constructed this summer, I suppose won’t get into operation this year?

MR. KEOUGH: It is unlikely.

MR. BROWNE: What about Seldom?

MR. KEOUGH: Possibly late in the year but it is doubtful.

MR. BROWNE: It is doubtful that any of these will then? Now Quirpon, LaScie and Seldom are three places where the salt codfishery is carried on, are these going to give up the fishery this year?

MR. KEOUGH: I don’t see why.

MR. BROWNE: You mean they will carry on in their traditional pattern? Of course everyone expects they will look for work on these big undertakings, and everyone expects they will be the first ones employed.

MR. SMALLWOOD: If they knock-off this year to build these plants they will be all back fishing next year, there is no doubt of that.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Chairman, I move the Committee rise and ask leave to sit again.

On motion the Committee rose and reported having passed the following items of Capital Account Expenditure: Department of Public Works, Department of Health, Department of Public Welfare, Department of Municipal Affairs and Supply, and Items 1440-1441 inclusive.

Report received. Committee ordered to sit again presently.

MR. SPEAKER: It being now 6:00 o’clock, I leave the Chair until 8:00 of the clock tonight.

NIGHT SESSION

Monday, June 7, 1954.

The House resumed at eight of the clock.

Mr. Speaker left the Chair.

Mr. Courage, Chairman of Committees:

Committee of the Whole on Supply:

Department of Fisheries and Cooperatives:

1444:

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, does the Minister know whether any of this money is going to be used for the purpose of vessels and boats and draggers and things like that?

MR. KEOUGH: None of the money of the million vote.

MR. BROWNE: Because I was going to draw the attention of the Minister to an article appearing in the Evening Telegram by Mr. Antle,
The Treasurer of the Fishermen’s Federation:

“The big dragger will follow the banker and the Labrador floater to the boneyard, if the present trend continues,” P. J. Antle, Treasurer of the Newfoundland Federation of Fishermen told the Evening Telegram today.

“Turnover in crews is simply tremendous,” he said, “A few years ago, fishermen were practically begging for jobs on draggers. Now you have to go out and search for men.”

“With present prices for fish from the plants, Newfoundlander's can never afford to fish in modern boats,” he declared. “It just isn’t possible to run an expensive boat and make a living for her crew at the prices received. Even the Danish Seiner Matthew II, billed as the greatest success of any experiment ever undertaken in Newfoundland fishing is now tied up, and has been for many months,” he said.

“Fishermen suspect that the price of fish to the inshore man is being kept down in an effort to cut losses on the dragger fleets,” Mr. Antle continued.

Fish Run Colossal

“The run of fish in the bay this year is simply colossal,” he said. “If possible, it is even greater than last year, when it was the biggest since 'grandfather's time.'” Mr. Antle firmly believes that the inshore fishery comes and goes in a big cycle, and that we are reaching the point in that cycle when we are again in the era of huge catches, in fact “we must now be near the crest of possible production.”

No Bait

Unfortunately, “the fishermen al-
MR. FORSEY: Mr. Chairman, the bait depot at Burin is privately owned, and when the bankers were operating and they sold bait to the bankers they made a profit. Unfortunately since the fisheries declined they have used up any reserve from the installation originally built, and the bait depot there has now run out of funds. There is presently a proposition before the Federal Government. As a matter of fact only three days ago the representative of the Federal Department of Fisheries began an investigation of the position of the Federal Government taking over the bait depot at Burin. The report has not yet been written, but will be tabled, and within a week we will know whether the Federal Department is taking over the bait depot at Burin, and will extend there the same facilities for bait as they are extending in the various depots they own already.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, I am interested in that information about the Burin depot because I was very largely instrumental in getting that bait depot there a good many years ago.

MR. FORSEY: Twenty-seven years ago.

MR. HOLLETT: It must be that. We wanted a bait depot and wanted a hospital, and we organized and got together and eventually we got enough to build a bait depot, and had something over. That, I understood, was in trust, I think, in the name of the Old Colony Hospital Trust. Now the Minister stated that the Federal Government is likely to take it over, but in what manner or by what process will they take it over?

MR. FORSEY: They will buy it from the Old Colony Hospital Trust, and the money received will have to be used for the purposes of this trust in Burin.

MR. HOLLETT: Will the Minister tell me who they are now?

MR. FORSEY: They are composed of the director, who receives no remuneration, Mr. Ernest Day and Mr. Don Hollett; I forget the other gentleman’s names.

MR. HOLLETT: Would the Minister tell me under what department of the Government the supervision of that Old Colony Hospital Trust Fund comes. Does it come under the supervision of any department of the Government from year to year?

MR. FORSEY: It is under the supervision of no department. It is a private corporation, a limited liability company, and the cold storage is a subsidiary of that, and the holding company, the Old Colony Hospital Trust, has been financing the subsidiary company during the past ten or twelve years.

MR. SMALLWOOD: These two Burin District men are carrying on a personal conversation which has no bearing whatsoever on the estimates. We spend no money and have no control as that is just a private company up there.

MR. HOLLETT: At any rate I think a couple of Burin members could have a conversation even across this House occasionally. While I am on my feet I would like to know the exact amount owed the Government by Fishery Products. I believe they got one or two amounts there, if I remember correctly.

MR. KEOUGH: A million, four hundred thousand.
MR. HOLLETT: That was last year?

MR. KEOUGH: Oh yes, under the vote we are now discussing.

MR. HOLLETT: Well, as I have it from an answer to a question, cash loans to Fishery Products amounted to $1,337,000. In addition to that there was an amount of $110,000 and an amount of $350,000, still owed, and another $79,500 and another guarantee of $250,000 still outstanding. That makes a total of $2,500,000. If we add these amounts we get a grand total of $3,840,500, owed by Fishery Products.

MR. KEOUGH: With the advances or loans now suggested, $1,500,000, the total will be $3,840,500. There have been certain repayments but I don't have that to hand.

MR. HOLLETT: Might I ask if the same interest rate of three per cent applies on all these loans?

MR. KEOUGH: No. There was the one million, four hundred thousand last year, at three and a quarter, and several previously on which the interest rate may probably be higher. It may not be, but I do not know. I have not the information to hand. It was not less anyhow.

MR. HOLLETT: I think it is most important that every man in this House should pray every night that the Fishery Products have a very successful year and for the next twenty-five years in order to enable them to refund that money. I think we will probably need it for many other things. I believe the present loan is largely based on the new methods of putting up fish—is that the idea, block frozen fish?

MR. BROWNE: Is there any time for repayment of this money?

MR. KEOUGH: There is no time limit. The suggestion is twenty-one and a half years.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the Minister if it is intended to put a drying plant, the new experimental dryer of light salt fish at these three places, Quirpon, LaScie and Seldom?

MR. KEOUGH: At Quirpon and Seldom as the case may warrant. It is intended to put a dryer at LaScie.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, are there any provisions in any of these plants for the heavy salted fish being dried by artificial means? I believe in Nova Scotia their fish is dried in that way.

MR. KEOUGH: I have the specific information here. I would take it the dryer to be installed there is a dryer for heavy salted fish. In Quirpon and Seldom, in the list of the installations that are to go in there is no mention of a dryer of any sort. Perhaps as time goes on one may be installed there. It is certainly not envisaged in the initial installations.

MR. HOLLETT: May I ask the size of the block frozen fish Fishery Products will put up?

MR. KEOUGH: The standard size is usually 21 pounds. It may vary.

MR. HOLLETT: I received the figure of seventeen and a half pounds.

MR. KEOUGH: I suppose blocks of that size could be processed.

MR. HOLLETT: Does the Minister know what the export price is at the present time?

MR. KEOUGH: No.
MR. FOGWILL: Mr. Chairman, we have heard all about fishsticks. How many plants are making these fishsticks now?

MR. KEOUGH: I don't know if there are any.

MR. FOGWILL: We have it on very good authority they are put up at Fishery Products plant at Burin.

MR. KEOUGH: I think that is possibly frozen packed.

MR. FORSEY: No, there are no fishsticks put up at Burin.

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, none in Newfoundland.

MR. FOGWILL: No fishsticks at all put up in Newfoundland?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Block frozen, not sticks.

MR. FOGWILL: I have seen the sticks put up in Newfoundland, marked “Newfoundland Product.”

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, but processed in the States and they come back here.

MR. CHAIRMAN: There is too much conversation back and forth. I would like again to refer the Committee to the use of the personal pronoun “you.” If I could do it I would have honourable members write a thousand times—“I must not use the pronoun ‘you’.”

MR. HOLLETT: Is it the Government’s intention to institute any housing at LaScie this year?

MR. KEOUGH: Mr. Chairman, the policy with regard to housing has not been decided. I notice there is a vote in here. If a decision is made later the allocation from this could be called upon for this purpose.

MR. BROWNE: In reference to this vote for St. John’s, I hope some real effort will be made on the part of the Fisheries Development Authority to find a suitable place here in St. John’s for a fish market. There is a big market here for fresh fish, and I don’t think any other kind of fish can compare with fresh fish. It has a virtue all its own. When it is frozen it is not the same. And I think it would be beneficial to all concerned and to the public if they could get this market very soon.

MR. KEOUGH: Mr. Chairman, I think I can give the honourable gentleman an undertaking that the Fisheries Development Authority are pursuing the matter very seriously, and have been carrying on negotiations with regard to a possible site for months past, and will certainly give all due attention to the matter.

MR. HOLLETT: Under this Bay de Verde—Fishery Products Limited. My understanding is that there is already a plant there at Bay de Verde, owned and operated, I believe, by Cy Moores. I believe there is a plant at Bay de Verde at the present time. How will it be affected by the operation of this particular one the Government finances, by Fishery Products?

MR. SMALLWOOD: It won’t be affected—that has been gone into.

MR. HOLLETT: Is it not possible that the existing plant there could have handled that situation for Bay de Verde?

MR. SMALLWOOD: We had conversations with Mr. Moores, and Mr. Moores withdrew from the situation. Carried.
Department of Economic Development:

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Chairman, perhaps the Committee would prefer to have me say just a very brief word about the vote in general, and then to give a little additional detail on the individual items making up the total vote.

The Committee will notice to begin with that the total amount involved is well under a million dollars, and is by far the smallest vote there has been in this department since the department was created. The amounts have varied from six or seven or eight millions a year down to five and a half millions voted the year before last and two and a half millions voted last year to less than a million this year. That, I think, reflects the fact that Economic Development on the purely industrial side is now qualitatively smaller than it has been and quantitatively too because there is a corresponding increase in the amounts for fisheries development, in the department immediately before this, and at the top of the same page in these estimates. The Committee will notice that amounts voted in Fisheries and Co-operatives have increased steadily from half a million the year before last to one and a half millions last year and three and a half millions this year, and secondary development, which for the most part in these estimates have consisted of industrial development, has gone down from five and a half millions to one million or less than one million. The Fisheries have gone up in precisely the same period from half a million to one and a half million to three and a half million.

Now to explain the estimates: The first one, cement—that is a token vote of one hundred dollars none of which will be spent. I don't know why it is in. If the Committee cares to do so we might make nothing there—but there are some claims outstanding. I am informed, in respect of the land that was purchased for the site of the plant, not the immediate site of the building but the whole surrounding site of the enterprise, consisting of some thirty or forty acres of land. There are one or two claims in connection with that land outstanding, for which reason we have a token vote of a hundred dollars.

The gypsum vote is $100,000. Now the position is that there was a loss, an operating loss, last year of $168,000, as I have already informed the House some $80,000 was found during the year out of countervailing savings that was underspent under some other vote within the same Department of Economic Development, and within the vote for capital account. That was applied towards the operating loss for the year leaving an amount of $160,000 to complete payment of the loss, which we ask the Committee now to authorize.

I may say, in connection with the gypsum plant that the estimate of the operating loss for this year is $100,000 and the estimate for next year is nothing, in fact we estimate that next year we will be in the black.

The birch plant: This is again a token vote.

Tanneries: Here an amount is asked of $2,700. The authorization was originally $399,000. All but $2,700 of this was paid, and this $2,700 is inserted now for the coming year.

The next item is Hanning Electric. That is the battery plant, and there again the amount is merely a token vote.

The next is Atlantic Gloves, the glove plant. The amount of the loan authorized was $350,000, and as at the end of the financial year just passed all of that had been paid out to the Atlantic Gloves, with the exception of an amount of $103,400, in other words that is the balance of the loan, the rest having been paid them up to the end or before the end of the past financial year.

In the case of Koch Shoes the authorized loan was $750,000. As at the end of the financial year that had all been paid to the company except for an amount of $478,000 which we now ask the Committee to authorize us to pay.

Item 24—Knitting Mills—that is Eckhardt Woolen Mills at Brigus. The amount of $187,400 we ask for, I shall have to seek advice on the meaning of that. The amount of the loan in this case was $387,400. As at the end of the financial year just passed there remained to be paid to the company an amount of $187,400 because they had been paid the rest. So that we have to ask the Committee to authorize the payment of this balance.

I know of no other explanation required. But if there is I will seek to give the information.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the Premier what he means by "We paid them" I mean, does he not pay according to certain advances in the construction. One hundreds thousand dollars—does that mean over half the building has been constructed? I understand only the foundation has been laid yet at Eckhardt Mills.

MR. SMALLWOOD: No. The roof is on the building, and it is practically completed. The honourable gentleman is not quite right when he assumes that the methods of payment is according to progress made on construction of the building. The method of payment is, as and when machinery and equipment and material and supplies are landed at the site or landed within Newfoundland, payments are made on the production of vouchers, because in nearly all of these assisted European industries or nearly all the principle has been to match their investment dollar for dollar. Now that it not true of all of them, for the last two or three of them the formula has been somewhat different, and the very latest of them is Eckhardt Mills, the one we are now discussing. In the last two or three cases the Government put up more than half, more than matched the investment of the European concerns. In the case of Eckhardt Mills I forget the exact details now, but we more than matched it. In the case of Koch Shoes at Harbour Grace we put about two-thirds to their one-third.

I may say, incidently in connection with Koch Shoes, Gold Salt Leather and Eckhart Mills—this First in connection with Koch Shoes, I had a letter a few days ago, (and if I had remembered to bring it in I would have done so) from Mr. McKay, the boot and shoe manufacturer in Harbour Grace. He told me that he has spent his life, as the Committee knows, manufacturing footwear. The Committee is aware of the fact he was the purchaser of the Newfoundland Boot and Shoe Company plant up here on Job Street, at least of the mechanical equipment, and that he kept on manufacturing at Harbour Grace until the last ditch, with help from the Government. We paid a premium price for all of the footwear for the Mental Hospital, Infirmary, General Hospital, Penitentiary, the prison camps and all other institutions at which we provided people with footwear. We bought all of that, running into a good many thousands of dollars a year, I believe, from a factory in Harbour Grace, paying a premium I think, of 20% above what we might have gotten the footwear for. Mr. McKay made a game attempt to keep the plant afloat, but in the end he had to give in and close out. Well he has just returned from a visit throughout the United States and Canada and he wrote me a letter the other day saying that he thought I would probably be interested to hear his reactions. He said that in his opinion this plant at Harbour Grace is the most modern, the most streamlined, the most up-to-date boot and shoe plant anywhere now to be found in all North America. He does not say it is the biggest, but the most up-to-date. And I can well believe that. I am a bit of an expert myself on the appearance of machinery. I have seen machinery now in hundreds of industrial plants. And it does a man's heart good to go into the plant at Harbour Grace and see utterly streamlined machinery—it is superb, it is matchless. They are turning out footwear over there that is going to be a good seller, without any doubt about it. I have good faith in Koch Shoes. The son, who is the managing director running the plant, is a man of great energy and great drive and great skill, and I believe he is going to be an outstanding success. I believe that Koch Shoes will be sold up and down Canada like the "Hart Shoe" which is manufactured in New Brunswick and sold in every town across Canada. So also I believe the Koch Shoe will be a popular seller all across Canada and all across Newfoundland.

Now, Gold Sail: They had to change their name. Their original name was Canadian Leather but they found some other company in Canada had the same name, and they had to change their name to "Gold Sail." They are making leather goods beyond comparison in North America. Nothing in North America is as good. It has got to be the best and that is it. They are making the best. Honourable gentlemen who go into the Newfoundland Hotel might stop for a moment and look at the show cases on the ground floor as you go inside the revolving doors, to the immediate right. You will find on the immediate left, Eckhardt Mills showcase and on the right Gold Sail Leather. The leather they use in that plant is made by Dorn Tanneries in Carbonear, and the women's handbags they are making over there in Harbour Grace retailing from $5 to $30 each are incomparable in North America today. They are just superb, just beautiful. The Newfoundland seal skin, a pure white product of the Dorn Tanneries in Carbonear, is absolutely beautiful leather, very fine, and the grain has not to be put on as it has on some leather to which you have to add the grain by a process of stamping, but the Newfoundland seal leather gives a beautiful grain that is natural, and the leather dyed white makes a dressy handbag which is the envy of any woman's heart. I believe it is making quite a hit at the Trade Fair at the great Newfoundland Booth at the Trade Fair, which, incidentally, is the greatest booth in the whole of the Trade Fair in Toronto as it was last year. It is even more so this year. In this booth the leather goods of Gold Sail are attracting great attention. I may say this; the Minister of Finance, the Attorney General, the Minister of Public Works and I have, in Offenbach in Germany visited the people who have started this factory in Harbour Grace, Anton Schaefers. Mr. Schaefers is a man who is, I would say, close to five hundred pounds, an enormous size of a man. He is the president of the leather goods association of manufacturers in Germany. Offenbach is the leather goods heart of the world. There are in Offenbach eleven hundred manufacturing plants making leather goods. Mr. Schaefers, father of the manager in Harbour Grace of the Gold Sail Leather Company, is the founder of the association of the leather goods manufacturers in Germany, and the president of it. He is the founder of the leather goods fair, and he is the man who built the great building housing the fair. They hold two a year, two exhibitions a year, in which all the leather goods manufacturers of Europe exhibit and leather goods buyers and manufacturers from all over the world visit that fair twice a year. We visited the fair and there is no question about who was boss of that fair. It was the same man Schaefers.

Now he came out here and visited us about three years ago, but it was not until last year that they were able to meet our conditions and come in with their share of the investment to start the plant at Harbour Grace.

Finally we have Eckhardt Mills. They are from Austria. Mr. Eckhardt comes from Austria, near Vienna. He is a most charming man, a gentleman to the tip of his fingers, very gracious and very charming. His plant in Vienna has been selling through the United States ever since the war ended and before the war broke out. All the high-class sport shops sell goods, one class of his goods. He makes different classes and different types of merchandise. But his high-class stuff, cardigans for women and sweaters sell for $50, $70 and $90 each and men’s for $100 in these shops that cater to millionaires. Now if honourable members would stop and look at the window in the Newfoundland Hotel on the ground floor they would see these woolen garments and see for themselves what perfectly magnificent goods they are.

Mr. Eckhardt has opened three shops in Toronto, three retail shops on Yonge Street and Bloor and St. Clair. He has opened three in Montreal on St. Catherine Street. That is six retail shops, and one here on Water Street, being patronized by every lady of means, I believe, in the City of St. John’s today who are buying the very high-class woolen knit wear of this gentleman named Eckhardt. I prophesy here today this plant will manufacture woolen goods that will sell in every nook and corner in Newfoundland. That will not be that high-class, very high-priced stuff that will sell in these fashionable shops in Toronto and Montreal and New York, Boston, Chicago, but that will be a popular line of socks and sweaters and skirts and coats and the like; and I prophesy that their high-class products will sell all across Canada and the United States.

I am very proud of these three plants, the three latest we have, the shoe plant, the leather goods plant, which is, by the way, not to be confused with the leather clothing plant in Carbonear; the Dorn Tanneries have started as an associated activity for the manufacture of leather clothing. That is not to be confused with the Gold Sail Leather Goods. Now the leather for the clothing factory in Carbonear, the leather for the shoe plant at Harbour Grace and the leather for the Gold Sail Leather Goods all come from Dorn Tanneries, or will all come from the Dorn Tanneries in Carbonear. So that we are now rounding out the idea. Our idea was to have a shoe plant. We felt that Newfoundland with a population of three hundred and seventy thousand coming up to four hundred thousand and then to a half million, could no doubt support a shoe factory even if not one shoe made in such a plant sold outside Newfoundland. We felt that Newfoundland itself could support a shoe factory provided that the factory were streamlined, up-to-date, up to the last moment, and operated with efficiency. Then we felt that a leather goods plant, if it put out the right products, high class, good quality goods, would sell all across Canada and even down through the United States. Then we thought further of a leather clothing plant. All of that then simply called out for a tannery. Now we began with the tannery. Our first plant of the four was the tannery. And I will confess here, frankly, that the Honourable Minister of Public Welfare and I and others in the Cabinet have worried a great deal about the tannery, because we had started the tannery, and they were operating when there was no leather goods plant and no shoe plant to take their output, and the only leather they could sell was what they sold in Toronto and Montreal and a few thousand pounds of leather here in Newfoundland. And it was a problem to keep that plant going. Indeed we are not out of the woods yet because neither of the three leather goods plants is yet in anything like full production. In fact they are not in anything more than token production. But before this year is over we hope, we won’t guarantee it, but we hope strongly that before this year is over these plants will be in full swing and absorbing an increasing output of the tanneries. We will then have in Carbonear and Harbour Grace in these two adjoining towns, a respectable little leather industry, employing altogether, perhaps, three or four or five hundred people. I won’t attempt to say exactly how many because I frankly do not know and prefer to wait until they are actually operating to see how much is involved.

Now is there any other point on which my honourable friend desires enlightenment?

MR. HIGGINS: Just one question, if the Minister will allow me: In reference to the Eckhardt Mills I have seen some of the things the Minister has talked about, the sweaters and so on. Of course none of these are a production of Newfoundland. They are made in Austria, I believe?

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is right. I may say the goods they are manufacturing in their plant in Austria are identical to the goods they will manufacture in their plant at Brigus, with this difference, in addition to these goods in the plant at Brigus, they will have another type of machinery which will make a coarser knit for a more popular class of goods. The big thing about their machinery is the fine knit of their needles and they use “marino” wool, which, as the Committee knows, is the finest of all wool in the world, coming chiefly from Italy. It is the last word, the aristocrat of wools. Most of these high-class products are made of “marino” wool. The machines that knit these garments, literally hundreds of these machines, require quite a large building. These machines are too fine a weave to knit, say a pair of socks or a suit of underwear or an ordinary sweater or pullover. So that they have additional machinery with a coarser knit, with thicker, bigger needles, and that will cater to the more popular trade. We felt, when we were discussing it with them, it might be hazardous to have a plant manufacturing only a luxury article. If times went bad in the States and across Canada, if there was a bit of a recession, even the rich people might draw the line at paying $70 and $80 for a cardigan. It would be better to get a bread-and-butter article, of common use that the majority of people would buy.

MR. HIGGINS: In that branch of the Eckhardt activity I hope there is no danger of putting Nania out of business.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Oh none!

MR. HIGGINS: It is the same type of thing Nania is catering to today.

MR. HOLLETT: In connection with these new industries I notice in February 1954 there was an order of council asking the Lieutenant-Governor to sign a warrant for three hundred thousand for increased expenditure. Would the Minister tell me what industries got that three hundred thousand dollars.

MR. SMALLWOOD: What number was that?

MR. HOLLETT: That was in 1954. The number of the vote was 505, (1) A.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That was for Atlantic Hardboards Industries Limited. Before the company was formed they, with typical German thoroughness, worked out all the details of their economy, but their forecast was shot to pieces by one little factor which they had never taken into account, namely the fact that wood in Newfoundland, timber, the wood; spruce and fir contained a degree of moisture with which they were completely unfamiliar. The pressboard is made of chips which they create themselves from the wood. This pressboard must be very dry and the chips therefore must be very dry, and therefore the wood must be very dry. But the wood is very wet. Therefore to take the moisture out costs a lot more, and slowed down the drying, so that they needed additional dryers, a second dryer which they bought out of this loan. On top of all that they needed a warehouse, which they bought in England, strangely enough made of asbestos. Honourable members may have noticed it immediately beside the railway track immediately across from the plywood building of the Newfoundland Hardwoods. That building is made of asbestos. In addition to the new dryer and the warehouse there were some additional chipping machines for chipping the wood into chips. That is what that loan was for.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, should that item of three hundred thousand dollars show here?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, I think that would be found in supplementary supply which is not yet brought down. We had interim supply not supplementary brought down.

MR. HOLLETT: Would that take care of any needed running expenses?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Not at all. We have no concern with the running expenses of North Star Cement.
MR. HOLLETT: Now in connection with the building of that: I believe it was Lundrigan built it. I asked some time ago for a copy of the agreements for the building of the cement and gypsum plants, but I have not yet seen them.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I thought it was the honourable and learned member for St. John's East who asked for that.

MR. HOLLETT: No, I have asked for it.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Anyway, I have asked Finance to get it.

MR. HOLLETT: That would not make any difference, I hope?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, no difference whatsoever.

MR. HOLLETT: I believe I have heard the Premier or somebody say the contract called for Lundrigan to supply the building, the plant; in other words to buy all concrete necessary. But I am surprised to find in answers I have received some time ago, in addition to concrete there were literally thousands of bags of cement sold to the Government also in connection with the cement plant.

MR. SMALLWOOD: To whom?

MR. HOLLETT: Sold by Mr. Lundrigan for the construction of the cement plant.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I can explain that: In the course of construction of the cement plant Crosbie and Company brought in a shipload of cement. I forget the ship's name. She was not loaded up with cement but carried a part load of cement. And he asked the Government; or rather he did not ask the Government but asked MIAG if they would care to avail themselves of the fact that he had some space in this ship in which he was bringing in a load of cement. And MIAG did avail themselves of that space, and so the ship brought machinery and cement. Now the Government's contract with MIAG provided that it was only as and when the machinery landed in Newfoundland that it became the property of the Government, and it was their care to bring it in, freight it over. That is why Crosbie and Company had to make their arrangements with MIAG for this cement and for this machinery. Now as it happened we saved, MIAG saved—I think the Government had to pay the freight, but obviously the less freight the less we paid, and it was to the Government's advantage to have the freight reduced on that cargo by having the space divided between cement and machinery. Crosbie then approached the Government asking if we would wish to buy the cement, which I don't think we did. Public Works Department, I think, bought a little. Meanwhile the cement was there stored in the Bowater's shed, or one of their sheds; and the Government asked Lundrigan, who is in the cement business, and who has been for some years, and still is in the business of selling cement, like different firms here, Murray, Bowrings, Newfoundland Concrete Products, Chester Dawe Limited. What Chester Dawe is here they are out there. So the Government asked him to sell or Crosbie asked him to sell the cement to anyone he could. And he did, he sold it.

MR. HOLLETT: My point is that he sold it to the Government.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I think a small amount to Public Works.
MR. HOLLETT: Thousands of bags. I have it all here.

MR. SMALLWOOD: If the honourable gentleman has it why ask me. Does he think I carry these details four years later? Is it his idea to outdo a formal answer he has in front of him?

MR. HOLLETT: What I want to know is if the contract was with Lundrigan to build the premises, supply the concrete, find forms and pour the concrete? Then why would we want to buy many thousands of bags of cement for the building of the cement plant?

MR. SMALLWOOD: We did not. The honourable gentleman need not think one solitary split second that we paid for cement twice. If our contract—and I don't even remember the details of the contract with William J. Lundrigan Limited—if that contract provided for building the plant and finding the cement when he found it, if there was a transaction for cement it was completely different. We did not pay for it twice.

MR. HOLLETT: I feel, Mr. Chairman, I beg your pardon, Sir, the Government did pay $37 and $40 up to $58 for concrete, as high as $58 cubic yard for concrete, but generally it went from $37 to $40 for ordinary or standard concrete and $40 a cubic yard for reinforced concrete.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Is the honourable gentleman now talking concrete or cement?

MR. HOLLETT: Concrete now.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Changing the subject?

MR. HOLLETT: Yes, trying to ask the Honourable the Premier to explain why they had to pay $40 up to $58 for a cubic yard for many thousand yards of concrete, and in addition, for the cement plant, buy many other thousand bags of cement?

MR. SMALLWOOD: There was no connection between the two whatever—none at all.

MR. HOLLETT: They would not buy cement. They would not want to buy another load of cement if they were going to sell you concrete for $40 a cubic yard. But they did and charged you $40 a cubic yard. I have it here.

MR. SMALLWOOD: You have not. The honourable gentleman has not got it there, that they sold us concrete—because they did not. We contracted with them for them to pour concrete for us but they did not sell us any concrete.

MR. HOLLETT: But they did.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Not at all! Not at all! If I contract with the honourable gentleman to build me a concrete building and pay him so much a cubic yard for building the building of concrete, can he say he is selling me concrete?

MR. HOLLETT: 637 cubic yards of concrete at $37 a cubic yard, then reinforced 55 cubic yards at $40 and reinforced for 77 cubic yards $58. Then concrete—91 cubic yards at $37. And in the same bill we find 15,000 bags of cement at $1.50 and reinforced iron at $1.60. Here is another item for reinforced concrete at $58 a cubic yard, and concrete for $37 and $40 and as high as $58. Why that is so I would not be able to say. Here we have 71 cubic yards of reinforced concrete at $58 a cubic yard and 225 standard concrete at $41 a yard. And in the next bill we have 150 cubic yards at $37. That was for the cement plant. And 66 cubic yards at $40 and 428 standard yards of concrete at $37.

MR. SMALLWOOD: What has all this got to do with it?

MR. HOLLETT: What I am trying to find out from the Honourable Minister is—

MR. SMALLWOOD: Why not table a question and I will give the honourable gentleman all the information I can. Do you expect me to carry that in my memory?

MR. HOLLETT: I certainly do not.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Why bother now? Table the question tomorrow, and I will give the answer.

MR. HOLLETT: I tabled a question some days ago for the agreement and it has not been tabled.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That will be.

MR. HOLLETT: If it had been I probably would not want to ask the question. That is what we are here for, the Premier himself told us that.

MR. SMALLWOOD: There is a time for everything.

MR. HOLLETT: This is the right time for this. We are on a vote here for the cement plant.

MR. SMALLWOOD: We are not.

MR. HOLLETT: What are we on if not the cement plant?

MR. SMALLWOOD: The cement plant is not cement.

HON. C. H. BALLAM (Minister of Labour): Mr. Chairman, I may be able to help a little here; I understand my honourable friend the Leader of the Opposition was questioning the different prices of cement.

MR. SMALLWOOD: No the concrete that Lundrigan sold the Government.

MR. BALLAM: That is right. In all types of buildings there is a different consistency of concrete in different parts of the building. Your honourable friend on your left there will understand that, he knows something about construction, and will be able to follow me. In the foundation they must have a heavy mix with lots of reinforcement, etc., therefore the cost of such concrete per cubic yard is much greater than that in other parts of the building. In the designing of the building the engineer designing it would call for certain consistency either heavy, reinforced etc., depending on the stress and strain in the building. If my honourable friend the Minister of Public Works were here he could probably explain it a little better, but I have an idea, and the Honourable Leader of the Opposition's associate on his right who is an engineer knows exactly what we are talking about, and he will know that it is correct. Therefore this variation in the prices of the concrete.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, the Honourable Minister of Labour thinks everybody on this side of the House knows everything about everything except myself. I want to tell the Honourable Minister he can send up to Concrete Products and buy it for $17.50 a cubic yard. I can understand Mr. Lundrigan had to put the bills in order and had to pour in the concrete and for that charged $37 to $40 a yard. But what I am trying to get at is why also did he have to put in many many thousands of bags of cement when he charged anywhere from $37 to $58 per cubic yard for the concrete. In other words did he sell the concrete? And he did. It is there.

MR. SMALLWOOD: He did not sell it. He did not sell us concrete.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, I can take them all up to the Finance Department and show it to them, in dozens and dozens of cases where they sold the Government, or at least the Government paid for it. For instance there is one item right there—reinforced concrete at $40 per cubic yard.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It sounds to me like a fearful scandal and we should get a firm arrested over it—it sounds bad.

MR. HOLLETT: You have already started that process.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It sounds awful ugly.

MR. HOLLETT: I am telling the Honourable the Premier that in the building of the cement plant the Government bought cubic yards, many many cubic yards of concrete for anywhere from $37 up to $58 per cubic yard and they bought thousands and thousands of bags of cement at $1.80 per bag and one lot at $1.20 and they bought many many tons of reinforced steel for the cement plant and paid the price charged by Mr. Lundrigan. They bought many many tons of crushed stone for which they paid $4.25 per ton, and they bought many many tons of sand for $2. Now what I am trying to get from the Honourable the Premier is; why did they have to buy all these separate items for the cement plant. If Mr. Lundrigan was to get anywhere up to $58 per cubic yard, that is the question I would like to ask and want to get a reply to.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It sounds like graft and it smells like graft, and a few more people will have to go to gaol from the look of it.

MR. HOLLETT: You are saying it.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I am saying it. It sounds bad. I know here we are—graft—buying crushed stone, buying reinforced iron, buying cement and buying concrete—what else did we buy?

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, there is no question about it—

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, it is bad, terrible—

MR. HOLLETT: It may be bad, it may be worse than the Honourable the Premier—I am making the charge now you bought it for the cement—

MR. SMALLWOOD: Now we are being charged, sounds bad, looks bad for us now. Does not the honourable gentleman realize he is getting nowhere. There is no percentage in that—

MR. HOLLETT: I have an itemized statement here from Finance.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Oh—prove it—the Finance Department proves we bought concrete? Get the figures and prove that we bought concrete.

MR. HOLLETT: I don't see that is a reasonable way to answer.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Stop the nonsense, I say.

MR. HOLLETT: We will prove it.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Order.

MR. HOLLETT: If the truth is nonsense—I am not suggesting anybody
MR. SMALLWOOD: I asked the honourable gentleman to table the question and I will answer. He does not want to do that. It does not suit the purpose—he wants to talk about it tonight. Ask the question tomorrow—I am telling him now.

MR. HOLLETT: I expected that.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Not going to make a little political propaganda.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, because I am asking a simple question in connection with the cement plant—I want to know why the Government paid these prices $37 to $40 to $58 a yard for concrete while having to buy many thousands of bags of cement. Why have to buy reinforced iron? Why have to buy crushed stone and why they had to stand that? It is a simple question demanding only a simple answer. There may be a proper answer for it. I suspect there is, but I would like to have it.

MR. FORSEY: Mr. Chairman, I have the answer, the vote under consideration is a token vote and a typographical error. It should have been a token.

Item carried.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the Minister how this amount is to be spent. This is a plant owned by the Government. How is it going to be spent and what is it for?

MR. SMALLWOOD: It is additional working capital.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, on the gypsum—company at their request and with their consent.

MR. HOLLETT: We are informed it was paid over to them.

MR. SMALLWOOD: To whom? I never said any such thing.

MR. HOLLETT: You said to Benno Schilde. Did not the Honourable the Premier tell us it was to be invested by the firm to whom it was paid by a local company. May I ask to whom it was paid for investment in a local company?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I explained it all before, but I will do it again. We paid the money to Eastern Machinery and something and something. I forget the full name. But the name is undoubtedly down in the Registry of Deeds and Companies. The company is incorporated. It is a limited liability company, and we paid it by cheque to that company.

MR. HOLLETT: Not Benno Schilde?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, we paid it to this company for them, but being owned by Benno Schilde. Now Benno Schilde decided they did not want to build that machinery plant in Bay Roberts, and asked us if they could invest it instead in another company, namely Concrete Products firm in Humbermouth, of W. J. Lundrigan. We agreed to that. As far as we know that is what they have done, if not that is what they are going to do. Benno Schilde passed out of the picture and came into the company, Eastern Machinery owned by them. The difference is that Benno Schilde is a German firm in Germany and Eastern Machinery is a Newfoundland firm in Newfoundland. We paid the Newfoundland firm. That is all.

MR. BROWNE: Is there to be any vote for this year's operating loss? Or are you anticipating an operating loss this year?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I have already said I anticipated an operating loss, a hundred thousand, this year, and that they will be in the black next year.

MR. BROWNE: Who is going to find that one hundred thousand?

MR. SMALLWOOD: We come now and ask for a vote for last year and will next year for this year. But the next year we won't be asking for it, but rather we will have a little revenue, we hope.

MR. HOLLETT: Would the Honourable the Premier tell us if that $150,000 has actually been invested?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I already stated that I don't know. I assume that it has been, and if not it will be invested. I have not followed up the matter.

MR. HOLLETT: Well it is $150,000 floating around somewhere. I think we should find out what happened to it in the first instance. I fail to see why the Government should have to attach any strings to the payment if they made an ex gratia award.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I don't see what it has to do about this vote. The time to talk about it is in the budget.

MR. HOLLETT: It is on the gypsum.

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, it is not. Does the honourable gentleman suppose that because we have here—02—Gypsum—$160,000 any connection with the gypsum plant and therefore any-thing connected with gypsum can be discussed now at this stage in Committee. Does he honestly think that? I think he realizes it is a matter for comment in the debate on the budget. That is why we have a debate on the budget, which allows certain latitude. But on the vote on supply we have to stick to the subject.

MR. HOLLETT: I certainly agree with the Honourable the Premier, but everything was talked about tonight, not all on these votes.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The honourable gentleman is certainly not strictly in order. When I did that I introduced my estimates for my Department of Economic Development, which I administer. That was a review, which was proper. But when debate starts we take up every item, and just because gypsum was mentioned does not mean we can go ahead and talk about everything under the sun. It is out of order. It is in order when on this vote to argue whether this vote should or should not be passed. Any debate on Benno Schilde is out of order. At this point we are not on the debate on the budget.

MR. HOLLETT: I accept the Premier's ruling, Mr. Chairman.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, here in 03 we have a vote there of $100. I have a recollection that recently we voted an expenditure under a guarantee which I think has matured—if the Minister would explain that—several hundred thousand dollars—is that right?

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is right—five hundred thousand dollars.

MR. BROWNE: What is the purpose of having it here?

MR. SMALLWOOD: In case we need to vote some more to them in the coming year. We have it in as a vote. I have already explained to my honourable and learned friend from St. John's West that in our system of budgeting whether we put in a token amount or no money at all, when we have a vote we like to keep it. If he would run his eyes down the page he will see that Cotton Textiles has nothing there. There was something there last year but this year nothing. Pressboard nothing. Once an item appears we like to hold it there year by year even though we vote nothing. It is simply our system of budgeting, that is all. Throughout the budget honourable members will find dozens of instances where we are not asking for any money but the item is still there. Someday they will disappear, no doubt, from the estimates, but until then they are there. In the case of the gypsum plant we have in a token amount of $100 and in the birch plant we have a token vote. Otherwise what we have to do is get a special warrant and get indemnified for it at the next session of the House. But when it is a vote in a given department if there are any countervailing savings in the department these countervailing savings can be used for the purpose for which a token vote is in.

MR. BROWNE: If there was no token vote you could still give a guarantee.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, but this is the honest way to do it, although I know there are cases when you can't. Now I will say quite frankly and quite honestly I don't know, nor the Minister of Finance nor anybody on this side and nobody in this world, only the Almighty knows all the expenses we will meet in the coming 12 months. We don't know to the last cent or dollar or even hundred dollars what we may have to spend in the next 11 months. But we can anticipate we may have to spend something on this or that and put in here a token vote. We may have no money for that vote and we may have a hundred dollars token vote for it, but it is a vote so that any money we save in that same department we can apply to that vote. What we save on this we can spend on that in the same department providing we have a token vote. Otherwise we have to go to the Lieutenant-Governor, have to declare it is an emergency governing public interest maybe damage, ask the Lieutenant-Governor to issue us a warrant on the Treasury for an amount of money; and come into the House afterwards and get indemnified. Don’t blame us when we do the right thing. Don’t try to make it look bad. Blame us when we do the wrong thing but not the right thing.

MR. HOLLETT: I am just going to speak on that. The right thing, I suggest to the Government, when voting the next amount on that token vote, when buying the next amount of cement for the birch plant we watch the price. Because when we built the birch plant they paid $1.80 per bag to Chester Dawe for cement when at the same time it was $1.20 and $1.30 in Corner Brook.

Item carried.

MR. BROWNE: On 07—Tanneries, I notice—I understand the Minister to say there were two tanneries?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, there is one; Dorn's Tannery.

MR. BROWNE: There is a glove factory?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, there they are an entirely different tannery and tan for their own use.

Carried.

MR. BROWNE: I would like to know if you are finished making payments to the United Cottons and Terra Nova Textiles?

MR. SMALLWOOD: They don't appear.

MR. BROWNE: I wonder why.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I am informed the payments to be paid Terra Nova Textiles, or the amount agreed to be lent them, was in an agreement made after these estimates had been prepared and gone to the printers. The amount, I believe, is about $300,000. Terra Nova Textiles have a new building. I was in there today. It will be finished the end of the month. It is a magnificent building up beside the United Cottons building, a magnificent new building with a steel frame, concrete blocks, concrete floors covered with wood, beautiful. It is 89 ft. wide and 120 ft. long, all one big room.

MR. BROWNE: It will come in in supplementary supply, that $300,000?

MR. SMALLWOOD: It will have to now. It will be in the Loan and Guarantee Act. I said $300,000 but it is actually $298,000.

MR. BROWNE: Why $298,000—any special reason?

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is the exact estimate of what they need.

MR. HOLLETT: Would the Honourable Minister tell us if they have started the weaving as yet?
MR. SMALLWOOD: No, how could they without a weaving mill.

MR. CHAIRMAN: The next item is No. 7—Hanning Electric (token) $100.

MR. FOGWILL: Mr. Chairman, Hanning Electric Company, are they in operation now?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I was in the plant today, and I believe they are just about ready to start production. They have been making some material, but are not really producing. Incidentally I have heard a number of people who have spoken very highly about their batteries.

MR. BROWNE: Are they now on the market?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, they have sold probably three or four thousand batteries which are excellent. People speak very highly of them.

MR. BROWNE: The question would be one of cost, and how they compare with other prices.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Batteries are things on which a man does not lose money as a rule, something like drugs.

MR. HOLLETT: I wonder if the Minister could tell us if there are some men coming out from Germany at the present time to endeavour to get the rubber plant going properly. I have personally heard a rumour to that effect. I wonder if it is a rumour or a fact?

MR. SMALLWOOD: The honourable gentleman ought to adopt a resolution and not wait until the new year to do it, about these companies in Holyrood. There was a rumour the manager had absconded with all the money and was in gaol—God knows what kind of rumours there were. It is much easier to say what was not said. The fact of the matter is that the company which has been producing forty pairs of rubber boots a day is now up to nearly three hundred pairs, and in a couple of months will be up to seven hundred pairs a day. They began with ten or fifteen workers and then went up to thirty or forty then up around eighty or ninety, all in a month and a half. They are going up fast and they are going to be a good successful company.

MR. HOLLETT: It is not true that there are a couple of people coming out from Germany to assist them?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Coming out from Germany? Some came out last year, some came out last fall, some in the winter and some this spring, I believe about ten or twelve men, who are outstanding in their field.

Item 22—Gloves:

MR. BROWNE: Does that complete the vote for the glove factory?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes. Carried.

Item No. 23—Shoes:

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, in regard to these last three votes here, do I understand on shoes the vote is $478,000 and $500,000 was voted last year, but not all of that was spent, is that the idea? So that it is $478,000 now?

MR. SMALLWOOD: At the end of the financial year the amount due under the agreement probably this amount—
MR. BROWNE: You have probably given some of that already?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Probably so. Carried.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, I wonder if the Honourable the Premier would tell us how many men and/or women are employed in these operations?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I am speaking from memory but, I believe, 250. That is on the last item in this vote of the Department of Economic Development. May I suggest to the Opposition a thought which perhaps I ought to have suggested long ago, but did not. I am going to do it now. Perhaps enough time and enough water has run under the bridge by now to make this suggestion a practical one. Last year we had an election, a Federal election, and the year before a Provincial election, and so with Federal elections, by-elections and Provincial elections, perhaps the time had not been just right hitherto for me to make this suggestion I am going to make now: The suggestion is that honourable members of the Opposition make two resolutions (1) that now, as the Americans say, there is no percentage, no future in attacking these industries nor ridiculing them nor sneering at them nor pin-pricking nor tail twisting nor indulging in harsh criticisms because—they are all going to succeed—they are all going to get in the black. Oh they are going to have their ups and downs, but they are going to get in the black and they are going to succeed. The second resolution is that: if I were willing I could forever, as these plants succeed, rake up all kinds of statements made in the last two or three years concerning these various industries, but I am willing to forget all that—life begins to get to be too short—I am getting interested in other things.

MR. HOLLETT: Up above?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, very much on the earth, very earthy, in fact, of the earth—earthy. I am willing to tell the Opposition now that I won’t remind them after tonight of the peculiar statements made about these plants, which are incidentally now in the black and making money—their being built in a graveyard and being bolted together rather than riveted and all the others—I have a list of them, a collection of them. But if the Opposition will smarten up and realize that there is no political future—if they have any hope now—they never had any hope—but if they have any hope, that if they have any thought that these plants would all flop and the reverberations of their failure would resound around the land, they can put it out of their minds. It is not going to happen—drop that as a political issue—that is the first resolution I have asked them to take. The second is how to make it a little harder for us to win the next election—it might make it a wee bit harder if the Opposition came out with—God help us—we opposed them—now we are all for them. It would be slightly harder for us—we might lose twenty or thirty votes in Newfoundland if they adopted that attitude—and we will gain two or three hundred if they don’t smarten up. Now the second resolution would be this—to go in and visit all these plants, talk to the proprietors, who are nearly all Germans, not Germans but Austrians, all Europeans, some of them speaking very broken English; make their acquaintance and talk to them and ask them if they will un-button and tell you their hopes and personal expectations, and their problems, and become aware, don’t feel strange about it, become aware these are significant developments going on in Newfoundland with a couple of thousand Newfoundlanders now, our own flesh and blood, working in these plants, getting jobs, getting paid. This is going on under your very nose and I don’t think the Opposition should ostracize, but welcome these plants. I think they should begin to take them under their wing and see if they can help. Now if they do that—agree to adopt this plan—I don’t mean to say stop asking questions. Yes, ask all you like. There is nothing to hide, except that I am not going to give balance sheets of private companies. Now the newspapers can turn pink and green and black and red and all sorts of colours of the rainbow, stand on their head, do and say what they like, but I still will not give the balance sheets of these private companies. I still am not going to do it. I will answer all kinds of questions, but not as to the private affairs of private companies merely because we lend them some money. But I will stop talking about them if the Opposition will stop and give them the next two or three years, say until the next election is over, say two and a half to three years, stop talking about it, all of us. We will answer their questions, sure. We will answer them, except no balance sheets. We are not going to tell you what their costs of production are. That is their own private information. We will give you all the information we reasonably can. Let us stop talking and give them a break and begin making friends with them, visit them, ask about and talk over their problems and see wherein you can help them, and help this industrialization here. Anyhow you are not going to stop it here in any case. Let that cease to be an issue. Let us find other political issues to fight about and not these factories and the livelihood of a couple of thousand Newfoundlanders. Let that cease to be an issue to fight about. Take me up on that and it will be one of the smartest things the Opposition has ever done, not alone a smart thing politically—out of the depth of my political wisdom I give them that advice.

MR. HOLLETT: Now, Mr. Chairman, we are on the knitting mills.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Now we are going to see the result of my advice.

MR. HOLLETT: Now, Mr. Chairman, I realize that the industries, we realize that the industries are here. We realize that the people of Newfoundland have paid for them. But that will not stop us from asking the Government why a thing which was $5,000 probably cost $6,000. It will not stop us from informing the Government of any mistakes they have made. I think the Honourable the Premier, if he were on this side, would be the first to say that is the only thing we can do. Now, mind you, we have never condemned these industrial plants. We only condemn the methods that brought them about.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Like Confederation, for example?

MR. HOLLETT: Yes. Who wants to talk Confederation, I don’t. It is a dead issue as far as I am concerned. We fought against it and lost and have to put up with it.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It is not a thing you have to put up with, but a thing you can live with and enjoy.
MR. HOLLETT: A lot of people are not too pleased with it even yet.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Order. Confederation has no place in this debate.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, I did not raise the issue, the Leader of the House raised it. As regard the new industries: If the Government had taken the people of this country a little more into its confidence there would not have been so much criticism. There would not have been perhaps so much justifiable criticism. I think the Honourable the Premier will admit now that if he had to do the same thing over again he would probably have taken a little more time on some of these issues. As long as we see items like these that exist under the Department of Economic Development, cement, gypsum and birch, tanneries, cotton, etc. as long as we see these we are going to criticize. As long as we see revotes for running expenses, as long as we see interest that has been paid into the Government by some of these concerns being paid back to them again we must ask questions in the interest of the people of the country as a whole. Other than that—of course I can’t give the Honourable the Premier any particular promises from my party, Sir. I speak for the Opposition when I say—we do hope these new industries, every last one of them, will succeed, and if they do then I am quite sure we will all be very happy that Mr. Smallwood was one time Premier of this country and introduced them here.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Thank you.

Item carried.

Financial Surplus Account:

Department of Finance: 454 Other:

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, may I ask a question on that, referring back to the matter raised the other night about those persons who are in the public service, women who get married—will that be charged back to their time they received before 1949 under a vote like this?

MR. SMALLWOOD: These two votes are to cover any liability the Government contracted before Confederation, because at the date of Confederation there stood to our credit a surplus, but that surplus was added to by realizations since and taken from by the liquidation of pre-union liabilities. Since that though, it is to take care of possible liquidations for the coming year which cannot be foreseen, as we don’t know just what they will be, but anything that comes up—

Carried.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Chairman, I move the Committee rise, report having passed the matter to them referred and ask leave to sit again.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Mr. Speaker, the Committee on Supply have passed the following estimates on Capital Account—Item 1444-02 and under Heading 1500 Department of Economic Development. Under Estimates of Expenditure—Financial Surplus Account under heading for the Department of Finance the Committee has made progress and beg leave to sit again.

MR. SPEAKER: Is it the pleasure of the House to receive this report. When shall this Committee have leave to sit again?

MR. SMALLWOOD: At a later hour this day.
The Committee ordered sit again at a later hour this day.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, may I request a recess of ten minutes:

House recessed for ten minutes.

House called to order.

Third Readings:

A Bill "An Act Respecting the Prevention of Fire." On motion read a third time, ordered passed and title be as on the Order Paper.

A Bill "An Act to Amend the Provincial Parks Act." On motion read a third time, ordered passed and title be as on the Order Paper.

A Bill "An Act Further to Amend the Corrections Act, 1953." On motion read a third time, ordered passed and title be as on the Order Paper.

A Bill "An Act Further to Amend the Crown Lands (Mines and Quarries) Act." On motion read a third time, ordered passed and title be as on the Order Paper.

A Bill "An Act Further to Amend the Community Councils Act." On motion read a third time, ordered passed and title be as on the Order Paper.

A Bill "An Act to Amend the Automobile Insurance Act." On motion read a third time, ordered passed and title be as on the Order Paper.

A Bill "An Act to Authorize the Lieutenant-Governor in Council to Enter into an Agreement with Dominion Steel and Coal Corporation, Limited, Dominion Wabana Ore Limited and Nova Scotia Steel and Coal Company, Limited." On motion read a third time, ordered passed and title be as on the Order Paper.

A Bill "An Act to Establish the Newfoundland Fisheries Development Authority." On motion read a third time, ordered passed and title be as on the Order Paper.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, the Attorney General promised to look over the last section of the Act on compensation cases of lesors and lesees in the Fisheries Authority—I take it—

MR. SMALLWOOD: That complicated paragraph neither of you understood?

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Speaker, we have provisions in our rules whereby, if we discover that there is any correction to be made we can recommit a Bill even after third reading. Under that section, I might say, I had forgotten to look through the section. I did go through other sections, which I found personally all right. I think, Mr. Speaker, we could let this go for third reading, and I assure the House if necessary it will be recommitted.

The Bill was then read a third time.

Committee of the Whole on Supply—leave was given earlier this Committee sit again.

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Chairman, I move the Committee rise and recommend to the House that a Bill be brought in giving effect to the resolutions being passed.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Motion is that the Committee rise and ask that a Bill be brought in to give effect to resolutions the Committee has passed.
On motion the Committee rose.

MR. COURAGE: Mr. Speaker, the Committee on Supply have considered the matter to them referred and I have been instructed to ask that a Bill be brought in giving effect to certain resolutions which the Committee has passed.

On motion report of Committee on Supply adopted.

A Bill "An Act for Granting to Her Majesty certain sums of money for the defraying of certain expenses of the public services for the financial year ending the 31st day of March 1954 and for other purposes relating to public services." On motion read a first time, ordered read a second time now. On motion read a second time. On motion now referred to Committee of the Whole House. On motion the Committee reported having passed the Bill without amendments. Report received. On motion Bill referred for third reading on tomorrow.

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Speaker, on the last order on the Order Paper, I think the Clerk may not have taken down exactly what I said. The exact title of the Bill I asked leave to introduce is a Bill, "An Act Relating to Financial Assistance to be rendered to certain Industrial Undertakings." I have asked leave to introduce this Bill. I now move, Mr. Speaker, that the House go into Committee of the Whole to consider these resolutions.

On motion the House went into Committee of the Whole on a Bill "An Act Relating to the Financial Assistance to be rendered to certain Industrial Undertakings."

MR. CURTIS: The only object of asking the House to go into Committee is to circulate the resolutions. It is not the intention of the Government to proceed at the moment. I move the Committee report progress and ask leave to sit again.

MR. COURAGE: Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole have considered the matter to them referred and have made progress and ask leave to sit again.

On motion report received, ordered to sit again tomorrow.

Committee of the Whole on Bill "An Act Respecting the Franchise of Electors and the Election of Members to the House of Assembly." This Committee had leave to sit again.

Mr. Speaker left the Chair.

Clause 1 and 2 read and carried.

Clause 3 read:

3. Subject to this Act, every man and woman is qualified to vote in the proper polling division who

(a) is of the full age of twenty-one years or will attain the full age of twenty-one years on or before polling day at the pending election;

(b) is a Canadian citizen;

(c) has been ordinarily resident in the province for twelve months immediately preceding the date of the issue of the writ of election; and

(d) was ordinarily resident in the electoral district at the date of the issue of the writ of election.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, we get very many British subjects who are not Canadian citizens, and it seems to me we have lessened the qualifications to some extent in that respect by confining it only to citizens of Canada.

MR. SMALLWOOD: What is a Canadian citizen to begin with?

MR. BROWNE: That is a statutory definition.

MR. SMALLWOOD: What is it?

MR. BROWNE: I can't remember it all. But I would say it would be persons who were born in Canada; persons who were born in England or in the Republic of Ireland who are British subjects of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and— it is in the Citizenship Act, and it might be wise, since the Minister is not familiar with it to let that section stand.

HON. M. P. MURRAY (Minister of Provincial Affairs): Yes, let it stand.

Clause 4 read and carried.

Clause 5 read:

5. (1) Subject to Section 30, the Lieutenant-Governor in Council shall before an election is recommenced cause lists of electors for the province to be prepared, revised and compiled in accordance with this Act.

(2) Whenever it appears necessary or desirable to cause lists of electors for the province to be taken, the Lieutenant-Governor in Council shall

(a) appoint a compiling officer for the province who shall in accordance with this Act superintend the preparation and revision of the lists of electors for each electoral district, arrange for the compilation and printing of all such lists and perform the other duties assigned to him, and who shall hold office during the course of the preparation, revision, compilation and printing of the lists; and

(b) designate or appoint justices of the peace to be known as revising justices for the purposes of causing lists of electors to be prepared and revised for each electoral district and for those purposes may assign an electoral district or any part thereof to a revising Justice.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, would it not be a good thing to have the electoral officer appointed at that stage if he is to be the one to take charge of elections?

MR. MURRAY: Mr. Chairman, actually there is no talk of elections until the writ is issued and then the electoral officer takes over when an election is proclaimed. The whole idea of this Act, Mr. Chairman, is to have the list of electors compiled and put on ice and ready for use any time within a year after.

MR. BROWNE: Supposing, having gotten his supply through the House, the Premier should decide to have an election right away?

MR. SMALLWOOD: As of the 3rd of November—let us argue that.

MR. BROWNE: For arguments sake let us take the 15th of June.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The honourable member thinks it is to be in November. I don't see why he should change now. It is to be announced early in November.

MR. BROWNE: Suppose the Premier decides to have an election. Well, the first news the public gets of the election is the publication of the writ. That is all. The Premier does not say: "I want all the Opposition candidates to get ready because in a week or two I am going to the Lieutenant-Governor to have him issue a writ and am going to have an election. We are now going to take a voters list and show you we mean business, and before the season is out we are to have an election." No, that is not the way elections have been carried out in the past, not what I know of them. Always a writ has been issued and the Government has taken the voters list in a rush and then have nomination day, and ten days later polling day. Now there has been no voters list taken since the time of the referendum. I don't think there has been any list since then.

MR. MURRAY: There have been two federal since, of course.

MR. BROWNE: Yes, of course that has nothing to do with this. But look at the number of elections held on that list. If you go back previously to elections held in 1932, is the Minister in a position to say whether a voters list was taken for that?

MR. MURRAY: I could not say.

MR. BROWNE: It would be valuable information for the Committee here to go back to the election 1928 and see whether a voters list was taken and when the writ was issued, then you would be able to tell us. But it seems to me the first thing has always been done is the writ issued.

"MR. MURRAY: Of course, under the old system—this is entirely new.

MR. BROWNE: It is now confined to 21 days. I remember the 1923 election, the first one I took a personal interest in. It must have been at least a month prior to the election that the writ was issued.

MR. MURRAY: 21 days is the minimum.

MR. BROWNE: In the spring of the year 21 days, and even in the late fall, would not be enough. I think you will find the writ should be issued first.

MR. MURRAY: Not as this Bill stands.

MR. BROWNE: This Bill is very much the same as the Act?

MR. MURRAY: No the procedure changed completely, and one of the reasons, as my honourable friend pointed out, is to avoid taking a voters list in a rush and there would be a lot of panic about it. Mr. Short, who is an officer who has had a lot of experience in dealing with elections, says that with the inclusion of Labrador it is completely impossible to compile a list overnight or within a given period. So there must be a completely different system whereby a list of electors is taken by enumerators, and an election can take place anytime within a year afterwards.

MR. BROWNE: Then every year a list is taken? So that when a list is taken there must be an election.

MR. MURRAY: It provides that a list can be extended.

MR. BROWNE: That is why I don't know where we are.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Surely the honourable gentleman is not to be put in a position where he does not know where he is.

MR. HOLLETT: I take it the compilation officer has not yet been appointed?
MR. MURRAY: You mean the men taking the list, presumably—no.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I make the gentlemen of the Opposition a sporting offer now—that, if we hold an election this year—or when we hold an election this writ of election will not be issued until after the voters' list is taken. There will be no such thing as a writ and then scurrying around to take a voters' list. We will first take time and do it right and then have the writ and then have the election 21 days or a month after.

MR. HOLLETT: That is a sporting offer? I do think the Honourable the Premier ought not to find it necessary to carry a huge secret like that all by himself. He should be compelled to confide it to somebody.

MR. SMALLWOOD: There is no secret—the honourable gentleman himself announced the election for the early part of November. And I was personally very grateful to him for letting me know. I did not want to be taken unaware.

MR. MURRAY: Here a compilation officer is appointed to coordinate—under the old a revising officer. But a compiling officer is in charge of the whole lot too.

MR. HOLLETT: But that would not make very much difference as far as that is concerned. The point we were dealing with was the question of issuing the writ then taking the voters' list.

MR. MURRAY: It could have been done as a matter of expediency, but the Act did not call for it.

MR. HOLLETT: The Premier tells us now the list will be taken before.

MR. MURRAY: That is conditional upon an election this year.

MR. HOLLETT: That is good enough. We are quite sure of that.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Well if the honourable gentleman is sure of it, now he knows the list will be taken before the writ of election is issued.

MR. HOLLETT: It is nice and warm in the summertime to take it.

MR. SPENCER: At the rate we are going now I don't think there will be time for an election.

MR. MURRAY: If this Bill becomes law that will have to be done.

Clause 5 carried.

Clause 6 read and carried.

Clause 7 read:

7. (1) Every revising justice shall under the direction of the compiling officer appoint enumerators to prepare lists of the electors in the polling divisions located in the electoral district or part thereof assigned to the revising justice, and two enumerators shall be appointed for each urban polling division and one for each rural polling division.

(2) When appointing an enumerator a revising justice shall make the appointment in accordance with Form No. 1 of the Schedule, and every person appointed an enumerator shall take the oath as in Form No. 2 of the Schedule before proceeding to prepare a list of electors.

(3) A person may be appointed an enumerator for such number of polling divisions as the revising justice may deem advisable.

(4) Every revising justice shall make out and keep a list containing the name and address of each enumerator appointed by him and a description of each polling division for which the enumerator was appointed, and when he has completed the list he shall send a certified copy to the compiling officer.

(5) A revising justice may in his discretion remove, suspend, reappoint or reinstate any enumerator for a polling division in the territory assigned to that revising justice or appoint another in his stead or to act in his stead.

MR. BROWNE: What does that mean here in (3) "A person may be appointed an enumerator for such number of polling divisions as the revising justice may deem advisable"? That applies in an urban area—two of them can be appointed?

MR. HOLLETT: Why two?

MR. BROWNE: It is hard to get good enumerators, of course.

MR. HOLLETT: Why two in urban areas and one in rural?

MR. MURRAY: He can cover a bigger area, I imagine going from house to house.

MR. HOLLETT: It seems to me like the rural area is more extensive than an urban area.

MR. MURRAY: Usually small settlements and everybody knows everybody else.

MR. SMALLWOOD: If they get paid by the name they will collect a lot more in urban areas. They must go half over Newfoundland to do the rural areas.

Carried.

Clause 8 carried.

MR. MURRAY: I move the Committee rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again.

On motion report received, ordered sit again tomorrow.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I move all remaining Orders of the Day to stand deferred, and that the House at its rising do adjourn until tomorrow, Tuesday, at 3:00 of the clock, rather than in the forenoon, because, Mr. Speaker, Tuesday morning happens to be the morning for regular Cabinet meetings. We have business of the Cabinet which cannot very well wait. So we could adjourn until 3:00 o'clock tomorrow, if it pleases the House.

On motion all remaining Orders of the Day do stand deferred.

On motion the House adjourned until tomorrow, Tuesday, at 3:00 of the clock.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the Premier could tell us what business they intend to go ahead with tomorrow.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It seems to me we have these long Bills in Committee—

MR. BROWNE: Do you want to take Ways and Means tomorrow?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I think if we got through the legislation and then decide how long we want to stay here debating the budget, we will want three, four or five days. Let us settle on that between us privately. In the meantime let us get the business done. Meanwhile there is no desire in the world to shorten the debate on the budget. But my suggestion is that we do our hard business in the meantime, the monotonous business of committee stage on these long Bills. And we have one or two Bills to bring in yet. It is terrific. We don't want to be all summer.

On motion the House then adjourned.

TUESDAY, June 8th, 1954

The House met at three of the clock in the afternoon, pursuant to adjournment.

Presenting Petitions

None.

Presenting Reports of Standing and Select Committees

None.

HON. J. R. SMALLWOOD (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I give notice I will on tomorrow ask leave to introduce a Bill, "An Act Further to Amend the Alcoholic Liquor Act."

Answers to Questions

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, there was a question directed to me asking for a copy of the agreement between William J. Lundrigan and the Government for the building of the cement plant at Corner Brook.

MR. M. M. HOLLETT (Leader of the Opposition): And the gypsum?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I did not realize the honourable gentleman asked for both. I have asked the Attorney General's Department, which I believe has a copy, and if I receive it this afternoon it will be tabled.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, I asked the Minister for a copy of the agreement regarding the birch plant, that is the construction of the birch plant.
MR. SMALLWOOD: I don't think there is an agreement, but if there is I will have that too.

Orders of The Day

MR. CURTIS: There was a third reading, Mr. Speaker, but it is not on the Order Paper.

MR. BROWNE: Should not the Committee of Supply also be there?

MR. SMALLWOOD: It should be there.

MR. CURTIS: Would it be necessary then, Mr. Speaker, to ask that the Order Paper be amended by putting on there—Committee of Supply—That should definitely be in the same place as it was yesterday. The third reading of which we had permission, that we could call Item 1 (a).

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Speaker, I now move third reading of a Bill "An Act for Granting to Her Majesty Certain Sums of Money for Defraying Certain Expenses of the Public Services for the Financial Year Ending the Thirty-First Day of March One Thousand Nine Hundred and Fifty-Five, and for Other Purposes Relating to the Public Service." In so doing I think I can explain some of the matters which were not quite clear.

The Supply Bill before the House, Mr. Speaker, provided for $49,358,100; which includes the $3,701,700 previously voted; the consolidated fund service which does not require a vote, made up as follows:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Page</th>
<th>Description</th>

These amounts, Mr. Speaker, do not need to be voted. These added to the $49,358,100 make up the grand total of $53,059,800.

On motion Bill read a third time, ordered passed and title be as on the Order Paper.

Notice of Motion (Continued)

HON. W. J. KEOUGH (Minister of Fisheries and Co-operatives): Mr. Speaker, I give notice I will on tomorrow ask leave to introduce a Bill "An Act to Amend the Co-operative Societies Act."

Committee of the Whole

On Bill "An Act Respecting the Franchise of Electors and the Election of Members to the House of Assembly":

Mr. Speaker left the Chair.

Mr. Courage, Chairman of Committees:

Clauses 9 through 19 read and carried.

Clause 20 read:

20. As soon as the places and days for the holding of a Court of Revision in the territory assigned to a revising justice have been determined and set in accordance with Section 19 the revising justice shall prepare copies of a public notice as in Form No. 12 of the Schedule setting forth the days on and the hours during which the Court of Revision will be held at the
MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I was wondering, in the light of the fact that this is a very lengthy piece of legislation, and I do not wish to delay the progress of the Committee, it occurs to me these clauses are pretty much in accord with what has gone before, and the side title pretty well calls attention to the details, I was wondering if we could not avoid the necessity of reading all these and call their number.

MR. CHAIRMAN: If it is agreeable?

MR. BROWNE: I think if we read the numbers and sub-clauses number—

MR. CHAIRMAN: Agreed—The numbers will be called, and only the side titles will be read.

Clause 21 carried.

Clause 22:

MR. HOLLETT: On that particular one, I wonder if I could ask the Clerk to read that.

Clause 22 (1), (2) read:

22.—(1) At every sitting of a Court of Revision the revising justice shall produce the original lists of the electors prepared by the enumerators for the polling divisions to which the sitting relates, and before the Court of Revision is opened at any place the revising justice shall cause a copy of each of the lists sent to him by the enumerator and retained by him, to be posted up at a place near the Court of Revision to which the public have access.

(2) When any of the original lists of electors forwarded to a revising justice by an enumerator has been lost or so damaged as to be illegible, the revising justice may obtain and use in place of the original list the certified copy filed at the office of a magistrate under this Act.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, on that I voice an objection. The Revising Officer appears somewhere and puts up a notice to be at a certain place, and a storm comes up or anything happens and he cannot carry out the court of revision on that particular day, he is not required by this Act to give any further notice of the sitting, but people in the area, in my opinion, would not know exactly what time the Court of Revision is to be held. I think some change might be made in that.

MR. MURRAY: They are held as soon thereafter as possible.

MR. BROWNE: If there were appropriate words, or if it were borne in mind or say, as soon thereafter as possible.

MR. HOLLETT: It could say after that—Due notice to be given.

MR. MURRAY: What would due notice consists of?

The amendment is that the words thereafter be deleted, and a fullstop substituted.

Carried.
Clauses 23 to 25 carried.

Clause 26: Appeal.

MR. BROWNE: Why so long? What is the precedent for that? I think it should be immediately.

MR. MURRAY: Yes, I suppose, but there is one difficulty, the revising officer might, in all probability, be the magistrate of the district, and if appeal would arise he would have to arrange to get a representative in from outside the district—Forthwith means as soon as possible afterwards.

MR. HOLLETT: That means if he does not do it forthwith there is no appeal.

MR. MURRAY: If we set a limitation it has got to be observed.

MR. HOLLETT: Within fourteen days?

MR. MURRAY: Fourteen days will be the maximum.

MR. HOLLETT: It could be the next day?

MR. MURRAY: Yes.

MR. BROWNE: The point is this—I suppose when he goes to the justice and says: I would like to appeal; the point is the justice may say to him—"Why did you not do it before? It is now two weeks since I have been dealing with this matter, and I have passed all the papers." Why did you not tell me right away? I would say it should be "as soon as possible."

MR. MURRAY: Would the honourable member wish to have the clause stand?

MR. BROWNE: And you could consult the drafters on that.

Clause 26 stand.

Clause 27 carried.

Clause 28: Duties of revising justice when Court of Revision is closed.

Original list to be sent to compiling officer and copy to Magistrate.

Copies to be kept for two years.

MR. BROWNE: Copies of lists shall be kept at the office for a period of not less than two years—what does that mean?

MR. MURRAY: The lists are only for one year, as clause 30 says, but there is a proviso that the time may be extended. The idea is that the list would only be allowed for a year, but it could be the Lieutenant-Governor in Council could extend the period from time to time, up to five years.

MR. BROWNE: I have no objections to this.

Carried.

MR. HOLLETT: I was just wondering is there likely to be any conflict between the compiling officer and the election officer?

MR. MURRAY: In all probability the two offices will be held by the same man, but once the writ of election is out, in all probability, the compiling officer will become the election officer. The two different jobs will in all probability be performed by the same person.

MR. HOLLETT: He would not be required to do so under the Act? It could not be provided for there?

MR. MURRAY: The election officer is not a permanent official. He is only appointed after the proclamation and the writ of election has been issued.
MR. BROWNE: You did not check on the days of the writ, did you?

MR. MURRAY: No, I did not. The same period 21 days in the old is in this—the 21 days, of course is a minimum.

Carried.

Clause 29 carried.

Clause 30: Official lists of electors.

Copy to be sent to each candidate on nomination day.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, on this one, I don't like the part which reads—"From time to time the Lieutenant-Governor in Council may, when he deems it desirable so to do, order that the official list of electors last prepared, revised and compiled under this Act may be used at an election held on any date occurring within the period of five years immediately following the date on which the printing of the lists for the province was completed, and when an order is made under this subsection the lists shall be used at the election to which the order relates."

Now I think there should be a new list for every election. I don't think it is fair because where you have got polling divisions with two hundred and fifty names there may be a considerable turnover in these names, and a considerable change in five years; a number of people will have died, people removed and a number of people will have reached the age of 21 years and there will be new people who have moved into the district. There is bound to be a certain amount of difference, and it will make for many difficulties as many voters for some reason or another leave it until towards the end of the day to do their voting. At the end of the day there is generally a pile up, and the voting stops before all these people have been able to cast their ballots. In that way I have known many people to have been disfranchised.

I would like to have that left out, and that section end with the word "completed."

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Chairman, do we want it worded, so that every time there is an election or a by-election there must be a special Act passed to authorize the use of the old list?

MR. BROWNE: There is nothing to prevent that being done. But to say in here in the Act that the list can be used, I think, is going too far.

MR. MURRAY: A member might die immediately after the House closed, and surely it would not be necessary to have the House get together again.

MR. BROWNE: The House would be in session within twelve months.

MR. MURRAY: The main idea was to avoid the expense and trouble when a by-election was declared within any session of the life of a parliament. We have had numerous by-elections; and we thought to avoid the expense of having lists compiled for every by-election, so that the clause was modified by saying—the Lieutenant-Governor in Council could extend it from time to time, but not beyond the period of five years. For instance there was a general election in 1951—we assume a voters' list was taken for the whole country for that general election. Now there was a by-election in February—well that was all right—the list would have been good for that. Then another by-election in September, and the list was good for that. But now we come to a by-election that was to take place in January, I think, of this year. It is true that there was no list ready for that. Then that would mean that we would have to take a list. It seems to me that would have been a very great inconvenience.

MR. BROWNE: The voters' list could be taken under sub-section 1, you see.

MR. MURRAY: I thought the honourable gentleman's contention was the list could only be validated from time to time by an Act of the Legislature. If that were so, in the honourable gentleman's own case, he would not be sitting here now.

MR. BROWNE: What I mean is that the list which is taken for a general election should be only good for one year. Then if needed for a by-election after a period of one year it should take special legislation.

MR. CURTIS: In that case, Mr. Chairman, going back to my honourable friend's own case, we would have gone to all the trouble and expense of taking a list of electors with no electors, and that certainly would be silly, would it not?

MR. MURRAY: The other objection is that electors are likely to be disfranchised. I don't think that is so, in view of the fact provisions are made for supplementary lists, and provision is made that the election officer at any time can increase the number of polls; and in view of the fact all booths stay open until 8:00 o'clock at night, and anyone standing in the house, outside the booth, is allowed to vote. I think it is practically impossible for anybody to be disfranchised.

MR. BROWNE: I am sure my honourable friend does not need much imagination to imagine what the situation would be like if there were a crowd outside, say, the K. of C. where there are fifteen booths. Let people line up out there and I guarantee it would take at least an hour after closing time before these people will be able to vote. I know the delay, as does anyone who has seen it. The Premier must know of the delay where people have to be sworn in. There is no doubt about it, the election machinery, should run as smoothly as possible because it is a very important thing, even if one man is deprived of his right to vote. As the Minister in charge of this Bill knows, every vote counts. It is therefore desirable that the machinery should run as smoothly as possible on election day. There are people who come in to vote who cannot write, and in the hurry and pressure the deputies don't have time to give consideration to points that should be considered.

MR. MURRAY: Well, the honourable member will notice that for the first time in this Act we tried to avoid that by saying, a polling division must be set up for two hundred and fifty electors. And we think that any deputy returning officer can handle up to two hundred and fifty in a day with ease.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It is a matter of having enough booths.

MR. BROWNE: Yes—but if there are two hundred and fifty electors on the voters' list of which 125 are not on, and the 125 have to be put on, five years after the list is taken—that is the answer. Then to follow it to its logical conclusion it seems to me twelve months is long enough to have it, well perhaps people might say two years, but I think five years is too long.

MR. HOLLETT: Suppose we start to take a list of electors today for the November elections, you would have almost as many coming of age as you would have electors now at the end of five years.

MR. CURTIS: Offset by those who died. A lot of people will have died.

MR. HOLLETT: They won't want to vote.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Who says that.

MR. HOLLETT: Their names will be stricken off automatically by the Man Above, but the new ones coming of age to vote, their names won't be on the list in five years time. They will get on the supplementary list. I grant you even there that takes a considerable lot of time.

MR. BROWNE: Will the Honourable Minister tell us why the five years?

MR. MURRAY: It is the length of time, as the honourable member knows, for which any parliament is elected, and it was thought a list taken could be used if necessary in any period between the life of one parliament and the next.

MR. CURTIS: We can always do what my honourable friend's predecessor did when he went to Port de Grave—declare an invalid election, and then come back and rectify it.

MR. BROWNE: I am not sure, but probably a list was taken in 1932, and the election or by-election in Port de Grave referred, would certainly not have been later than 1933.

MR. CURTIS: They had an invalid election.

MR. MURRAY: They kept the booths open to 8:00 o'clock instead of 4:00 o'clock. I don't know what the cause of that was, there might have been some reason, or there might have been some mistake.

This is merely permissive. It does not say "shall" but "may from time to time" when it would be desirable to extend the list.

MR. BROWNE: For five years. In the meantime there might be two general elections. I don't see it is a tremendous expenditure on the part of the province for a general election to have a voters' list taken.

MR. HOLLETT: I hope the Honourable the Attorney General is not going to blame the Opposition for the 1932 election. Then I would have to refer to an invalid referendum in a town council in Bonavista.

MR. CURTIS: No, but I say, it is a fact you had a Tory Party in 1932.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, I have no worries about being called the "Tory Party." At least we do the Government the honour of calling them representatives of the "Liberal Party" in Newfoundland. We have never called them the "Whigs" but we could do it.

MR. HOLLETT: We have no objection to being called "Tory" but our official title is "Progressive Conservative." In Newfoundland the Government does not recognize that, but we will make them. So if you want to be called “Whigs” we will call you “Whigs.” We have lots of earwigs in the Housing Corporation.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I move that all the words after the word “completed,” be stricken out. In doing so, Mr. Chairman, I want to contend again that since voting is a privilege and a right of every citizen that he should be protected in the exercise of that right. And if, as a result of an old election list, a man is deprived, and he may be easily deprived, then he is being done an injustice which nothing can repair. I think the Minister ought to feel most scrupulous about this sort of thing. I think some provision should be made for by-elections. There is no provision in the Bill at all for by-elections that I can see or remember.

MR. MURRAY: The next clause.

MR. BROWNE: Once a voters’ list has been compiled for the whole province that is supposed to be good for every by-election and every general election within five years. I doubt if the Minister can show any precedent in any part of the British Empire for legislation of this kind.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, there is another point—I do realize that due to the fact we had not had any elections for a period of sixteen or seventeen years we had a young generation during that period not taking perhaps the active interest and have forgotten. I maintain that is one of the things that created interest in the old days, the mere fact of taking the voters’ list got people talking about governments and oppositions, etc., and they did take an interest; there is no question about it in the old days, much more so I believe than the younger generation of today. I think this mere fact of taking a voters’ list would be a sort of inducement to the electors to begin thinking of the future, shall I say, in government matters. That may be a small point, but in my opinion it is a big one.

MR. CURTIS: We have had more elections since 1917, Mr. Speaker, than any other generation of Newfoundlanders.

MR. BROWNE: They have not been to the House of Assembly.

MR. CURTIS: We have had two.

MR. HOLLETT: I think they did take a voters’ list for the Federal Election.

MR. CHAIRMAN: I will now put the amendment to sub-clause one—All words following the word “completed,” which is in the fifth line be deleted.

MR. CHAIRMAN: On motion I declare the amendment lost.

Division.

MR. CHAIRMAN: All in favour of the motion stand:

Mr. Higgins, Mr. Hollett, Mr. Browne, Mr. Fogwill.

MR. CHAIRMAN: All those against the motion stand:

Hon. Minister of Finance, Hon. Attorney General, Hon. the Premier, Hon. Minister of Fisheries and Cooperatives, Hon. Minister of Labour, Mr. Morgan, Hon. Minister of Mines and Resources, Mr. Janes, Mr. Brown, Hon. Minister for Provincial Affairs.

Clause carried.

Clause 31: Proclamation.

Days of polling and nomination.

Same days in all districts but three.

Deferred election.

MR. MURRAY: I think the honourable and learned member for St. John’s West a few moments ago said that no provision has been made for by-elections. I think if he reads the sub-clause there he will see that is not the case—It says every election shall be commenced by a Proclamation of the Lieutenant-Governor in Council and subject to this section the Lieutenant-Governor in Council shall—If he reads the sub-clause he will see.

MR. BROWNE: I think that covers a deferred election rather than a by-election. Mr. Chairman, I feel there should be a change here in sub-clause (2) where the day of polling is referred to—the day of polling referred to in paragraph (a) of sub-section (1) shall be a day not less than twenty-one clear days after the date on which the Proclamation mentioned in that sub-section is issued, and the day of nomination referred to in that paragraph shall be on the tenth day before the day of polling. Now I submit that twenty-one days are not enough. We should have at least thirty-five days. That is five weeks prior to an election, when the writ should be announced, so that parties should have a full opportunity to visit all constituencies. And the nomination day should be for ten days so that candidates—candidates won’t be able to get the voters’ list for ten days before the election—and so that the deputy returning officers will have time to carry out the big responsibility on their shoulders I would say that ten days is too short a time and if we consider that there may be bad weather and fog in some districts they may not be able to carry out their duties fully during that short time. Therefore, if this is acceptable, I propose to move an amendment. Then I may deal with sub-section (4) which gives the Government power to defer elections in the electoral districts of St. Barbe, White Bay and Labrador. Now I can understand about Labrador. That is especially excluded in the same fashion in the Terms of Union. But I cannot see why it should apply to White Bay and St. Barbe.

MR. JANES: The honourable member should go down there.

MR. BROWNE: I have been down there.

MR. SMALLWOOD: In the summer.

MR. SPENCER: I was down there in May and June and do know.

MR. BROWNE: Now it will be different when we get the big plants down there, the big fish plants, it will be different, the weather is going to change then.

MR. SPENCER: I thought you were going to say highroad.

MR. BROWNE: Could be, too, Mr. Chairman. I don’t remember in my lifetime ever hearing of any special difficulty on account of elections in these districts. Now the spring election of 1923 was the earliest I can remember, and that was held the 3rd day of May, and the election went off as usual on that occasion. I don’t remember any time when an election in this country had to be deferred. It was always regarded that October or November would be the latest part of the year when an election could be held. I don’t think we have had an election except a by-election in some places like St. John’s in the winter months. There are many districts where it would be impossible to hold an election from the end of November, I would say, until the month of May or June. But general elections should not be held at the convenient time, and the experience in the past rather justifies us assuming such is not likely to happen in the future. Therefore, Mr. Chairman, I oppose, and our side opposes the deferring of elections for both St. Barbe and White Bay.

MR. MURRAY: Mr. Chairman, the honourable and learned member has raised several points there in regard to this clause. I will try to deal with them as they were brought up. First of all I think that five or six weeks should be allowed after the proclamation, and before the elections take place as was suggested. All I can say is that the honourable and learned gentleman is a wonderful campaigner much better than most of us— and there is nothing new about this provision. It is part of the old Act, and has been in there since 1913, when communications were not nearly as good as they are today. I don’t think we have heard of any hardship being caused in that connection. As I have pointed out this is the absolute minimum. The Act sets it down as the absolute minimum, but it does not follow every proclamation will be issued just 21 days before the elections take place.

MR. BROWNE: What about the ten days?

MR. MURRAY: The ten days has also been there since 1913. It also comes straight out of the old Act. All I can say is that it seems to have worked out. With regard to Clause (4), the honourable and learned member does not see the point about being able to defer an election in White Bay and St. Barbe but sees the point in regard to Labrador. Well, it is exactly for the same reason for which this provision has been made. The honourable and learned member has spoken about the experiences of the past. Well, it is precisely because of the experiences of the past that provision is put in, and it has been done at the recommendation of Mr. Short who has had much practical experience in these matters. Mr. Short maintains it is completely impossible to have a proper election in White Bay or St. Barbe except perhaps in the months of July and August.

MR. BROWNE: Only two months in the year?

MR. MURRAY: An election could not have been held in White Bay, nor Green Bay last month nor this month. It is purely as a result of experience.

MR. CURTIS: We could not have gone to Twillingate this month.

DR. ROWE: I have been told—I cannot cite the dates—I have been told that in at least one election a number of settlers in my district lost their vote or did not get a chance to vote because of ice. I know when I was told that I did not think it was correct. But I have an active interest in it now, and I know the ice conditions in the Straits. I do know this, only yesterday two of the coastal boats in White Bay District were barred in port with ice. I make this point now to show that, if you are going back to the past, you will find, if a proclamation were issued say the 15th of May this year for an election, the people of the northern part of White Bay and in fact the southern part would not get a chance to vote because yesterday Green Bay was filled with ice, you could not get around there. In the northern part of St. Barbe District especially, the voters there could be prevented from exercising their fran-chise because of ice conditions. It can be argued that the answer to that would be to hold elections in August and September or October, when you are bound to be able to get around down there. That is true. But it may not suit the Government nor the country nor the province to hold elections always in August, September or October.

MR. HOLLETT: It seems to me,
Mr. Chairman, the Government would be well advised to have elections at the proper time in the year, at a time when it is most easy—I could say agreeable—but it is never agreeable—but at a time suitable for all the people.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Early in No-

MR. HOLLETT: Early in November is rather late, I must admit, but as the Honourable the Premier has been pleased to set the time, perhaps we will have to excuse it for this year, if he wants an election in early No-

MR. SMALLWOOD: How else could we possibly do it without creating a lot of damage to ourselves?

MR. HOLLETT: If you are going to defer elections in White Bay why not in Fogo? Or why not in Green Bay, if you like? As a matter of fact, as my honourable friend suggested,
why not wait until the proper season in the year to have elections. I think it is ridiculous to defer elections in three out of twenty-eight districts. Defer the elections there until you see the result from the other areas and then run off an election down there, quite helpful. We have no very great

Proclamation and the date of the election, that it will be too long on the campaign.

MR. MURRAY: I did not say that.
I don't think I said that at all.

MR. HOLLETT: Spent a whole year campaigning in Ferryland District.

MR. MURRAY: That is true enough, a year and a half.

MR. HOLLETT: Getting back to what I was trying to say, that the interval should not be more than 21 days. My honourable friend on my right suggested that would not be long enough, and the time should be a little longer. He probably had in mind the fact that there may be some ice floating around, and for that reason he suggested that 21 days is not a long enough period.

Then we come down to the section where it says the Lieutenant-Governor in Council may defer the election in Labrador, St. Barbe and White Bay, and they are going to do it because of the weather. In other words—21 days is long enough—

MR. SMALLWOOD: How else could we possibly do it without creating a lot of damage to ourselves?
objections to it, of course. We still think it is unfair to the people to have an election and then, when the people in White Bay and St. Barbe and Labrador all have to sit back and watch what is going on and not join in the fun. They would like to be able to mark their ballots like everybody else without their being scared by a previous vote which would have been taken in the rest of the island. I don't think it is right and proper for the Government to more or less penalize the people in these areas. The proper thing to do would be to have the elections at the proper time of year, when most people can get around. I do think the Government would be wise to do so. I can see in Labrador where you can have some difficulty because the extent of the district is so great. But in St. Barbe and White Bay you could have an election there in the middle of the winter almost anytime. You now have aeroplanes and helicopters and whatnot, and I am quite sure it is possible to run off an election in St. Barbe and White Bay at the same time as in the rest of the island. I think the point is well taken by my honourable and learned friend.

MR. MURRAY: If possible the elections in St. Barbe and White Bay would be run off, but if it were not possible they would be deferred.

MR. BROWNE: Well the answer is -Why not hold the general elections at a time when it is possible to have it. If we are to have a general election let us have a general election, and not have an election for twenty-five districts and no election for the rest but let them sit by and watch what is going on, and make up their minds afterwards.

MR. MURRAY: We are up against this—we would have to face the possibility that a number of the electors in White Bay and St. Barbe and Labrador would be disfranchised if an election were held at certain times in the year, or otherwise that all elections must be held at the same time, which would be tantamount to saying that general elections could be held only in July and August. It is almost the same thing.

MR. BROWNE: The Minister is not seriously contending that July and August are the only two months when elections can be held. One Minister gets up and talks about the Labrador, the summer down there, and these beautiful farms on the St. Mary's River, etc. We have been told of the magnificent climate down there. I am quite sure then even if Labrador is no bigger than the District of Saguaneay, and there are others in Quebec, they don't defer the elections as far as I know, certainly not general elections. The idea is general elections for Canada are supposed to be held at a time when people at least can get around their district. We did have an election in August last year when people were disfranchised for other reasons. They are certainly not going to decide on having an election in February or some impossible time when they know it is impossible. Now, Mr. Chairman, I feel the Minister should give consideration to this provision about the twenty-one days. Twenty-one days, I submit is insufficient. Since 1930 the population of this country has increased by 30% and the districts are much bigger today than they were when there were thirty-six members, while there are now only twenty-eight. That is an additional reason, if one is required. Would the Minister accept four weeks.
twenty-eight days instead of twenty-one days. A period of twenty-one days is obviously very short, and the election, I believe, in 1951, was called in twenty-one days, and I am quite sure there was not sufficient time given at that time.

MR. MURRAY: That is, as I pointed out, the minimum.

MR. BROWNE: Yes, but it can be used by an unscrupulous government.

MR. SPENCER: If you had such.

MR. BROWNE: There are some people who think we have.

Mr. Chairman, I move that the words “twenty-one” in the second line of sub-clause (2) be changed to “thirty-five days” and that sub-clause (4) be removed altogether and sub-clause (5) be substituted for it.

MR. CHAIRMAN: I understand the amendment is that sub-clause (2) in the second line, the words “twenty-one” be deleted and the words “thirty-five” be substituted. That is the question I will now put.

On motion the amendment lost.

MR. BROWNE: Divide:

MR. CHAIRMAN: The honourable member has asked for a division—All those in favour of the amendment will stand:

Mr. Fogwill, Mr. Higgins, Mr. Browne, Mr. Hollett.

Those opposed to the amendment:

Hon. Minister of Provincial Affairs, Hon. Minister of Fisheries and Cooperatives, Hon. the Attorney General, Hon. Minister of Finance, Hon. Minister of Labour, Mr. Morgan, Hon. Minister of Public Works, Hon. Minister of Mines and Resources, Mr. Janes, Mr. Clyde Brown.

MR. CHAIRMAN: The next amendment is that Clause (4) be deleted altogether and the clause be renumbered.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I see clause (5) is only applicable if clause (4) be in there.

MR. HOLLETT: I think, Mr. Chairman, that is something to which the Government ought to give very considerable attention. I think we have put forward reasonable enough arguments to indicate it is highly unfair that people on long sections of our coast should be deprived of the opportunity to cast their ballots at the same time as Newfoundlanders along the rest of the country. There is no reason except that the election should be held in the middle of the winter, and I suggest if they set the date at the appropriate time there would be no need of setting it at a date when these people would not be able to vote, or would not be get-at-able as it were. If the Honourable Minister could give any valid reason why any election should be held in the middle of the winter then I think that would be the time to suggest some sort of an amendment. I really do not think there is any cause whatsoever for not holding an election at the same time or season. Otherwise one-quarter or one seventh in this case would be disfranchised. That is exactly what you are doing, disfranchising one section of the electorate, not exactly one-seventh, but one-ninth rather. At any rate they would be disfranchised simply because the Government of the day was unreasonable enough to call an election at a time when election material could not be gotten to them, or when they could not get to the polling stations.

DR. ROWE: Mr. Chairman, there is just one thing about this. I should have recalled this before when I spoke. If my memory serves me right, in one of the elections, I believe the first provincial election I found out very quickly and easily that a number of people in Northern Labrador were not able to vote in that election which was held in June, or around the 26th of May, I think.

MR. CURTIS: That must have been a freak year—we did not see a bit of ice.

DR. ROWE: What I am getting at is that as far as Labrador is concerned, we cannot very well depend on what the ice is going to do or is not going to do down there. I was told only yesterday by a man I was speaking with who knows more perhaps than any other person living about the Labrador, that on one occasion it was the first day of August before they could penetrate down to Nain. Incidentally that has nothing to do with what I and others have said about the climate of Labrador. As a matter of fact I was swimming in Labrador on the 12th day of July with icebergs visible to me a mile off there. You can't go by that. Arctic ice can be up and down that coast and still you can go into the bottom of Lake Melville and find the weather as hot as any we ever get here in Newfoundland.

There is one other point. The honourable member referred to Saguanay. I don't believe you will find five or six or perhaps several hundred square miles of Arctic ice in Saguanay River. I don't know what the comparison of the two districts is. But I would say this: I don't believe, and I am pretty sure, there is no other provincial district in any province which has such a far-flung population. I do think the experience of several elections have shown that, as far as Labrador is concerned; and many people feel that the same applies to St. Barbe and White Bay, because they are also districts with a tremendous coastline; where it is impossible to call an election during most of the year because of climatic conditions. The most favourable time would be probably August or September. But it it not possible for any government always to have an election during these two months.

MR. MURRAY: There is just one word I would like to add. Everyone seems to assume that in every general election these three districts will have the election automatically deferred. That is not what is intended. If the situation demands that it be deferred in any of these three districts it will be.

DR. ROWE: As a matter of fact, I would say, and I have heard others say this—the easiest time to hold an election in Labrador, and the same would apply, I think to St. Barbe and White Bay, and certainly St. Barbe, would be in the months of February and March, preferably March. I would have no hesitation myself, if the general election were called for the month of March, I would have no hesitation, if I felt I could get along, of covering the district in the month of March.

MR. BROWNE: I am reminded of the phrase—the tail wagging the dog—for the sake of one district the elections should be held in the month of March. I don't think the honourable gentleman seriously puts that forward. But generally speaking the time for holding an election is decided by the Government. They have it within their power to hold it at a time when it is reasonable and convenient for the great majority of the voters to vote. Now there has been argument and discussion from time to time as to when would be most suitable to have a general election in this country, and I think it was recommended by most people that the fall of the year, in October, was the most suitable time. We have had upsets in this country since 1923 as far as holding elections is concerned, prior to that elections went on in their ordinary course, but since 1923 we have had governments upset and elections had to be called at times when they would not ordinarily be called. But let us hope we are back to normal times; and this Government now has over two and a half years to run its course, and should be able to pick a time which is favourable for the majority of the people.

MR. HOLLETT: There is just one other point, Mr. Chairman, may we assume the Government is to have an election in November this year, and weather conditions are pretty terrible, so that they decide to defer the elections until a later date in these three districts; run off the election in November, and there are only 25 seats, and they get thirteen seats and the other fellows twelve, then there is no government, and there can be no government until the middle of June or July, until we can hold an election in the other three districts. The House cannot even be called together, as there would be twelve on each side, with the Speaker in the Chair. That is just possible, and we are creating legislation which could bring it about. But in any case supposing you have a return of twelve and thirteen—

MR. SPENCER: The people could go either way in such circumstances though.

MR. HOLLETT: Yes, it might make for an awkward situation. But you would have to remember the Government made it awkward by such legislation; if you are going to defer elections in half the districts in the country. In the old days for instance you had the people in Labrador district fishing, the people in Burin district away on the Grand Banks or anywhere else away from home. Consequently because of their occupation in most of these districts we ought to take a chance on the Government having sense enough to call an election at the time best suited.

Motion put—Amendment lost.

MR. BROWNE: Divide:

Those in favour of the motion:

Mr. Browne, Mr. Hollett, Mr. Fogwill and Mr. Higgins.

Those opposed to the motion:

Hon. the Premier, Hon. the Minister of Fisheries and Co-operatives, Hon. the Attorney General, Hon. Minister of Finance, Hon. Minister of Labour, Hon. Minister of Public Works, Hon. Minister of Mines and Resources, Mr. Morgan, Mr. Janes, Mr. Clyde Brown, Mr. Norman and Hon. Minister for Provincial Affairs.

Clause carried.

House recessed for ten minutes.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Order!Clauses 32 and 33 carried.

Clause 34: Appointment of staff of chief electoral officer.
MR. BROWNE: In Clause 33 the Chief Electoral Officer is supposed to be in charge, but in Clause 34 it is the Lieutenant-Governor in Council. I thought the Chief Electoral Officer on appointment was given authority to supervise the whole thing. He should, therefore, be given the authority to engage any help, otherwise you are going to be accused of playing politics.

MR. MURRAY: Most of the clerical staff would be a matter of routine. The Electoral Officer would choose them and send to the Lieutenant-Governor in Council for ratification.

MR. CURTIS: They are usually seconded from Provincial Affairs.

MR. MURRAY: Mr. Quigley in my office would in all probability be seconded.

MR. HOLLETT: That refers to such officers and help as may be deemed necessary. That is all over the island, clerks, etc. Why have they to be appointed by the Government rather than by the Chief Electoral Officer?

MR. MURRAY: As far as over the island—These local measures apply only to the staff in St. John's, who supervise the returns of the election. The other returning officers for each district are also appointed by the Lieutenant-Governor in Council. The returning officers to a very large extent, practically entirely, appoint their own deputy returning officers and poll clerks, and the Electoral Officers staff in St. John's who have the general supervision of the election, as the Attorney General says, have been several seconded from their various departments to these jobs.

Carried.

Clause 35 carried.

Clause 36: Returning officers.

Oath to be taken.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, clause 36 refers to a person to whom a writ of election is directed. Should it not be a qualified elector—There is nothing to indicate that.

MR. MURRAY: It has to be in any case because he has to be to cast his ballot. I will check on that—We could let it stand.

MR. BROWNE: There is another point there: If he is unable to act or is disqualified this writ of election may be withdrawn and in lieu thereof a writ of election may be issued—another one may be issued.—There are 21 days so that would be a deferred election too—see what I mean?

MR. MURRAY: The honourable and learned member assumes always that every election will be held in 21 days. That is the absolute minimum.—That is only the minimum.

Clauses 36—40 carried.

Clause 41: Qualifications of candidates.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, may we refer back to qualifications of electors—Now our qualifications under the 1913 Act states that every male British subject of the full age of 21 years, and under this Act it is every male person.

MR. MURRAY: I have a brief here from Mr. McCarthy but have not had time to go through it—I took that matter up with him this morning. That is your point—Should your elector be other than a Canadian citizen, should he be a British subject?
MR. BROWNE: Yes.

MR. MURRAY: We could let that stand.

Clause 41 stand.

Clauses 42, 44, 45, 46 carried.

MR. BROWNE: Before you put that—I have a note here.—According to Section (54) of the old Act if the candidate withdrew he would have to make a declaration saying he did so freely and voluntarily. Is there anything like that here?

MR. MURRAY: We actually did not see any necessity for it.

MR. BROWNE: Well, it might be brought out.

MR. MURRAY: Any more criticism of that clause. I think the Bill is pretty much in line with the Federal clause.

MR. BROWNE: Yes, all right.

Clauses 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 51, 52 carried.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, does not the Minister think that is going to create an awful lot of difficulty. I can understand in the case of hospitals it is feasible, but if you are going to take in the general public travelling all over the country, then the only fair way out is to have two polling stations in every district or every sizable town.

MR. MURRAY: For two days or so.

MR. BROWNE: Why?

MR. MURRAY: For weather conditions and other reasons. A great deal of election material is taken around by aeroplane, which could be grounded, or a boat going around could be held up from one harbour to another. So this is not an extensive deferment, but only gives an extra two days.

MR. HIGGINS: Meanwhile they get the results of the rest of the elections over the radio.
MR. MURRAY: I think it is worthwhile to consider the question of holding elections on Monday. It seems to me the Federal Government is wise in doing so, and they have had a great deal of experience through the years, and in their case it seems to work well.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I think it would be unwise to fix Monday as election day in Newfoundland. It would be very unwise.

MR. BROWNE: That is what I call making a statement, not an argument.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I do not want to give the argument, because I don't think it would be wise.

Clauses 53, 54, 55, 56 and 57 carried.

Clause 58:

Ballot papers and their form.
Printing of ballot papers.
Numbering of ballot papers.
Printer's name and affidavit.
Ballot papers to be furnished by chief electoral officer, or printed by returning officer if so desired.

MR. HOLLETT: On that point. I think I raised an issue on second reading of the form of the ballot paper, form No. 30.

MR. MURRAY: Yes, we have taken note of that.

MR. HOLLETT: What will the form be now?

MR. MURRAY: Well, if the honourable member has the Federal Act there, he will see there a form of ballot, and that is the form we propose to have. Is there any objection to that form?

MR. HOLLETT: No, the same as under the old Act. I thought that was very good in fact. I have no objection to that at all.

Carried.

Clause 59: Indictable offences.

MR. BROWNE: A person who votes twice—is that covered there?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I do not want to give the argument, because I don't think it would be wise.

MR. MURRAY: It is certainly covered somewhere.

MR. BROWNE: Is the offense of duplication covered anywhere. It is very easy for people to vote twice.

MR. MURRAY: Yes it is.

Carried.

Clauses 60 through 63 carried.

Clause 64:

Examining and sealing ballot box.
Commencement of voting.
Admittance of electors.
Idem.

MR. BROWNE: Originally the returning officer initialled the ballot just prior to delivering it to the voter. In this case he is to initial all before the poll opens. I don't see any improvement there.

MR. MURRAY: There is quite a distinction, if honourable members of the Opposition remember, the reason for having the initials beforehand and with lead pencil is to assure that all initials are put in the same place, in exactly the same way one under the other.

MR. HOLLETT: The point I am getting at is that if the agent arrives in the morning five, ten or twenty minutes ahead of time the Deputy Returning Officer has to initial 250 ballots before opening the polls. I would like to know how long it will take them to initial 250 ballots.

Heretofore they were initialled before being given to the voter. That to me seems to be the best manner of protection. If you are going to leave these ballots some may not be used—

MR. MURRAY: They are all stitched and bound together in blocks of 25, stubs and counterfoils and ballots. I can assure the Honourable Leader of the Opposition this system worked out as a result of long experience in the Federal field is much better than our own.

MR. HOLLETT: It is the fact of them having to initial 250 first.

MR. MURRAY: A matter of ten or fifteen minutes, I suppose.

MR. BROWNE: Does he have to do the whole lot of them before he opens the polls?

MR. MURRAY: Yes, it is not a big job. I can see the necessity for it.

MR. HOLLETT: I don't see the necessity—What is the necessity?

MR. MURRAY: The reason is if done before by the Deputy Returning Officer it is done uniformly—

MR. HOLLETT: Under the old system a man came in and gave his name, and when all that had been gone through, the Deputy Returning Officer took the ballot paper and initialled it in the presence of the agents or candidates and passed it over, and all the others were not initialled and could not be used.

MR. MURRAY: But under the old system the ballots when in the centre box were mixed up altogether, and none could see the box, and therefore no identification would be on the back except officer—

Carried.

Clause 65:

Who may vote.

Certain electors whose names do not appear on official list of electors may vote.

Supplementary lists.

Determination of residence.

Persons who may vote at polling stations established under Section 52.

Plural voting.

MR. BROWNE: Is it clear what is meant by a person's residence? Take a person working at Fort Pepperrell or Argentia, are they residents?

MR. MURRAY: No.

MR. BROWNE: Well, if the election is held in the middle of the week, what are those persons to do? Are they to go home to Quirpon or Harbour Grace in order to vote?

MR. MURRAY: No, we will have polls situated down in the Seamen's Institute as we did before.

MR. BROWNE: What do you do in Argentia?

MR. MURRAY: The same thing if necessary.

MR. BROWNE: Suppose they come from a whole fleet of districts?

MR. MURRAY: To get every vote it would be necessary to set up polling booths.

MR. BROWNE: It would be much easier to manage if we had elections on Monday.

MR. FOGWILL: Another point in connection with persons resident at Fort Pepperrell—And quite a few reside at Fort Pepperrell who have no home anywhere else; and they are not living in Newfoundland.

DR. ROWE: The Honourable the Premier did not say elections would not be held on Monday. It might well happen it would be held on Monday.

MR. HIGGINS: The point my honourable friend from St. John's East makes is that there are people living on Pepperrell—Are they to vote in St. John's East—Take a man ordinarily living in Placentia who is employed at Pepperrell and living on the base—In the Federal Election he voted in St. John's East. What happens in our elections?

MR. MURRAY: Well, when the election list is taken up, if they were resident there then they would be listed, or they could go on the supplementary list.

MR. FOGWILL: I think the same thing applies at Argentia. Newfoundland people who reside at Argentia vote there, if they have resided on the base over a period of a year.

MR. MURRAY: Their names go in the election list for that polling division, at either Argentia or Pepperrell, as the case may be, if they are living there for a year.

MR. HIGGINS: What is done about persons attending the Memorial?

MR. MURRAY: There is a special clause there for those.

MR. POWER: As far as I remember in the elections I have any knowledge of, in the Argentia area everyone on the base was entitled to vote.

MR. HOLLETT: For what district?

MR. POWER: They voted in Placentia and St. Mary's in the provincial election.

MR. BROWNE: But fifty per cent did not vote.

MR. POWER: What happened was the American authorities gave leave, and those who took their leave went home and voted in their own district.

MR. FOGWILL: Before we go on from there—we have a case of persons living in St. John's during the week and their names are taken on the St. John's voters' list and probably their names are given to the voting list in their place of residence. You get a lot of persons that come in to St. John's, say, Monday morning, board here during the week, but it is not their ordinary place of residence.

MR. MURRAY: If a man worked in St. John's during the week and went back around the bay for Saturday and Sunday, then that would be his place of residence, and he should actually vote there.

MR. FOGWILL: How is he going to get there in three hours? On the other hand, if he had three hours, he could vote before coming in on Monday morning.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, before that is carried—Sub-clause (vi)—Clause 65—Now what do you mean there by "a division in which he ordinarily resides on polling day"?

MR. MURRAY: We have to read this in connection with sub-clause 4: We make exceptions of certain people under Section 4.

MR. HOLLETT: I think it has to be read in conjunction with the section 10 where ordinary residence is described—That section is going to confuse.

MR. MURRAY: If you will notice the first three sections of Section 10, which decides who will go on the list. This qualifies it still further.

MR. HOLLETT: I am just looking at it from the point of view of confusion, so deputies may refuse certain people an accept some of them.

MR. MURRAY: We are always up against that. We are trying to make it as clear as we can.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, while the Minister is considering that clause he ought to consider the question of patients. Suppose a patient is shifted from his district and sent to the Sanatorium between nomination day and polling day?

MR. MURRAY: We gave that consideration. We thought at first patients in the Sanatorium should vote only in St. John's West, in the district in which they are resident. Then again we thought that would be unfair, so that we came back again to the idea that we will set up these outside polling stations in there. That is the only fair way. It is more cumbersome but—

MR. HOLLETT: Yes, it is better.

Clause 65—stand.

Clauses 66, 67, 68 carried.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, sub-clause 12 is in my opinion unworkable—if at the hour of the closing of the poll there are any electors in the polling station who are qualified to vote and have not been able to do so since their arrival at the polling station, the poll shall be kept open a sufficient time to enable them to vote but no one not actually present in or inside the outer door of the polling station at the hour of closing shall be allowed to vote even if the poll is still open when he arrives. How are you going to tell—is the Deputy Returning Officer or the Clerk who are inside able to tell who are at the door at this time. Why not close at eight o'clock, and if not within the booth—

MR. SMALLWOOD: If the booths closed at ten o'clock or at midnight there would be a few late.

MR. HOLLETT: I think perhaps if it were made definite, then they would get along in time to vote. But as the Honourable the Premier said; there are bound to be a few late. For instance there may be a crowd outside of some polling booths a quarter of a mile long. I think, Mr. Chairman, most of us have had the experience of seeing people arrive to have the doors closed in their faces—

MR. FOGWILL: I would like to state, for example, that in 1951 I was in a polling booth, when the poll closed, and the deputy closed sharp at 8:00 o'clock and there were a number of people in the hallway, inside the door who could not vote. I agree should vote—however, those who are inside—

MR. MURRAY: It is because of the number of such incidents that came to our attention this is put in there.
MR. BROWNE: There were other reasons, the Minister must admit, where there was such closing up in 1951. But take a place like the Gaiety Theatre where there are fifteen or twenty booths and accommodations for over five hundred people—

MR. SMALLWOOD: If there is a group of people inside this gives them time to vote, but the doors of the building are locked.

MR. BROWNE: But what about the booths which do not accommodate any number, and people have to stand on the sidewalk—why not at the hour of eight let them in and then close the doors, when the house will hold them. That is not what it says here. You cannot carry it out that way. The way it reads now it says that, if at the hour of the closing of the poll—no one in line at the door, after the outer door is closed will be allowed to vote.

MR. SMALLWOOD: They should be admitted, the doors closed and the poll kept open until they can vote. Not only in this election in November that will come, but in lots of others—take the election next month or the month after.

MR. MURRAY: I think the clause should stand.

I move the Committee rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again.

On motion Committee rose, reported progress and asked leave to sit again presently.

Report received, Committee ordered sit again presently.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Chairman, have I your permission to table a reply to a question directed to me, copies of the construction agreement between William Lundrigan Limited and the Government in respect of the cement and gypsum plants; also the construction agreement between the Government and Chester Dawe. These are photostatic copies of the originals. Reports tabled.

MR. SPEAKER: It being now 6:00 o'clock the House will adjourn until 8:00 of the clock.

NIGHT SESSION

Tuesday, June 8, 1954.

The House resumed at 8:00 of the clock.

MR. SPEAKER: Order.

Committee of the Whole on Bill "An Act Respecting the Franchise of Electors and the Election of Members to the House of Assembly"—leave was given this Committee to sit again later—I do now leave the chair.

Chairman of Committees—Mr. Courage.

MR. MURRAY: I think we were on 69 (12).

MR. BROWNE: Yes, that was permitted to stand.

Clauses 70 and 71 carried.

MR. HIGGINS: Under 7—every poll clerk has the authority of a constable.
for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this Act.

MR. MURRAY: That is a well established system.

MR. HOLLETT: I think section 9 is intended to give authority to appoint a constable?

MR. MURRAY: No. That was intended in case some sort of a disturbance when officers would call special constables to see—

MR. HOLLETT: I remember in the old days we had the authority to call the police over to do anything relative to elections in case of any dispute—then in this case it would be the RCMP who would be the constable.

MR. MURRAY: Yes.

MR. HOLLETT: Well then it is all right.

Carried.

Clause 73 carried.

Clauses 74, 75, 76, 77 carried.

MR. HOLLETT: That is the same as in the old Act?

MR. MURRAY: Yes, the procedure is identical, I think.

Clause 78 carried.

Clauses 78 through 100 carried.

Clause 101: Illegal payments. Saving as to personal expenses of candidates.

MR. BROWNE: I notice in the old Act the words used are "Directly or Indirectly"—

MR. MURRAY: I think we could accept that. I have no objections. Or if you would like to have it stand over?

MR. CHAIRMAN: I would again draw attention to the use of the word "You."

MR. MURRAY: If the honourable member would wish to have it stand over I will discuss it with the law officers. It was probably taken from the Federal Act and some of it from our own Act.

Clause 101 stand.

Clause 102: Treating.

MR. HIGGINS: Mr. Chairman, is that clause a carry-over from the old Act too?

MR. MURRAY: I think it is almost identical.

MR. HIGGINS: Even so I don't see how it is going to react. I can see every agent in every polling station in every district starving to death if that is allowed to stay in.

HON. P. S. LEWIS (Minister without Portfolio): I can't see another election in Harbour Main. It says either before or during the electing.

MR. HIGGINS: It says—"or cause to be given or provide or is accessory to giving or providing, or causes to be given or provided, or pays wholly or in part any expenses incurred for any meat, drink, refreshment or provision to or for any person." I think, Mr.
Chairman, we ought to be realistic about this. Mind you I will say this, speaking for my colleague and myself, we were fortunate the last time. I agree with my honourable and learned friend from Harbour Main, we should be practical about this thing; in this thing we perpetuate a farce.

MR. LEWIS: Is this a recapitulation of the old Act?

MR. MURRAY: I think a similar provision will be found in every Election Act.

MR. HIGGINS: That is no reason we have to follow.

MR. BROWNE: Suppose you take it away and put in that every candidate may give as much as he likes to the electorate to drink or eat during elections—there is some restrictions on them now.

MR. LEWIS: It touches even natural hospitality.

DR. ROWE: That has never been adhered to to the letter of the law yet it has had a restraining influence.

MR. BROWNE: Where, in Labrador?

MR. CHAIRMAN: Is this clause carried?

(Voted against by members of the Opposition).

Clause carried.

Clause 103-104 carried:

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I have a note here saying 152 and 153 have been left out. In the old Act section 152 says—"No person in the employ of any department of the Government, or employed upon any public works under any department of the Government, or employed on any public work being performed under a contract with the Government shall be eligible to hold any office in connection with any election, or to act as any candidate's agent. Provided that the provisions of this section shall not be taken to apply to any District Judge, Stipendiary Magistrate, Clerk of the Peace, Deputy Land Surveyor, Surveyor of Lumber, Fishery Warden or Constable."

I think that is a very salutary section, and I don't know why it has been left out. I drew attention to it before, and I think it should be put back in again.

Then there is another clause, 153—"It shall be unlawful for any candidate or for any person on his behalf, to pay any money to any agent of any candidate, and any candidate or other person by whom such payment is made shall be guilty of a corrupt and illegal practice within the meaning of this Act."

Now I think the first one I read ought to be put back.

MR. MURRAY: Under section 153 (1) under the Act we are considering now it is absolutely essential for each candidate to have an agent, and I doubt myself the possibility of getting men without paying them.

MR. HIGGINS: If the Honourable Minister left in that section 102—he certainly should have left in the other two. If a candidate can't feed a man he certainly should not be allowed to pay him.

MR. MURRAY: If he pays him he should feed himself.

MR. HIGGINS: Mr. Chairman, this is a very serious matter. A man who would be employed should not be allowed to be paid.
MR. BROWNE: Now what is to be done about section 152?

MR. MURRAY: I will consider it and report back again. I was going to raise the Committee and report back later on.

MR. BROWNE: What about 152? Here is a case where a candidate gives the agent money?

MR. MURRAY: As a matter of sheer practicality I think that should remain—Agents are necessary.

MR. BROWNE: There is such a provision in the Canadian legislation. It leaves the way open to abuse, always, although it may not be carried out according to the letter of the Act it has a restraining influence, as my honourable friend the Minister of Mines and Resources said. There have been stories of candidates who spent most of the night previous to elections—My honourable friend from Harbour Main may have heard of the practice—

MR. LEWIS: I heard a lot of them. We have heard of a lot of things in Harbour Main to which we could listen with profit.

MR. MURRAY: I don't know what happened in the past, Mr. Chairman, but under this Bill only one agent for each candidate is allowed in the booth, and there must be when we come to it. There has to be an agent for each candidate. The ballots are counted in the booth. Therefore, I think it is a matter of sheer practicability, and a candidate is not going to get a man unless he pays, or it is going to make it much more difficult to get a man.

MR. BROWNE: Then the point is to get off with as much as you like.

MR. MURRAY: I don't mean on the outside, but inside.

MR. BROWNE: It is certainly not practical to say: have as many agents as you like. That is what happens if we leave the clause out. A candidate's agent means a person authorized to represent a candidate at elections or anything preceding elections. The section is here under 110, the one I was looking for—"It shall be unlawful for any candidate or for any person on his behalf to pay any money to the agent of any candidate and any candidate or other person by whom such payment is made is guilty of a corrupt practice." That is the one I thought was omitted.

Now would the Minister give serious attention to replacing Clause 152.

MR. MURRAY: That is 111 here, is it not? Yes, I will have consideration given to that.

Clause 105 stand.

Clause 110: Unlawful to pay agents.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, I am not so sure I like that one.

MR. BROWNE: It is in the old Act as Clause 152:

MR. HOLLETT: I am quite sure everybody who has ever been elected to the House paid agents, and if this is in the old Act we are all here illegally. I don't think there is any need for it here anyhow. I disagree with my honourable colleague from St. John's West on this point. Everyone has a right to his own ideas. We agreed in the first instance this would not be a party issue. Everybody in every election has agents who have been paid either by the candidate or somebody acting I won't say, associate on his behalf or associated with him,
I think that has been going on as long as we have lived and as long at this House. I think it is rather silly to make it a common practice.

DR. ROWE: What is the practice in Federal elections. I understood in the Federal the candidate appoints one election agent to take charge of his campaign and make all the arrangements and contracts of expenditure for him, but cannot engage any paid agent. He can pay messengers, and pay for freight and printing and publications, and that is all. He has only one agent literally.

MR. SPENCER: It is a pretty good clause, I would say.

MR. T.F. WTS: Mr. Chairman, I agree with the Honourable Leader of the Opposition. I think it is a most impractical clause. Speaking from experience in more than one district, I have always paid agents, and I would not expect a man to go into a polling booth and stay all day without being paid. Not alone this, but I have not been limited to one. I think it is most necessary to have an agent, and unless he is a very patriotic supporter. You said that is part of the Old Act?

MR. MURRAY: Yes, section 152.

MR. LEWIS: I disagree entirely. I think his agent should be paid.

Clause 111 carried.

Clauses 112, 113, 114 carried.

MR. HIGGINS: Does this include private vehicles?

MR. MURRAY: No.

MR. HIGGINS: What happens to all these things going around every election?

MR. MURRAY: We want to stop it.

MR. HIGGINS: What about a person crippled or sick and that sort of thing, nine times out of ten it is done as a favour. Sometimes it is necessary to get a taxi to take these persons to the polls.

MR. HOLLETT: Could not some provision be made to that end?

MR. MURRAY: I know myself, that it has been a racket and I think we should put some limitations on it.

MR. HIGGINS: Make it mandatory for everybody who votes to get there how he can. Any Minister who will propose that I will support him.

MR. HOLLETT: And he will receive the hearty support of the House.

Supposing during the November elections, if we have one in Newfoundland, some fellow will see a taxi taking a voter to the polls, and immediately somebody complains, and the next thing we have the police pick up the taximan and give him the third degree and he says well, Jim Higgins hired me, sir.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Order.

MR. HOLLETT: Well, I don't mean this Jim Higgins—I am not allowed use of members' names in the House.

MR. CHAIRMAN: The honourable gentleman resented it?

MR. HIGGINS: I did, yes.

MR. HOLLETT: I only just noticed this reference to cabs and conveyances, etc. What about a helicopter?

MR. MURRAY: It does not include wheelbarrows.
HON. DR. H. L. POTTLÉ (Minister of Public Welfare): Mercy flights?

MR. BROWNE: Sub-clause (3) I don't understand what that means. As I understand, it is forbidden to convey voters to the polls. In fact that is the provision in the Canadian Act, and that is the provision, I am sure in our 1913 Act. I believe an amendment was brought in permitting electors to be brought to the polls. I think it was brought in by members of the Opposition and accepted—This is a contradictory section. According to the first part every one is forbidden to hire or promise to pay or pay for a conveyance to carry a voter to or from or on the way to or from the polling booth, or pay the travelling expenses of a voter. Then in sub-clause (3) there is nothing in the Act to make it unlawful for a person to provide his own private vehicle for the purpose of taking persons to or from the booths. In other words it does not mean a candidate, it means any individual.

MR. MURRAY: A supporter if he uses his own car. Surely that is reasonable enough.

MR. HIGGINS: I might say, Mr. Chairman, I am entirely in sympathy with the idea of the Honourable Minister. This Act represents, undoubtedly, a considered approach to the business of conducting an election. That being so, and accepting the position that a lot of research has been done into it, I wonder could the Minister tell us whether at any time he considered the Act with Australia where compulsory voting is lawful?

MR. MURRAY: No. Quite frankly that was not considered. I don't know why. It just was not considered.

MR. HIGGINS: Would the Minister be prepared now to consider it?

MR. MURRAY: If the honourable and learned member would advance his reasons.

MR. HIGGINS: My reasons are to do away with this provision here in Section 115. But I think we are all agreed it will never be properly enforced and cannot be, never has been and never will be.

MR. BROWNE: May I read the section I was referring to: It shall be unlawful for the hiring or promising to pay, or paying for any horse, team, carriage, cab or other vehicle, by any candidate, or by any person on his behalf, to convey any voter or voters to or from the poll, or to or from the neighbouring thereof, at any election or the payment by any candidate, or by any person on his behalf, of the travelling or other expenses of any voter in going to or returning from any election, are or shall be unlawful acts, and the person so offending shall forfeit the sum of $100 to any person who shall sue for the same, and any voter hiring any horse, cab, cart, wagon, sleigh, carriage or other conveyance, for any candidate, or for any agent of a candidate, for the purpose of conveying any voter or voters to or from the polling place or places, shall ipso facto be disqualified from voting at such election, and for every such offense shall forfeit the sum of $100 to any person suing for the same: Provided that where the nature of the district is such that any electors residing therein are unable at an election for such district to reach their polling station without crossing the sea, or a branch or arm thereof, This Act shall not prevent the provisions of means for conveying such electors within the district by sea, to and from their polling station, and the amount of payment for such means of conveyance may be in addition to the amount of personal expenses of a candidate under this Act. Provided, also, that if it be necessary for such elector to be conveyed by sea, as aforesaid, such electors may, notwithstanding any provisions of this Act, be provided with a reasonable amount of food and other refreshments (except spirituous or fermented liquors or other strong drink), and the expenses of such conveyance by sea and of such food and refreshment shall be in addition to the amount of personal expenses of a candidate.

That is a very generous provision.

MR. SPENCER: Is that the law now?

MR. MURRAY: That is an amendment brought in in 1931.

MR. BROWNE: I thought before that there was an amendment made to the Act of 1925, and in 1928 and 1929. Have you got these amendments here?

MR. MURRAY: Yes, they are in this here.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, I think the members of the House ought to give their own personal consideration to this without any party or anything else. I think it is rather strange. Say I have a friend who wanted to go to the polls and I have not got a car. If I had a car it would be grand, I could then take that person there. But if I have not a car and then this Act forbids me from phoning the Hotel Taxi or some place or other and asking for a taxicab to come and take that friend up for me. I want to take old Mrs. Smith who broke her leg a few months ago to the polls, but this Act forbids me from doing that. I think that is plain silly. We are trying to encourage people to take an interest in public affairs, and here is a person who wanted to take somebody to the polling booths, who has not got a car, and he is disallowed from hiring a taxi to take that person. I don't think there is any point in it myself.

MR. POWER: I think it would be a good idea to forbid their paying of taxis to bring electors to the booths. I know it has become a bit of a racket, and I know some cases where in the provincial elections myself and honourable gentlemen opposite were paying the same fellow. If you want to get people to the booth there are other ways, Sir, besides hiring special cars.

MR. HOLLETT: I will take it all back.

MR. POWER: Here in St. John's it may not be bad, but here in St. John's it is pretty bad too.

MR. HOLLETT: I agree it becomes a bit of a nuisance at times. I agree with that. I think we should prohibit it, and if the Honourable Minister of Finance and my honourable friend on my right, the honourable and learned member for St. John's West, found themselves at one time paying the same bus driver or taxi driver to take people to the polls, one or the other should have had the courage to take action. There is a remedy for every offence.

MR. MURRAY: The thing that happens is that the opposite candidate is not always completely unaware.

MR. POWER: Some do detect it.
MR. MURRAY: It is quite a common practice, I believe, to go along and approach each candidate and get hired to—

MR. HIGGINS: According to my suggestion too about this Australian system, in case the Minister is a little alarmed at the possibility of retributions, since that time, during the last election in Australia the Liberal Government was returned.

MR. POWER: More conservative than liberal.

MR. HIGGINS: Call it what you will, the newspapers said; the Liberal Government. I think it is a good suggestion.

DR. POTTLE: I feel quite sure the House agrees on one principal point, that it is utterly desirable to encourage everyone to vote, and we should use every means to assure that everyone who can vote will vote. Obviously, Sir, the House is all for that, but I am equally sure that we do want to encourage good voting practices and good elections, and what we lose by making it difficult for some people to get there we more than gain by prohibiting people from paying other people to vote. I think there is plenty of safeguard in sub-clause (3) that provides anybody who is anxious to vote can get there without being paid.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, I still insist it creates a dangerous situation. You are going to have the members accused of corrupt practice simply because somebody has seen or been a taxi go up to the polling booth, or perhaps a dozen, and then so and so says; that fellow Hollett has everybody engaged and somebody is perhaps bad enough to swear I, or perhaps somebody in my behalf did engage one. I am not speaking only of myself but everybody will be charged with corrupt practice, and half the members in the House will have to wait six months before being declared elected. I don't think it is wise.

MR. POWER: In the last Federal Election it was forbidden to hire a car, yet I do not believe anyone here in St. John's who wanted to vote did not get there because of not being able to walk.

MR. HOLLETT: But the taxis were hired.

MR. HIGGINS: Of course they were hired, if not they would not get one-fifth of the crowd out.

MR. JANES: I don't think the Honourable Leader of the Opposition is the one to be worried. I thought first he should be worried, but with the establishment of polling booths for every 250 people it is going to eliminate the big need for taxis here in the City of St. John's. People here at least will be able to walk to the polls. But it is in the rural areas where people are spread out and probably would be about two miles from a polling station and still in a polling division where they have less than 250 people—I think we, the outside members, should be the people to worry about this.

MR. HIGGINS: It is quite obvious the honourable member for Fogo has not lived in town very long. During the last elections at about a quarter after seven, and the polls closed at nine o'clock, I had a call from a man who wanted a car to go to Canon Wood Hall although he lived on York Street. I think if they wanted to go a hundred yards some people would ask for a car.
MR. HOLLETT: What is wrong here is that this provision says you are not permitted to hire a taxi on election day to drive people to the polls, and they are going to be hired in the City of St. John's and all over Newfoundland where there are taxis. It is just as well to be realistic about it. Everyone knows here that we are going to have taxis. We are going to get them somehow by hook or by crook. And I think a taxi man has a right to earn a dollar on election day as well as some other people.

MR. POWER: In St. Mary's, Placentia Areas, I don't believe there was one hired on either side in the Federal Election and people got to the booths just the same.

MR. HOLLETT: Half of them did not.

MR. MURRAY: Sir, I think people will get used to it in the Provincial Elections in the same way as they got used to it in the Federal Elections. The only thing I see wrong in sub-section 3 is that the word vehicle should be conveyance, because conveyance is described in sub-clause 2 and when we say vehicle we might think only of motorcars whereas in some parts of Newfoundland it may be a boat.

MR. HOLLETT: I see the word taxi is not there at all.

MR. MERCER: It is a vehicle.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Amendment is that the word vehicle be stricken out and the word conveyance be substituted. Shall this clause as amended carry?

Carried—Voted against by Mr. Higgins, Mr. Hollett and Mr. Browne.

Clauses 116 and 117 carried.

MR. BROWNE: Usually, Mr. Chairman, there is a provision—I don't know if it is anywhere here—for disqualification of such persons to stand as a candidate for five years—Is that here somewhere?

MR. MURRAY: I think later on we will come to that i.e., qualifications of candidates.

MR. HOLLETT: I think on that section 115, if you happen to have a taxi turn up you are guilty of corrupt practice and are liable to a fine of from one to two hundred dollars and suffer other penalties besides.

MR. POWER: That is not so—if someone else sends a taxi you cannot be responsible.

MR. HIGGINS: “Any other person on his behalf.”

MR. HOLLETT: Suppose he does swear he did it on your behalf?

MR. LEWIS: Supposing he does it on your behalf?

MR. MURRAY: Then he is the person who does it, not the candidate.

MR. LEWIS: That is not reasonable at all.

MR. MURRAY: Yes, anybody on his behalf who does it is liable for it.

MR. HOLLETT: I could go out on your behalf and do that.

MR. MURRAY: It is pretty strange that a man can commit a crime in spite of himself.

MR. LEWIS: I wonder if we were to refer back to 115 again?

On motion committee reverted to Clause 115:
MR. LEWIS: I would like an explanation. Does that mean that John Jones can hire a taxi without my knowledge or consent and then afterwards come in and say he did that on polling day to bring voters to the polls and convict me of corrupt practice?

MR. MURRAY: No, John Jones is guilty not the candidate.

MR. HIGGINS: Mr. Chairman, John Jones with the best intentions in the world and wanting to help out Jim Higgins, goes and hires a taxi to get people to the polls. I might know nothing about it, but it is done on my behalf, would it still serve to put me in the bar?

MR. POWER: Is that the same wording as in the Federal Act?

MR. BROWNE: No, it is not the same as the Federal Act. In the Federal Act it is only illegal and is not a corrupt practice. I have the section of the Federal Act here "Every person who before, during or after an election directly or indirectly or by any means or devise attempts evasion of the following provision, hires in whole or in part, pays for or promises to pay for, etc."—But the bona fide payment of the elector himself of a fair or reasonable charge shall not be deemed an offence.

That is, if he pays for his own fare and hires a taxi, if an elector pays for his own fare that is not an offence.

MR. HOLLETT: That is wonderful isn't it not?

MR. BROWNE: The situation is quite clear. It is this decision the Committee has to make: Does it wish to permit, under the revised statutes of the Election Act, candidates to engage cars either by hire or through friends to bring voters to the polls, or do they not.—That is the situation.

MR. HOLLETT: That is not strictly correct. That is a prohibitive clause. Now the point I want to make is that it is useless to prohibit something you cannot prevent happening, and everybody here knows that it is only nonsense and a waste of time, and I would say corrupt morals.

MR. MURRAY: Mr. Chairman, I don't think the clause means that at all. I think it is very clear. With all due deference to my honourable and learned colleague from Harbour Main-Bell Island—Here it says: By every candidate who himself does it, or by any other person on his behalf or any private person who does it either on behalf of the candidate or not is guilty if he pays some vehicle to take voters to the polls. I have never yet heard of an accused being found guilty because someone else did something about which the accused personally knew nothing.

MR. HIGGINS: Mr. Chairman, perhaps the Minister would care to consider that with the law officers.

MR. MURRAY: It seems absolutely clear to me—If any other person does it unknown to the candidate surely the candidate himself cannot be found guilty.

MR. HIGGINS: I suggest that the honourable and learned gentlemen in the Chamber can give equally valid opinions—It is a matter of some importance.

MR. LEWIS: I would point out he does not have to pay at all. All he has to do is promise to pay—Every candidate who himself or by any other person that hires or promises to pay or pays—
MR. SPENCER: Mr. Chairman, I wonder if the Minister has given any particular thought to the matter of one neighbour or one friend using his car on his behalf voluntarily or without pay at all. Is that provided for?

MR. MURRAY: That is quite all right.

MR. SPENCER: Otherwise I would be in trouble. I happened to carry candidates to the booths during the last election. I can't recall receiving any cheque for it of course.

DR. ROWE: It seems to me the crux of the matter hinges around that phrase "Any other person on his behalf." Does that imply promises on the part of the candidate, or obligations on the part of the candidate to pay—or to go back to the situation quoted by my honourable friend from St. John's East—if a friend of mine goes out say in Labrador and engages a half dozen taxis, and I know nothing about it, I don't promise to pay, and he does it—is my election invalidated by that? Is not that the crux of the matter? The whole section, as I see it, is that there has not got to be culpability on the part of the candidate.

MR. FOGWILL: Mr. Chairman, I have heard several points, but I would like for someone to tell me—what does it mean?

MR. LEWIS: We have three positions here: The candidate himself—by any other person on his behalf—then, every other person. Now what is the idea of—every other person? It means every other person on behalf of the candidate.

MR. MURRAY: It seems to me completely clear. There is one man, the candidate, and another person does something as his agent—That is one set of circumstances—Another situation is where a man, without any knowledge on the part of the candidate goes ahead and does something. These are two entirely different situations. In one case the candidate is guilty, if he knows what is being done on his behalf. In the other case it is the man himself who is guilty.

MR. HIGGINS: I think the thing itself sounds a whole lot simpler than the wording of Section 115. My honourable friend from Harbour Main pointed out there are three separate cases—Any other person on his behalf and every other person—that is one and the same type of thing. Why have the two sets of phrases in?

MR. MURRAY: Because they are two different phrases. The candidate and an agent of the candidate or a man without the knowledge of the candidate.

MR. HOLLETT: Will you tell us what is wrong with 148?

MR. MURRAY: It is completely different. That is what we want to find out. Do we let them go ahead with this business of hiring cars or do we let this clause stand. If we want to restrict the hiring of cars on polling day then we must have something like Clause 115 of this Bill.

MR. HIGGINS: But can you make it stick?

MR. LEWIS: You have the ideal situation under the Federal Act—that may be the ideal thing—-something to aim at for us. Actually the federal position is impractical as far as Newfoundland is concerned, or in so far as certain districts within the Avalon Area it may be all right, but in other sections where they have not got transportation, I think, it is entirely inapplicable.

MR. MURRAY: It was much more stringent than that. That is why we tried to make this more applicable. But I think this federal section dealing with this, which has just been read out by my honourable and learned friend from St. John's West, does tie up much more completely than this does.

MR. LEWIS: They still have to hire cars here to get people to the general elections.

MR. HIGGINS: I think it demands further study, Mr. Chairman.

DR. ROWE: There is a question still unanswered, Mr. Chairman — Can the candidate be held responsible when some friend of his does things without his knowledge?

MR. MURRAY: No.

DR. ROWE: I understood from what some of the honourable gentlemen said that he could be held responsible.

MR. HOLLETT: The stigma would attach to the honourable member, Sir, there is no question about that.

MR. MURRAY: Most honourable members are not so thin-skinned.

Clause 115—On motion agreed the clause should stand.

Clause 119 and 120:

119: Appointment of official agent.

Candidate may act as his own official agent.

Election officers may not be official agents.

Claims.

Death of claimant.

When contract not enforceable.

Payment within three months.

Action where claims disputed.

Return of election expenses.

Bills, etc., to be preserved.

Penalty.

Offence.

120: Petition.

Proof of right to be a petitioner.

MR. BROWNE: Now, is this going to be carried out, Mr. Chairman, and has it been carried out in the past.

MR. HIGGINS: Might I ask the Minister: is there any provision for payment of official debts or is he supposed to serve voluntarily?

MR. MURRAY: Supposed to serve voluntarily.

MR. HIGGINS: There again, Sir, I suggest we have a completely unrealistic position. If you are to have a man as agent, how is he going to pay bills and everything else? It is contrary to reason to expect to find people so dedicated to any cause today as to do that sort of work without being paid something. I don't see much point in putting it in.

MR. BROWNE: What is the Federal Section—Have you got that? I have the Act here.

MR. HOLLETT: It is a month's work, you know.

MR. BROWNE: There are several sections here about agents.

MR. MURRAY: Mr. Chairman, could we go on to the next clause while the honourable and learned member is looking for that?

Clause 121 carried.
MR. BROWNE: Now if we could go back to the one about official agents. That is covered by Section 62 of the Federal Act. The duties of official agents involve payment of all expenses.

MR. SPENCER: Is that the present Canadian legislation?

MR. MURRAY: Yes.

MR. SPENCER: That is mandatory. "It shall." Whereas in ours it is "May."

MR. BROWNE: Much of the section seems to be similar to ours.

MR. MURRAY: What about the question of whether official agents may be paid or not?

MR. BROWNE: I don't know if it is stated in any form. I don't see anything here about his being paid, not in this section. There must be some provision somewhere else.

Section 121 carried.

MR. CHAIRMAN: No. 119 is carried, is that correct?

MR. MURRAY: Yes.

Clauses 122 through 138 carried.

Clause 139: Corrupt practice agency.

MR. LEWIS: Just a moment, Mr. Chairman, that section on corrupt practice, could we have that section read?

"139. Unless the Judges otherwise direct, any charge of corrupt practice may be gone into and evidence in relation thereto received before any proof has been given of agency on the part of any candidate in respect of such corrupt practice."

MR. LEWIS: That checks back to the original section on the hiring of cars, Mr. Chairman.

MR. HOLLETT: That charge of corrupt practice by the candidate may be gone into.

MR. LEWIS: That charge may be gone into without proof of the agent or any authority on behalf of the candidate.

MR. MURRAY: Would not that be purely procedural. It means it could be established in the first instance whether or not there was any corrupt practice at all.

MR. LEWIS: Under one section the hiring of cars being done by persons other than one authorized by the candidate—it brings up the question of corrupt practice. Is the candidate guilty of corrupt practice? In such an eventuality of corrupt practice it can be gone into and evidence heard before any official questioning of the agent dealing with it at all.

MR. MURRAY: It is surely a question of the agent being heard before any decision of a court was given.

We should let the section stand over, I think.

On motion Section 139 stand.

Committee recessed for ten minutes.

Committee called to order.

Clauses 140, 141 carried.

Clause 142: Candidates not liable in certain cases for corrupt practices.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, where did this come from—How can a person knowingly do something corrupt in good faith?

MR. MURRAY: Was not that in the old Act?

MR. BROWNE: I believe it was, but not self-contradictory like that.
MR. MURRAY: Well, supposing a constituent comes into a place where I am staying at the time. I am having something to eat or having something to drink, and I offer him a drink. I don't intend it as a corrupt practice or to buy a vote. But he may decide after I am elected to come into court and swear I gave him a drink. He would have to prove I gave him that drink with the intention of buying his vote. I may be guilty of doing that, but may be able to prove to the judge I did not do it with any intention to corrupt. If the judge found not only corrupt practice, but that it has been committed with the knowledge of the candidate—

MR. BROWNE: The definition you speak of is—Every candidate who himself or with any other person within any time either before, or during elections, directly or indirectly, gives or provides or incurs expenses wholly or in part for food, meat, drink, in order to be elected—

MR. MERCER: But a candidate must have the intention of corruption.

MR. BROWNE: 142 does not say that. 142 says: if it appears to the court upon the trial of an election petition that an Act constituting in law a corrupt practice was committed by a candidate or with his knowledge and consent, but without any corrupt intent and by an inadvertence which was excusable, and that the evidence showed the candidate to have honestly desired and in good faith endeavoured as far as he could, to have the election conducted according to law, the candidate shall not be subjected to the penalties and disabilities which he would but for this section incur.

MR. MURRAY: I am not happy about two or three of these sections here. I am going to have it reconsidered in connection with Clause 139. I will ask to have them all held over. 139, 119, 115, 142.

Clause 146: Invalidation of election.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, this seems to be inappropriate here where the House only sits for two or three months a year. If the House were sitting for eight or nine months of the year and the Speaker were always on the job, like the Speaker in England or in Canada, I can see the meaning of it, but I don't see the purpose here. It was not in the old Act. It was the Lieutenant-Governor in Council under the old Act.

MR. MURRAY: Perhaps it should be the Lieutenant-Governor in Council.

MR. MURRAY: Well you notice in the definition "Speaker" includes the Clerk of the House who is presumably always available.

Clause 146 carried.

Clause 147: Duty of Speaker.

MR. BROWNE: What has the Speaker got to do with issuing the writs in this country? It is the Lieutenant-Governor in Council who gives instruction to issue. I don't know what is the purpose to introduce the Speaker in this, unless it is the intention to depart from previous practice—Is that the intention? It has not been made clear.

MR. MURRAY: Perhaps it should be the Lieutenant-Governor in Council. We could let this section stand over also.

Section 147 stand, or we could let from 144 to 148 inclusive stand.

On motion Section 144 through 148 stand.

Clauses 149 through 156 carried.
Clause 157: Lieutenant-Governor in Council may order advance polls to be held.

Period during which advance polls may be held.

Chief electoral officer to designate polling stations and publish notice.

Returning officer to furnish supplies to deputy.

Who may vote at advance poll.

Oaths to be taken.

Additional oaths to be taken.

Entries to be made in poll book.

Ballot box not to be opened until close of ordinary poll.

Precautions to be taken by deputy returning officer.

Procedure after close of advance poll.

Counting of votes cast at an advance poll.

Powers of chief electoral officer.

Application of this Act to advance poll.

Regulations.

MR. BROWNE: It seems here under sub-clause 2—advance polls may be held on any or all of the seven working days immediately preceding the ordinary polling day. That means: from nomination day to the polling day, or to the day before polling day? Election day is out and Sunday is out and nomination day is out. Therefore it is for the whole time the advance polls may be held. It seems to me to be too long a time and three days is the usual provision. Do you mean to say you got to get poll clerks and deputies for the whole week and the number of people who use it are only three or four?

MR. MURRAY: We actually considered not putting it in at all. We put it in as premissive in case an occasion may arise where we may have to use it. Personally I doubt myself whether it is worth all the trouble involved. Actually the section may never be used at all.

MR. BROWNE: I would say three days would be adequate.

MR. MURRAY: We could make it three, but if you make it three days it makes it more worthless still.

MR. BROWNE: Well, let it stay if you like.

MR. MURRAY: I question it will ever be used here unless some very unusual situation arises.

MR. BROWNE: They have it in the Federal Act. Three days is all they have. I think if we were to let the clause stand and let the Government decide—Agreed—Clause 157 stand.

Clauses 158 through 161 carried.

MR. BROWNE: May I just ask a question in regard to Clause 157—I don’t know if there were any such provisions in the previous Act.

MR. MURRAY: No.

MR. BROWNE: Is it felt necessary to do this?

MR. MURRAY: It is a usual procedure in the Act to make regulations not inconsistent with the Act. Cases may arise where perhaps we feel we have not covered every set of circumstances which would arise.

MR. HOLLETT: It is a very doubtful matter to give the Lieuten-
MR. MURRAY: Not regulations inconsistent with the Act.

MR. HOLLETT: We could argue around that word for a long time. At any rate could we not meet that when the circumstances arise?

MR. MURRAY: There are quite a lot of qualifications there in order fully to promote the objects and purposes of the Act itself, to make recommendations not inconsistent with the Act for carrying out the spirit and purpose of the Act. I suggest, Mr. Chairman, "within the limits" would give sufficient safeguard.

MR. BROWNE: I don't like the idea. These things are supposed to be foreseen by the Act. It may be a precaution but it seems to me that—

MR. MURRAY: It is a precaution. With the qualifications "not inconsistent with and to carry out the true intent and meaning of the Act" I don't see what possible harm could arise.

MR. BROWNE: In reference to Clause 159 we would have either to amend that or bring in regulations.

MR. CHAIRMAN: There was no motion made to revert to Clause 159.

On motion Committee reverted to Clause 159:

MR. HOLLETT: Does the Honourable Minister have any idea of the sort of regulations which might be necessary under that section? Can he think of any regulations?

MR. MURRAY: There might be in connection with changing the forms here or that sort of thing, or different methods of communication or that sort of thing. Other matters also might arise not inconsistent with the true intent and spirit of the Act. There may be more expeditious methods of carrying out the Act which could be prescribed by regulations, with the proviso in here. I can't see what harm could arise from it.

MR. BROWNE: Maybe a great deal of embarrassment and trouble over it. Unless it is necessary, I would suggest that it might be removed. Why not let it stand and consider that?

MR. MURRAY: We could let it stand, and I will ring Mr. Short about it.

Clause 159 stand.

Clauses 162 and 163 carried.

MR. MURRAY: That is the clause referred to previously.

MR. BROWNE: "No person in attendance at a poll or at the counting of the votes shall publish any results of the poll or of the counting at the poll until the conclusion of the count on polling day, but nothing in this section shall prevent the publication at any time of the results of the count by the returning officer or by the chief electoral officer."

The usual practice is that, as soon as the agent gets the result he goes and telephones his headquarters, and what is to prevent his doing that? What do we do about the radio stations and the press?

MR. MURRAY: That is exactly what the electoral officer wants to prevent. In previous elections results were coming on the radio, and the people running the election, the electoral officer himself, would not be in a position to confirm the reports as he had not heard. The electoral officer wants to get the first information from the various stations or booths; and this is to prevent wires being choked. It is not a thing we feel strongly about.

MR. BROWNE: It is going to be impossible to maintain.

MR. HOLLETT: But nothing in this section shall prevent the publication—The returning officer can make a statement?

MR. MURRAY: The electoral officer wants to be in a position to let out information first.

MR. HOLLETT: There is nothing wrong with that.

MR. BROWNE: There will probably be a hundred booths making returns, and while they are coming in they are being tabulated as fast as they come in. But at headquarters the information is being relayed, and they are getting it there. I don't see any great wrong in the action of a candidate phoning his headquarters at a similar time to the deputy doing it. They all go in the same time.

DR. ROWE: That would not be published?

MR. BROWNE: Yes, as fast as it could be gotten.

MR. MURRAY: His professional pride was hurt, I think, when we asked for information he did not have.

Carried.

Clauses 164 and 165 carried.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, I don't know whether it is supposed to be in this Act or the House of Assembly Act, in the case of a member who dies, having been elected, who dies or resigns. Is there any provision in this Act for issue of a writ?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes it is there—After nomination day and before polling day.

MR. HOLLETT: Not after he is elected?

MR. MURRAY: I imagine it would be in the House of Assembly Act to take care of that.

MR. BROWNE: Do we have to check the forms?

MR. CHAIRMAN: These forms were, I believe, passed in the clauses relating to them. But they might be considered although I don't think they need to be passed.

MR. BROWNE: There is one there, Form 5, which I drew to the attention of the Minister, which should be called Form 3, as there is no form three or Form 4. I notice there is a clause here which says the chief electoral officer can change these forms. Where are Form 3 and Form 4? Has the Minister any idea what these forms are?

DR. POTTLE: They do not occur in sequence in the Bill.

MR. BROWNE: I think that should be changed.

MR. MURRAY: Yes, I will have that changed. I will have the clause covering a member who dies or retires checked. I must thank the Committee for the careful attention given to this Bill. I now move the Committee rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again tomorrow.

On motion committee rose, reported progress and asked leave to sit again tomorrow.

Report received, Committee ordered sit again tomorrow.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker,
I move Committee of the Whole on various Bills: Nos. 2, 3 and 4 on the Order Paper.

MR. SPEAKER: Leave was given earlier this Committee sit again.

Committee of the Whole on Bill "An Act to Amend the Welfare of Children Act."

"An Act Further to Amend the Local Government Act."

"An Act Respecting Social Assistance."

MR. CHAIRMAN: For the benefit of the honourable members I would remind them these Bills were referred on 1st June and progress reported.

"An Act to Amend the Welfare of Children Act." This Bill was read but Clause 2 was allowed to stand. The other clauses were read and passed, and clause 2 was read:

Clause 2:

Section 57 of The Welfare of Children Act, chapter 60 of The Revised Statutes of Newfoundland, 1952, is amended

(a) by repealing paragraph (g) of subsection (1) and substituting therefor the following:

"(g) commit the child temporarily or permanently to the care and custody of the Minister;"

(b) by repealing paragraph (i) of subsection (1) and substituting therefor the following:

"(i) award reasonable compensation in a sum not exceeding two hundred dollars to a party injured in his person or by loss of goods, with the consent or on the motion of such party;" and

(c) by repealing subsection (3).

DR. POTTLE: Mr. Chairman, speaking to that point; there was a question as to what might be a more realistic upper limit for compensation. The Bill, as it now stands, provides for an upper limit of compensation of $200 in the case of a claim being made against a juvenile delinquent judged as a delinquent, amending the old Act which provided for an upper limit only of fifty dollars. A question was raised in Committee, in an earlier stage, that this raise in $200 was not enough and that it should be more of the order of five hundred dollars. Now I have no feelings one way or the other, as I don't think any great matter of principle is involved. The honourable and learned member for St. John's East raised the point out of his legal and court experiences; and I have checked with the Attorney General, who believes there is no objection, and I see none, to its being raised to $500. It is quite a jump and probably the legal members might be able to advise us here. But no great damage will be done, as I can see, by raising the limit to $500. It is still within the discretion of the court.

MR. HIGGINS: Mr. Chairman, I raised this point before because I had some specific interest in mind. And in the period between the time since this matter was first discussed and tonight I have had called to my attention another instance in the district of my honourable and learned friend from Harbour Main-Bell Island, where two children, boys, got on a roof and did considerable damage to property. I think they did get a certain amount of fame in the paper, described themselves as "Arizona Kids," and did two thousand dollars in property damages to property of men in the district. It is conceivable that in this case the judge should be allowed some discretion. I am not saying it should be made obligatory on the part of the parent to make good, but, as I recall the words, it is entirely within the discretion of the judge. He may allow nothing, or he may, I believe, from a practical standpoint arrange that they may work it out themselves.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I honestly feel that there are occasions when a lot of damage is done to completely innocent people where the parent might properly be called upon to contribute to making good the damage suffered by the party; in cases where parents have knowingly allowed children to run riot I see no earthly reason why a party should not be given reasonable compensation in person or goods.

DR. POTTLE: I move the word “two” be stricken out and the word “five” be substituted in its stead, in sub-paragraph (i) of Clause 2 of this Bill.

MR. BROWNE: It must be understood, Mr. Chairman, the parents are not liable for this. There is nothing in the Act which says the parents are liable for this.

MR. HOLLETT: On that point, Mr. Chairman, why state any amount at all, but just leave it at the discretion of the judge, and have it read—award reasonable compensation to the parties injured. Why not leave it to the discretion of the court which will have all the circumstances before it.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Why don’t you get together sometime on that side.

DR. POTTLE: I think it is a matter of going from one state to another and not getting to the other too violently. We are providing a new limit now, higher, to lift the limit altogether and say there is to be no limit might be possibly too much or a jump. So I think it ought to be allowed to stand as amended.

MR. BROWNE: May I make a correction to a statement I made a moment ago. While there is nothing under this section to render the parents liable, there is a subsequent section which says; “The judge may order that damages or costs imposed may be imposed upon parents.” This provides that the amount imposed shall not exceed the amount fixed—and provides also for hearing the parent. Then there is a provision for appeal, so that the safeguards are all there.

Clause 2 as amended carried.

Motion carried—The Committee reports having passed this Bill with some amendments—

“An Act Further to Amend the Local Government Act.”

Clause 1 and Clause 2 read:

1. This Act may be cited as The Local Government (Amendment) Act, 1954.

2. Section 2 of The Local Government Act, chapter 66 of The Revised Statutes of Newfoundland, 1952, is amended

(a) by inserting immediately before paragraph (a) as paragraph (aa) the following:

“(aa) “chairman” includes the mayor of a Council;” and

(b) by repealing paragraph (b) and substituting therefor the following:
“(b) "Minister" means the Minister of Municipal Affairs and Supply or any other Minister of the Crown appointed by the Lieutenant-Governor in Council for the time being to administer this Act;”

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, before that passes did we not see an Act giving the Minister of Health certain powers in regard to councils of Corner Brook which definitely stated; for the purpose of overriding the failure of the councils in Corner Brook to act in accordance with the rules of the medical health officer—that gave the Minister of Public Health certain powers. Now under this Act the Minister of Health is being substituted by the Minister of Municipal Affairs; so that now he will take over the administration of that other Act too?

HON. S. J. HEFFERTON (Minister of Municipal Affairs and Supply): No, it is the other way about. What we have done is to bring the Public Health Act and this Act into conformity so that there can be no clash of regulations, and the health regulations will carry precedent, as far as that goes—we did the same thing when Public Works regulations clashed there.

Carried.

Clauses 3 and 4 carried.

Clause 5 read:

5. Section 6 of the said Act is repealed and the following substituted therefor:

6. (1) The first councillors to hold office shall be elected in the manner provided by The Local Government (Elections) Act.

(2) Subject to this section the term of office of the first councillors shall be four years from the date of the first election after incorporation.

(3) The term of office of all councillors holding office in a council immediately before the enactment of this section shall expire

(a) where all of the councillors, were elected at the first election held for the selection of members for that Council, on the expiration of four years from the date of such election; and

(b) where any of the councillors were elected at a second or subsequent election held for the selection of some of the members of that Council, on the expiration of two years from the date of such election.

(4) Where the number of councillors holding office in a Council constituted before or after the enactment of this section is less than that required by this Act as a quorum for the purpose of a meeting of the Council the Lieutenant-Governor in Council may, by order, determine the term of office of such councillors and direct that an election be held in accordance with this Act for the election of a full slate of councillors, and as soon as the order takes effect all of the consequences shall follow as if the councillors so holding office were councillors referred to in subsection (2) and had held office for four years, and where an order is made under this subsection it shall be published in The Newfoundland Gazette and the order shall have effect on the expiration of sixty days from the date of the publication.

(5) Where the term of office of councillors expires or is determined in accordance with this section the councillors shall continue to hold office until councillors to succeed them are elected in accordance with this Act and sworn into office."

MR. HEFFERTON: Mr. Chairman, in sub-section 4 the last line, that $60 should be changed to $90 to bring it into conformity with the Local Government Election Act.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I move that amendment;

MR. CURTIS: I second it.

Clause as amended carried.

MR. CURTIS: There is a new section, Mr. Chairman, which I move be added at the end of Clause 5—"Where the number of councillors holding office in a council constitute above or over the enactment of this section is less than that required by this Act as a quorum for the purpose of meeting of the council, the Lieutenant-Governor in Council may appoint a number of councillors sufficient to constitute a quorum, and the councillors appointed under this sub-section shall hold office until the expiration of the term of office of the councillors who last held office in the council before such appointments were expired or in accordance with sub-section 4 (a) and (b) councillors to succeed them are elected in accordance with this Act." Now, I would ask, Mr. Chairman, that the Minister explain that amendment, which I move.

MR. BROWNE: Have you got a copy for us to look at?

MR. CURTIS: This is the only copy we have at the moment. We could allow that section to stand if necessary.

MR. HEFFERTON: May I make an explanation: Not very long ago we were notified that in Corner Brook West, through death, resignations or leaving the place, only the mayor and one councillor was left. This was not a quorum under the Act, consequently an intolerable situation arose as they were not able to hold elections for ninety days, and there was not very much we could do. So that in the interim we thought that we might possibly appoint two, three or four members or whatever may be necessary to carry on the work while the election was proceeding. That is the purpose of this particular amendment.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the Minister in this case how long it will be before there will be an election?

MR. HEFFERTON: Ninety days.

MR. BROWNE: Has an election been called for?

MR. HEFFERTON: That we do not know.

MR. BROWNE: I thought from what I heard the Attorney General read; they can hold office as long as the councillors who have resigned or died or left the town could have held it. That might be for two or three years?

MR. HEFFERTON: That is quite true. But the other section says there must be a quorum in order to transact business.

MR. BROWNE: I understand they need to appoint them to carry on until the elections, but these elections ought to be held at the earliest possible moment. I have not seen the section.

MR. HEFFERTON: That earliest possible would be ninety days. They have to get a voters' list—they have to call for a voters' list. They are only appointed for the interim period, and the election is supposed to be called, naturally, to take place at the earliest possible date. During that interim council remains in office until the new council is elected, that is all.

MR. BROWNE: I did not get the explanation from the Minister as to why it is necessary to put in 90 instead of 60.

MR. HEFFERTON: Because under the Local Government Act it is 90 days.

Clause 5 on motion allowed to stand over.

Clause 6 carried.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Chairman, I wonder if the members of the Committee would be willing to have this Bill called by section and number. It is a long Bill. These Bills from the time they get drafted in the originating department and then have passed the scrutiny of the Attorney General's Department and then the scrutiny of the Cabinet, by the time they come in here they are for the most part, allowing for exceptions, pretty good. While the Opposition has every right and duty to question the meaning of this, that or the other clause, I think that nine times out of ten they find the explanation given justifies the clause in question. Perhaps as this is a long Act we could read it by number and titles.

On motion Committee agreed Bill be read by number and titles. Clauses 7 and 8 read and carried.

MR. HEFFERTON: That simply means the person elected when any by-election is called goes out of office at the same time as the rest of the council.

MR. BROWNE: Does that apply to Corner Brook West?

MR. HEFFERTON: No, they have to have a general election.

MR. BROWNE: I thought, Mr. Chairman, the situation at Corner Brook West was that they did not have a quorum, did not have enough councillors.

MR. HEFFERTON: That is why they will call a general election as soon as possible.

MR. BROWNE: That is where the number has gone down below that required for a quorum, and there are vacancies to be filled.

MR. HEFFERTON: If there are two or three vacancies they will have an election for that number of members.

MR. BROWNE: For the five years?

MR. HOLLETT: I wonder if the Minister could tell me what time the term of office of the council in Bona-vista will expire?

MR. HEFFERTON: That I could not tell you.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It expires about a week from now, if the House passes legislation we are bringing in, we will expire their term here in this House.

MR. BROWNE: In this Act?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Not in this Act, no.

Clause 9 carried.

Clauses 10 and 11 carried.
Clause 12: Addition of new section.

Offence.

The word "to" in the last line deleted. Clause carried as amended.

Clause 13: Repeal Sections 18 and 19.

MR. BROWNE: Where are these repealed?

MR. HEFFERTON: Around an airport and in the vicinity of naval bases.

MR. BROWNE: Is there some reason for it?

MR. HEFFERTON: The particular reason for it here—we made provisions to set up local municipal areas and sometimes —

MR. BROWNE: I know, Mr. Chairman, I understand that at Goose Bay near that airport there is an area, a small town called Happy Valley—are you going to abolish that area as a municipality?

MR. HEFFERTON: It is not a municipality.

DR. ROWE: It is owned by the airport.

MR. BROWNE: It was.

MR. HEFFERTON: It never has been.

MR. BROWNE: Do you want it to be, or what is the position?

MR. HEFFERTON: What they do want to do is to pass it over to us and have it placed under provincial control. We are not in the position to take it and set up a municipality there at the present time, for various reasons, so that under this provision we hope to set up local improvements of the area and appoint two, three, four or five members for a period not to exceed two years.

MR. SMALLWOOD: This merely repeals a redundant section.

Clause carried.

Clauses 14 through 18 inclusive carried.

MR. BROWNE: I understand now the councils may appoint the clerks and, I presume, some other officials without consulting the Government. Is that the purpose?

MR. HEFFERTON: No the chief purpose is to lay down the duties of the clerks, which were not laid down in the parent Act.

MR. BROWNE: It is under Clause 28 in the Local Government Act, unless it has been altered since, and I don’t think it has—The council should have power, subsequent to the approval of the Lieutenant-Governor in Council, to appoint such officer and servants as may be necessary. Now this section deals with the appointment of clerks. Can they appoint anybody else? Is there another section giving power to appoint other officers, or are they just confined to a clerk?

MR. HEFFERTON: Just confined to a clerk.

MR. BROWNE: What is the purpose of that? Might one add assistant clerk, a doorman or caretaker? It seems to me strange to take away powers like that from them. They might need a tax clerk or something.

Clause carried.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Chairman, I move the Committee rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again.

Motion carried.

On motion Committee rose, reported that they had considered “An Act to Amend the Welfare of Children Act" and has passed the Bill with some amendments.

On motion said amendment received first and second reading and concurred in.

Bill ordered read a third time tomorrow.

On Bill "An Act Further to Amend the Local Government Act," the Committee reports having made some progress and asks leave to sit again.

On motion report received, ordered sit again tomorrow.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I move the remaining Orders of the Day do stand deferred, and that the House at its rising do adjourn until tomorrow Wednesday at 11:00 a.m. of the clock.

On motion House adjourned until tomorrow Wednesday at 11:00 of the clock.

THURSDAY, June 9, 1954.

The House met at 11:00 of the clock in the morning, pursuant to adjournment.

Presenting Petitions

None.

Presenting Reports of Standing and Select Committees

None.

Giving Notice of Motion and Question

HON. J. R. SMALLWOOD (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I give notice I will on tomorrow ask leave of the House to introduce a Bill, "An Act to Amend the Memorial University (Pensions) Act," and "An Act to Amend the Memorial University Act."

Also on behalf of the Minister of Fisheries and Co-operatives, a Bill "An Act to Amend the Shipbuilding (Bounties) Act."

HON. L. R. CURTIS (Attorney General): Mr. Speaker, I give notice I will on tomorrow ask leave to introduce a Bill "An Act Respecting Commissions to Administer Loans."

HON. DR. H. L. POTTLÉ (Minister of Public Welfare): There is just a small point, Mr. Speaker. On the Order Paper, item No. 10 refers to the Minister of Fisheries and item 21 the Minister of Fisheries and Co-operatives, on the same Order Paper.

MR. HIGGINS: Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the Minister of Public Works if he is aware of the dangerous conditions presently existing on the steps of the entrance to the Magistrates Court. They are now almost in a state of total collapse. These steps are used daily by some hundreds of citizens, that is the actual steps leading from Duckworth Street into the court.

HON. E. S. SPENCER (Minister of Public Works): I think that is a municipal responsibility the honourable gentleman is inquiring about.

Orders of the Day

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, I would like to direct a question to the Minister of Public Welfare. I wonder if Newfoundland was included in the nine provinces which have agreed with the Canadian Government regarding the new Act for pensions for disabled persons? I might say it was announced in the press that nine provinces have, and I understood Newfoundland was mentioned.

DR. POTTLER: Mr. Speaker, I was anticipating a question like that from the Opposition. I have seen two references in the press which might give the impression that Newfoundland has made some formal statement that she was willing to enter into an agreement. I can only say this now, Sir, that at the meetings I attended where this matter was discussed I said we would look into the situation very carefully. But since then no formal information has gone forward to the Government of Canada or any department of the Government of Canada which would give any indication that we were in fact going to enter into such an agreement. We have not opposed it nor said no, but we have not formally said yes. There may be a Bill introduced to the House, an enabling Act that will give the House an opportunity to consider this matter, in another session, but that is as far as I can go on it.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I think we could go on to items No. 10 to 24 inclusive, excepting item No. 12.

First Readings:

Honourable the Minister of Fisheries asks leave to introduce a Bill "An Act Respecting the Inspection of Fish." On motion read a first time, ordered read a second time on tomorrow.

Honourable the Minister of Mines and Resources asks leave to introduce a Bill "An Act to Amend the Dog Act." On motion read a first time, ordered read a second time on tomorrow.

Honourable the Minister of Provincial Affairs asks leave to introduce a Bill "An Act Respecting the Floral Emblem of Newfoundland." On motion read a first time, ordered read a second time on tomorrow.

Honourable the Minister of Finance asks leave to introduce a Bill "An Act to Amend the Social Security Assessment Act." On motion read a first time, ordered read a second time on tomorrow.

Honourable the Minister of Mines and Resources asks leave to introduce a Bill "An Act to Approve and Give Statutory Effect to an Agreement Between the Government and New Jersey Zinc Exploration Company (Canada) Limited." On motion read a first time, ordered read a second time on tomorrow.

Honourable the Minister of Provincial Affairs asks leave to introduce a Bill "An Act to Amend the National Flag Act." On motion read a first time, ordered read a second time on tomorrow.

Honourable the Minister of Mines and Resources asks leave to introduce a Bill "An Act to Amend the Crown Lands Act." On motion read a first time, ordered read a second time on tomorrow.

Honourable the Attorney General asks leave to introduce a Bill "An Act Further to Amend the Companies Act." On motion read a first time, ordered read a second time on tomorrow.

MR. SPEAKER: I would remind honourable members when putting a motion that these Bills be read a second time on tomorrow, when a day has been named for a particular business, strictly speaking, no earlier date can be substituted.
MR. SMALLWOOD: There are so many I doubt we could come to any of them.

On motion Bill read a first time, ordered read a second time on to­morrow.

Honourable the Minister of Mines and Resources asks leave to introduce a Bill "An Act to Amend the Saw Mills Act." On motion read a first time, ordered read a second time on tomorrow.

Honourable the Minister of Public Works asks leave to introduce a Bill "An Act Further to Amend the Highway Traffic Act." On motion read a first time, ordered read a second time on tomorrow.

Honourable the Minister of Fisheries and Co-operatives asks leave to introduce a Bill "An Act to Amend the Co-operative Societies Act." On motion read a first time, ordered read a second time on tomorrow.

Honourable the Minister of Mines and Resources asks leave to introduce a Bill "An Act to Provide for the Transportation of Timber Over Streams and Lakes and for other Purposes in Connection with Crown Lands." On motion read a first time, ordered read a second time on tomorrow.

Honourable the Premier asks leave to introduce a Bill "An Act Further to Amend the Alcoholic Liquors Act." On motion read a first time, ordered read a second time on tomorrow.

Third Readings:

A Bill "An Act to Amend the Welfare of Children Act." On motion read a third time, ordered passed and title be as on the Order Paper.

Committee of the Whole:

On Bill "An Act to Amend the Local Government Act."

MR. SPEAKER: Leave was given yesterday that this Committee sit again today. I do now leave the Chair.

MR. CHAIRMAN: The Committee was considering last night, clause 18, on page 10 of a Bill "An Act to Amend the Local Government Act."

Clauses 18 and 19 carried.

Clause 20: Amdt. Sec. 32.

HON. S. J. HEFFERTON (Minister of Municipal Affairs and Supply): This merely empowers the councils to adopt some building code, and make regulations in accordance with same.

Carried.

Clause 21: Repeal Sec. 33.

MR. BROWNE: That is a penalty section—is it not covered somewhere else?

MR. HEFFERTON: Oh yes!

Clauses 21 and 22 carried.

MR. BROWNE: At the moment I take it there is some provision for compensation where there is expropriation. This deals with expropriation of land. I am sure there must be, but I did not get a chance to check on it.
MR. SMALLWOOD: If it is the recovery of public land or crown land there is no compensation.

MR. BROWNE: No this is the expropriation of land, it is assumed.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, and the regular procedure follows and it is compensated for.

MR. BROWNE: The old procedure makes provision for damages to the owner thereof to be determined by arbitration. That seems to have been left out. Is the procedure found elsewhere here?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, it is provided for, in this Act and in the Department of Public Works Act.

MR. SPENCER: No. 15, 1952.

MR. BROWNE: But according to this Act that section is repealed.

MR. HEFFERTON: To my knowledge it is covered by the Public Works Act and the Highway Traffic Act.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It has got to be covered in this.

MR. BROWNE: Surely Public Works does not cover municipal councils. It does not seem right to me.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The Public Works refers to land other than what is involved here. So that it must also be covered in this Act somewhere. This is not the whole of the Act, merely an amendment. It is covered in the original Act.

MR. BROWNE: The original Act here which is now being repealed does provide that damages be determined by arbitration.

MR. SMALLWOOD: We could let that stand and go on and then go back to it.

MR. M. M. HOLLETT (Leader of the Opposition): Before you move on, if I may be allowed to refer back to 19.

On motion Committee referred back to Clause 19:

MR. HOLLETT: This means that any taxpayer on his own volition may go in and demand to see the books kept by the clerk of the council. I wonder if that is the intention of that section?

MR. SMALLWOOD: It goes further, the assessments, voters’ list, poll books and other books and documents in the possession or under the control of the clerk. Any taxpayer of the municipality—

MR. HOLLETT: I am just wondering, Mr. Chairman, whether or not it is wise to make it possible for any taxpayer on his own volition to go into the council office and demand from the clerk all the reports kept, all the records whatsoever kept by the clerk of the council, which can be looked into or inspected by any taxpayer.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Not only that but he can ask for a copy at a cost of ten cents.

MR. HOLLETT: I foresee where you are likely to have a little problem on that.

MR. HEFFERTON: Well, Mr. Chairman, the taxes to be paid are public property, and if any taxpayer feels he is being illegally or disproportionately taxed surely he has the right to go in and see the records etc., and see whether he is being treated rightly or not.
MR. HOLLETT: Has he a right to see what Bill Smith has paid or anybody?

MR. CURTIS: Of course, to compare with his own.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It is done all over the earth.

MR. HOLLETT: On the same basis why does not the Federal Government permit taxpayers to go into the income tax office?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Until a few years ago it used to publish every income tax paid. In the United States it used to be published annually.

MR. HIGGINS: I might say it is not uncommon for a citizen who feels he is unduly taxed to come to the city clerk's office, and say, for instance, I live on the corner of Livingstone Street and a fellow across the street from me pays less. The city clerk, I believe, on a payment of a fee will allow him to see the appraiser's books. So that there is nothing so unusual about this.

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, it is done all over the world.

MR. CURTIS: In fact, fairly recently when I was in the city living on a certain street, a person next door had a better house with a garage and paid less taxes yet had gall enough to go down and demand a reduction.

MR. HIGGINS: It is not infrequent to have some citizen come and complain, and sometimes something comes up and the councillor or clerk gets a rap on the knuckles for not performing their duties properly.

MR. HOLLETT: Can I go into the municipal office down here and demand to see what every person is taxed?

MR. HIGGINS: Yes, you can do that. Most people don't know that.

Clause 19 carried.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Clause 22 was permitted to stand.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I found the section over towards the end dealing with arbitration, I think it is connected insufficiently. Mr. Chairman, I was wondering as the Minister is a little hard of hearing, could he sit in the chair there—he does not seem to grasp what is being said.

Clauses 21, 22, 23 carried.

Clause 24: Amdt. Sec. 41.

MR. BROWNE: Has it been found necessary to do that?

MR. HEFFERTON: Yes, it is a case again where we had regulations under two different Acts which were in conflict, the Municipal Councils Act and the Public Works Act. Here we have given the priority to Public Works because they are in control of public highways.

Carried.

Clauses 25, 26 carried.

Clause 27: Amdt. Sec. 44. Right to establish, run and operate cold storage.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, while on that; I wonder if the Minister knows whether that is being done? I remember some years ago looking into the subject, and I found that in Europe it is quite a common thing, and they had thousands of small municipalities that bought the electricity, and then did their own wiring and extensions of services themselves thereby making it cheaper for the municipality. Does the Minister know if that is being done here?

MR. HEFFERTON: We have had some requests for it to be done. I don't know if it is being done. But we have diesel plants under the control and management of councils.

MR. BROWNE: I remember when they had the right to extend the electricity to Codroy Valley I suggested to some co-operative society to do that.

MR. SMALLWOOD: But they did not, they are still shouting for electricity.

Carried.

Clause 28 carried.

Clause 29: Amdt. Sec. 47.

MR. BROWNE: This is a little different, Mr. Chairman, from the other. This is a business tax, and extensive authorization—the council shall fix any taxes imposed under this section, as a percentage of the value or magnitude, as estimated by the Council of business done by the person, partnership, association or company to be taxed, and the Council may vary the percentage of its application to different kinds or classes of business, trades or professions, and subject to Section 49 the estimate by the Council of the value or magnitude of the business done shall be final and the amount of any tax fixed under this paragraph shall not be less than five dollars or more than one thousand dollars; but

(ii) The Lieutenant-Governor in Council may by order, direct that the Council shall fix any tax imposed under this section as a percentage of the assessed value of any or all of the classes of real property used by every person, partnership, association or company in carrying on the business, trade or profession in respect of which the tax is imposed ....

I think I brought that matter up somewhere else, with regard to valuation of business. I thought it had something to do with floorspace, is that in this Act?

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is all subject to the tax rental agreement.

MR. BROWNE: Between the Provincial Government and the Federal?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Between the Government of Newfoundland and the Government of Canada. There is a certain ceiling on all kinds of taxes we may impose or allow to be imposed.

MR. BROWNE: This is not government.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It is done under the Authority of the Act of this House, therefore we control it, and we are not permitted to authorize taxation above a certain figure in certain regards.

MR. HEFFERTON: On Section (i) the council, it is their official desire to carry out as they are doing now and fixing the business tax within the limits of the Act themselves. That is within the limits of $5 and $1,000, on a sort of arbitrary fashion based on the goods turnover and the magnitude, and it, of course, must be approved by the Lieutenant-Governor in Council. Now that is being done by many councils at the present time, but more and more of the councils were dissatisfied, and we have had many complaints from many people in these communities therefore this... section is there as an alternative for assessment of real property and a tax on same.

MR. HOLLETT: And the Lieutenant-Governor in Council says just what the percentage will be?

MR. HEFFERTON: It has to come to us for approval.

Carried.

Clauses 30 and 31 carried.

Clause 32: Repeal and substitution Sec. 58. Water tax.

MR. HEFFERTON: That is a provision for the imposition of a water tax where a water system has been installed.

MR. HOLLETT: That is a very ancient tax, is it not, a tax on water?

MR. HEFFERTON: Yes.

MR. HOLLETT: Are you going to put a tax on water taps in the municipalities?

MR. HIGGINS: Not necessarily.

MR. HEFFERTON: That is just one of the ways it may be used.

MR. HIGGINS: Mr. Chairman, might I ask the Minister, is not this water tax provision very similar to one in the St. John's Municipal Act, it seems to be word for word?

MR. HEFFERTON: That is right. You merely provide alternative ways of payment.

MR. BROWNE: There is a provision in Sub-section 3, the council may impose the water tax on land or buildings not connected. Now that has raised a principle where a council may impose a water tax on a building not connected with the system.

MR. SMALLWOOD: We can't have water systems in the outports otherwise.

MR. BROWNE: I am reminded of the past, I remember some years ago taxes were imposed on people living in the Mundy Pond Area and there were no facilities provided by the municipality.

MR. SMALLWOOD: But you have a different position altogether in the outports. It passes by a house where a man says he does not want it. He decides his wife should go on carrying water in a bucket. He is not going to have water. But the council has a right to take the taxes from him as though he did.

MR. HEFFERTON: It goes a little further. There might be a hydrant and they get all their water supply from that hydrant, and it is only right these people should pay these taxes.

MR. BROWNE: Yes.

Clause 32 carried.

Clause 33: Addition of new sections. Streets for purposes of subdivision may not be opened or made without consent of Council. Council may open new streets and subdivide land. Cost of improvements made under Section 58B may be assessed on the lands benefitting. Lands may be assessed in respect of the laying of water mains, sewers and the construction of curbs, gutters and sidewalks. Sums assessed under Sections 58C and 58D to be paid by instalments. Owners of lands may be requested to effect improvements at their own expense, or deposit with Council an amount equal to estimated cost.

MR. HOLLETT: This has been a very unpopular tax in some sections.
MR. HEFFERTON: I might say most of these things have been asked for by municipalities in the last three years.

MR. HOLLETT: I say it must be a very unpopular tax in some areas in Newfoundland. As yet the people are not used to these things. Councils may very well ask for it, but they won't find it easy to collect. I know for a fact a good many settlements where it is not popular.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is why it is absolutely basic the validity of the council in the first instance be beyond doubt, because when it is beyond doubt in the minds of the people concerned, then that municipal organization has an incomparably better chance of imposing these conditions and these taxes.

MR. HOLLETT: While the Premier is on that point could he tell us why, with an election carried out—

MR. SMALLWOOD: I am not going to discuss that.

MR. HOLLETT: He raised the point.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I did not mention Bonavista.

MR. HOLLETT: The Premier raised the point.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The honourable gentleman knows there is an Act coming in and he will have ample opportunity to debate it. Why not realize it is out of order.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Order. If there is an Act coming in to consider this specific point—

MR. SMALLWOOD: There is, I announced an Act last night.

MR. HOLLETT: Oh, very well!
Clause 33 carried.

Clause 34: Repeal Sec. 78A.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I wonder why some of these sections are changed?

MR. HEFFERTON: That is something I cannot tell you, it is in the drafting.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It may be just a matter of re-numbering.
Clause 34 and 35 carried. Preamble and Title carried.

MR. HEFFERTON: I move the Committee report having passed this Bill with some amendments.
Carried.

A Bill "An Act Respecting Social Assistance":

Clauses 1 through 8 carried.

Clause 9: Persons not eligible for social assistance.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, "Social Assistance shall not be granted under this Act or the regulations to a person whose only claim to social assistance is on account of his being unemployed"—

MR. CURTIS: I wonder if the Minister would explain that. A man may be utterly destitute and in good health.

DR. POTTLE: On second reading, Mr. Chairman, I think I indicated, at least in general terms, why we felt Newfoundland was probably not ready to have this Bill cover able-bodied unemployment. That does not mean to say the able-bodied unemployed are not helped. There is a scale of able-bodied relief and it applies now and will apply after this Act is passed, but the able-bodied unemployed will be outside this, they will be in another category outside the categories included in this Bill. I indicated as clearly as I could from the point of view of sound welfare, there was in my view absolutely no reason why the able-bodied unemployed should not come under a Bill of this kind. There are two or three comments, however: (1) If the able-bodied were included it would conceivably happen that in a time, if there happened to be a time of wide-spread unemployment, then this whole Bill, the application of this Act could be quite upset. In the second place this Bill, if it becomes law, does for mothers and dependents and cripples etc., exactly what it is doing now, at least exactly what our legislation is doing now, but this Bill will tie the whole thing together in one neater package. I am sure the Opposition will appreciate that it requires a fair amount of departmental machinery to get a person put on a satisfactory allowance, and once he is put on he is here because he is incapacitated or disabled because of some good reason or other. Once that happens he goes on for a while, and you just do not have that kind of machinery, and that set of circumstances does not apply to able-bodied relief. A man may be out of work today but may get a job tomorrow. You can see what I am saying—the people who came under this Bill, once they come on, the tendency will be for them to continue on for six or twelve months, because they are that kind of persons. As I have just said, the type of persons who qualify, widows, or adults or families who are unable because of certain emergencies to care for their families they are the kind of people who come under this Bill. But even with those their circumstances change so that they are no longer entitled to allowances. Then they are required by law to notify us at headquarters.

Again the point I am trying to make, with able-bodied unemployment the circumstances change overnight, but people who characteristically come under this Bill, when once they get on tend to be on for a few months. That is not the whole answer, but it is partly an answer. And I say, from the point of view of welfare there is no reason why they should not come under this Bill. Yet I think we are not quite ready yet, we are coming to it by stages. Practically the first step is to cut these things all down into classes, and the next step may be to take our place in public welfare, and I am not sure from the point of view of general public relations if they are ready.

MR. HOLLETT: You will pay under this Act to certain able-bodied unemployed, is that not so?

DR. POTTLE: But that will not be the only reason.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Not merely by reason of the fact that a man is unemployed.

MR. HOLLETT: But will pay it to him while he has to remain to look after his children because he is unable to obtain the service of some person to look after them? I think you are going to have a little trouble there.

DR. POTTLE: It is not a new section. It has been in force at least a year, and we have had no trouble with it so far.
MR. HOLLETT: It is not generally known, I take it.

DR. POTTLE: There is no reason why it should not be, the welfare officers know it.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I take it the Bill does not mean to exclude from relief those whose only claim for relief is that they are able-bodied and unemployed. That relief comes under different legislation. That is all it means. That is the short answer.

DR. POTTLE: And we want to deal with it in such a way we can deal with it again and again, but this is more cumbersome.

MR. BROWNE: Is there actually legislation under which relief is given?

DR. POTTLE: Well, the Health and Welfare Act, 1931.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That commits us.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, I have one question about that—the issue of social assistance in cash, would that be outside St. John's?

DR. POTTLE: Social assistance will be paid here by cheque.

MR. HIGGINS: By cheque rather than by cash?

DR. POTTLE: Yes.

Clauses 10 through 20 carried.

Clause 23: Action may be taken in name.

Clause 24: Regulations.

DR. POTTLE: Mr. Chairman, I have a point to raise there—the Attorney General asks whether it might not be advisable under regulations to provide a kind of escalator provision respecting any other matters necessary or advisable to carry out this Act, as there may be other matters in the enforcement of the Act not explicitly provided for. I suggest it might be advisable to add a sub-clause (J) respecting any other matter necessary or advisable to carry out effectively the purposes of this Act. If we could let that stand, Sir, I could consult the law officers and see if they would not agree.

Clause 24 stand.

Clauses 25, 26, 27 carried.

Clauses 28 and 29 carried.

Clause 30: Date of coming into force.

DR. POTTLE: Mr. Chairman, on this Clause, if this Bill comes into law it would mean the Mothers' Allowances Act and the Dependents' Allowances Act go out, but we would prefer to have the Mothers' Allowances Act and the Dependents' Allowances Act stand long enough so they would be there when this Act comes fully into force, because we don't want any payments interrupted as a result of the implementation of this Bill, so that it might be deleted.

MR. CURTIS: We cannot delete it. I think we could provide, Mr. Chairman, to have them repealed by proclamation. I suggest that would serve as well.

Clause 30 carried.

DR. POTTLE: Mr. Chairman, I move the Committee report having made some progress on this Bill, and ask leave to sit again.

Motion carried.

A Bill "An Act Respecting the Franchise of Electors and the Election of Members to the House of Assembly."

MR. CHAIRMAN: I might remind the Committee the following clauses were allowed to stand: Clauses 3, 4, 26, 36, 41, 65, 115, 145, 147, 148 and 150.

HON. M. P. MURRAY (Minister of Provincial Affairs): First of all, Mr. Chairman, I would like to report, the forms in the back which, as were mentioned last night, do not run consecutively. That was done. Three and four were found to be useless and had no application to the Act and were taken out. But if they were renumbered it would mean a big job of renumbering them all the way through, so that the gap was left there.

MR. BROWNE: Is that good draftsmanship?

MR. MURRAY: Well, it does no possible harm, and it would mean a tremendous lot of more work at this stage, as there are cross-references to forms all throughout the Act—and it can't possibly do any harm.

Then the honourable and learned member brought up the question of what is a Canadian citizen. I have the Canadian Citizenship Act here with me. Statutes of Canada, Volume 2; and very briefly a Canadian citizen would be one born in Canada or who becomes a citizen as a result of Confederation or, in the case of a female, one who married a Canadian and had one year's residence; British subjects, citizens of Erie and of the Commonwealth become citizens after five years' residence and filing a declaration of intentions and taking an oath of allegiance. In the case of aliens the procedure is somewhat different—an alien is one who is not a member of the Commonwealth or a citizen of Erie; in that case he must file a declaration of intentions of becoming a citizen anytime within five years; after five years apply for citizenship, appear before the court, answer questions put by the court. A certificate of character is provided by the Chief of Police, and these documents are sent off to the Minister of Citizenship at Ottawa and after the oath of allegiance, renunciation of a foreign nation is done by the court, and he becomes a citizen.

MR. BROWNE: I was not concerned with that point. In our old Act a British subject who is a resident had the right to vote, and under the constitution a British subject has the right to vote under local government. Under our old Election Act a British subject had a right to vote, and I suggest he should be given the right to vote.

MR. MURRAY: We are prepared to do that.

MR. BROWNE: Say, as a Canadian citizen or other British subject.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Because a Canadian citizen is a British subject.

MR. MURRAY: That is, section (b) of Clause (3) will now read a Canadian citizen or other British subject.

Clause as amended carried.

MR. MURRAY: The next point is under Clause 26: We have no objection to making that fourteen days, seven days.

Clause amended by changing "fourteen" to "seven."

Clause as amended carried.
MR. MURRAY: The next is under Clause 36—a person to whom a writ of election is directed shall be the returning officer for the electoral district to which the writ relates. This is done deliberately. In the case of Carbonear, for instance, or Bay de Verde, Magistrate Sheppard, who might not be the electoral officer for Port de Grave, might be appointed returning officer for that district, and similar cases may arise. The idea was to be able to appoint a magistrate as a returning officer for a district.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That was always a fact.

MR. BROWNE: But it says here—I see, yes—carried.

MR. MURRAY: The point raised in Clause 41 was covered, I believe by the references to Clause 3, Canadian Citizenship.

MR. HOLLETT: Clause 36 is passed, is it? I really can't see that yet. If he is not the electoral officer in that district how is he to cast a deciding vote in the case of a tie?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Because he is given the right under the Act in another section.

MR. HOLLETT: I see—Carried.

Clause 41 carried.

MR. MURRAY: The next point is under Clause 65: Strike out "at the time of application" in the last line of sub-section (6) and substitute therefor "on polling day." That is sub-paragraph (4) (vi). There is also a slight amendment, if you go back to (vi) in rule "v" should be "vi."

Clause as amended carried.

MR. MURRAY: Now under sub-clause 12 of Clause 69: I have not the actual amendment here but we are striking out the words "in line at the door."

MR. BROWNE: That does not satisfy. You still have the door open and people coming in.

MR. MURRAY: If we strike out the words "in line at the door." The outer door of the polling station is closed.

MR. CURTIS: Supposing it is a very small home?

MR. BROWNE: While we are on the subject, I think the Premier may be aware, or other Ministers may be, that there was some considerable confusion between the polling stations on Mundy Pond. A man had his house rented and his name was not recorded for the place where the booth was located, but he had to vote at another polling station. There was great confusion between the polling stations on Pennywell Road at the Junction of Empire Avenue and Mundy Pond, Blackler Avenue, and people had to go to two or three places before they found out where they were to vote.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I think that arose from the distinction between rural and urban voters. If you live outside the city you are in a rural area and can vote in almost any booth. If you live inside the city you are an urban voter and have to vote where you are told to vote. And at that booth they were at the edge of the city, sort of.

Clause as amended carried.

MR. MURRAY: 110—that clause has to do with it being unlawful to pay an agent. All I can say to that is that the same provision, we checked this morning, is in the Ontario and in the Federal Acts, and we had better leave it alone.

MR. BROWNE: No, Mr. Chairman, the Minister promised to look up that Section 110.

MR. HOLLETT: There was something about 101 was there?

MR. MURRAY: Yes, whether the word directly or indirectly should not go in. I checked with the law officers and think it is pretty stringent as it is drafted at present.

MR. BROWNE: Under Clause 111, I asked the Minister to consider the reinsertion of the section that dealt with the employees of any department of Government or employed in any Department of Public Works. Section 151 of the original Act.

MR. MURRAY: We will make the necessary inclusion.

MR. HOLLETT: Did I understand 110 is now in order?

MR. SMALLWOOD: It was carried as is because that is the way it reads in the Federal Act and in the Ontario Act.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, might I suggest that Section 151 be made the second part of Section 111 there.

MR. MURRAY: I was also thinking that, so as not to disturb the numbering. The next section becomes (a) and the original one (b).

Moved that Section 111 be amended by inserting as (a) No person in the employ of any department of the Government, etc., and renumbering the preceding section as (b).

Clause as amended carried.

Clause 115.

MR. MURRAY: That is a debatable question, whether or not it is legal to hire a conveyance. After due consideration I think the clause should pass as is. You may never stop it but it is nice to be able to say, sorry but if I hire a car I lose my election even if I have a majority of a million. Do you want me to be elected?

MR. BROWNE: That is all right, but if the other fellow does it.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Well, it will be at his own risk. If two men can be found to swear he spent money for that, he has had it! Out he goes!

HON. C. H. BALLAM (Minister of Labour): We have a situation over in my district that will affect largely, and I think properly the Minister of Public Works as well as the question of men in the woods. Unless there is some arrangement for mobile polling stations it will be impossible for these people to vote, unless you had a polling station in every lumber camp.

MR. SMALLWOOD: There is nothing in this to stop anyone from volunteering. For instance the two companies concerned could voluntarily move all their employees to the nearest polling booths. The only thing is a candidate or his agent cannot hire a vehicle, but anyone can drive voters free. That is the least the companies can do—drive their employees down to vote.

MR. HIGGINS: I agree heartily—Let it go.

MR. HOLLETT: There are a good many of us in this House not only on this side who do not like it. As a matter of fact I am prepared to make an amendment to Section 115—Every candidate who hires or promises to pay—Strike out the word “himself” or by any other person on behalf of any other person—the candidate is not allowed to hire a person.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Will the honourable gentleman explain his point—How difficult does he want it to be?

MR. HOLLETT: The point is that there are many people who have no conveyances, have no cars but are invalid and crippled but who would like to go and vote. Under this section you cannot ring up a taxi and say; "come down I want to take Mr. Moore to the polls." If a candidate does that he gets into trouble.

MR. MURRAY: He could take his own car.

MR. HOLLETT: And if he has not got one?

MR. SMALLWOOD: The Tories surely all have cars.

MR. HOLLETT: You cannot make a Tory nor a Liberal joke out of this. I am thinking of the inconvenience to certain people who should go and cast their vote, but we are putting an obstacle there. I think the Government will agree with us for once, we endeavour not only to assist, but almost to insist, as my learned friend on my left said yesterday, that everybody get out and vote. But if you leave that section as it is these people who live a long distance away from the polling stations are just not going to get there. I would like to have these other words struck out, and leave it to the candidate.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The elections are costing enough as it is. Let us cut out this fantastic expense of cars and trucks and motor boats and wheelbarrows and everything that is movable.

MR. HOLLETT: That is all very well for some people to talk like that. He is getting out. He told us he is getting out of politics, and going to Roche’s Line and residing there.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I think I said, I am getting out of politics when the industrial development programme is running absolutely smoothly and the fisheries development programme is running absolutely smoothly. I don’t know how long that will be. But as soon as that time comes I am gone, I am out. I don’t know how long it will be. Maybe the honourable gentleman is better able to tell us. Does he think all this is to happen in the next few months or a year or two? I think it will take some time longer.

MR. HOLLETT: I think I can tell the exact time that will happen. That is the exact moment the Honourable the Premier rises up from his chair and says—the new industries are working smoothly and the fisheries programme also.

MR. CHAIRMAN: I think we are wandering afield. Will the honourable member read his amendment to 115?

MR. HOLLETT: That all words in the first part of the clause after the word “who” be stricken out, in the first and second line. Then it would read—Every candidate who hires or promises to hire a conveyance to carry voters—it penalizes the candidate if he does it, and we don’t have to penalize Mr. Jones who hires a taxi to take Mr. Smith to the polls.

MR. MURRAY: This clause will be completely inoperative then, and there will be no sense in it at all.

MR. HIGGINS: This is not letting your right hand know what your left is doing.
Amendment put—Motion lost—Clause carried.

Clauses 145 to 148:

MR. MURRAY: I checked up on these this morning. The point was brought up by my honourable and learned friend from St. John’s West. I checked this morning and was told it is the same in the Canadian Act—They have to report to somebody. In this case the report is made to the Speaker.

MR. BROWNE: It is in the Canadian Act, yes, because the Canadian House sits about nine months out of year.

MR. MURRAY: We have the Speaker here virtually every day. And if the Speaker happens to be out of the Province the Clerk of the House of Assembly may do it. This is in case a member is unseated and a new election writ is issued by the Speaker.

MR. BROWNE: I guess we need not worry too much about it.

Clauses 145 to 148 inclusive carried.

Clause 149:

MR. MURRAY: That is a matter of procedure, the charge has to be proven whether or not a corrupt practice was committed.

Clause 149 carried.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman I drew attention to 142, that it had certain inconsistencies.

MR. MURRAY: The honourable member pointed out quite rightly that it must be done with intent to corrupt. But it was pointed out to me this morning by the law officers there are a number of corrupt practices covered by the Act, and it would be possible for a candidate to commit one of these and assuredly it is just a saving clause.

Clause 142 carried.

MR. MURRAY: Clause 159 has to do with the making of regulations under the Act. It was pointed out to me this morning a flagrant mistake could arise in the Act, and a printer could make a clause absurd, but these regulations would give power to rectify it rather than wait for the House of Assembly to open. Another thing is that there might be deficiencies in the Act, as to the distribution of ballot boxes or forms or a thousand and one things in connection with election, and the regulations are to take care of that sort of thing. The regulations themselves must be consistent with the Act, and in order to carry out the terms, intent and meaning of the Act.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I understand from the Attorney General, who has said this on one or two occasions, where inadvertently a typographical error occurs there is power to amend, and there is some sound inherent power to amend a typographical error.

MR. CURTIS: Perhaps there is.

MR. MURRAY: I could give a typical example. When the consolidation was made, that a woman could vote only when 25 was a misunderstanding; a correction could cover such an error.

MR. BROWNE: That is a very big problem.

MR. HOLLETT: If the honourable member suggests then that Acts passed by the House now can be amended by regulations of the Governor in Council.

MR. MURRAY: No, it is true intent being better carried out—
MR. HOLLETT: I remember there were recommendations in connection with voters lists in the old days, but I never heard of regulations relative to the Election Act. Where are we going to draw the line? One government makes one set and another government makes another. We are repealing now the Act which has been in force since 1913, and we are going to give each government which comes into power the authority now to make regulations.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Not regulations to change the Act.

MR. BROWNE: According to the illustration given by the Minister.

MR. MURRAY: It was a poor illustration, I confess.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, we do not agree with this section at all, and it has not been in the old Act. It is not in the Canadian Act. There has been no evidence given to us to show it has ever been necessary. Therefore, I suggest it be dropped.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Chairman, if there is an Act that ought to have the respect and concern of all the House it is the Election Act. No one in the Government would desire to be accused or even that it be suggested or suspected of monkeying with the Election Act, of stacking the cards in favour of the Government in office. No one would wish to be suspected of that. If we thought it is in the minds of any honourable member I think we ought to amend it, and not ask the Committee to give that authority to the Government. There was no thought in our minds—I did not even know it was there and I am the politician of this crowd on this side of the House. I did not even know it was there, and certainly I have no desire in the wide world to give the Government power to use the Election Act improperly by drafting regulations that would stack the cards in our favour. So that, if the Minister who is piloting the Bill is agreeable and all my colleagues on this side are agreeable that this is a Government measure then I would be agreeable to have the clause stricken out.

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Chairman, I would like to have this clause in, not because it means the Government has any desire to use it, but as all members know, until an Act has been tried out we don't know whether or not there may be some very grave defect in it. Now this Act has been under consideration over a year and quite a lot of thought has gone into it. But when people get in a groove when talking about a thing they are very apt to overlook some very very important things, and it is quite possible, if we don't have that authority, it may make the holding of an election very awkward in some particulars. I personally urge that it be kept in although I have no anticipation of its every being used. But, as my honourable friend knows, if we had had a by-election in St. John's last fall we were up against a very serious situation which perhaps this Act would not allow us to amend, and there may be some similar provision which may be overlooked in this Act. I know the draftsmen, Mr. Greene and Mr. McCarthy with him, and I know those draftsmen suggested that. Having drafted that themselves they want to feel, if something has been overlooked there is some way of remedying it during an election without waiting for the House of Assembly to meet. I urge that the clause be kept in.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, I regard very highly the remarks made by the Honourable the Premier, and want to assure him that there is no thought in our minds that the section would ever be used contrary to the meaning of the Act. But I do think it is going a long way to allow any government to make regulations over and above this Act. For instance, when speaking of the intent of the Act, well the intent is in the Act, and if somebody violates, or is not carrying out the Act, the judge is there to interpret the intent of the Act, not the Lieutenant-Governor in Council, not the Minister, not the men of the Attorney General’s Department, not the Attorney General. I don’t think it is anybody’s job in the Government nor out to interpret the Act, as far as making regulations, the Act is written there, there can be no regulations you can make, and unless an amendment is needed to the Act the Act is law. If we give authority to make regulations they can make regulations on anything. It is not a question of this government or that government, but all government. Is there any such provision in the Federal Act, I wonder? Could the Minister tell us that?

MR. MURRAY: No, there is not.

MR. HIGGINS: I may say that is a thing which occurred to me—Can the Minister give us any precedent in any other Act for a similar provision?

MR. MURRAY: No.

MR. CURTIS: No. That is an experiment, as this Act itself is really an experiment, it has not been tried. We think in my department that every point we can think of has been covered but we may dissolve the House tomorrow and may find there is some little clause which may completely hold up an election. It is purely a safeguard. I would almost be willing to cover with—‘The Lieutenant-Governor in Council and the consent of the Leader of the Opposition in the House or anybody else.’ It is purely a case of not being stalled by some oversight on a point we all have overlooked. Frankly, I never expect to see it used, but I know the feeling of my department on the matter, that it is just an enabling clause to enable us—for instance we found out when we went to St. John’s West that women under 25 were not allowed to vote and we could not alter that, but there are other little things we might have. It will work both ways. I just advise it be left in, but I will not push it.

MR. HOLLETT: When talking about the drafting of the Act, really the drafting consisted of cutting out sections hocus-pocus out of the old Act.

MR. SMALLWOOD: There is no hocus-pocus—holus-bolus, yes. Holus-bolus on this side, hocus-pocus on that side.

MR. HOLLETT: Really the only great change in this Act is the counting of the ballots in the booths. That is the only great change.

MR. CURTIS: Something about automobiles.

MR. HIGGINS: And not treating.

MR. HOLLETT: No treating was included under the old Act, but you did it though, the whole lot of you.

MR. CURTIS: I don’t want to prejudice the position. I think we had better take the Honourable the Premier’s advice and leave it out.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I move that section be struck out, and the sections be renumbered to the end.

Clause as amended carried.
MR. HOLLETT: There was one other point I wished to raise, Mr. Chairman, that is in case of the death of any member, having been elected, or his resignation—Is there any provision, and if so where is it—I mean provision for a new election?

MR. MURRAY: I checked on that also, Mr. Chairman. There was an oversight, and a grave one, and it is proposed to correct that by putting in a sub-clause. If you go back to Clause 31 and put in a sub-clause (6) there.

On motion the Committee reverted to Clause 31.

MR. MURRAY: It was proposed to insert a sub-clause (6) there to cover by-elections. I could not find it actually in the original here nor in the House of Assembly Act. I did not have much time, and could not find it.

MR. HOLLETT: There was some reference to a difference of opinion as to whose duty it was to order the election, whether it was the Lieutenant-Governor in Council or the Lieutenant-Governor.

MR. MURRAY: No, there is no question of that—it is the Lieutenant-Governor in Council. But in the old Act there was a provision which required having a by-election within six months. That is what I was trying to find this morning.

MR. BROWNE: There is a provision here, Chapter 5, where a member of the House of Assembly is seated in office and his seat becomes vacant, whenever a vacancy shall occur the Lieutenant-Governor shall within six months after such vacancy issue a writ—Then it goes on to say that where a member resigns and contests the district again—

MR. CURTIS: That clause is not practical in the case of Labrador. Supposing the member for Labrador dies at a certain season of the year, you can't have an election within six months then—I don't see how you can.

MR. HOLLETT: That can be taken care of.

MR. CURTIS: That is one of the cases where we should have some discretion. The Lieutenant-Governor there means, Lieutenant-Governor in Council according to the interpretation.

MR. BROWNE: I don't think there is any provision for death in that section—When a vacancy shall occur, that covers it.

MR. MURRAY: I take it then there is no necessity to include it in the Election Act, if it is already taken care of.

MR. HOLLETT: There is some doubt, I think. We ought to have some decision in regard to how long a government can withhold a by-election.

MR. MURRAY: Six months.

MR. CURTIS: The honourable member's predecessors went a year without filling a vacancy, and when Mike Viningome was appointed to the Board of Liquor Control they kept the seat vacant for two years or a little longer.

MR. HOLLETT: Does the Honourable Minister think that is correct?

MR. CURTIS: No.

MR. HOLLETT: Well then there should be an amendment.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It was a matter of not doing what this Act said.

MR. CHAIRMAN: I suggest the discussion be more relevant.
MR. SMALLWOOD: Let us discuss the United Nations.

MR. HOLLETT: Do you mean to bring in and Act to amend that Title of Bill carried.

MR. MURRAY: Mr. Chairman, I move the Committee rise and report having passed the Bill with some amendments.

Carried.

On motion the Committee reported having passed the Bill with some amendments.

"An Act Further to Amend the Local Government Act"—Report received. On motion said amendments read a first and second time and concurred in. Bill ordered read a third time on tomorrow.

On motion the committee reported having considered the Bill, "An Act Respecting Social Assistance," made some progress and asks leave to sit again. Report received. On motion Committee ordered sit again on tomorrow.

On motion the Committee reported having passed the Bill "An Act Respecting the Franchise of Electors, and the Election of Members to the House of Assembly" with some amendments. On motion report received, said amendments read a first and second time and concurred in. Bill ordered read a third time on tomorrow.

MR. SPEAKER: I beg to inform the House his Honour the Lieutenant-Governor will arrive shortly after 3:00 o'clock to assent to certain Bills.

It now being 1:00 o'clock I shall leave the Chair until 3:00 o'clock this afternoon.

WEDNESDAY—June 9, 1954

The House resumed at 3:00 of the clock.

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Speaker, I would move that the House do not adjourn at 6:00 o'clock today.

Motion carried.

SERGEANT-AT-ARMS: Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to inform you that His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor has arrived.

MR. SPEAKER: May it please Your Honour, the General Assembly of this Province has at its present Session passed certain Bills, to which, in the name and on behalf of the General Assembly, I respectfully request Your Honour's assent.

The following list of Bills was read by the clerk:

A Bill "An Act to Amend the Interpretation Act."

A Bill "An Act Further to Amend the Newfoundland Corporation Income Tax Act, 1949."

A Bill "An Act Further to Amend the Slum Clearance Act."

HIS HONOUR: In Her Majesty's name I assent to these Bills.

MR. SPEAKER: It is my agreeable duty on behalf of Her Majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects, Her Faithful Commons in Newfoundland, to present to Your Honour a Bill for the Appropriation of Supply granted in the present Session.

The Clerk then read the following Bill:

A Bill "An Act For Granting to Her Majesty Certain Sums of Money for Defraying Certain Expenses of the Public Service for the Financial Year Ending the Thirty-first Day of March, One Thousand Nine Hundred and Fifty-five, and for Other Purposes Relating to the Public Service."

HIS HONOUR: In Her Majesty's Name, I thank her loyal subjects, I accept their benevolence and assent to this Bill.

His Honour left the Chamber.

Mr. Speaker resumed the Chair.

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Speaker, if you would call the second reading of a Bill, "An Act Further to Amend the City of St. John's Act." I think the second reading of this Bill has already been moved by my colleague the honourable member for Trinity North, the Minister for Municipal Affairs and Supply.

MR. SPEAKER: Before the honourable member continues. I have just located the Bill. The debate was adjourned by the Honourable the Leader of the Opposition. This will not prevent the honourable member from speaking.

MR. CURTIS: Yes, I might say, Mr. Speaker, I am speaking purely to explain the new Bill, and I understand in so doing I lost my chance to make any further speech on the Bill.
MR. HOLLETT: May I interrupt. I believe, Mr. Speaker, the Bill on which I adjourned the debate is not at all the same Bill as this one. Therefore I should think that one is in the waste basket now. I should think if this is a new Bill coming in, I should speak.

MR. SPEAKER: I may point out the Honourable Leader of the Opposition will not lose his right.

MR. HOLLETT: Is it a new Bill?

MR. CURTIS: The situation is a little unusual, Mr. Speaker. There were obviously some omissions in the Bill as it was originally presented to the House by my colleague, because it was not under our control. I may say this is not a government measure. This is a Bill that has been submitted to us by the St. John's Municipal Council. My purpose is to do what the Minister himself cannot do, since he has already spoken on the Bill. The Bill really, Mr. Speaker, is very much the same as the Bill originally introduced here. There are only two new features added to the Bill as it was when originally introduced by my honourable friend, at the request of the council. It provides for a poll tax not exceeding $20 to be levied on all people who live in the City of St. John's and were gainfully employed, above the age of 21, and who were not paying property taxes. The Bill further enables the council to levy a tax on all people who reside within five miles of the City, and who were gainfully employed in the City.

Now when I discovered that an effort was being made by the council to tax people within five miles of the city, I took the matter up with His Honour the Mayor. I pointed out to him that that meant that everybody in Mount Pearl Park, Glendale, and other residents far removed from the council, who were gainfully employed in St. John's might in addition to being liable for taxes where they lived be held liable for taxes in the City of St. John's. I pointed out to him that I felt such a tax would not be favourably regarded by the House. Consequently, with his permission, the present Act has been amended so that the right of the council to collect the poll tax is now restricted to people who live within an area of one mile of the City, which is a jurisdiction this House has given the Council in other matters.

The second point that we discussed, Mr. Speaker, was the principle of taxation without representation. I felt that this House would not like to adopt a principle of taxation of people within a mile of the City and at the same time not give them the franchise. So that the Bill before the House now gives the franchise to people who pay this poll tax, even though they do not reside within the limits of the City.

The third point, however, about which His Worship the Mayor asks the House to confirm is the fact that people paying this poll tax and not residing in the City being voters. They are not eligible under this new legislation to stand as councillors or to run for the office of mayor. In other words they have the franchise to vote but they have not the right to stand for membership in the council. That is a reasonable request, because I think the House will agree that any person who is to sit as mayor on a council or a councillor should have some stake in the City, and should be on the property list of the City.

These are the changes that have been made in the Bill, and with these changes I have pleasure in supporting the Bill.
MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, I rise for the purpose of opposing this Bill, which is about a hundred years behind the times, and reminds me of the day when in England they taxed the pane of glass put in houses. This particular Act, for one thing, taxes you for the number of water taps you have in your house, the number of outlets you have for water in your house. But as to this proposal to put a poll tax on all the young people over twenty-one, but not only young people but all people twenty-one years and over, the poll tax there stated is, I believe, $20. Now I admit under the original Act in the Revised Statutes, the Council has a right to impose a poll tax of $12. But they have neglected to do that. I take it the reason they have not done it is that they discovered it was not at all a very popular taxation, and they probably did not need it. Then also I understand, or at least I believe, that they thought it would be very difficult to collect fairly, such a tax. It is all very well for the young people who are on the employers list of employees. There they can get it from the employer with the number of people who are earning wages and they can take the $20 off them or attach their wages or what not. But there are a good many people here in St. John's of 21 years of age and over who are not property owners to any great extent for the purpose of this Act and who are working in other places outside of the City limits, outside the City of St. John's altogether. They too would be taxed to the amount of $20. I would like to know how the City proposes to check that.

I oppose this tax on the grounds, Sir, that it is absolutely unnecessary, absolutely unnecessary. We have ample means under this Act to collect the necessary taxation. I was looking up the Act and discovered that sometime in March of every year the council can get together and they can find out how much money they have collected so far or expected to collect from certain taxes. They also make an estimate or budget of what they are going to need in the coming year. The difference they can make up, according to the original Act, by imposing extra tax, City Tax, I believe, called Ground Landlords Taxes, Vacant Land Taxes, and now also what they call the City Taxes. These are methods by which they can have the amount of money necessary.

Now I also understand the amount of money deriving from these taxes is for the payment of all building incurred in connection with the erection of the stadium here in St. John's.

MR. HIGGINS: That is the poll tax.

MR. HOLLETT: One of the taxes, I don't know which of them it is—The poll tax, yes. This stadium, Sir—and I am not talking against the stadium, I have had too much to say about the stadium, perhaps, in time past, when it was absolutely essential and the matter was raised by other people in the first instance. We have a stadium which has been erected in the East End, and while I agree the people of the West End of St. John's and for one mile outside the City limits will undoubtedly enjoy some of the benefits, it seems to me nearly every young person in St. John's who is employed, or a very large percentage of those who are employed, have contributed for over a year now, and possibly two years to the one per cent voluntary tax, or contribution if you like, and that was done through the employers in St. John's. A young man of 21 working with Mr. Smith on Water Street was contributing every month, or every week as the case may be, one per cent of his wages towards the erection of the stadium. On top of that now they are going to put a poll tax of $20 on that individual. In other words where this young man or young woman has been satisfied along to contribute voluntarily one percent of his or her wages for the building of the stadium, you now propose to arbitrarily collect from him or her, if necessary, attach his or her wages in the hands of his employer, in the sum of $20 per year for the erection of this stadium. Now I maintain, Sir, if we in St. John's want a stadium there are other ways to get it. I agree the young people will probably benefit to a great extent by the stadium, and I hope some of the old people, on the other side of the House will enjoy the stadium too. But I maintain they are contributing towards the erection of the stadium.

There is one other point I wish to mention here, Sir. When I myself, am contributing one percent of what I earn, outside what I get from this House, to a stadium fund, as I have been ever since the thing started, and I take it nearly everybody in St. John's has, we were told at that time the stadium was to cost $400,000. It has gone up, I believe, to a million dollars, is that right?

MR. HIGGINS: I don't know—You are talking.

MR. HOLLETT: It will probably go to two million if my honourable friend on my left has anything to do with it. It is not a party measure. If the municipality has not more control over the funds of the City, than the Government over the control of the consolidated revenue then I will say the stadium probably is going to cost two million, and next year they will bring in a Bill to charge our young people not over but under 21 as well not only $20 but $40. There does not seem to be any way that we can instil into the minds of the Government, and shall I say also the minds of the Municipal Council, a little caution with regard to spending or expending of government and municipal funds. The sky is the limit, Sir, and it has been the limit for quite a while. It is all very fine. We know the present Mayor and his councillors have done a very fine job with regard to balancing their budget. There is no doubt about it they have done a good job. But why should they not when they have a means under this very Act we are now discussing, a means to collect under the City Taxes, under the Ground Landlords Taxes and Vacant Land Taxes and other taxes, any difference to be made up between their expenditure and their income? It is there in the Act, I read it only today, since my lunch. Now they don't want to take advantage of that. They are afraid they might hurt a few of the St. John's merchants, I suppose, or a few of the people who have a lot of property, like my honourable friend on the opposite side. I won't mention names, but some on the opposite side have a lot of property.

MR. HIGGINS: And outside the City limits.

MR. HOLLETT: Yes, and that brings something else to my mind. They are going to tax people too outside the City limits. Now you can do that under the original Act and I am not going to show my ignorance by saying it is wrong. But one thing I say is wrong; if you are going to tax John Jones outside the City limits, one mile or five miles, I don't see any reason, why he is not eligible to stand for mayor. Why not? He is 21 years of age, a British subject, a Canadian citizen and a Newfoundlander and he is taxed every day of his life three per cent sales tax and is taxed on his liquor and everything, and now there is a poll tax, and if he happens to have a house or a shack that has a tap for water he will be taxed on that. Why has not that young fellow the same right to stand for mayor as has my learned friend on my left here, who lives within the City limits?

These are the objections I have, Sir, and I oppose very strongly this Bill. If we are to erect a stadium people will still contribute their one per cent until the building is paid for, and it will probably go along over a number of years. But there is no reason why the present generation of St. John's of 21 years of age and over have to pay the stadium's entire bill. Other young people of 21 will come along and they too will contribute the one per cent. There is no reason why we should get the $700,000 to finance the stadium by putting the tax on the present generation of $20 a year. I oppose this certainly.

In view of the fact it is not a party measure I do hope some of my friends on the Government side will see fit to join with me on certain objectionable points in this Act. I won't go into any other points except these now.

MR. FOGWILL: Mr. Speaker, I just want to make one or two observations with regard to this amending Bill. I agree however that we cannot have public services without taxation. There is no doubt about that. But the property owner, I believe, is taxed very highly now, and taxed sufficiently, and the City Council does not provide in many ways what assistance they could provide with the taxation they collect.

With regard to the poll tax, Mr. Speaker, I paid a poll tax quite a long time ago. I think it was in effect one or two years and I paid it, and did have voting rights. If the Council really needs any money which they intend to collect under the poll tax those who pay that tax naturally should have voting rights, and the same rights as any other taxpayer. I agree with that principle. They should not be taxed unless they have a right to vote or be represented by themselves or by someone else.

There is one other point in regard to the amount of poll tax. It says a tax not exceeding $20. In other words the Council will probably impose a tax on a sliding scale in respect of the amount of earnings of such persons who come under the tax. I suggest to the House that that is wrong. If there is any poll tax imposed it should be a flat rate for everyone. If it were based on earnings it would be an income tax, and I don't think that is allowed.

There is very little more I have to say, Mr. Speaker, except that I believe the wage bill of the City Council, of those employed runs up to a high figure of somewhere around nine hundred thousand dollars a year. Most of the taxation the City of St. John's collects goes in wages. I don't know if it is the intention of the Council to impose a tap tax or water tax on the house. If so I do certainly register my disapproval of that tax. I am opposed to it. That is all I have to say on it.

MR. HIGGINS: Mr. Speaker, this is not apparently a non-party issue. With all due respect to the two gentlemen on my right I cannot see any substance in their arguments at all. A lot can be said about the stadium. Criticism has been made on the way the City affairs have been conducted. I can say from personal knowledge that never has the City of St. John's been administered on a more businesslike basis than it had been since the present mayor was responsible for the administration of its affairs. It must be borne in mind when talking about new taxes that with Confederation lots of sources of taxation and revenue were denied to the City. The Municipality lost the right to impose the coal tax which had figured substantially in its budget.

MR. MURRAY: And what others?

MR. HIGGINS: The bank tax, and I could go on, but I don't propose to do so. It is true that the City is indebted to the present Government, and that debt has always been acknowledged, also for assistance rendered in allowing it to collect or impose certain other taxes, a tax on fuel oil and now this poll tax. It is not a new tax, as my honourable colleague from St. John's West has already stated. The poll tax was imposed before. Indeed the only reason for dropping it was the difficulty in collecting it, which made it impractical. But with the new and more efficient methods of collecting, by way of deductions by employers at the source, the difficulty of collecting the poll tax has disappeared.

Now I would point out, Mr. Speaker, that within recent days we filed here the 1953 annual accounts of the St. John's Municipal Council. At the risk of wearying the House I would refer to the breakdown contained therein. The gross revenue for the City for the year 1954 was $2,000,011, 80% of which was made up of taxes, 8% sales of water (that is not sales of water to the City, but to ships coming in etc.) Grants and subsidies from the Provincial Government 2.75%, a total of $55,000; rents and franchises 2.01%, licenses and permits 2.6% and new services 1.45%; income from the Province with respect to the St. John's Housing 1.50% and miscellaneous revenue 0.85% and service charges 0.37%. The expenditure on public works was 44.94% of the total revenue and sanitation and waste removal 12.32%; recreation and community services 5.16%—so that it may be seen that over 60% of the total revenue of the City is devoted to actual business of keeping the streets passable, keeping the parks green, keeping the lights burning in the streets, getting the ashes hauled away, so that they won't clutter up the places, etc. I don't think it can be successfully argued, Mr. Speaker, that the City today is not getting good value for its dollars. Indeed it pains me to think that the Honourable Leader of the Opposition should adopt as narrow-minded a view of what is perhaps the most conservative administration of the City's affairs for a number of years.

To get back to the stadium: The stadium was a project that was not initiated by the present City Council. It was actually, I believe, the brain-child of an organization, of which certain members of the House, I believe, are members, known as the "Lions Club." It was too big for them and the project fell into a state of apathy. Then another organization was formed, which took over the project. They did approach the City Council at one time, when something like one hundred thousand dollars was needed to complete the project. The Council in its wisdom decided the City should not be denied the benefit of a stadium, and agreed to take over the matter of financing it. It was only subsequent to the City's commitments for financing the thing that it was found the original estimates of the original promoters were very much in error. So when the Honourable Leader of the Opposition refers to the callous disregard of the City Fathers in the spending of the City's money he is again basing his argument on a false premises.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, may I rise to a point of order. I don't remember saying anything about any callous disregard of money. I shall have to ask the honourable member on my left to retract that.

MR. HIGGINS: I withdraw the words certainly. But the meaning to be had from the words was that the rights of the citizens certainly had been treated with not quite the amount of deference he apparently felt should be paid to them.

MR. HOLLETT: Quite right.

MR. HIGGINS: And that there was a lack of concern about the expenditure of the tax dollars. That, I say, Mr. Speaker, is fallacious reasoning, and nothing would be further from the truth. If the honourable gentleman only knew the number of meetings the mayor and Council and permanent officials of the Council had over the business of the stadium there would be no question today as to the Council's action in the matter.

However, to get back to the poll tax: The poll tax has always been leviable by the Council. The purpose in this particular Bill is to see that the Council, which is raising and has been given permission to raise a loan of some seven hundred thousand dollars, conditionally upon applying the proceeds of the poll tax, for as long a period as is deemed necessary, directly to seeing that the debt is paid.

The other point, with respect to water taps, is not of any great importance. The power has already been there, as was mentioned in respect to another matter this morning. There are various ways in which a water tax can be collected. I think it is a matter in which the House can have sufficient confidence in the people administering the affairs of St. John's to see they will apply the least painful methods of extracting the tax dollars. But it is a fact, Mr. Speaker, the City's tax field has been considerably restricted, and it has now to exploit to the fullest every legitimate tax field left open to it. It is, I think, quite apparent, as the Honourable the Attorney General says, that the mere fact that a man has a poll tax to pay does not give him a sufficient stake in the City of St. John's to entitle him to aspire to the office, say, of Mayor. It is simply a matter of common sense. Indeed it is only with the new House of Assembly Election Act that this House has seen fit to remove the restrictions on the qualifications of candidates. The City of St. John's sees no reason at this time to ask that any similar change be made. I think we were entitled—the City is entitled—to say who these people are who administer their affairs. They are not going to wrongfully bar any legitimate candidate. But simply because a man pays five dollars in any one year where he happens to be working that makes him a taxpayer or he might pay $20 in any one year, but that is not regarded as being a regular tax, because it is only levied during the time the person is working, whereas the person who has a stake in the community, who has his property, has to pay his taxes and is what is generally recognized as a taxpayer—for these reasons, Mr. Speaker, I have much pleasure in supporting this Bill.

MR. COURAGE: Mr. Speaker, I probably won't have any opportunity of discussing this Bill in Committee, and I must say a word now.
We have a rather unusual and somewhat amusing situation here when honourable members on the other side of the House disagree with their own colleagues. I must say, however, there are things in this Bill which are not palatable to me. On the other hand, after hearing the long and lucid explanation just given by the honourable and learned member for St. John's East, I must say that I have to take the things that he said as being the point of view of an expert.

This Bill is not a Government measure. It did not come in from any Government department, but it was passed along to us by the City Council. It is an enabling Act and I take it that the mayor and the city councillors have given that matter great deal of thought and attention. I take it also that if it were not necessary they would not have asked us to give them the right to impose these taxes.

The honourable member who has just spoken has told us that the City Council has held a great many meetings and the principal topic of conservation was this Bill. Before we turn this Bill down or consider voting against it, we will have to remember these things. The City Council is in a position, certainly more than I or any other member in this House, to know what they want. The honourable and learned member for St. John's East who has just spoken has given an opinion which we are all inclined to treat with a great deal of respect.

MR. JANES: Mr. Speaker, I don't know where I stand, Sir, on this thing. I am not sufficiently conversant with the administration of the City here to pass an opinion. Actually, however, there are a couple of observations I would make. We all agree in this House as every citizen in St. John's agrees, that we need a stadium in the City. We all know that the stadium has to be paid for. We know, too, that the people should pay for it, or the citizens of St. John's, at least, principally the City of St. John's. If there is so, there is only one way to pay for it, provided there are no further economies that can be made in the administration of the City; and that is by imposing further taxes. I think the impression has been given somehow or other that the people who pay the poll tax will be the people paying for the stadium. I think that is wrong, because although this poll tax might be imposed and will be imposed upon a citizen living here in the City, he has enjoyed all the facilities of the City and he is not himself paying any taxes directly to the City. These are the people who pay the poll tax. The fact that the amount which is collected in the poll tax will be set aside to amortize the cost of the stadium does not mean these people who are paying that poll tax are paying for the cost of the stadium. The whole of the citizens of St. John's are paying for the cost of the stadium, and the poll tax is another tax to bring in revenue to the City. The price of amortizing the cost of the stadium is an expense upon the City. I don't know if I have made that clear or not. What I am saying is clear, but I am saying it because I favour a stadium and know the stadium has to be paid for, and the poll tax is not an increase in taxes upon people who already pay but a tax upon people who are enjoying the facilities of the City while not paying taxes.

As far as the water tax is concerned: I am not sure where the best method of collection is, a tax upon taps or whether we should have meters. It is probably not material and probably not important. I don't know enough about it—But I will say, Sir, this is a Bill which imposes taxes upon the citizens of St. John's. One of the conditions of taxation is that taxes should be collected equably and easily. The people must have the ability to pay taxes. And, Sir, I have the feeling that we are reaching here in this Province of Newfoundland and probably in the whole Dominion of Canada, that the people's ability to pay more taxes than they are now paying, is probably reaching the saturation point, and whether the taxation imposed upon the municipal level and provincial level or federal level is probably immaterial.

Anyway I am going to support this measure. I have to say now, like I said before, I have come to feel that our ability to pay very much more taxes than we are already is becoming limited.

MR. HEFFERTON: Mr. Speaker, in closing I want to make one or two comments. Perhaps I had better say I am speaking as a citizen of St. John's in talking on this particular measure. May I point out first of all there are two kinds of taxation imposed here, entirely different and both of them have been made provision for under the original St. John's Act. For instance in 226 of the City of St. John's there is enabling power by which water taxes may be levied. And mind you these water taxes may be levied in two, three or four different ways. It does not say here even in the amendment we have before us that the tax is being levied on the number of taps or faucets a person has in his house. The way in which the tax is to be levied is still open. May I point out too, Sir, that although at the present time in St. John's people are paying no water taxes, people in the town councils where water and sewerage have been installed, inevitably pay anywhere from two-fifty to five dollars a month in order to pay for the amortization of water and sewerage.

Now when we come to the poll tax, again there is nothing new, as the honourable and learned member for St. John's East has pointed out. There is a provision in the old Act, section 146 under which the poll tax was levied here many, many years ago, and discontinued because it was felt by the Council at the time—I presume if they want to take care of certain things, then they have to levy more taxes. The water tax is particularly levied and aims at paying off a debt of one million dollars which the Council has just incurred for the extension of water in the western part of the City. The poll tax is an endeavour to liquidate the moneys being raised for the construction of the stadium. May I say now that the original group who started work on the creation and erection of the stadium is one of the organized groups who adopted and put into power the pay-as-you-go principle, if you wish, in collecting the 10% and so on. As one of the members of the groups who bought some of the first shares in the stadium company of that time I am particularly interested in trying to see that this building nears its completion and fulfils the part it was destined to fulfil in the sporting life of this community. I know something of the difficulty of continuing to negotiate and pay for the stadium, particularly at the prices today under the system we have adopted and carried out up to now. For these reasons, Sir, I feel the arguments which have been advanced against this particular measure do not carry any particular weight nor substance. When we look at the general good of the object attained in both the extension of the water services for the City and in the erection of a stadium which is going to contribute, I hope, to the health and welfare and recreational facilities of this City, then I have every desire to support this particular Bill.

I move the second reading of the Bill.

MR. SPEAKER: This concludes the debate on second reading, but before I put the question, in view of the fact this type of business is unfamiliar to the House I ought to say a word on procedure. When the House votes on the question it will be either a majority of ayes or nays. If the nays have it, all you have done is deny second reading tomorrow or the next day. If this Bill gets its second reading then the motion is that it be referred to a Committee of the Whole House on tomorrow, which motion may be amended to that it be referred to a Select Committee, or the motion may be allowed to stand, and when the order is called on some future date for the Bill to go into Committee of the Whole House, it might be amended then, letting it go to a Select Committee. Or the motion might be allowed to stand. I merely point that out to show that, I cannot make any comment on a Bill without taking part in debate, but merely to show the matter is not closed and there will be ample opportunity for further debate on another motion.

Motion put—carried.

MR. HOLLETT: Divide.

MR. SPEAKER: Does the House wish a division?

MR. HOLLETT: I withdraw that, Mr. Speaker.

On motion ordered this Bill be referred to a Committee of the Whole House presently:

Mr. Speaker left the chair.

Committee of the Whole on Bill “An Act Further to Amend the City of St. John’s Act.”

Clauses 1 and 2 read and carried.

Clause 3 read:

9. Section 20 of the said Act is amended

(a) by deleting the period at the end of paragraph (c) and substituting therefore a semicolon followed by the word “and”; and

(b) by adding to the section immediately after paragraph (c) as paragraph (d) the following:

(d) is the owner, lessor, lesser, tenant or occupier of property listed in the appraisal books of the City.”

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, it seems to me there is something missing at the end of that clause. I wonder if the Minister would check on that. It seems to have some reference to those liable for poll taxes.

MR. HEFFERTON: No, qualifications of candidates for mayor or councillors.

MR. HOLLETT: I have been told, I believe, that simply because they pay the poll tax does not make them eligible for mayor. I certainly must oppose that. You see a man over 21 is not only paying a poll tax but he is paying every time he puts on a pair of shoes or a shirt or walks out and buys a drink or anything else. He is paying taxes to the country in general, to Canada, to the Province of Newfoundland and to the City in which he lives. If he goes into a restaurant he has to pay a tax on the food, if he is admitted to a picture show he pays a tax; under this amending Act he is as much a taxpayer as a man who has children, in all probability in a good many cases pays more taxes, and why should we deny him the right? I call it a right for anybody over 21 years of age, the right to become mayor of this town. I think it is highly unfair. If you are going to tax a person, especially by a tax like this, then you should give that person who ever he be the right to put his name to be mayor. It certainly should not be necessary for him to have a palatial residence or a big piece of land in St. John's or what not. I think if he is paying taxes at all he has as much right as the other fellow has who has a house. I think it is highly objectionable that you should disqualify any man who is paying taxes from enjoying the privileges of democracy, and in this present age we like to think it is a free world and that John Jones is as good a chap as Bill Smith. But here you are making an exception. You are going to make him pay a poll tax, this year it is $20, last year it was $12, next year it will be $30 and so on. I think it is time for this House to wake up to the fact we have been hijacking. As a matter of fact we have at present here a deputy mayor and in my opinion a deputy mayor has no right to vote in this particular circumstance. He is a man who is a Progressive Conservative member of this House, a very fine fellow, well liked and everything else, but he is here now speaking for a tax in which he is definitely interested as deputy mayor and a member of the Council, and he is going to vote to deprive John Jones and Bill Smith in our West End, for instance, from becoming a mayor. I think we have as good men in the West End to become mayor in the East End, and a lot of these young fellows, good fellows, fine fellows, and they come back from a war perhaps tomorrow and go into the municipal office and pay down $20 taxes, after they have been overseas and fought, and when they come in and put up their $20 and say, now we want our name put down for mayor; and then they are told, we are sorry but we cannot do it. “I think” the whole thing is screwy. I advise the members of the Government to give it some consideration before insisting that a man cannot become mayor simply because he has not got any property inside the City limits. And he can't become a member of the Council?

MR. HIGGINS: No.

MR. HOLLETT: Can’t even become a member of the Council--It is getting worse. Mr. Chairman, I think we ought to be very careful, we are destroying democracy and we are doing something which we ought to be very thoroughly ashamed of, depriving a young man anywhere from 21 years up to God knows what age from becoming a mayor of the City, simply because he is not a private property owner inside the City limits. I feel we ought to think of that carefully, and we ought to oppose that.

MR. HEFFERTON: Only a couple of days ago we wiped out similar qualifications for the House of Assembly. We can’t expect the City of St. John’s to be as progressive as the Government.

MR. HOLLETT: No, I do not.

MR. HIGGINS: The Honourable Leader of the Opposition slashes away at this Act, but he quite forgets that there are very good and sufficient reasons for that qualification being put in the Act. It is a matter of, I think, and fairly reasonable persons will agree, that the proper people to protect the interest of the taxpayers are people who themselves have a stake in the community. Now the time may come when the City of St. John’s will be ready for the same degree as is going to obtain for the House of Assembly, but that day has not yet dawned, Mr. Chairman, I don’t think the House should be a party to rushing along the emancipation of the City of St. John’s when they themselves have shown no great desire for it—I cannot subscribe to the principle that simply because a man pays a tax which can be imposed one year and remitted the next and is not a permanent one—such a temporary tax only the council has the right to impose under certain conditions—it is not a tax voted every year. Next year a majority of the councillors may not want the poll tax and then it is thrown out. Then we have the situation where persons who had to pay the poll tax last year are sitting and presiding over the affairs of the Council without having paid any taxes. The situation is ridiculous.

MR. HOLLETT: It is not ridiculous. That very same man can become Premier of this Country, and sit where the Attorney General is sitting now. He has the right to his vote and the right to become Premier of this Country and yet he cannot become mayor of St. John’s. I think that is ridiculous, it is not an argument at all, and I am surprised—My learned friend on my left should be up in arms and not arguing that this very man from whom $20 is taken for poll tax is not allowed to become Mayor in the Little City of St. John’s. I think that is ridiculous, it is not an argument at all, and I am surprised—My learned friend on my left should be up in arms and not arguing that this very man from whom $20 is taken for poll tax is not allowed to become Mayor of this town or any other town, but he is allowed to become Premier of this Country and become the Leader of the Government, and might even aspire to be the Leader of the Opposition, but certainly he can become Premier. Yet he cannot become mayor of St. John’s. Should we make the office of Mayor so “sacrosanct” that a man has to have property qualifications of thousands of dollars? Surely that is the very thing on which democracy is based. We have the right to vote if we are taxed, and if we are taxed we have the right to aspire to any office which voting creates.

MR. CURTIS: I would like to say, Mr. Chairman, before the vote does carry, although it was due to my negotiations with His Worship the Mayor that we proposed giving the vote to those who pay poll tax, I might say, in fairness to him and I think to the members of the Council that they thought that they were qualified. In other words there was no intention when they drew up the original amending Act to penalize them. It was their intention that these people should vote, although that Act did not so provide, and they understood that it did.

Clause carried.

Clause 4 read and carried.

Clause 6:

6. Section 162 of the said Act is amended by adding to paragraph (g) thereof the following:

“And to apply any such rules, regulations or by-laws within one mile outside the limits of the City as well as within the limits of the City and any existing rules or regulations of the Council so applied shall be deemed to have been validly made and applied.”

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Chairman, in connection with that section. My honourable friend the Leader of the Opposition refers to some people who have developed land, and he suggested that they were the ones who should pay the taxes not the poll tax people as suggested now. I would like to just say I think he was referring to me. There was a wicked look in his eye when he referred to people on this side of the House who had land. I would like to tell him my land, developed by me, is outside the City limits. We developed it. It has cost a lot to build roads through it, to put water through it, and cost a lot to develop it. When the development was completed His Worship the Mayor and the Councillors asked this House to extend the limits of the City to take in that area, and, incidentally, they took those people in who built that property. So I might say they have gotten back anything they put into that a hundredfold, in fact, they put in nothing, so that what they got they got free, and they got an awful lot, and they are getting an awful lot of taxes for very little. It cost them nothing for the water or for the streets. When everything was done the tax collector walked in. I just want to tell that because, I think, he referred to me.

MR. HIGGINS: That was a very good deal.

Carried.

Clause 7 carried.

Clause 8:

8. There is inserted in the said Act as Section 199A thereof the following:

"199A. The Council is empowered to make available any land of the City for the purpose of the erection thereon of a stadium or rink building in the City upon such terms as the Council may deem fit and, with the approval of the Lieutenant-Governor in Council, it is empowered:

(a) to erect, or complete the erection of or join with or assist any company or association in the erection of a stadium or rink building, and to develop and improve land surrounding the said stadium or rink building;

(b) to finance or assist any company or association in the financing of the erection of a stadium or rink building;

(c) to borrow moneys by the issue of bonds or through bank or other loans and to apply such moneys for the purpose of the erection of a stadium or rink building or to advance, loan, or contribute such moneys to any company or association undertaking the erection of such a building or to guarantee any bond issue or loan of any such company or association, and to make such advance or loan upon such terms as to repayment, interest, and security as the Council may deem fit;

(d) to apply, for such period as the Council may deem necessary, the full proceeds of all poll taxes imposed under this Act towards the repayment of any such moneys borrowed by the Council and interest thereon and specifically to charge, for such period as the Council may determine, the proceeds of all such poll taxes with repayment of such borrowed moneys and interest thereon or as security for any guarantee by the Council of any bond issue or loan of any such company or association;

(e) to acquire from any such company or association on such terms and conditions as the Council may deem fit any lands, buildings or assets or any interest therein for the purposes of a stadium or rink building."

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, is there any reason for that 199 in there. I think everything in 199 is in 199 (a).

MR. HEFFERTON: They have power to borrow for a public library.

MR. HOLLETT: That would be the only thing not in this—all the other stuff is there.

MR. CURTIS: If the honourable gentleman keeps on like that we are going to have to make room for another man over here.

Clause 8 carried.

Clauses 9 through 11 carried.

Clause 12 read:

12. Section 257 of the said Act is amended by adding thereto the following:

"Every electric coin-operated music box or juke box $25.00."

MR. HOLLETT: Is that payable to the stadium fund too?

MR. HEFFERTON: That, Sir, I could not answer.

MR. HIGGINS: Just the ordinary revenue of the Municipal Council. It is not specifically earmarked here as that.

Carried.

Clause 13 read:

13.—(1) Subsection (1) of Section 264 is repealed and the following substituted therefor:

"(1) The Council is empowered by resolution of the Council to levy and impose on and collect from every person (other than those expressly exempted from payment under this section) of the age of twenty-one years and upwards who, at any time during the twelve-month period preceding the 31st day of December in any year, resides in the City or within one mile of the limits of the City, and who is gainfully employed in the City or within one mile thereof, an annual Poll Tax not exceeding twenty dollars per annum payable on the first day of June in the year 1954 and in each year thereof in respect of the annual period January 1st to December 31st in each year."

(2) Paragraph (a) of subsection (2) of the said Section 264 is repealed and the following substituted therefor:

"(a) any person who is the owner, lessee, lessee or occupier of property listed in the appraisement books of the City;"

(3) Subsection (3) of the said Section 264 is amended

(a) by substituting the words and figures, "30th day of April in the year 1954" for the words and figures "30th day of June in the year 1952"; and

(b) by substituting the words and figures "December 31st in the year 1953" for the words and figures "May 31st in the year 1952."

MR. CURTIS: I don't like that clause, Mr. Chairman. I think perhaps this section should stand. You got a tax here payable on the first day of June, 1954. Now we are all in arrears. I think perhaps this might be a good time, Mr. Chairman, for the Committee to take a recess for ten minutes, and figure out just what to do with that section.
Clause 13 stand.
Committee recessed for ten minutes.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Order: Section 13 had been allowed to stand. Would the Committee wish to consider that now?

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Chairman, the honourable and learned member for St. John's East was to get in touch with the Council and I think we ought to change this: In the first place I don't like this section "who is gainfully employed in the City or within one mile thereof" I don't mind taxing a man who lives within a mile of the City when he works within the City. But why should we tax a man within one mile of the City when he does not work in the City. That is a bit too tall, and I think we ought to strike out these words—"or within one mile thereof" and limit it to people who live within a mile and work in the City.

The poll tax is payable on the 1st day of June. We don't want to put anybody into arrears. I think we should make the first of June read as the first of July.

Clause as amended carried.

MR. HIGGINS: The next amendment is to (a), 3rd line; 1952 becomes 1954. Then the word June to be deleted and the word July for the word June.

Clause as amended carried.

Clauses 14 through 17 read and carried.

Preamble carried.

On motion the Committee rose and reported having passed the Bill with some amendments. Report received; said amendments read a first time, read a second time and concurred in. Bill ordered read a third time tomorrow.

Honourable the Minister of Finance moves the House into a Committee of Ways and Means.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, in rising to discuss the financial statement as laid before the House by the Minister of Finance I could not help but notice that the Minister received a very favourable press. The newspapers seem to be pleased with his budget. I regret that I am unable to agree with the principles that have been expressed. I see nothing original in it. It follows the pattern of the budget delivered here last year, and it has been delivered over a month later than last year when it was delivered at the end of April. It makes one wonder why it was delayed so long. When I look at the answer which was given to a question asked by my Leader in the early days of this session as to what the current revenue was as at the end of February, I find that the answer was $30,528,000; a little over $30,000,000. When the estimates are brought down and the budget we are told the actual revenue for the year was $36,095,300. In other words, for the busy month of March the revenue amounted to nearly six million dollars, although the average for the previous eleven months had been a little over two and a half million dollars. Now, Mr. Speaker, I can understand what the Minister is going to say; that certain payments fell due and came in very nicely at that particular time. It seems to me, Mr. Speaker, that they did not come due at that time, but were made to fall in with that pattern so that he could show this substantial surplus at the end of the financial year.
HON. G. J. POWER (Minister of Finance): They were in arrears.—Paid in arrears.

MR. BROWNE: Exactly—That is just what I said—They did not come in in time.

Now the minister refers to the financial prosperity under which the country has been living during the past few years. Well I submit that this is a fact; that the country has experienced phenomenal prosperity for more than the last four years. The Minister himself has recorded the increasing revenues of the Government and the increasing earnings of our people since the Americans first came here in 1941, in fact giving us a list of surpluses. We showed a surplus, I think, every year except 1949-50 when this Government first took office. Then he went on to say that the people will pocket $230,000,000 during, I am not sure whether he meant the fiscal year or whether he meant the current calendar year.

MR. POWER: The fiscal year.

MR. BROWNE: Well then this honourable gentleman is a prophet unlike any other prophet that we know of, because when we hear that the Canadian Government has had to bring down its price of wheat and that plants like Ford has had to close its new plant at Oakville and pay off twenty-five hundred men for a period of something like two weeks and when it resumed operations will leave eight hundred and fifty men unemployed; then we have very little justification in assuming that in this country prosperity is going to carry on at the accelerated rate that has existed for some time now. In fact I question the accuracy of the figures and I challenge him to produce the source from which he derived these figures. I have been unable to check on them. But for what I can, I question the one regarding the paper, pulp and wood; and I suggest to him his defense figures of twenty million dollars is about five millions above what it should be; I question his figures for mining; and in regard to the amount which he has down for family allowances it is at least a variation of about six hundred thousand dollars from the figures quoted by the Minister of Finance at Ottawa for this current fiscal year. He estimated expenditure as twelve millions. Now I can understand he puts it down in round figures, and what is six hundred thousand dollars. He might as well put down twelve million as eleven point four million. Then he has the most fantastic statement to make in regard to unemployment insurance, which he estimates at five million dollars. And he says that during the past year he underestimated when he thought the amount expended by the Unemployment Insurance Commission would be a million when actually they had the figure of four million three hundred thousand. Then we have this fantastic statement: "Paradoxical as it may seem, these are encouraging figures. They do not indicate great unemployment, but rather a high degree of employment. Very large numbers of men obtained enough seasonal employment in the summer months to qualify themselves for unemployment insurance in the winter and early spring. If the figure had been much lower it would have meant large numbers of men remaining idle throughout most of the busy season of the year. My forecast shows that I expect an even greater number of men obtaining employment of an insurable character this year, with the certainty of drawing unemployment payments resulting from this seasonal employ-
Now, Mr. Speaker, I am sure that is the most fantastic statement ever made in this House. More people are to be employed, therefore more people will draw the unemployment insurance benefits.

M.R. POWER: A reasonable explanation.

M.R. BROWNE: My honourable friend the Minister of Finance seems very unsettled when he refers to that. But it seems to me a Minister of Finance looking to prosperity derived from the payment of unemployment insurance is not placing his estimates on a sound basis.

The Honourable Minister then went on to deal with the policy of development which he stated the Government had carried on since it came into office in 1949. It had not been merely an economic development, he said, although it included industrial development, and not merely an agricultural development although it included agriculture. Well I will agree that it included the industrialization programme, but I would like to see where the agricultural programme is to be found. It is certainly not anything the Government has done during the past five years. If, to mention in the Speech from the Throne in 1953, that a Commission is to be appointed to investigate the problem of agriculture, and to appoint it a year afterwards, and wait another year before it is going to report, if that is an agricultural programme then it is certainly one which is unique to this Government, and nobody else would be bragging about it.

The Government's industrial programme started out with socialist enterprises and the Government got afraid, and it was a good thing for the country it did get afraid, it was getting too far involved in socialistic enterprises. The cement plant, the gypsum plant and the birch plant were unsound from the start, and the events of recent weeks have tended to show that the Government has lost considerable money by the investment and suffered considerable losses by going into this sort of thing.

The Honourable Minister then referred to the economic survey, the greatest economic survey any Government ever made.

M.R. POWER: So it was.

M.R. BROWNE: The IBEC Survey! May I remind the Honourable Minister that the IBEC Survey cost the country somewhere, I believe, in the vicinity of a quarter of a million dollars. What did that benefit the country? If it is to the advantage of the country to be told it can't do something, it is that much benefit. A waterpower survey which cost, I believe, six hundred thousand dollars; if it is to the benefit of the country to know we have water-power on the southwest coast then that is valuable. But I think everybody knew it before, and I don't see that there is anything new about it.

M.R. POWER: Did they know how much horsepower was there?

M.R. BROWNE: I don't think it should take six hundred thousand dollars to find out.

M.R. POWER: That was not only on the southwest coast.

M.R. BROWNE: I don't think, Mr. Speaker, it was necessary for this Government to do that. The Federal Government promised to do that very thing, and if asked they would have done it and supplied the information.
MR. POWER: You did not get them to do it, and you were up there.

MR. BROWNE: The honourable gentleman gives me credit for too much influence with the Federal Government. I was only one of forty Conservative members in opposition, with a majority on the other side of something like 120 members, and my voice was very weak indeed in the halls of the House of Commons, shouting for Newfoundland, as I did on many occasions. But I am sorry to say I was not listened to with the attention which I think my remarks deserved. But here was a Term of Union, signed by the Premier and by the Prime Minister; saying that they would undertake an economic survey. Why was not that done? Why did not this Government see to it that the Federal Government fulfilled all the promises that it had made in the Terms of Union? That was not the only one—Why did not the Government see right along since 1949 that this Government got the benefit of all the things they could have gotten, the benefits to be derived out of joining up with Canada?

MR. MURRAY: Where are these benefits? We did not think there were any benefits.

MR. BROWNE: Now I am not going to go into the details of that question, which my honourable and learned friend and the Premier himself would like me to do. We have taken Confederation as a fact since 1949, and are now working for the benefit of Newfoundland—and the Federal Government has facilities and advantages which we can get if we want them. And I say the Provincial Government failed in respect to economic surveys and in regard to other things, especially in the department presided over by my honourable friend, the Minister of Labour. They are getting benefits now, but I say they could have gotten them right from the beginning of the thing.

My honourable friend, the Minister of Finance, goes on to deal with NALCO, which was formed to promote prosperity and conduct a mineral survey. Other provinces have found it more advisable to leave mineral surveys to the private prospector. It is only today, I think, I read, or yesterday, that in the area north of Lake Ontario, prospectors were flocking by the thousands into an area which they believed there was iron ore to be found. The same thing happened again in New Brunswick with the discovery of ore which was made in the neighbourhood of Bathurst. Thousands of prospectors flocked there. The same thing has happened in other parts of Canada when a discovery of uranium was made. This NALCO was formed, and the chief thing, I think, which it did was to interest the Javelin Foundries, who have taken the best slices of what they recognized to be the assets controlled by the Government. It is still running as NALCO. The manager, of course, is under arrest. His salary of $30,000—I don't know whether anyone receives it at the present time—

MR. POWER: He has not been general manager for some months.

MR. BROWNE: He was general manager, I take it, until he was asked to resign because he set up an office. Was it not a terrible thing for the general manager of NALCO to set up an office in the City of Montreal? What was he doing in the City of Montreal with an office? Did he have an office in a private home to conduct this great NALCO, Newfoundland Labrador Corporation, from a private home? It seems extraordinary to me that he should have been dismissed for having an office.

Then my honourable friend referred to the establishment of BRINCO, which he said was the brainchild of the Premier, and had been conceived by Rothschild.

MR. POWER: No, I did not say it.

MR. BROWNE: Well there was some mix-up between Rothschild and the Premier. I think it was sired by the Rothschild out of the Premier or something like that. Anyhow the public was very interested to learn that BRINCO, this corporation, was going to make a survey of the Hamilton River. Now I think the whole world, and certainly all interested concerns know that there is a tremendous water power development awaiting somebody on the Hamilton River. The question is to what is it going to be harnessed? There are undoubtedly millions of horsepower, and it seems to me that some industry like a smelting plant or like an aluminum industry such as in Quebec or British Columbia that required a large amount of power would have to be established there. I suggest to the Government and perhaps to BRINCO too that they might consider this aluminum corporation of Canada in putting on the Hamilton River an industry such as they have in British Columbia.

MR. POWER: I know the BRINCO people will be delighted to have the honourable gentleman's advice.

MR. BROWNE: There is a suggestion for what it is worth!

Then my honourable friend went on to talk about the fishery development. I know of no government that speaks so lightly of millions. My honourable friend speaks of that as likely to cost a hundred million. Of course the words were put in his mouth by the Premier, because these were the figures the Premier used. But I wonder if the Minister really seriously sat down and calculated where these hundred millions were going to be spent, in a section of the island which we were told yesterday is so hemmed in with ice it is not safe to predict you could get any more than two months of the year that you can call free of ice.

MR. SPENCER: That is not so.

MR. BROWNE: I know it is not so, but that is what we were told yesterday.

MR. SPENCER: Nor that it will cost a hundred million for that area.

MR. BROWNE: I must thank the Honourable Minister of Public Works for drawing to my attention the one hundred millions. Now in fact I had intended to mention that out of the original three millions voted in the budget now one and a half millions are to go to the firm of Fishery Products Limited, to spend it where they like. They will, of course, spend some of it in that area, but will also have some earmarked for Trepassey and some for Bay de Verde and some for Catalina, etc. We see the beginning of this great fisheries programme, and we are wondering where it is going to end, where it is going to go. We hope, for the sake of the country and all the fishermen who are being encouraged to think that a solution to the fisheries problem has been found, that these plans will be successful.

The honourable gentleman then referred to loans which were made to the companies. Now these have been on a rather high scale for a small country. Newfoundland had available when this Government took office a huge surplus of money comparatively, out of which they could make these loans. But one wonders if it is sound financing to put so much money into things which have always been recognized as speculative. Everyone knows that the fisheries, whether it is fresh or whether it is frozen or whether it is salt, heavy salted or light salted, has been a speculative venture. The Premier himself has stated that it has a fifty-fifty chance of success. Well the Government have done it, and if it is not a success they know who is going to get the blame; and they have taken that chance.

Now the Minister has told us that his revenue is going to be 39.2 million dollars, and his expenditure 35.5 million dollars. We have a population of 380,000 people, which means our expenditure on current account for the coming year is going to be $90 a head. Yet near us is another province, an old province, and its expenditure for 1954-55 is going to be 44.6 or $80 a head for a population of 660,000 people—Nova Scotia. They have a public debt of one hundred million dollars. Here we are with a public debt of not much more this year than twenty-five millions, and our expenditure is $20 a head more than Nova Scotia's on current account. My honourable friend the Minister of Public Works brought in a budget for his department that included the expenditure on roads of five million dollars. Last year he brought in a budget for the expenditure of two and a half million dollars. Yet in an answer given to me I found out of two and a half million only $243,000 had been spent. Now if the Minister is going to spend in the same proportion this year as last year there is going to be very little of the Trans-Canada Highway done this year, because it only means that about six or seven hundred dollars of road work will be done. Let us believe that the Minister is going to put more energy and more drive into the building of that road than he showed during the past year.

Now my honourable friend, the Minister of Finance, dealt with the creation of fifteen entirely new industries. I must thank him for dealing with those because we had such little information about them. It was nice to know what he had to say, although unfortunately the Premier did not agree with him. He told us that three of them were in full running order, working full time on full production—of the fifteen new plants, three are in full production. I wonder which one he was referring to because the Premier came along next day with a correction and said only one was in full production. Now I wonder does the Minister know very much about these plants. Well I hope to enlighten him a little about one of them before I finish this address.

The Government started its economic development programme in 1950 with high hopes and a surplus of forty-two million dollars. The available surplus is gone and even the high hopes are no longer high.

The Minister of Fisheries is starting his fisheries programme with high hopes and a loan of twelve millions, out of which three millions at least will be assigned to him. I wonder where he will be in regard to that in four years.

The greatest asset of the Liberal Party since 1949 has been the unfailing optimism of the Premier. But what is the greatest asset of the Liberal Party may well prove to be the greatest liability of the country.

Now, Sir, it seems to me, from following these new industries since they were first advocated, as well as I could, they were very hastily conceived. I think I know the mentality of the Premier. The Premier is anxious that some day a monument will be erected to him for the tremendous work that he has done for Newfoundland. And I have no doubt that he stays day and night at his desk working for the benefit of Newfoundland. The only thing about it that seems to me wrong is that he goes the wrong way about it. I think he went into this economic development programme very rashly. I don’t think it was the part of the Government in 1950 to start a cement plant nor a birch nor a gypsum plant. That was the part of private industry. It was the part of the Government to get information and give as much assistance to private capital as possible and help them to get started in industries. The second phase of industrial development was very much better than the first one, as I propose to show. Now we have in this community a very distinguished gentleman and Honourable Senator who has given, I think, more thought to the financial and economic future of Newfoundland than anybody else in the country, and I don’t except the Premier—I mean Senator Pratt.

Senator Pratt was the inspiring voice and soul behind the formation of the Newfoundland Industrial Development Board. He is a big merchant. He is interested in the fisheries, and he is interested in the economic development of Newfoundland. I think he has a broad sense of proportion. He has, through the years, presided over the destiny of the Newfoundland Industrial Development Board, until it went off the map. During that time I believe he acquired a great deal of valuable statistics. He engaged the best assistance that he could to advise his Board upon the possibilities of establishing industries in this country. He left on record his experiences in his story of the Newfoundland Industrial Development Board, that I can recommend very heartily to every member of this House to read. Probably most of them have read it. I have found it very interesting. I am going to quote two sentences from that book at the present time: In his report he said: “Industrial Development of a proportion commensurate with our need can only be by a long range, flexible programme. Such a programme must be evolved by careful and painstaking study of our resources and facilities.” And again I quote: “It is a fact that the trend is to place a burden of research directly on government and public institutions and less responsibility is being directly taken by industry in this respect.”

So it follows it is the duty of the Government to make available to people who have capital to invest the necessary information that would help them build sound industries. It seems to me that it was the chief duty of the Government, if it was not going to carry on with the Development Board, that it should have something to take its place, and it should be the one to take the lead now in establishing some kind of organization similar to the Industrial Development Board to consider the problems that now exist as a result of the creation of these new industries. The Premier was a great admirer of the man who was responsible for most of them. But the establishment of an industry is only the beginning. The problem is not then solved, it is only the beginning. Unfortunately, the thing looks to me either as if the people who came out here and set up these twelve new plants about which we heard yesterday were deceived into coming here with rosy promises of the prospects or that conditions have changed in some fashion to make these chances of success less sure than when they were conceived, when those people were invited here. Whatever the explanation, there can be no doubt that some of them are now in great difficulty. Many millions of dollars belonging to the people of Newfoundland have been invested in these plants, and unless we are going to accept the risk of losing most of the money it is imperative and vitally necessary that the Government should do as I have suggested and establish some kind of advisory board where they will get assistance on the economic and financial market problems involved in the formation of these industries.

Now, Sir, we have in this community, as I have stated before, a class of men who are not represented in this House. We have none of them in this House. But I think men like Senator Pratt have experience and knowledge that is beyond the capacity of most members of this House, and it seems to me therefore that it is helpful and necessary that as soon as possible a board of that kind of assistance should be organized, and they should be consulted in regard to the future of these industries. I know that, in spite of all the abuse that has been heaped upon them repeatedly, in spite of the appeal I made here the other day, which I know was a reasonable one, it might be very difficult to get any man to leave his own business to give his time to advise the Government, which has been abusing them. But I would suggest to the Premier to show that they possess the humanity of which he boasted the other day and go to these people and ask them to help. As far as I am concerned, and I am sure all of us, and as the Minister of Finance has said, all the people of Newfoundland, now their money is into this, want to see the industries flourish in Newfoundland—Any Newfoundlander would be a fool to think otherwise. I am speaking especially of those twelve industries to which I referred. There they are now; we got to make the best of it, and therefore as much as can be done to help them should be done.

The Government has lost the services of the man who conceived them and one begins to wonder if he was as able a man as he was represented to us to be. Perhaps the Premier was too naive, and many people give him credit for being naive, and that if the honourable gentleman or rather the gentleman who now has to stand trial on charges of wrong-doing had been as brilliant, superlatively brilliant as he was represented to be, if he had been the great promoter, great organizer and the great industrial planner, perhaps he would not have left the other side, and certainly he would not have accepted such a humble position as we know he occupied in the capital at Ottawa. Besides what could be done in Germany under a controlled regime cannot be done in a free nation—it was not feasible here.

The haste with which these industries were formed left most people gasping. I remember the Leader of the Opposition saying at one time on a public platform—The Premier is back now with another (I think he said) suitcase full of new industries.
Well there is no doubt about it, he had them there in the bag, and we have them now. But I think we are entitled to ask if sufficient thought was given to the problems that would arise once these industries were established. Was thought given to their location, to the question of transportation, the question of finding adequate and suitable markets for the sale of their products? The Honourable the Premier, the other day, pointed to that table and said: "See that table. Do you mean to tell me we cannot build a table as good as that in Newfoundland?" Well, has anybody got a cigarette? Would anybody like to tell me we can't make cigarettes like that in Newfoundland? Yes, we made them, but where are the cigarettes we made fifteen years ago—Gone up in smoke. I hope that does not happen to the new industries. The point is this: We can make them, but can we market them at a cost which competes with articles of the same kind or a similar kind made elsewhere? Our market here is very limited. I am sure that all of us were interested to see that flamboyant little advertisement that had been given out in thousands of copies, I imagine, at the Toronto Fair, advertising the Eckhard Mills Limited. I know now that the people in my honourable friend's district of Placentia West are rushing mail orders to Eckhard Mills Limited for the latest in skiing costumes.

MR. POWER: Is that helping these industries?

MR. BROWNE: I am not saying a word against the industries. But I am drawing attention to what everyone has given any thought to it must recognize—These are problems connected with these industries which were not thought of at the beginning when these people who are in charge of them were invited to come out here.

Why were the tanneries built in Carbonear, the shoe factory in Harbour Grace; and the Eckhard Mills at Brigus; the rubber plant at Holyrood and the battery plant at Topsail? Now I can understand the principle of decentralization. It has been preached by many people that it is not a good thing to have all your industries concentrated in one place. But if we figure it, Carbonear is almost at the very end of the North American Continent. Yet we are hoping that the manufacturers at that place by road, by railway and by ship will be able to get into the markets of the big cities on the Mainland. It is a big hope, and we do hope it will be successful. But it almost looks as if when these industries were being established, they were established where they were for political reasons. Is it because the honourable member for Carbonear and the honourable member for Port de Grave and Harbour Main-Bell Island were Liberals that these industries were routed along the route coming along—

MR. MURRAY: How about the one on James Lane?

MR. BROWNE: I will come to that too, as I believe I can. That reminds me, we have the new industry of United Textile and Cotton Mills—But where are the Newfoundland Clothing Factory and the White Clothing Factory? Their doors are closed. Their machines are silent. For several months the machines were silent in the White Clothing Factory. These gentlemen from Germany now are going to take over a portion, or have taken over a portion of it and are running it a couple of days a week. I don't think it is running full time.
But these were factories which flourished here for many years.

It is usual for people when establishing industries to require proximity to tidewater. They have that. Nearness to a large supply of labour, and trained labour if possible—I am not so sure they have that. Cheap electrical power—I don't believe they have that. In most of the places around Conception Bay I don't see how they can ever have it. They are subject to the handicap of competing with industries established in places where these conditions are favourable. Then again, and I have said this before, but will repeat it—Nearness to good markets is always of paramount importance when people invest in industries. Now, the problem to me seems to be this—Many millions, the Minister said seventeen—but I think if we add up the figures given yesterday we would find it is nearer to twenty millions of our money that has been invested in these fifteen industries. Whether we like it or not these industries are our babies, and we must try and help them as much as we can. And these good people from Germany, Austria and Switzerland have come over here and put money of their own into them as well, fifty-fifty, I know some of them, and I believe 40% in some others. It may not be possible to save them all, but they certainly need all our help. For that reason, Mr. Speaker, I was glad to see in the newspaper, I think it was today or yesterday, how a delegation from the Board of Trade with two visiting engineers had visited these plants, and inspected them. Now that bears out the suggestion which I made earlier. All the help and all the advice of experienced businessmen should be available to these new industries. After all they are strangers here, and it cannot be expected that they would have the necessary knowledge that other people in business for many years in this country have. And it is necessary that they should get the benefit of these other people's experiences. I have no doubt that these people have come here possessing a fine technical knowledge. The reputation of the working men in European countries is very, very high. Our people are quick learners and in time would learn from these people the techniques necessary to produce good, high-quality products.

I have another suggestion to make in that line, that is, that at the present moment, or I believe for the past week or so, we have had an exhibit at Toronto, the Industrial Trade Fair. Now I have been to that Trade Fair several times. It is not the exhibition which is held in the summertime. It is principally for business people and all sorts of manufactured articles are there to be shown chiefly to business people and not to the public. There is not a great attendance by the general public. But businessmen go there and see the latest designs. I have no doubt that our exhibit last year and this year has created a great deal of interest. I would suggest that this exhibit of Newfoundland's should next be taken to some of the larger cities in Ontario, like Hamilton, Windsor and Ottawa and then to Montreal and Quebec and perhaps to Halifax and St. John, and then should be taken to St. John's and perhaps Corner Brook. If that is feasible, I would suggest it would be done in order to enlighten the public in those large centres of the products that are now being produced today.

The Premier the other day in answer to a question put forward by the Honourable the Leader of the Opposition explained to us the failure of the Benno Schilde concern to establish a steel mill at Bay Roberts. He said that the Government decided to make an exgratia payment of one hundred and fifty thousand dollars to Benno Schilde who designed the plant for the gypsum mill, on condition that it be spent in this country. They were to put up a steel mill, which they did not put up—a steel mill they never intended—it was not a steel mill, it was a sheet metal plant which they were going to put up. According to the explanation given here the other day it was forgotten for months. When we heard of the steel mill we thought it was a plant that would smelt the ore from Bell Island and convert it into ingots or into steel. I understand now from my colleague here the explanation given the other day was that it was a sheet metal plant.

Why did Dr. Sennewald back out of the Optical factory? Dr. Sennewald we well remember over here, came over here in 1951 ostensibly to give information on behalf of the Progressive Conservative Party about the things that were going on in the promotion of new industries. He had a tale to tell if he had been allowed to tell it. But he was not allowed to tell it. He was kidnapped and his mouth was closed with a promise to supply him with sufficient funds to start an optical factory. A building was found for him through the kindness of our present tourist director, which the Government very obligingly bought. So he never gave any explanation. He was given a hundred and fifty thousand dollars. Now he has given it all back. Why did he give it all back? Did he give up the idea of an optical factory? It seems to me, on the face of it, it might be the soundest scheme of all. Here we are paying $25 and $30 for a pair of eyeglasses which are only a piece of glass and plastic. And we all believe we are being gypped when we buy a pair of glasses. The combines investigating board investigating the combines in the eyeglass manufacturing business discovered a few years ago that the people were being gypped. It does not seem to have made much difference. But there seemed to be a big field in this country, where so many of the people wear glasses—Yet he backed out. Here was a man who over and over again was refused a plant, then he was granted a plant and he turned it down. But I believe that Dr. Sennewald sleeps more soundly at night than any other of the industrialists that have come to this country. He does not have to worry about work or transportation at all. And it seemed to me he was the one who saw the whole affair in its true light and thus he was able to evade the instalment of the new romanticism and economic nonsense that was accepted for economic development policy in government political circles.

MR. MURRAY: Very nice.

MR. BROWNE: On addressing the House on this occasion I wish to register my firm and emphatic protest against the manner in which these estimates were introduced. They were introduced on the 31st of May and rushed through in four days with prolonged sittings, and with due deference, contrary to what I thought were the Rules of the House. We had no time as a party to get together and consider what was involved. And if we did not give proper consideration to these estimates it is because we did not have the time. It is no use for the Premier to say: you can take all the time you like. We could take all the time we liked on any one of the insignificant little Bills that might as well be introduced next year as this year, but when it came to important things like the estimates then no time was going to be allowed. The Government had had these—I would be willing to bet these have been prepared for several months—They could have been introduced weeks ago, and the Government deliberately held them back. There is no date on them to show when they were printed, but I am willing to bet they were printed a long time before they were brought in here. Here we get the two documents together. I suggest in the future the estimates be brought down and considered as soon as they are ready. Then we can see what the government programme is and can discuss it more intelligently in debate on the budget, which may be introduced afterwards.

I see no necessity at all for bringing the two documents in at the same time.

This budget gives evidence, on the face of it, that it was written by a poet; a poet for whom I have considerable admiration as a poet. It took a man of considerable imagination to weave fantasy and fact together to appear all as one material.

I want to return to the question of the industries. I want to speak particularly about one industry. I note from the document tabled yesterday by the Premier that the cement plant was contracted for in August and the birch plant in December of 1950. Was anybody else consulted at that time besides the Director of Economic Development? The Premier, in one of his speeches, stated that wherever he went everybody knew Dr. Valdmanis; the heads of states, the heads of big concerns, everyone; I am beginning to wonder now if it was not to the Premier himself all this respect was being shown as head of the Government of Newfoundland rather than to the other gentleman.

Now, Sir, I want to deal with the question of the birch plant— the birch plant, which according to the Auditor General last year in his report had cost one million seven hundred and eighty-eight thousand six hundred and forty-eight dollars; and which up to that time had received as advances $906,000 and which yesterday, according to the figures brought in here, is to receive another half million dollars. That would be $1,200,000 for the birch plant. And according to the Premier the industry is prostrate right across the North American Continent.

MR. POWER: That is not so.

MR. BROWNE: That was stated.

MR. POWER: But it is picking up now.

MR. BROWNE: That will be good news for us all. I have here the agreement, and I must say it is a very interesting document. I am not sure if any members present know about it. Well I want to give them some information about it. This is a document. I think if I were to ask most of the members on the other side of the House, with whom this agreement was made, they would not be able to give me a correct answer. I doubt if the Minister of Finance could give me a correct answer.

Who was to build or was supposed to build that plant? The Attorney General might be able to tell me. Who was it that was going to operate that plant? I doubt if any of the other members could tell me. I will tell them now. This is an agreement made with Mr. Chester Dawe himself, between the Government and Chester Dawe who is called the operator. The Government had a plan to encourage a birchwood industry and proposed to erect and equip a modern plant for the processing and the manufacturing of birchwood products in Newfoundland, and to encourage production of four saw mills, and not less than twelve small factories for the sawing and preliminary manufacture of birch.

Now in passing I would ask—Where are the four saw mills, and where are the twelve small factories? Perhaps the Minister of Finance could tell me that. And whereas the Government has agreed to lease the said plant when completed to the operator at a rate and for the terms hereinafter appearing, now this agreement witnesseth as follows—The operator, Chester Dawe, will acquire a site for the erection of the factory, will erect the factory, will acquire and install modern machinery in said factory and put it in operation at the expense of the Government—I must say Chester Dawe has done that—

Now there is a provision later on which gives him power to turn over to a joint stock company the right that he has here and the duties he has here, or as this grand document says—The benefits and burdens—I think he has kept the benefits and got new ones and passed over the burdens to Newfoundland Hardwoods Limited.

The second clause in this contract says—The Government will lease the factory to the operator for a period of fifteen years from the date the factory is in readiness for operation at an annual rent of what? How much rent did he get? Could the Minister of Finance answer? One half the net profits of each year's operations plus the depreciation mentioned in sub-clause 2 thereof.

We did not even get any depreciation which I believe must have been very considerable on a plant of that kind. How are you to get the net profit? The net profit shall be computed by deduction from the gross profits each year a payment to the Government equal to the full normal depreciation on the building, plant and equipment allowed by the Taxation Division of the Department of National Revenue. I suppose Mr. Dawe could say we have had no net profit, therefore we did not put in any returns. I wonder did they put in returns? But in any case I believe it is the practice in buildings of that kind to allow five to ten per cent depreciation on the building and from ten to twenty per cent depreciation on the machinery. Well if we took the cost of the building at say, two million dollars, it would amount to a considerable sum which would have to be paid to the Government. But the Government has not had anything in nearly four years now, not a cent has been paid in, only what has been paid out.

The ordinary operating expenses are to be taken out, for instance, maintenance and upkeep of the plant and equipment.

Now the operator under Clause 3 agrees to pay to the Government depreciation, as in Clause 2, Now, why has he to pay that depreciation? I would like someone to answer that. The Minister, when he closes the debate, might tell me why Mr. Dawe has not been compelled to pay the depreciation agreed on. I know what I will be told—conditions not so bad, the industry got so bad in 1952-53, but it is beginning to pick up now—until the election is over.

Now here we come to another part—I am going to read Clause 2—"The operator may assign all benefits and burdens under the lease referred to to a joint stock company, but any dividends, salaries, bonuses or other payment from such company will be deemed to be a payment on account of his share of the profits and shall not be an expense deductible before the division of the profits." In other words the company must make a profit, because before Mr. Dawe would obtain a cent. By the way, may I ask what is the salary paid Mr. Dawe? What was the answer we got when we asked for a statement of expenses—What answer did we get? "It is none of your business—it is a private company. Go in and ask Mr. Dawe, the manager."

Three millions of the people's money went into it, and we are not allowed to ask a question. What a wonderful Government you got—

MR. POWER: Did you ask Mr. Dawe?

MR. BROWNE: No I did not but I have something else to say about Mr. Dawe—you wait—and you ought to be asking Mr. Dawe before this is finished for information and certainly there are other people who ought to be asking Mr. Dawe for information too.

Clause 3—Here is a very important one—"The Government shall not be liable for any operating losses incurred in any year in the operation of the factory during the duration of the lease"—Who has been liable for losses of this concern since it went into operations if not the Government? Who? The Minister of Finance is the watchdog of the treasury. Has he enforced this clause against Mr. Dawe or against the Newfoundland Hardwoods Limited, and if he has not, why has he not done it? Why should we have had to pay, the people of this country, in addition to nearly two million dollars to put up a plant for Mr. Dawe, these expenses and supplying them with working capital year after year, which really means paying deficits on the operation of the factory?

Clause 6—"The Government will from time to time make advances to the operator for the purchase of stock, such advances not to exceed four hundred thousand dollars."

And this is the agreement. Well if there is any other agreement it has not been tabled in this session, and has not been produced for us who have asked for it. I presume, therefore, that is the agreement under which the plant is being operated at the present time.

Mr. Speaker, may I call it six o'clock?

MR. SPEAKER: In ten seconds—It being now six o'clock I will leave the Chair until 8:00 of the clock.

The House then recessed until 8:00 of the clock.

WEDNESDAY, June 9th.

NIGHT SESSION

The House resumed at 8:00 of the clock.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, before the adjournment at six o'clock I was speaking about the Birch Plant and I had given the honourable members a review of the terms of agreement for the construction of the Birch Plant. I think it is necessary for us to consider what are the prospects for the Birch Plant during the next year, the next two or five years. When is it likely to get on its feet? What is the matter with it? Is the defect a defect on the part of the business and the way it is built and the way it was conceived and the way it is being operated or is its failure to turn over a profit and get into the black, as the Premier says, due to circumstances beyond his control? I contend that it is due to the way in which it was built and the way in which it is being operated. Birch plants seem to be decided between the Premier and Mr. Dawe. Mr. Dawe was an experienced lumber man and operated a birch mill before. He built this plant, but as I was stating this afternoon, he did not build it as Chester Dawe. He formed a company which became known as Newfoundland Hardwoods Limited and he assigned to that company all his rights under the agreement of December 1950 and that company then continued with the construction of the plant along the terms that were mentioned and this company today is operating that plant.

In answer to some question which I asked here in this House, I was informed that the company has about twenty-five thousand shares. I do not know what the value is but there is no great rush to buy them I don't imagine, and they are held by the Government and now leased to the Newfoundland Hardwoods Limited because Mr. Dawe either leased it or he gave over the right to lease it to the Newfoundland Hardwoods Limited and they are lessees at the present time. Mr. Dawe runs that plant and seems to have no responsibility at all for its operations. It is Mr. Dawe by another name and it does not matter whether the Government holds twenty-five thousand shares or one share. Mr. Dawe runs the plant and he built it.

The money of the Newfoundland people has gone into the construction of this plant and the money of the Newfoundland people is paying off the bills and keeping it going. If Mr. Dawe owned that plant himself it would have been built in a different way and if it was losing money like it is at the present time and has been it would have been closed down long ago. How much longer can the Government afford to advance the country's money to the Newfoundland Hardwoods Limited and have it going down the drain? How much longer will it be necessary for the Government to keep on priming the pump to keep this industry going? The Government has put a great deal of abuse upon the shoulders of business for lack of enterprise but Mr. Dawe is one of those enterprising young men and what is he doing? What is he doing? A man who has been given nearly two million dollars to play with. Is he learning it into a profit for the Government, is it, say, to take charge of a great industrial programme and put it through?

I think the Government was over-optimistic when it put this operation through. I want to draw to the attention of the House this extraordinary phrase in Clause I of the Agreement, "All at the expense of the Government." What does that mean? In the minds of honourable gentlemen here what does that mean? What prices were to be paid?

As is well known, Mr. Dawe is also managing director of a lumber mill right alongside, Chester Dawe Limited, and he was entitled to put across into the property next door all the lumber and timber that was required and all the material he had in his possession which he could sell to this Newfoundland Hardwoods Limited. What prices did he charge—anybody knows? Does anybody in the House know? Does the Premier know? The Premier should know because he signed so many of the bills, approved them and nobody else could approve.

I have here a memorandum, a slip from the Department of the Auditor General's files. I asked to have the vouchers produced here and I was referred to the Department of Finance. They did not have it, they were in the Department of the Auditor General and I inspected some of them and found it very interesting. Mr. Carter, the Deputy Minister of Natural Resources, the previous Deputy Minister, now a member of the Civil Service Commission, sent a bunch of bills to Mr. Short, Deputy Minister of Economic Development, and he sent them back to Mr. Carter and he said "I am sorry I can't pay them because I have no vouchers for them. You should certify these prices, are they correct and true?" He asked to have the bills certified by someone qualified to do so. That was April 5th, 1951. There is a letter from another Deputy Minister, Mr. Haynes, asking him to certify the bills. On March 21st a letter from Mr. Parsons back to Mr. Haynes—I do not know anything about it, I can't certify them." Who was to know? There are four high officials in three departments and none of them was willing or able to certify the bills for the materials that went into the construction of the Birch Plant. Nobody knows today actually how the money was spent for the construction of the Birch Plant. I am going to substantiate the statement I have made. I am going to tell a story first, a true story. I believe it to be a true story. About three years ago, not quite three years, I was talking to a representative of a manufacturing firm in the city of Montreal who went to Mr. Dawe to sell certain machinery and Mr. Dawe said, "What is in it for me?" and the representative said, "I do not know what you mean, I can give you a ten per cent discount." And he said, "No, that is not enough. I want more than that." And he said, "That is all I can do," and Mr. Dawe rang up someone on the telephone and said, "I want you to buy certain machines and you can sell it to me and we will split the profits. You can sell it to me for ten per cent more than you get it for." Bear in mind there is no one who supervised the cost of these machines, nobody. I know what these articles were and I went to the Department of the Auditor General and I saw the vouchers for them and I have a couple of vouchers here. Here is a copy of the voucher. J. C. Pratt and Co. Ltd. and I believe Mr. Pratt is a brother-in-law of Mr. Dawe. (Reads from voucher) No. 225 (a) 12" wide, semi-portable flat conveyors, broad width, one and a half horse power motors, maximum height twelve feet, minimum seven feet, and forty tons per hour or more. Each machine $1,508.67, total cost $3,017.04. Social Security Tax $90.52, total cost $3,107.86. Approved by J. R. Smallwood. I believe the Premier when he approved these as Minister of Economic Development did not know what he was signing because, if he did according to the statements he has made in this House, he would never have done it and he charged that if we had any complaints to make to make them and he did not care who it was, he would prosecute them.

This arrangement was apparently made around November 19th because it says "Messrs" Newfoundland Hardwoods Limited on account of J. C. Pratt, paid $1,500.00 on account" and I presume the balance was paid afterwards by J. R. Smallwood. I took the trouble to go to the Plant recently and I saw those two conveyors. One of them has not been used since last fall and the end of it projects from a saw mill and anybody can see the word "Jeffrey" on it in black and white letters and the other one is down in the furnace room next to the veneer plant and I do not believe they are expensive as portable conveyors because neither of them seems to have the equipment which portable conveyors carry. I have the catalogue from the company of Jeffrey, "Portable 12" flat belt conveyors. Capacity forty tons or more per hour, length 20 feet, head and foot, height twenty-five feet and minimum 3 ft. 9 ins., one and a half horsepower motor totally enclosed." I do not know what is on the Jeffrey conveyor that is in the saw mill but I believe it is the same type as the one I saw in the furnace room, which was in the furnace room when I went there. There is the number. I had a friend in Montreal and I asked him to find out. He was practically a lumber operator himself and he has this letter from Jeffrey Manufacturing Co. Ltd. dated May 27th, 1954.

Dear Sir,

This is to confirm our telephone conversation requesting that information be given you regarding one of our portable belt conveyors. Type 225 (a) is described on Page 3 of the catalogue.

It comes complete with one and a half horsepower, electric motor, fifty foot cable. This machine comes on three wheels and is priced at $1,180.00, catalogue price of rubber tire machine. I do not believe that is a rubber tire machine. The invoice says, supplied by J. C. Pratt not by the manufacturer at all. So I believe you take $50.00 off for steel wheels, supposing they came with this piece of machinery which I do not believe. The price today is higher than it was in 1951. Mr. Dawe was given ten per cent or was offered ten per cent which makes it ten per cent or a net cost of $966.15. I have a letter from the shipping company as to the cost which is $926.00 per hundred pounds and the weight of the machine is given in the catalogue as forty tons. $1,066.00 spent here in St. John's. The total profit would be $975.00 which, according to my information was to be split between Mr. Dawe and Mr. Pratt. Is there anything extraordinary about this? It depends on how we look at it. Was Mr. Dawe entitled to share any profit with his brother-in-law, Mr. Pratt?

MR. SMALLWOOD: He was not entitled to share the profits with anyone and he was not entitled to make one cent. Would the honourable gentleman furnish me with that data?
MR. BROWNE: Of course. As the Premier says Mr. Dawe was not entitled to any financial profit. This is a simple machine. One is not in use since last fall and if that happened with one machine it could happen to others. There are profits of 85 per cent to 40 per cent on machines. Who is getting these profits? It is a pretty hard position Mr. Dawe was in, to build a plant, see all this money around, one million eight hundred thousand dollars and he had to be Simon Pure not to get a cent for all his services. It is true he hired his office for fifty dollars a month, but there is nothing in this. He sold desks for $50.00 each. It is true, he sold lumber, nails and cement. I do not know what price he was allowed to charge but the Auditor General says he was allowed to charge retail prices. The Government were derelict in their duty when they did not make it definite what Mr. Dawe was to charge for the articles in this plant. They were also derelict not to supervise the articles as they were delivered to the plant to see what the quality was and to compare with those that were ordered. I want to come back to the clause in the contract which says that the Government or its assigns shall not be liable for any loss incurred in any year. There must have been a minute of coercion we know nothing about that relieved Mr. Dawe of this responsibility. That is his responsibility in this contract. That he shall pay the normal depreciation on the building and plants and if we put depreciation at five per cent on two million dollars he should pay the Government one hundred thousand dollars a year on account of depreciation on machinery and the plant. He should pay the net operating loss. The Premier as Minister of Economic Development signs this contract, and approved what was done and sits on the board of the Newfoundland Hardwoods Limited as representative of the country, and we are not told what the losses were. All we know is that in the Auditor General’s report of 1958, nine hundred and six thousand dollars were advanced and guarantees at the bank of $106,000.00 and this year we are asked to advance five hundred thousand dollars. That is almost $1,500,000 which the Government has had to pay which by this agreement Mr. Dawe agreed to pay. The Minister of Economic Development is the person who signed this agreement with Mr. Dawe.

MR. SMALLWOOD: My honourable friend is missing the point: Surely in the nature of things it is better that the House make it than that I make it personally or privately.

MR. BROWNE: I have no objections to who makes it. It will be appreciated, I think, that in examining hundreds of bills, including many thousands of items neither the Premier nor I is competent to pass upon the prices. It only just happens that I know of that business for three years. I was waiting for an opportunity to check on it. These are the results of what I found. There may be some explanation—I don’t know. But there is the information! If the Premier thinks that a Committee of this House should go into it, I certainly would not be the one to make any objections to that. I would welcome some sort of an inquiry. I believe that is the precedent no government should follow—to give a man “carte blanche” to build a building of the price of that one.

Now, sir, I have dealt with the construction of the birch plant. I don’t know anything of the construction of the cement plant nor the gypsum plant—But the whole world knows the Premier has charged that man—I think there has been enough information brought to the public notice to make us realize that these were mad ventures on the part of the Government, and that the Government was not justified in going into the business in such an extensive way. What is going to be the prospect for the country? These three plants have cost the country pretty well twelve million dollars so far, if not more, and none of them is paying any dividends or any interest on that twelve million dollars that has been invested in them. I contend the Government have been extravagant and wasteful in the management of the finances of this country. I think, Mr. Speaker, it is extremely important that the Government should realize that they hold a position of trust, that they are in charge of public money and not their own money. It is all right for the Premier to be gambling with his own money, and to do what he likes with it, but when in charge of money belonging to the people, there are factors coming in which make it absolutely necessary to take the greatest care. It is not sufficient that he should do with it as he would do with his own. Yet these things, these schemes—all it means is that the country has spent the surplus which has been saved by the Commission of Government between 1941 and 1949, and they have gone into these ventures from which there has been no return.

Now, of course, it will be answered—But there are many people employed there. It is true that there are many people employed in these industries. But I think that that is not the criterion. The criterion is, how long will they be employed? If the thing is not sound then it is likely to go to the wall and become a failure, and the capital cost will be lost.

This year in the budget the Minister of Finance has brought in very little new taxation, but he has brought in some, without telling us—I don't think he did—how much he realized from the Cancer Tax. I think it was about a quarter of a million. We were not given very much information as to how it was spent. He has stated that he expects to get a half a million from that source this year.

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, he has not stated any such thing—The honourable gentleman is quite wrong.

MR. BROWNE: Let the honourable gentleman speak for himself.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I remember vividly, as everyone else does, he did not.

MR. BROWNE: Five hundred thousand dollars.

MR. SMALLWOOD: There is no such figure available. It is not there to get.

MR. BROWNE: I will check—Five hundred thousand dollars—I have seen it in print.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is not in the budget speech.

MR. BROWNE: Cancer Control Tax 1953-54, $250,000—1954-55, $500,000. That is in the estimates.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is not in the budget speech.

MR. BROWNE: Well, these are his figures in any case—I feel sure he said it. And when I saw it in the newspaper I said; that is what I thought he said. Perhaps he did not. I am quite prepared to be corrected on that point.
Now in regard to gasoline tax he puts a cent on a gallon of gasoline, from which he expects to get $170,000. He is budgeting for a surplus again this year. The Honourable Minister of Finance thinks it is virtuous to budget for a surplus. But what does it mean? It means he is taking more money from the people than he needs for carrying on the affairs of the country.

MR. POWER: Do you think I should budget for a deficit?

MR. BROWNE: But not for a large surplus. I think it is unsound financing to budget for a large surplus. If fortunately the budget turns out to be larger than expected there is some excuse for a Minister. But to deliberately put on extra taxation when there is no need, seems to me to be not only unnecessary but was described by a member of this House some years ago as being immoral.

Now, Sir, in view of the fact that this Government has not shown due regard for economy in the operating of these government plants; and insofar as the Government has seen fit to disclose the fact it is going to have a surplus on its current account, and has seen fit to impose higher taxation, I believe the Government is overcharging the people and in that way is putting up the cost of business and making business harder to operate.

I beg to move, seconded by the honourable member for St. John's East, that all the words after the word "that" be struck from the motion, and the following words substituted—"Therefore this House regrets the Government has failed to reduce taxation which now rests heavily upon all sections of the population."

Motion put by Mr. Speaker.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, in rising to support that motion it is not my intention to take up too much time of this Honourable House, because the motion has been so ably introduced by my honourable and learned friend on my right that I do not think it will be necessary for me to say very much.

We do deplore, I think the whole of the people of Newfoundland deplore, and I think the Government deplores, the fact that they have not been able or have not seen fit to reduce taxation upon our people, who in many many instances are in very poor positions to pay increased taxation.

I believe that shortly after we went into Union with Canada the sales tax at that end was increased from 8% to 10%. That was an increase of 25% on sales tax, which immediately, of course, reflected upon the economy of our people, upon their expenditures, upon everything they bought practically. The present Government imposed a taxation of 50% upon motor car licenses, and later they brought in the Social Security. Taxation of 9% on practically everything except food, and later then they increased that tax or brought other commodities under that taxation, even food. Last year they raised on that tax alone close to $6,000,000 and this year I believe they hope to raise close to $7,000,000 or around there. In addition to that in this present year they propose to increase the gasoline tax, and so it goes. From having seen fit to reduce taxation they have increased taxation to such an extent that they will take in probably anywhere from seven to ten million dollars more by increased taxation which they themselves have put on since they came into office.

We were of the opinion, sir, that the Liberal Government would endeavour to relieve a large number of our people, particularly those in the fishing centres, of the burden of taxation which there has been so much talk about; these vile customs duties on the fishermen's gear and on everything they used in connection with the fisheries. The whole talk was that it was a vile taxation imposed by a more vile government in those days, who made it impossible for our fishermen to live. Naturally we expected that one of the benefits which would derive from our new association with the Mainland of Canada would be a relaxation on these excessive duties which we were told had been imposed upon the people of this country, particularly upon people who least could afford to pay heavy taxes. Now we find that even our fishermen and our farmers, everybody has to pay on the bit of floor they eat, the garments they wear, taxation equally as great and in many cases greater than they had to pay prior to the association which we now enjoy, I say advisedly, with the whole of the country.

We do deplore the fact that the Government have not seen fit to reduce taxation, but rather that they have seen fit to increase it to the enormous extent that they have. On the face of it, if one could see the reason for such increases in taxation—I believe, if my memory serves me right, since the present Government took over office they have collected over and above the amounts which were needed for current account some eleven or twelve million dollars—I believe that is the figure given us by the Honourable Minister of Finance. Now if that much money had been used for the purpose of assisting the people who were badly in need of assistance, and I refer chiefly to our fishermen—the fishermen and not the fish merchants—I say, if that looked after would have meant that we did not need to put on this extra taxation. I have instances which I hope to relate in connection with my talk on the budget, which will also prove to the Government and to the people that not sufficient care has been taken by the treasury, by the people who looked after the treasury—And I am not blaming any one man in the Government—No one man in the Government can watch over the expenditure of thirty, forty or fifty million dollars and keep everything just so. But I do say that someone is responsible for the ill-expenditure of too much of the public funds, which after all comes out of the pockets of the people, comes out of the pockets of those who go down to the sea in ships, go down into the mines to dig out the ore and who chop down the trees and do all sorts of things in connection with the economy of this country or any country—the money comes out of the pockets of these people.

The Honourable Minister of Finance has spoken about the earnings which went into our peoples' pockets during the past year, and I believe he arrived at the figure of some two hundred and thirty million dollars.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is for this present year—It is a forecast.

MR. HOLLETT: A forecast for this year is right, thank you! I won't go into that now. But I would point out that a large amount of that money which went into the peoples' pockets during the past year, and I believe he arrived at the figure of some two hundred and thirty million dollars.

Union with Canada did not make us any larger materially or and I think did not make us any larger as far as our earning power was concerned. Certainly, Sir, it made our fishermen's earning power much less because apparently we have now lost considerable of our markets which we did enjoy a fair time. And today we are unable to market our fish in the accustomed markets, and indeed we have experienced, and are experiencing today, some difficulty in marketing some of our fresh fish in various forms. But, we are still a small country with some three hundred and sixty or seventy or eighty thousand people as the case may be. And when you think that some three hundred and seventy or three hundred and eighty thousand people are going to have this Government spending next year thirty-five million dollars on current and on capital account then surely we know that we are spending more than our people can afford. In order to spend that the Government are going to borrow twelve million dollars, which will make an expenditure of three quarters of a million dollars for supervising that twelve million dollar loan an annual event. Nearly a million dollars will have to be taken out of the pockets of our people in order to pay the interest on that loan and the sinking fund on that loan of twelve million dollars and on the ten million dollars borrowed two years ago. Each year the people will have to dig down into their pockets and pull out four hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars on interest payments and three hundred thousand dollars sinking fund which has to be provided. When we think that just a mere five years ago we had altogether in cash and in realizable assets some fifty million dollars or thereabouts, when we realize that forty millions of that is gone, and when we realize that we borrowed ten million dollars and that we will this year have to borrow another twelve million dollars we have no hesitation whatever, Sir, in supporting the motion which has just been made by my honourable and learned friend; and I do hope we shall get some support from the opposite side of the House on that motion.

MR. POWER: Mr. Speaker, I would only like to answer one point the honourable gentleman made— I think he said that our taxation now lies more heavily on the people than the taxes in existence before Confederation. Well now, I think either one of the people who supported the return of Responsible Government right there—I have the customs tariffs for Newfoundland for 1925, and that was in force with minor changes up to 1933. Instead of 3% sales tax on food here is what you have: I will give a few items: On meats 30% on canned meats 50% on biscuits and bread 50%. MR. HOLLETT: That does not mean a thing. MR. POWER: On fruit 70%, on tinned fruits 50% on lard 40%, pickles and preserves 40%. There is an awful lot of difference between that and 3%.

MR. HOLLETT: Look at the end results.

MR. POWER: On fruit 70%, on tinned fruits 50% on lard 40%, pickles and preserves 40%. There is an awful lot of difference between that and 3%.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, look at the end results—and we went on the rocks.

MR. POWER: That does not take into consideration—

MR. HOLLETT: We are on the rocks now.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Some rock—The big Rock Candy Mountains.

MR. HOLLETT: Mostly candy for kids.
MR. SPEAKER: Order. Is the House ready for the question? If no other member intends to speak to the amendment I shall now put the question:

HON. P. J. LEWIS (Minister without Portfolio): Mr. Speaker, with the exception of the honourable and learned member who represents St. John's West I think I am the next senior member of the House. I had the privilege (I believe it was one, still I doubt it) of having occupied a seat in this chamber in the days of Responsible Government. I was here in 1928 and until the curtain was rung down on us in 1932.

During that time I listened to budget speeches delivered by finance ministers, some of which forecast rosy pictures and foretold in somewhat glowing terms of surpluses, but unfortunately they were never realized.

I was here in this House to hear a Finance Minister haul down the blinds on Newfoundland and surrender our people to the hands of a financial receivership. At that time I came to the conclusion that I have never changed then; that Newfoundland as a unit could never survive.

I was not at any time an enthusiastic Confederate, I was one, however, who considered that Confederation might be invaluable to it. I was one of those who supported a movement in this country that was called Economic Union with the United States of America which is today and has been for some years facetiously referred to as the "comic union" movement. I have lived, however, to see the day when one who now occupies the position of Secretary of State in the Government of Canada is responsible for the statement that the late Prime Minister MacKenzie King looked upon the movement of economic union of Newfoundland with the United States as a very serious matter and was one of the great motives that impelled him to make overtures to this province to become part of Canadian confederation. There were others of us who did not claim to be in the same category as MacKenzie King who felt the same way about it. I felt then and I still feel that had Canada not taken advantage of the opportunity that was held out, that other thing might have happened to Newfoundland. However, be that as it may Confederation is now a fact. It is a fact and it is just as well for us to become reconciled to it. What is the position resulting from this fact. It may seem that I am departing somewhat from the amendment or the motion before the Chair, but I am not. I am coming back to the question of taxation and the budget. I did not think I would live to see the day when we could forecast for Newfoundland a financial commitment or expenditure of fifty-three million dollars and that is the position we are faced with today. Fifty-three million dollars expenditure is foreshadowed by the Finance Minister for 1954, notwithstanding the fact that on current account he shows a substantial surplus. My honourable and learned friends on the opposite side have deplored the fact that it is necessary to increase taxation in order to sustain that position. What is the position? The position today is that Newfoundland is part of a Canadian federation and being part of a Canadian federation our people are entitled to comparable services as those existing in that part of North America known as Canada.

What is the position here with regard to our surplus. Take a glance at it and compare them with the position as we see it existing in our neighbouring provinces. What is the position in regard to roads? We are one hundred years behind the times. Our people around the coastline today with the exception of the Avalon Peninsula, and limited sections of the west coast, are existing in the dark ages. They have no roads, they have no electric light facilities. In the neighbouring province of Nova Scotia they have spent, since they became part of the Canadian federation, one hundred and fifty million dollars on road construction and that stands as part of their public debt. In Nova Scotia they have fifteen hundred miles of paved roads and we have two hundred. As for secondary roads there is no comparison.

With regard to the medical position, we have a General Hospital in St. John's, a hospital in Corner Brook and we have half a dozen cottage hospitals, only pretences for hospitals, scattered around the island.

Regarding education facilities what have we got? It is true we are up to our necks so far as the educational vote is concerned but when you consider the type of buildings we have, when you consider the percentage of school buildings in this country that have no such thing as a toilet in them, where do we stand? When we remember that seventy-two per cent of our children have to go to outside houses for ordinary toilet facilities, what is the position? When we realize that hundreds of miles of our coastline are isolated and the only means of communication is that provided by boat, the salt water, what have we to say? The position is, Mr. Speaker, that this Government, and I was not a part of it when it came into existence in 1949, has done great things.

When we consider the road situation today as it was in 1949, this Government has a record of which it is entitled to be proud, insofar as the facilities which it had available, it had shown remarkable results.

The same thing applies to health facilities and I may say, insofar as public welfare is concerned, to the credit of the department particularly and to the Government generally, we have as a result of health improvements, public welfare that is ahead of the Maritime Provinces.

Every sensible man must recognize we are still one hundred years behind the times and if our people are to continue to live in Newfoundland, we must get facilities for them that are, at least, comparable to those that the ordinary residents of North America look upon as commonplace.

This Government has been criticized, with some justification, as to its policy in relation to the establishment of new industries. My honourable and learned friend, the member for St. John's West, has made a little speech here in regard to the budget and in moving this amendment, a speech of which all ordinary and reasonable people must regard as being well-reasoned and in some cases justified, but as regards to the policy of this Government in instituting a new industrial development programme, I, for one, submit with all respect that no other course was open to it. When, in 1949, this province came into Canadian federation it came in as a backward island. It came in without the things to which I have referred and unless something radical was done, radical and unorthodox from the standpoint of financial administration, what would have been the position? There was only one course open or there would be an exodus from Newfoundland as was never seen in the history of the North American continent, an exodus of our people to other places in Canada. What was to keep our people in Newfoundland?

We are told by our honourable and learned friends, with some truth, that the fisheries of this country had reached such a state that they could not provide a reasonable and decent living for those following it as an avocation.

We saw the salt codfishery of this country diminish from the prominent position of being the soundest branch of our industrial economy, we saw it shrink to a mere shadow of its former self. We saw the position in regard to the deep water fishery of which my honourable friend the Leader of the Opposition is very well aware, a branch of industry that for one hundred years had been the backbone of this country, disappear until today we have not one solitary fisherman on the Grand Banks of Newfoundland.

I and my people before me have been the people of the Honourable Leader of the Opposition, with the deep water fishermen of this country. For almost half a century my father sailed and fished on the Grand Banks of Newfoundland and side by side with him sailed Tom Hollett and Will Hollett, men who would lower their flag to no man on the western ocean and whose names were household words from here to the fish ports of Boston and Gloucester. What happened to them? Where are they? They are gone and what would have happened if this Government had not been prepared to take a bold and unorthodox stand with regard to the industries of Newfoundland? I will come back to that.

I sailed out of this port when I was nineteen years of age when we had one hundred and twenty deep water schooners carrying our fish to the four corners of this world, where salt fish could be sold. I was in Barbados in 1919 when we had twenty sailing vessels of Newfoundland all housed in the port of St. John's to bring back molasses from the West Indies, having brought fish to Brazil. Where are they today? What was the position when this Government came into office? We were left with the remnants of a small codfishery, carried on as the deep water fishery. A few shore fishermen operating a codtrap and motor boat from our shores. That is the salt codfishery. We had no fresh fishery and where were we going to get it? To go from salt to fresh we needed capital and where were we going to get it? The people who carried our fish to market in the early days were not advanced enough or interested enough to switch from sail to steam. We lost our carrying trade to Scandinavian countries and today we do not move a quintal of fish in our own boats. Our mercantile people have switched from an economy of fish to canned goods and if the fishery had to be saved it could be done in one way and that was by calling on this surplus we hear so much about to help finance the change-over from shore fishermen and line trawlers to draggers.

MR. HOLLETT: Not by taxes.

MR. LEWIS: I will come to that in a few minutes. We were fortunate at that time to have a nest egg in Ottawa of fifty or forty-five million dollars. We were faced with the alternative of letting it rust and go on from year to year until such time as we found ourselves with nothing left. This Government decided instead of leaving that money in Ottawa, it would take it and take a gamble on those few Newfoundlanders who were progressive and enterprising enough to take a chance on the fishery of the county and to the eternal credit of men like Arthur Monroe and others who were prepared to gamble their own money first, the Government of Newfoundland was prepared to back a note and to back them and the result of the gamble is that today this Province of Newfoundland is geared to a dollar production, a fresh fish production second to none in the North Atlantic. If it is successful and we hope it will be, then the success of the fisheries of Newfoundland is assured. If it is a failure then charitable people at least, and people who are prepared to be just, will say that those who took a chance did it with the best interests of Newfoundland at heart.

It is only right to pay tribute to the enthusiasm and faith which the Premier of this country has in the future of Newfoundland because if his faith is misplaced and if it is unjustified there is no future for us. Let us go to the new industries which represent a drain on the so-called surplus we had at Ottawa. What is the position in relation to these new industries? I heard it said today by my honourable and learned friend that in the set-up of these industries political considerations took the primary places and rather overshadowed economic consideration. But I wonder if my learned and honourable friend is familiar with the economic position as it exists in those areas where these industries are located as some of you on this side of the House are aware. Let me point out to him that in the Conception Bay area, which includes the district, I represent in part, we have no such thing as basic earning power for our people. Our people, and especially and particularly in the District of Harbour Main, are a most independent people from one angle. They are very industrious. They are very independent. But their independence has been the result of their having to leave their homes for almost a century now to seek employment in the United States of America. Every skyscraper in Manhattan has had a Newfoundlander take part in its construction. And possibly we would find that some of the loftiest buildings ever constructed claim heritage in the royal old district of Harbour Main. So it was for many years, our people had available to them Montreal and Sydney and New York but not today. Today our people are not as dependent on outside employment as they were years ago, but the same avenues of employment are not open to them. The truth is they have to change their mode of activity.

MR. HOLLETT: I rise to a point of order. My honourable friend is making an excellent speech but it is not on the motion we are now speaking on.

MR. SPEAKER: This amendment lends itself to a very wide scope. I do not uphold the point of order.

MR. LEWIS: On the question of my honourable friend's objection on a point of order, he moved an amendment against the question of taxation and his reason for doing it, as supported by the Leader of the Opposition, was that the money for the industries was used for other purposes. I want to point out the justification for having used the surplus for which so much reference has been made. What I point out is that we have in Conception Bay a chain of buildings financed out of the surplus my honourable and learned friend makes so much reference to. They have been put there for the purpose of providing a basic economy from which our people can obtain a source of sustenance and employment. I submit that no better use could be made of this surplus.
The birch plant to which reference has been made is tied to the natural resources of this country and while it might have been constructed for less money than the actual cost, the fact remains that today many of our people, particularly in my own district, do obtain work in that birch plant.

The machine plant and the rubber plant which have been constructed in Holyrood and to which more derogatory references have been made in this House, is giving employment to one thousand to fifteen hundred people. It is the first time we had in our area a source of employment where people can go to their homes at the end of the day's work. With reasonable success this should double itself in two years, I hope.

The necessity for increased taxation is evident when we regard the vulnerable position in which we stand in this country. First of all we require a development of our resources and secondly and most important of all we desire and require a base from which our people can obtain a source of livelihood within the four corners of this province. If the last cent in the treasury, in the surplus, is spent for that purpose, it will be spent in a very worthy cause and if, as my learned and honourable friends have said, we have reached the position, Sir, that was Newfoundland, well then we have reached the position, Sir, that was contemplated by the terms of Union when they were formulated in 1949 because under these terms of Union the people who were responsible for formulating them, forecast a position within eight years from the date of Union when it would be necessary for somebody to review the entire financial position as it reflected Newfoundland. Somebody was wise enough to put a clause in which I submit is the saviour of Newfoundland.

We can listen to speeches and make a lot of speeches about our financial position but Newfoundland is in the most fortunate position of any self-government in the western world and the position is this, under Term 29 of the Terms of Union with Canada which is the contract signed between the Provincial and Federal Government, the Federal Government of Canada is on the back of the note. The position is this, that it does not matter what the cost of administration of this province is provided it is reasonable, having regard to the necessities of our people. Newfoundland can never go back to them so long as the Dominion of Canada is back of it and sound. The contract is written into Bills and confirmed by the Federal Government of Canada and ratified by the Imperial Government of Britain, that the cost of administration of this country must be within the capacity of our people to pay. That is something that this House and our people should always be conscious of. If the cost of the public service of this country tomorrow were fifty million dollars and not thirty-two, or thirty-three, or thirty-five or thirty-nine million—I do not know what the figure is—The actual position is this, Mr. Speaker, the difference between the cost of administration of our public services and the ability of our people to pay must be underwritten by the Federal Government; and the incidence of taxation in Newfoundland can never be raised higher than it is in the neighbouring Maritime Provinces. What is more important still; and it has been said by people who pretend to know, and I think said by the Honourable Leader of the Opposition, and I think with a great deal of justification, that we are rapidly reaching the limit of our taxation capacity in Newfoundland. If we are, as the member for Fogo says, and well, I associate myself with him—if we have reached now or are about to reach the limit of taxation capacity in this Province, well we have our yardstick and know where we are. The thing for us to do is to provide our public services as quickly and expeditiously as we can when it does not mean anything to us at all. It means the only thing we have to pay is what we are obliged to pay; what we are capable of paying and nothing more.

Mr. Speaker, for these reasons I submit that the taxation as visualized and reached by the Honourable Minister of Finance should be supported and sustained; and I think he is to be complimented on being able to bring into this House, after five years of Confederation, a budget that is as hopeful and as sound as the one that he has brought in. Sir, I for one oppose most unqualifiedly the amendment proposed by my honourable and learned friend.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I want to occupy perhaps five minutes and perhaps speak to the amendment because I propose to reserve the opportunity to speak to the motion itself. The amendment, as I understand it, is that the Opposition deplors and asks the House to deplore the fact that we have raised taxes in this budget.

MR. COURAGE: Failed to reduce taxes.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Well, failed to reduce taxes—There are one or two facts that are brittle and hard as cut diamonds, that you cannot get away from. One of them is that in the year upon which we have now embarked the total amount of taxation upon the people of Newfoundland proposed in the estimates, proposed in the budget, for this House to vote is eleven million dollars.

MR. FOGWILL: The overall total?

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is the total. I will read out the items.

MR. FOGWILL: What about the Federal?

MR. SMALLWOOD: The honourable gentleman could not have heard what I said—What about the United States? What about Soviet Russia? What about China?

MR. FOGWILL: They don't put taxation on us but the Federal Government of Canada does.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The honourable gentleman is either stupid naturally or pretends to be; one or the other, because I said—That is the total amount of taxes which the estimates and the budget speech impose upon the people in the current year, and the amount which the Government asks this House to appropriate is eleven millions. We are not talking about the taxes by other governments now. I propose to read the amounts:

Gasoline $2,370,000; Social Security Assessment, that is the 3% Sales Tax $6,700,000; Sales Tax on Fire Insurance premiums $170,000; Inland Revenue Stamps $70,000; tax or license on gasoline vendors $8,800; tax on insurance companies $4,600; tax on insurance agents $1,500; License for Saw Mills $40,000; Inland Fisheries and Game Licenses $148,000 (this is for the privilege of catching fish and salmon, shooting game, we can call it a tax); Mining Prospectors Licenses $500; Dog Licenses $3,000; Timber Lease Rentals $31,400; Timber Royalties $40,000; Water Power Rentals
$6,000 (I am stretching it now, if you can really call this a tax) we charge people for the privilege of having water power and timber and tax minerals out of the land; if one is to call that taxation—I am calling it a tax and including it here. Agricultural Grants and Lease Rentals $2,200; Mineral Leases $5,000; Mineral Royalties $495,000 (That is royalties on Bell Island Ore and Buchans ore and the ore in St. Lawrence; a tax on the mineral products that are taken out of the earth and shipped away by the owners. We collect a small tax and that runs to $495,000). Motor Vehicle Licenses $383,000; Drivers Licences $120,000; fees for examination of drivers $8,000 and Food Vendors Licenses $14,000—Total $11,072,800.

Then the question arises—If we are taxing our people in Newfoundland only eleven million where do we get the thirty-nine million we are spending on current account?

MR. HOLLETT: You forgot the Cancer Control Tax there.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, that is left out—Add that to the total and make it eleven and a half million dollars. It is still less than one cent of every dollar we spend on current account, I will come back to that one cent in a moment. Now we are increasing taxes—Before we come to the increase let me deal with this eleven and a half million dollars towards an expenditure of thirty-nine million, which we are making in this current year. Where does the rest of it come from? From the Government of Canada write off twenty and a quarter million dollars.

MR. HOLLETT: Where do they get it?

MR. SMALLWOOD: For the moment never mind that. They don't get it from Newfoundland for the most part—For the most part they don't. I gave the figures here in this very House showing the total amount they took out of Newfoundland and the total amount they paid in. I showed the amount was two to one—They paid into Newfoundland almost two dollars for every one dollar they took out.

MR. FOGWILL: Nonsense!

MR. SMALLWOOD: My honourable friend said that once in the National Convention; and he was ashamed to be seen for two days when I got through dealing with it. He came to me outside and said, you certainly landed me.

MR. FOGWILL: Mr. Speaker, I was not at any time ashamed to be seen for two days; and I sat through every session.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Then you had a hide like a rhinoceros.

MR. SPEAKER: Order.

MR. FOGWILL: Blame him—He started it.

MR. SPEAKER: I am bringing the House to order.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, from the Government of Canada we will receive towards this thirty-nine millions the following amounts—In the Department of Finance $17,900,000; In the Department of Provincial Affairs $17,500; In the Department of Education $19,600; In the Department of the Attorney General $30,000; In the Department of Mines and Resources $45,300; In the Department of Health $966,400; In the Department of Public Welfare $1,127,500; In the Department of Fisheries and Co-operatives $10,000. In the Department of Labour $23,300, making a total from the Government of Canada of $20,235,700. Now that twenty and a quarter million plus the eleven and a half millions is thirty-one and a quarter millions of the thirty-nine millions.

Where does the rest of the thirty-nine millions come from? The rest of it is here in the estimates, scattered through the various departments in fees and other types of income; and the profit on our liquor which is over half the balance.

MR. FOGWILL: That is a tax.

MR. SMALLWOOD: In that case the biggest taxmaker is on Water Street because if a profit on goods sold is a tax on the people—God in Heaven how are they taxed! How are they taxing us on Water Street? 70% to 100% on drygoods, or 70% to 150% on drygoods—That is some tax—the Water Street tax. The friends of the honourable gentlemen opposite—they want more of these Water Street merchants in here in this Chamber—God forbid! God forbid! And the people too forbid more Water Street merchants from coming in here.

Now we come to the one cent, the one cent my honourable friend the Minister of Finance proposes to increase in taxation on this Province of Newfoundland, one cent a gallon additional taxation on gasoline.

MR. FOGWILL: That is 3%.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The honourable gentleman may stand on his head and one cent a gallon is one cent a gallon, and it is a cent a gallon on people who can well afford to pay it.

MR. FOGWILL: They will not admit it is 3%.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Admit one cent? All right it is 3%. One cent a gallon and 2%—Smart—He worked it out himself too, with a pencil and paper and a ready reckoner—3% —It is a cent a gallon and will bring us in $150,000, that is what the budget says. That is what the estimates show—$370,000 is accounted for and then the cent a gallon additional taxation and the normal increase in the number of cars, and therefore the normal increase in consumption of gasoline which has been increasing very rapidly year by year since we came into power and the prosperity we brought with us which enables those thousands upon thousands of people to buy cars and consume millions upon millions of gallons, more gasoline than was ever consumed before. All right, that is a hundred and fifty thousand dollars. Now in addition to that we have a quarter of a million on the Cancer Control Tax. That on the thirty-nine millions is less than a cent per dollar as we are increasing taxation in these two ways, a cent a gallon or 3% on the price—my honourable friend opposite, it does not please him, he insists on my admitting it—So when I admitted it he must have been charmed to have his opinion confirmed by the Premier, he won't be fit to talk to for the next two days—the Premier actually confirmed that his mathematics were correct. Now that is one cent to the dollar increased taxation, and this is what the resolution is about. This is what is giving the Opposition sleepless nights. They can't sleep for worrying about the state of Newfoundland — We are putting another cent a gallon increase on our gasoline tax on the people.

Now this Cancer Control Tax, what is it? I am probably out of order in discussing it. There will be opportunity given the House to debate this increase in taxation. My understanding of parliamentary rules makes me think that it is out of order to discuss a matter which an opportunity will be had for discussing on another occasion, especially if it is an opportunity specifically provided—Perhaps I am out of order—but if I am not out of order in discussing the Cancer Control Tax may I say this: Like the tax of an extra cent on gasoline the five cents you pay when you go to a movie or a bingo game or a ball game and most other forms of entertainment, the five cents you pay extra on your ticket, which in the aggregate from all of us all over Newfoundland in a whole year, with millions upon millions of attendances, in the course of a year, because some people go to the movies say twenty or thirty times a year, and the average person goes to three or four or five events a year and pays five cents each time—approximately fifteen to thirty cents a year is paid and some even pay the tremendous sum of a dollar. You have to go twenty times in a year to the movies or bingo or ball games or something of that order. All of us paying that five cents a time will give the Government a half million dollars—but what for?

MR. HOLLETT: Running expenses on the birch plant.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The honourable gentleman is very clever—it just fits—a half a million dollars—and he can prove it—He can turn up a page in the estimates or he can turn to the guarantee in the Bill and he will find an amount of five hundred thousand dollars for the birch plant—but why bring up the birch plant? There is $125,000 for Andrews Labrador Fisheries Limited. There is $1,600,000 for Bonavista Cold Storage Company, Limited. There is $3,187,000 for Fishery Products Limited. There is $120,000 for Hanning Electric. There is $50,000 for Northeastern Fisheries Limited and there is $100,000 for the St. John's Stadium. They could say this Government are taxing everyone, every little child and their faithful followers would see it is properly reported. Every child and widow has to pay five cents tax. For what? So as to give this Government—this outport Government can give one hundred thousand dollars to the stadium for the sports of St. John's—What a chance they are missing.

MR. HOLLETT: To give Dr. Valdmanis.

MR. SPEAKER: Order.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The honourable gentleman may have a transitory triumph in his reference to Dr. Valdmanis—but I assure him it is very transitory, very transitory, his triumph.

MR. SPEAKER: Order.

MR. SMALLWOOD: There is no percentage in it, no political future for the honourable gentleman in any reference to that gentleman.

MR. HOLLETT: Nor for you either.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Whatever political advantage there is gone for the other side.

MR. SPEAKER: Order, I think I might say at this time that the amendment lends itself to a very wide latitude of discussion, but there are limits, and I think when Dr. Valdmanis gets into this we have reached the limit.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I deeply regret these interruptions.

MR. SPEAKER: I deprecate these interruptions—They tend to generate heat in debate.
MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I personally agree, and could not agree more to Your Honour's reference to impropriety, to say the least, of dragging in at every opportunity now and then, here and there, in this debate and other debates, reference to Dr. Valdmanis. I suggest that Dr. Valdmanis be left where he belongs—in the courts of justice to deal with.

MR. HOLLETT: That would be nice.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It will be done.

MR. SPEAKER: If I might suggest, the Honourable the Premier is speaking.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Now, Mr. Speaker, my honourable colleague from Harbour Main has covered some points I intended to make, and covered them so magnificently that I am reminded of the fact that we hear all too rarely from him. Because if I ever heard a speech containing burning sincerity it was his. There was nothing political about it, nothing at all. It was right out of the man’s heart. I believe it came out of his heart because of his work recently as Chairman of the Commission we have set up to prepare Newfoundland’s case for the Royal Commission.

May I before I sit down develop just one point, and it is in this connection. In a speech in this House during which Mr. Russell resigned and crossed the floor, he delivered a speech, a very stupid speech, because he advocated, in fact he made a motion, a ridiculous motion, that the Government now forthwith call upon the Government of Canada to appoint a Royal Commission, the Royal Commission provided for in the Terms of Union. This was two years after Confederation—it could not wait, in his view—the Royal Commission had to be called for at once. I remember a brilliant reply that came from the Attorney General. Mr. Russell, if he did not feel intellectually cheap after hearing the argument of the Attorney General ought to have felt it, and no doubt he did feel it. He is a very bright man whatever else he is. The Attorney General said that to call now, two years after Confederation—and the honourable and learned member for St. John’s West will see this if his colleagues don’t—He will see it, have no fear of it, he will see it. It was not for nothing that I said; at least we have an Opposition—At least he is a worker, and he is bright—He is always bright.

MR. HOLLETT: That is not your usual stuff.

MR. BROWNE: You called Russell both brilliant and stupid.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I said a stupid speech—but he is a brilliant man—is that inconsistent? Cannot a brilliant man make a stupid speech, especially if he has just done something which he to this moment cannot explain—leave the Government, which is the greatest Government Newfoundland ever had—and go over there—and wonder ever since he did—No wonder the speech he made was stupid—He could not make a brilliant speech having done a stupid thing like that. My honourable friend the Attorney General made a short and devastating reply to Mr. Russell’s arguments—His speech was this; he said that to call now, two years after Confederation, for the appointment of the Royal Commission means that we accept the existing standards and levels of public services in Newfoundland as the criterion, yardstick, whereby the Royal Commission will measure the amount of additional subsidies, if any, to which we are entitled. There is a yardstick. My honourable and learned friend must be aware of that in the terms. There is a yardstick set up. The Royal Commission is to decide, to recommend to the Canadian Government what additional subsidies if any Newfoundland shall get—What for? To enable Newfoundland to do what? To maintain the level and standards of public services reached. When? At the time the review is made. Now if that review had been made three years ago, we would have been stuck with the level and standards of our public services that existed at that time.

MR. BROWNE: May I ask a question? I pointed out today, you were not here, that our expenditure in the coming year is $20 per head more than that of Nova Scotia.

MR. MURRAY: It should be $100.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The honourable gentleman may or may not be correct, if he is it may or may not be a point—

MR. LEWIS: The yardstick has nothing to do with expenditure. The only yardstick is in relation to taxation.

MR. POWER: May I say a word, Mr. Speaker? That figure does not reveal a true picture, because a great many things that we pay for here out of our current revenue is paid by municipal government in Nova Scotia—One main item is protection from fire, for which we pay three quarters of a million here in St. John's.

MR. SMALLWOOD: But my Honourable and learned friend from St. John's West knew that when he spoke just as well then as he does now. He was well aware this afternoon as he was yesterday afternoon, and he is at this moment, well aware of this fact, that what the Government of Nova Scotia spends must have added to it what the municipalities of Nova Scotia spend, and the total of the two, whether they be urban, rural or municipal together with the expenditure of the Government of the province, what these two together make up then is to be compared with what the Government of Newfoundland and such few municipalities and town councils as we have spend between them. That is why I said I did not want to go into that. I said my honourable friend may or may not be correct, and if correct may or may not have a point. I think that is what my honourable colleague had in mind—But I do not intend to go into that.

What we have to compare is not at all the amount of taxation levied on the people of Nova Scotia with the amount levied on the people of Newfoundland, that is in the comparison—It is the burdensomeness of taxation—That is what has to be compared—the burdensomeness of taxation in Newfoundland with the burdensomeness of taxation in the three Maritime Provinces. And that is not all; The burdensomeness in each case must be related to the capacity to pay.

If Mr. Russell's motion of three years ago had been adopted the Royal Commission would have been appointed. Because all we would have to do would be for the Government of Newfoundland to ask to have it appointed by the Government of Canada, and the Royal Commission would have come here to determine what additional subsidies, if any, the Government of Canada should pay to the Newfoundland Government. What for?
To enable the Government of Newfoundland to maintain the level and standard of public services that we had succeeded in reaching only two years after Confederation. Now, we have had another three years, and in these last three years we have raised the level and standards very much above what they were three years ago. But we still don't want the Royal Commission here. We don't want them this year. We want the Royal Commission to come to Newfoundland only at the last moment within the constitutional limits, within which we can operate to get our level and standards raised. Because these are the criteria; these are the yardsticks by which the Royal Commission are ordered, are instructed in the Terms of Union, to measure the amount of additional subsidies we ought to get each year from the Government of Canada.

Now one of the levels of public services is the control of cancer. We have decided that as this is one of the most deadly diseases of all humanity in the world today, we, this Government, ought as a government, in duty bound, to do all we can in the matter of cancer control, so we imposed a tax. We could have increased the three per cent sales tax, but we did not do that. We could have made it four or five per cent. It is five per cent in at least one province not less than three in any province.

MR. HOLLETT: Ontario?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Ontario has no sales tax. Not less than three per cent in any of the five provinces with a sales tax—there are five of the ten. It runs from three to five per cent. We have three per cent. We could have raised it. We considered that and we decided against it for this reason that a sales tax, we call it a Social Security Assessment because it was imposed at a time when we were introducing one law after another to give new social security benefits to our people, old age pensions, widows, mothers' allowances and crippled persons and so on and as we introduced these new laws we knew we had to raise the money to do it so we introduced this tax known as Social Security Assessment. We could have increased it. It is like an ad valorem customs duty, the revenue from sales tax goes up as prices go up and comes down as prices come down, the total amount we get from the sales tax swells or shrinks according as the general price level in the province or in the world swells or shrinks. The volume of the price level—if it swells we take in more revenue and if this ad valorem customs tariff or tax which is what tax is, and if this goes down then we get less revenue and we could have a precipitate fall if a depression should materialize which I do not anticipate. Attendance at ball games and bingo may rise and fall in the same way but not as precipitate, unless people do a tremendous thing, lose their taste for entertainment. That is not likely to happen. They may lose their means to pay for entertainment. We will face that if it comes. We want to raise the standard of education and services in regard to cancer.

The teachers asked for a raise in pay and we give them a million dollars. We gave the civil servants a million dollars. All over Newfoundland this clamour for more attention to roads, more existing roads to be improved. We are doing it, spending millions of dollars, more than we have in previous years. That is to win the election this year.

I listened with great interest to my honourable friend's broadcast and he asked the people all over the island to suggest candidates. I would suggest he have it as a prize in a bingo game, a candidacy in his party or he might put it up as a prize not for two or three or four thousand dollars but the privilege of being the candidate in this next election.

MR. HOLLETT: Or a beer license.

MR. SPEAKER: The House is called to order.

MR. SMALLWOOD: In this year there is a noted rise in the standards and levels of our public services. We hope next year there will be an equally great rise in standards of public service because we feel—and if my honourable friends could forget about this election in 1955, if my honourable friends will forget about this general election they have decided to hold and how could they hold an election without us. We ought to be consulted in a thing like that.

MR. HOLLETT: Not we, you.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I ought to be consulted. All I could tell him was to get busy, get cracking, because he lost so many elections his party said I never gave them enough notice. I said to them “get busy for the coming elections, when that election is.”

This year and next year we want the standards and levels of public service to increase and increase considerably because probably next year 1955, let us say at the end of 1955, which is March 31st. 1956, let us say at the end of the next financial year following the present one we get the two financial years during which to raise the levels and standards of public services until, instead of the thirty-nine millions, and I will not attempt to forecast what the budget will be next year, say instead of thirty-nine millions, our expenditure goes to forty-five million on current account then this forty-five million will mean more cottage hospitals than we now have to maintain, more nurses and doctors than we now have. Forty-five millions will mean more for the Honourable the Minister for Public Works to spend annually on roads and bridges in this province. More for the Minister of Public Welfare to spend on welfare. More for the Minister of Education to spend on teachers’ salaries. More for the Minister of Finance to pay the civil servants. More for all Ministers. More for housing and municipalities and water and sewers in outport communities. That will be the yardstick, that is the yardstick which the Royal Commission are obligated, not because they like us, but because they are obligated in the Terms of Union to accept as the measure of how much additional subsidies the Government of Newfoundland will require to enable the Government to maintain those levels without imposing taxation on the people more burdensome than the burdensomeness of the taxation in Prince Edward Island, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, having regard to capacity to pay. It is because my honourable friend from Harbour Main-Bell Island is immersed in this problem day and night, with Mr. Grouchy, Mr. Doyle, Mr. Perlin and Senator Pratt who is confined to the hospital in Toronto—He and his associates are engaged day and night in preparing Newfoundland’s case. Is this Government going to be so stupid? No one will call us stupid. They can’t call us stupid or lazy, they can say we work too hard and long and we work on Sundays and they can say we are too energetic but they can’t say we are stupid.

MR. HOLLETT: Who said you can’t be called stupid?
MR. SMALLWOOD: I said it.

MR. HOLLETT: Nothing to it.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is right. We would be stupid though if entitled to call for the appointment of the Royal Commission and having set up the Commission to prepare our case and we sabotaged our own case by failing to provide the right yardstick for 1956. Would not that be stupid?

MR. BROWNE: But this is what puzzles me. I have comparative expenditure between Nova Scotia and Newfoundland and I find that our expenditure is way ahead of Nova Scotia at the present time.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Is what? That is not the comparison. Will my honourable friend take Term 29 and read it some time. As he is a member of our Legislature instead of the great Parliament, it is his duty to familiarize himself with this very important term of the Terms of Union.

MR. HOLLETT: Is my honourable friend, the Premier, arguing for increased taxation, for further increased taxation?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I am arguing for increased expenditure. I am arguing for higher levels and standards of public services. I am arguing that our Newfoundland people ought to have them as in New Brunswick. I am arguing that they ought to have them as in Nova Scotia. I am arguing that they ought to have schools as good as they have them in New Brunswick. I am arguing that our Newfoundland people ought to have hospitals as good as they have in the Maritime Provinces.

MR. HOLLETT: So we have them, what we have of them.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Even that is not correct. It is more correct to say we have as many as they have. Our people—as a matter of fact this thing is so big it is cheap to have a cheap debate on it. It affects the life of every Newfoundlander.

MR. HOLLETT: Do not make it cheap.

MR. SMALLWOOD: My honourable friend has made it cheap. His follower who moved this resolution wants to reduce taxation to reduce expenditure. This means to sabotage Newfoundland, the lowering of our public services.

MR. BROWNE: I do not think the Premier is implying he is trying to sabotage Newfoundland.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I did not say he is trying to sabotage Newfoundland but I repeat, to reduce taxation is to reduce expenditure and to reduce expenditure is to sabotage Newfoundland. The honourable gentleman is very sincere. His sincerity is sometimes so sincere it is known by another word with the letter F. I think he is a patriotic Newfoundlander like all of us but like all of us he can get a blinker on him and he can't see up or down or on either side of him but straight ahead. It is the plain duty of this House to raise the levels of the standards of public services for two reasons, one, because our people need it, and two, because these levels and standards in 1957 will be taken by the Royal Commission as the yardstick for measuring the amount of additional subsidies they think Ottawa should pay into the pockets of Newfoundland. Are not the honourable gentlemen opposite a little bit ashamed at the petty character of this amendment? Are they not a little bit regretful that they should have sunk so low as to suggest... we stop raising the standards of our public services, of schools and other public services?

MR. HOLLETT: That was not suggested by my learned friend or by me.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It is not written in the resolution. The amendment is that this House regrets that the Government has failed to reduce taxation which now rests so heavily on all sections of the public. I can hear them groan. We are reeking with prosperity such as Newfoundland has never known before and all the honourable gentlemen can say is people groan under the burden of unemployment.

MR. HOLLETT: Eighteen thousand people unemployed and twelve thousand fishermen not fishing.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Does he even know twelve fishermen who are not fishing, let alone twelve thousand? Who invented that figure? Who counted it? Who invented it? Twelve thousand. He must have read it in a paper. Who counted them? That this House regrets that the Government has failed to reduce taxation.

MR. HOLLETT: Yes and cut out waste and expenditure.

MR. SMALLWOOD: If we take them at their word and reduce taxation we get less revenue. If we cut the Social Security Assessment tax out altogether we lose 6.7 million. The only revenue we collect is 11½ million. The total taxation we are then levying will be 5.1 million. What will we stop? We are out 6.7 million. Will we stop building roads?

MR. HOLLETT: If you want to.

MR. SMALLWOOD: But the honourable gentleman opposite wants to lose the 6.7 million. What will we stop spending? Stop spending on building roads?

MR. HOLLETT: We had a surplus of six or seven million.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is how we get it. Could we spare it on roads, hospitals, schools and on economic development, on fishery development? Which of these would my honourable friends say we should not do? They say, reduce your taxation, and we ask them for an example and the example is the Social Security Assessment but we say that gets us 6.7 million dollars. What will we economize on to the extent of 6.7 million?

MR. HOLLETT: Cut out waste and extravagance.

MR. SMALLWOOD: On roads?

MR. HOLLETT: No.

MR. SMALLWOOD: On schools?

MR. HOLLETT: No.

MR. SMALLWOOD: On hospitals?

MR. HOLLETT: No.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is the vast bulk of what we spend. Are they not thoroughly ashamed of themselves? If they are not I will leave them to the tender mercies of the Minister of Finance and I hope the Minister will not take the honourable member seriously but un seriously and deliver an unserious speech about unserious men. If they are not I will leave them to the tender mercies of the Minister of Finance and I hope the Minister will not take the honourable member seriously but un seriously and deliver an unserious speech about unserious men. Mr. Speaker, is not all this a waste of words? There is no election this year.
MR. HOLLETT: We have your word for it.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The honourable gentleman does not know whether I am referring to municipal election, in Bonavista for instance. His job is to find out and mine not to let him find out. There may be one in some congressional district of the United States. I have some other points but I think I will save them for the main debate.

MR. SPEAKER: The amendment is that these words do stand part of the motion. "That this House regrets that the Government has failed to reduce taxation which now rests so heavily on all sections of the public." All in favour say "Aye," Contrary "Nay." The motion stands as is.

Amendment defeated.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I don't know if my honourable friends want to proceed, but it is getting a bit late—Perhaps they would prefer to wait until tomorrow. In that case, unless we have any other business, we might adjourn until tomorrow. We have a Cabinet meeting in the morning and cannot very well meet in the forenoon.

MR. HOLLETT: We are ready, but it is hardly worth it.

MR. CURTIS: We might find a small Bill to go on with for a quarter of an hour.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Not for the purpose of securing a position, but I move the adjournment of the debate.

Motion carried.

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Speaker, this afternoon when we had a Committee on the Social Assistance Bill it was disposed of with the exception of one minor amendment. I understand that has been circulated. Perhaps, Mr. Speaker, the House might resolve itself into Committee on the Bill.

Mr. Speaker left the chair.

MR. MORGAN, Chairman of Committee:

Committee of the whole on a Bill, "An Act to Amend the Social Assistance Act."

DR. POTTLE: Mr. Chairman, there are two amendments, which we have not yet considered. The first is an amendment to Clause 24 providing for a paragraph (y) to sub-clause one and reading: "Respecting any other matter necessary or advisable to carry out effectively the purposes of this Act" I move that amendment.

Motion carried.

DR. POTTLE: The second proposed amendment, Mr. Chairman, has to do with the present Clause 29, which proposes to have an amendment as follows: "The Lieutenant Governor in Council may, by proclamation, repeal the Mothers Allowance Act, Chapter 63 of the Revised Statutes of Newfoundland 1953 and the Dependents Allowance Act and the purpose of this amendment is to avoid the possibility that people receiving allowances might find a gap between the coming into effect of this Act and their getting their allowance under the old Acts. In other words we would like some time to lag so that when this Act comes into being we will not repeal the existing statutes until we are quite sure that the people concerned are covered by social assistance who now are covered by the Mothers' Allowances and Dependents' Allowance. I think this is quite essential, Sir, to protect the people who would be receiving Mothers' and Dependents' Allowances as the case may be.

I move the amendment as read.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I draw the attention of the Chair to the fact that the Minister cannot move the amendment.

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Chairman, I move the amendment.

Amendment carried.

On motion the Committee rose and reported having passed the Bill with some amendments. Report accepted. On motion amendments read a first and second time and concurred in.

On motion Bill ordered read a third time on tomorrow.

MR. CURTIS: I move, Mr. Speaker, the remaining Orders of the Day do stand deferred.

Mr. Speaker, I ask the indulgence of the House to ask that I may on tomorrow ask leave to introduce a Bill "An Act Respecting the Appointment of a Commission in connection with Term 29 of the Terms of Union of Newfoundland with Canada."

I also ask leave that I may on tomorrow introduce a Bill "An Act to Provide for Regulations of Ferries Used in Transportation of Persons for Compensation."

MR. CURTIS: I move, Mr. Speaker, that the House at its rising do adjourn until tomorrow Thursday, at 3:00 of the clock.

On motion the House then adjourned until tomorrow, Thursday, June 10, 1954, at 3:00 of the clock.

The House then adjourned accordingly.

JUNE 10th, 1954

The House met at three of the clock, in the afternoon, pursuant to adjournment.

MR. SPEAKER: I would call to the attention of honourable members the copy of the journals of parliaments on decisions. Honourable members might have some interest in that. It contains the Speech from the Throne delivered to the Australian Parliament. As I say, it might have some significance.

HON. J. R. SMALLWOOD (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, last night in a speech in this House the honourable and learned member for St. John's West made a series of charges against Mr. Chester Dawe and J. G. Pratt and Company, that these two persons had committed what would have to be regarded and treated as criminal actions or offenses against the criminal code.

I wish to inform the House that in that matter I have followed the course that I followed on another inquiry into the irregularities in the Mental Hospital reported to me, and in the Valdmanis Case. That is to say, I called in the R.C.M.P. and requested them to make a complete police inquiry, police investigation, I think perhaps, is the better word for it.

The investigation has begun. Last night the honourable and learned member for St. John's West who made the charges offered, at my request, to furnish me with the evidence he gave in his speech. I would be grateful if he would pass that evidence to me without delay so that I can pass it over immediately to the police whom I have asked to investigate the matter.
I have informed the R.C.M.P. of all the allegations made last night by the honourable and learned gentleman. I have informed them in such detail as my memory allowed me to do, of the exact nature of the evidence given last night in that speech. It would, I think, be most helpful now if the honourable and learned gentleman would pass the information to me without any further delay even in an hour if he could arrange to do it that quickly, so that without any delay I could put these letters and catalogues and the like in the hands of the R.C.M.P.

Last night when I was taken quite unawares by the honourable gentleman's charges, because I never had the slightest reason in the world to suspect Mr. Dawe of any dishonesty, and beyond the allegations of the honourable gentleman I still have no suspicions in the wide world of Mr. Dawe, because, as I say, I was taken unawares last night and before I had time to think the matter over I suggested, out of hand, the appointment of a select committee of this House to investigate these charges. On further reflection I came to the conclusion that an inquiry conducted by this House through a select committee would be a proper procedure if allegation had been made against a member of this House.

The allegations however were not made against a member of this House but rather against a member of the general public for which reason it appears to me that the normal procedure is the one I followed, that is to call in the R.C.M.P. and request them to institute at once, without delay, a proper and official investigation. Mr. Speaker, may I in the meantime make one further statement.

When the honourable and learned gentleman stated in his speech that my signature appeared on the invoice in question my immediate reaction was to state that it did not. But I was informed this morning, this forenoon, by the Treasury Department that the Auditor General had come to me with a considerable number of invoices of goods purchased for the birch plant for my signature which I gave in his presence at once and delivered the invoices back to him. I had forgotten that I had even done that—Certainly I know no more than that about the matter.

I hope I made that clear—the only invoices I signed were those brought to me in a considerable number, possibly hundreds, possibly dozens, I don't really remember that. In fact I have not, even now that I have been told by the Treasury that the Auditor General brought me these bills for my signature, even now, I still don't remember the occasion, because the House will of course realize I have lived a pretty busy life; thousands of details have occurred in the last five years and have gone completely out of my memory although other thousands are still fresh in my mind, and the only invoices I signed were those brought to me by the Auditor General in a bulk, a large number, which I promptly signed and handed back to him. That is all I know about the signature on that or any other invoices.

Presenting Petitions

MR. J. R. COURAGE: Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present a petition from the St. John's Butchers' Association which reads as follows:

"To the Honourable House of Assembly: Whereas your petitioners represent more than 90% of the licensed butchers in the City of St. John's, and whereas butcher shops deal in extremely perishable goods and whereas the closing of butcher shops on Saturdays will cause considerable loss of business to the trade and great inconvenience to the public particularly during the summer months of the year, and whereas the butchers and their employees are in complete agreement on these matters your petitioners therefore humbly pray that butcher shops may be allowed to remain open on Saturdays until the hour of 6:00 p.m. and that the said butcher shops keep Wednesday as a whole holiday instead: for which your petitioners will ever humbly pray."

This petition, Mr. Speaker, is signed by the St. John's Retail Butchers Association. I have much pleasure in supporting the petition of the St. John's Retail Butchers Association in representing more than 90% of the butchers in the City of St. John's. The employers and employees of these butcher shops number about 170 persons, and as the petitioners state, the employees are in complete agreement with the employers in holding that Wednesday would be a better day for their whole holiday than Saturday. They pointed out also that meat is something which has to be pure. If the butcher shops close on Saturday the meat has to be purchased on Friday and thus has to be kept throughout Saturday and part of Sunday. This would mean great inconvenience for the people who do not have refrigeration. They pointed out also the great loss in trade to them, which was proven by facts and figures last year.

I think, Sir, that in a case where hardship will be done to the employees and where there is complete agreement that the matter should be given some consideration by the government. I therefore recommend this petition to the House and ask that it be laid on the Table of the House and referred to the department concerned.

Motion carried.

Presenting Reports of Standing and Select Committees

None.

Giving notice of motion

HON. L. R. CURTIS: (Attorney General): Mr. Speaker, there is a bill before the House for second reading: A Bill, "An Act to Provide for Licenses of Insurance Companies carrying on business in Newfoundland." I would ask leave to introduce a new bill replacing that—"A Bill An Act Further to Amend the Insurance Companies Act." I give notice I will later on today ask leave to introduce that.

Giving notice of Question

None.

Answer to questions

MR. W. R. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, I asked a question of the Minister of Public Works, No. 71, April 30, the number of contracts let for plumbing and electrical installations etc. I have not as yet received any answer to that. I wonder if the minister could tell me.

HON. E. S. SPENCER (Minister of Public Works): Mr. Speaker, in reply to my honourable and learned friend, Question 71, referred to by him, has been duplicated and repeated as the request for information is practically the same in Question 98, asked by the honourable member for St. John's West. I have reviewed the information this morning. It is now being typed, and I hope to be in a position to present it to the House tomorrow.
Orders Of The Day

Third Readings: A Bill, "An Act Further to Amend the Local Government Act"—On motion read a third time, ordered passed and title be as on the Order Paper.

A Bill, "An Act Respecting Social Assistance"—On motion read a third time, ordered passed and title be as on the order paper.

A Bill, "An Act Respecting the Franchise of Electors and the Election of Members to the House of Assembly"—On motion—

MR. CURTIS: I wonder, Mr. Speaker, perhaps that order might be deferred.

MR. SPEAKER: Has the Honourable member leave to withdraw the motion?

On motion order deferred.

A Bill, "An Act Further to amend the City of St. John's Act"—On motion, read a third time, ordered passed and title be as on the order paper.

Second Reading of Bill: "An Act Further to Amend the Public Utilities Act."

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Speaker, this is a very minor amendment to the Public Utilities Act. It is designed to give the Board of Public Utilities Jurisdiction over buses which are plying in areas not franchised; and which gives the Board the right to issue writs in such processes. The only buses which will be affected are buses which have no franchise granted to them under the Motor Carriers Act. I don't think any explanation is needed. It is merely that the word "buses" is added to other things. I move the second reading of this bill.

On motion bill read a second time—Ordered referred to a committee of the Whole House at a later hour this day.

Second Reading of Bill, "An Act Relating to the St. John's Memorial Stadium."

HON. S. J. HEFFERTON (Minister of Municipal Affairs & Supply): Mr. Speaker we have already in this House given certain powers to the St. John's City Council for the raising of funds for the erection of the stadium. This particular bill gives the St. John's City Council the powers to set up a commission to look after and run the maintenance, operation and control of the stadium. Provisions are set there for members of the council: The powers given to the members deal with such things as safety and decorum, seats etc. Then the final section deals with financial control of the stadium council, and auditing. It also provides that any reserve which may be built up, may be used by the Council towards the Council's terms of operations.

I move the second reading of this Bill, Mr. Speaker.

On motion bill read a second time and ordered referred to a Committee of the Whole House at a later hour this day.

Second Reading of Bill, An Act to Establish the Pharmaceutical Association:

HON P. FORSEY (Minister of Health): Mr. Speaker, in moving the second reading of this Bill, I would like to point out that the Act presently in existence which this bill was designed to replace, was passed some forty years ago and has consequently become outmoded and quite outdated.

The present bill differs from the old bill in two respects: The present bill will allow the Association to prescribe courses of training and periods of training for members of the Association. In the second respect it gives the Association some disciplinary supervision over the members of the organization. For example, in the old Act a man or a pharmacist would dispense dope, and the Association would have no authority to revoke his license. The present Act, as I said before, is designed to enable the Association to have disciplinary action over its members. I might say that any of the rules and regulations which the Association may pass in the interest of the Association will have to receive the assent of the Lieutenant-Governor in Council.

These are the two main changes in the proposed bill, Mr. Speaker, and I move the second reading.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the honourable minister a question—I did not hear whether he stated, that the Pharmaceutical Association in existence at the present time has seen this and approved the draft before the House now?

MR. FORSEY: Yes, Mr. Speaker, this bill has the approval of the Pharmaceutical Association. As a matter of fact they have collaborated with the department on the actual drafting of it.

On motion bill read a second time, and ordered referred to a Committee of the Whole House at a later hour this day.

Second Reading of Bill, "An Act Respecting the Floral Emblem of Newfoundland."

HON. M. MURRAY (Minister of Provincial Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I wish to move the second reading of this Bill. It is being done at the request of the Newfoundland Historical Society.

The position is that in common with other countries it has been a long established practice for a country to have a floral emblem, such as the Rose of England and the Shamrock of Ireland, etc. In accordance with this practice the Pitcher Plant has long been regarded as the floral emblem of Newfoundland, and there was a supposition that it was so designated by Queen Victoria. But in the last year or two we have had numerous inquiries from abroad and upon looking into the matter we found this supposition did not have too much substance. What did happen was that in 1864 an Act was passed in this House that copper coin of this country be put on a proper basis, and an order was then passed to the Minister in England with a request that some floral emblem be put on it. The copper coin of that day had the pitcher plant placed on it, or as the proper name for it is, the "Sarracenia, Purpurea."

At any rate, Mr. Speaker, although there was not much substance to the tradition that Queen Victoria had designated it as the national floral emblem, it has long been requested to be our floral emblem. It is therefore at the request of the Historical Society we are bringing in this Act to make it law.

I move the second reading of this Bill.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, I think I should say a word in this connection—There are so many plants in process requiring money I don't know what they will do in the future now that this is to become law that there is a floral emblem of Newfoundland.
I take it, it would be the minister's desire that we walk with ceremony and circumspection.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Not only in that but in every connection.

MR. HOLLETT: I get the point, Sir. I take it the Premier has something in his mind—if he would care to express it I would yield to him.

It is too bad in one way that the honourable minister had to upset the tradition in the matter. As a matter of fact I did not know the tradition relating to Queen Victoria. Anyway I am very happy, as I am quite sure we all are, to have a floral emblem by way of law. I shall in future do my best not to trample too many of them underfoot.

MR. MURRAY: Mr. Speaker, there is one further point about this plant that I did not bring out; it is predaceous, and can devour a fly hovering over it. It could be symbolic of our economic history.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Actually, Mr. Speaker, it is a perfect piece of symbolism of the mercantile system. In fact the flower is sometimes known as the Indian Drinking Cup. There is within this cup-like part a sweetish fluid that would be the bait. The fly enticed by this bait goes into the cup, and then like a flash the cup closes and the fly is devoured promptly, and it is through this means that the life of the plant is sustained.

Bill read a second time, on motion ordered referred to a Committee of the Whole House at a later hour this day.

Second Reading of Bill, an Act Respecting the Inspection of Fish:

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, it is beginning to be appreciated in Newfoundland that jurisdiction in fishery matters is divided between the Parliament of Canada on the one hand and the Legislature of the Province on the other. The jurisdiction of Canada as Canada, of the Parliament of Canada, extends to fish in the sea, extends to the act of taking fish out of the water and extends up to the moment the fish is landed on the coast, and it then ends until that fish later is exported from the province whereupon it comes under federal jurisdiction again. But in between those two points, i.e. when the fish is landed in Newfoundland until the fish reaches the point of being exported it is simply a piece of property, and as property and civil rights are provincial in jurisdiction so the fish during that period is under the jurisdiction of the Legislature of Newfoundland; and the Legislature have given the Government the necessary authority.

This is a bill, which if the House passes and it receives Royal Assent, authorizes the Government to exercise the necessary jurisdiction over fish as property. It does that by enabling the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council to prescribe grades, quality and standards of fish for marketing, regulations respecting the handling, processing, storing, packaging, marking, transporting, making and instituting of fish regulations respecting the quality and specifications for containers, the making and inspection of containers and the making of regulations regarding the registry of establishments, and regulations providing for the issue of licenses and requiring the licensing of persons handling, processing, storing, transporting and marketing fish and of vehicles and establishments, and prescribing and attaching conditions, and attaching different conditions of licenses in respect to different areas of the Province. Then to make regulations prohibiting the handling, processing, storing, grading and transportation of fish in accordance with regulations. Regulations for the sanitation in connection with fish; and prescribing fees and prohibiting the marketing of any fish or containers under any grade name or standard prescribed by the regulations unless all the requirements of the Act, and these regulations with respect thereto, have been provided for, nor under any name calculated to mislead or deceive. The rest of the Bill deals with conciseness of detail, but the hearing of the legislation is giving the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council jurisdiction in fact, in law, by giving it power to make regulations over all phases of the handling of fish as property, as fish rather than as fishery. As fishery the jurisdiction is already in the possession of the Parliament of Canada.

It may come as something of a surprise to the House to learn that no legislation exists presently giving the government the undoubted authority that it exercises within provincial jurisdiction. It is undoubted that the province has the jurisdiction, and it is rather surprising that no statute has been enacted up to now and that is exactly what this Bill does.

Now it is at least possible, and it is indeed more than possible, it is quite probable that some if not all of the powers of the Government that this Act would confer will be carried out by federal agents appointed for the purpose by the Government of Newfoundland to be provincial agents, just as certain provincial agents act as federal agents by appointment of the Government of Canada. In other words what frequently happens is that one government works through the civil servants of another government; one government exercises its own powers and jurisdiction through the instrument of the civil servants of the other government. We have a number of instances of that in Newfoundland at the present time. For instance, the Fishery Loan Board are a provincial board, but are the agents of the Government of Canada in certain matters. Similarly we might well appoint civil servants or employees of the Government of Canada to be our agents in connection with some of the activities envisaged in this present bill.

Mr. Speaker, I move the second reading.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, I don't see anything very much in this bill to object to at all. But it does seem to me, speaking for myself, that there seems to be considerable conflict or danger of conflict between the government's claim that fish which comes from the sea up to the time it is marketed comes under the jurisdiction of the Provincial Government.

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, of the Legislature.

MR. HOLLETT: That is the Provincial Government, I take it.

MR. SMALLWOOD: No the Legislature, the House of Assembly. If the honourable gentleman will allow me? The Legislature by passing this Act might pass its own authority to that extent over to the Government, but the authority lies with the Legislature.

MR. HOLLETT: That is all very well in one way, Mr. Speaker, but we must remember, and it is becoming more and more apparent every day, the marketing of our products in the fisheries, all branches of the fisheries, certainly come under the jurisdiction of the Federal Government. It seems to me, therefore, that the people who are going to be responsible for the marketing of codfish, salmon, lobster, etc. should have some connection with the grading and inspection of the article for the marketing of which they are responsible.

The Honourable the Premier has said that undoubtedly they will have to assign inspectors appointed through this Legislature. But I am always afraid when there are two people to do one thing nobody does it properly. I think we have all had experience of that nature. Whilst we don't want to give up too much, we don't want to give up any authority over property rights, and I think a very close collaboration will have to be kept with the Federal Department of Fisheries. Undoubtedly it is a fact that a more particular inspection of all our products for export will have to be made if we are again to enter into markets which we appear to have lost at the present time. One of the reasons, I believe and know for a fact, why we lost considerable of our markets in both Portugal and Spain is the fact that on occasions our fish arrived there in pretty much of a decomposed condition. Whether that was the fault of the people on this side or whether it went bad en route is another matter. But we do know that when an article turns up in a rotten condition there are very few people going to buy it.

I notice under this Act that the inspector may seize any fish, and he may sell it, and the money from it goes into the Consolidated Revenue Fund. I suggest that this is a very good way for the fishermen selling the fish, have the inspector come and see the lot and sell it to the Federal Government, if you like, and the proceeds go back into the Consolidated Revenue Fund. I am sure the Premier must have thought of that when the section was put in there.

We have no objections at all to this bill, Sir. We do believe our fish is being inspected in a much more thorough way than it has been in the past. I am wondering—Under the Federal Fisheries Act, I believe there were inspection rules, and I believe they were carried out by the Federal Inspectors. Perhaps the Premier will be able to tell me whether or not these inspectors will also insist on their own inspection relative to these fisheries which are meant for export. I have a feeling that they will. I have a feeling that, if they are going to be responsible for the marketing, as they have already announced—I think today I heard where they have signed an agreement to sell, I think, five hundred thousand dollars worth of fish to Italy—if the Federal Department signed an agreement to sell that much fish to Italy it stands to reason they will have to certify the condition of the fish when it leaves here. I am pointing that out because I am quite sure everybody is most anxious to do everything possible to assist our fisheries. I have seen fish in all stages of decomposition being inspected, Sir, by what we used to call in the past, cutters, and I have seen fish so high they smelt to high heaven, as the fellow said. On the other hand I have seen some very excellent fish, at least in my opinion, being thrown out by the cutter. I won't go into reasons given for that. But it is most important, if we are to have inspectors, that we have consistency, men who know good fish from bad, and know how to suggest to the fishermen just what to do to make better quality. I notice it says here; "Fish" means all sorts of fish. I think that is breaking another tradition, because "Fish" has always been known as codfish, and nothing else. So it seems that this government is out to break traditions. We support the bill, Sir.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, there is just one point—my honourable friend referred particularly to the matter of marketing. He ought to remember that marketing comes under two headings, foreign marketing and inter-provincial marketing. Marketing that goes outside the province, inter-provincial and foreign marketing, marketing to the other provinces of Canada and inter-provincial marketing within the province. Now within the province undoubtedly the government has jurisdiction and in the other case the Parliament of Canada has it.

Now, another point, the Government of Canada under the Terms of Union, have up to now inspected our fish as part of the terms of union. That will be so until the Canadian Fisheries Act is proclaimed whereupon Canada ceases as Canada, i.e., the Parliament of Canada ceases to be responsible for the inspection of our fish as it is now inspected. But at that point the Meat Act and the Canned Foods Act of Canada, Federal Statutes of the Parliament of Canada, will come into effect. Under authority of that Act the Government of Canada, through its agents can and will inspect fish at the point of export for export purposes so as to maintain the standards and quality of Canada, because at that point it has in a sense ceased to be a Newfoundland product and it becomes a product of all Canada. It must, therefore, as it goes out to foreign markets, carry the prestige of Canada as Canada. So under the Meat and Canned Foods Act, the Government of Canada inspects it before it permits it to leave Canadian soil and go off to a foreign soil.

MR. HOLLETT: That applies to bulk fish too?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Fish comes under the Meat and Canned Foods Act. That I believe is the only Act of Parliament of Canada which vests in the government some of the authority that lies in parliament to inspect fish as an article of export, because Trade and Commerce are federal in jurisdiction. Just as they inspect wheat or any other food stuff designed for export from Canada so, to maintain the standard of Canadian prestige as a great exporting nation, so similarly they already in other provinces inspect fish under the Meat and Canned Foods Act, whereas in Newfoundland they inspect it under one of the Terms of Union, which will cease as and when the Canadian Fisheries Act is proclaimed to have come into effect in Newfoundland. That has not happened yet. I don't know if my honourable colleague who has now come into the Chamber is aware of when exactly the Canadian Fisheries Act is to be proclaimed.

HON. W. J. KEOUGH (Minister of Fisheries & Cooperatives): It has not been decided as yet.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It will be a matter of months, maybe before the year is over and maybe not until next year. Meantime it is really essential we get our own legislation to get authority to step into the vacuum, the gap.

MR. BROWNE: I draw the attention of the minister, as a matter of fact there is one Federal Act, the Pickled Fish Act, I don't know how far it affects this.

On motion bill read a second time, ordered referred to a Committee of the Whole House at a later hour this day.

Second Reading of Bill, an Act to Amend the Dog Act:

HON F. W. ROWE (Minister of Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, it seems every minister of Agriculture or of Mines and Resources of this Province and country has had something to do with a Dog Act either introducing a new or making amendments to the old. It would be my hope, and I may as well confess it, I would have the pleasure this time of introducing a new Dog Act, one which would I hope outdo all other Dog Acts for a number of reasons which I don't think I need give here now.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Do give us the reasons.

DR. ROWE: That Dog Act has not been introduced, but we are introducing an amendment to the Act, and this amendment affects only Labrador, it does not affect the Island of Newfoundland.

I might say that since the day this was circulated my honourable friends on the other side wished for a postponement of discussion on this. It is perfectly all right with me and this side. However, it may be that there will not be any need for that postponement of discussion on this. It is in it, Section 13, which is very short, and it reads: In all towns, settlements and villages in that part of Labrador between Cape Harrison and Cape Chidley (I might interrupt to say; that is the part commonly referred to as Northern Labrador today under the jurisdiction of Labrador Affairs). In that section all persons being the owner of or having the control of dogs must have them penned or chained up between the hours of 6:00 p.m. and 6:00 a.m. when not under the immediate control of the person capable of controlling them. In other words the dog-owners in Labrador are to have their dogs under control between the hours of 6:00 p.m. and 6:00 a.m.

MR. COURAGE: If the honourable minister will allow me, how will the dogs know the time?

MR. BROWNE: Watch dogs?

DR. ROWE: What happened there, of course, is that dogs have always been roaming around in the daytime, and because they are roaming around in the daytime they are also for the most part roaming around at night as well. When we speak of dogs in Labrador, Mr. Speaker, I think we have to bear in mind that, I suppose, the average family in Northern Labrador has about a dozen or probably more dogs. That has its humorous side, I might say, but it also has its serious side. During the past few years a number of people, mostly children, have been eaten by dogs in Labrador. The House may not be aware that during the past two years at any rate, attacks on human beings by dogs have occurred in the Northern half where no such scheme as I have just read applies. In the Southern half of Labrador, dogs are subject to some control, at least, to the same laws and regulations as in Newfoundland, and I know personally in the majority of cases in the Straits of Belle Isle the dogs are under control in the daytime either in pens or chained up. In the Northern Labrador that is not the case. As a result, only last year, at least two and maybe more children were eaten by dogs, and several others were attacked and were seriously mauled and mutilated. In fact one child had to spend several months here in the hospital in St. John's.

The amendment to the Dog Act, which I am introducing here on behalf of the Government, calls for the repeal of that section I have just read, and for the substitution of a new section, which will make dogs on Northern Labrador subject to the same laws and regulations as are dogs on all other parts of the Province. I might say I have received considerable representations from the citizens of that Northern part of Labrador on that matter, from people who are dog owners themselves, and practically every one is, and people who have written me only in the past week saying that they have not allowed their children to go outside unattended by adults during the last ten months because of dogs.

There is one other amendment, in Section 14 of the Old Act, which gave a ranger or someone designated by him the power to shoot dogs in Northern Labrador. That is repealed and we recommend that in its place we should have a section saying; "Any dog found at large contrary to the provisions of Section 13 may be destroyed by a constable or any person generally or specifically authorized by the Minister of Mines and Resources in that behalf." I think the need for that will be apparent, when I point out the RCMP detachment at Fairhaven has four or five hundred miles of coastline to cover, and naturally there must be parts of the district they cannot visit more than once or twice a year. That will be giving the minister power to appoint and designate persons with the authority to shoot dogs that may be roaming around.

I move the second reading of this bill, Mr. Speaker.

MR. HOLLETT: I think we ought to say something on that one. I think we ought to make a law that every minister of Mines and Resources henceforth should bring in a Dog Act. That has been traditional.

I see in this Act the political demise of the Minister of Mines and Resources. A minister who gives a man orders on the Labrador to shoot the dogs is finished politically on Labrador. I always try to look into every Act and see for what reason it is introduced. It has always dawned on me, the reason for this Act is based on an amendment made by the Honourable the Premier. He stated he is intending to take a trip to Labrador. Naturally, therefore, they want all dogs tied up. Certainly we support the bill.

On motion bill read a second time, ordered referred to a committee of the whole House at a later hour this day.

Second Reading of Bill, "An Act to Approve and Give Statutory Effect to an Agreement Between the Government and New Jersey Zinc Exploration Company (Canada) Limited:"

DR. ROWE: Mr. Speaker, for the past four years or so this government has made a number of agreements with large mining corporations and companies whereby those companies could do exploration work in this Province. The Crown Mines (Lands and Quarries) Act gives the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council the power to make these agreements, and does not oblige the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council, does not place on them the responsibility of submitting these agreements to the Legislature for confirmation. That power is in the Act. However, it is becoming the practice on the part of this government to submit those agreements to the House for confirmation for two reasons (1) because it is one way of giving the House and the general public an idea of what is being done and (2) because most of these companies are very large corporations such as this one for example, and they like to have, I think it can be said, their agreements ratified by the Legislature.

This agreement here which I am introducing today is one which was made last year between the Government and New Jersey Zinc. It is what we might call a small agreement compared with the ones made with Falconbridge and Frobisher etc. Nevertheless we feel it should be introduced here. It follows the pattern without any deviation in any particular or any principle of all the others which we submitted to this House. There is nothing actually new in it at all. I introduced several last year, one, I remember, American Metal. The exact wording is followed as in that. The only difference is in the delineation of the areas and the amount of land involved. This gives the New Jersey Zinc the right for two years to explore some twenty-five square miles of land in the interior of Newfoundland. At the end of these two years, in accordance with the Crown Lands (Mines and Quarries) Act they then have the right to select for development license a maximum of four square miles from that twenty-five and for two years they have the right, and incidentally for those two years or for however long they maintain the right, not in excess of two years, they must pay the nominal Royalty amount of rental, which is fifty cents an acre. At the end of these two years they then have the right to apply for a mining license. That follows the pattern set out in the Crown Lands (Mines and Quarries) Act—First an expiration lease on a large area then a development lease on a reduced area and then, if their findings make it desirable for them to do so, they apply for a mining license.

This area is twenty-five square miles to begin with. What they have to spend is slightly less in proportion to that which is being spent for exploration by other companies, such as Falconbridge and American Metals, who have larger areas. They have to spend twenty thousand dollars, of which not less than ten thousand dollars shall be spent in any one year.

I am very happy to be able to advise the House that during the last year New Jersey Zinc spent considerably in excess of the maximum amount they have to spend. They have made their report to us, as they are compelled to do by this Act, and I believe that so far their exploration there has given some promise. That is as far as we can say—I move second reading of this Bill covering an agreement with New Jersey Zinc and the Government of Newfoundland.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker—

DR. ROWE: I would like to say, Mr. Speaker, that bill was only circulated this afternoon and if our honourable friend would like to have it deferred it is all right with us.

On motion debate adjourned.
Second Reading of Bill, "An Act to Amend the National Flag Act":

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Speaker, the National Flag is Chapter 272 of the Revised Statutes. It is an Act which has been on our statute books for a number of years. The present enactment deals with section 4 of the Act, which I will read for the benefit of all the members. I might say this Act, too, is only now being circulated. But it is such a simple Act I think perhaps the House will follow it without needing time to consider it. Of course if anybody does want time to consider it, it is all right.

Section 4 says: "The Union Jack with the badge of Newfoundland, (as described in the schedule) emblazoned in the centre thereof on a circular white ground and surrounded by a green garland shall be flown by the Lieutenant Governor or other officer administering the Government when embarked on a ship or vessel."

Then in the schedule: The badge consists of a replica of Mercury, the God of Commerce and Merchandise, presenting to Britannia a Fisherman who in a kneeling attitude is offering the harvest of the sea; all as described in the Great Seal of the Colony. Above the device in a scroll are the words "Terra Nova" and below, the motto "Haec Tibi Dona Fero."

His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor has asked us if we could amend this Act by adding the words "on land or at sea." So that the new section shall be—"as flown by the Lieutenant-Governor or other officer administering the Government on land or when embarked on a ship or vessel." The new words are "on land or."

In the present Act the flag shall be flown by him when embarked on a ship or vessel. He has asked that he be permitted to use the same flag on land.

I would move the second reading of this bill.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, may I ask the Attorney General a question: Is the background the Union Jack or is it in the centre or in the corner or any place?

MR. CURTIS: The Union Jack. It would be in the corner.

MR. BROWNE: Does it say that here?

MR. CURTIS: It says the Union Jack is hereby declared to be the National Flag of the Province of Newfoundland and in Section 4—The Union Jack with the badge of Newfoundland as described in the schedule emblazoned on it in the centre thereof on a circular white ground. I presume the flag used would be the red Union Jack, the Red Ensign with the Floral Emblem of Newfoundland emblazoned on it.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It is the Union Jack with the Coat of Arms in the dead centre. That is also on a circular white ground.

MR. SPEAKER: May I suggest the only principle that seems to be involved there is that: "Shall the Lieutenant Governor be permitted to use the same flag on land and sea." We might pass second reading and discuss the details in committee.

On motion bill read a second time—Ordered referred to a committee of the whole House at a later hour this day.
MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, at this time perhaps it would be appropriate if we had a short recess of ten minutes.

MR. SPEAKER: If we have no further orders I shall adjourn.

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of a Bill. "An Act to Amend the Companies Act."

Mr. Speaker this bill has only now been circulated, but it is really a very simple bill, so simple that I do not think that my honourable friends would object to our asking for the second reading now. It is an Act to Amend the Companies Act. The principal section is Section 2 which makes provision for the incorporation of insurance companies only after the Superintendent of Insurance has agreed that such company shall be registered. There has in the past five years since we came into Confederation been a number of companies applying for incorporation in Newfoundland to carry on the insurance business, and it is understood that these companies have not strong financial backing, and that they do not propose to operate in Newfoundland but simply to use Newfoundland as a point at which they might get registered.

We have been asked by the Department of Insurance at Ottawa, representing all companies, if we would investigate such companies before granting them incorporation under our Companies Act. They find it very awkward to refuse a provincial company, and they feel that their refusal might be misunderstood, and in some ways might be looked upon as a reflection upon the province. For that reason they have asked that we have a new clause inserted in the Companies Act which would provide the registrar must get the consent in writing of the Minister of Finance before registering a member or article of association in any such company. The Minister of Finance will, of course, be able to get in touch with the Department of Insurance and find out who the people are who are looking for incorporation, and will be able to satisfy himself before incorporating them that the companies will be capable of carrying on the business, and will not let Newfoundland down in any way.

The next clause is a clause that has been added at the request of the Law Society, and provides that in the case of a company being incorporated the solicitor engaged in its formation shall file a statutory declaration setting forth that all the requirements of the Act have been complied with.

The other clauses referred to in section (4) and (5) are merely amendments in form to the present section 25 in the revised statutes. The new Section 25 is set forth in the Act and adds the proviso set forth in Section 26 of the Act whereby the proviso referred to in section 25 should have been attached to section 26. It is nonsense read in connection with section 25, and is purely a printers' error when the revised statutes were being printed.

There is nothing new in the legislation except that proviso referred to intended to belong to section 26 of the Act.

Mr. Speaker, I move the second reading of this bill.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, I know we have not had time to study this bill, but the explanation given by the Honourable Attorney General seems to be a reasonable one. Certainly as far as the new Section 17 (a) is concerned I did not know of the fact when he stated it this afternoon. The only thing I knew was of an insurance company called "The Farmers Insurance Company," of some state in the Central States, was down here collecting money from farmers, going around amongst farmers and collecting money and the agents, Newfoundlanders, were prosecuted for obtaining money under false pretense. I was engaged by one farmer to try and recover his money. But it was hopeless. I understand they were prosecuted and punished.

In regard to the other section, the first one seems to be a very formal one. It gives power to the solicitor to make a statement of declaration. I think it must be all right. In regard to the other two sections I am not in a position to say how much effect it would have on the previous section to which they refer—but we could look into that when it comes to committee.

On motion bill read a second time—Ordered referred to a committee of the whole House at a later hour this day.

Second Reading of bill, "An Act Further to Amend the Highway Traffic Act."

MR. SPENCER: Mr. Speaker, I don't know if the House or the members have had sufficient time to review this amendment. But in looking it over now for not exactly the first time, but it is the first time I have had an opportunity to study it a bit carefully since the draft, I imagine there is very little of any serious or contentious nature there, and I think possibly if there should be some points that require an explanation it would be a very simple matter.

Under Section 2 the report is referred to as being delivered by the court to the minister. And after such reports have been delivered to the minister or to his agent, the minister had discretionary power with regard to the suspension of licenses.

Section 5 deals with the removal of vehicles which may be left by the licensee along the highway for any purpose whatsoever. If it becomes an obstruction the courts are authorized here to remove the obstruction, and says its involvement might become a charge against the vehicle or the owner of the vehicle.

Section 6 deals with the suspension of a license by the minister on notice of accident. That paragraph is self-explanatory. If in the case of an accident such as a collision the matter appears to be so serious to the people that it might warrant immediate suspension of the license they have power to do so, and to suspend the license of the driver and the vehicle.

Section 7 refers to repossessing. That applies in cases where there are people operating cars for hiring business. Should a car or vehicle belonging to such a firm become involved in an accident and being taken in or impounded by the authorities, the owners of the vehicle, if it was clear to them that their driver was not involved and there was no fault on their part, they would have a right to apply to the minister, and after satisfactory proof of their case could be given, the police may be authorized to release the vehicle to them. In the meantime the Justice Department is protected there under this clause.

The balance of the bill is merely the content of the notices which are sent out, and the last paragraph refers to payments due the government for money payable out of the fund. That paragraph too is self-explanatory, and I don't think very contentious.

Mr. Speaker, I have pleasure in moving second reading of this bill.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, I would like to move the adjournment of this debate to have the opportunity to study the bill. There are very important provisions in this, and if the minister would be agreeable?

MR. SPENCER: I have no objections.

On motion debate on second reading adjourned.

Second Reading of Bill, "An Act to Amend the Co-operative Society Act."

MR. KEOUGH: Mr. Speaker, the intent in introducing this amendment is to correct an error made last year. Last year the Newfoundland Co-operative Union asked the Government to amend the Co-operatives Society Act so as to provide for the incorporation of their organization. That the Government undertook to do, and in due time introduced an amendment to the Co-operatives Society Act to the Legislature in the words of Section 2 as set forth in this Bill now before us. However, when the thing was finalized (it was not discovered until subsequently) an error was found to have been made. The words where they appear in this bill, "The Newfoundland Co-operative Union," appeared in the bill of last year as "The Co-operative Union of Newfoundland."

Some months ago the co-operative union again approached the government and requested that we make another amendment so that their organization would be designated as the "Newfoundland Co-operative Union" and thus brought into line with the designated form of address used for similar organizations on the Mainland.

That is the only change in the bill. This may look like a pretty long-winded amendment to effect a composition of new words. However the Department of the Attorney General wished to have it in this form in order to take care of some numbers, I believe, also incorrect in last year's Act.

I move the second reading of this bill.

On motion bill read a second time, ordered referred to a committee of the whole House at a later hour this day.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the honourable gentlemen on the opposite side would be willing in connection with at least some of the bills that received second reading today, to go into committee of the whole now. Any that they are not willing to proceed with we are not proposing to proceed with, but any that they are, we might go through with. We have today given second reading to quite a number of bills. Some of these no doubt the House is not ready to proceed with as to committee of the whole stage, and some the House may be willing to proceed with.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, would the Honourable the Premier indicate if we are meeting after 6:00 o'clock, and if so, what he plans to take up then.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I was thinking we would meet after 6:00 o'clock and take up the budget, and we would meet tomorrow morning and tomorrow afternoon but not tomorrow evening because a good many of us have to attend a function being given by or for the National Research Council.

MR. HOLLETT: That is a luncheon, is it not?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, a luncheon and dinner. The government gives one and are invited to another—Which is which I don't know at the moment. We could go on with the budget tonight. So perhaps the honourable gentleman would indicate whether they would care to go ahead now with committee of the whole on some of these.

MR. CURTIS: Perhaps, Mr. Speaker, we might have some of the first readings:

First Readings:

A Bill, "An Act Respecting the Appointment of a Commission in connection with Term 29 of the Terms of Union of Newfoundland with Canada."—Read a first time, ordered read a second time on tomorrow.

A Bill, "An Act Respecting Ferries." On motion read a first time, ordered read a second time on tomorrow.

A Bill, "An Act Respecting Commissioners to Administer Oaths"—On motion read a first time—Ordered read a second time on tomorrow.

A Bill, "An Act to Amend the Shipbuilding (Bounties) Act"—On motion read a first time, ordered read a second time on tomorrow.

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Speaker, perhaps we could now go into Committee of the Whole on Items 6-7-8-10, 11, 14, 16, 19—

Committee of the Whole on Sundry Bills:

Committee of the Whole on a Bill, "An Act to Amend the Public Utilities Act."

Clause 1 carried. Clause 2 read:

2. Section 2 of the Public Utilities Act, chapter 249 of The Revised Statutes of Newfoundland, 1952, as amended by the Act No. 30 of 1953, is further amended by striking out subparagraph (i) of paragraph (e) and substituting therefor the following:

"(i) the transportation of persons or property by tramway, street railway, bus, truck or ferry for the public for compensation, but not including a bus operated under and in accordance with a franchise granted under The Motor Carrier Act or by the City of St. John's or by a Town, Rural District or Local Government Area established under the Local Government Act or under any of the unenacted Acts set out in Schedule A to The Local Government Act."

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I wonder would the Attorney General tell us why the Motor Carrier Act is brought into this?

MR. CURTIS: Under the Motor Carrier Act all franchises have been granted.

MR. BROWNE: The Motor Carrier Act, I believe, was the one which licenses the bus service, for instance, the companies from outside St. John's—But that does not license the buses operating in St. John's, the Capital Coaches even though they run outside St. John's.

MR. SMALLWOOD: They are licensed to operate outside by Public Utilities.
MR. CURTIS: I think the one inside can come under the Public Utilities Act if a request is made that they do administer them.

MR. BROWNE: I was wondering why—The two Acts seem to conflict.

MR. CURTIS: These are two distinct Acts, Mr. Chairman.

MR. BROWNE: I have it here—Page 1267 in the second volume. I am fairly familiar with it. I think, Mr. Chairman, that has been repealed too, if I am not mistaken or some of the sections of that by the bill we had today.

MR. CURTIS: That deals with the Motor Carrier Act, under Section 2. substituting some provision there.

MR. BROWNE: Why is it necessary to bring it under this Public Utilities Act?

MR. CURTIS: The Public Utilities Commission fixes the rates to be charged and unless they come under that Act the rates cannot be fixed. I don't think the Motor Carrier Act deals with rates, but more or less with a general franchise and physical examination of buses. But then I have the amendment amending this.

MR. BROWNE: I think the position is this, is it not, that under the old section those people operating vehicles came under the Motor Carrier Act—came under the direct supervision of the Public Utilities—But the Motor Carrier Act takes certain ones out—so this takes it away from Public Utilities rather than puts it under that.

Clause carried. Bill passed without amendments.

Committee of the Whole on Bill "An Act Relating to the St. John's Memorial Stadium Act 1954;"

Clause 1 carried. Clause 2 read:
2. In this Act
(a) "City" means the City of St. John's as defined in the City of St. John's Act;
(b) "commission" means the St. John's Memorial Stadium commission established by this Act;
(c) "council" means the St. John's Municipal Council as defined in the City of St. John's Act;
(d) "member" means a member of the commission;
(e) "stadium" means the stadium or rink building presently being erected on King's Bridge Road in the City and intended to be transferred to the City by the St. John's Memorial Stadium Association.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, there are two points I would like to draw attention to—Clause 5 sub-section 6—Each member shall serve for a period of appointment—In other words there is no specific time of office. I presume there must be some reason for that. The next point is: The Lieutenant-Governor in Council shall appoint one member of the Commission—I presume that if a vacancy occurs the Lieutenant-Governor in Council may appoint one to take his place. Now would the Attorney General explain the position where there is no definite time stated?

MR. HEFFERTON: I presume that they may be able to do that under regulations, if they want to set the time of office. I may say if the St. John's City Council were setting it up should they not determine terms in incorporating the Act?
MR. BROWNE: All right.

MR. CURTIS: I might say this bill was prepared by the City Council.

Clauses 2, 3, 4 carried. Clause 5 read:

5. (1) Immediately after the close of each financial year the commission shall prepare and submit a report to the council containing
(a) a complete, detailed and certified financial statement of its affairs, including revenue and expense account and balance sheet; and
(b) a general report of the operations of the commission during the year.

(2) The commission shall also furnish such information as from time to time may be required by the council.

(3) All the books, documents, transactions and accounts of the commission shall be audited annually by the Auditor General.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I don't know if there is any provision for publishing this report. I don't see any such provision there. I think the Municipal Council themselves under their own Act will do that.

MR. HEFFERTON: I take it they would have it in their power at any rate, Mr. Chairman.

Clause 5 carried. Clause 6 read:

6. (1) The commission may accumulate and maintain a cash reserve in an amount determined by the council from time to time and shall pay over to the City on or before the 31st day of December in each year for the benefit of the City's current account all funds in excess of such reserve.

(2) The financial year of the commission shall commence on the 1st day of July in each year and end on the 30th day of June in the following year.

MR. BROWNE: I wonder could the minister explain why—the 1st of July to the 30th of June. That is the old fashioned way.

MR. CURTIS: It would be because they are just beginning them now.

MR. BROWNE: I thought it was because the winter season begins the 1st of July and ends the 30th of June.

Carried. Bill passed without amendment.

Committee of the Whole on Bill, "An Act to Amend the National Flag Act."

MR. SMALLWOOD: Carried.

MR. BROWNE: Carry the flag. Bill passed without amendment.

Committee of the Whole on Bill, "An Act Further to Amend the Companies Act."

Clause 1 carried. Clause 2 read.

2. The Companies Act, Chapter 168 of the Revised Statutes of Newfoundland, 1952, is amended immediately after Section 17 as Section 17A the following:

"17A. Notwithstanding anything in this Act or the regulations, the Registrar shall not without the consent in writing of the Minister of Finance register the memorandum of association and articles of association, if any, of any company seeking incorporation for the purpose of carrying on the business of insurance whether within Newfoundland or elsewhere."
MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, has the Minister of Finance at Ottawa any departmental representative here at all?

MR. CURTIS: I don't think, Mr. Chairman, I think we have our own Superintendent of Fire Insurance, the Deputy Minister of Finance and his assistant Mr. Channing. They work together very closely and they do attend the conference every year.

Clause 2 through 4 carried. Clause 5 read:

5. Section 26 of the said Act is amended by adding thereto the following:

"Provided that, if at any time all the issued shares in a company, or all the issued shares therein of a particular class are fully paid up and rank pari passu for all purposes, none of those shares need thereafter have a distinguishing number so long as it remains fully paid up and ranks pari passu for all purposes with all shares of the same class for the time being issued and fully paid up."

MR. BROWNE: I have the Act here, and I was wondering how that proviso got adrift—it really belongs to Clause 26:

MR. CURTIS: It was just a printers' error, I think, in the consolidation, unless the person who cut out the Act pasted it in the wrong place.

Carried. Bill passed without amendment.

Committee of the Whole on Bill, "An Act Respecting the Inspection of Fish."

Clause 1 carried. Clause 2 read:

2. In this Act,

(a) "container" includes any type of receptacle or package used in holding, storing, packing, or marketing fish;

(b) "establishment" means any place where fish are handled, processed, graded or stored;

(c) "fish" means any fish including shellfish and crustaceans, and marine animals, and any parts, products or by-products thereof;

(d) "inspector" means an inspector appointed under this Act;

(e) "marketing" means buying, selling or holding in possession, offering or advertising for sale;

(f) "Minister" means the Minister of Fisheries and Co-operatives;

(g) "processing" includes cleaning, filleting, smoking, salting, icing, packing, freezing, cooking, pickling, drying, or preparing fish for market in any other manner;

(h) "regulations" means regulations made under this Act;

(i) "vehicle" includes any steamship, vessel, boat, railway car, truck, carriage, car, aircraft, or other means of carriage used for the carriage of fish.

MR. BROWNE: How did it happen, Mr. Chairman, that there was no provision for the inspection of fish? I do remember that there used to be an Act under which the magistrates, and I was one of those, used to go and inspect boxes and cases of tinned salmon and lobster. It was my duty to have them destroyed if any of them should not prove to be in good condition. I have frequently done that—I won't say frequently but I have done it several times.
MR. SMALLWOOD: All the fisheries laws in Newfoundland came under administration by Canada for the first five years of Confederation with the constant surveillance of the Lieutenant Governor in Council.

MR. BROWNE: They still have that provision?

MR. SMALLWOOD: They have the Fisheries Laws of Newfoundland, yes.

MR. BROWNE: Then according to the observations made by the Premier and the Minister; it is provincial civil rights and the Federal Government has no authority to do anything about it—But that does not apply really—

MR. SMALLWOOD: Until the Canadian Fisheries Act is proclaimed, and that may not be until next year.

MR. BROWNE: I see they still have authority.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I draw the attention of the Premier to an Act Respecting the Inspection of Pickled Fish and Fish Oils—

MR. SMALLWOOD: All fishery laws of Newfoundland are administered up to this moment by the Department of Fisheries in Canada.

MR. BROWNE: I know—This one will be too I guess.

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, unless we appoint them to do so.

MR. BROWNE: That is the only way you can have the inspection, through the Federal.

MR. SMALLWOOD: You can have fish inspected for two different purposes.

MR. BROWNE: What are these?

MR. SMALLWOOD: One for export and one for local consumption.

MR. BROWNE: That is surely not intended.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Not two sets of inspectors, no.

MR. BROWNE: That does not only apply to domestic consumption?

MR. KEOUGH: As of the date of union the fisheries laws of Canada continued in effect for Newfoundland and are still in effect. The Government of Canada is contemplating making the fisheries laws of Canada effective for Newfoundland. For sometime past there has been the Fish Inspection Act, the Fisheries Act, Canned Foods and Meat Act; which have been under study in relation to the fishery laws of Newfoundland still in effect. Now you can see that undoubtedly some change in the regulations under this Act will be necessary in order to have it cope with Newfoundland conditions. These will be determined by consultations between the representatives of the Government of Newfoundland and the Government of Canada. These conversations are to take place later this month. Sometime subsequently the Government of Canada will decide to make the Fisheries Laws of Canada effective for Newfoundland, and the old fisheries laws of Newfoundland will then be repealed. So that this Act is necessary in order that at that stage the Government of Newfoundland may be able to enable the Government of Canada to continue its inspection.

MR. BROWNE: That is in collaboration?

MR. KEOUGH: Definitely. Inspection regulations will only be brought into effect after consultation with the Government of Canada.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Every step of the way there is close collaboration.

Clauses 2 through 5 carried. Clause 6 read:

6. The Minister may refuse to issue any license required under this Act or the regulations without assigning any reason for the refusal.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, on that, I wonder—it seems a little bit high-handed—The minister may refuse to issue any license without assigning any reason for his refusal—What position is the fisherman going to be in, or the fish merchants, if you like, if the minister can refuse to issue a license without assigning any reason for refusing to do so. I wonder if the minister would explain what is intended there?

MR. KEOUGH: I don't know if I can give much of an explanation. I had a look at it myself when I saw a draft of the Act first, and it seems if the minister has the power to issue licenses he won't refuse provided the applicant meets the conditions in the Act. There is special authority contained in the Act to enable him to refuse. It is just there for a safeguard in case for some reason at some time a minister may wish to refuse to issue the license but does not wish to give the reason. If the clause was not in there the applicant, who had to fulfill the conditions of the Act, would just simply have to get the license—I cannot give specific instances.

MR. HOLLETT: Why should the minister refuse if the applicant meets with the conditions prescribed in the Act?

MR. SMALLWOOD: You might have all kinds of things arise which cannot possibly be covered in the Act. That is a claim fairly common in our statutes. There is nothing easier than to imagine reasons which might lead him to wish to refuse a license in the public interest. Now it is not a thing that is going to be used loosely—because the minister does not like the colour of a man's hair or the shape of his nose or his politics or religion. If the minister refuses it has got to be for a very good reason. There will be very few refusals.

MR. BROWNE: Will the minister be asked to issue licenses, for instance in that so difficult of access district of St. Barbe—or White Bay. If down there a man wants a license to pack lobsters how does he approach the minister, what is the machinery?

MR. KEOUGH: Through the inspector.

MR. BROWNE: Well, the inspector can't issue licenses.

MR. SMALLWOOD: But the contract is through the inspector.

MR. BROWNE: It is on the inspector’s report the licence will have to be refused and not on the minister's knowledge. The Minister would not have any knowledge in 95% of the cases, very likely, so that he would rely on the information from the inspectors.

MR. SMALLWOOD: But if the inspector refused the recommendation then the minister will make further inquiries.

MR. HOLLETT: I still don't understand why it is necessary to make an order like that without any reason for it. I, John Jones, come in and want a license—

MR. SMALLWOOD: Does not the honourable gentleman know that even the Chairman of the Liquor Board may refuse a license and not give a reason for it. That is not a minister but a Chairman of a Board.

MR. HOLLETT: Take any fisherman—he has confirmed to all regulations laid down and issued by the Department, the FDA, he comes in and expects to get a license. Then the Minister says; "No, you are not going to get a license." Then the man says, "Why?" He is then told by the Minister; "I am not going to tell you." Does not that seem ridiculous? It seems so to me.

MR. BROWNE: I wonder if there might not be some modification of that rigid rule—that there might be an appeal to the minister—Because as it reads now—

MR. SMALLWOOD: From the Minister?

MR. BROWNE: No, for reconsideration by the minister?

MR. SMALLWOOD: From the minister to the Lieutenant-Governor in Council

MR. BROWNE: No, to the minister—He would I take it make known his refusal on the recommendation of the inspector or in other words on a prima facie case put forward by the inspector, and on that he could refuse. Should there not be a provision here to enable the fisherman to have the thing reheard? I believe that under the Citizenship and Immigration Act an application may be turned down but may be reconsidered by the minister.

MR. CURTIS: We would not need to amend the Act to give the minister the right to reconsider his own decision. It might be awkward to give a reason for turning down a man. He might be a poor handler of fish. I know it would be awkward to have to give a reason. I think if he has the right to give the license he has the right to consider a refusal without putting it in the Act.

MR. HOLLETT: Why is it there at all?

MR. SMALLWOOD: He has that right anyway to reconsider, without having to put it in the Act.

MR. HOLLETT: Why is it in there at all? How about the poor man in White Bay or Long Harbour who goes to the inspector, and the inspector tells him, no, he cannot get the license, the minister has refused. Then when he asks why, the inspector does not know. What is the man to do, come to St. John’s to see the minister? It is no use talking to the inspector.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It seems to me he ought to have an appeal to the Lieutenant-Governor in Council.

MR. BROWNE: I think that is too elaborate.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Well, a man refused by the minister would write to the Premier, and that would be an appeal to the Lieutenant-Governor in Council.

MR. HOLLETT: Do you want that to happen?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Why not? It is happening all the time.

MR. HOLLETT: That is the type of thing.

MR. BROWNE: Are not the inspectors qualified to issue licenses? As it stands today it is the inspector, I take it, who recommends that a license be issued. The Minister takes the responsibility for the decision.
MR. SMALLWOOD: We cannot formally give the power to the inspector. That can only be given to the government through the minister. But in actual physical fact it is the inspector, in the absence of any serious obstacle.

MR. BROWNE: There is a provision that he may appeal to the minister who on his own decision—The Attorney General must be aware that frequently a Supreme Court hears an appeal on its own decision. The minister just takes the case forward by the inspector and may not hear it fully because the person appealing for a license may not feel it necessary to put everything he has forward—That is why I think there should be some provision whereby he may appeal to the minister.

MR. SMALLWOOD: If that is not done he can come back two or three times and the minister can reconsider two or three times. I would go further and have an appeal to the Lieutenant-Governor in Council, but I don't think even that is necessary.

MR. KEOUGH: There is one thing on which I would like to have the assurance of the Attorney General. Under the Act as it stands as agreed by the Government of Canada it was necessary to certify inspectors, that would not alter it?

MR. CURTIS: That would not alter it.

MR. SMALLWOOD: All that can be done by the Government of Canada is, it is our Act and this House must authorize us and we deputize them to do it, that is the story.

MR. HOLLETT: Does the Honourable minister think there is too much red tape with the fisheries?

MR. SMALLWOOD: We have not enough.

MR. HOLLETT: You want to have every fisherman in the country filling in a dozen forms. Under this Act he has to do all sorts of things before he establishes a place where he keeps fish. He goes to all that expense and trouble and then applies for a license—

MR. SMALLWOOD: It is probably because he does not that he is refused.

MR. HOLLETT: Then why not give the reason.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Ninety-nine times out of a hundred the inspector would be there at his elbow guiding and expostulating with him—but sometimes a man just gets pig-headed and won't co-operate.

MR. BROWNE: I do remember now when I come to think of it, under the Foods and Drugs Act Regulations made by the Department of Public Health persons were refused licenses because their premises were not in good sanitary condition. Then they go to work and clean up their premises and come back again and look for a license. But the refusal is there. Is there power to re-open the matter? That is all I am anxious to see.

MR. SMALLWOOD: A cat can look at a queen—anybody can ask—and if refused can ask again—then if refused still ask again, and keep on asking the minister, or write letters to the paper or write the Premier or write the government, write the Queen. It is not because the Minister says no, and won't say what that it is ended. We are living in a free land.
MR. BROWNE: We are not all as courageous as the premier about writing the minister.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Everybody does that. I get an average of two hundred letters a day, every day of my life, as all the other ministers do. Our people are not backward about writing the minister. The minister does not command the respect in this Province he does in the United Kingdom, for instance.

MR. HOLLETT: It looks like they are looking for more letters according to this.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is a right very largely exercised. Ministers are human and they are politicians too, you know, and are not trying to build up enemies.

MR. HOLLETT: It should not be in the Act at all. The House should not legislate to give the minister authority to refuse a man something without giving the reason, especially after the man goes to $500, $600 or $1,000 expense to put his premises in a proper condition. I am not saying the minister will deliberately turn down, nor vindictively turn down a man or anything of that nature, but he might. It is possible that some inspector around in different places in the country might. You know we have seen inspectors and ministers—I don’t need to go any further than that.

Clause carried.

On motion the committee rose and reported progress.

MR. COURAGE: Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole have passed the Bill, An Act Relating to the St. John’s Memorial Stadium, without amendment.

On motion report received—ordered read a third time on tomorrow.

MR. COURAGE: Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole have considered the Bill, An Act Respecting the Inspection of Fish, have made some progress and ask leave to sit again:

On motion report received—Committee ordered to sit again tomorrow.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, before you leave the Chair for recess, may I ask the Honourable and learned member for St. John’s West if he can inform me as to when he will be able to hand me the material offered last night in his speech?

MR. BROWNE: Now that the Premier has stated that the matter is in the hands of the R.C.M.P., if the R.C.M.P. should come to me I will give them the information.
MR. SPEAKER: It being now 6:00 o'clock I will leave the Chair until 8:00 o'clock.

House recessed until 8:00 of the clock.

June 10, 1954.

NIGHT SESSION

The House resumed at 8:00 of the clock.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, during the recess the firm of J. C. Pratt & Co. have issued a public statement denying categorically the allegations made in this House by the Honourable and Learned Member for St. John's West in his speech last night, and charging the Honourable and Learned Gentleman to make the same statement concerning them outside the House where he would not have the privileges attaching to members of this House, so that they could sue him in the courts and enable themselves to establish their innocence or enable him to prove their guilt. I wonder whether the honourable gentleman would now say whether he intends to do what that firm have invited him to do? Does he intend to repeat the statement outside the House?

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, no. That is in the hands of the police now, is it not?

The Honourable Minister of Finance moves the House into Committee of the Whole on Ways and Means:

MR. SPEAKER: Debate was adjourned:

MR. F. FOGWILL: Mr. Speaker, this budget, which the minister of finance delivered here a few days ago is the sixth budget speech which I have listened to in this Honourable House. And generally, as the minister pointed out in his speech, this year he reviewed the events of the past few years in regard to what, in his opinion, and in the opinion of the government, was done and the result of their activities during that period. He also pointed out, Mr. Speaker, and expressed an opinion and the opinion of the Government in regard to the present fiscal year in relation to public expenditure and the earnings which may or may not go into the pockets of the people.

Before going on to the budget, Mr. Speaker, I would like to say that I have heard many occasions in this House many remarks in relation to governments of the past. I have heard it said of this government that they are not a sit-down, do-nothing government; they have done and they have accomplished great things during the past five years. Mostly at these times they have expressed opinions of the governments of the past, prior to the Commission of Government. Many slurs, Mr. Speaker, have been cast upon the people of Newfoundland and the peoples' representatives in this House. I would like to say, Mr. Speaker, now, that no government of the past ever had the opportunity nor the privileges that this government has, wherein they have been able to spend the savings of the people, saved up by the Commission of Government — millions of dollars which they are not responsible for.

Now, Mr. Speaker, this present government have, I will agree and I will admit, done several things. But, Mr. Speaker, if this government had been faced with what governments of the past had been faced, I doubt if they could have accomplished as much as they have boasted of. I don't like to hear people cast reflections upon others who did their best in the time in which they lived. I know just as well as every other member in this House, that Newfoundland always had a very difficult time to carry on economically, mostly in the years when they had to depend upon one industry, the fishery. It was only after the advent of and the introduction of the paper mills into Newfoundland that governments of the past tried and attempted to get out of the one industry economy.

Mr. Speaker, the Minister of Finance said in his budget speech that he was very proud, and the government was very proud, to announce a surplus for fourteen years of $41,429,000; $11,831,000 of that collected by the present government since 1949. The remainder of it was collected prior to their coming into office. I don't think this government should try to take credit for surpluses which were collected before they came in here.

I want to turn, Sir, to a table which the Minister of Finance had prepared where he predicted that in the present year the people of this island would pocket $230,000,000, and he also said where earnings would come from. He did not break down into various sources of income except in one way, which he did. The Minister said that from paper, pulp and wood industries together with the mining, manufacturing and fishery, both salt and frozen fish, we would get a figure that can not help but impress us, an amount of $83,515,000 which the people would pocket in these three or four industries out of a total of $230,000,000. Mr. Speaker, that does not seem very impressive to me. Because the amount of $83,515,000 which the Minister claims will go into the pockets of the people is coming from Newfoundland's basic industries, is only 36% of the total. I don't think, as far as I am concerned that does not indicate to me a very buoyant or prosperous economy, to find only 36% of the total earnings going into the pockets of the people will amount only to $83,000,000 from our basic industries. I have broken it down, Sir, into three classifications—Government spending—production, and natural resources—And I find, Mr. Speaker, and I will be a little more charitable than the minister himself—And I find from government spending including defense; Government of Canada, Unemployment; Government of Newfoundland, road work and so on will account for 37.2 productivity. Natural Resources including paper, pulp, wood, mines, fishery, construction in general, frozen fish industry, dividends, interest etc. which I presume would be on Newfoundland's Natural Resources, motor vehicle trade and miscellaneous, which I feel should be put in that category, account for 45.2% of the total. The non-productive amounts which go into the pockets of the people, include transportation, agencies, etc. account for 16.89%. I don't know, Sir, if that should show to anyone here that we have a very prosperous economy, when only 45% of the total economy which was predicted by the minister is going into the pockets of the people this year comes from our basic industries. It does not show it to me, Sir, that we have a very buoyant or prosperous economy.

The minister also pointed out in his budget speech that the Newfoundland people this year would receive possibly the amount of five million dol-
Jars in unemployment insurance. And he went on to say: "Unemployment insurance is shown at $5 million, which appears to be an increase of $4 million over last year. In actual fact last year's estimate of $1 million was far too low. The amount actually paid out for the year was $4,300,000. Paradoxical as it may seem, these are encouraging figures." Mr. Speaker, in respect to that the minister, I believe, pointed out to the House that, in his opinion, this would show that there would be a greater number of people employed in insurable employment. It indicates to me, Sir, an entirely different view. It shows me, on the minister's own figures, we will this year have twenty thousand people, if this is based on averages of amounts paid each week as unemployment insurance benefits, we will have twenty thousand people out of work for a period of four months. That is for those people employed in insurable employment. In addition we will have another great number of people who possibly may be employed at the fishing industry during the fishing season and naturally will be unemployed during the fall and winter months. In total, I believe we would have thirty thousand people out of work for four or five months. That does not indicate to me either, that we have a very buoyant or prosperous economy.

Now, Sir, on page 9 of the minister's speech he says: "We believe that no loans or investments that the Government can make will produce sounder results than those made in the fisheries. In the calendar year 1953, for instance, the plants to which we had lent the $7 million employed some 3100 workers and paid them 3½ million in wages, they bought fish from 439 dragger fishermen to the value of 1¼ million, and from 2900 other fishermen to the value of $1.5 million. Thus these plants paid out in cash, in 1953, in wages and in fish prices to the fishermen, the handsome sum of 6½ million."

Now, Mr. Speaker, what does that mean? Here we have according to the minister, where they invested somewhere around about $7 million in the fisheries, and he claimed that all of these people which he enumerated here in this paragraph would receive the handsome sum of 6½ million. That divided, Mr. Speaker, amongst the number of people employed in the particular trade which he refers to, would mean only $81 a man, a very pitiful sum in respect of this item which he seemed to be so proud about.

Then, Sir, he goes on to say: "Thus we find that by lending $7 million to a number of private companies operating in the fishing industry we have caused improvement that employs 4000 workers and buys fish from 4000 fishermen. The total of the wages and the amount paid out for fish will be a little over $8 million a year."

I think in this section he refers to this present year. If eight thousand people employed as fishermen will receive $8 million in this fiscal year, it means only one thousand dollars a year each. It only means to me they will receive the pitiful, the very small and miserable sum of $83 a month. Mr. Speaker, I would like to point out here, if a person is not working and receives unemployment benefits at the high rate he would receive that without working at all.

I want to make some little reference now to some of the new industries. The Premier said, in 1952 I believe it was, in reference to the new industries, the Premier said at that time that in his opinion these new industries would employ from seven to eight thousand people at full time and another one thousand five hundred people part time. He said at that time, that this would have the effect of resulting in such a volume of employment that it would result in another one thousand persons getting their living indirectly out of these industries, and the total number of Newfoundlanders involved would thus run perhaps as high as thirty thousand, and the annual wage bill should run to something around ten million dollars a year.

Now, Sir, these are far-fetched statements. The Premier said that in 1952 and this is 1954. The Premier said in 1951, Sir, in respect to some of these new industries, he said at that time when he made some remarks in respect to the building of the cement plant at Corner Brook—This plant could be built for a very low figure of $1,100,000 whereas in fact it cost more than four million seven hundred thousand dollars. And he said at that time, Mr. Speaker—

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, that is not so. It did not cost that.

MR. FOGWILL: Four million seven hundred thousand dollars. The Auditor General says so.

MR. SMALLWOOD: No he does not. The Honourable gentleman, I am sure, does not wish to misrepresent the Auditor General or even misrepresent me. I think the honourable gentleman is now including working capital with the cost of the building.

MR. FOGWILL: That is the cost.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The working capital, part of the cost?

MR. FOGWILL: To the taxpayer, Sir. When the Honourable the Premier made that prediction he said it would be built and put into operation, ready to operate for a very low sum of $1,100,000. Of course I realize just as well as the Premier and other members of this House that it would require certain sums as working capital. Nevertheless, the guess or gamble on the cost of the plant at that time has been shown to be so far wrong as to be almost ridiculous. The actual cost including working capital was $4,700,000 from $1,700,000. Now at that time the Premier also pointed out, or he implied that the Government was flooded with letters from all over the mainland asking for delivery of cement from that plant. And he seemed to be in great doubt at that time whether the Government should sell the plant at a profit, which they did not. They sold it at a loss—Whether they should sell the plant at a profit or whether they should lease it or whether they should hand it over to the Newfoundland Labrador Corporation for operation.

Now, Sir, another thing in respect to these new industries was the gypsum plant. The Premier said at that time that the gypsum plant when ready to operate would cost $2,100,000, and its actual cost to date, on this plant is now in the vicinity of $2,900,000 and that does not include the amount in the present estimates of $100,000 as a token vote. So Mr. Speaker, the estimate for the building of this plant was very far wrong.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Surely the honourable gentleman does not wish to misrepresent—I am sure he does not.

MR. FOGWILL: Is the Premier on a point of order?
MR. SMALLWOOD: Will the honourable gentleman yield—He just persists in misrepresenting—But it is his privilege.

MR. FOGWILL: No I have to quote, Sir, from the Premier's remarks in 1951 when he said: "It is widely known by now that we have in recent months launched three important new enterprises, these are the cement factory, the gypsum plaster and plaster board and the birch veneer plywood and plywood door factories, thanks entirely to the genius and skill of Dr. Alfred Valdmanis, our new Director of Economic Development and Mr. Ernest Leja, our chief engineer. Under him we are erecting at Humbermouth a magnificent new cement mill at a cost which represents a cash saving of several million dollars on the basis of costs applicable to factories being built elsewhere. Let me say in the first place that this cement mill will be one of the most efficient in the world and will produce portland cement of even better quality than the highest American and Canadian and British standards." By Golly! we are to have a Newfoundland standard and do it at a production cost to equal that of any mill in North America. "Two very distinguished European Cement Engineers have pronounced themselves as being greatly impressed by the quality and efficiency, and the site and plants have been examined by famous American Cement Engineers with exactly the same result. Mr. Leja, our supervising engineer, was for twenty years one of the most distinguished cement men in his native Latvia, and in Germany was managing director of several of the large cement mills, as asbestos cement and gypsum mills. The cement mill which is now nearing completion is being built by William J. Lundrigan of Corner Brook while the machinery has been manufactured by the great German Firm of MIAG. "The whole project on the date it commences to operate this summer will have cost Newfoundland the incredibly low figure of $3,100,000."

The actual cost to date, Mr. Speaker is $4,700,000.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is not so, Mr. Speaker. The honourable gentleman does not want to persist in his misrepresentation, surely—

MR. FOGWILL: The Auditor General says in his 1953 report in respect to the cement mill, North Star Cement Company, the cost was $4,700,000.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Not the capital cost, which the honourable gentleman is talking about. Mr. Speaker it is unscrupulous, downright lying, lying, deliberately lying.

MR. FOGWILL: Is that a point of order, Mr. Speaker?

MR. SPEAKER: No.

MR. FOGWILL: The premier went on to say in 1951—"This includes the limestone quarry and gypsum quarry, the modern steel framed machine shop, the chemical laboratory building, the garage, the administration building, the emergency power stand-by plant—

MR. SMALLWOOD: But not the working capital.

MR. FOGWILL: In other words this three million one hundred thousand dollars according to this included all these things, the garage, the building, included everything, Mr. Speaker.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The plant, not the working capital.

MR. FOGWILL: All right! The premier went on to say; "I am aware of two other cement mills of exactly the same size now being built in North America and each of these other cement mills cost almost exactly double what our cement mills are costing, a very pleasant fact for which we owe all our thanks to Dr. Valdmanis and Mr. Leja. We have been flooded by firms outside Newfoundland asking us to sell cement from our mill. The market for cement was never more brisk. We have it on incomparable authority that the cement market will continue brisk."

I believe it will be brisk from now on because, I understand from the press and radio, the St. Lawrence Hydro Development is going ahead. This, no doubt, will require large amounts of cement. And I am just as happy as the premier will be to know that this project will require large amounts of cement. And, no doubt, Mr. Speaker, our cement plant will be able to supply some of it.

The premier went on to say: "The Government is now giving very careful consideration to the question of what would be the best thing in the public interest to do about the cement mill. Should we sell it outright at a profit? Should we sell a part interest to private enterprise? Should we lease it to private enterprise? Should we create a Crown Corporation to operate it? It is a very important decision that we have to make and our only test is our concept of the public interest."

Well, Mr. Speaker, the cement mill has been sold. It has been sold, as I understand, for the sum of $4,623,213. That amount, I understand, was not paid to the government for the mill, but the people who bought the mill were by agreement bound to pay that part of the interest and sinking fund of the ten million dollar loan which was negotiated by the government in 1952. This is the agreement, and perhaps I had better read it in respect to the cement mills. As I understand it there, Section 6 says: (In respect to the sale of the mill and the mortgage on the mill) "The said mortgage shall bear interest at the rate of four and three-quarter per cent per annum, and the principle sum secured thereby shall include the cost of the bond issue of ten million dollars floated by the government July 15, 1952. Total amount includes such charges and amounts due under clause 4 and 5 thereof fixed at $4,740,000."

Anyway, Sir, the cement mill has now been sold, and up to this present time, to my knowledge at least, they have not paid any part of the principal and I don't think they have paid any interest.

Now the Premier went on to say in 1951: "We have been almost equally fortunate in the contract made for the erection of the large new gypsum plaster and plaster board and plaster lathe factory. These two factories at Humbermouth will, I believe, be the most efficient gypsum plants in North America."

Always the best, Mr. Speaker, nothing but the best. Better than the best. "Embodying in their design certain new principles never before employed on this side of the Atlantic. The two factories which will need twenty full loads of raw gypsum rock will cost, when ready later in the year, two million one thousand dollars. Mr. Lundrigan is erecting the mill and the machinery is being manufactured in Germany by the firm of Benno Schilde, whose impressive plant certain of my colleagues and I had the pleasure of inspecting last fall."
"We have," the Premier said, "in our contracts for these two factories saved the best part of a million dollars."

Now, Mr. Speaker, where is the saving? I would like to know. I see no sign of that million yet. In fact the million is gone with the other millions for both of these plants.

"We have in our contracts for these two plants saved the best part of a million dollars."

A million dollars, Sir, is a lot of money, better than $3 a man in the pockets of the fishermen.

Then the Premier continued: "We shall have factories that will turn out a quality of gypsum plaster and plaster board not excelled, to say the least, in North America."

Now, Mr. Speaker, this gypsum plant is not now operating at all at full production. It is operating only at one-third production, which I believe is the inference I gathered only a few days ago.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Which is incorrect.

MR. FOGWILL: I understand that for a gypsum plant of this sort to operate at a profit it must operate at full production, and that is for twenty-four hours a day. In the words of the I will say, retired doctor of economic development, whom I am confident brought into being this plant—But it is the Premier who is responsible for it as Minister of Economic Development. And I have in my possession the books which were presented in this House on the operation of such a plant as a gypsum plant, where it was brought to the attention of the Members of the House that a gypsum plant such as was proposed to be built from it a profit of seven hundred thousand dollars a year could accrue to the government on that operation. Up to the present time they have not made a cent nor paid any interest.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I will continue: The Premier said in 1951: "In many ways the most impressive of the three new industries is the one now being erected at Donovans beside St. John's. The cash outlay on this factory is in the neighbourhood of one million dollars, but it will provide employment for far more men and it will be far more wide-spread throughout the province. Like the cement and gypsum plants the birch plant will be the most modern." The most modern, the best for Newfoundland—The most modern—But no advice from anybody—only a thought—take it right out of the air. We have the birch. We must have the factory—Therefore we will have a factory. "Most modern, efficient, streamlined production mill of this kind in North America, the very last word in modern industry—the very last word—It will be served by the only large stand of healthy birch left anywhere in Canada east of the Pacific."

Now I would like to ask at this point, and would like to make reference to the statement—"It will be served by the only large stand of healthy birch left anywhere in Canada east of the Pacific Coast. The Premier in 1952 said in this House we should all of us thank the Almighty God for his kindness in giving us such splendid forests of good birch timber.

Now I will ask you this: Where are our birch forests? Have we got one? No, Mr. Speaker, I don't think we have one birch forest in all of Newfoundland and Labrador. I agree, and I will admit, that we may have good stands of birch in the soft-wood forests. But we have not forests of birch. And anybody who knows anything about birch, Mr. Speaker, will know they have to go to the soft-woods forests and find birch, find good stands of birch, and will have to be very careful in the selection of the trees to cut. That is a well-known fact. There has been no evidence produced in this House, Sir, by anyone since we came here five years ago to show me or any member of this House that we have a birch forest. Where is the birch forest, or where are they?

Then the Premier went on to say: "This birch is to be found in fourteen of our twenty-nine constituencies." I will mention later facts to illustrate the wide-spread nature of the stands and the wide-spread character of the payments made for the purchase of raw material for the factory. Then the Premier went on to say this, "There would not be the slightest difficulty in selling at a profit the output of four other groups of mills the same size as those at Donovans."

Now Sir, how are they going to sell the products of the Donovans Mills operating now for quite a while, and as far as I understand has been operating in the red. It has never operated in the black. I would like to see it operating in the black. But if there are any birch forests in Newfoundland the birch mill should be where the birch forests are. Why build it in St. John's? The birch mill at Donovans is thirty or forty miles from birch, I think, and it has to be hauled in by truck. If we have a birch forest, Sir, no matter where it is the birch mill should be as near as possible to it and not miles and miles away.

This birch mill, in the opinion of the Minister in 1951, was only to cost one million dollars, and up to the present time the birch mill, instead of costing one million dollars cost one million seven hundred and eighty thousand, six hundred and forty eight dollars. Besides that, in working capital they have been advanced certain amounts of money which brings the total cost of the factory to the taxpayers to over three and a half million dollars. Now this was the worst guess of the Premier, and I am sorry for him, I sympathise, I am sorry for the government to have rushed into economic development without finding out all the facts about it. Because there were other people living in this world of ours, before the Premier was ever born and this plant came along. But this man came along and he believed he was the last word in deciding costs and what was to be done and what not, and he took no advice from anyone.

In the words of the Premier himself, mostly I believe in 1951, in speeches here in the House he inferred to me at least that in the spending of that large amount in financing these new industries were more or less just a gamble on the part of the government to try and fasten the attention of the outside world on Newfoundland and on what Newfoundland had to offer.

The government did spend large amounts of the peoples' money. They invited people to come in here not only from the mainland of Canada and the United States, which they could not get, and I am very sorry they could not do so, but they invited people from the other side of the water to come in here and had to finance these industries brought in here, and had to show to the financiers on the Mainland of Canada and in the United States that we had great possibilities here where these people could invest money. Up to the present time we have no evidence at all that people from the Mainland of Canada or the United States have come in here with any substantial amounts of capital to try and develop our natural resources.

The same thing applies, Mr. Speaker, to the fishery—a fifty per cent gamble. I am not going to say much more in this debate, because after all, the estimates have been passed, supply has been passed. I will say this much; generally, the estimates were brought in much earlier than at this time of the year, and the Opposition at least had a reasonable chance to look at the estimates and pass an opinion on them. This year we had no such chance. We were rushed right through. They came in on Monday. We worked Tuesday and Tuesday night and were almost forced to go on after 11:00 o'clock on Wednesday night, which is not even ordinarily a sitting night.

I want to make some reference to the Minister of Finance’s figures on the last page of the budget speech. The Minister of Finance said, on page 21: “We began as a Province of Canada with a cash surplus of $41,232,663. To this the following amounts have been added since 1949-50 by turning the non-cash surplus into cash:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Year</th>

Making a total surplus for five years of $65,985,428.” And he goes on to say, or to refer to Economic Development that the amounts spent on economic development and the extension of public services amounted to $51,418,209 and the Liquidation of pre-union liabilities $252,574. Then he says, having taken in a total of $56 millions and spent $55½ millions of that we have still an amount of approximately $10½ million. This amount, he said, lies on deposit with the government of Canada to our credit, and draws interest at the rate of 2½%. And he says; we are permitted by the Terms of Union to withdraw it only for the purpose of meeting any deficits we may incur on current account revenue, but it will become a free balance on the first of April 1957.

Now no matter in what way you compute these figures, I find—I would like to point out here at the moment before I go any further that our provincial debt at 1949, our net debt, was $5,700,000. That was at the rate of $10 per head population. If the government borrows twelve million dollars this year, which they have signified they are intending to do, at the end of the present fiscal year our provincial debt will stand at $70 per head per population, and an increase over a five year period of $60 a head. Now I want to say this: If the present government had started in 1949 with no money, without any money, they would be in this position at the present time. They would be in the position at the present time that they would have at the end of the present year equalled the Newfoundland National Debt at 1949. The present government have overspent on all accounts. They have an overall deficit of $42,226,00 over the six year period under review. The surplus at the date of union was $41,232,699, and they have turned, in surpluses, since that date, $11,831,000. Thus we have a nett, Mr. Speaker, of $53,063,798. Added to this must be the ten million dollar loan realizing $9,850,000. That leaves us, Mr. Speaker, today at the end of the present fiscal year ending March 31 next year, with an overall deficit of $42,226,420 just on this now. Then if the Government should borrow in this present year the amount of $12,000,000 as they say they are going to do, that will add another $12,000,000 to the amount of $42,000,000. So that, at the end of the present fiscal year, Mr. Speaker, we will have spent an amount of $54,000,000 over and above the revenue which we took in on ordinary account. That is what we will have done.

There is one other thing, Sir, in closing I will say—The Transitional Grant is in as revenue in the ordinary sense, but it is not. This government did not collect it. It is a grant given to the Province of Newfoundland to try and get us over a difficult period for the eight, nine or ten years of union. This amount at the end of the present fiscal year will be $3,950,000. So that I conclude this, by saying, with the exception of the assets which were turned into cash of $3,071,650 we will at the end of the present fiscal year have spent an amount equal to the national debt of Newfoundland in 1949, and that amount was $84 million just prior to union. At the end of the fiscal year we won't have a provincial debt but we will have overspent eighty four million dollars more than we took in in ordinary revenue. This does not show me a very buoyant nor prosperous economy in Newfoundland—It does not.

Now Mr. Speaker, we here on this side of the House never hamper the government in any way. We ask them questions and try to get answers to questions. We have asked questions of the government and have had answers given to us but on other questions we have asked we have not had answers given to us. And in respect to all of these new industries I don't see any reason why, Mr. Speaker, the government should hide or not give all the information necessary so that the people of this country, and the members of the government and we in the Opposition, will be informed of what is going on, particularly when there are such large amounts of money spent, the peoples' money, spent on these industries. I don't see any reason why they should not give us that information. Because where the government has estimated the building of these industries at a low figure and it has cost so much more, in fact over fifty per cent more than these estimates we should know the reason why the cost was so high. Wages never went up that much, Mr. Speaker. Wages are still low, and supply has not gone up that much, not to the extent that these industries cost so much more than estimated in the first instance. It is ridiculous to expect people to accept that fact. If the government would admit its mistakes in the estimates in the first instance I think they would have more understanding from the Opposition.

I want to make reference, Mr. Speaker, to one more item, if I may—Last evening in speaking to the amendment to the budget speech—I don't know if I am allowed to talk of that, but I want to make a correction to what the Premier said. He made some reference to something I said six years ago in the National Convention in regard to some figures I presented at the National Convention in 1948, and that I was ashamed to show my face for two days because he wiped the floor up with me. Now, Sir, I presented figures in the National Convention of 1948 and they were derived from the customs returns of 1946 of that year. The Member for Bonavista Centre, now the Premier of this Province, presented other figures contrary to mine. But he computed his figures on customs returns of 1947, which he admitted in the National Convention at the end of his talk, the difference was over three million dollars in the 1946 and 1947 customs returns. So how could you arrive at the same answer? I will say this much too, Sir, the figures I presented in the convention in 1948 were gone into by a very competent committee composed of citizens of St. John's and were commented upon by a full page in the Daily News shortly after Mr. C. C. Pratt, now Senator Pratt, when he said at that time, that the committee which compiled the figures of revenue going to Canada under Confederation were a very competent committee. The committee which at that time worked on these figures was represented by myself in the National Convention. I just want to correct the impression which was given by the Premier last night, Mr. Speaker.

MR. SPEAKER: I am at a disadvantage not having heard the debate—one should not refer to a debate on an amendment on which he did not speak.

MR. FOGWILL: The Premier made a reference to something which happened six years ago, and I think I should make reference to the same thing and try to make a correction, if I can, Mr. Speaker—that is all I have to say.

MR. S. DROVER: Mr. Speaker, it is a pleasure to note that the Fisheries Development will be carried on in White Bay this year. I have nothing to take back from anything I said earlier in this Assembly concerning development of the fisheries in White Bay, but I would like to add that we have a large number of fishermen from Conche, Englee, Harbour Deep, Jackson's Arm, Westport and Seal Cove where there has been no development apart from Englee and a very small plant. I hope that when the time is opportune the needs of these people will not be overlooked. In White Bay we have more fishermen than in any other district in the Province. The people there produce more salt bulk fish, than in any other district in the Province of Newfoundland.

Roads: There is a great need for roads in White Bay. We pride ourselves on one road in White Bay which leads anywhere, and that is a road which was built by this government since 1949 from Seal Cove to Baie Verte. Thousands of people have found that road to be very convenient. All parts of the district are clamoring for roads so that they can break away from their isolation. White Bay can be divided into four sections as far as road connections are concerned. It is impossible, I know, to build roads throughout the entire district. The section where road construction can be carried out is in the Englee-Cook Harbour Area, Roddickton, Englee, Main Brook, Jackson's Arm, Sops Arm, Westport, Fleur De Lys, Baie Verte and La Scie. Road construction must come in White Bay with fishery development. It will be a means of the fishermen getting their catches to the various plants, and it will also open up land in the area which I have mentioned, and it will also be a means... of getting sick people to hospital or nursing centres.

Health Problem: The health problem of White Bay is, I would say, the most important, by far the most important. We can classify the problem under three headings: (1) Hospital facilities, (2) Extension of Nursing Services and (3) Cheaper hospital rates. In connection with these three, Mr. Speaker, I make a strong protest to the government on behalf of the people of White Bay regarding the government's policy in administering medical services to the district of White Bay. This is not a new protest. It is the same one expressed by me four years ago. The only hospital in White Bay is at St. Anthony. The district of White Bay is 220 miles long, a coastline of 220 miles. We have one doctor at Baie Verte in the southern part of White Bay. For the people of Conche, Roddickton, Quirpon, to get any medical assistance they must come into the town of St. Anthony for medical treatment or hospitalization. There is not a nursing station north of St. Anthony. In the southern part of the district, for the past years, the nursing station at Jacksons Arm was closed as also was the nursing station at LaScie. Just picture the people of St. John's having to take a mother or a small child in an open boat, and sometimes being lucky enough to get a canvas tent to go over it, and take them around Cape St. Francis facing the angry waters of the Atlantic Ocean and carry them up to Holyrood or Bay Roberts. It is true that the government has an air-lift service, which the people of White Bay. I am sure would wish to thank for. But that service is inadequate. There are times when planes cannot operate from Torbay or Gander. There were times and years, as most of you in this House will remember, when people were marooned on islands in Fogo District and a plane could not fly to drop food supplies. People who understand the rugged coastline of Newfoundland, and even if they travel sometimes just to Bell Island, can tell you how stormy it was crossing the tickle to Bell Island. Well that would probably give an idea what the people of White Bay must go through in order to get medical assistance or hospitalization in the northern part of Newfoundland.

In the southern part of the district there is the same problem. The only thing is that there is not a hospital within one hundred and fifty miles. There is one doctor and one nursing station at Baie Verte. The cost of hospitalization for White Bay and the cost of transportation, comes to quite a bit, and the hospital fees are quite high. Mr. Speaker, as to the doctors on the northeast coast I will again refer to the south coast as a comparison. I will take from Grand Bank to Port aux Basques or Channel. I am not saying that the people of Grand Bank and the settlements along the South Coast should not have hospitals and doctors. I don't think for a moment that they have too many. But I will just use it as a comparison. There is a doctor at Grand Bank, one at Belleoram, one at Harbour Breton, one at Hermitage, one at Rose Blanche, one at Channel. Cost of hospitalization in these places is fifteen dollars per year for a family. The cost in the White Bay area, if they ever get to a hospital, is five dollars a day, apart from transportation. I have here, Mr. Speaker, a list of the people who were presented with bills for hospitalization. They were picked at random, some of them I have received begging me to ask the Department of Health if they would have them paid. After all the White Bay people are mostly fishermen. If they clear, or make a thousand dollars in the run of twelve months to feed a large family they are pretty lucky. I have here one from Hampden, a widow. She has $20 outstanding and had to pay fifty dollars before she was admitted at the Western Memorial Hospital.

(2) A patient from St. Leonards, International Grenfell Hospital, 13 days board at $5 a day.

(3) From Hampden $420.36.

(4) From Baie Verte $630.

(5) Harbour Deep 9 days at St. Anthony and $20 for an operation, $65.

(6) A little girl here at the General Hospital from Baie Verte about $325.

(7) A little chap from Sops Island who is now dead, and his father had to pay $980.

(8) From Wild Cove $150. A total of $2,644.36 for eight persons in White Bay. Elsewhere there are cottage hospitals and it would cost eight persons fifteen dollars a year, $120 for eight of them, if they were from eight different families. That fifteen dollars would cover an entire family no matter if they averaged eight or nine in family. That is just $120 in comparison to White Bay $2,644.36. I consider this unfair Sir, to the people of White Bay in comparison to services given to other parts of the Province.

In 1949 I asked that a cottage hospital be built in White Bay. That was before I went out as a candidate with the Liberal Party. I have asked repeatedly since then for a hospital. I was told since 1949 that there would be three hospitals built in the Province and without doubt one of them would be built in White Bay. The hospitals were built, one at Channel—They needed a hospital—One at Fogo, and I am sure my honourable friend thinks that in that constituency they needed one very badly—One in the District of Green Bay at Springdale. Two of the hospitals were built outright from funds provided by the government. The other was built by the government, apart from $35 thousand approximately, which was collected by the people. When we could not get the government to build a hospital I asked the Department of Health what they were prepared to do if we tried to collect what we could among the fishermen of White Bay and friends of White Bay. They told us that if we could collect one hundred thousand dollars they would give us one hundred thousand. You know as I do and as every member of this side of the House or in this House knows, it was an almost impossible task to collect amongst the poor people of this country, of White Bay district, one hundred thousand dollars. In other words the people of White Bay won't get a hospital until we collect one hundred thousand dollars. The people of White Bay must still go over the trails and the meadows, they must still brave the angry waves of the Atlantic Ocean, and most expectant mothers have to leave their homes in the Fall and go to St. Anthony or Corner Brook when they have friends there to go to, to wait until they expect their babies. They have done it before and are doing it now and will have to continue to do it. They have given birth to their children on coastal boats—and they have done it since 1949.
Remember, Mr. Speaker, I was expelled from this party for making a statement in 1949 similar to the one I have made tonight. I spent seven months in the Opposition. I was asked back to this side of the House, but at that time I asked a question: I asked if I came over on behalf of the people of White Bay who elected me, would I be guaranteed that the rights of these ten thousand seven hundred people who lived in White Bay, and whom I had the honour to represent, if their rights would be respected? If I remember correctly, I was told, yes.

As far as I am concerned, Mr. Speaker, the rights of the people of White Bay have not been respected. If they were we would have cheaper hospital rates and extension of medical services and better hospital facilities. And, Mr. Speaker, tonight—I hate to say it—but after looking at these hospital bills—I would probably stop and would consider—but the more I look at and the more I read the more my nerves can't stand it—And tonight I make a statement. I shall walk out of the Liberal Party—I did not intend it when I came in. But I shall walk out of the Liberal Party—It is not my intention to keep the people of White Bay in Opposition. But within reasonable time I shall resign my seat in this House and give the people of White Bay a chance to elect another representative who will be able to get them the necessities of life which they are clamouring for and which they want. I still tonight make a strong protest, and I believe every mother and every father in White Bay will back me up for making that decision.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of the debate.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I suggest we now go into Committee of the Whole on items No. 9,10,11,12.

MR. SPEAKER: Committee of the Whole on Sundry Bills—

On Motion Mr. Speaker left the Chair:

Committee of the Whole on Bill, “An Act Respecting the Inspection of Fish:”

MR. SMALLWOOD: I think, Mr. Chairman, we were discussing Clause 6, and were about to come to Clause 7:

MR. CHAIRMAN: The Committee was discussing Clause 7:

Clause 7 carried:
Clause 8 carried:
Clause 9: read.

9. For the purposes of this Act, inspectors may administer oaths and take and receive affidavits, declarations and affirmations.

Clause 10 read:

10. (1) Whenever an inspector believes on reasonable grounds that an offence against this Act or the regulations has been committed, he may seize all fish and containers by means of or in relation to which he reasonably believes the offence was committed.

(2) Subject to sub-section (3), all fish and containers seized pursuant to sub-section (1) may be detained for a period of two months following the day of seizure, unless during that period proceedings under this Act in respect of those fish and containers are undertaken in which case fish and containers may be further detained until the proceedings are finally concluded.
Where fish is seized under sub-section (1) the inspector or other person having the custody thereof may sell it and shall pay the proceeds of the sale into the Consolidated Revenue Fund.

Where no proceedings are taken following a seizure under this section or where they are taken and the person charged is acquitted of the charge made against him:

(a) the inspector or other person having the custody of the fish and containers seized under subsection (1) shall return them to the person from whom he seized them;

(b) Where the fish is sold under sub-section (3) the Minister shall pay the proceeds of the sale to the person from whom the fish and containers were seized under subsection (1).

Where a person is convicted of an offence against this Act or the regulations or of a violation of any of the conditions of any license issued under this Act or the regulations the court before whom he is convicted may, in addition to any penalty imposed under this Act, order that the fish and containers by means of or in relation to which the offence was committed or the proceeds of any sale under subsection (3) forfeited to Her Majesty to be disposed of as the Minister directs.

Mr. Hollett: Mr. Chairman, that seems to be a very peculiar section—Sub-section (3) it does not make sense—What is the purpose of detaining it for two months?

Mr. Keough: I presume the purpose is to give them time for prosecutions to take place. Magistrates in Newfoundland may not be able to get around very rapidly and it may take longer than a week or two to move in certain territories.

Mr. Browne: This is to be dovetailed into other regulations under the other Act operated by the Federal Department of Fisheries, I take it. I am thinking especially of the inspection of lobsters, for example, they give inspectors power to go in and take samples. But the have power under other regulations under another Act to inspect these lobsters, and if found bad to declare that they be all destroyed.

Mr. Keough: Under the regulations of that Act they would have the necessary authority. If lobsters were found to be contaminated, they would have such power, yes.

Clause 9 and 10 carried:

Clause 11 read:

11. (1) No person shall falsify or unlawfully alter, destroy, erase or obliterate any declaration, inspection certificate or other document made or issued under this Act or the regulations or any marks placed on any containers pursuant to this Act or the regulations.

(2) Every person who violates sub-section (1) is guilty of an offence and is liable on summary conviction to a fine of not less than fifty dollars or more than five hundred dollars or to imprisonment for a term of not less than two months or more than six months or to both fine and imprisonment.

Mr. Browne: Mr. Chairman, I wonder what is meant there by the word "unlawful" "Falsify" I understand, but to "unlawfully alter?"
MR. SMALLWOOD: Well unlawfully alter or destroy any literature he ought not to, any declaration of an inspector or other document.

Clause 11 carried:

Clause 12 carried:

Clause 13 read:

13. Every person who violates any of the provisions of this Act or the regulations or any condition attached to any license issued under this Act or the regulations for which no penalty is elsewhere provided in this Act is guilty of an offence and is liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars or to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months or to both fine and imprisonment.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, these fines in this section and the previous one seem to me to be very heavy. Supposing a person does make fish which is not wholesome, and not fit for human food—he might not be the most intelligent man and he might not realize what he is doing, and quite easily he might be fined one hundred dollars. It seems to me this is a very heavy fine, particularly for a first offence. It may be all the money the man has in the world is a hundred dollars, and that is just the same as if you took away his livelihood from him, because he might have to go to jail for three months. Now nobody approves of selling unwholesome fish. But I say, it may be done inadvertently or without complete knowledge—And according to the way it reads here now, that is all there is to it, if he makes it and sells it then he is fined—he has had it.

MR. SMALLWOOD: If marketing any fish intended for human consumption.

MR. BROWNE: It seems to me that where somebody has been injured by it, certainly then there would be a very grave offence, but supposing nobody is injured by it at all, it is detected quickly, is noticeable as soon as a person opens the fish or examines it. It then seems to me the thing is not as serious. I have in mind the case of a gentleman who sold me some fish—say you buy two or three tins of salmon or lobster, the man selling them did not know it is bad—I might not realize it. I feel that he would not do it deliberately and yet if you have that there and you go to the court or the R.C.M.P. who are in favour now, and say, look, here is a tin of rabbit, or some article, I just bought it for human consumption. Look at it. Smell it. All right. He issues a summons and brings the chap to court, and what can he do about it? Suppose he says he did not know? It does not say here. It says: no person shall market—who shall willfully or knowingly market any fish intended for human consumption and which is unwholesome and unfit for human consumption.” Put it in that fashion. I also suggest the fine be lower than one hundred dollars.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Not willfully—and then lower the fine?

MR. BROWNE: Lower the fine too.

MR. SMALLWOOD: For a man convicted of knowingly marketing rotten fish.

MR. BROWNE: I know that sounds terrible, but a hundred dollars for even a person like that. I say he might do it knowingly but yet without completely appreciating it. There may be a case that could be made for a man like that, if he is a very poor man, and it must be taken into consideration that fishermen, as we have been told here time and again—Why hardly a day goes by that we are not told how hard the fishermen have it to make a living, how low their income is, and a hundred dollars is an awful lot of money for some fishermen.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The honourable gentleman is overlooking the fact that this hardly refers to the fishermen at all—Marketing is defined in section (5). The marketing that refers to is marketing within the province. Now, how much marketing within the province is done by fishermen?

MR. BROWNE: What is meant by marketing? A fisherman shipping fish to a merchant, is he marketing it?—Yes.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I would say no. I would say the man who markets it is the man who puts it on retail, consumers market.

MR. BROWNE: Look at the definition in clause (2) Marketing means buying, selling or offering or advertising for sale. Possibly that is not tight enough. I think here in the case of the fisherman, and there are twenty thousand fishermen who take their fish along to the merchant—

MR. SMALLWOOD: I don't think that can be called marketing the fish. That is not putting it on the market. The market surely ought to be defined there—

MR. BROWNE: (a) refers to marketing within the province.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The Act deals purely with the purpose of marketing of fish and containers locally within the province.

MR. BROWNE: May I point out to the Premier that there are different kinds of fish, not only codfish but all the other kinds of fish. There is not only fishermen sending fifty quintals to some friend of the Premier's and the Water Street merchants, but also all the stores right across the country sell fish in their stores, and fishermen from all the different fishing villages go to the nearest town to peddle fish.

MR. SMALLWOOD: My honourable friend is talking about shops and merchants now. Surely he is not worried too much about a hundred dollar fine for a shop knowingly—willfully selling stale and unwholesome fish—He is worried about the fishermen. I am trying to point out that fishermen don't market fish except in a very broad sense of the word, they merely ship it. I know that is marketing in a very broad sense of the word. Also a tiny fraction of fish will be sold by fishermen, in fact by anyone within Newfoundland. And of the small fraction that is sold within Newfoundland an even smaller fraction is sold by fishermen in actual fact today. I am talking of all kinds of fish. What proportion of fish produced in Newfoundland is marketed and sold to the consumer within Newfoundland today? A negligible amount. How much is sold by fishermen? It is even more negligible—Not one half of one per cent.

MR. BROWNE: That does not make any difference—It is the principle.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, the Act is made to govern a situation in general—And because some poor fisherman may be caught by it, are you going to lower the barriers in favour of merchants, of fish firms, and of shops all across the island—Are you going to lower the barriers to them because by chance you may catch some poor individual fisherman? That does not sound reasonable to me.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, I think the honourable the premier has a mistaken idea of this whole thing. As a matter of fact he read a section here sometime ago where no fish may be marketed until the government inspector has inspected and passed on it—How then can a merchant market bad fish?

MR. SMALLWOOD: It might get bad afterwards.

MR. HOLLETT: That is not the government doing it—The inspector passed it and it has gone on the market.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Who is doing it?

MR. HOLLETT: Probably the inspector.

MR. SMALLWOOD: He is making it rotten?

MR. HOLLETT: Probably on the other hand you have all sorts of fish sold around town, and undoubtedly there have been cases known of fish been sold in stores and fishshops which was to say the least a bit high. I would suggest strongly that the word "knowingly" might very well be put in there—If the minister would consider that, without reducing the fine at all—

MR. I. MERCER: Mr. Chairman, I believe the honourable and learned member for St. John's West will reconsider that section, and when he does I think he will agree with me that there is no necessity whatsoever for the word "knowingly" or "unlawful-ly"—Because my understanding of the Law is that no person can be convicted of a criminal offence without the prosecution showing an intent on the part of that person to commit an offence. In order to convict any fishermen under this it must be proven by the prosecution that he had done so knowingly or with intent.

MR. BROWNE: I don't think that is the purpose of the section. I must say, with all due deference to my learned friend—Once it is shown as a fact he has marketed for human consumption fish which does not turn out to be wholesome then he has committed an offence and is liable—I think my honourable friend, the Minister of Provincial Affairs agrees with me on that.

MR. SMALLWOOD: In view of the arguments I am prepared to accept the addition of the word "knowingly" to be placed before the word "market."

MR. CURTIS: My honourable friend opposite is aware in dealing with the Pure Food Laws and the Food and Drugs Act, that sort of thing, the mere commission of the offence makes a person liable for a fine, without a guilty intent. I think you will find that prevails in that sort of legislation.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It is very delightful to have these lawyers expressing opinions, but we are not getting any business done. Let us put the word in and go on—We have about twenty-five other bills to pass yet.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, we don't agree with the Premier—We are making laws here.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It is a question you are still not satisfied?
MR. BROWNE: My honourable and learned friend raised a point which I am sure the minister can appreciate.

MR. CHAIRMAN: The amendment is that the word "knowingly" should be inserted there before the word "market."

MR. SMALLWOOD: My honourable friend the Minister of Finance wants to know if the word "sound-minded" should go in there—No person of sound-mind—

Clause as amended carried.

Clauses 13 through 15 carried.
Preamble carried.

Bill passed with some amendments.

MR. SMALLWOOD: At this point, Mr. Chairman, I suggest a recess for ten minutes.

Committee recessed for ten minutes.

Committee of the Whole on Bill, "An Act Respecting the Floral Emblem of Newfoundland."

Bill passed without amendment.

Committee of the Whole on Bill, "An Act to Amend the Dog Act."

Bill passed without amendment.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Chairman, I move the committee rise and report having passed these Bills.

On motion the committee rose to report having passed the Bills as follows:

"An Act Respecting the Inspection of Fish"—With some amendments.

Report received—First and second reading of said amendments—Ordered concurred in. Ordered read a third time tomorrow.

"An Act Respecting the Floral Emblem of Newfoundland"—without amendment—Report received—Bill ordered read a third time on tomorrow.

Report received—On motion bill ordered read a third time on tomorrow.

Second Reading of Bill, "An Act to Approve and Give Statutory Effect to an Agreement between the government and New Jersey Zinc Exploration Company (Canada) Limited":

(Adjourned debate).

MR. SPEAKER: The debate was adjourned by the Honourable Minister of Mines and Resources.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, very little needs to be said in connection with this Bill. We only got it this afternoon, of course, and have not had much time to study it. But in the time we have had I see it is practically the same as other bills which have been brought in for the same purpose, i.e., to give confirmation of an agreement to explore for minerals. One objection I do make is that the agreement was entered into apparently January 1953, and the government apparently neglected to bring that in before the House until this late date.

If we are to believe what it says in the preamble I would like, when the Premier replies, that he would explain to us just why the thing has been left over since the first of January last year, the House being open last year.

The company is a new company, as far as I can see, one we have not heard of here in this House before. Apparently they don't intend to spend very much money—a total of twenty thousand dollars, I believe, in a period of two years.

Sir, there is nothing new in the Act except that it gives this company the right to explore for minerals in an area of 25 square miles—I am surprised to learn the government did find another twenty-five square miles somewhere in the country. We remember that NALCO was given some twenty-five thousand square miles and the balance of Crown Lands were handed over to BRINCO for exploration. I wonder just how the government managed to squeeze out the twenty-five square miles. I am surprised to learn the government did find another twenty-five square miles somewhere in the country. We remember that NALCO was given some twenty-five thousand square miles and the balance of Crown Lands were handed over to BRINCO for exploration. I wonder just how the government managed to squeeze out the twenty-five square miles.

I have nothing against this Bill which gives a mining company a small amount of land on which to explore for minerals. In my opinion that is the best way. I do not hold with the rights in connection with either NALCO or BRINCO in giving them such huge amounts. I don't want to talk about BRINCO, but nobody knows the exact square mileage they were given, but it must be well over a hundred square miles. They are supposed to find out by next December, I believe it is, just how much of that land they want. It seems to me rather ridiculous to expect any company or group of companies to thoroughly explore such large areas. Here you have a company to whom you give twenty-five square miles and they will thoroughly explore that area, and if they find anything within the next two years they ask for a licence. The government here agrees to give them such licence. I think that is the right type of agreement. If we had four hundred of these instead of one big one like BRINCO we would have an awful lot of people on the ground, although they would not have such high-sounding names. We have nothing against the principle of this Bill, Sir.

On motion Bill read a second time—Ordered referred to Committee of the Whole presently.

MR. BROWNE : Why not go into committee now?

On motion the House now went into committee of the Whole on Bill, An "Act to Approve and Give Statutory Effect to an Agreement between the government and New Jersey Zinc Exploration Company (Canada) Limited"; and a Bill, "An Act to Amend the Co-operatives Society Act."

A Bill, "An Act to Approve and Give Statutory Effect to an Agreement between the Government and New Jersey Zinc Exploration Company (Canada Limited)."

MR. BROWNE : Mr. Chairman, is that company registered in Newfoundland?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I don't know, but I don't think so. It is a Dominion company with a charter from the Federal Government—

MR. HOLLETT : Are we sure of it?

MR. SMALLWOOD : I am sure of it.

Clauses 1 carried; 2 read:

2. The agreement made between Her Majesty the Queen in right of Newfoundland represented by the Honourable Frederick W. Rowe, Minister of Mines and Resources, of the one part and New Jersey Zinc Exploration Company (Canada) Ltd. of the other part, dated the first day of January One Thousand nine hundred and fifty three and forming the Schedule to this Act, is hereby approved, confirmed and adopted, and all and singular the several clauses and provisions thereof are hereby declared to be valid and binding upon the said parties thereto, and each of them respectively, and to have the force and effect of law, and all and singular the several acts, matters and things therein provided to be done or performed by or on the part of the parties respectively are hereby declared to be proper and lawful, and the parties shall have full power and authority from time to time to do and perform the several acts, matters and things in and by the said agreement provided to be done in the manner and with the effect and under the conditions stipulated and provided in the said agreement.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, does the minister feel at the present time that this company has been doing good work?

MR. SMALLWOOD: There is no question of that. That is a famous company, New Jersey Zinc, one of the biggest mining companies in all of the United States.

MR. BROWNE: I am sure of that.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It is—I am not saying it—it is, and that is all there is to it. It is one of say fifty of the biggest mining companies in the entire United States—New Jersey Zinc is a name to conjure with in the mineral world. Now they have formed a Canadian wholly owned subsidiary. They have done excellent work and will do excellent work wherever they go in the world, and they have gone everywhere in the world.

MR. BROWNE: Can you tell us what kind of mine they are exploring for there?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, base metals, copper, lead, zinc.

MR. HOLLETT: Can the minister tell us if they have spent very much?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, they are obliged to spend ten thousand dollars—They have spent several times that, and it was on quite a small area.

MR. HOLLETT: That would not be very much.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It is very little for so large a company—Their spending will depend on how encouraging are the results. If they find a mine and it took a million or five million or fifty million to develop, they have the money.

MR. HOLLETT: Did they get that before BRINCO was formed?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes.

MR. BROWNE: The reasons I am asking is because a company could do very little. Are they working in there at the present time?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I don’t know if they have arrived in Newfoundland for the present season—they may be just about arriving or may be just about to arrive.

MR. BROWNE: Could the minister tell us—are there any other strips around that could be leased now for exploration purposes?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, there are many thousands of miles.
MR. HOLLETT: In what area?

MR. SMALLWOOD: The Reid Newfoundland Company has thousands of miles which they would be delighted to lease to prospectors—No Crown Lands until the end of this calendar year.

On motion agreement read:

SCHEDULE

THIS AGREEMENT made as of the FIRST day of JANUARY 1953, BETWEEN Her Majesty the Queen in Right of Newfoundland, represented herein by the Honourable Minister of Mines and Resources of the Province of Newfoundland (hereinafter called "the Government") of the one part AND New Jersey Zinc Exploration Company (Canada) Limited, a Dominion Corporation (hereinafter called "the Company") of the other part WHEREAS The Government is desirous of furthering the economic development of Newfoundland as rapidly as possible, consistent with world markets and general economic conditions; AND WHEREAS the Company has requested the Government to enter into an agreement as hereinafter appearing, and in order to further economic development in the Georges Lake Area of the said Province of Newfoundland, the Government has expressed its willingness to facilitate and assist the Company provided it demonstrates good faith in exploring, developing and equipping for ore production the mineral deposits thereon as rapidly as permitted by good exploration and mining practice, the financial position of the Company and economic conditions relating to mines, as hereinafter appearing.

NOW THIS AGREEMENT WITNESSETH AS FOLLOWS:

1. The Government shall forthwith withdraw from the operation of the Crown Lands (Mines and Quarries) Act, 1951, and subject to Clause 14 of this agreement reserve from the operation of the said Act for a period of two (2) years from the 1st day of January 1953 (hereinafter called the exploration period) all minerals on, in and under that part of the Georges Lake Area in the Province of Newfoundland described as follows:

All that area of land situate and lying between Reid Lots No. 23 and 25 bounded and described as follows: Beginning at a point being the intersection of the southern boundary line of Reid Lot No. 25, with the westerly limit of the right-of-way (100 feet wide) of the Canadian National Railway; thence running west by the said Reid Lot No. 25 and Crown Land for a distance of forty-seven thousand six hundred feet, thence turning and running at a right angle by Crown Land South fifteen thousand eight hundred and forty feet more or less; thence turning and running at a right angle by Reid Lot No. 23 East thirty-six thousand four hundred feet, more or less, to the aforesaid westerly limit of the right of way of the Canadian National Railway; thence turning and running along the said westerly limit of the Canadian National Railway for a distance of twenty-one thousand two hundred feet, more or less measured in a general northerly easterly direction to the point of beginning, containing an area of twenty-five square miles, more or less, all bearings being referred to the true meridian; excepting out of the above described area of land such portion thereof as the Government has heretofore granted to parties in fee simple (the area mentioned as being withdrawn in this clause from the operation of The Crown Lands (Mines and Quarries) Act, 1951, with the said exception being hereafter in this Agreement referred to as the "reserved area".)

2. Not withstanding anything herein contained should the Company acquire or obtain options from owners other than the Government of lands of known mineralization within the reserved area, it shall have the right to stake under the provisions of the Crown Lands (Mines and Quarries) Act, 1951, in force at the time of such staking, additional claims covering potential lateral or depth extensions of the mineralization of lands so acquired or optioned up to a maximum of two miles of the borders of said lands provided that the claims so staked shall not extend in any direction for more than a maximum of two (2) miles from the nearest border of the lands so acquired or optioned, and for the purposes of this agreement the claim so staked shall be deemed to be outside the reserved area.

3. Subject as aforesaid, during the exploration period the Company shall have the exclusive prospecting and exploration rights in and over the reserved area, upon the terms and conditions contained in this agreement, and shall be entitled to enter upon and survey the reserved area or any part thereof and prospect and explore the reserved area or any part thereof by all such means as may be necessary to prove the existence, value and extent of the minerals thereon and thereunder, whether by geological or geophysical survey, diamond drilling, surface or subterranean prospecting, excavation or works pertaining to the execution of an active exploration and development program, making compensation for any damage or injury sustained by the owner of any surface rights or the holder of any timber licence within the reserved area and such compensation shall, unless settled by private agreement be determined in the manner provided in Clause 13 of this agreement.

4. The Company shall expend during the exploration period a total sum of not less than twenty thousand dollars ($20,000.00) in prospecting and exploration of the reserved area, of which not less than ten thousand dollars ($10,000.00) shall be expended in any one year. Expenditures in excess of the minimum in the first year can be credited to the second year.

5. Any person thereunto authorized by the Government shall be given by the Company every reasonable opportunity to inspect the field work and subsequent compilation in order to correlate the work of the Government with such geological work as may be done by the Company to satisfy the Government that the required expenditures are being made and that the exploration work is being adequately performed by the Company.

6. The Company shall furnish to the Government on or before the 31st day of March in the years 1954 and 1955 a reasonable detailed report of the prospecting and exploration work done by the Company under this agreement up to the end of the preceding calendar year, and the Government agrees that any such information will be treated as confidential so long as the Company retains any interest in the reserved area.

7. The Company shall submit to the Government on or before the 31st day of March in the years 1954 and 1955 an account of its expenditures during the preceding calendar year in connection with the work of prospecting and exploration of the reserved area, which account shall be certified by a reputable firm of auditors, provided that the Government upon request shall grant to the Company an extension of time for a period of three (3) months for the submission of any such account.

8. The Company shall be entitled during the currency of this agreement to select an area or areas not exceeding four (4) square miles in the aggregate and the Government shall, subject to the making of the total expenditures provided for in Clause (4) of this agreement issue to the Company a development license in the form prescribed under the Crown Lands (Mines and Quarries) Act 1951, over each area or areas so selected and minerals thereon and thereunder. The shape and orientation of such area or areas shall be in conformity with the Crown Lands (Mines and Quarries) Act, 1951, and the area or areas may be located anywhere within the reserved areas and need not be contiguous.

The said development license shall be for a term of one year renewable thereafter annually for a maximum period of two additional years and the Company shall pay yearly to the Government the sum of fifty cents (50c.) per acre while the development license is in force and the said development license shall be issued with the benefit of Clauses 11, 12, 13, and 17 of this agreement.

9. The Company may at any time during the subsistence of a development license apply to the Government for a mining lease or mining leases for all or any part of the areas covered by such development license, and provided that all obligations of the Company under the development license have been fulfilled the Government shall forthwith issue such mining lease or such mining leases in the form prescribed under and subject to the terms and conditions set forth in the Crown Lands (Mines and Quarries) Act, 1951, and with the benefit of Clauses 11, 12, 13, and 17 of this agreement, the Company paying the amounts specified to be paid for mining leases in the Crown Lands (Mines and Quarries) Act, 1951.

As long as the said mining leases resulting from the development licenses are retained as a unit by the Company or its assigns they shall be treated as a single unit in respect of the operating obligations of a mining lease so that the Company's obligation to operate shall be discharged by the operation of one mine should one or more leases in the units be sold or transferred to another company such lease shall no longer have the benefit of being considered part of the unit for operation purposes.

10. The Company shall during the exploration period have the right without payment to remove reasonable quantities of rock, ores or minerals from the reserved area or any part thereof and to export the same for the purpose of sampling, bulk sampling, metallurgical testing and assaying thereof.

11. The Government undertakes and agrees to grant to the Company from time to time such surface Crown Lands as may be reasonably necessary in connection with its mining operations, including, without limiting the generality of the foregoing, such lands as may be reasonably necessary for rights of way for telegraphs, telephones, electric power transmission lines, railways, tramways or roads, or sites for mills, works, factories, warehouses, townsites, wharves, piers, docks or other shipping facilities for the purpose of the efficient construction, maintenance or operation of any mining undertaking of the Company under this agreement or for any other purposes incidental thereto, on such terms and conditions as to rental or otherwise as may from time to time and as to each particular request be mutually agreed upon as reasonable and equitable between the parties hereto. Any such grant may be by lease, license or as may be agreed. The undertaking and agreement of the Government under this Clause shall not have the effect of preventing the Government after prior consultation with the Company from granting at any time to any person any surface Crown Lands when any such surface Crown Lands have not been granted or specifically agreed to be granted to the Company.

12. If the Company shall be desirous at any time of acquiring private lands or any rights thereover for telegraphs, telephones, electric power transmission lines, railways, tramways, or roads or other sites for mills, works, factories, warehouses, townsites wharves, piers, docks or other shipping facilities for the purposes of the efficient construction, maintenance or operation of any mining undertaking of the Company under this agreement or for any other purposes incidental thereto, it shall be lawful for the Company, with the prior assent of the Government, which assent shall not be unreasonably withheld, to enter upon and assume possession of and appropriate any lands belonging to any person or corporation or any rights thereover that may be required for the purposes aforesaid or any of them and the compensation to be paid by the Company to the owner for and in respect of such lands or rights or the damage or injury sustained by the owner through the exercise by the Company of its rights under this Clause shall, unless settled by private agreement, be determined by arbitration in the manner hereinafter provided.

13. For the purpose of ascertaining the damage that may be sustained by any owner and of determining the compensation to be paid by the Company under Clauses 3 and 12 of this agreement, the Company shall appoint one arbitrator, the owner shall appoint another and the two arbitrators so appointed shall appoint a third umpire, and in the event of the Company or the owner failing to appoint an arbitrator after seven (7) clear days' notice by the owner or the Company, as the case may be, so to do, the Company or the owner may apply to the Supreme Court or a Judge thereof who shall, after due notice to the Company or the owner, as the case may be, appoint such arbitrator and the arbitrators - so appointed by the Company or the owner or by the Court or Judge thereof shall thereupon appoint a third arbitrator or umpire and in the event of the last mentioned arbitrators failing to appoint a third arbitrator or umpire after seven (7) clear days' notice from the Company or the owner so to do, the Supreme Court or a Judge thereof shall, on the application of the Company or the owner, as the case may be, appoint such arbitrator or umpire and the award of such arbitrators or any two of them shall be final and binding upon the parties.

14. In the event of the Company failing in any year to submit any account in accordance with the provisions of Clause 7 of this agreement, or in the event that such account shall fail to show an expenditure required by this agreement in the preceding year, the Government may notify the Company and the Company shall remedy the omission and submit accounts as provided by this agreement to the reasonable satisfaction of the Government, and in default thereof the exclusive prospecting and exploration rights of the Company under this agreement shall thereupon wholly cease and determine.

15. Unless otherwise expressly provided in this agreement none of the provisions of the Crown Lands (Mines and Quarries) Act, 1951, or of the Crown Lands Act, 1930 as amended, shall have effect so as to limit or restrict in any way the rights, benefits or exemptions expressly granted to the Company by this Agreement.

16. The word "minerals" as used in this agreement shall have the same meaning as in the Crown Lands (Mines and Quarries) Act 1951.

17. The Company shall not at any time be liable to pay and taxes other than taxes of general application.

18. At any time during the currency of this agreement the Company has the right to cancel its obligation and rights over the reserved area after having given three (3) months prior notice in writing of this intention. It is understood and agreed that the Company shall have the right to assign, transfer, or set over this agreement to a subsidiary or the parent company of the Company or to another subsidiary of the parent company and the right to assign, transfer, set over, or otherwise dispose of in whole or in part its rights under this agreement and/or any rights acquired by it in pursuance hereof.

In WITNESS WHEREOF the Honourable Dr. F. W. Rowe, Minister of Mines and Resources has hereunto his hand and seal subscribed and set and New Jersey Zinc Exploration Company (Canada) Ltd. has caused these presents to be executed in accordance with its regulations the day and year first before written.

SIGNED on behalf of the Province of Newfoundland by the Honourable Dr. F. W. Rowe, in the presence of:
(Sgd) CLAUDE K. HOWSE.
(Sgd) F. W. ROWE.

THE COMMON SEAL of New Jersey Zinc Exploration Company (Canada) Ltd. was hereunto affixed, in the presence of:
(Sgd) WILLIAM D. McCAIN
(Sgd) C. H. GEORGE
Vice-President and Director.
(Sgd) WALTER R. ANYAN
Secretary.

(The Common Seal of New Jersey Zinc Exploration Company (Canada) Ltd.)

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, before we pass that I wonder if the Honourable the Premier would inform us if any information or detailed report has been forthcoming so far?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, a complete report of the work they did last year has been filed with the Department of Mines and Resources.

MR. HOLLETT: Would the honourable the Premier care to make any comment on that?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, I would not—Except that it is somewhat encouraging—It would not be fair to a company to say anything more than that, and not even that much. I don't
MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I take it that no area has been picked yet by the company, but that they are still exercising their rights?

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is so.

MR. HOLLETT: What taxes are they to pay?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No special taxes, taxes of general application.

MR. HOLLETT: Ten cents a ton?

MR. SMALLWOOD: All taxes of general application.

MR. HOLLETT: They have some latitude?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No they have no latitude except to pay all the taxes of general application.

MR. HOLLETT: It is not customary to make an agreement with each individual company? You are doing it with Bell Island, you hope.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is so. The Monroe Government did it with Buchans and some government did it in regard to St. Lawrence. We have not. This government has not, except NALCO.

Agreement carried. Bill passed without amendment.

A Bill, “An Act to Amend the Co-operative Societies Act”:

Clauses 1 through 4 carried.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, when the honourable minister was explaining this Bill this afternoon I regret that I may have gotten a wrong impression from his remarks. I understood that the only change to be made was in the words “Newfoundland Co-operative Union.” I find now this is an entirely new section.

MR. KEOUGH: Last year we passed an amendment to the Co-operative Societies Act—I don’t know if it is referred to in this or not, but it was certainly passed.

MR. BROWNE: I have the last years’ here. I will look it up.

MR. HOLLETT: It says the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council may make regulations governing proceedings of the meetings of the union.

MR. KEOUGH: That question did arise actually last year as to whether it should be done in this form—The alternative was to incorporate and set forth in the Act the complete constitution as they wished to have it. That provided for certain flexibility which they wished to have. Any changes could be done by order in council instead of having it come to the House.

MR. SMALLWOOD: They themselves did it.

MR. KEOUGH: I may say, since the passing of the Act last year the union put forward a constitution to the Government and asked them to enact the constitution as regulations.

MR. BROWNE: I must apologize to the Minister for not having followed him very well. I did think there was only one slight change. Now I find there was an Act last year.

MR. KEOUGH: I think section 8 of this one mentions last year’s Act.

MR. BROWNE: I know that it does, but usually it is mentioned in the amending section. I can see now that what the minister said was substantially correct.

Clauses 2 through 4 carried. Bill passed without amendment.

On motion the committee rose and reported having passed the Bill, "An Act to Approve and Give Statutory Effect to an agreement between the Government and New Jersey Zinc Exploration Company (Canada) Limited," without amendment.

Report received—on motion bill ordered read a third time on tomorrow, and, a Bill "An Act to Amend the Co-operative Societies Act" reported passed without amendment. Report received. On motion ordered read a third time on tomorrow.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I move that the remaining orders of the day do stand deferred.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I move that the House at its rising do adjourn until tomorrow, Friday, at 11.00 a.m. of the clock.

As I remarked here earlier today I don't anticipate a session tomorrow night because of the fact that all members of the Cabinet and I believe Mr. Speaker, and perhaps the Honourable Leader of the Opposition are attending a dinner, which means we just can't be here.

MR. BROWNE: We could get along without you.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Perhaps Newfoundland can't, at least politicians always like to think that they can't be got along without. For that reason we will have sittings only in the morning and the afternoon. Then it has been indicated by gentlemen opposite that they hope we do not meet on Saturday—I am wondering what the Opposition would feel on the matter of suspending the rules after the debate is concluded on the budget. I may say in this connection that in the last five years I don't believe we have suspended the rules at all. And if we did, we did it in one session only. We have the reputation of forcing our legislation through under suspended rules. But if we have suspended them we have done it in one session only. Now the Opposition has been most co-operative down through the last five years in this matter, and have been just as anxious as members on this side to expedite matters and not waste time. For that reason we have not needed to suspend the rules. I wonder if the Opposition would consider the matter and come back and indicate their desire later as to what they feel about the necessity and desirability, after the close of the budget debate of course.

MR. HOLLETT: Incidentally, is it the intention to go ahead with the budget debate tomorrow morning?

MR. SMALLWOOD: We can, if that is desired by the gentlemen opposite. I would be grateful if the Opposition would consider that point and make known their desires.

MR. SPEAKER: To avoid any misunderstanding, it is quite in order in this House and a long established practice in the House of Commons of Great Britain and in the entire British Commonwealth to move the suspension of rules at the end of the session. It merely applies to the passage of bills, and does not affect the rules governing debate. A Bill may be advanced two or more stages in one day. In the House of Commons after committee stage a bill is given a third reading immediately and they don't wait until next day.
MR. BROWNE: That is when rules are suspended.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I believe they do that from the beginning of the session to the end.

MR. HOLLETT: Do I understand there is a re-distribution bill to come in?

MR. SMALLWOOD: That has been drafted—it may be withdrawn.

MR. HOLLETT: We need some time.

MR. SMALLWOOD: You will get all the time possible. Rules are suspended not to shorten debate but to telescope the steps, that is all, and not take a day each.

MR. BROWNE: We could not make any more progress than we did in the last couple of weeks.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I agree.

MR. HOLLETT: There is plenty of time to go to Labrador yet. There is ice down there yet.

MR. SPEAKER: Moved and seconded that the House at its rising do adjourn until tomorrow, Friday, at 11:00 of the clock.

FRIDAY, June, 11th
MORNING SESSION

The House met at 11:00 o’clock in the morning, pursuant to adjournment.

Presenting Petitions

None.

Presenting Reports of Standing and Select Committees

None.

Giving Notice of Motion and Question

HON. L. R. CURTIS (Attorney General): Mr. Speaker, I give notice I will at a later hour today ask leave to introduce a Bill "An Act to Amend the House of Assembly Act;" also:

A Bill "An Act to Amend the Cancer Control Act;" and

A Bill "An Act to Amend the Local Authority Guarantee Act, 1952"

A Bill "An Act to Make Provisions for the Award of Pensions in Certain Cases," also

A Bill "An Act Further to Amend the Civil Service Act," also

A Bill "An Act to Amend the Accident Insurance Companies (Licensing) Act."

MR. BROWNE: That is a tall order.

MR. CURTIS: I don’t think any of these Bills are important.

Orders of The Day

Adjourned debate on the Budget:

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, I understand the Honourable the Premier moved the adjournment of the debate.

HON. J. R. SMALLWOOD (Prime Minister): With no intention of speaking—I very frequently move the adjournment of a debate when nobody else does.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order—When a man moves the adjournment of a debate is he supposed to go on?

MR. SPEAKER: No.

MR. SMALLWOOD: He has the right but he is not obliged to do so.
Mr. Speaker, if my Honourable friends opposite are not ready, as I understood last night they were, perhaps I can adjourn the debate again, and find other work to do. There is no desire in the world to rush the Honourable gentlemen. I sincerely believed last night they were ready to go on with it this morning. But let them please themselves entirely. It is up to them what they desire to do.

MR. M. M. HOLLETT (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, we have no desire to hang up the talk on the budget, but like anyone else in the House I don't think I am at my best at 11:00 o'clock in the morning to make a public address. However I am forced to do so with all due respect to what the Honourable the Premier just said. I am quite prepared to go on now. It is just as well to go on now as at any other time. After all we have to acknowledge that the Honourable the Premier is the Leader of the House, and his plan is that we go on at this time—and if it is not so suitable to us as other times, then we must take it as read.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I have no intention of delaying the House any longer than is absolutely necessary. I don't think I should go on any longer than five days, or five afternoons, and I hardly think I shall go on as long as that. But I shall have to say certain things which I hope will not offend deeply the political nor other susceptibilities of my honourable friends on the opposite side of the House.

Getting down to the budget speech of the Honourable Minister of Finance, with all due respect to him as a poet, I think that this is probably one of the finest pieces of doggerel I have seen in many a day.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is clever!

MR. HOLLETT: Only on one occasion do I believe the Honourable Minister came up to his noted ability as a poet and as a writer, and that was in the last line or two in the debate where he said: "Newfoundland has great and valuable natural resources of fish and minerals and timber and water power and soil". Imagine, we have soil too, Sir!

HON. G. J. POWER (Minister of Finance): I am competent to say—I have made a living that way.

MR. HOLLETT: I thought you were chicken raising. But they are raised on soil too.

"Newfoundland has valuable resources of fish." Can you imagine our poetic Finance Minister, getting that off in his accustomed style.

"She has stout-hearted people of unsurpassed racial and national origins. She has joined in union with a great British nation. She has a Government that is moved by unshakeable faith in Newfoundland's destiny. The combination is irresistible. Greatness is her due, as surely as the sparks fly upward."

Now, Sir, that is poetic.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Is it not true?

MR. HOLLETT: But I would say, Sir, the remaining 24 pages were just a matter of doggerel. And I am sure it must have gone against the grain of the Honourable Minister of Finance to have to put down the very things he put in that budget. Surely it must have galled his very poetic soul. "Greatness is her due, as surely as the sparks fly upward." I have often seen sparks fly downward, Mr. Speaker, especially when there is a lot of wind—And there is plenty of wind on the opposite side of the House to make the sparks fly in any direction whatsoever—not air.

MR. POWER: It is a wonder you are not scorched to death with it.

MR. HOLLETT: It must have been painful, I say, to a poetic genius, very affable and friendly and likeable as is the Minister of Finance. I have great regard for his ability as a poet. I like poetry—I love it. I know very much how he was seared by having to issue such a ridiculous doggerel type document as this.

The budget speech, Sir, forecasts a surplus on current account of two and three-quarter millions, and listed the arrived at surplus over the year's spending of two and three-quarter millions against the two million surplus forecast last year, and we had a revenue of thirty-six million dollars, according to this document and an expenditure of thirty-three and one-quarter millions—I had intended to compare these figures, but I have not brought along these notes—But I can bring them along.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I can give the honourable member some notes. Here are mine.

MR. HOLLETT: I have them on other years. I left them somewhere, probably in my safe.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Last years' notes?

MR. HOLLETT: I would ask the Honourable Minister and all the members on the opposite side to look at the figures which are quoted on page (1) and (2) relative to the surpluses of the various years from 1940-41 down to 1953-54, and they will find, Sir, there, all our great surpluses as indicated by the Minister. I will congratulate him on what I believe to be most accurate figures because I checked a column of the figures and found the great surpluses were from 1941-42 to 1945-46. That is worthy of note, and then in 1946-47 $108,000. I hope everybody in this House has noted that the years from 1941-41 up to 1945-46 were the years Newfoundland, Canada, Great Britain and the great British Dominions overseas, the British Empire, and the whole world were involved in one of the bloodiest of wars, in which hundreds of thousands, and, yes, millions of people gave their lives, I won't say, Sir, that is why we and Canada and other countries in the world could build up surpluses, but by reason of the fact that they were fighting and giving their lives in a bloody war we had these surpluses from 1941 up to 1946. I note again in the year 1941-42 we had a surplus of seven millions, in 1942-43 three and three-quarter millions, in 1943-44 five and three-quarter millions, in 1944-45 seven millions and in 1945-46, four and three-quarter millions. Then immediately we go over the precipice, the war is over, and the surplus is $108,000.

MR. POWER: What other country had a surplus during the war?

MR. HOLLETT: Nearly every country in the world had surpluses in some form or another. I am not talking about debts. We created debts too which we shall never pay—I quote again 1946-47, $108,000 a deficit and in 1948-49 one million dollars. Then in 1949-59, the first year the Liberal Government took over, we again had a deficit of three and three-quarter million dollars. Then, Sir, blood began to flow again in Korea.
MR. SMALLWOOD: Will the honourable gentleman allow me? He is surely not arguing that this prosperity is due to the war, seriously arguing that?

MR. HOLLETT: Do you want to ask a question?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I just want to be clear as to what it is my honourable friend is saying. Do I understand he is arguing that the prosperity indicated by these surpluses was caused by war?

MR. HOLLETT: Certainly. Mr. Speaker, I allowed a question and do not want to have a talk. The next thing the Honourable Minister will be reminding me I said that Newfoundlanders were too lazy to work—I am getting fed up on that. I make no wonder that the Honourable Minister of Public Welfare was angry the other day because somebody brought up that he said a certain area of this country—He is not here and it would not be fair to say it—But certainly these things gall, particularly in my own instance where I never said any such thing. The Honourable the Premier is so fond of standing up and trying to attribute something to some person, and putting words in people's mouths—I do wish he would get over that. The Honourable the Premier is so fond of standing up and trying to attribute something to some person, and putting words in people's mouths—I do wish he would get over that.

MR. HOLLETT: That is right—you can make "No" seem "Yes" and "Yes" seem "No." Now it seems the people will be asked to say "Yes or "No by just an "X."

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is the election?

MR. HOLLETT: In November. You would have had it in June if things had run right—I repeat the Honourable the Premier would have had his election over this month if things had gone right. But, Sir, the best laid plans of mice and men go oft awry. I believe that is right.

We went into another war, Sir, in 1950-51 and immediately got a surplus of three-quarters of a million dollars and one and three-quarter millions in 1951-52 and six and three-quarter millions in 1952-53 and in 1953-54, two and three-quarter million dollars. We are still in the war, and it is not too 'cold' in some of the nations of the world nor some of the areas in the world.

MR. POWER: This year's surplus you attribute to that?

MR. HOLLETT: The war is not over. They may be able to even declare a new war, in the Newfoundland Cabinet. All I know is that there was a war there a short time ago—Want me to tell about that?

But in this case it is due to the present state of the world, and the Honourable Minister knows that exactly as I do. On that we got the surplus. We should not be proud. There was a war and bloodshed—We ought not to forget that, Sir, when we are talking so glibly of our huge surpluses.
Let us look at what this Government has done—Look at what we have done. I am quite sure if the Honourable Minister of Finance would get on that, if he were left alone, Sir to draw up a budget, I expect he would put one there that would go down in history as one of the masterpieces of Newfoundland, oratorically, poetically. But he is not left alone, Sir, because yesterday in answer to a question he practically admitted the Premier told him, and the Premier got up and responded. I think we would be showing discourtesy to the Honourable Minister if we did not go carefully into this budget. I will certainly go into it but I may not get the things out of it that some politicians get out. I don't hope to be a politician myself, but do the best I can.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Hear! Hear! An honest confession is good for the soul. I agree with the honourable gentleman—he is not.

MR. HOLLETT: The Honourable the Premier said here that he is not a politician—What is he, if he is not a politician? "I am the man" he said that, and I will come to that later.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Discuss that case too?

MR. HOLLETT: Yes every case I can think of. I shall not be put off by any tomfoolery about not being allowed to say this or that. This is the people's House, Mr. Speaker, and where men like you and me, Sir, have been elected by the people and where we can say practically everything we deem correct and which is certainly prudent, and when we always adhere to the letter of the law.

MR. SMALLWOOD: This is going to be interesting.

MR. HOLLETT: Now let us go on to page 3 where the Honourable Minister refers to the peoples' pockets. This Government, Sir, has been picking peoples' pockets since 1949—But the Honourable Minister referred to what the people themselves pocketed. Let us take a look at that. But before I do, let us ask ourselves how well off are our people after all these tremendous surpluses—How well off are they? How well off are the people along your district Sir, or in the area of White Bay. Incidentally that brings me to something I have to say about White Bay and Green Bay areas and other areas on the South Coast, Sir, where we have these draggers, and where I am given to understand men who toiled all winter in these draggers had to receive able-bodied relief last winter. It is all very well, to talk about peoples' pockets, but we should also think of what is taken out and for what the money is spent. But I was reminded when I mentioned White Bay, and asked a question—How well off are the people? Naturally I was thinking of public services, hospitals—

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Drover, when it comes right down to it.

MR. HOLLETT: I was suddenly reminded of an occurrence which took place in this House yesterday, if I may refer to it—I refer, Sir, to the statement made by the honourable member for White Bay. On the face of it I would say, probably the ablest speech the honourable member has made for a long time—to the point—to the core of his difficulties and the difficulties of his district. He told us of the unheard of, I would say, conditions along the one hundred and fifty mile coast line of his district—At least it should be unheard of with this Government in power—This Government that has done so much—Who have praised themselves to the skies for all the great public services which they are bringing in—Perhaps they have left White Bay as an example to show the Commission on Terms of Union. I don't know. I don't know the inner minds of the Cabinet, Sir, as such—they are such that it would be absolutely impossible for mere men to fathom or to read—but it has just struck me that maybe they are leaving the District of White Bay in that particular condition with no hospitals, very little medical services, although there were promises made, although the honourable member, as we remember, did walk out of the Government some years ago because of what he declared neglect of his district, and although he was, as he himself said, invited back into the Government and into the Liberal Party again on the promise that the needs of his district would be attended to. We heard him say yesterday, Sir, that this district has been absolutely neglected, and that consequently in deference to his people and their needs he deemed it his duty to walk out of the Liberal Party in order to bring to the notice of the people not only of Newfoundland but the whole of Canada the conditions of the people whom he was elected to serve. I say, Sir, how well off are our people?

The Minister, in his budget, indicated that we are in such a state of prosperity as we have never seen before. Now, who are the ones who are in this state of prosperity? Who, may I ask? Oh yes! I look across this House and see some people who are in an excellent state of prosperity. I can look along Water Street and find merchants who are in a great state of prosperity. You can look in many places and find people who are in a state of prosperity which they never dreamed of—We only have to look into our estimates and find where loans have been given to this one by the Government and loans to that one and loans to the other one—These, too, are in an excellent state of prosperity. But, Sir, does that prove anything?

I refer again to White Bay—What has this Government done there to improve the public services of these people? I shall probably have to come back to that again.

We will get back to the figures on page 3 "I give now," the Minister says: "a table showing the various sources of the income. The table covers the years 1951, 1952, 1953 and the present year, 1954." And he goes down through the list and finally it adds up to $102,000,000 as the amount our people earned last year, Sir, according to the Minister. I ask everybody to take 3% off $210,000,000 and what do you get? $6,300,000. That is what they did collect, Mr. Speaker. Was it not six million and some odd thousand—I advance this argument, Sir, if we pocketed $210,000,000 last year as such for our people, then they paid it all out in food and clothing and the where-with-all to live—Otherwise how could this Government collect over six million dollars. Did they have any savings, the people as a whole? If you are going to take averages you must take averages. How much therefore went into the savings bank, how much was put in the sock? Every cent the people earned Sir—

MR. POWER: They put twenty six million dollars in the savings bank.

MR. HOLLETT: That has been there for years and years and years.
MR. POWER: No.

MR. HOLLETT: Yes. There has been twenty odd millions in the savings bank for years—That is the Newfoundland Savings Bank.

Now then he read the details for defence last year—From defence there went into the people's pockets twenty-four and a half million dollars. I ask the Minister where that twenty-four and a half million came from?

I admit paper, pulp and wood, the thirty-nine odd million that came from that is new wealth, new wealth from our forests—Truly that can be called earnings. But getting down to defence, twenty-four and a half million—Does the Minister mean to tell me that if that went into the people's pockets that it first was not taken out by the Federal Government?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Most of that was American.

MR. HOLLETT: Well the American Government—But a lot of it was taken out by the Federal Government.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Of the United States.

MR. HOLLETT: The Government of Canada, seventeen million—Will the Minister tell me that that did not first have to be taken out of the pockets of the people?

MR. SMALLWOOD: The people of Canada.

MR. HOLLETT: We are Canada.

MR. SMALLWOOD: So we are—That includes us.

MR. HOLLETT: The Government of Newfoundland thirteen million. Will the Minister say that that thirteen million did not first have to be taken out of the pockets of the people before it went back in again?

Mining twelve million, yes twelve million dollars, more new development. That is more new wealth, real earnings. But, in the name of Heaven, if I take $20 out of the pocket of my friend and give it back to him to build a road—There is no new wealth in that—Fisheries again ten million dollars—That is not very much from the fishery. I shall come back to the fishery later. That too is new wealth. Family Allowance eleven million dollars—Family Allowances of which I have been told I should be ashamed to speak—I raised a family, and was a member of a family—I don't know why I should be ashamed. I am a Canadian now—You may laugh—but I am a Newfoundlander, Sir. By Family Allowance slightly over eleven million dollars. That too has to come out of people's pockets before coming back. Old Age Pensions eight million three hundred and seventy-seven thousand—the same. Frozen fish industry—that is new wealth. Unemployment Insurance that also has to come out of our pockets first. So we could go on down the line—Mother's and Dependents Allowances and Road Work and Veterans Department and Old Age Assistance etc. When he says that $210,000,000 went into the peoples' pockets in earnings last year it is not a fair picture, then the 3% would not amount to the exact sum practically as was collected in Social Security Taxation because surely that amount collected by the Minister last year indicated that plainly every cent which our people put into their pockets last year had to be spent in order that the people might live. It is a grand thing they had it, I admit that.

How well off are our fishermen? I think anybody who reads the papers, anybody who follows our present day history must know that our fishermen cannot be classed as well off, they cannot be classed as prosperous. In fact, Mr. Speaker, I will go further and I will say that any man or any family man who has to live by the sea, or by the soil for that matter, cannot be classed as prosperous. Why,
Sir, you and I and most of us, I think, remember when this time in the year the ocean around our shores was spattered with sails, with ships going into harbour, with ships coming in from the Southwest Coast, and coming up from the Northwest Coast.

Mr. Power: My Honourable friend is poetical too.

Mr. Hollett: I told you in the first instance that I was fond of it. And St. John's Harbour was filled, Sir, with shipping. Just look at it today. I spoke with a man the other day who came from Burin on a vessel—
He was a coaster—and he told me he sailed in clear weather—he was lucky to get clear weather—he sailed from Burin and never sighted a sail. That was the first week in June. He spoke of St. John's Harbour being filled with ships, as it was. But what sort were they? That shipping came, Sir, from the very people to whom our people supplied the fish which they have to eat, to live. They have,
I think, the finest vessels that one could possibly turn out. It does my heart good in some ways to see these vessels coming here with their able crews. They are only men of small stature but I will say this: The crews of these Portuguese and Spanish ships are the best behaved men that I have seen, who sailed the seas. I think everybody in this House will agree with me—if you see them walking around town, and you have, Mr.
Speaker, they will be well-behaved and well-dressed, and I think they have some of the finest ships that ever sailed the seven seas. Where do these ships come from? Now these governments of Portugal and Spain did not fail to aid the fisheries, they did not fail to assist the fishermen, if you like the merchants, to build these ships. No. They put money into things which were important to the very livelihood of the people whom they governed. We, Sir, in this country are part of the sea. From Cape Race and right around to Cape Ray and back again our people and their ancestors lived by the sea and the soil. They lived by the fishery.
They lived by the ships which they sailed, the boats, the dories. I have in my own home a picture (bought down on Duckworth Street, from Maunders, and he took many very valuable photographs in his time) of Burin Harbour about forty years ago, and Ship Cove. Burin is crammed with sailing vessels with mainsails hoist and foresails hoist to dry. They are waiting for their first bait of caplin—about thirty-five or forty of the fishing bankers, Sir. Look at Burin Harbour today and what will you see? You will see no ships—a few draggers owned by Fishery Products and financed by this Government.
But you don't get the sailing ships and the sailors. I put it to you, Sir, if you want a banker crew in Burin or Grand Bank today you would not be able to pick them up.

Mr. Smallwood: What gives Burin the greatest amount of prosperity?—These bankers that used to be there in my Honourable friend's time or the modern fish plant and drag-gers that come into the same port now, to the same people—Which gave Burin the greater prosperity? The honourable gentleman is the only one in this House who can answer that—

MR. HOLLETT: I would point out to the Honourable the Premier that prosperity is a relative term. In the days of which I speak practically every man was a fisherman or he worked in the sailmaker's shop or forge or something else which was connected with the fishery; but most of the men went to sea in ships which they themselves constructed. They went into the woods and cut the timber—that was work—They built their own boats—There were men there to make the sails and there were men to tan the sails, if necessary to forge this and do that and other things. Whereas now where will you find any of them in Burin? A sailmaker, a forge, a tin shop—They have to use tin occasionally—and you don't find the ships, Sir.

MR. SMALLWOOD: What is the answer?

MR. HOLLETT: It is the ships that make men and men that make ships.

MR. SMALLWOOD: What is the answer to that question?

MR. HOLLETT: I don't know exactly.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It is a fair question—The honourable gentleman is the only one in the House who can answer it. He knows Burin as it was and is—Which of the two has given Burin the greater prosperity?

MR. HOLLETT: As to the prosperity angle of it—Everyone of these men who sailed in these ships, had his own home, his own garden, nine times out of ten had a cow and a few sheep, grew his own vegetables—In those days he was an independent man, or yoeman, if you like, but an independent man—And mind you as an independent man he had a hard time at times as every independent man does—But ninety-nine times out of a hundred he was independent and he grew his own vegetables, had his own cow and sheep and his own wool to knit his own socks, etc. You have none of that now. You got new loans for woolens. You got no loans for bankers, you have to have trawlers—As to which is the more prosperous time, whether it be that day or this is a matter, Sir, which I say we can only speak of relatively. Is the man who worked on a dragger all last winter and living in Marystown with a family and had to take able-bodied relief last year, is he prosperous? Is he prosperous today because of the draggers to be found in Burin? I wonder if the Honourable the Premier will answer me that?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I would like to have an answer to my question first—Why not answer it. The honourable gentleman knows the answer.

MR. HOLLETT: I have answered MR. SMALLWOOD: What is the answer to that question?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Which gives the greater prosperity?

MR. HOLLETT: I have told the Honourable the Premier prosperity is a relative term. If he is speaking in terms of the number of dollars, then there are more dollars now. If he is speaking of the standard of living?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Physical living, sure.

MR. HOLLETT: Sir, I have heard people decry the standard of living in my own boyhood days, and I am a little older, Sir—I say, Sir the standard of living in those days was far beyond anything they have in Burin today. Every boy went to school in the winter time, and in early spring and summer he helped his parents. Every girl did the same. The standard of living was high, the standard of morals was better and people, was my mind, were just as healthy as they are today.

What is prosperity? What is prosperity?

My honourable friend, the Minister of Finance knows what prosperity is, and he knows what an independent peasantry or yeomanry, is if you like—Which is the better, the sailor in his own craft or the one on wages?

MR. SMALLWOOD: How many men in Burin owned their craft, say in 1900, how many men sailed their own craft?

MR. HOLLETT: How many sailed to Labrador in the 1900's. Have you seen that excellent photograph taken in 1905, I believe, of a large fleet of vessels in Twillingate? I believe it is one of the finest photographs I have ever seen of that day.

MR. SMALLWOOD: How many schooners were around Burin then?

MR. HOLLETT: In Burin? About twenty-eight bankers apart from small boats.

MR. SMALLWOOD: So there were some twenty-eight men who sailed their own boats, and some of the captains who sailed on them did not own them.

MR. HOLLETT: What have you got today—You got one man in Burin today who sails his own craft, if you like, Arthur Monroe—And all the rest of the people have to cluster around him, and he is supported by the Government.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Which has given Burin the greater prosperity?

MR. HOLLETT: I am talking about independence—How long can you keep pouring money into the hungry maw of Fishery Products?—That is how long that prosperity will continue in Burin or elsewhere. Under the present set-up how long can you keep pouring money into the hungry maw of Hazen Russell, Bonavista Cold Storage or into the hungry maw of Messrs Crosbie and Sons and so on—That is how long the prosperity which presently has been created will continue. When you take away the independence of the fisherman—

Now, Sir, as I say, prosperity is a relative thing. Yes I can tell the Premier when I became a magistrate away back in 1923 I was pretty badly smashed up—Do you know what I got as a magistrate, Mr. Speaker? I got $96 a month. And I will state here now, Sir, and will state and prove emphatically that I lived better on $96 a month in those days than I live on what I am getting now, and I am getting many times that.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is hard to believe. Twelve hundred then was as good as ten thousand or more now.

MR. HOLLETT: I am not saying as good as what.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Your income now must be close to ten thousand and it was twelve hundred then.

MR. HOLLETT: I would say it as good as six thousand now. I could save a few dollars over the years—As a matter of fact I saved on $96 a month and the Honourable the Premier must have saved on less at the time. I dare say he saved as much on that or more than he is saving today on his salary.
MR. SMALLWOOD: I never saved anything then or now.

MR. HOLLETT: That is the answer to prosperity as given by the Honourable the Premier, Joseph R. Smallwood, he lives no better today.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I am living much better today, and I admit it. I am earning better money than I ever earned in my life before, but I am living better.

MR. HOLLETT: I doubt it.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I know I am.

MR. HOLLETT: I would say that in those days the Premier had a bit of peace of mind—And happiness is part of the prosperity the Premier talks about. When you have no peace of mind but your mind is upset and disturbed, as his is and must be at the present time, Sir, all the money in the universe is not worth a single dollar if you have an upset mind, or it is not worth a dam, Sir (which is an old Italian coin worth 1s. 8d. in case somebody thinks I am using bad language).

Now somebody has put me off—I can't remember what I was saying, Sir.

MR. SMALLWOOD: A good thing too!

MR. HOLLETT: I got on something worthwhile.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Certainiy, you got to talking about me.

MR. HOLLETT: Is that what I was talking about?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, when I last heard from—

MR. HOLLETT: I said, Sir, that if money was put into the peoples' pockets that money was just as rightly taken out of the pockets of the people, not only by this Government but by the Federal Government. Taking it all together, the present standard of living, I don't think people are much better off—but what I was talking about is this item here in the estimates. That has a relationship to the people. It will be remembered that two years ago or less this Government, perforce had to borrow ten million dollars. We know, Sir, that today to assure that that ten million dollars will someday be paid back and to satisfy the people who loaned it to us, we have to collect from the people of this little Province seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars to service the ten million dollar loan. While I am on that point; we know that the people who now own the cement mill were supposed to take care of four million, seven hundred thousand of that loan as to service. They have failed to do that and the responsibility again falls back on the Government, so that the Government has to take it out of the pockets of the people to service that ten million dollar loan.

Now this year we are told they are bringing in another Loan Bill, another twelve million dollars, which certainly will cost the people, take out of their pockets, something close to a million dollars to service that $12 millions loan.

Talk about prosperity—The Minister of Finance should be ashamed to bring in this budget—Then every one of the members gets up and talks about the prosperity of the districts.

MR. POWER: They are better off than ever they were.

MR. HOLLETT: That might well be—As well off as they should be?
MR. SMALLWOOD: Is the present Government doing anything to assist?

MR. HOLLETT: No.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, lots.

MR. HOLLETT: What services are being supplied? I have a total of the services here. Yes, it is easy to laugh off a thing like that—I am telling the Government they jolly well should be ashamed of themselves, Mr. Speaker, but they know that.

There was one place there where the Minister spoke of 'Economic Nonsense.' This is worth reading. "As I have been dealing in figures that touch on the economic position of our Province it might be useful if I gave here a brief description of this Government's policy in the whole matter of Newfoundland's economy. Opponents of the Government have been successful in at least one of their efforts; they have succeeded in distorting that policy into a totally unrecognizable caricature of the reality." "Opponents of the Government," I take it that means us.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It does not mean any such thing—it says "opponents" it does not say which.

MR. HOLLETT: I can assure him, Mr. Speaker, we are opponents.

MR. SMALLWOOD: You may be the opponents—but when the word "they" is left out the gentlemen opposite are not necessarily included.

MR. HOLLETT: That leaves us out—does it?

I wonder who wrote this—I wonder. Now, Mr. Speaker, don't forget they have been successful—We have been successful. "They have been successful in distorting that policy into a totally unrecognizable caricature of the reality." "Totally unrecognizable"—it is poetry. I am sure the people in White Bay and Green Bay and all over the country must be impressed by "totally unrecognizable caricature of the reality."

Then he goes on: "It is to the eternal credit of this Government that from the moment it came into power five years ago it was able to evade entanglement in the age-old romanticism and economic nonsense that has passed for economic policy in Government circles. It is to their eternal credit that they were able to go straight as an arrow to the vital truths of economic common-sense."

Let us see what they were: I jotted down one or two of these economic truths: The Icelandic Boats—"They went straight as an arrow"—That was going to save the fishery, bring prosperity to every fisherman in the country, show us how to fish, catch all sorts of things. They caught seven herring in two years—I believe that was the amount. Olsons Whale—Does that revive any heartaches? Economic nonsense: The Clarenville boats—I remember three boats were left over and someone went out to make a quick dollar—What did the Government do? They gave them to a one-time member of this House and a one-time Leader of the Opposition—they gave them to him for nothing, but in five years he was going to pay a hundred thousand dollars—He could do what he liked with them in the meantime. These three boats cost this country—

MR. SMALLWOOD: To a point of order, Mr. Speaker. That is a very serious charge the honourable gentleman makes, and there is not even a sylable of truth in that statement that we gave the boats to a one-time Leader of the Opposition and he was to pay nothing for five years.

MR. HOLLETT: I said, Mr. Speaker, that they gave the boats to the man for nothing, but he was to pay for them in five years—Yes, one hundred thousand dollars.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is not correct—There is not a syllable of truth in it.

MR. HOLLETT: He might have given a note or something like that.

MR. SMALLWOOD: There is not a syllable of truth in what the honourable gentleman said, except one—we sold them—that is all—as for the rest there is not a syllable of truth in it.

MR. HOLLETT: Every word I have spoken, Sir, is true. An arrangement was made with this gentleman for the disposal of these boats, three boats, which cost this country two hundred and fifty thousand dollars each, seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars, and sold for one hundred thousand dollars.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I am sure the honourable gentleman does not wish to persist in his misrepresentation. To begin with these boats which were sold to Mr. Peter Cashin had nothing whatsoever to do with the Icelandic Boats. They were Clarenville Boats. The honourable gentleman was talking about the Icelandic Boats—

MR. HOLLETT: So I was but at this moment of the Clarenville Boats.

MR. SMALLWOOD: In the second place the boats sold to Mr. Peter Cashin, these Clarenville Boats were not sold on five years terms, not even on three year terms.

MR. HOLLETT: I will get the agreement bring it in and table it.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That will be more like it.

MR. HOLLETT: At any rate they were sold for a hundred thousand dollars—that is correct—Then somebody else wanted them but did not have money to buy them and they went to work and loaned to the other party one hundred and twenty-five thousand to buy them off the other gentleman who has not passed the Government five cents. So we lost the Clarenville Boats for $125,000. That is not all paid up yet, although I believe most of these boats have now gone to the bottom—that is economic nonsense, Sir, where you sell Government property and you lend the man the money to buy it from you—Economic nonsense.

Well I won't mention the Seigheim deal—Then the steel plant at Bay Roberts for instance, we heard an awful lot about that. The honourable member for that district, Sir, who is not here now, said it was going to be the greatest thing in the world, it would take all the iron ore practically on Bell Island and turn it into steel and ship it to the rest of the world to build ships. Was not that one of the projects in this economic nonsense idea?

Then the IBEC Report—I just mention these—I don't want to enlarge on them all—that only cost two hundred odd thousand dollars.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It cost eighty thousand dollars. We had the cost here long ago.
MR. HOLLETT: Why have to pay eight thousand dollars for something we are not allowed to look at?

MR. SMALLWOOD: The honourable gentleman said it cost two hundred thousand dollars—

MR. HOLLETT: All right, what is a hundred thousand dollars in the eyes of the Government? All right, let us take eighty thousand dollars for the IBEC Report. The people of this country are not allowed to see it, we of the Opposition are not allowed to look at it.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Might it still not be worth eighty thousand dollars as long as the Government has it—We are the Government and we have the report.

MR. HOLLETT: Why not tell the people—No—It is not "we are the Government" but "I am the man."

Then there was a commission on the price of food and one on fishery and now one for forestry and agriculture. Sir, these commissions are just like plaster. They are put on to remove the immediate pain and that is all, nothing ever comes out of them—Although I do hope something comes out of our fisheries committee.

I find in the Minister's budget speech that the ramparts of poverty have been assuaged and taken and they have fallen in this country of ours —I would like to know when—We had a short time ago most of our fishermen on the northeast coast, so they said, on strike, and we have the report which I have read from Ottawa which says, in Newfoundland, in January, there were eighteen thousand Newfoundlanders looking for work—Yet the ramparts of poverty have been beaten down.

Dole—Yes we have had to give out dole, 20 cents a person per day. And if you take the 3 per cent off that and the merchants profit it does not leave very much for the individual—"The ramparts of poverty," "Economic common-sense."

The Minister then goes on to describe the impressive record of this Government from the first day of Confederation—That is a report of the five years, according to the Minister. Why we want all that in a budget speech of last year I don't know. But the Minister seems to give us the Government's record for the past five years.

"The greatest programme of economic survey ever seen, this included the retention of great companies to make water-power surveys, timber surveys and mineral surveys. This whole programme was conducted on a far-flung scale, and has cost over a million dollars up to this time."

What have we got out of it? Where is the report which shows that it was economic common-sense to conduct these surveys when in the very Terms of Union when we went into Confederation we find that the Government of Canada would assist in making these surveys—No effort whatsoever, Sir was made to get the Federal Government to assist in any of these surveys. No—We had forty or fifty millions in the bank so we will do it—

"We organized the Newfoundland and Labrador Corporation, popularly known as NALCO." Was that economic common-sense? Gave away twenty thousand square miles of territory to NALCO; which was under the presidency and guidance of Dr. Alfred Valdmanis, who everybody knows made $30,000 a year. First they had Sir William Stephenson but he disliked NALCO so much he got out in four months—Nothing doing, he said, I am not going to have anything to do with a thing like this. So they put Valdmanis there and gave him $50,000 a year—Yet the Minister says this is a quite unique organization in North America—It is unique all right. Also don't forget, Sir, it cost us nine hundred thousand dollars.

Then the Government instigated the organization of the great British Newfoundland Corporation, popularly known as BRINCO “This new body is in the direct line of the great development bodies of the British Colonial Empire of great days, now, for the most part, no more.”

That must have saddened the heart. With all the other greatness this Government has seen fit to revive that, and give them over a hundred thousand square miles for prospecting — Then they call that economic common-sense. Only yesterday we had a Bill brought in here where one of the biggest firms in the whole of North America came in and took a little bit of twenty-five thousand square miles and spent ten, twenty or thirty perhaps a hundred thousand dollars on that twenty-five square miles. Yet the Government in its economic wisdom has seen fit to give these great British Corporations we hear so much about all that. That has been alienated from us. They gave it to BRINCO and called it economic common-sense. I am not saying anything about these directors of BRINCO whoever they are. But I do know this; one of the shareholders and one of the directors on BRINCO who control now some one hundred thousand square miles is the representative of the AND Company and another of Bowaters. These are directors on BRINCO, and we must not forget that Bowaters and the AND Company have a great interest in Newfoundland and in the forests of Newfoundland and consequently they will undoubtedly have some interest in some of the wood on Labrador.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Is there anything wrong with that?

MR. HOLLETT: The whole of the Seigiem territory. I am not talking about what is wrong, but “economic common-sense.”

MR. SMALLWOOD: Is there anything unique or unsensible about that?

MR. HOLLETT: There could very well be.

MR. POWER: Mr. Churchill thought it a good idea.

MR. HOLLETT: I am sick and tired hearing that about Mr. Churchill. Because Churchill says something it is okay. He is a man, with all due respect to him, a great man, and one of the men that we all have looked up to and will continue, I hope, to look up to.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Hear! Hear!

MR. HOLLETT: But I say we have the admission by the Government that this is a British thing—“great British firms” controlling a hundred thousand square miles—What did Churchill say? “A great Imperial concept.” He would be a fool to say anything else.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Of course he would be a fool and so would anyone be a fool if he disagreed with Churchill on that. Does the honourable gentleman disagree with it?

MR. HOLLETT: Who wants to be imperialistic in these days?
Mr. Smallwood: Not Imperialistic—"A great Imperial concept." That is what he said—Get a dictionary.

Mr. Hollett: I don't need a dictionary.

Mr. Smallwood: Imperialistic and Imperial concept—There is a great difference.

Mr. Speaker: I draw to the attention to the honourable members that it is now 1:00 o'clock.

Mr. Hollett: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of the debate.

Mr. Speaker: Before the honourable gentleman moves the adjournment: Does he wish to continue his speech at 3:00 o'clock? If so it is not necessary to move the adjournment.

Mr. Hollett: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker: It being now 1:00 o'clock we leave the House until 3:00 of the clock.

FRIDAY, June 11, 1954
AFTERNOON SESSION

The House resumed at 3:00 of the clock.

Mr. Speaker: Order—Hon. the Minister of Finance to move the House into a Committee of Ways and Means: The Honourable Leader of the Opposition was speaking:

Mr. Hollett: Mr. Speaker, just having returned from a sumptuous repast as a guest of the Government, Sir, I suppose I should be very careful not to upset either by my own gastronomic nerves or those of any member on the other side of the House. I represented the Opposition at this luncheon tendered to the National Research Council of Canada, and it was, in addition to being a very excellent luncheon indeed, a privilege to be able to sit down and talk to some of these men of the industrial and scientific world in Canada. They are fine men. Those I met and chatted with, which was only about two or three, came from Iceland from where we had boats some time ago.

Mr. Smallwood: One of the crew?

Mr. Hollett: He too is up in the air somewhat, but not as much as the boats which we had. The Premier certainly gave a very excellent address of welcome. I did not notice any measure of welcome in his speech, but he did divulge the fact that we are in need of advice and help from these people relative to our fisheries. I was very much impressed by the able manner in which he laid the case of Newfoundland, for research into our fishing industry, before these men, who undoubtedly must have also been impressed as much as even a more humble soul like myself. I am very grateful on behalf of the Opposition for the invitation to attend that luncheon and to chat with some of these men it was my pleasure to meet.

Now, Sir, to get down to the business in hand, that is the speech of the Finance Minister. I believe I was at the point where I was relating his summation of the achievements of the Government during the past five years, not the past year but the past five years. I think I had just dealt in a very small way with BRINGCO. The next thing we go on to, I believe, according to the Minister, is that relating to the fisheries—And what does the Minister say?
"We were successful in inducing the Government of Canada to join with us in the creation of the Fisheries Development Committee. Working for nearly two years under the Chairmanship of the Chief Justice of Newfoundland, Sir Albert Walsh, this Committee conducted the most painstakingly thorough survey of the fishing industry, of the fishery potential, and of the needs of the industry that ever was accomplished in the history of British North America." Then he said: "We have been busy in this present session of the House enacting legislation to launch our great fishery development program."

Now the part I am greatly interested in, and did not know before, is the next part of the paragraph: "This will be by far, indeed it will be incomparably the greatest development programme ever known in the fisheries of the northern half of this continent. The Government of Canada has agreed to participate with us in bearing the costs of this great development, which, I expect, is likely to cost as much as one hundred million dollars on all counts over a period of twelve or fifteen years."

Then the Minister goes on to relate what they have done themselves with regard to the fisheries and he says: "We have followed consistently a policy of assisting the fishing industry with loans to enable them to expand and improve their facilities. We have extended financial assistance in excess of seven million dollars to some fourteen Newfoundland fishery companies, while loans of two other companies, totalling the best part of another three million dollars are pending and are more than likely to be approved."

I am tempted to ask if these men are fish merchants, and I presume they are. I am also tempted to remind the House of some statement made just recently with regard to these fish merchants. I take it these—For instance I have brought along with me a number of these—I have Bonavista Fisheries Limited. That, I believe, is Hazen Russell; Fishery Products, Bonavista Fish Meal, Fishery Products, Gaultois Fisheries, and North Eastern Co-operatives, which I believe is in the process of liquidation; Trepassey Fisheries, Alberto Fisheries, Andrews Labrador which appears again and again, Arctic Fisheries, Bonavista Cold Storage again, Dunphy's, that is an old one also, then Fishery Products for several more hundred thousand. I believe altogether Fishery Products has some three million some hundred thousand. Olson Whaling, Penney & Sons, Richards Limited—I think that is in liquidation, if I remember correctly. I won't go into it. I take it that was one of these big developments which the Minister spoke of as the romanticism of the past. Getting down to the heart of things in the new economic approach, I believe that was inspired by three men who came to the Premier's door one night and managed to get in and have a talk over the things that should be done. Then we have Northatlantic Fisheries six hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars. In regard to their other three millions we have been told where that goes. I believe that is the three million dollars cut out this year for fishery development, and which has to be administered by the Fisheries Authority, that is the most of it. But I must not pass over the last opportunity in this House for this season. I hope, to refer to this Newfoundland Fisheries Development Authority.

First I would say that of the three million dollars, one million, five hundred thousand will go to Fishery Products for the setting up of plants in Bay de Verde and Change Islands, Joe Batts Arm, Twillingate, Catalina, Trepassey etc, which leave a million and a half of that three millions. Then Mr. Dustan, Mr. Young and Mr. Winsor will draw down another salary of seventy-five thousand dollars for three of them, and will set up an office which will cost another ten thousand making eighty-five thousand five hundred dollars altogether, and other offices will cost another twenty-five thousand. Then there is the matter of LaScie which was the one around which most of the Newfoundland Fisheries Development Authority was to exert most of its energy. I believe this will get $358,000.

With regard to that Fisheries Development Authority I might say, Sir, that after this interesting address of the Honourable Premier today he put me off a little on certain things, which I might have said, because it has come home to me that there might be a possibility of this FDA getting hold of some of these men who are here on this Research Council and seeking some advice from them. I do not think, and I say this frankly and bluntly, that without any idea of hurting, or any intention of hurting anybody's feelings, I do not think we have in Mr. Dustan, Mr. Winsor and Mr. Young, with all due respect to them and their achievements, I do not think we have in them under the present set-up, the authority which is necessary or the necessary experience or knowledge to make even a fifty-fifty chance of success with this Fisheries Authority. The Honourable the Premier has undoubtedly praised them to the skies, and I do hope that they will live up to his expectations. But we do and must realize, we must be practical, and see that the fisheries problem of Newfoundland is also the fisheries problem of Nova Scotia as it is the fisheries problem of Iceland and all other countries whose basic economy is based on the fisheries. I don't see in either Mr. Dustan who is a banker or in Mr. Young who was an office man or in Mr. Winsor who is also or was an office man—I don't see in these three gentlemen the necessary experience, without some such help as I have referred to in order to make a success of this scheme. It is one of the greatest basic problems which any government could tackle.
I am quite sure the Government will make some mistakes. I believe if we were the Government we might make some mistakes. But it is a problem and no question about it, Sir. The thing that has been worrying us on this side of the House is the amount of authority which is being given to these people, unlimited, practically unlimited authority to go ahead. Well now, without being unkind, if Mr. Dustan were the man, and he may be the greatest man in the country, as the Premier apparently thinks he is, but if he were that sort of a man, I don't visualize the Bank of Nova Scotia parting with him. I cannot see Job Brothers and Company parting with him, and I can't see Hazen Russell dispensing with his services, or shall I put it the other way—I don't see Hazen Russell giving up his services, neither do I see why Mr. Crosbie would want to lose Mr. Young if Mr. Young is the man the Premier says he is. And I am quite sure the FAO would not want to lose Mr. Winsor if he had all the attributes ascribed to him by the Honourable the Premier. Of course any of us who have been in this House as long as I have—shall I say—at any rate I have not been here too long yet, but we are used to hearing the Premier describing everybody, not only men but plants of all kinds, industries of all kinds, construction companies from the United States and away across the world, describing them in the highest possible terms, everyone, every organization, these are the biggest and best men in their field—they are the greatest industrialists in Europe, they are the greatest men in the United States, like Rockefeller, etc. Now we have three men at the head of this Fisheries Authority who are undoubtedly, according to the Premier, the biggest and best men in that field that he could obtain in this country.

While we are on fisheries, Sir, I think I should say this: That while we are all anxious that this scheme or plan for the northeast coast should succeed, as we sincerely hope it will, I think we must be practical, and at least I think the Government ought to be practical, and apply some of the acquired skill of such a body as the National Research Council of Canada who have committees on every conceivable subject in the whole range of Canada's economy. I think we ought to have some ideas from abroad like that say as to what indeed really actually are the possibilities of success in the fisheries along that shore, or anywhere in Newfoundland for that matter, before we spend one hundred million dollars. I take it fifty million dollars would be the share of the Provincial Government in such a project. After all, Sir, we have to remember every time we borrow ten million dollars we saddle ourselves with an annual charge which is anywhere from six hundred to seven hundred thousand dollars annual charge for every ten million dollars we borrow. If we borrow fifty millions then, of course, that would be quite a burden which has to be collected from the people year by year. In addition to that we have to set up a sinking fund which will take care of the loan at maturity. So I think that it might have been perhaps wiser if the Government had seen fit to get the opinion of these men who met today or men of that type. That is their job to find out the possibility of success in any field of industry anywhere in Canada. As far as I can gather from what the Honourable the Premier said today, no approach was made to these people, no approach was made to anybody. But the Honourable the Premier and the Government looked around and picked up three men and said, you are our Board, name your price—What is your price? Twenty-five thousand dollars a year, pensionable at the end of ten years at five thousand dollars a year, if anything happens we take care of your wife and children. What authority? We give you full authority to go ahead and do what you like, but be sure to make a success, and see that everything is done to make certain the possibility of success.

We have to be practical. I quoted some figures some time ago with regard to the price of fish, and I quoted the prices paid to fishermen at North Sydney in June 1954, to fishermen who brought in their schooners, vessels and draggers to North Sydney, 3½c. a pound and in Halifax 4¼c. per pound. That was inshore cod; haddock in North Sydney 4½ to 5c. Newfoundland 3c. I forgot St. John's 3¼c. Halifax 4½, St. John's, Newfoundland 2¼c. Haddock North Sydney 4½c. to 5c. and Halifax 6c. to 6½c. St. John's, Newfoundland 3c. That is quite a difference, Mr. Speaker. I therefore ask myself if we are going to put up fish in LaScie or anywhere on the northeast coast area by means of fish plants in that area—we have to ask ourselves what it is going to be worth to men who catch the fish, the fishermen. These are the men we are out to help. If there is this much difference between the prices of cod and haddock and other fish between Halifax and North Sydney and St. John's, Newfoundland, I think that is a subject we ought to go into before we commit this country of Canada and particularly this Province of Newfoundland to the tune of one hundred million dollars. Take halibut, Sir, halibut in North Sydney or Halifax sold for 28c. a pound. What is it selling for here in St. John's? 15c. per pound, and so it goes. That is a question I think should be determined before voting three million dollars to be spent on such a venture.

Getting back to the Minister's speech—He goes on to say that these same loans to which he had referred, including the three million dollars will this year create additional fishery plants to employ seven hundred and fifty more workers and one million dollars in wages. I say if that is so it is sound business. But you must remember he is referring there clearly to fishery plants which will be created in areas where the draggers can't get in in all seasons of the year. Even at that, Sir, as I pointed out before luncheon, we have been told a story, and unfortunately I am afraid it is correct, of fishermen going out in Fishery Products draggers all the winter and on occasions during these trips had to go on relief to get able-bodied relief. The honourable member for Placentia West will probably confirm that, or otherwise he can correct us on it. At any rate it was brought to me from Marystown. Now that is being brought into an ice-free port which I believe has one of the finest fish plants in the world, and certainly they have the finest draggers and they certainly have the finest fishermen, most of whom, or a good many of whom do come from Marystown area, where they have the finest fishermen in the world.

Now, Sir, the Minister then in his budget speech, he leaves that and goes on, that is one of the achievements, so he goes on to the next achievement of the Government during the past five years:
"We have directly brought about the creation of fifteen entirely new industries in Newfoundland. I refer here, of course, to the new industrial plants. Three of these—the cement mill, the gypsum wallboard mill, and the birch veneer, plywood, flooring and door mill—were built by the Government at the Government's expense. The cement mill has since been sold, the birch plant has been leased to a private company and the gypsum wallboard plant is being operated by a Crown company until a satisfactory purchaser is found for it."

"The other twelve plants have been launched by European companies by means of cash loans made to them by us. These loans, all of which bear interest, are for periods which vary between ten and fifteen years."

"Of the fifteen new plants three are in full production, eleven are in part production, and one has not yet finished construction of its plants. Most of the eleven that are in part production, began production within the past few weeks or months, and can scarcely be said to have commenced operations as yet."

I would like while on that particular item to refer to the cement plant. The cement plant, Mr. Speaker, was built by a firm called MIAG and by a sub-contractor Mr. W. J. Lundrigan. I have here the agreement which was made between the Government and Mr. Lundrigan, W. J. Lundrigan Limited, relative to the building of the cement plant and also the gypsum plant, and the amendments made later. First the agreement made with Mr. Lundrigan was on the 7th day of August, 1950. That was an agreement between the Honourable Joseph R. Smallwood, Minister of Economic Development, in the Province of Newfoundland, hereinafter called the Government and William J. Lundrigan Limited.

The work is defined and shown in the said plants—The Government agrees to pay to the contractor the sum of money set out. It is agreed and declared all provisions, plans, specifications and additional plans and specifications referred to shall be binding on the Government. That is signed by Joseph R. Smallwood; Witnessed by Leslie R. Curtis, signed by Mr. Lundrigan and the specifications are as follows: Concrete and masonry work—concrete for factory and foundations for the machinery to be used in plant—That includes forms and concrete aggregate—Payment will be made to the contractor at the price of $40 a cubic yard. Then it goes on to tell about the main masonry work, etc. I find that the total involved under this contract is $525,500. I have discovered in the vouchers held by the Department of Finance that we paid Mr. Lundrigan under the same contract and under the heading, cement plant construction, $982,956. Remember the contract called for an expenditure of $525,500 and the amount paid under the same contract and charged to the cement plant construction was $982,956. Included in that cost were the cubic yards of concrete which were paid for at $37.40 and up to $56 per cubic yard. On further search I found charged to the cement plant construction re-charges to cement plant construction a total of $168,181, bags of cement, most of it sold to the Government by Mr. Lundrigan, at $1.30 per bag or a total of about $218,642. That was $1.30 a bag. Incidentally in connection with that $1.30 I find exactly the same time, almost the same month, Mr. Chester Dawe who built the birch plant charged up $1.60 per bag. That is quite a difference, that is a difference of 30c. per bag.

Now what I want to know, and have not yet been told—Why did we buy all this cement from Mr. Lundrigan for construction of the cement plant when according to the contract he was to supply the concrete at a definite price anywhere from $37 up to $56 a yard, for which we paid him, and for which we received receipts for the construction of the cement plant? What I am asking the Government to tell me is why did we have to buy this cement from Mr. Lundrigan for the construction of the cement plant, 168,186 bags of cement—almost enough to keep the cement plant going after they did get started for a while. I don't know whether anybody on the Government side can tell me how that is. If they could do so I would appreciate it. Right now, Sir, I cannot go further into the argument. It seems to me if a person signs a contract to put up foundations, build a building, for a contractor to put in 7,400 yards of concrete, which I think it called for, and for which they were paid from $37 to $56 a cubic yard, it seems to me rather strange to find 186,000 bags of cement charged up to the same job. I don't know if anybody would be able to tell me the explanation. I have not been able to find one.

HON. E. S. SPENCER (Minister of Public Works): If the honourable gentleman would allow me. I am afraid I missed part of the discussion he is dealing with. But I thought as I returned to the Chamber I understood him to say that the contractor was contracting to pour 7,400 yards of concrete and there also was 168,000 bags of cement?

MR. HOLLETT: What I said was that he supplied us with concrete that is to be paid for by the Government at $40 and went as high as $56 per cubic yard. The 6,000 cubic yards was to be paid for and was paid for at a rate of $58 per cubic yard. That was to erect the plant. In addition to that Mr. Lundrigan sold the Government 168,000 bags of cement. I am asking for information. What does the Minister knows?

MR. SPENCER: I would say, Mr. Speaker, in reply to the honourable gentleman's question, I happen to know that Mr. Lundrigan was appointed agent for the North Star Cement Co., distributing agent, and it could be, naturally that he sold, or cement was sold, to the Government through his firm, which could be for some other purpose. I don't know exactly—the thing is too vague. Anyone who knows anything about concrete, you use roughly four to six bags per yard, any common-jack could tell you that. I would say the two prices referred to $37 a yard and $56 a yard, if these are the prices quoted—I can assure the honourable gentleman and the House that you cannot get a contractor to place concrete in any form today at prices below that. We have bid prices and I have been in a position to collect quite a few of them in the last few years. We have had bid prices for bridge construction—I would say that $37 is a very good price. We have had at the same time bid prices for $60 for super-structure work and reinforcement and special forms which go as high as $120 a yard. I don't know if this has any bearing on what the honourable gentleman was saying. In reference to the large number of bags of cement sold to the Government I would say it was sold to the Gov-
MR. HOLLETT: Why charge it to cement plant construction?

MR. SPENCER: That again I would not know.

MR. HOLLETT: I have the contract here which calls for a certain amount of concrete.

MR. SPENCER: If there is any question about it at all—

MR. HOLLETT: There is a question.

MR. SPENCER: I assure the honourable member nobody would use that much cement in six thousand yards of concrete.

MR. HOLLETT: I know that. I took the trouble to find out all that. In fact I went to a big concrete firm in St. John's, that is Concrete Products—They assured me $37 to $56 was reasonable. I am not questioning that — The contract calls for 46,000 yards. But what I am questioning is the 168,186 bags of cement charged to the cement plant construction.

MR. SPENCER: It must have been for more than six thousand yards there. It must have been some other part.

HON. C. H. BALLAM (Minister of Labour): I might say, Lundrigan's firm only did part of the construction —That was only part of the construction of the plant. The remaining part was done by the contractors themselves. That may be the explanation —I know that happened.

MR. HOLLETT: I mean, why does it not show somewhere? Any person going to look at the bills and vouchers would say that Mr. Lundrigan used it. According to the contract he was to supply all these things and he got paid for them, and also for 168,000 bags of cement under the same heading of the cement plant construction. I want to know what it is for?

MR. SPENCER: Again I may be able to help the honourable gentleman, if he wishes me to try. The 6,400 yards, I would say the number of bags of cement required for that would be part of the 168,000 referred to because $37 does not cover the cost of cement, rest assured of that, our contract price would prove that to you. The honourable gentleman mentioned the name of a very prominent concrete firm. A few months ago we had bids from that very self-same firm to complete a lot of work for us. I hope they can do more as they have done a very excellent job. They built the Gander River Bridge for us last year. In no case have we got contracts for concrete work at $37 to $40 or even $50 which includes the cement. The cement has to be added. In Public Works as we provide contracts we supply the cement and reinforcing steel. The actual making and placing of it is what we pay $37 a yard for.

MR. HOLLETT: You mean to say the Government paid $37 a yard just for—

MR. SPENCER: With the aggregate and placing and form work, yes, and more.

MR. HOLLETT: You can buy concrete anywhere in St. John's for $17.50 a yard.

MR. SPENCER: Form work has to be laid—

MR. HOLLETT: That is specified in the contract.
MR. SPENCER: The form work is not paid for in that $37 a yard. I don't think the honourable gentleman will find the form work is specified and charged for clear of that.

MR. HOLLETT: The quantity of concrete required is estimated at six thousand yards, which will be paid for, including forms and finishings where needed.

MR. SPENCER: Exactly what I said, including the forms, exactly.

MR. HOLLETT: What else would put the price up?

MR. SPENCER: The $37, as I have said, is the price per yard of concrete, the price for which the contractors just provide the forms and workmanship to put the forms there, get the aggregate and mix the cement, which is provided with the aggregate and place it in the form at $37.

MR. HOLLETT: Which is provided by somebody else?

MR. SPENCER: Yes, the cement is provided by the owner, in our case, exactly the same thing applies there. I am not sure, but if it did not the price would be more than $37 a yard.

MR. HOLLETT: Do you mean to tell me Mr. Lundrigan is getting $58 for reinforced concrete, and that he provides everything except the cement?

MR. SPENCER: And the steel.

MR. HOLLETT: Cement is $1.30 a bag. That does not account for 168,000 bags.

MR. SPENCER: No, the honourable gentleman is missing the point there. May I endeavour to clarify that a little further. The honourable gentleman is quoting that the concrete is $37 per yard. First of all I would say that we have not yet gotten the price down to that figure. We cannot get a contractor today to place concrete, build the forms and do the job and put it in place for $37, even by the firm the honourable gentleman mentioned a few minutes ago. We had their bid price on concrete and many other firms at $60 a yard and still higher. The point is simply this: The contractor who contracts to build, say a bridge, for the Department of Public Works, on the Trans-Canada Highway, if you like, so that it is checked by the Federal Government, our partner in the Trans-Canada Highway, and our contract is that we ask the contractor to put in say five thousand cubic yards of concrete. What is the quoted bid price? Cement is supplied by us and steel is supplied by us, and he quotes his price $37, $40, $60 whatever the price may be. That is the price that he gets for making, providing the aggregate, sand and stone and water and equipment to mix it and forms, the workmanship to put the forms in place, mix the concrete and bring it along and pour it in the different forms for the five thousand yards. He then gets $37 a yard and we would supply the cement—so you may add nine dollars to that, roughly.

MR. HOLLETT: I don't question these prices at all, but the honourable gentleman must understand—for the amount of concrete required, 6,400 yards, multiply that by six, about 38,000 bags. I want to know why the 168,000?

MR. SPENCER: I would say it has no bearing on it at all.

MR. HOLLETT: It is charged under the contract.

MR. SPENCER: Then it was used over and above for some other purpose.
MR. HOLLETT: I want to know why?

MR. SPENCER: I don't know. I did not provide the reports.

MR. HOLLETT: Why is the honourable gentleman interfering if he knows nothing about it?

MR. SPENCER: I take exception to that, Mr. Speaker, I rise to a point of order—The honourable gentleman asks why I interfere if I know nothing about it—I think he has been honest enough in the past to admit I do know something about it. I think he knows in his heart that I do. The point of order is, Mr. Speaker, I made the statement that I knew nothing about it—I consider I know my job and know about concrete, a little more perhaps than the honourable gentleman, and I will help him a little further if I can. I am capable of doing it, and glad to do it—But the point I am making now is that the 168,000 bags referred to could definitely not have been related alone to that six thousand cubic yards of concrete.

MR. HOLLETT: That is why I am trying to find out.

MR. SPENCER: I merely said then, it was not my job to provide the contract so that I do not know where the rest went. But I submit to the honourable gentleman and the House it is a very simple matter to find out if he wishes—Let us ask the contractor.

MR. HOLLETT: I want the honourable gentleman to understand—I don't know anything about his knowledge of concrete. I will say what I please.

MR. SPENCER: I will check you on anything I do have.

MR. SPEAKER: I would suggest that the Honourable Leader of the Opposition continue, and that the Honourable Minister of Public Works would refute his remarks later.

MR. HOLLETT: The Honourable Minister apparently has spoken now to the budget. He has done more talking than I have since I came in from lunch.

MR. POWER: Perhaps the honourable gentleman will table a question on that?

MR. HOLLETT: I might. What I was about to say, Sir, is that I am not questioning the knowledge of the honourable gentleman in regard to concrete, I am questioning his knowledge with regard to this contract. I have told you, Sir, that under the contract with W. J. Lundrigan for building—I am not implying nothing wrong nor dishonourable to anybody. I am stating facts under that contract. As I have added it up we were to pay William J. Lundrigan $525,500 under that contract. I have added up the bills in the Finance Department charged to that contract and I find that we paid him nine hundred odd thousand dollars. Now that is quite a difference, and I wonder why. Then I discovered that in addition to his supplying the concrete, he had sold to the Government 168,000 bags of cement. What I am anxious to find out is—for what? The Honourable Minister of Public Works now tells me part of it was for that concrete.

MR. SPENCER: I am only assuming.

MR. HOLLETT: That is not the information I got from a firm which deals in concrete, at that price at any rate—that is the point—it is something for the Government to find out about. First there was an Order in Council made for William J. Lundrigan for $75,000, not saying what for, paid over $75,000 without appearing in the Act nor in the Department of Finance to show what it is for, and in August 1952 Mr. Lundrigan submitted a final statement of his account for the construction of the cement plant and I presume that was paid. Yet two weeks later there is another final statement for a claim of $35,468.00. I may point out here, Sir, that Mr. Lundrigan has not done badly at all since this Government came into power. Altogether his firm has been paid by the Government for the construction of the two plants and other government work since 1950 an amount of $3,200,000—consider that is not bad for one firm. However, if the government can give me the explanation for that 168,000 bags of cement—mind you it is charged to the construction of the cement plant and is not charged to anything else—Even if it were meant to go into the concrete there were only 6,400 cubic yards altogether in both. Anyway I submit that to the Government to see what it is all about. As I say; I am imputing nothing dishonest, nothing crooked nor anything like that although some people might think I am, I am not—I just want to find out.

Speaking of the gypsum plant—I don't want to say very much about that for various reasons. Mr. Lundrigan was to build that too. The contract is here, and it is pretty much the same as the other, but the amounts spent, of course, were very much less or were supposed to be much less. In this particular case I believe there was a slight up-grading of price. Incidentally I forgot to mention that in the building of the cement plant the first thing the Government, who had abandoned the age old romanticism, did was to build a road out to the site or some site or other costing thirty thousand dollars. Then they had to abandon the road altogether and put the plant somewhere else. That does not indicate the arrow going straight at that time, this arrow of economic direction.

The next thing the Minister praises the Government for during the past five years is the setting up of a Royal Commission on Forestry and then on Agriculture. In all, he called it, a great and noble contribution.

Then he goes on to the expenditure: According to the Minister's speech, Sir, expenditures last year on current account were $33.4 million and revenue $36 million, giving a surplus 2.7 million. This year we are expected to get a surplus of $3,600,000. Here again I refer to the abandonment of the economic romanticism of the old governments, and the new system envisaged by this Government. Speaking of a surplus of $3,600,000 on current account; that looks good on paper, sounds good going over the air, especially when you have the mike in front of you when saying it—a surplus of $3,600,000—Boy what a government! I might point out, when we borrow twelve million and take away or subtract the amount of the surplus then the statement as shown might mean we will show a considerable deficit. As a matter of fact the Government have been running on deficit budgeting ever since they came into power, with deficit budgets every year in my estimation, over-spending at the rate of ten million dollars a year compared to our earning capacity and running our national debt from $3,400,000 up to thirteen million and now we are about to bring it up to twenty-five millions—Economic Romanticism—and remember, Sir, they had to borrow money. Last year we had to give a few dollars advance to the fishermen.

In regard to taxation—we are to increase our taxation this year on gasoline, one cent a gallon, thirty-seven thousand dollars, SSA tax about six million and the cancer tax five hundred thousand.

Getting back to the budget speech, the minister called that sound business, very sound business. I have a note here, Sir, to see page 21. I did not know what was on that until I looked. I think the House will remember that since the budget was brought down we have kept very, very busy. Yes, what I was going to say there was to congratulate—the Minister on the clever and distinguished manner in which he set forth the expenditure of surpluses since the Government came into power. I think it is the best exposition of the surplus expenditure which has been made. On page 22 he said:—"Having taken in a total of $66,000,000—I don't know where they took in $66,000,000: I have an idea it was forty-four million they inherited—"Having taken in a total of $66,000,000 and spent $56,000,000 of it, we have still an amount of approximately $10,000,000. This amount lies on deposit with the Government of Canada to our credit, and draws interest at the rate or 2.5%/". That, Sir, we could not touch.

Another thing which was brought out by the budget, when the Minister was speaking of the pattern he said that we had spent $17,500,000 on capital account, $17,500,000 as against $11,000,000 last year. I wonder what is the meaning of "Manufacturing Developments?" Does that refer to new industries? I take it that these are the new industries, some $2,763,100. A quite amusing thing is on page 24: "It will probably come as an even greater surprise to some people to learn that $23,000,000 of the amount expended is recoverable and will return to the Treasury, most of it paying interest to the Exchequer in the meantime." Then he goes on to figure out how it is made up.

Housing: I have no doubt about that—it is being recovered. Loan Boards: $772,000, that is to say the Fisheries Loan Board, the Agricultural Loan Board and the Co-operative Loan Board—$72,000—He hopes to get that back. Crown plants $11,161,000, that is, cement, gypsum and birch—the Minister calls them recoverable assets.

I made a few notes here, Sir, and if the House will bear with me I will read them: In his analysis of the revenue as forecast in 1954-55 he says the total is $39,200,300. An increase of $28,000,000 in the Department of Finance; Health just over $3,000,000; Welfare $1,500,000; Board of Liquor Control $3,000,000; Public Works just over $1,000,000 and of the $28,000,000 in Finance Department there comes from Canada about $18,000,000. Then there is the Statutory Subsidary $1,500,000 from year to year. Tax Rental Agreement $12,500,000 and the Transitional Grant $4,000,000. Now the Tax Rental Agreement, Sir, which is based upon the gross national product has naturally increased ever since union, and I hope that we shall see a steady increase in that because it is a natural reaction from increased population and increased prosperity in the whole of Canada.
The Transitional Grant is something, I think, of a very serious nature to which we ought to give serious thought. As we remember, Sir, the first years of union that turned in in revenue some six and a half million dollars. Now in the sixth year of union the Transitional Grant is less than four million, in fact, $3,950,000. That has been decreasing at the rate of $550,000 a year. Now there is only one way to make that up, and that is by increased taxation, unless, of course, the Federal Government revises the Terms of Union upward.

The remaining $10,000,000, Sir, under the heading of "Finance" comes largely from taxation, tax on gasoline is increased by 1c. a gallon and is consequently expected to bring in $2,370,000, and the SSA tax estimation is to yield an amount of $6,700,000.

I have pointed out already how dependent our income was, during the past few years at any rate and during the years of Commission of Government, on a war economy. I have also pointed out, Sir, that the references to prosperity are not entirely too hopeful as far as I can see. Prosperity, as I pointed out this morning, is a relative matter. He knows the dollar today is not worth as much as twenty-five cents was ten or twenty years ago, and certainly must less than it was forty years ago, the period to which he referred.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Thank you for an answer.

MR. HOLLETT: Yes, I hope it is quite clear.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It is now perfectly clear.

MR. HOLLETT: I wonder what the Honourable the Premier calls prosperity?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Does the honourable gentleman want to know?

MR. HOLLETT: I have no intention of yielding. I have heard the Honourable the Premier talking. I have heard him talk today, and he gave a very excellent talk. I believe he was all of fifteen minutes, and all he said was—We need you men down here with all your brains to make our fisheries prosperous. These are the words that he spoke. I believe he even forgot to welcome the men here—but he made an excellent speech. I have already praised him on that, but must not give him too much.
MR. SMALLWOOD: One might use up five minutes with a little paraphrase on my speech.

MR. HOLLETT: I can stay here days and days and days.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Go ahead.

MR. HOLLETT: I am not going to be shamed into sitting down. I shall take my time. I might go over five years, but God forbid.

MR. SMALLWOOD: In that time the honourable gentleman might say something by accident.

MR. HOLLETT: I have said something already, and will not be laughed off, it cannot be laughed off.

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, sir!

MR. HOLLETT: Well, Sir, actually, apart from the eighteen million that comes in to the Treasury from Canada the only real money that comes in comes in from what we call new taxes, comes in from gasoline $2,837,000, Sales Tax $6,700,000 and Liquor $3,300,200 and a million from the people for registration of vehicles and drivers licenses, etc. Trading Profit Board of Liquor Control, 1950, where it was estimated $1,650,000, or that was in 1949—That is something I want to refer to—The estimates of one Mr. Thompson. I am quite sure the Honourable the Premier remembers Mr. Thompson. I believe they had him engaged at the time they were discussing the Terms of Union and they got hold of this great firm of Peat, Marwick and Mitchell who sent Mr. Thompson who was to estimate what would be the probable revenue that would accrue to the Government of Newfoundland if it became a Province of Canada. Now just look at this, Sir, and then smile at it, if you can. I am referring to the year 1964 and I am going to compare Mr. Thompson's estimates of our revenue in 1954-55 to that of the Honourable Minister of Finance for the same year. For instance Mr. Thompson estimated for the year 1954-55, and I am sure the Premier will recognize these papers — On gasoline, he said that we would—and I remind you, Sir, it was on the recommendation of Mr. Thompson that the committee who went to Ottawa signed the Terms of Union. It was largely on the basis of his findings and recommendations that the committee signed the Terms of Union. I want to show you how right he was about our probable revenue estimates. He estimated for 1954-55 a collection on gasoline of $1,500,000. The Minister of Finance estimates that we will collect $2,370,000. And we are all quite sure we prefer to take the figure of the Honourable Minister of Finance. Mr. Thompson told the committee that went up to sign the Terms of Union that we would in this year, 1954-55 get $1,717,000. What we are going to collect, according to the Minister is $2,895,800, nearly a million dollars on liquor. Mr. Thompson estimated we would collect this year $1,636,000. Mr. Power's estimate for this year is $3,320,000—So you will see, Sir, it is more than double in some cases and double in connection with the liquor.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It is remarkable how our prosperity has increased.

MR. HOLLETT: It is prosperity he harps on—The word "Prosperity."

MR. SMALLWOOD: Remarkable! Remarkable!

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, I have some letters in my possession which I also may take out and read to the House, one in particular is from a poor woman down in Mr. Premier's own district, with ten in family whose husband is ill, crippled and can't work. Some of the children get the family allowance. On able-bodied relief $51 a month, and the conditions which that poor woman described under which she lived would make the Honourable the Premier and the Minister of Welfare actually shed tears. We might have to remember then there are twelve people, a crippled father and a mother, twelve people including the ten children. They get a certain amount in family allowances. They get $50 a month. Does that family exhibit any of this so-called prosperity?

HON. DR. H. L. POTTLE (Minister of Public Welfare): Rehabilitation of families is not entirely a matter for government responsibility, not in every case and everywhere.

MR. HOLLETT: If the Honourable Minister wants to absolve the Government it is his affair. I maintain it is the responsibility of any government to look after the afflicted and sick—And I have already paid a tribute, I believe, to the Honourable Minister's department—But I am pointing out there is no such thing as prosperity as such. There can be that most abject poverty right in the midst of the highest level of prosperity in our or in any government.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Would the honourable gentleman clarify that—I am a little puzzled—He has me puzzled—I know he does not want to see me puzzled, and would like to set me right. That is why he is speaking—He wants to change the policy, he wants us to adopt his policy. He, therefore, wants us to agree, but all he has done is puzzle us.

MR. SPEAKER: Is that a point of order?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, Mr. Speaker, it is not even a point of privilege. I merely asked the honourable gentleman to set me straight there—There is no prosperity because of a poor woman somewhere—therefore, there is no prosperity, is that the point?

MR. HOLLETT: I did not say there was no prosperity. I said prosperity is a relative term, and poverty can exist in the midst of prosperity. Take the case I cited of men in Burin district fishing at the highest level on draggers, draggers in which the Government has invested millions of dollars and in the plants. Yet fishermen fishing on these boats have to go on relief when they come to the land, and their families have to go on the dole while they are still out there. Mr. Speaker, that is not prosperity. There is prosperity there? And here are the men working at what is the best part of the fishing industry—

MR. POTTLE: Would the Honourable Leader of the Opposition mind indicating where this family is, whether in a rural or an urban area?

MR. HOLLETT: A rural area—That should not make any difference. Take the case, Mr. Speaker, of the honourable member for White Bay, the case which he himself mentioned yesterday, and there is no need to repeat them—To me those people are not undergoing too much prosperity—But I am getting away from the point, Sir.

I was speaking of Mr. Thompson—What I want to drive home, Sir, is this: If it is possible to drive it home: The very man whose word was accepted for the signing of the financial part of our terms in 1949, that very man gave an estimate of our revenue and expenditure for this Year of Our Lord, and as he also did for other years up to 1955-56—He gave these estimates, and, Sir, they are no more like what has actually happened than chalk is like cheese. I want to point out, therefore, how unrealistic might have been the advice which he tendered to the committee who were sent up by Newfoundland to sign the Terms of Union. For instance he forecast a total revenue for this year, that is 1954-55, of $12,844,000, if we went into Confederation.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Tax revenue.

MR. HOLLETT: He placed the transitional grant of $2,450,000 this year. Actually it will be $3,950,000 or $1,500,000 greater. Therefore if we add this we get Mr. Thompson’s forecast as $14,344,000.

MR. SMALLWOOD: From all sources?

MR. HOLLETT: Yes. The Minister of Finance has estimated for this year, and I have no doubt he has made a very good estimate. His estimate for this year was $39,300,200. Mr. Thompson’s estimate was $14,344,000. I have been very careful about these figures, Sir, because it strikes me that figures, like prosperity, can be very unrealistic. Mr. Thompson however, and rightly so, I think, did not add in the amount to be received from Canada on account of Health, Welfare and Public Works this year. This last amount, I believe, is something of the order of six million dollars. Therefore, in justice to Mr. Thompson, Sir, let us add on to his estimate this six millions and get a revised estimate of $20,344,000 for this year, 1954-55. Taking everything into consideration, he has estimated that would be our revenue.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The rest came from additional prosperity.

MR. HOLLETT: As against the Minister’s estimate of $39,300,200. In other words that is a difference of nineteen million dollars.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Extra prosperity.

MR. HOLLETT: Can we call it extra prosperity? I am talking in figures. It may be inflation. I am not concerned what you call it. I know we have some prosperity and I know we have too much poverty.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Heart! Heart!

MR. HOLLETT: And I think that cannot be avoided to some extent in any civilization. Now then, how is that being made up. How did the Honourable Minister of Finance actually make up the difference, Sir, of $19,000,000, the difference between Mr. Thompson’s estimates and his for this year:

Social Security Taxation $6,700,000
Increase in Motor Vehicle Registration $650,000.
Increase in gasoline taxation $1,370,000. Then there are smaller receipts, Sir, that account for nearly $10,000,00, which makes up the amount of $19,000,000 including an amount of $500,000 on a tax called Cancer Control. So you will see, Sir, having taken everything into consideration, Mr. Thompson did not visualize that this Government would have to impose a three per cent taxation. He did not realize we would have to put on a cancer tax. He did not realize we would make such a high profit out of liquor. More than that he did not think the taxes, if I may put it that way, on gasoline and motor registration would be so high.
MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, on a question of privilege—I wonder if we can have a recess now—It is half past four o'clock.

House recessed for ten minutes.

MR. SPEAKER: Order

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, when we recessed I was referring to the unreality of the forecast made by Mr. Thompson, the expert. Incidentally, Mr. Thompson is the expert who I believe presently will be employed to assist our own committee now investigating the situation further for an increase upward of our Terms of Union. I am pointing out the unreality of his guess of what we would have in this Year of Our Lord 1954-55 by way of estimates. I point out that he was nearly $19,000,000 out. But, of course, Mr. Thompson was not in a position to see that this Government would tax the people of this Province to the extent of nearly seven million dollars in three per cent sales tax, and there were other things of course which his power of vision could not foretell. As far as I can see, if we had Mr. Thompson this year as Finance Minister our people would be taxed less than they are at the present time, by eight or ten million dollars. That may be a little bit high so I will put that down to seven million dollars, which I think would be more realistic. When we consider, Sir, the difference between the estimates made by Mr. Thompson and the estimates made by the present Minister of Finance we are apt to ask ourselves why the difference? What is all the trouble? As I have gone more into it, Sir, I have come to the conclusion the answer is in the extravagance and waste and ill-expenditures of the present administration. I could point out thousands and thousands of cases where I, at any rate, deem it to be an actual waste of expenditure. Then again, there does not seem to be any attempt made by the present Government to keep within bounds the administration which is set up to rule the destinies of our country. I mean it when I say we have the most extravagant Province in all Canada and I base it on an examination of one item alone, for instance, civil service salaries. Now we know we have an adequate civil service, and know they have to be paid an adequate wage. In Newfoundland next year we will pay out in civil service salaries $9,235,000. We have a population of 380,000 people. Nova Scotia, with a population of over 700,000, will pay out $6,500,000 in civil service salaries. In other words we in Newfoundland pay out in civil service salaries some two and a half million dollars more than they do in Nova Scotia.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Will my honourable friend allow me? On that point surely he is leaving out in the case of Nova Scotia what the municipalities pay in civil service salaries. These are paid in Newfoundland by the Provincial Government. To get the comparison it would be necessary to add the two together in Nova Scotia, in order to compare with Newfoundland.

MR. HOLLETT: No, I am not leaving out a thing, as far as I know.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Has the honourable gentleman quoted the figure?

MR. HOLLETT: We have municipalities in this country to whom we are paying out large sums of money.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Not for schools and hospitals. They are included there but they are not in their estimates of salaries. Here the Department of Education is included.

MR. HOLLETT: No teachers?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, not the teachers.

MR. HOLLETT: Teachers you are talking about.

MR. SMALLWOOD: No the Department of Education, the salaries of teachers.

MR. HOLLETT: I make a statement here now we pay out $9,235,000 and Nova Scotia $6½ millions.

MR. SMALLWOOD: We pay out less than Nova Scotia. The honourable gentleman means the Government of Nova Scotia and not the Province of Nova Scotia—because in Nova Scotia he has to include—

MR. HOLLETT: I am talking about both governments.

MR. SMALLWOOD: In that case the comparison is unrealistic, the comparison is simply ridiculous. To get a comparison he has to include the provincial and municipal salaries of each province.

MR. HOLLETT: I am not including the municipalities of either.

MR. SMALLWOOD: In that case the comparison is just silly.

MR. HOLLETT: Nonsense—I always notice, Mr. Speaker, when the Premier gets up against a hard point, he gets up and endeavours to contradict. If he wants to bring in the facts, all right, let him bring them in.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is just trading on people's ignorance.

MR. HOLLETT: All right! Does the Honourable the Premier know what the revenue of Nova Scotia is this year—I am talking about the Provincial Government, and that is what I am dealing in, Provincial Government—

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is where the honourable gentleman is going wrong. To have a comparable position when you compare governments you must compare all expenses in Newfoundland with government and municipal expenses in Nova Scotia. You have got to include the municipalities of Nova Scotia and Newfoundland because in Nova Scotia the municipalities look after hospitals, look after schools, look after fire brigades. There the municipalities do many things which in Newfoundland the Newfoundland Government do and not the municipalities.

MR. HOLLETT: I want to point out I have included in Nova Scotia the expenditures made by hospitals etc. I have taken care to have them in both countries.

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, the honourable gentleman has not included the health expenditures of the municipalities of Nova Scotia.

MR. HOLLETT: I am not talking about municipalities.

MR. SMALLWOOD: To make a comparison you have to take them into account.

MR. HOLLETT: You do that when you get a chance—You compare city by city, town by town. Nova Scotia this year, Sir, has a revenue of $50,000,000 they have seven hundred thousand and some odd people, what the odd is I don't know. We are supposed to collect a revenue of $39,000,000 form $80,000, practically half the number of people.
MR. SMALLWOOD: Add the municipalities of Nova Scotia to these figures.

MR. HOLLETT: Let the Premier do it.

MR. SMALLWOOD: But the honourable gentleman does not want to deceive the people of Newfoundland.

MR. HOLLETT: I am not trying to deceive anyone. I am talking about provincial governments. Is that deceiving the people?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I don't know what else it is.

MR. HOLLETT: I would like to know who deceived the people a good many years on the northeast coast including St. Barbe District.

MR. SPEAKER: Order—I must ask the honourable gentleman to leave my district out of the debate. I cannot speak in the debate to defend it. I know it is unintentional. But please leave my district out of debate. Any point made by an honourable member speaking can be repudiated by a succeeding speaker.

Honourable member will proceed with his speech:

MR. HOLLETT: I want to point out also, Mr. Speaker, that the Province of Newfoundland last year had travelling expenses of nearly five hundred thousand dollars. What did Nova Scotia have? Now I know Nova Scotia is somewhat different, and yet I am not sure it is so much different. A short time ago I travelled down through and saw the small villages and towns scattered down the Nova Scotia coast, and I could quite see it is difficult to get to some of them except over a very rough and muddy road. But there is a significant difference. The Province of Nova Scotia spent, or the Provincial Government, spent $46,000,000. Newfoundland is scheduled to spend $53,000,000. It just does not make sense to me, Sir, it does not make sense at all.

Take the Newfoundland Fisheries Development Authority—We pay our Mr. Dustan $25,000 a year. We pay Mr. Young and Mr. Winsor $25,000 and on top of that, Sir, we pay Mr. Planta $15,000. These four men are being paid $90,000 by this small province. Incidentally Sir, while I am on that question of the Deputy Minister of Fisheries, I am distinctly worried about that situation, and the relationship in financial connection between the Deputy Minister of Fisheries and the Newfoundland Hotel plus Crosbie, H. B. G. Lake, H. A. Russell, J. R. Smallwood (I take it that is the Premier) and the Department of Fisheries. I am deeply worried that any deputy minister should become so involved, and I might say, Sir, I am not too happy over the situation relative to Mr. Dustan and Mr. Young both of whom have been closely associated in the past years with firms to whom this Government has loaned many millions of dollars. Now I say that with all due regard to the honesty and integrity of these men. But I say, I am not happy about the situation.

We have twelve Cabinet Ministers. It takes $120,000 to look after them. Nova Scotia has eight.

DR. POTTLE: Cabinet members, Mr. Speaker, not Cabinet Ministers.

MR. HOLLETT: There is $7,000 plus $3,000 to each man, I understand.

MR. SMALLWOOD: They don't get that as Cabinet Ministers.

MR. HOLLETT: They get $7,000 as Cabinet Ministers.
MR. SMALLWOOD: And that is $84,000.

MR. HOLLETT: Plus $3,000.

MR. SMALLWOOD: We don't get that as Cabinet Ministers. Why not add in the salary of the Leader of the Opposition with the Cabinet.

MR. HOLLETT: Make your own comments later—don't lie.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Don't lie?

MR. HOLLETT: I am not lying—don't lie.

MR. SPEAKER: I must remind honourable members about the use of that word. Yes, I will say it. The other day I told the House to have care for the dignity and reputation of this ancient colony and new province. It is futile to say there is no Hansard. The world has ears—I can show honourable members a clipping from a newspaper in Maine, which has a great reputation, which, when I read it, raised my ire to the highest point, and at the same time made me blush because it was founded partly on fact. I am just citing that so that honourable members will make an attempt to control their tempers, shall I say, and not use those unparliamentary words—Please resume the speech.

MR. HOLLETT: I checked on the total of 94 of the highest paid civil servants and Cabinet Ministers and I found, Sir, that the 94 men cost us in salaries $750,110, averaging approximately $8,000 each per year. Altogether, Sir, we have 3,974 civil servants costing $9,235,000, an increase of 600 civil servants since the year 1950.

DR. POTTLE: Yes, Mr. Speaker, while the Honourable Leader of the Opposition is looking for his notes—He has been known in this House to plead for higher salaries for civil servants.

MR. HOLLETT: Has that any bearing? Surely they should be paid properly. But you don't want two people to every job like in some departments, in some administration departments in this Government, and I won't mention any one.

Here is another—We have these three men getting $75,000 and one man getting $15,000—In that connection, Sir, I would like to point out here, and it is worthy of note—From 1909 to 1920, a period of eleven years the total amount of money spent by the Government was 15½ millions, in eleven years. The present Government will spend that this year and more. In addition to the departments which we have now we then had the customs, postal telegraphs and we had the railway and a dozen-and-one and how it was done I don't know. I am just making the comparison.

During that period, Sir, we as a Dominion, if you wish, borrowed eighteen million dollars in the ten or eleven year period, and four million dollars of that was used in the construction of branch railways and the remaining twelve million dollars was for maintenance of the Royal Newfoundland Regiment during World War I. Last year or the year before we borrowed ten million dollars and this year will borrow another twelve million dollars. I recite these things, Sir, because I am concerned about them. I am concerned for several reasons—We know that some time between now and 1957, I believe it is, a Royal Commission will be set up to see what about our financial Terms of Union—Will they be sufficient to allow us to supply the necessary services and carry on the Government and supply the services on a basis with those in other Provinces of Canada having regard to the ability of our people to pay taxation?

We know that at this time we have around this coast certain areas which are sadly neglected, and which the Government have been unable to or at least have not made any improvement insofar as public services are concerned. I realize, Sir, it is not easy for the Government to make additions in public services everywhere and at any time. I realize how difficult it is. But we must face the position that the public services in certain areas of our country are far below those in other provinces such as Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and P.E.I. The Royal Commission will be set up to decide just what the Government of Canada is going to do about it. If they come down here, Sir, in a couple of years time and find that we are paying $25,000 and $30,000 a year salaries to individuals—that we are paying travelling expenses comparable to those in Nova Scotia, that we are flinging out money here and there, borrowing it to dish out to certain industries, I wonder what the reaction will be. I throw that out as a suggestion to the Government. It might be well, within the next couple of years, to sort of cut the garment to the cloth, improve all possible public services and bring our living within our public finances and by our living so be able to show that Royal Commission when they come that we actually and really need an upward measurement of our financial needs.

I pointed out, Sir, some time ago that we are still in the midst of a war economy. In 1939 and 1940 our revenue was of the order of $11,221,242. Then the war broke out and in 1940-41 it jumped to $16,000,000 and in the next year to $28,000,000, in 1943-44 it jumped again to $29,000,000 until in 1945-46 our revenue was $33,000,000. And if we cast our minds backwards, and I had occasion to go through the financial report which was made to the National Convention, and I found there from 1897 to 1946 a period of Sir, this Government spent a total of well over $200,000,000 and by the fiscal year will have spent $253,000,000. In other words they have spent in the five years just past practically half as much as was spent by all the governments of Newfoundland during the fifty-year period between 1897 and 1946. We have to remember, too, Sir, that during that period they too established new industries, they too advanced or guaranteed loans, they built a railway and they did all sorts of things, loaned money to the fisheries and assisted the fishermen, paid bounties on boats and various other things. Of course, they built more roads than this Government is doing, but did not spend as much money.

In spite of all that, Sir, we have many thousands of men today looking for work—in spite of all the Government spending and all the prosperity which the Honourable the Premier talks about. I would suggest, Sir, that it might be advisable for the Government, and it might be advisable for the Honourable Minister of Finance to cut out the boasting about past achievements during the five years just gone—don't let us boast too much—I can assure the honourable gentleman that they will not be boasting when that Royal Commission comes down here to make its inquiry as to our financial needs—it won't be any good to boast then of our achievements unless we have achieved more than we have in the past five years.
I turn now to economic development, on the capital side. I was going to quote from that, but I don't think it is necessary. I wished to refer to the $3,300,000, and already I find $1,885,000 of it being allocated—a good bit of that has already been spent—But there are a couple of them to which I wish to refer now, in an agreement which was signed by the Minister of Economic Development, and the one I wish to refer to is the one in which I shall read section 2 (1) The Government shall lease the factory to the operator for a period of fifteen years from the day the factory is in readiness for operation at an annual rent of—(and so on down to the end of Clause 2 hereof). Then—The net profit shall be computed by deducting from the gross revenue a payment to the Government equal to the full normal depreciation on the building, plant and equipment allowed by the Taxation Division of the Department of National Revenue.

Now I know that has not been done—"Payment to the Government equal to the full normal depreciation on the building"—If we take the cost of the building and the value of the building at a mere $3,000,000 or $2,000,000 what would the depreciation be over a period of years? I should take it it would be one-fifth or one-sixth on that set aside for depreciation. Nothing of that nature has been done. Then again in sub-clause (3) of Section 4: The Government nor its assignee shall not be liable for any operating loss incurred in any year in the operation of the factory during the continuance of the lease referred to in Clause 2 of this agreement. Now who is going to be liable? I wonder who is going to be liable for any operating losses. Certainly there has been no operating profit since the factory started. Why could we not have been enlightened on the exact financial relationships between the Government and Newfoundland Hardwoods and Mr. Dawe? Was Mr. Dawe entitled to a ten per cent fee on labour in the building of that plant?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No.

MR. HOLLETT: He was not! I have here copies of a bill—Chester Dawe Limited, sold to Newfoundland Hardwoods—To labour, putting in safe, complete particulars $103—ten per cent fee—total $113.30—If he is not entitled to it make him pay it back. How much more I don't know—But I take it, and Mr. Speaker, at the drop of a hat the Honourable the Premier now runs to the RCMP—That brings me back, Sir, to a certain arrest which was made.

MR. SMALLWOOD: In connection with the Bill just read—Was that a service or salary rendered by or made by Mr. Chester Dawe or Chester Dawe Limited to the Government? Or was it made to the Newfoundland Hardwoods, and was it made during the period of the contract, or just an ordinary business transaction made subsequent to the period of construction, Merely to throw that into the debate without clarifying the point could be a very unfair thing to do towards Mr. Dawe.

MR. HOLLETT: I want to do nothing unfair towards Mr. Dawe—This is a copy of a bill in the files of the Finance Department, dated March 1, 1951—Was the building being erected then? That was March 1, 1951—Chester Dawe Limited—Sold to: Newfoundland Hardwoods—To labour putting in safe and completing partition $103.
MR. SMALLWOOD: Any bill to Newfoundland Hardwoods is not payable by the Government.

MR. BROWNE: The biggest joker.

MR. SMALLWOOD: We don't owe the Newfoundland Hardwoods anything—we never did.

MR. BROWNE: All the bills are addressed to Newfoundland Hardwoods. You have forgotten all the bills.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The bills for what?

MR. BROWNE: For the construction of the birch plant.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That may be so certainly if—

MR. HOLLETT: I cannot allow an argument to go on between my honourable and learned friend on my right and the Premier—One has spoken and the other has not—Both had an opportunity—I will read the bill again so that the Premier will get it clear—You understand, Mr. Speaker, I am not trying to do any harm to Newfoundland Hardwoods, the Government nor Mr. Dawe—But this is a matter of absolute fact which I am entitled to quote—In March 1951 Chester Dawe Limited sold to Newfoundland Hardwoods, the Government, or Mr. Dawe—But this is a matter of absolute fact which I am entitled to quote—In March 1951 Chester Dawe Limited sold to Newfoundland Hardwoods, the Government, or Mr. Dawe—But this is a matter of absolute fact which I am entitled to quote—In March 1951 Chester Dawe Limited sold to Newfoundland Hardwoods, the Government, or Mr. Dawe—But this is a matter of absolute fact which I am entitled to quote—In March 1951 Chester Dawe Limited sold to Newfoundland Hardwoods, the Government, or Mr. Dawe. To labour putting in safe and completing partition $105—see 10.30—total $113.30. The bills are up there—I take it the RCMP will look into this one too.

I spoke too, Sir, of the price of cement paid, about the same time or exactly the same time the Government paid for cement bought from William Lundrigan, 168,000 bags at $1.30 per bag—I don't know whether the Honourable the Premier was here this morning when I made that statement, but I am repeating it—During the erection of the cement plant, Mr. Lundrigan sold to the Government and charged to the account of the cement plant construction 168,000 bags of cement at $1.30 a bag. I asked that to be explained. What I want to point out now is that, if the Government paid for all that cement from Lundrigan for $1.30 a bag and bought it at the rate of $1.30 a bag, why did they want to go to Chester Dawe and buy cement for construction of the birch plant and pay $1.60 a bag, and they paid this for every bag they had from him. That looks like looking after the Government funds. I am asking this—These are facts—300 bags of cement at $1.60—I could mention other things but the RCMP are to make investigation, and I should not, I suppose say much about it. I don't know the price of hack-saw blades but they cost us $5.52, one dozen hack-saw blades @ $5.52 from Chester Dawe—one dozen (same size) 1" hack-saw blades $6.60. I bought hack-saw blades before myself but have no recollection they were costing even $5.60 a dozen, certainly I never heard of anybody charging $6.60 a dozen for 1-2" hack-saw blades. Yes a lot of things can be mentioned and dragged out, all that sort of thing, there in the closet—lots of them.

Getting back to the RCMP and Benno Schild and the $150,000 ex gratia award to Benno Schild and the $260,595 ex gratia award to the firm of MIAG and the $21,520 for the firm of William J. Lundrigan—in reply to a question the Honourable the Premier yesterday informed me that these were made on account or in respect of increased costs of labour and material in connection with the cement mill, and in connection with the increased cost of labour and material in connection with the gypsum plant, MIAG $260,590, increased costs on labour and material in connection with the cement plant—and Benno Schilde, I repeat, $150,000 ex gratia payment in respect of increased costs of labour and material in connection with the gypsum plant. Did they attach any strings to the payment of that amount to MIAG of $260,590 for the purpose mentioned? That was in the year 1952. No, it was a straight cheque right off, paid in four or five cheques in U.S. and Canadian funds. Why U.S. funds nobody will ever know. But they paid it over. We realize that labour had gone up to the extent that you are charging so we will make an award of $261,590. Then along comes Benno Schilde, that was in 1953—I suppose they probably heard MIAG got something and they made a claim for $150,000. That is all they got. But what did the Premier say? They made the award but there was no condition attached to it I ask myself—Why? There was a condition to Benno Schilde’s $150,000 but no condition to MIAG’s $261,590—but they attached a condition to Benno Schilde and that was that they should invest it within the Province of Newfoundland in a plant which they would erect for the manufacture of sheet metal, to be constructed at Bay Roberts. Then, the Honourable Premier stated, they went ahead and incorporated a company and called it “The Eastern Machinery” or some such company—But the Premier was so busy for several months that time went on, and he forgot all about it—Suddenly it was brought to his attention by somebody and he got on the telephone and began to press them. Then in February 1953 he wrote a stern, stiff letter reminding them of the conditions of the payment of $150,000 and demanding they build the plant or return the money to the Treasury. That letter startled them—To what extent I do not know. That may or may not have startled them, but, as I say, I do not know to what extent. But in reply to a supplementary question the Honourable the Premier informed me they had later turned over the $150,000 to a company which he called the Western Concrete Products, or some words to that effect—Now I have not checked as to whether that company has been incorporated or not. I take it it was, and I am prepared to take the Premier’s answer that he instructed the firm of Benno Schilde through their then manager up there, I believe his name was Hergs—he instructed that man on behalf of Benno Schilde to pass over $150,000 to this company. Now, Mr. Speaker, it strikes me as being a very funny business—Here you have MIAG claiming $261,590 on account of increased cost of labour and material and getting it without any strings tied.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Does my honourable friend realize that the plant, the five million dollar plant which was built has some connection there, that we do not perhaps need to impose conditions in the one case whereas we did in the other.

MR. HOLLETT: Tell us the conditions?
MR. SMALLWOOD: My honourable friend knows that I cannot—Knows it as well as I do.

MR. HOLLETT: I don't know.

MR. SMALLWOOD: All right, resume the argument.

MR. HOLLETT: He is in a better position, if MIAG got the $261,590 without any conditions whatsoever and Benno Schilde got $150,000 with conditions—We know that was for additional costs of labour and so on—But you say, you have to invest it in something else in this country here—What kind of fools are Benno Schilde if they did that sort of thing? Does a man when he accepts payment for a bill give a guarantee he will invest the money where somebody else directs? That is what the Premier tells us. I think it is—the most ridiculous statement I ever heard in this House. With regard to that payment of $150,000, Sir, who recommended the payment of that amount and who recommended the payment of $261,590? If I add these two amounts I get $411,000. It seems to me I have seen figures very similar to that in other matters—I don't want the Honourable the Premier nor anybody on the opposite side of the House to think that we of the Opposition don't know exactly on what grounds we are standing. I don't want, Sir, the Government to think that we know nothing about transactions which went on in connection with many of these new industries. We would not have been doing our duty to the people of Newfoundland, to the people we represent as well as the members on the opposite side, unless we had taken pains to find out everything possible even though the Government would not give us the facts we needed. We went ahead, Sir, and we found out facts, a lot of facts.

A year ago I told about a fishery plant on the Mainland, a year ago, and the last occasion I went on the air and told about a fishery plant—Does the Honourable the Premier or his Government think we pulled that one out of the air? Did they not think we had sense enough to go to places where we could get information—and mind you the information was given to us on the Mainland of Canada and in the United States of America. Yet the Premier will say "I am the man, the man that did this and did that and something else." The authorities, Sir, on the Mainland of Canada and the authorities in the United States of America are not asleep—they are not asleep—and if any member on the opposite side, or at least, if the Government wants some more information I will be able to give it to them at any time they ask for it.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I ask for it now.

MR. HOLLETT: This is not the proper place.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Whenever the honourable gentleman thinks it proper I will ask, and be glad to have it too, as will the RCMP and the Attorney General's office and the Courts—any information—It is the patriotic duty of honourable members of the Opposition who have any knowledge of a criminal nature. We will be glad enough to prosecute any criminal high or low.

MR. HOLLETT: Now I believe that—anytime, does the Honourable the Premier mean to tell me that nothing was known by the Government about some of the transactions taking place when I knew it?

MR. SMALLWOOD: What transactions? How can I answer that?
MR. HOLLETT: Does he not think if they knew on the Mainland of Canada and in the United States—

MR. SMALLWOOD: Knew what? What transactions?

MR. HOLLETT: I am not under cross-examination—I am asking; does he not think that they knew something about it?

MR. SMALLWOOD: About what?

MR. HOLLETT: Does he ask me to believe the Government knew nothing about it?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Is not the honourable gentleman willing to leave that to the Supreme Court.

MR. HOLLETT: Was there anything mysterious?—We told about the fishery plant—was there anything mysterious about that?

MR. SPEAKER: I must interfere—The turn of this debate is becoming unparliamentary. It does seem to me to contain insinuations and innuendo, getting on very thin ice. I think the honourable member might proceed—

MR. HOLLETT: Why Mr. Speaker, what I started to do was to urge the Honourable the Premier to call in the RCMP. When anything turns up which would in any way tend, shall I say, to cast a cloud—Call in the RCMP!—What are the RCMP coming to?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Have I done right or wrong—is it wrong for me to call them in?

MR. HOLLETT: Everything the Honourable the Premier does must be right.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Have I done wrong in calling them in?

MR. HOLLETT: What I say is this, Mr. Speaker, if any man deprived Benno Schilde of anything and did it fraudulently or otherwise of $150,000, Mr. Speaker, Benno Schilde were the ones to make a complaint and not the Premier. Did he do right? That is not for me to decide. I am saying what I am saying. If I am robbed of $150,000 I am the one—

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Speaker, I must rise to a point of order—I think this is a subject which should not be discussed. I am the last man in the world to limit debate—I don't think it is fair either to the accused nor the accuser.

MR. SPEAKER: I have already made that point of order and must uphold that point of order.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, I have always been impressed with the law, and I am not in any way questioning your ruling that in the people's House matters touching the welfare of the people could always freely be expressed.

MR. SPEAKER: The honourable member is quite wrong and is thereby twisting the ruling of the Chair, with this piece of jargon—It is the people's House, yes, but the people are bound by the people's rules and this is the people's law. The gentleman in question, Dr. Valdmanis, is one of the people whether we like him or not—He is one of the people.

MR. HOLLETT: I am not saying anything against Dr. Valdmanis.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Heaven forbid!

MR. SPEAKER: The debate is to contain no insinuations nor innuendo.
and matters subjudice are not matters which are subject to debate in this House—That is the law of the people and must be upheld.

MR. HOLLETT: Well, Sir, I can pick up a paper anywhere and find these things discussed. Only I am not going to discuss them myself—I refer you, Sir—

MR. SPEAKER: I have not the slightest interest in any newspaper. And I must warn the honourable member there. The honourable member may continue but not on the subject mentioned in the House nor newspaper comment on the same.

MR. HOLLETT: Well, Mr. Speaker, it amounts to this—a paper on the Canadian Mainland can say the thing much more so, if I may put it that way, than I have dared to say here. And that is no later than May 11, 1954. Yet, I, a member of the House and a representative of the people, am not to do so.

MR. SPEAKER: The honourable member is forbidden to say so or to do so by the people.

MR. HOLLETT: I made the point, Sir, that if any person is charged with an offence the right and proper person to make the complaint is the one who is injured in his person or in his goods. If I did an injury to any firm or any new industry or if I committed an indescretion would it be the duty of the Premier to make the complaints?

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Speaker, I rise to a point of order—The honourable member is simply ignoring Your Honour’s ruling in suggesting that in this case the people prosecuting have no right—trying to indicate what should have been done and should not have been done—It is improper, and I object.

MR. SPEAKER: I again uphold the ruling—The insinuation is incorrect—That line ought not to be proceeded with.

MR. CURTIS: Trying to kill time—if you want an adjournment call it six o’clock.

MR. HOLLETT: I thought so—Someone wants to get out around five-thirty—Well, Mr. Speaker, may I move the adjournment.

MR. SPEAKER: I must warn the honourable member, his speech must be continuous. We cannot stop and go into other business and then have the honourable member speak again—If he is not finished and the House calls it six o’clock he may resume at the next sitting hour.

Is that the wish of the House?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, may I move that the remaining Orders of the Day do stand deferred and that the House at its rising do adjourn until tomorrow, Monday, at 3:00 of the clock because we have a Cabinet meeting Monday morning. I hope that we can refrain from all further Cabinet meetings next week so that we can meet in the mornings as well as in the afternoons and at night.

On motion the House adjourned until tomorrow Monday, June 14th, at 3:00 of the clock.

ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, I directed a question to the Honourable Minister of Finance. I wonder when I may expect an answer?

HON. G. J. POWER (Minister of Finance): It will be ready tomorrow.

HON. J. R. SMALLWOOD (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, on Saturday night the honourable and learned member for St. John’s West delivered a talk on the radio, and in that talk he made the statement that I had denied signing any bills from J. C. Pratt and Company to Chester Dawe Limited or to Newfoundland Hardboards Limited. I made no such denial whatsoever. I did not even mention a denial. I said nothing—I did not deny it. The honourable gentleman, I think, ought to make a retraction and proper amendment.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, I would not mention it at all if the Premier had not actually stated that he had made a mistake himself when he said, that last night—

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is, the following day.

MR. BROWNE: Referring then to that incident the following day the Premier said that last night I had denied that he has initialled—

MR. SMALLWOOD: I did not say I had denied—I said I would have denied.

MR. BROWNE: If that is what the Premier is referring to, I am sorry. I understood him to say he denied signing these documents. Then he said; “I had forgotten all about it, but now that it has been brought to my attention that the Auditor General brought me a great number of documents.” (and he showed how big the pile was) “I signed them but later forgot them.”

MR. SMALLWOOD: If the honourable gentleman said on Saturday night that I had, on the night of his speech, denied signing them because on the following day I said that I had denied them—He is then making a statement on a broadcast speech on no better evidence than he has understanding of what I said the next day of what I had said the previous night. Now, on no occasion, neither on the occasion when the honourable gentleman spoke nor on the following day when I referred to his speech—on neither occasion did I deny having signed the invoices in question. But the honourable and learned gentleman in his speech on the radio made the categorical statement that when he made his speech here that night I had denied signing the invoices. Now he tells us his reason for that: He understood I had said on the following day that I denied it. Why then did the honourable gentleman on the night of his broadcast say that I had denied it on the night of his speech?

MR. BROWNE: I did not say that.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is precisely what he said. He spoke, made the charge, whereupon I, not the following day but there and then, denied having signed the invoices. When the fact of the matter is it was the following day—I did not deny but stated I would have denied it except that this morning the Auditor General reported to me. He brought me several hundred I had signed. He brought in two hundred and fourteen invoices in a large pile and while the Auditor General personally waited in my office I signed and then he took them off. I had not seen them before and not since.

The point is that the honourable gentleman on Saturday night in a radio speech stated, told the radio audience, he had made the speech and I interrupted to deny I had signed the invoices. That is what the honourable gentleman said and the speech record and script would be at the radio station—

MR. BROWNE: I have a script.

MR. SMALLWOOD: So has the radio station—by law. The honourable gentleman now tells us this afternoon the reason he did that was that on the following day I denied it; which in fact I did not do. And I hold, although it happened outside the House it happened by way of comment on what happened inside. I think the honourable gentleman should take the most public manner possible to withdraw the statement—it is a most damaging statement.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, I don’t remember the Premier having stated the night that I was speaking here that he did not sign these documents. I remember the Premier stating the next day—my memory may be at fault—but I remember the Premier stating the next day that he said that he had not remembered signing these statements. I remember the Premier stating that he could not remember signing those papers. That is the situation as far as I know. I had no intention of misrepresenting the Premier in this manner. I think that what he did was sign two hundred and fourteen documents without ever having seen them before, which is serious enough.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The honourable gentleman has not yet told the House why he stated in his broadcast Saturday night that I, on the occasion of his making a speech, on that occasion and not the following day, but on the occasion of his making a speech here, I had denied it, but that on the following day had admitted. Then on the occasion of his making his speech in this House I had denied signing the invoices but on the following day had admitted it. That is the statement made in his speech on Saturday night on the radio—Now that is the speech on which he ought to give me some redress, or perhaps he wants me to sue him for libel, for it is libel. Now if the honourable gentleman values his good name he will make it perfectly clear that, if he had not lied in that speech, then he was completely wrong and mistaken. He ought to say that.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, if the Honourable the Premier values his good name let him have an investigation into what is going on in the birch plant.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The first inquiry will be an enquiry into the honourable gentleman opposite and now on his feet, and some inquiry.

MR. BROWNE: You have to be inquired into first. You are the one denied—
MR. SPEAKER: Order—

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, I suggest we get the Hansard of what the Premier said on the night I spoke.

MR. SMALLWOOD: And the script of what the honourable gentleman said in the speech of which I now complain. Because, it was a lying speech. I am now convinced the honourable gentleman lied deliberately.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, I must ask the Premier to take back these words—He accused me of lying deliberately. I put it to you, Sir, it is completely out of order.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I repeat—The honourable gentleman lied deliberately in his speech Saturday night. Now I am convinced he lied deliberately.

MR. SPEAKER: I have pointed out to honourable members before—if a point of order is taken and honourable members insist on arguing to and fro in the House it makes it not only difficult for the Chair to rule on it but almost impossible. Now I do not see that this can be settled by losing tempers and argument to and fro. Certainly complaints made on speeches made outside the House are not privileged in the same way as speeches made inside the House. The words accusing the honourable member of lying in that speech ought not to have been used. It remains to be proved. Conceivably, it is within the bounds of human frailty, the honourable member stated something not true. It does not follow therefore it is lying.

MR. BROWNE: The Honourable the Premier accused me of lying deliberately—That is unparliamentary, and I feel he must withdraw it. A person may make a mistake—I had no intention—

MR. SMALLWOOD: Before withdrawing I would move to have the script of Saturday night. On two previous occasions I have dropped, backed down from charges of lying. I am now going ahead to prove—I will now move that his remarks on the night in question in this House be tabled, which will show if I made any such admission that I had not signed the invoices; that my remarks on the following day be produced, and the script of his speech on the radio on Saturday night be produced, and then see who is deliberately lying—Then I will apologize, if I am wrong.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, is this the proper procedure when an honourable member complains of something that has happened outside the House?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Commenting on what has happened inside this House, Mr. Speaker.

MR. SPEAKER: The whole problem is very difficult and very thorny. I might suggest the only way to solve it is to refer the matter to a Committee on Privileges. I believe the Committee will see Hansard, the exact words used by both honourable members and the script from the honourable member's speech on the radio can be given the Committee. I don't think it is necessary to use terms such as "lying" in arguing the matter here. The honourable member will correct his statement if it is incorrect, certainly.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes—I do move, Mr. Speaker, the appointment of this Select Committee which Your Honour suggested.

MR. BROWNE: Put that motion—But I require the Premier to withdraw his accusation that I lied deliberately,
MR. SMALLWOOD: I don’t withdraw the statement that the honourable member lied and lied deliberately in his speech on the radio on Saturday night.

MR. SPEAKER: The honourable member makes it impossible for the Chair to rule. Now I am being asked to use the Authority of the Chair to ask an honourable member to withdraw a complaint made by a speech made outside the House. All I can say is that the word “lying”, the statement “The honourable member lied deliberately” ought not to have been made in the House on this occasion, and I do not think the Honourable the Premier should have used the words.

MR. SMALLWOOD: In deference to Your Honour I withdraw the remark, but I do insist on a Select Committee to find out if there has been any lying.

MR. BROWNE: Deliberate?

MR. SPEAKER: There is a Committee of Privileges already in existence from some weeks ago. Motion is that this question might be called a question of privileges and is now referred to that Committee.

Motion carried.

MR. SPEAKER: The Committee, of course, will have the right to see Hansard and the honourable mem­ ber’s script.

MR. BROWNE: Now, Mr. Speaker, who is in charge—not have it postponed like the so-called Committee set up to investigate some other charge —Who is the convener? I would like to know because I would like to have it convened as soon as possible.

HON. L. R. CURTIS (Attorney General): Mr. Speaker, I resent that from my honourable friend. I am the convener of this Committee. I did not convene it because the honourable and learned member for St. John’s East was not in town and he is a member of the Committee. If I mentioned I was going to call a Committee and leave out the Opposition, the members of the Opposition would say something else—if we met without it.

MR. BROWNE: Well he is absent today and may be tomorrow. But we can have someone else on it.

MR. CURTIS: We asked for the last election so there would be enough to make an Opposition. Now that they got them they don’t even turn up.

MR. SPEAKER: The Committee,
due to the delicacy of the matter, will of course meet at the earliest possible moment—Is that satisfactory to both parties?

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker,
before the Orders of the Day are called I would like to address a question to the Honourable Minister of Mines and Resources. I have heard a report that the sheep imported from Scotland have been sold. Would the Minister tell us whether there is anything in that report or not?

HON. DR. F. W. ROWE (Minister of Mines and Resources): Is it in order, Mr. Speaker?

MR. SPEAKER: If the Honourable Minister so wishes.

DR. ROWE: Under ordinary circumstances I would naturally want notice of question. But I say, speaking from memory, I know we have from time to time during the past two years sold sheep here and there of that breed to farmers for breeding purposes etc, but to my knowledge the flock, as such, has not been sold. But I would like to check on that—if the honourable gentleman would remind me in case I don’t reply. I know it was not sold a week ago. As a matter of fact a week ago I had one of our officers go down to make a report to us on it and he did come back with a report, which is now being written and might well be on my desk. The flock was not sold a week ago. I regret for obvious reasons I have not had time to attend to things on my desk, but I will check on it.

Orders of The Day

Third Readings.

A Bill “An Act Further to Amend the Public Utilities Act”—Read a third time, ordered passed and title be as on the Order Paper.

A Bill “An Act Relating to the St. John’s Memorial Stadium” — On motion read a third time, ordered passed and title be as on the Order Paper.

A Bill “An Act Respecting the Inspecting of Fish”—On motion read a third time, ordered passed and title be as on the Order Paper.

A Bill “An Act Respecting the Floral Emblem of Newfoundland” — On motion read a third time, ordered passed and title be as on the Order Paper.

A Bill “An Act to Amend the Dog Act”—On motion read a third time, ordered passed and title be as on the Order Paper.

A Bill “An Act to Approve and Give Statutory Effect to An Agreement Between the Government and New Jersey Zinc Exploration Company (Canada) Limited”—On motion read a third time, ordered passed and title be as on the Order Paper.

A Bill “An Act to Amend the National Flag Act.”

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Speaker, in moving the third reading of this Bill, just for the sake of the record I would like to make a statement so that it would appear in Hansard just why the Bill was introduced:

“The Union Jack is the flag to be flown by British subjects on land and may be flown in all Her Majesty’s realms. With the shield of the Provincial Coat of Arms it is the Official flag of the Lieutenant Governor of that Province.

2. The Canadian Red Ensign as the National Flag. The result of several Orders-in-Council is that the Canadian Red Ensign may be flown from buildings owned or occupied by the Federal Government within and without Canada, and may be flown at the discretion of the Officer Commanding on buildings occupied by Canadian Forces in Canada.

3. On Confederation we did not cancel our National Flag Act so the Lieutenant Governor’s flag is the Union Jack with the Great Seal in the Centre rather than the Shield of the Coat of Arms.

4. Before 1942 the Newfoundland Act was based on the Dominion and Colonial Regulations which ruled:

(a) that the Governor, or Officer Administering the Government, flies the Union Jack at Government House, and a special flag, namely, the Union Jack with the Arms or Badge of the dependency emblazoned in the centre, etc., when he is embarking in a boat or other vessel.

(b) On the 11th February, 1942, it was brought to the attention of the Home Government that the Union
Flag had become closely associated with the person of the Governor, and that the result had been to create a certain reluctance among private bodies and individuals to display the Union Jack, the apprehension being apparently that in so doing they might be encroaching, or have the appearance of encroaching upon the Government's personal prerogatives. It was decided that it was most important that all such apprehension be dispelled, and that any person who desired to fly the National Flag should be given every encouragement to do so.

There (c) With the concurrence of the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, a recommendation was submitted to His Majesty the King that Governments should be authorized and required to fly on all occasions on land as well as afloat the special ensign as at present used only on board ship, namely, the Union Flag charged with the Arms or Badge of the territory. His Majesty the King was pleased to approve this recommendation and the Governor of Newfoundland (at that time, Sir Humphrey Walwyn) was notified in a despatch dated 11th February, 1942.

(6) Sir Humphrey Walwyn acknowledged the correspondence and agreed that Newfoundland would conform, but he took no steps to amend our National Flag Act accordingly.

I just quote that, Mr. Speaker, so that it will be on the record when this Act goes through.

MR. M. M. HOLLETT: (Leader of the Opposition) I wonder if the Honourable Minister would give that publicity?

MR. CURTIS: I will, Mr. Speaker.

On motion Bill read a third time, ordered passed and title be as on the Order Paper.

"An Act Further to Amend the Authority Guarantee Act, 1952." On motion read a first time, ordered read a second time at a later hour this day.

A Bill "An Act to Amend the Cooperative Societies Act." On motion read a third time, ordered passed and title be as on the Order Paper.

First Readings:

A Bill "An Act Further to Amend the Accident Insurance Companies (Licensing) Act." On motion read a first time, ordered read a second time on tomorrow.

A Bill "An Act Further to Amend the Civil Service Act." On motion read a first time, ordered read a second time on tomorrow.

A Bill "An Act to Amend the House of Assembly Act." On motion read a first time, ordered read a second time on tomorrow.

A Bill "An Act to Amend the Cancer Control Tax Act." On motion read a first time, ordered read a second time on tomorrow.

A Bill "An Act to Make Provision for the Award of Pensions in Certain Cases." On motion read a first time—

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order—Should not this be brought in as a resolution?

MR. CURTIS: It is not an Act, Mr. Speaker, that votes any money, just makes general provisions.

Read a first time, ordered read a second time on tomorrow.

Third Reading of a Bill "An Act Respecting the Franchise of Electors and the Election of Members to the House of Assembly."

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, before this Bill is read a third time I would like to make a few observations. This section to which I refer, Section 31 sub-section (4) you will remember is the one that provides that the Lieutenant Governor-in-council made by proclamation referred to in sub-section (1) or by a further Proclamation, may at any time thereafter and before polling day, order that an election be deferred in any of the electoral districts of St. Barbe, White Bay and Labrador and in any of the electoral districts into which the electoral district of Labrador as at present constituted may be divided, but when an election is deferred under this sub-section is shall be held on a date not later than twelve months from the date on which the election was deferred and where an election in an electoral district is deferred after a writ of election has been issued the writ may be withdrawn.

The point I wish to make, Mr. Speaker, is that during the consideration of second reading and in Committee of the Whole on this Bill it was pointed out on behalf of the Government that the reason for this provision was because—

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, to a point of order—Is it in order to go over the second reading debate again? What may lawfully be done on third reading? Can we debate the Committee of the Whole stage again and the second reading again, revive the arguments and answer them — is that permitted?

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, may I speak to that point of order—I intend to move that this Bill be sent back to Committee with instructions to amend or at least give consideration to amending this particular section. I was only making an introductory statement. I did not intend to debate it. I was going to explain—The Electoral Officer is reported to have said, and I think it was generally stated that there are only two months in the year—

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, to a point of order—is the honourable gentleman permitted to debate the Bill?

MR. SPEAKER: At this stage, no.

MR. BROWNE: I was only saying because where conditions were the reasons given for the postponement — I beg leave to move this Bill be not now read a third time but be sent back to a Committee of the Whole House with instructions that Section 31 (4) be amended to provide elections in any of the said districts be deferred except on a certificate of the Electoral Officer that due to the weather conditions it is impossible to hold such election in the district concerned. I make that motion, Mr. Speaker, and I feel sure I should be entitled to say something on behalf of it. I hope it will be accepted by the Government. I feel is is a reasonable request to have made.

MR. SPEAKER: The amendment is moved by the honourable and learned member for St. John's West, seconded by the Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, if I may, I would like to say just a few words on that.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, is the motion debatable?
MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, I am seconding the amendment.

MR. SPEAKER: I do not understand that a speech is to be made at this stage because the matter was discussed in second reading and in Committee of the Whole and a report has been received by the House. So that the motion is that this Bill be now read a third time, to which the honourable member offered an amendment—"The Bill will not now—" The motion is that the word "Not" be inserted between the words "will" and "now." Motion is now put. Those voting "aye" will be voting for the amendment.

MR. SPEAKER: In my opinion the "nays" have it.

Bill now read a third time, ordered passed and title be as on the Order Paper.

Committee of the Whole:

A Bill "An Act to Establish the Pharmaceutical Association":

Mr. Courage, Chairman of Committees in the Chair:

MR. CHAIRMAN: This is quite a long Bill—I don't think it is very controversial—Would the Committee care to have it called by numbers or have the clauses read?

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the Attorney General if he is in charge of the Bill or is the Minister of Health? And, does this repeal another Act?

HON. P. S. FORSEY (Minister of Health): I am, Mr. Chairman—It does repeal another Act, an Act passed forty years ago. There are only two new additions to the Act, that is, prescribing the course of training and giving the members of the Association some disciplinary powers over the membership.

On motion agreed to call the numbers of the sections slowly:

Clause 1 carried.

Clause 2:

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I have here before me an Act called "An Act Respecting the Pharmaceutical Society and the Sale of Drugs". I don't know if that has anything to do with this. If it has it seems to be somewhat different from the Bill which we are now considering. I don't see a similar section to the one we are now on in this Act. In that Act there are only 19 sections whereas in this particular Bill there are 47. There must be some difference between the two. Perhaps the Minister might care to make a statement giving us what he considers to be the chief difference?

MR. FORSEY: Mr. Chairman, I already explained that in second reading. There may be more clauses to this particular Bill, but they are certainly not of a controversial nature. There are only two differences in principle, that is, the Society has power to prescribe courses of training and a period of training in keeping with modern educational trends, and also that it has disciplinary powers over its membership. These are the only differences in principle between this Bill and the one it supplants.

Clause 2 carried.

Clauses 3 through 6 carried.

Clause 7:

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, could the Minister tell us how many members constituted the council previously?

MR. FORSEY: I am not sure, Mr. Speaker, I think it was the same number.

MR. BROWNE: It does not say how many members constitute the Board.

MR. FORSEY: Mr. Chairman, I am pretty certain it is twelve.

Clauses 7 through 17 carried.

Clause 18:

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I wonder if the Minister has any idea about the disciplinary measures to which pharmaceutical apprentices are likely to be subject?

MR. FORSEY: Under the present Act it is possible for a pharmacist to dispense dope in any drug store in St. John's and the organization has no power under the old Act to revoke his license if he does not conform to the ethics of the profession. The Association now has power to revoke his license under the old Act.

MR. BROWNE: Apprentices are going to get licenses under this Act—or do they get licenses under the old Act?

MR. FORSEY: They will get licenses on completion of their training.

MR. BROWNE: Become druggists then, and they can dispense drugs. Do I understand the Minister to mean they cannot dispense drugs as apprentices?

MR. FORSEY: They dispense drugs in conformity with their length of training, under the supervision of other druggists— But the Association has not power now to suspend or revoke the license of any druggist who might, as I say, be dispensing dope.

MR. BROWNE: Yes, but this deals with apprentices. I was asking what are the rules in regard to discipline.

MR. FORSEY: They would be rules and by-laws drawn up by the Association.

MR. BROWNE: You have no idea what they are?

MR. FORSEY: No.

Clauses 18 through 25 carried.

Clause 24:

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, that one provides to have the names of persons struck off the registry, but I have not seen any offense so far. I wonder could we let that stand until we go through the offense section and then come back to it?

On motion Clause 24 stand—

Clauses 25 through 28 carried.

Clause 29:

MR. BROWNE: I take it the Minister did not examine this at all but consulted with some medical authority about it?

MR. FORSEY: Yes, Mr. Chairman, the medical health officers of the Department of Health.

MR. BROWNE: May I ask one question, a drug that is in popular use now in this country and which is permissible in certain forms, known as "222," I believe it consists of an empirium compound with a grain of codein—is that one of the things exempt from this, do you know?

MR. FORSEY: No, Mr. Chairman.

Clauses 29 through 35 carried.
Clause 36:

MR. BROWNE: Mr Chairman, is that something new, or was that in before?

MR. FORSEY: I think that seems to be a new provision.

MR. BROWNE: Is there some reason why that is introduced here—I know under the Alcoholic Liquors Law it is usually the duty of the Crown to show the accused has committed an offense—But under this particular section the duty is on him to show he is authorized—the burden is on the defendant to prove he is entitled to operate establishments. Now it seems to me that is not a difficult duty for the Crown to fulfill, unless there was some reason for varying the formal procedure—I believe that should be left out.

MR. CURTIS: I don’t think there is any harm in having the ounce of proof—after all if a man is selling drugs and is supposed to have a license I suppose he should have it on exhibition really in the shop. Surely if it is a matter of producing it, it is easier for him to produce it than any prosecution to find out.

MR. BROWNE: That ought to apply to any innocent person—It is easier for him to prove his innocence than to prove him guilty therefore it is all right to make prosecutions. It seems to me if a person is improperly prosecuted—

MR. SMALLWOOD: Prosecuted or innocent persons sometimes charged.

MR. BROWNE: Yes.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, exactly.

MR. CURTIS: Suppose in Twillingate there is a man—It is easier if a question should come up as to whether a man has a right to sell drugs or not to put it on him and ask; “Where is your license?” That is easier than sending to St. John’s to prove it. I don’t know how you would prove it in St. John’s anyway—It is much more difficult.

Clauses 37 through 40 carried.

MR. BROWNE: This provision on here exempts wholesale druggists and dealers in drugs from the provisions of the Act—Does that mean they can sell them to any person in business, or does it mean that they must only sell them to drug stores?

MR. FORSEY: No, Mr. Chairman, they can sell them to any person in business—that is certain types of businesses. But all these drugs dispensed by wholesalers come under the supervision of the Federal Department of Health, and they have inspectors.

Clauses 41 carried.

Clause 42:

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, I don’t know enough about it, but I have known doctors in the past who did not know too much about drugs. They probably have to know all about drugs now.

MR. FORSEY: It amounts to medical doctors in Newfoundland who have no drugstore in the community and have to dispense drugs.

Clauses 42 through 46 carried.

Schedule carried.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Clause 24 was allowed to stand.

MR. BROWNE: I think it is all right now, Mr. Chairman.

Clause 24 carried.
On motion the Committee rose and reported having passed the Bill without amendment—Report received, on motion ordered read a third time on tomorrow.

Second Reading of Bill "An Act to Amend the Highway Traffic Act."

HON. E. S. SPENCER (Minister of Public Works): In connection with this Bill "An Act to Amend the Highway Traffic Act," on the occasion when we raised this topic, request was made for a little additional time to review it, which was readily given. Now I take it we are ready to go into second reading?

MR. SPEAKER: The debate was adjourned by the honourable and learned member for St. John's West.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, when this was before the House previously the Minister was good enough to give us an explanation and afterwards showed me the first draft and analysis of the various provisions in the Bill. I notice one to which he made no reference, and I am wondering if he overlooked it. That is in the second section and it seems to me it involves an important principle. Therefore, with permission of the House I should like to read a section of it—It is an amendment to Section 36 of the Highway Traffic Act which says: "When a license has been delivered to the court under sub-section (1) and the court has not disqualified the licensee from holding or obtaining a driver's license the court shall, where the holder of the license has been convicted of any offense under Section 284, 285 or 377 of the Criminal Code involving the use of a motor vehicle, thereupon transmit to the Minister a report setting out the nature of the conviction and the circumstances of the offense."

There are four or five offences under the Criminal Code—"Thereupon the court must transmit to the Minister a report setting out the nature of the conviction. It may be stated in connection with a breach of Section 285, section (4), I believe, where a person convicted of driving, while impaired the magistrate does not cancel his license but the Minister does. The magistrate has no right, my honourable and learned friend says, but the Minister does sometime subsequently. The court must transmit to the Minister—

Now the point is that upon every conviction the owner must submit his license to the court to have the conviction enforced. But on these three or four offences under the Criminal Code the courts must transmit a report of the whole circumstances and order of conviction to the Minister. Now when that has been delivered to the court and the court disqualifies a license, Sir, or has not disqualified the licensee from holding or obtaining a driver's license—and where a license has been suspended under Section 91 the Minister shall publish, or cause to be published, in the Newfoundland Gazette and in at least one newspaper circulated in the area in which the licensee resides, the name of the license disqualified or whose license has been suspended and all other particulars as to the disqualification or suspension that he deems fit.

Now it seems to me that involves an important principle in that it is a departure from the regular practice. A person may be convicted of all the other offences under the Criminal Code but I don't think there is any provision for his name to be published in the Newfoundland Gazette but when convicted of any of these his name must be published in the Newfoundland Gazette and in at least one newspaper circulated in the area in which the licensee resides. Therefore, in addition to a person suffering the normal penalties for his offense, for which he can be fined or sent to goal and lose his license for a certain time, he must have his name published and all the other things as to this disqualification that the Minister deems fit. That may result in the Minister saying John Jones committed robbery—His license has been suspended for six, twelve months or two years for having stolen a car for having committed a breach of so and so section of the Criminal Code. The question seems to me whether that is is an advisable thing to do. It is a departure from the usual practice for all other offenses. Why should this be picked out? I think in answering that question consideration should be given to this one: What benefit is going to result? What good is it going to do? Is it going to deter others from committing the offense? I think if we look at it from the point of view of any benefit to anybody else, I don't think we can see any benefit in it. But will it deter others? I suppose if it were considered that it would deter others from committing similar offenses then it would be a good thing. But can we say with any certainty this publication of the names of persons committing these offenses in the Newfoundland Gazette will be of any benefit? Certainly as far as the Newfoundland Gazette is concerned I don't believe it would do one bit of good. Apart from lawyers' offices and high officials of the Government, I believe the Minister will agree nobody else looks at the Newfoundland Gazette except perhaps, I suppose, the people interested in bankruptcies and estates may look at it. But outside of a very narrow circle of people nobody looks at the Newfoundland Gazette. We are therefore left with the proposition that his name should be published in a newspaper circulated in the area in which the licensee resides.

Now in what areas are newspapers circulated? We have from the highest authority that there are very few newspapers circulated. So that if John Jones comes from Roddickton or some isolated place the fact that his name appears in the Newfoundland Gazette and in newspapers circulated in his area is not going to do much harm among his friends. But it would mean that for people in large centres at any rate, a man having his name published before the public would get the effect of such a publication. Now, Sir, is that to be a good thing or not to do that? I doubt very much if it will have the effect of preventing any further offenses being committed. I don't believe that the publication of the names of 69 persons convicted of these offenses would have any effect in preventing others.

Now I don't know what the purpose is in regard to Section (1) dealing with licenses suspended nor what effect that would have, nor what benefit that would be. I cannot see. Perhaps the Minister when replying, if he has the answer, may be able to give it.

The other sections of the Bill seem to be perfectly normal—There is only that new principle which is involved here.

MR. HIGGINS: Mr. Speaker, I don't attach quite so much importance to the publication of the names that my honourable colleague does, although I agree to some extent with his question as to the effect it might have. I remember some years ago one of our daily papers used to publish names and it might have had some effect because certain it was that pressure was brought to bear on the paper, by one or two influential citizens who happened to run afoul of the police, to have that amended. But there is one aspect of this thing to which the Minister might be able to add some enlightenment, that is, the provision for publication in the Newfoundland Gazette and at least one newspaper the name of the licensee disqualified or whose license has been suspended, and all other particulars etc. Now amongst the privileges which a man has is, quite frequently when he is convicted he gets a suspension of his permit to buy liquor. The practice has been hitherto that the Board of Liquor Control was notified and he was put on some sort of a list. He cannot go into any establishment known by the Board, and they always notify the various licensed houses. But I must say it seems to me a bit rough to placard that fact in the newspaper. It is bad enough to say—"You have made an ass of yourself—You are not allowed to drive any more." But it seems rather like carrying it to extremes that a man is not even allowed to take a drink. After all a man might have just one or two drinks too many when driving a car and have the magistrate say; You lose your license. But according to this he has to have his name published which says he is to be held up to all other men as a man who goes around drunk half the time. It seems a bit rough. I wonder if the Minister would tell us whether or not it is contemplated if he has a right to buy a drink.

MR. SPENCER: Mr. Speaker, I appreciate very much the interest that both honourable and learned gentlemen of the Opposition have given to this Bill. I will review briefly, if I may, and answer as well as I can the points touched upon, first by the honourable and learned gentleman from St. John's West in connection with Section 2, sub-section (3). The reference there, as the honourable and learned gentleman has very correctly worded it, is merely to now make it mandatory on the courts to supply to the Registration Department or the Motor Vehicle Highway Traffic Section, if one cares to call it that, all convictions registered. The honourable gentleman has pointed out and it has been commented upon by his colleague the honourable and learned gentleman from St. John's East, that the purpose merely is—that the magistrate has not power to cancel licenses as he does not issue them, but does give him the authority and/or power to disqualify a person from driving a vehicle if he has been proven guilty of an offense of driving while under the influence of liquor or impaired driving, as he cares to classify it—the Department of Public Works, under the Highway Traffic Act has made the regulation which covers this point—as soon as they are notified by the court, which as I said before is now mandatory, the court must notify the department and then the department automatically suspends the license of the offender. I don't need to go into any long discussion as to the necessity for the protection of the general public, and that is what this Act is meant to do. I am sure that both my learned friends from the other side know more about that than I do as they have had it from experience. For that reason they know this Act. I do not profess to be able to understand
Now with regard to the latter point raised by the honourable and learned member for St. John's West and again stressed by my honourable and learned friend from St. John's East the matter of publication of names; I regret to say that our experience has been that where licenses have been suspended in accordance with the Act that the driver whose license has been suspended has more or less forced us to take some action to help prevent such a recurrence. Unfortunately people losing licenses have been, not all, I am proud to say, but a very small proportion it is true, continuing and persisting in driving. Now it has been very well explained to this House that we have not sufficient police to take care of all these things, and the many other laws which we need to enforce. But if the public has been informed that I have had my license suspended and I persist under cover of, or by virtue of my prominence in the community, or the brass in my face as the case may be, to drive my car when I have no license to do it John Citizen has a perfect right, to report me. And if my name is before the public that John Citizen will no doubt assist the law in being carried out to proper effect, and thereby possibly save the life of some innocent child and/or person as the case may be. That is the main reason for this particular publication of names.

I would like to refer to one comment the honourable and learned member for St. John's West made—He said it was a little out of the ordinary. That is quite true in this Province. But I am also quite sure that the honourable gentleman knows that the names are being published in certain other provinces of the Dominion, and possibly that is one of the reasons why it is brought in here.

Now with regard to the comments raised by the honourable and learned member for St. John's East as to the disqualification or suspension that he mentioned. I would like to assure the honourable gentleman and the House that there is no intention whatsoever on the part of the Department of Public Works which I happen to represent here now to publish such little details, or such incriminating details, as one would care to call them, as my honourable friend referred to. It would be my personal opinion that the mere publishing of the name is really all that is required so that the public may know I have been an offender and may not go out and drive in secret, perhaps, and escape the eyes of the police. I may not go out and drive a car when my license is actually in suspension.

These, I think, were the only points referred to. As the honourable gentleman has been kind enough to say, the other sections of the Act are very clearly understood and are merely a matter of enforcement such as removal from a right-of-way or highway any obstruction which may be placed there and collecting the cost of having done so from the owner of the vehicle, in cases where they fail to do it. There are a few other little things of that type, which the honourable gentleman was kind enough to say are quite satisfactory.

My explanation then, Mr. Speaker, in connection with that is that it is the only reason for the publishing of names, merely to try and prevent these people who have forestalled the law and have persisted in driving their now consider the facts. Now one may very well ask if we have any prima facie evidence of those facts? In one or two cases it has been reported to us. I can assure the House that is so and that is the main reason for it.

On motion Bill read a second time, ordered referred to a Committee of the Whole House at a later hour this day.

Second Reading of Bill "An Act Further to Amend the Alcoholic Liquors Act."

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, that is a Bill which arises from discussions which took place in the House here some days ago, when the Honourable the Leader of the Opposition raised the question of Sunday opening of clubs that have licenses to sell beers and wines and liquors.

Now the Government have since considered the matter very carefully and as a consequence this present Bill is brought before the House. There are two points in it and two points only. I believe one is that cases of beer may be as low as a dozen bottles but not lower. At the present time they may be as low as two dozen bottles but not lower. Now we have had complaints that two dozen bottles are too many to the case, the case is too big. We are therefore putting the case at a minimum of one dozen bottles. Then those persons who want two dozen bottles can get two cases and ten dozen bottles can get ten cases, but can buy as few as one dozen bottles by buying just one case.

The other point is with regard to the opening on Sundays. I think, Mr. Speaker, that this amendment will meet with fairly general although I won't say unanimous approval but pretty general approval of our Newfoundland people. It may be argued that the Bill ought to be mandatory, outright, and should say nothing should be open on Sunday, (period). The Bill does not do it that way. It says that on Sunday these places, hotels, clubs, military messes, railways or steamships shall not open if they are licensed premises except under and in accordance with the terms and conditions contained in a permit issued by the Board. In other words it is up to the Board to decide whether or not these places shall open on Sunday. My belief is that the Board would probably discriminate, not unfairly, not unjustly, but discriminate to distinguish between different types of premises. There are premises which no doubt, it seems to me, they would permit to open on Sunday and there are premises which no doubt they would not permit to open on Sunday. I think if the House considers the matter carefully, members will in their own minds distinguish here between hotels, clubs, military messes, railways - we can't very well distinguish between railways because there is only one system, the CNR, but they might distinguish between steamships - At all events it is proposed to leave it to the discretion of the Board of Liquor Control.—That is the decision of the Government, and that is what we recommend to the House.

Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of this Bill.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, we partly agree with the principle involved. As far as I myself am concerned I feel the Bill does not go quite far enough. I say that, of course, with all due respects to the man who likes to go to a club and hotel and get a drink whenever he wants it. I might add that I have received some dire threats over the attitude I took some time ago with regard to my future politically. I told these people it did not matter a hang to me, if I agreed with the principle. I do agree with the framers of the Act and I do know the Government has to go by easy stages in making any amendment. I really think that should be an improvement on the whole. A lot of that, of course, will depend on the Board of Liquor Control. The Board of Liquor Control, I believe, will take into consideration the feelings of the Government and of the people and even sometimes of the Opposition. I congratulate the Government on making this change.

MR. HIGGINS: Mr. Speaker, there is just one comment made by the Premier, if I heard him rightly—He said there may be need for the Board to differentiate between hotels and hotels and clubs and clubs, that some may be allowed to open and others may not. Now, Sir, if I understood the Honourable the Premier correctly, that seems to me to state a very unfair position. Surely the law is applicable with equal force to all Her Majesty's Subjects. The fact that one particular club (and I hold no brief for any of them) may cater to a more exclusive element than another need not necessarily mean that the license is not just as valid, and that they have not just as much right to say that if one club in one place can be opened from 2:00 o'clock to 6:00 o'clock why should we not be allowed to be open from 2:00 to 6:00 o'clock. I suggest, Sir, it is a somewhat novel departure that there should be grading in the application of the law. I think that is a point which I, for one, would like to have clarified.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, I think I can see what the honourable gentleman who introduced the Bill has in mind better than my honourable friend who just sat down. There are institutions which call themselves clubs but do not come within the definition of the Alcoholic Liquors Act. A club means a co-operative society or association of persons which is the owner, lessee or occupant of an establishment used solely for objects of social or at least not for pecuniary gain, and precludes a premises occupied for any such purpose. Now we do hear of clubs that are not clubs. I believe that is what is in the mind of the Premier when he said there were clubs and clubs, and the distinction would have to be made by the Board.

There is one omission I noted in regard to the new sub-section (3), but it may be somewhere else in the Act. I have not had a chance to look—but it says the holder of a license granted in respect of hotels, clubs etc.—I wonder if the omission was accidental, to leave out TCA at Gander where there is a bar and where they sell liquor. That does not seem to be covered by either railway or steamship. I would certainly, Mr. Speaker, be against the idea of selling liquor on a commercial basis on Sunday.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, the differentiation I had in mind was that I thought the Board would probably respect the difference between the Airlines Hotel at Gander for example and Archibald's Hotel at Harbour Grace or between the Airlines Hotel at Harmon Field for example and the Newfoundland Hotel. I was not aware TCA had any hotels in Newfoundland nor indeed anywhere else. But I do understand that at Gander the Department of Transport owns a hotel which they have leased, in part at least, to private operators, and that that hotel operates twenty-four hours a day, three hundred and sixty-five days a year, a bar which in fact never closes—The Big Dipper. It sells both retail and wholesale. It is said in the United States citizens are permitted when they return from visits abroad to bring with them up to one gallon of liquor or wine. At this bar in Gander a fairly considerable quantity of liquor is sold. It seems to me that the Board would not hesitate to permit that hotel to operate on Sunday and all through the year for the convenience of the one-half million passengers who fly through Gander annually. Whereas they would undoubtedly close the bar on Sundays at least on Sundays, as well as these other days such as Good Friday and Christmas Day, in any other type of hotel.

Clubs are of many kinds. I am not going to follow the point made by the last speaker, but without following it and without agreeing with him I think I can see some difference in some at least of the clubs that exist in Newfoundland. I would hesitate to say to the communities for example in St. John’s, in Gander, in Grand Falls, in Corner Brook, in Bell Island and elsewhere in Newfoundland, you shall not open your clubs on Sundays. I would hesitate to say that. I think that in all probability the Board would hesitate similarly. On the other hand, and again I think of the City Club for example—I don’t know their hours nor do I know if in fact they open on Sundays—

MR. HIGGINS: I don’t think they do.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Well, suppose they changed their hours and they decided to open on Sundays, I really doubt that the Board would say to them, “You must not open on Sundays.” Not because it is feared by my honourable and learned friend from St. John’s East that they may be a little more refined, let us say, than the persons at some other clubs. No. But because it is a residential club, a club in which you can go and get a meal and at which, if you want it, a glass of wine, a bottle of beer with the meal. It seems to me we have not yet reached the point where the drinking of a glass of wine or a bottle of beer has been reduced by any propaganda to such a depth of disgrace that the Board should refuse to permit the serving of a glass of wine at the City Club if the City Club wishes to do so on Sunday. Similarly with the Golf Club, the Bally Haly Golf and Country Club and similarly Murray’s Pond Club. I don’t know if they open on Sunday. I don’t know, I don’t go to them. But far be it from me to wish to stop them, and far be it from this House to stop them if they wish on Sunday, and being open to serve a glass of wine or a bottle of beer and if some prefer a dash of whiskey or rum, even this stinking, smelling stuff, if they wish to and if they are foolish enough—On the other hand I have myself seen clubs on the highways open on Sundays, with a great number of cars parked in front of them. I have at such times wondered whether it was entirely safe on a busy highway on which are to be found many thousands of cars on Sundays to have these same roads frequented by cars driven by perhaps hundreds of people who dropped into these clubs. I am always a little scared myself when driving over some of these roads. I am sober and I think I am a careful driver. But I do wonder if the fellow coming towards me has had three bottles of beer and does not quite see straight, or that he is quite confident he is on his own side when in fact a third of his car is over on mine. I am always a little worried by that. For that and other reasons I can see why some clubs might be denied the right to sell intoxicating drinks on Sunday. The same thing applies to all these other classifications. What are they? Hotels, clubs, military messes (I will not speak of the U.S. Clubs because they are on leased territory) but if the Canadian Army or Navy or Air Force operates messes and clubs and the like here in this Province I doubt that the Board of Liquor Control is going to say to them; "We are sorry but you can't have your bar open on Sunday." I doubt that they will say that.

At all events, in the Government's opinion, it is better to leave it to the Board. They are pretty sensible people. The Chairman, Mr. Mullowney, is a man of rock-bottom common sense with nothing flighty or excitable about him. He is very calm and cool and fair and highly anxious to administer the Act so as not to cause scandal or give offense. I think in his hands the question of operating or closing Sunday may very fairly and very safely be left.

On motion Bill read a second time, ordered referred to a Committee of the Whole House at a later hour this day.

Second Reading of Bill "An Act to Amend the Crown Lands Act."

DR. ROWE: Mr. Speaker, in this Bill the number of amendments involved relates to only a word or two yet the whole section or clause has been printed, and it makes the thing longer than it actually is. I would say we now have an Act on our Statutes; "An Act Respecting Crown Lands, Timber and Water-power", a long and involved and most complicated Act on our books, I think. But this amendment here today does not involve any drastic amendments or changes to that for this reason:

As this House knows we have now a Royal Commission on Forestry and one on Agriculture. The one on Agriculture is of necessity giving some attention to land title and other problems connected with our Crown Lands. It is common knowledge that the Royal Commission on Forestry will be making to the Government, before the end of the financial year and possibly by the end of the calendar year, a report which we feel sure will indicate the necessity for very extensive revision of the present Act. However, in the meantime while we are waiting for these reports the Government recommends certain changes, most of them, I think, minor changes and most of them for administrative purposes, to simplify or facilitate processes, and these we had incorporated in this Bill which is now before us.

I will just refer to two or three of them. I might say that I am quite sure that my honourable friends on the opposite side have not read this Bill through as it was only distributed this afternoon. I do feel, however, that most of the points they would want to raise would probably come up best in Committee because of the very nature of the Bill and the fairly large number of small revisions. However, if they feel, when I am finished commenting on second reading, they would prefer to study it longer, we, of course, have no objections on this side to having it deferred.

There are just one or two sections I would refer to—Section 8, for example—the word "Unoccupied." That is a word that could have very serious repercussions. Unoccupied land is the only one kind of land to which the Government have been able to give any title. What that meant in effect was that people who perhaps lived for one hundred years on a piece of land could not get a title as long as that word "unoccupied" was in there. As a matter of fact, I myself, only the other day, bought a small parcel of land which had been occupied for eighty-five years by one family yet had no title. I did not mind. I know occupancy is a good thing in Newfoundland and stands in law. Nevertheless there are many cases where people have been living on land for a long time and have no documentary title to the land other than occupancy.

Under Section 6 that is being extended a little to take away the element of compulsion.

Section 8, page 4 of the Bill has an amendment there which is so very obvious. We recognize the fact that our people have long been entitled to acquire wood for fuel. However, we also recognize the fact that especially in certain communities in certain parts of Newfoundland, we have to be protected against wholesale destruction of remaining timber and wood assets. So that while any person is permitted without obtaining any authority from the Department to cut up to twenty cords of wood for his own use—and I might point out the average household would burn anywhere from six to ten cords in a year, so that the figure of twenty is quite liberal. Nevertheless, any person who wishes to cut more than twenty cords must obtain a permit. The reason for that is obvious. We could have a community which might have a thousand cords of wood left for the Community as a whole which could last for years with proper use. On the other hand there was nothing in the past to prevent a man going in and cutting a thousand cords at one time and selling it a hundred miles away for firewood.

Also under that general section (8) permission is given for the use of tenders under certain circumstances. That is something which applies all over Canada but has never been here in Newfoundland. Cases could arise sometimes where it would be a very useful authority to have. Now last year we issued ten thousand permits, which meant we had to have ten thousand accounts, and which meant too that from time to time, human nature being what it is, we had considerable trouble in collecting. Because a man cutting say a hundred or a thousand railway ties, when he gets it cut and sells it, is supposed to pay his royalty. Some people have neglected that. So we propose here that the purchaser will pay for the royalty. That will facilitate the matter in many ways. But consider the CNR for example, one of the biggest purchasers who may be purchasing from perhaps three thousand of the ten thousand permit holders. If the CNR pays us we have the one account with the CNR and that would eliminate some of the most undesirable legal actions from time to time. Perhaps honourable members of the Opposition will remember some persons dragged before court to pay up some small account.

Section 11 is not new. It is merely in the parent Act, here and there, Authority is given to make regulations. These have been consolidated under Section 11.

Section 12 has to do with penalties and employees, I believe, the penalty up to one hundred dollars. The reason for that is that in certain cases the values involved may be very very high and might even go up to tens of thousands of dollars.

Section 13 and 14 are purely formal changes to correspond with new changes. I think I have covered all that is there of any significance, Mr. Speaker. I might say that Section 4 has been slightly revised to take away some of the rigidity in the past with respect to persons obtaining licenses to land for certain purposes. A man, for example compelled to clear a certain portion of land over a period of comparatively short time—That is brought in from one legislation on the Mainland. However, conditions do vary very much here. We know, for example, a man in Alberta or Saskatchewan who has a hundred acres has a hundred acres of continuous arable land whereas in Newfoundland to get that a man may have to go over four or five hundred acres of rock and bog. It gives the Lieutenant Governor in Council a little more leeway there to deal with some of our permits.

I move, Mr. Speaker, this Bill be now read a second time.

MR. HOLLETT: Would the Minister consider moving the adjournment of second reading, or may I do it, Mr. Speaker. We would like an adjournment until tomorrow. We have not had the Bill, you see.

On motion second reading of Bill adjourned until tomorrow.

Second Reading of Bill "An Act Respecting Ferries."

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Speaker, there has been a little change there, and I was wondering if the House would be prepared to agree to change the wording of this Bill. It is true that the short title of the Act is "Ferries" but the long title is "An Act to Provide for the Regulation of Ferries Used in the Transportation of Persons and Property for Compensation." I wonder if the House would be willing to change the name of the Bill? I would move the amendment thereof.

MR. BROWNE: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker—Does the honourable gentleman mean a change in here in Section (I)?

MR. CURTIS: No, in the Order Paper.

House agreed.

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Speaker, for some time past, the last couple of years, we have operated a Motor or Carrier Act and we have found that its operation has proved most satisfactory. The Government now proposes to do to this Act for ferries what the Motor Carrier Act has done for motor buses. In other words the proposal is to put under the Board of Public Utilities the power to give, upon such terms and conditions as it deems fit, and subject to the payment of such fees as it deems fit, the right to issue a franchise to any persons in respect to operations of ferries. The Bill provides that a franchise cannot be transferred except with the approval in writing by the Board and a franchise provided otherwise is void. The Board may regulate the fees and base the fees for a franchise upon the receipts or the mileage travelled or the number of passengers or the amount of property carried or upon any other basis which the Board deems advisable. It provides that fees and other moneys collected shall be applied towards the defraying of the expenses of the Board in accordance with the Public Utilities Act. That the owner or operator of a ferry under franchise shall not refuse to carry any person or property offering at any regular stopping place or at any terminus of the ferry unless the accommodation of the ferry for passengers or property, as the case may be, is fully occupied, but the operator may refuse transportation to any person who is intoxicated or who is conducting himself in a boisterous or a disorderly manner or is using profane or obscene language. It also provides that ferries under the franchise shall not charge any toll until a tariff of tolls has been filed with and approved by the Board. It provides further that the holder of a franchise shall not operate a ferry in a manner contrary to the provisions of the franchise or in excess of the limits set forth in the franchise. It provides that any person who contravenes any of the provisions of this Act or the regulations is guilty of an offense, and that every fine collected under this Act shall be paid to the Department of the Attorney General and shall form part of the Consolidated Revenue Fund.

Subject to the approval of the Lieutenant Governor in Council, the Board may make such regulations as it deems advisable for carrying out the spirit, intent and meaning of this Act or for supplying any deficiency therein, or for meeting cases which may arise for which no provision or inadequate provision has otherwise been made.

I think, Mr. Speaker, this Act will have the general support of the House, and I move second reading.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, I notice that now the Minister is referring to the Act Respecting Ferries. I imagine that is where the title came from. I am not aware of many ferries existing in the country except the ferry at Placentia and the ferry between Portugal Cove and Bell Island. I don’t know to what extent the ferry between Portugal Cove and Bell Island comes under this Act or whether any attention was paid to its existence at all. I believe its present function is to carry the mail and at the same time carry passengers and freight for the benefit of people doing business with Bell Island. But recently, with the construction of the Trans-Canada Highway certainly, it has become very important to make provisions for the carrying of motor vehicles over rivers where there are no bridges. Certainly some regulation is necessary, according to reports I have received. The Honourable the Attorney General has made reference to the fact that the Act called “The Motor Carrier Act,” which is a similar Act, deals with transportation by land and which has worked satisfactorily. I am not sure whether he has given that much thought or not, because I understand it is not working satisfactorily, and that many people were delighted when they found out that the Canadian National Railways were going to operate a bus between here and Carbonear, because the service as given by the motor carriers under license from the Government, the Board of Public Utilities, was not satisfactory. I have heard several complaints that the Board is not very exacting about the operators of motor buses and motor carriers operating along Topsail Highway. I don’t know whose duty it is to investigate, but it seems to me once a license is issued conditions are laid down and then they should be carried out. If it is unsatisfactory to the public or to the operators it should be adjusted formally and not just break the law because it is convenient.

Now in regard to this particular one. I don't know how far I should draw that to the attention of the Government, but I understand that at the present time there is very great inconvenience in the operations of the ferry service between Portugal Cove and Bell Island. Now I don't think that arises out of the fact that the new construction is going on there but because of the increase in the motor traffic. I believe now sometimes you are there an hour and sometimes longer, many hours before the boat is ready to go especially on weekends, that you are not likely to get your car brought across to Bell Island. I have heard of fifteen people with cars lined up waiting for passage and only one boat operating and that steamer only able to take six cars. To me, if people have the privilege of operating ferries, they should have sufficient accommodations to take all these who are offering, and if they can't do it they should withdraw.

Now I have also heard that some company has purchased a river boat which operated on some part of the St. Lawrence River for transportation of cars across there. Now there is a big difference between crossing the St. Lawrence around Brockville or Cornwall in smooth water and crossing the tickle between Portugal Cove and Bell Island. It can be very rough crossing there, and unless the steamer is seaworthy it should not be allowed to operators. It would be a great tragedy if anything should happen in transporting people or vehicles to Bell Island resulting in a disaster. I am sure the Public Utilities Board would see to it that when dealing with vessels engaged in ferry service on the high seas as between Portugal Cove and Bell Island they would have a different thing from what might occur when crossing a river or an inland waterway. Therefore, strict supervision must exist and they must be well found in all kinds of safety equipment and be seaworthy in every respect.

MR. POWER: Mr. Speaker, if I might add something to that. I would say that the registry of the boat would not be the responsibility of the Public Utilities Board. That would come under the Department of Transport, and they have rules and regulations.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I have no desire to delay the proceedings of the House, but I think I ought to make it quite clear that the ferry boat to which reference has already been made, the one that is going to ply between Portugal Cove and Bell Island, or I ought to say one of those that will ply, is not a river boat although she operated last on a river. She was a salt-water boat, operated on the Atlantic Coast of North America in fact, and on the Atlantic Coast of the United States and was then taken to a river and operated. Since then she has come down here under her own power, in very rough weather. It would be very, very misleading and the cause of some misgiving perhaps and uneasiness amongst the general public that will be using her to have it spread about that she is just a river boat. She is no more a river boat than I am.

MR. HIGGINS: Mr. Speaker, I notice that the Act provides under Section 10 that this Act does not apply to a ferry operated under a franchise issued by either St. John's or by a town or rural district. Can the Hon-
Mr. Smallwood: If I may—It is not—but the Minister of Finance ought to answer that.

Mr. Power: We intend—it has not come before the Government yet—but I have spoken to several of them and the Premier and I think everyone is in agreement that we will put a ferry on Holyrood Gut.

Mr. Higgins: Is there not one there now?

Mr. Smallwood: If one whistles and bawls and shouts someone comes.

Mr. Power: What I mean is one capable of bringing cars and trucks.

Mr. Higgins: It is a good idea.

Mr. Fogwill: Mr. Speaker, I would like the Minister when he replies to explain to the House just what is the meaning of "Ferry." There is no interpretation to say what a "Ferry" is. In some places and harbours in Newfoundland, especially in Notre Dame Bay and perhaps Placentia Bay and many other places small boats operate with passengers and perhaps take a small amount of freight. What I would like to know is if these small boats or ferries, if they are called ferries, come under the scope of this Act. If they do will the Minister set the limits in respect to size, carrying capacity of boats such as I have just mentioned? I think perhaps the Minister would consider putting in an interpretation as to what a "Ferry" means.

Mr. Curtis: Mr. Speaker, of course as far as the Bell Island Ferry is concerned it will be subject to the Canadian Shipping Act. In particular with regard to the definition of "Ferries" I don't know—I think perhaps—

Mr. Spencer: It is better not to have a definition at the moment. The Board can take all ferries under its jurisdiction. A ferry might be a small boat such as the one which goes from Lewisporte to Twillingate, or a larger one such as goes from Portugal Cove to Bell Island or a smaller boat such as would go across Holyrood Pond. I think it is just as well not to have it defined. However, it is a matter for discussion in Committee.

Mr. Fogwill: A two-hand dory, for instance?

Mr. Curtis: I suppose strictly, I don't think there will be any trouble on that score. I might say I will be glad to bring to the attention of the Board the points raised by the honourable member for St. John's East. I am sure they would be glad to look into it.

On motion Bill read a second time, ordered referred to a Committee of the Whole at a later hour this day.

Second Reading of Bill "An Act Respecting Commissioners to Administer Oaths":

Mr. Curtis: Mr. Speaker, I have pleasure in moving the second reading of this Bill. For some time past the Government have on several occasions had difficulty in finding authority under which to appoint Commissioners who can take oaths. The Supreme Court has power, as my honourable and learned friend will know, to appoint Commissioners for the Supreme Court and these Commissioners can take oaths. But the judges of the Supreme Court don’t like to appoint Commissioners except for the Supreme Court. The result is that in many cases we have had difficulty in finding people who could administer oaths.

For instance when we last had the by-election in Bonavista we wanted to conduct it very fairly and we wanted to enable returning officers concerned to take oaths, and we had to appoint them on a temporary basis. Well, that was a nuisance. Likewise all the Welfare officers and many others throughout the country from time to time, we want to enable them to take oaths. We find we have to appoint them JP’s. And a JP is a far more important man than just a man to take a oath. That is only one of the functions he has. Another is that he is supposed in an emergency to sit with another on the bench and between two of them constitute the powers of a magistrate.

MR. BROWNE: A half-magistrate, in other words?

MR. CURTIS: Half, yes. So we have followed the procedure followed in other provinces, and we propose to have Commissioners for oaths. We intend to give the Mayors and Chairmen of Town Councils the right to take oaths, and also Members of the House of Assembly. When we are in our ridings we are sometimes called upon to sign documents. Now my honourable friend the Leader of the Opposition already, and his colleague too, has the right to administer oaths, but us poor unfortunates to the left of them cannot take oaths. I have no doubt it will be a great advantage to us all when going through our districts, fortunately I have been able to take oaths myself. I think—Remember we ought to get it through before the fall, the November election—and I think it would be a great convenience for those who represent the outside constituencies to be able to take oaths because we are called upon, as everyone knows, to assist people with signing applications in one form or another.

There is just one little innovation here—It is provided that these appointments are for a period of five years, then those who receive such appointments are to write after their names, such as they do in some places in Canada—My Commission expires on such and such a date—that assists him to know just when his commission expires and at the same time protects the people whose papers he signs.

MR. HIGGINS: That does not apply to barristers?

MR. CURTIS: No, not to barristers and solicitors. They can take oaths too, which will be acceptable in court.

MR. HIGGINS: There is just one question, Mr. Speaker. Barristers hereafter will be entitled to administer oaths. What about those unfortunates who previously paid out $25 in order to become notaries public—are they going to be recognized?

MR. CURTIS: No, Sir.

On motion Bill read a second time, ordered referred to a Committee of the Whole House at a later hour today.

Second Reading of Bill "An Act to Amend the Ship Building (Bounties) Act":

HON W. J. KEOUGH (Minister of Fisheries & Co-operatives): Mr. Speaker, there has been on the Statute Books of Newfoundland a Ship Building (Bounties) Act for quite a long time, I believe since the latter part of the last century. The present Act was one placed there by the Commission of Government in, I believe, 1938, when they defined certain new bounty scales and bounty payments for vessels. The rate of bounties laid down then in 1938 were, on fishing vessels from twenty to one hundred and fifty tons, $40 a ton and on fishing vessels built under a different schedule of twelve to thirty tons, $50 a ton. On vessels built for use in the trade of Newfoundland, according to certain schedules, $20 and $30 a ton.

In 1947 the Commission of Government took a look at the rising building costs and effected a new scale of bounties and amended the Act in 1947 providing a new scale, on fishing ships of twenty to one hundred and fifty tons a rate of $80 per ton and on ten to thirty tons a rate of $70 per ton. I believe the trade bounties at that time were upped from $20 and $30 to $30 and $40 according as built on full schedule.

The Commission of Government also at that time provided for bounty payments on ships of the dragger type in Newfoundland and they added a new bounty payment on engines of the diesel type for fishing ships of $15 per horsepower and for freighting ships $10 per horsepower. These provisions continued in effect until 1949 in order to give the incoming Government a chance to look at them and either drop or continue them. The Government have continued the high rate bounties ever since by amending the Act each year and extending the authority to pay these rates of bounties for one year. It has been our hope before now to introduce a new Bounties Act to clean up some anomalies in the existing Act. As a matter of fact this year, after getting out of the woods as far as the Fisheries Development Committee and programme are concerned, we did get around to drafting a new Ship Building (Bounties) Act. The Attorney General's Department put up a draft of about thirty-six pages for us. But the department is still not quite satisfied with some sections of the Act, and we have decided to hold it over until next year. But it is necessary to seek authority, and it is sought in Sections (2) and (3) of the Bill, to continue the higher rate of bounties instituted by the Commission of Government. It is provided here the highest rate will continue until June of 1955.

Section 4 of the Bill has to do with a change that is considered desirable this year, that is that the bounties upon engines shall henceforth be paid upon the nominal horsepower instead of brake horsepower. As I have said the present rate is $15 on brake horsepower for fishing ships and $10 for freighting ships. It is proposed in this section in future to pay only nominal horsepower instead of brake. I hope nobody asks me to explain the difference, because I am not very clear on that one at all. But the rate of bounties it is proposed to pay is in respect of fishing ships a rate of $100 on nominal horsepower and in the case of trading ships $75, which I am told by my personnel down there is the equivalent in terms of money and horsepower—In other words there is very little difference, but there may be a slight deviation, but it is practically seeking authority to continue paying the same rate of bounties upon engines, except that for the future the bounty will be paid on nominal horsepower.
These are the essential things in the Act which are new, Mr. Speaker, and I move the second reading.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the Minister to read out that formula on page 2.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, I wonder does Ms avoid paying other bounties which hitherto have been paid? Are these to be paid now wholly and solely on horsepower of the engine? I think, certainly we are in favour of any Bills of this nature, and I don't think anybody in the House would know exactly what the particular formula means. I expect the Minister will tell us that in his reply. Also how the bounties compare on fishing boats say of twenty, thirty, forty or fifty tons with bounties hitherto paid on the same tonnage. That is the only thing I am concerned with. I am in favour of the Bill apart from that.

MR. KEOUGH: Mr. Speaker, I am afraid I will have to duck the question on the formula. As the honourable gentleman suggested, probably nobody in the House can explain it.

As far as bounties are concerned the authority sought is to continue exactly the bounties as they have been in respect of tonnage and hull of fishing ships, and with respect of the engines will be paid on a nominal instead of brake horsepower, but the equivalent with perhaps a slight variation of $1 or so on the basis of calculations by this formula.

Bill read a second time, ordered referred to a Committee of the Whole House at a later hour this day.

Second Reading of Bill "An Act to Amend the Saw Mills Act."

DR. ROWE: Mr. Speaker, the preliminary remarks I made about the Crown Lands Bill apply also to this case. There are no serious nor drastic revisions here. But there are a number of points which have been a sort of thorn in the flesh, and have not been clear in the past. Several legal points and definitions and things of that kind have been checked up on and as interim legislation this year we submit this Bill, this amendment to the Act. I will just refer to one or two of them:

The old definition of Crown license to have a saw mill, for example, gave the impression very definitely that only timber cut on Crown land could be sawed in that saw mill. This is altogether wrong because that saw mill might be adjacent to Bowaters property and Bowaters might want that saw mill owner to saw some lumber. He could not do it because of the definition of the old Act.

Section 5, we will say, takes away some of the stiffness of the old section, which said that any person who had any beneficiary rights or interest in any land could not be given a saw mill permit. Now the revision is that such person cannot be given a saw mill permit by the department as an ordinary person can, but the application may be submitted to the Lieutenant Governor in Council and it can be considered on its merits.

Section 7 is another interesting thing. The old Act said that the granting of these permits does not give a person any rights to waterpowers. We now have widened that to say it does not give them any other rights except those specified in the clause. People sometimes assumed they had a lot more rights because they had the right to operate a saw mill, and that it gave them a lot of other rights which were not intended in the Bill.

Section No. 10. From an administrative and legal standpoint we found the practice in vogue in the department for many many years, from Commission of Government days etc. may perhaps have not been quite legal, to put it that way. This is intended to rectify the situation insofar as the collection of royalties are concerned, the collection of money owed the department.

Then Section 11 removes the statute of limitations which existed from one year under the old Act. If a person owes the department money for a saw mill license, if he did not pay it within one year, or if he did not take action within one year, the department was then outlawed. That is a really ridiculous situation, because in the course of things it might be a good many months sometimes when we have hundreds of licenses and perhaps a year before the delinquency would be discovered. So that this section takes away that limitation of one year which applied in the past.

So if a person owes us money, let us say for two years before it really comes to light, we can still take action against him to recover it.

Mr. Speaker, I am sure my honourable friends on the opposite side would like to have a chance to look over the Bill before closing the debate.

On motion Bill now read a second time, ordered referred to a Committee of the Whole House at a later hour this day.

Second Reading of Bill "An Act Respecting the Appointment of a Commission in Connection with Term 29 of the Terms of Union of Newfoundland with Canada":

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, there is nothing very complicated about this Bill. Its prime purpose is to give dignity and importance and prestige formally to the appointment of the Commission we have recently appointed to prepare Newfoundland's case for presentation to the Royal Commission which will sit later to revise or to review the Terms of Union, and on the financial side to recommend what additional financial assistance, if any, we may require, find out what it would take to enable us to maintain our levels and standard of public services as reached at the time the review is made.

There is a preamble setting forth the fact that Term 29 of the Terms of Union provides for a Royal Commission. It goes on to say that; whereas it is deemed desirable and in the public interest to appoint a Commission to prepare the case to be presented to the Royal Commission on behalf of Newfoundland, we therefore ask for the appointment of this present Commission of Enquiry which shall be known as the Terms of Union Commission, and shall in addition to preparing a case as referred to in Section 2, carry out such other duties as the Lieutenant Governor in Council assigns to them.

Section 4 has some importance. The Lieutenant Governor in Council may pay, and each member of the Commission may accept, such remuneration, if any, as the Lieutenant Governor in Council thinks fit, notwithstanding the Legislative Disabilities Act, if a member of the House of Assembly is a member of the Commission his seat does not become vacant by reason only of his appointment and acceptance of remuneration as a member of the Commission. Each member of the Commission shall be paid all reasonable travelling and other expenses incurred in performing his duties under this Act.

Now most if not all of those citizens who are members of this Commission and are not members of the House of Assembly have signified to me their desire to serve as members of the Commission without pay. I have agreed that if they don't wish to accept pay they don't have to. On the other hand we feel that the Chairman, who will have to attend all sittings and who will have to guide and consolidate the work of the Commission and the Commission itself, and who may be the person to represent Newfoundland personally on behalf of the Government at the hearings of the Royal Commission itself later, ought to be paid, and ought to be in a position to accept payment without vacating his seat in the House.

So, Mr. Speaker, this present Bill, which I now have pleasure in moving—

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, I think this is a Bill on which I should say a few words, because the Commission which is being set up by this Bill will, I take it, have such importance, or its decision will have such importance in its effect upon the financial status of this country in the years to come, and I think it is absolutely essential that we should give plenty of thought to it, and we should give that Commission all the assistance which they desire from us whether we are on the Government side of the House or on the Opposition side of the House.

I could go on at length and deplore the fact the Committee which arranged the Terms in the first instance did not take sufficient care, but that, like Confederation, is water under the bridge. Sufficient terms were not put forward, not brought out, not obtained from the Federal Government. We have to accept that fact. We also have to accept the fact today that the time is fast approaching when these financial terms under which we are now existing as a Government will be outmoded and any government who tries to operate on them will be bankrupt. As a matter of fact, Sir, that has been proved to us time and again, twice at any rate in the last two years, that it was absolutely essential on both occasions for the Government to indicate that they would require a loan in order to carry on certain aspects of Government, and to carry out the principles which are involved in the Terms of Union, relative to the enhancement of our public services.

There is not much point to be gained in crying over spilled milk. Therefore, we are definitely in favour of this Bill to set up this Commission. I am not so sure, and I say this with due deference to the personnel involved here, I say, I am not greatly impressed by the personnel. It seems to me that the personnel of such a Committee should be experts in matters of Government and in matters of finance and in matters relevant to the welfare of the people as affected by government finances. Now these are admirable men — As it is now 6:00 o'clock—perhaps we could call it 6:00 o'clock, Mr. Speaker?

MR. SPEAKER: It being now 6:00 o'clock, I do leave the Chair until 8:00 of the clock tonight.

MONDAY, June 14, 1954

NIGHT SESSION

The House resumed at 8:00 of the clock.
MR. SPEAKER: Order — Second Reading of Bill "An Act Respecting the Appointment of a Commission in connection with Term 29 of the Terms of Union of Newfoundland with Canada": Honourable Leader of the Opposition:

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, at recess time I was speaking on the Bill relevant to the appointment of a Commission in connection with Term 29 of the Terms of Union.

I think it would be well for us to first ask ourselves just what do we mean by public services if we read this preamble first and ask ourselves what are public services. Just what do we mean by public services? The main thing under consideration there is the ability of the Province to maintain the public services that may have been established at some time subsequent to or following Union with Canada. Public Services, I hold, are those services which are supplied under the Departments of Health, Welfare, Education, Public Works, maintenance of roads, and under Justice. Generally speaking these are all public services and will be included under particular headings. I maintain therefore that it was the duty of any government which took over at the time of Union with Canada, having knowledge of that particular section No. 29, I maintain it was the duty of that government to endeavour to raise the standard of public services throughout Newfoundland compatible with the amount of revenue collected and the taxation which may have been imposed. If we ask ourselves to what extent has the Government carried out that obligation, fulfilled that obligation, I fear that we are going to get quite a disappointment.

As we know in that particular section there are a number of intangibles, I call them: For instance public services—Who knows just what is the proper standard of public services? Are we going to have a public service equal to that of Toronto or Ontario as a whole or to that of any other province? Or are we to have it on the same basis as that of Nova Scotia or New Brunswick or, if you like the Northwest Territory? I think that was left with the Government. That was left with the Government where they said: "that may be required by the Government of the Province of Newfoundland to enable it to continue public services at the levels and standards reached subsequent to the date of Union." In other words, how much more financial aid is Newfoundland to need in order to keep the standards at which we have arrived in the 8th year of Union? How much money is it going to take to maintain these services? I hold therefore it was the duty of the Government to raise the standards of the public services every year, year after year, to the limit within the scope of the revenues received. How has this Government done that?

The member for White Bay the other day told us to what extent the Government has fulfilled its obligations in that particular district. What public services have been established in White Bay? Ask the honourable member:

MR. SPEAKER: That refers to another debate.

MR. HOLLETT: I shall not make any reference to that debate, Sir, but I will say this: We all know in this House that public services in that particular part of the country or if you like, Sir, from Cape Bonavista right around to Cape Ray—let us ask ourselves how high has the standard of public services been raised, and how much financial aid will be needed to keep the public services in that area to the point where it is now? For instance: What public services are there along the southwest coast from Cape Ray right to St. John's? Health and Public Welfare, oh yes, there have been a good many improvements largely, we know, by moneys which come in from the Dominion of Canada, and largely through efforts made by the present Government. I will grant that in the field of health and welfare generally some improvement has been made, and considerable improvement has been made in certain areas. But, there are long stretches of our coastline in the country where the standard of public service has not in any way improved since we went into Confederation.

Now, where are we going to be at the 9th year of Union? How is that particular area of the country going to be effected? Mind you, the Commission to be appointed by the Federal Government is the Commission to decide the amount of financial and other aid and not this particular Commission set up by this bill.

Now I have every regard for the members of this Commission which is being set up. I will say this for the Chairman, although he is present in the House—He has got to take it as well as I—I don't take it usually—But I will say that as Chairman of that Commission we could have found a more appropriate man nor a man more fitted for the job than the man named here, and I refer to the honourable and learned member for Harbour Main-Bell Island. I say he is a good Chairman, and I am quite sure he and his Committee under him will assemble the facts. Well, are these members going to take a trip around White Bay? I am quite sure the honourable and learned member for Harbour Main-Bell Island will have to go even to Fogo, and I am quite sure the honourable member for Fogo would not object to his going there to see how the public services have been improved there. The same would apply to White Bay and Green Bay, and if I may, Sir, in your district, and down the southwest coast, and might come right here in St. John's Sir, to see how the public services have been improved on Blackhead Road, how it has been improved up in Mundy Pond. I believe that Commission under the honourable and learned member for Harbour Main-Bell Island will have to visit these areas and find out by asking questions—"How is everything going on? Has your status been any better since this Government than prior, if you like, to Union? Has it been improved?" I maintain it was the duty of any government which came in, knowing that particular section was there, particularly when having a surplus of some forty odd million dollars — I think they very well might have used that money in a large part towards the building of new hospitals, schools, etc. Then having put on extra taxation they could have used the surplus they secured thereby to help maintain these services. I mean, the Government knew, and everybody knows there are very little public services in certain areas of this country. The Government, in my opinion, has neglected to do that. If I were the Government at the present time I would say: "Let us, before the Royal Commission is set up, let us, in the name of goodness, do something to try and improve the public services of this country far beyond the standard which they have reached at the present time.
We must improve our public services, Sir! The whole idea is suggested here in this particular section—"The Government of Canada will appoint a Royal Commission within eight years from the date of Union to review the financial position of the Province of Newfoundland and to recommend the form and scale of additional financial assistance if any, that may be required by the Government of the Province of Newfoundland to enable it to continue public services at the levels and standards reached subsequent to the date of Union, without resorting to taxation more burdensome, having regard to capacity to pay, than that obtaining generally in the region comprising the Maritime Provinces of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island;" What date does it say? "Subsequent to the date of Union," I presume that means within that eight year period.

HON. P. J. LEWIS (Minister without Portfolio): Would the Honourable Leader of the Opposition limit it to the eight year period?

MR. HOLLETT: Well, you see, Sir, the Commission will be set up within the eight years. I take it they will want to make a decision as quickly as they can. When they want to come to a decision they will say "Well, here now is this Government, a fine Government, a Liberal Government who built roads in White Bay, hospitals down there and schools somewhere else and have done this and that in other places around the coast. They must have some money to keep up that level of public services. We must help them". But what are they going to do when they find out nothing has been done in White Bay, Green Bay and certain other parts? They are going to say; "Well, you have not raised the level of public services. This says we are going to find out how much to pay you in order to continue at the level to which you raised them." When they find the Government have not raised the level of public services — they are only bound by that—And if I know the Federal Government or any Commission they set up, they are not going beyond their terms of reference. So that I say, if I were with the Government today I would argue strongly that every surplus dollar the Government could get hold of from now on would be used to build up public services all around the country, particularly in these areas which are backward. To see you have hospitals, roads, schools to be kept up in various places around the country and then the Federal Government must grant assistance because the Government can't afford to tax the people enough to keep up those services, but would have to over-tax them. "Without resulting in taxation more burdensome than that obtaining generally in the region comprising the Maritime Provinces."

MR. LEWIS: Would the Honourable Leader of the Opposition permit me for a moment? Suppose that it is impossible to complete a road project in St. Barbe District within the period limited by the term, would the honourable gentleman restrict the power of that Commission to that, granting aid to that portion which is complete?

MR. HOLLETT: No, Mr. Speaker, certainly not. If this Government had had such good intentions five years ago they would have had the road finished now in that particular district or in other districts as well. I think the Government may be judged probably by its good intentions, if they had some, and I believe they did, but got off the track somewhere along the road, and they used a lot of the surplus in things other than raising the standard of the public services in this country. I think the honourable member will admit that—it is not a question of what it should be limited to, or what I should limit it to or the honourable gentleman. It is whether the Royal Commission will agree on that limit.

MR. LEWIS: If I may? I think the honourable gentleman will find, if he looks at the record which was compiled at the time the Terms were negotiated that the surplus of which he speaks, Mr. Speaker, was not to be devoted towards the raising of public service; that two-thirds was for other purposes.

MR. HOLLETT: Was it not two-thirds for public services?

MR. LEWIS: I don't mean that, Sir. I am talking about the minutes of the meetings that preceded the finalization of the Terms of Union. I think it was clearly understood at that time, Mr. Speaker, that the surplus as it then existed was to be available for economic development of the Province.

MR. HOLLETT: I believe even the surplus itself, if I am right, and I am not by-passing the suggestions made, I believe it was laid down in the Act that the surplus, which was forty-two million dollars or some such amount, should be used two-thirds as to improvement of public services and one-third as to payment of deficits on current account—if my memory serves me right. Can the Government say today that they have used two-thirds of that surplus for the improvement of the public services? Can they say that the surpluses which they had on current account were used to improve the public services? I know some improvements have been made. I am only suggesting that it is most important, even if the Government did not do it heretofore, or even if they did so heretofore, that every last dollar they can spare to improve our public services and get up to as high a level as possible so that when this Commission comes down here from Canada they will see what has been done. Mind you they are going to see what you did not do, but they can then see what you have done and so recommend to the Federal Government that you need these moneys to keep up these public services. Then there is a possibility that we may get some more assistance, which I am quite sure and everybody is quite sure you need. If you only look at the estimates brought in last week sometime, which were made by this man, Mr. Thompson of the revenue and expenditure of this particular year, 1954-55—I pointed out there that he was some nineteen million dollars short on his estimate as to what we should spend this year and what we should take in—

MR. LEWIS: He was wrong both ways.

MR. HOLLETT: Yes, he was wrong both ways. I am not going to say now, and I don't believe the honourable member for Harbour Main-Bell Island is going to say that their estimate when they make it will be a good seven or eight years hence.

I am sorry in one way to see that such fine men as are listed here should be put in the position in which Mr. Thompson is placed, or had placed himself in 1949 when he made these estimates. Still, somebody has to do it. The point I want to get across is that I am not criticizing too badly—The Government, I know, were young, they were inexperienced when left to carry on by the demised Commission of Government, and I don’t think they used all the money they should have or could have in the improvement or extension of the public services in this country.

There is not much more I have to say on this, Sir. Of course we do not object to this Bill. As a matter of fact we support it. I don’t know that it is absolutely essential because the Term 29 says the Government of Canada will appoint a Royal Commission to investigate—And I don’t think for one moment the Commission which is to be appointed to investigate are going to pay too much attention to what a purely local Newfoundland Commission offers them. They are going to investigate themselves, and they are going to decide—We are in their hands. But I do submit that it is right and proper for the Government to appoint good men like they have to try to get all the facts. As I say there are so many intangibles in this particular clause that it is essential that much work should be put in upon it, very much work. I don’t envy the people who have to do it, but it has to be done, and I hope they make a good job of it.

I won’t say anything about Clause 4. I don’t like that. I don’t like it at all. “... As the Lieutenant-Governor in Council thinks fit.” We have heard the Government on the other side say: “Well, write your own ticket. What do you want? Write your own ticket.” Suppose these men should come along tomorrow or the next day and write their own ticket and we find ourselves charged twenty-five thousand dollars or thirty thousand dollars apiece! Why I heard—I don’t know how true this story is—A certain man in the Federal Government of Canada was offered, in the fishery branch of the Government of Canada, was offered a hundred thousand dollars by one of the Cabinet Ministers on the opposite side, to come down here and look after our fisheries. That might have been right too. But here they have the same opportunity to make the sky the limit and pay any of these men any amount. They may be justly deserving of it. I am not saying anything about that, but I really think that when the House is asked to pass an Act there should be some stipulation when it comes to paying out money, there should be some limit beyond which the Lieutenant-Governor in Council may not go without getting the further assent of the House. I don’t think it is right, and I believe there are members on the opposite side who will agree it is not right to be giving any government, and I mean the Lieutenant-Governor in Council, the Cabinet, the right to tell people to name their price or to give them the right to pay what they deem is fitting. I think it is the House who has to decide that. I am quite sure the Honourable the Premier will probably agree with me that it is really the business of the House, at least the House should be given some idea as to the amount of money which is to be expended on this item—I believe already seventy thousand dollars has been voted.

Now, Sir, without wasting any more time, and I say wasting advisedly, I can assure the Government that they have in this particular Bill and in this particular Commission the blessing of the Opposition, if that is of any value. I do deplore the fact that it is found to be necessary to appoint a Commission almost every other day. The Government seems to be devoid of certain skills to do certain things and appoint commission on commission—Royal Commission on Fishery Prices—Royal Commission on Prices—Royal Commission on Forestry—Royal Commission on Agriculture—Royal Commission on Fisheries and now a Royal Commission on this. I expect to wake up some morning myself and find myself on a Royal Commission. But I believe there is a lot of work being done on Royal Commissions today that should be done by the Government and the various departments under the Government. Who has better knowledge of the public services in this country today than the departmental heads and the members who represent the various districts? I don't know anybody. I am quite sure all the members here, apart from the honourable and learned member for Harbour Main, will have to be told the state of the public services in most of this country. Every member on the opposite side knows what services they have in his own district. We know here. We know what is lacking and wish we could supply it. However, the Commission is appointed and has our blessing. I do hope when the Commission comes down here within eight years after Union, whenever that is, that they will listen to the appeal of this Royal Commission—Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Higgins: Mr. Speaker, there is just one point in connection with this Bill that occurred to me. Section 3 provides that the Lieutenant-Governor in Council may appoint such additional persons to be members of the Commission as is deemed fit. That ties in with the comments of my honourable colleague on the question of remuneration of members of the Commission. Now I understand that the gentlemen presently comprising the Commission, or some of them, intimated quite publicly, indeed unless I am misinformed, one or two of them made it a condition of acceptance that they would not accept any remuneration. But, is it contemplated that additional members might be added, say, technical men or specialists with specialized knowledge or skills, and if so, we could conceivably—you might have the position arise where you might have two, three, four or five additional members, with remuneration fixed in the rather haphazard manner it now appears to be, and there would not be enough in the vote to cover it. That may not of course be a valid point at all. But I think that perhaps the Minister might enlighten us as to whether there is any probability of any increase in the present membership of the Commission. Provision is made for it.

Mr. Smallwood: Mr. Speaker, in reply to the honourable gentleman who has last spoken I may say there is no intention to appoint additional members to the Commission. The right to do so is contained in the Bill because there might possibly be resignations and there might be vacancies from other causes in the next year or so. So that in case of a vacancy we take the right to make another appointment. Apart from that we have not thought of appointing additional members.

Mr. Smallwood: Mr. Speaker, I welcome the change in the attitude of the Honourable Leader of the Opposition since dinner. He thinks it is a very good Commission. Before dinner he thought it was a very poor one. He has changed since dinner.

Mr. Hollett: Oh no!

Mr. Smallwood: Oh yes! The honourable gentleman took a very dim view of it before dinner. He must have had a good dinner. He took a very poor view of the position of the Commission before dinner. He spoke up to the recess at 6:00 o'clock. But since we resumed at 8:00 o'clock he thinks it is a very good Commission. Perhaps we should arrange it that the honourable gentleman make his pronouncements after he has had dinner, he may then speak better of our various points.

MR. HOLLETT: That is a nice point.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It is a good point. I always welcome the honourable gentleman's support. Any support of our policy of raising the level and standard of our public services is welcome. This is the first time he has done it since he has been in the House. That is not worth repeating though, is it? But the Honourable Leader of the Opposition, for the first time, commended the Government for raising the standard of the public services, and asks the Government to do it. It is the first time he has done that.

MR. HOLLETT: That is not so.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Except here or there in some particular district, his own for instance. He has demanded once or twice that within his own district there should be some improvement and has commended us for some improvement we made. But tonight, for the first time since he came into this House, he has asked the Government to raise the level and standard of public services generally throughout the Province and commended the Government for the extent to which it has done so and he blames the Government to the extent to which it has failed to do so. Now this is an entirely new attitude.

MR. HOLLETT: There is nothing wrong with that.

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, there is nothing wrong. It is a good attitude and I welcome it, and welcome the change in the honourable gentleman. At the same time I want to remind him that it is not quite as bad as he has made out.

He says that when the Royal Commission comes they are going to look into things and they are going to find that the Government have failed to raise the level and standard of public services, and cites White Bay District.

MR. HOLLETT: If they come now.

MR. SMALLWOOD: And he cites White Bay District. Let us take a look at White Bay District. Let us take a look at it. Before Confederation and in the five years before Confederation in the White Bay District: The Government spent, under all headings, for everything in those five years before Confederation $570,000, half a million and over in the five years. That is not half a million a year but it is one hundred thousand a year, $577,066. The breakdown of that is as following: Take it down! Roads etc., $73,341, in five years; Welfare $199,078, just under two hundred thousand dollars; Municipal Affairs, $40,717; Health, $220,000, a total of $577,014, half a million or call it six hundred thousand dollars, it is closer to six hundred thousand dollars than it is to five hundred thousand, in five years on all the ramifications of Government.

MR. BROWNE: May I ask the Honourable Minister a question? Did they not have any schools down there?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes we have schools. But I am talking about direct government expenditure. The same thing applied before Confederation, we had schools then and now.

Incidentally these are capital account expenditures, all of them. They are not only current account but are capital and not ordinary expenditures. Now, roads etc., $418,519; Welfare, $1,093,250; Municipal Affairs, $120,197; Health, $900,000 as against $220,000.

My honourable friend the member for Placentia West told us here in this House of the tremendous improvements made in the public services compared with the five years before. Now I have the figures for every district in Newfoundland. I had them ready on tap as soon as the five years were over. I instructed all departments to get those figures for me. It involved an enormous amount of work on their part. The Government as a whole spent in five years before Confederation, that amount, and the amount we have spent in the five years since Confederation. I got these figures so that we would have an exact comparison. Now the total is $577,000 and $2,573,000—that is five to one.

MR. HOLLETT: Will the Honourable the Premier allow me? How much of that is Federal?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Not one cent of it. Not one single cent of it is Federal. This is Provincial. Furthermore, and I would remind the House of this fact, that in the $577,000 spent before Confederation in five years in White Bay District are items which since Confederation are not in fact included in the Provincial figures because they are Federal figures and are excluded from this table. So that more has been spent by the Government of Newfoundland, since Confederation, which is responsible for fewer things in that district than the Government of Newfoundland was responsible for in the five years before Confederation because there has been a division of jurisdiction and responsibility.

MR. HOLLETT: Talking about public services?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Even talking about public services too and even when allowance is made for the fact that dollars do not buy as much, that there is some inflation in the last five years, the fact remains that we have spent five dollars to one. As a matter of fact I have the figures for Humber District and for St. Georges-Fort au Port District and St. Barbe District and these figures run between five to one and six to one. In His Honour's district it is about six to one. In St. Barbe District this Government spent six dollars for every one dollar spent by the previous government in the comparative five year period, five years before Confederation and the five years since. I have the figures, as I said a moment ago, and I have them for all the districts. I have the figures but they are not compiled for all the Province. But I have them compiled for White Bay and Green Bay and Grand Falls and Twillingate and Fogo—that is as far south as I have gotten from Cape Ray, from Port aux Basques around to Cape Freels. The average is five to one. In the five years since Confederation we have spent five times as much as was spent in the five years before Confederation.

My honourable friend is forgetting something else when he says—they will find that the Government have not raised the levels of public services—Then I find him saying—The Government might have used a large part of the surplus to improve the public services, roads and hospitals and schools.
And I find him arguing in his attack a few moments ago what a pity it was the Government failed to raise the level of public services—They should have done this, might have done it and could have, but they did not do it.

Did we not?

MR. HOLLETT: Did we? Don't ask me.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Let me tell the honourable gentleman: twenty-seven and a half millions from the surplus, taken out of the surplus, which was forty-two million, the two-thirds which was supposed to be spent.

MR. HOLLETT: Two-thirds was supposed to be spent for the improvement of the public services.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Excuse me! It was no such thing. The Terms provided that two-thirds of the surplus would be devoted—one-third on deposit with the Government of Canada at Ottawa to draw interest at the rate of 2 5/8% and to be withdrawn only for the purpose of meeting deficits on current account.

MR. HOLLETT: And it included public services.

MR. SMALLWOOD: And the other two-thirds to be free, to be spent by the Government for public services and economic development. Exactly. But we have spent two-thirds of it on public services alone without one dollar of it on economic development because we have spent twenty-seven and a half million of it on the extension and improvement of public services. The honourable gentleman ought not to get off this kind of stuff, not while I am around, because I happen to have the facts at my finger-tips. He stands up there tonight facing me, sitting opposite me, after his experience in the National Convention of two years and the last two years in this House and getting off that kind of stuff that the Government have not raised the level of public services—If the Government had spent the surplus or some of it raising the public services. What is two-thirds of forty-two million dollars? Twenty-eight million dollars. Here are the figures for twenty-seven and a half million: Grants and Loans to Town Councils, $800,008; Public Housing and Slum Clearance, $1,600,000; Schools, building and equipment two and three-quarter millions; Construction of Public buildings, $574,000; Construction and equipment of hospitals, five and three-quarter millions; Roads, bridges and ferries fifteen and three-quarter millions; total twenty-seven and a half million to be taken out of surplus and spent on public services—two thirds—although the Terms of Union provided that two-thirds of the surplus should be spent on that plus economic development.

Now we also spent money on economic development. We spent roughly twenty-two and a half million dollars. But we did spend twenty-seven and a half million dollars on raising the level and standards of the public services.

White Bay: In White Bay District we have opened a nursing station at Jackson's Arm. That is new since we came in. We have stationed a district nurse at LaScie—That is since we came in. We have introduced an air-ambulance service and those aircraft have made over one hundred and thirty flights in White Bay. We did that—How many lives have been saved by one-hundred and thirty aircraft flights in White Bay? How many lives? I don't know—I don't know. But this Government did that. One quarter of all mercy flights in Newfoundland, twenty-five per cent of all aircraft flights made in the last five years by air-ambulances have been made to White Bay. More hospitals bills have been abated in White Bay District than in any other district of Newfoundland, and that has been done here in St. John's, the hospital at St. Anthony and the hospital at Corner Brook. In these hospitals, to White Bay patients who have been brought in from the District of White Bay, more bills have been abated and forgiven or reduced than in any other district of Newfoundland. That is in addition to having made twenty five per cent of all the air-ambulance flights made in Newfoundland to the District of White Bay. I ought to have added Gander Hospital also to these centres.

In 1951 we introduced a travelling clinic. We got the Grenfell Association to do it for us, but we paid for it, the Government of Newfoundland paid for it, and the "IGA" did it on behalf of the Government of Newfoundland. Last year during the open season this travelling clinic made over one hundred and thirty visits to settlements in White Bay, and over two thousand consultations were held with the patients by the medical staff of that travelling clinic, over two thousand interviews last year. Funny? But not half as funny as the honourable gentleman telling us; if only the Government had spent a little more money to raise the level and standards of public services. Does he think this is an improvement? I got the impression that we should be ashamed of ourselves for not having spent money to raise the level and standard of public services.

MR. HOLLÉTT: So you should.

MR. SMALLWOOD: In spite of twenty-seven and a half million.

MR. HOLLÉTT: Where has it gone?

MR. SMALLWOOD: The travelling clinic included a dentist as well as a doctor. He did over a thousand dental cases last season—That is our travelling clinic in White Bay, that costs cash, money. In 1951 this Government arranged to build a nursing station in LaScie, and the honourable member for White Bay stopped it, put his foot down, gave it a flat no, would not have it, kicked up murder, roared and bawled and slammed desks—no, he was not going to have it in LaScie. We said, all right, you should know what the district wants and needs. You should know. We won't put it there. But we had all arrangements made to build it when he said no. We were not going to build it in spite of him, so we did not build it.

Mr. Speaker, in connection with the member for White Bay, when I stated a moment ago that more hospital bills had been abated and completely forgiven or greatly reduced for patients of White Bay than any other district, we have not a single instance of the honourable member ever asking for one abatement or one forgiveness. It was done without his ever asking for it. He never once asked to have the hospital bills of a patient from White Bay reduced or abolished or wiped out, not once in the five years he has been there. Yet we have abated or forgiven more hospital bills from White Bay than from any other district in Newfoundland, but no thanks to the honourable member for the district.
We have provided in White Bay District snowmobile trails. There are more snowmobile trails and snowmobiles operating in White Bay than in its history. I admit that is not saying a great deal. They are fairly recent, more snowmobile trails and snowmobiles. We have begun the building of roads, a road extending from St. Anthony around to Corner Brook coming around the other way.

We have announced that in two, three of four years maybe—we are not too precise—we have learned it costs a lot more to build roads and it takes a lot longer than we thought it would take. We have learned there are tremendous difficulties in the way of road building in Newfoundland which we did not know about five years ago. In the light of this discovery we will not be pinned down, consequently we are saying that within the next three or four or five years the residents of St. Anthony will be able to get aboard a car and drive to St. John's, Corner Brook, Grand Falls or Gander and from these points on down to St. Anthony. I doubt if anyone now living in Newfoundland will live long enough to see roads built up through White Bay, through the bulk of that long stretch of coast up in the bay, because of the completely mountainous character of the coast.

Mr. Speaker, the Honourable Leader of the Opposition stated that the delegation went from Newfoundland to Ottawa to negotiate and sign the Terms of Union they were negligent in their duty. They failed to provide that the Terms of Union would give us sufficient income, sufficient financial assistance from Ottawa to enable us to do these things. He went on to say that this term in the Terms of Union is the proof of it, and the need to appoint the committee or commission of investigation by the present Bill is the proof of the failure of the delegations. It is the exact opposite. The truth is exactly opposite to what he said. Here were the delegates in Ottawa. They were not immortal men, they were just mortal men. They could no more foresee the financial consequences of Confederation to Newfoundland than they can see now at this moment—I was one of them—no more than they can see now at this moment precisely what will be the financial consequences of so far away and remote an event as that which is now going on in Indo-China.

I confess here now that perhaps I ought to be ashamed to confess, I do not know just what effect will be had upon the finances of Newfoundland by the events that are going on in Indo-China. I don't know at this moment precisely what will be the financial consequences of so far away and remote an event as that which is now going on in Indo-China. I don't know what the consequences will be to our finances five years from now of what is going on in the United States today nor going on in Europe, these world affairs, these interesting events, I don't know. Now maybe the Leader of the Opposition does. But I don't know, and I admit it. Certainly Sir Albert Walsh who is now the Chief Justice of Newfoundland and Mr. J. B. McEvoy and Mr. Philip Gruchy of the AND Company at Grand Falls, one of our great companies, and he was one of our great industrialists, and the others of us, all of us who were on that delegation negotiating the Terms of Union, we confess quite frankly without any shame that we could not look ahead and tell with sufficient accuracy what would be the financial consequences of Confederation to Newfoundland. We admitted that. We were not ashamed to do that. That was an honest admission. I will go further and say, there was no man alive on the earth seven years ago, when this was done, he did not wear shoe leather, did not have human forms in this world, who could look forward then six or seven years ago, look ahead to tonight, and tell what would be the financial consequences to Newfoundland of joining up with Canada. There was no human being on earth who could foresee that. If he said he could he was a liar or a fool or a bluff, or just a simple jackass. We admitted that. But we did a little more than that about it, we said as we cannot foresee just what the results will be, we cannot let it go at that. We have to do something about it. There was only one thing you could do about it and that was to provide for a second look, a later look, a second and later look. Well, we said, let us take a period of eight years, not later than eight years after Confederation. So we provided in the Terms of Confederation, and this is one of the terms, that eight years after Confederation a Royal Commission would be appointed to look at the situation freshly after the events had occurred, not try to forecast but look at events after the events had happened and not attempt to make a forecast. Now that was wise. That was not stupid. That was wise. That was a prudent thing to do, a farsighted thing to do. The inclusion of that clause in the Terms of Union is evidence not of our stupidity but of our brightness. It was evidence not of our neglect but of our great care for the future of Newfoundland. That clause is a credit to us and not a discredit.

Now the eight years are within three years of being up, five years of it are now up. So that means that within the next three years the Royal Commission must sit. Now what should Newfoundland do? What is the best thing to do? The honourable member of the Opposition thinks the Government, the Cabinet Ministers, should prepare this case. Personally and speaking for myself, and being a little bit boastful and conceited in this matter, I believe surely that I would do as good a job as my honourable colleague the member for Harbour Main-Bell Island, I virtually believe I would do as good a job as Mr. Philip Gruchy and as Mr. Albert Perlin and as Mr. Gerald Doyle, I believe I would. I believe that the honourable gentleman who is Minister of Public Welfare, my colleague here on my immediate left would do just as good a job as either one. I believe the Honourable Minister of Fisheries and Cooperatives would do just as good a job as any of us. But we are too busy. That is one reason not to do it. We are too busy. We have Newfoundland to run in the meantime. We have many, many problems to grapple with, and we work late into the night, very long hours grappling with ordinary day to day problems, which is not just a matter of getting up in this House and gassing, getting up and talking—Good Heavens! we could do that until the crack of doom. We could do that all year around and never close here, every afternoon, every week-day, keep going just gabbing and talking. That is not governing, that is not managing Newfoundland, that is not administering the affairs of the Province. That is easy. That is just gas. That is just wind.

MR. HOLLETT: Hot air.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Hot air, and some of it is foul wind, foul air, depending on what side it flows from. That is cheap, cheap, talk is very cheap. This Government is a government of workers. But that laugh, especially in the way it is expressed, is fitting commentary seeing where it came from.

MR. HOLLETT: That is a good point.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Especially that sneer of a laugh. We are too busy. They say that if you want a thing done give it to a busy man to do. Suppose we decided that busy as we are nevertheless we will do it. Suppose we have done that. What will be the charge laid against me? I will tell you, the charge laid against me promptly by the Opposition would be that I was selling Newfoundland short, that I was pulling my punches, that I was not prepared to fight for better terms. That is what they would have said. Can you imagine them now—the arguments they would have used—Why this fellow Smallwood, sure, is not the same one that advocated Confederation and was on both delegations that went to Ottawa? Wh., do you think for one minute that he is going to admit the Terms were not good enough? Do you think he is going to fight St. Laurent. I know the Leader of the Opposition does not like Mr. Perlin, for instance, I know he sneers at him every chance he gets.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, to a point of order.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I have heard the honourable gentleman do it in this Chamber.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, I am going to have the Honourable the Premier take back that statement. I have never said nor indicated that I do not like Mr. Perlin nor anybody else.

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, I will not take it back. I have heard the honourable gentleman not once but several times in this very Chamber refer to Mr. Perlin as Wayfarer and sneer at him, several times, at least on three different times.

MR. SPEAKER: Order—I don’t think the remark should have been made in the debate. There is no earthly way to decide the honourable member’s opinion of a private citizen. I don’t think an opinion on such a subject ought to be expressed or attributed to another honourable member.
MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, to a point or order—is the Honourable the Premier going to take back the words—I said I disliked Mr. Perlin?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I did not say he said he disliked him.

MR. HOLLETT: What did you say?

MR. SMALLWOOD: The honourable gentleman must be getting deaf, and not only deaf—

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, I want to know whether a person is allowed to pass an opinion from me on somebody else and say I disliked somebody—He said he knows I dislike Mr. Perlin. How?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I heard the honourable gentleman say so.

MR. HOLLETT: You heard no such thing, and I want that taken back.

MR. SMALLWOOD: What is this, a frosty Friday? I am to take back what I heard the honourable gentleman say with these good ears?

MR. SPEAKER: I suggest honourable members drop the subject.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, that is not taking it back.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I am not taking it back.

MR. HOLLETT: Every time you get up I will rise to a point of order until it is taken back.

MR. SPEAKER: Order. I said to the honourable members today, when a point of order is made, with a sense of decency and decorum please allow the Chair to express an opinion. If honourable members talk back and forth it will usually be followed by threats—"You will do this." "I won't do that." I do not think that expressions regarding private citizens should be attributed to an honourable member. I have not the faintest idea who is liked or disliked by the honourable member and for that matter personally I care very little about it. So I suggest, for the sake of decorum, the subject be dropped as mention of the names contained in this Bill is concerned.

MR. HOLLETT: Thank you for your ruling, Mr. Speaker.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Now, Mr. Speaker, I won't detain the House very much more on this matter. I repeat what I said at the outset. I welcome the change in the Leader of the Opposition between the time before dinner and after dinner. Before dinner he took quite a dim view and since dinner, has spoken very well of it. I welcome the change and I welcome his support of the statement I made in the House here the other day, that it is the deliberate policy of the Government to raise the level and standard of public services so that when the Royal Commission is finally appointed and comes to review our state of affairs they will have levels and standards of public services to use as a yardstick that are considerably higher than they are today and considerably higher than they were two or three years ago. That is the point I advocated. The honourable gentleman tonight, in his own words, has advocated precisely the same point—so at last we are in agreement, the Government on one side and the Opposition on the other are in agreement on this one point in view of the fact that in a year or two from now a Royal Commission will be assessing our whole position, reviewing our situation it is a good policy to raise and to keep raising and continuously raising the levels and standards of our public services so that they will have a satisfactory yardstick from our standpoint by which to assess the amount of additional financial assistance they will see we need to enable us to carry on at these levels and standards of public services without imposing a taxation more burdensome, having regard to the capacity to pay; than that obtaining generally in the region comprising the Maritime Provinces of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island.

If the honourable gentleman has said nothing else I welcome that, and I congratulate him for saying it. He is absolutely one hundred per cent right. Tonight is the first time he said it, and I welcome his remarks all the more on that account.

On motion Bill read a second time, ordered referred to a Committee of the Whole House on tomorrow.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I move that the House go into Committee of the Whole on Nos. 16, 18, 21, 22 and 23.

MR. SPEAKER: Committee of the Whole on certain Bills—The House has given leave for those Bills to be deferred to a later hour this day.

Mr. Courage, Chairman of Committees in the Chair.

Clause 1, 2, 3 read and carried.

Clause 4:

MR. HIGGINS: Mr. Chairman, sub-section 4—As that section now stands, I refer to the second last line, the name of the licensee disqualified or whose license has been suspended and all other particulars as to disqualification or suspension. I insist, Mr. Chairman, the insertion of the name, which I presume would be preceded by a general statement that herewith appear the names of people who have been convicted of drunken driving or and impaired driving, would be sufficient, without setting out any further details, and without setting out that the gentleman is no longer permitted to go in any club or tavern or anything else.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is my understanding exactly.

MR. HIGGINS: I know it is. But I don't know whether what the honourable gentleman says ought to be the case is in fact the case.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is my understanding.

MR. HIGGINS: That is fine.

MR. BROWNE: This afternoon, if I may be permitted to refer to a reply of the Honourable Minister of Public Works, he stated that he was following precedent adopted by other provinces. I wonder if the Premier, who seems to be in charge of the Bill might be in a position to say what other provinces have adopted this style of publishing the names of people so convicted?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I don't believe I am.

MR. BROWNE: I don't believe anyone has. I have never seen at any time in any paper coming here from any one of the other provinces, and I doubt if there is—there might be, but I have not seen it. Of course I have not seen all the papers recently, but I have never heard of it, and it seems to me to be an insidious thing to be doing. If you are going to publish the names of all persons convicted of infamous crimes in the country it would be a long list, but here you are picking out three sections of the Criminal Code. Now the Minister did give as a reason that several persons, one or two cases, I think he said, I don't think it went beyond that, have been noticed driving their vehicles after their license had been taken away. It seems to me, Mr. Chairman, that is not sufficient justification for publishing the names of every person.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Chairman, I think the honourable gentleman is completely out of order now debating the second reading debate and the principle.

MR. CHAIRMAN: It is very difficult to define the principle. I really find it difficult to define the principle. There are several principles involved here. I think the honourable member might continue without repeating what was said. We are dealing with this particular section here.

MR. BROWNE: I want to draw the attention of the Minister to the previous Act. We are picking three sections of the six or seven hundred in the Criminal Code and publishing the names of the offenders against these particular sections. I don't see why they are picked out especially. If the reason is that because one or two persons have driven their cars without a license, even then I say it is not right.

MR. BROWNE: No, now look, Mr. Chairman, the Premier, I know, is very excited tonight.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Order. I have seen the honourable gentleman fit to be tied in a straight jacket, with foam flying out of his lips and sparks from his eyes.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Order—This debate is out of order.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, we are considering here a clause in the Bill. If I happen to repeat something repeated earlier today, surely that is not going to stand in the way of trying to get a sensible provision in the law dealing with highway traffic. Now I suggested to the Premier that it is insidious to publish the names of persons who have broken one of these three sections of the Criminal Code and leave all the rest of the Criminal Code violaters of the other sections without having their names published.

MR. SMALLWOOD: If that principle was not adopted what did we adopt in second reading?
MR. BROWNE: We have—You can unadopt it again.

MR. SMALLWOOD: We don't have to again in Committee—It has been adopted.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, surely when considering the particular section we are allowed to talk about the section involved.

MR. CHAIRMAN: I gave a ruling on that—I find it difficult to pick out of any specific clause there. There are two or three different matters under consideration in this Bill, as far as I can see.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Chairman, I would insist that honourable members do not go over what was said in second reading.

MR. HOLLETT: I would like to keep on this section, Mr. Chairman. I am opposed to this section. I have given it a lot of thought since it has been passed to us this afternoon. Now if a man is convicted of drunken driving or impaired driving under the Act he has undoubtedly injured himself, and may have injured somebody with whom he collided. But the people he hurts most are those most closely related to him, his family and friends. He is probably a man who is over-addicted to alcoholic liquor and cannot control his drinking.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Chairman, to a point of order—I must insist, Your Honour, that this afternoon this House, not this Committee but this House adopted certain principles in this Bill. That is why we are now in Committee to deal with details such as—Should it be two instead of one newspaper, or three, but not to debate over again the principle of whether or not the names shall be published. If that is so what is the point of having second reading debate and Committee of the Whole debate? What is the sense of those two if a member of the House may do those things in Committee that he did as a member of the House on second reading? What is the difference between Committee of the Whole and second reading? This clause, if it means anything, means that in principle the names shall be published. Now what are the details that may be debated (i) That the names shall not be published in the “Newfoundland Gazette” but that it should be the “Evening Telegram.” That it should not be a weekly but a daily newspaper? But not that it shall not be published. Surely that principle was adopted at second reading.

MR. CHAIRMAN: The point is, if there were only one principle in that Bill—

MR. SMALLWOOD: Is there anything to prevent two or three principles being stated in a Bill and adopted?

MR. CHAIRMAN: It is very difficult.

MR. SMALLWOOD: They are detailed here in Section 2. What principle is there other than the principle that offenders names, on conviction shall be published? That is the principle of that clause. There are other clauses with other principles, all of which were adopted at second reading. At the moment we are on the clause the principle of which was adopted. Now are we in order to debate anything other than the details of that clause and not the principle?

MR. CHAIRMAN: It is pretty difficult to define the principle of this Bill.
MR. SMALLWOOD: Would Your Honour rule as to whether a Bill may contain more than one principle?

MR. CHAIRMAN: I think this does definitely contain more than one.

MR. SMALLWOOD: May they all be adopted at second reading, leaving it unlawful to debate them in Committee of the Whole?

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, if I may, in order to get around that knotty question — may I offer this amendment to this Bill — That sub-clause 4 of Clause 2 of this Bill be stricken out, and may I speak on that amendment?

MR. CHAIRMAN: I am trying to point out that the principle of this Bill is very difficult because the Bill seems to cover several other things apart from this particular clause now under consideration. But I might be inclined to think that this might boil down to certain most important clauses in the Bill. The point is, if that clause were stricken out would the Bill then stand, would there be anything left in the Bill, or do the other clauses depend on that?

MR. HIGGINS: Mr. Chairman, this particular clause has no reference whatsoever to other amendments here, absolutely none. This clause refers to the Criminal Code. The other clauses refer to civil liability. With the exception of one clause which refers to the Criminal Code and also one to the unsatisfied judgement fund, I believe.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Chairman, on that point — This clause states a principle. The House of Assembly adopted that principle in second reading of this Bill. I hold it is out of order in Committee of the Whole to strike out a principle adopted in second reading. I just ask Your Honour to rule on that — Put it to a vote and see.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, may I speak to that argument?

The Premier has just asked your ruling on this point, that we are not allowed to amend any clause in the Bill already passed.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I did not. I said to strike out a principle passed in second reading.

MR. BROWNE: This is an amending Bill, amending the Highway Traffic Act which has 123 sections, and which involves different features connected with the use of motor vehicles their operation, offenses committed by persons using them etc. It so happens that this Criminal Code provision also deals with offenders using motor vehicles. Therefore there are two Acts which have to be dovetailed in together in order to get at this particular section here.

I think the question of principle arose when I spoke about the novelty of this type of thing for which no precedent has been quoted. Certainly, Mr. Chairman, I might submit, with all due deference, it is open to any member to move an amendment in Committee.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It is not in order to move an amendment to change a principle in a Bill adopted at second reading. I hold, Mr. Chairman, it can neither be put nor carried and if it is done it is illegal.

MR. CHAIRMAN: There are some Bills where it is extremely difficult and others where it is easy to define the principle of the Bill. We had before us in Committee today some Bills on which it was extremely easy to define the principle, for instance, “An Act to Amend the Alcoholic Liquors Act” or “An Act to Amend the Shipbuilding (Bounties) Act” but this puts me in a very difficult position because this Bill covers several matters; publishing the names of licensees when disqualified the moving and detention of motor vehicles when the owner or driver is arrested is another, and that the Minister may recover cost of removal and detention is still another, the protection of Minister, constables and officers is another; suspension of license on notice to Minister of action. It does seem to me in looking over this Bill that these clauses are independent of one another. Therefore it is very difficult for me to find just what is the principle of the Bill. Would the Bill stand if this were stricken out? I mean, every clause is not necessarily a principle although there might be a principle in every clause. It puts the Chairman in an extremely difficult position when honourable members cannot decide what is the principle and throws it on him to decide.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, may I say I read through this Bill and found fifteen or sixteen different principles, as you call them, there. And you will find the principle in that one section is one I am opposed to. I would like to move an amendment.

MR. CHAIRMAN: What is that?

MR. HOLLETT: If you look at sub-clause (3) Where a license has been delivered to the court under sub-section (1) and the court has not disqualified the licensee from holding or obtaining a driver's license, or the court has not disqualified the licensee from holding or obtaining a driver's license but the Minister has, after receiving the report forwarded to him by the court under sub-section (3), disqualified the licensee from holding or obtaining a driver's license, and where a license has been suspended under Section 91 the Minister shall publish or cause to be published”—That is the particular part that I object to, and I would like to give my grounds for objecting, and I thus move an amendment.

MR. CHAIRMAN: I would like to read out from Page 45 of our Standing Orders: “A Committee can negative every clause in a Bill and substitute new clauses provided they are relevant to the Bill as read a second time, for the Committee has no power to reverse the principle of the Bill even though they may nullify the provision of the Bill.”

In speaking of the principle of the Bill, and not the principle of the clause now, I would think this Bill has a very broad principle; that the Highway Traffic Act be amended. I can’t see that this clause we are discussing now, Section 2, although it may be of some great importance—I can’t read that into principle, I am afraid I have to support—

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Chairman, before you accept the amendment—
Before His Honour accepts the amendment—

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, has assented to the amendment.

MR. CHAIRMAN: The Honourable the Premier has the floor.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Chairman, I wish to speak to whether the Chair should accept the amendment or not. I wish to point out that if the amendment is accepted and the second clause is struck out the first clause is left in mid-air and serves no purpose. The whole purpose of the first part is to serve the second part in that it says the magistrate or the judge shall forward to the Minister the information that John Jones has been convicted of this or that and the Minister may publish the fact. That is the whole purpose of the clause. Strike out the second part of it and why does the judge or the court notify the Minister? It destroys the principle of the thing. Anyway let us have a vote on it.

MR. CHAIRMAN: If that were the whole clause I could not accept. But there are other clauses which still can stand by themselves, therefore I must accept.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Chairman, I move against your ruling so that it would be referred to Mr. Speaker—Then I do so.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Does the Honourable the Premier wish to refer the matter now?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, now Mr. Chairman, to the Speaker. It will be on a vote of the House then. In that case I will have to ask the Committee to rise.

Motion carried.

MR. COURAGE: Mr. Speaker, during the deliberations of the Committee of the Whole a question came up as to whether the Chairman was justified in accepting an amendment to Clause 2 of the Bill "An Act Further to Amend the Highway Traffic Act." The amendment was to sub-clause 4. Believe me, Mr. Speaker, the Chairman found it very difficult to define just what was the particular principle of this Bill since it dealt with several matters; and was inclined to the belief that the principle of the Bill was that it was an Act to change the Highway Traffic Act. He was of the opinion that Clause 2 was merely one clause, and that if it were removed in part or in whole the Bill would still change the Highway Traffic Act. The Premier thereupon moved that the Committee rise and refer the matter to the House, as he disagreed with the Chairman's ruling.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I would like to state my grounds for disagreement. This afternoon the House adopted the principle or principles enunciated in the Bill, "An Act Further to Amend the Highway Traffic Act." Without division the House adopted the principle or principles of this Bill and permission was given the Committee of the Whole to meet on this Bill at a later hour this day, and we are meeting on it here tonight.

A dispute arose Your Honour, as to whether a member of the Committee of the Whole might debate the matter, the principle, the question whether or not names should be published, the principle contained in Clause 2 of this Bill. I objected on the grounds that that was discussing the principle which had been adopted.
As the Honourable Chairman of the Committee has pointed out, there were several principles in the Bill, and I asked the question—Did that invalidate the general rule that principle or principles when adopted in second reading could not then be debated in Committee of the Whole and still less be stricken out by an amendment. The Honourable Leader of the Opposition submitted an amendment to Clause 2, which amendment was to strike out sub-clause 4, and His Honour the Chairman accepted that amendment. I objected on the grounds that it struck out a principle in the Bill, if not the only principle, a main principle, that is what the names of offenders should be published in the press. His Honour said he would accept the amendment. At that point I asked if he would refer it to Your Honour, the Speaker of the House.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, if I may, I would make note of this fact—The principle of every Bill that is passed in this House is passed in second reading as this one was, with objections or without it is immaterial, it passed second reading. That, surely Sir, does not offset the possibility of some particular section or part of some particular section in any Bill being amended or that a request or motion be made that it be amended.

In this Bill, Sir, there are many items which might be regarded as the principle of the Bill. As a matter of fact, even the first section of sub-clause (2) may be regarded as a principle. I do not like sub-clause (4) of Section (2) and moved that it be stricken out. Mr. Chairman accepted my amendment, which was objected to by His Honour the Premier.

HON. M. P. MURRAY (Minister of Provincial Affairs): Mr. Speaker, as I see it, there seems to be only one point at issue. It is a completely settled rule of procedure that matters of principle cannot be amended in Committee. In this case it happens not to be one but four or five are contained in the Bill. That does not modify the rule. That rule still stands; matters of principle cannot be changed or debated in Committee.

MR. BROWNE: It is not easy to get a precedent exactly the same as this. But, Mr. Speaker, I have here, if I may refer to it, Beauchesne, 3rd edition, page 568 where it is stated:

"Any amendment can be made to a Bill in Committee of the Whole provided it is relevant to the subject matter of the Bill, or pursuant to instructions.

The Orders of the Day being read for the second reading of the Bill Further to Amend the General Acts Respecting Railways:

The Bill was accordingly read a second time and committed to a Committee of the Whole House.

The House resolved itself into the said Committee, and after some time spent therein, Mr. Speaker resumed the Chair, and Mr. Young reported that the Committee wished to be instructed by the House, whether it was allowable for an honourable member to move that the following section be added to the fourth section of the Bill: "All goods, wares, merchandise, commodities and supplies of every kind required for the use or purpose of any Government railway for a greater amount than $1,000 shall be purchased only upon public tender and contract."

"It was in respect to that amendment two points of order has been made. The first was that it was not relevant to the Bill and could not be properly moved in the Committee; secondly, that the amendment imposed a burden, and should have been first originated by a Resolution in a Comnitee of the Whole.

Whereupon the House proceeded to take the same into consideration, and Mr. Speaker having been requested to state his opinion said:

"With respect to the first objection,
I have to say that there is no doubt that it is perfectly legitimate to make, in Committee, an amendment to a clause, provided it is relevant to the subject matter of a Bill, or pursuant to instructions; but if any such amendment shall not be within the Title of the Bill then the Committee must amend the Title accordingly'."

MR. SMALLWOOD: And provided it does not violate another principle of parliamentary practice and procedure.

MR. FORSEY: Mr. Speaker, this afternoon in second reading we discussed the same matter that is being discussed tonight. We were then discussing the principle because if we had discussed it as clauses we would have been completely out of order.
In as much as we were in order this afternoon in discussing the principle and consequently passing the principle, I hold they will remain as principles and cannot be nullified by this Committee.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Your Honour may I make two other points (I) that the Committee of the Whole would have been in order to amend Clause 2 to provide that the names of offenders be published in other, than in two, newspapers, which I think is provided, or in ten rather than in two; that instead of being published in “The Newfoundland Gazette” the names be published in the “Sunday Herald” or in “The Evening Telegram” or in “The Newfoundland Quarterly.” But to say that they shall not be published, and to pass an amendment that the names shall not be published is simply to destroy by amendment in Committee a principle which was adopted at second reading. That is my first point.

My second point is this: Your Honour, if His Honour the Chairman who is learned in the law and learned in parliamentary procedure, in the heat and excitement of debate was not able to devote his mind and time to a study of the situation, Your Honour may be in the same position. If Your Honour should prefer to take time to read up again afresh on the authorities I am sure the whole House will be content with that. Because, Mr. Speaker, it is the first time this has happened in the time, so let us be sure that we are doing right—I can at least read the rules and spell them.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker,
may I agree I also can read and can spell, but we don’t always insist on having our rulings enforced in this House.

MR. SPEAKER: Order—That has no bearing on the question at all.

MR. HOLLETT: I might point out, Mr. Speaker, that in addition to this particular one there are other parts, principles if you like, such as one concerning the removal and detention of vehicles and one for the Minister to recover the cost. There is one for a special license by the Minister on notice of accident, and so it goes on. There are various things involved there, Sir, and surely to good-cross the mere passing of this in principle on second reading, with or without objections from the Opposition, does not mean surely that a person may not offer an amendment to any particular section. I never heard the like before.

MR. HIGGINS: Mr. Speaker, I regard his point as one of some importance. I have not been in the House for the past five years, but for the first time in the past three a debate like this has arisen. The principles involved are important, and the decision is an important one. I must say for one I am very much of the Premier's mind when he says he regards this as a matter of sufficient importance not to call for perhaps a snap decision. There have been certain opinions expressed here which seem to be certainly at wide variance. I know for my own part I would be very much obliged, Sir, if you would give us a consideration ruling on the matter.

MR. SPEAKER: I thank the honourable members for the means of saving face which has been offered to me. I might say at the beginning I do not look upon myself as anything nearly approaching an authority on parliamentary procedure, insofar as Committees of the Whole are concerned. That does not mean by inference I consider myself an authority on ordinary procedure of the House. I could take a very easy way out and refer to a precedent quoted by the honourable and learned member for St. John's West. But the point is, that an amendment was offered and ruled on while the Speaker was not in the Chair. It is a rule of parliament, and I think we should hesitate before we break it, that when an objection is taken to a decision of the Chair in Committee that it is properly referred to the decision of the House with Mr. Speaker in the Chair.

From that it follows that we could submit this question to the House and have a snap decision. If the House wishes, I would for my part prefer, to take time to study the questions and give a considered opinion.

I will say this first: My recollection is that any amendment may be offered in Committee of the Whole on a Bill but may not be accepted if it calls into question a principle which has been adopted by the House because the Committee is the creature of the House and the creature is not equal to or greater than the creator. The whole thing seems to hinge on this question as it follows after sub-clause (b) Is that a declaration of principle? I would like the House to correct me if I am incorrectly quoting, because it would be very important.

At second reading today I heard this matter of the publishing of names of offenders—I heard it referred to as a new departure applicable alone in this section.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, that is correct. I was the one who used that expression. That is correct. I singled out that particular section as being something new—We were dealing with that particular clause in Committee.

MR. SPEAKER: I wish to call the attention of the House at this point to this: If an honourable member wishes to offer an amendment, which, shall I say he feels will not be accepted, he can achieve his point by asking the mover if he would consider this or that as an amendment. Failing this, he could show his disapproval of the clause by voting against it in Committee. It would of course be impossible for the Opposition to carry an amendment unless the Government agreed, otherwise they would have to have a majority.

I would prefer not to give a hard and fast ruling until I have had time to read more authorities than I have heard tonight. I would suggest then to the House that it might be possible to carry on with further parts of the Bill or consider other matters.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, Your Honour. Perhaps it would suit Your Honour’s convenience and the convenience of the whole House if we now took a short recess and resumed with Your Honour in the Chair, and then move back into Committee of the Whole.

On motion the House recessed for ten minutes.

Pursuant to recess Mr. Speaker returned to the Chair:

MR. SPEAKER: The question before the Chair when we recessed is resumed. Since I have left the Chamber I have spoken to no honourable member of this House. I feel that I am in a position, if the House wishes me to do so, to make a ruling on the question.

First I would like to be sure the House wishes to decide the question, which it has power to do. Similarly the ruling which I make may be appealed to the House and upset by the House, or whether it will ask for and accept a ruling which I might give.

MR. COURAGE: Mr. Speaker, on that point—is it customary for Mr. Speaker to give rulings on such matters?—But I think Your Honour mentioned that point.

MR. SPEAKER: In view of that I will not give the ruling unless I have leave of the House.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, as the one who has raised the matter I concur, Sir, completely in Your Honour’s action. If Your Honour wishes to give a ruling it will be very acceptable to me.

MR. SPEAKER: It seems to me the whole point hinges on the question: is the declaration of this clause an intrinsic principle of the Bill or not? Now I find that the first thing that came into my mind was something that Sir Thomas Moore had said—No committee can destroy a public Bill—I may point out a Committee is bound by the decision of the House given on second reading in favour of the Bill and should not therefore amend the Bill in a manner destructive of its principle. While the Committee cannot negative a Bill by amendment it can do so by voting out clauses which the Minister in charge of the Bill would then withdraw.

“It is not in order,” says May, “to leave out a clause as the proper course is to vote against that clause.” “Consequently it is out of order,” he said; “to leave out the only effective words of a clause, the words upon which the rest of the clause is dependent, nor to offer any other amendment which is equivalent to a direct negating of the clause.”

It seems to me from that to be clear that if a member objects to a clause in the Bill he may speak against it in the hope of winning converts to his point of view and when the question is put to the Chair as many as are of his opinion would vote against it. Therefore I do not think the amendment would be applied. The question as I see it is that this is a principle of the Bill agreed on in second reading.

In addition to "May," "Beauchesne" also states; "An amendment may not be accepted which is at variance with the principle of the Bill as passed at second reading." "May" goes into greater detail on that.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, there is just one point I would like to make. The reason why the amendment was made, Mr. Speaker, was that we were not allowed to discuss the section and give our opinions relative to a point which might afterwards be taken. The Honourable the Premier objected and said we were talking about the principle of the Bill because we objected to this particular clause about putting a man's name in the paper, and we were forbidden to discuss that hence we made the amendment, so we might discuss and talk about that section and give our reasons for objections. That is all we want.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I accept your ruling. It seems to me Your Honour rules this could not be done because the principle was carried—it is because this is the principle and the principle cannot be debated in Committee.

MR. HOLLETT: There are a dozen principles in this Bill.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Neither one of which can be debated at Committee stage nor amended.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, may I suggest that the most contentious clause in this Bill is this sub-clause (4) and it involves several different considerations. It involves where the court has disqualified a licensee from holding a driver's license and where a court has not disqualified the licensee but the Minister has disqualified him, and it also involves where a license has been suspended under another section of the Highway Traffic Act. Then it involves, as the Premier himself drew attention to, the publication in certain newspapers including the Newfoundland Gazette. The Premier himself said we might discuss details of that kind, then objects so strenuously that the only alternative seemed to me to be to move an amendment.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I don't like to be misquoted. The only reference I made to publication beyond stating the principle of the clause was the fact the names of offenders were to be published after a certain procedure. The only reference I made to publication was when I said it would be in order in Committee of the Whole to debate whether it should be in 1, 2, 3 or ten weekly, daily or quarterly or monthly papers but that the point as to whether or not the names would be published was not debatable because that point had been adopted in second reading. Now don't misquote me otherwise—that is what I said and the whole House remembers it.

I move, Mr. Speaker, that the ruling of His Honour the Speaker is accepted by this House.

MR. HOLLETT: There is no need—we accept it gladly.

On motion carried.

MR. SMALLWOOD: We will now go into Committee of the Whole, Mr. Speaker, on the same Bills as before.
"An Act to Amend the Highway Traffic Act":

MR. HOLLETT: I move, Mr. Chairman, on Clause 2, an amendment that the words after "Newfoundland Gazette"—"and in at least one newspaper circulated in the area in which the licensee resides" be stricken out. Also in the second last line the words: "and all other particulars as to the disqualification or suspension that he deems fit."

I make that as an amendment and would like to speak to that, Mr. Chairman. The amendment made previously was that the whole clause be stricken out. I am asking now that certain words be stricken out.

The reason I make that amendment, Sir, as I wished to state in the first instance, is that although this is under the Highway Traffic Act it has to do with offenses under the Alcoholic Liquors Act, and as I was about to say; there are persons who will be greatly injured, the relatives of the persons who have broken or violated one of these sections, the wife or children or the parents and the immediate friends of the individual who has the misfortune to go before the court for such an offense. Now I don't want anybody to get it in mind that I feel because a man takes one too many and has an accident that he has committed any unpardonable crime, but it would almost indicate from this particular section as it reads before these words have been stricken out that he has done something for which he ought to be hanged really. If he smells of liquor and has an accident he not only loses his license, he is not only disqualified but a report is made to the Minister and the Minister may order that his name therefore be published in the Newfoundland Gazette and at least one other newspaper together with particulars of the offence which he has committed.

Now, Sir, the Minister gave us his reason for that. It is a very good reason in many respects. But it is one that I can't say I agree with. What this section would mean if a man's name and the particulars as to the offense were to be published in the Gazette and in at least one newspaper is that it would make every man an informer on his neighbour—"There goes John Jones—his name was in the paper yesterday. He is going up in his car now. I am going back to call the police. There is John Jones, whose name is in the paper for committing an offense, gone up in his car now—Get the police after him quickly." In other words making people who otherwise would not—

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, to a point of order: The honourable gentleman is now arguing the principle as to whether the name should be published. That is exactly what the honourable gentleman is arguing—it would be a hardship on the family of the man whose name is published, etc. Mr. Chairman, that is out of order, I hold.

MR. CHAIRMAN: I understand that he was discussing the amendment. "... and in at least one newspaper circulated in the area in which the licensee resides." I thought the Honourable Leader of the Opposition was developing the theme of the hardship if the name is published in the newspaper—Certainly that it should be published in the Newfoundland Gazette, the honourable gentleman cannot argue.

MR. HOLLETT: Thank you, Sir.
The newspaper is something which everyone reads particularly in St. John’s, Grand Falls or Corner Brook or any industrial area. And whilst we know a man deserves punishment for committing an offense of that nature he should not have the public and his friends and relatives see that his name is published as being a man who committed an offense under the Highway Traffic Act or the Alcoholic Liquor Act. I feel it is bad enough to put it in the “Newfoundland Gazette” but to put it in a newspaper I don’t think is in the best interest and certainly is not in the best interest of his poor relatives who, God knows, are the ones that suffer most.

MR. SMALLWOOD: To a point of order, Mr. Chairman: I must insist, I am sorry but I must insist—the point of order is that the honourable gentleman is obviously only on the principle of this clause. I hold, and I submit it to Your Honour, I hold he is not in order to move the amendment and utter such words in support as not to attack the principle of this clause. That is as clear as daylight! It is absolutely clear! He cannot by subterfuge, by pretense, by any means, and be in order, discuss the principle of publishing names. He can only discuss whether it be in this or that or the other newspaper. But in so doing he cannot argue against the publication of the names.

MR. HOLLETT: Then all I can say, according to the Premier is—

MR. CHAIRMAN: It certainly is out of order to argue against publication. I take it that the honourable member will in future confine his remarks to publication in a newspaper circulated in the area in which the licensee resides, and not publication as such in the “Newfoundland Gazette.”

MR. HOLLETT: I have said what I want to say, Mr. Chairman.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, the section in the clause as it stands is that the name of the person shall be published in the “Newfoundland Gazette” and in at least one newspaper circulated in the area in which the licensee resides. Now, Mr. Chairman, the amendment is that the publication be confined to the Newfoundland Gazette. I would like to point out that the Newfoundland Gazette has a limited circulation, and any harm which would be done by the publication in that paper would not be nearly so great as the harm that would be done by publishing a name in a newspaper. Therefore, if we have to accept publication, and I strongly recommend to the Government to reconsider this clause—I feel that many persons on the other side of the House, if they were to weigh up the good that is to come from this publication in the newspapers against the harm that they are going to do to the individual concerned and to his family, I believe they would be satisfied to have the thing taken out altogether. Now since the Premier insists so strongly that we cannot talk about the effect of publication, I will speak of the effect of publication, if it is published in one newspaper. It can then be taken up by another and taken up by the radio, because it is a matter of public interest. Then if a man goes to look for a job after losing his license and perhaps losing his job he would be asked: “Did I not see your name in the newspaper?” Then he goes to another employer who asks: “Are you the chap whose name I saw in the newspaper?”
MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Chairman, to a point of order—Is this in order? Was the honourable gentleman discussing the principle that the name be published or not? And if they are published he might lose his job and this might happen and something else might happen. Is that debating the principle of publication or not or am I just stupid?

MR. CHAIRMAN: If he confines his remarks to a newspaper—it is a very difficult position—

MR. SMALLWOOD: It seems to me, according to parliamentary practice and procedure the honourable gentleman, if he is in order, can do very little more than move the amendment. Any discussion almost invariably involves the principle. It is not because he is moving an amendment to the clause, it therefore puts him in order when he is out of order. Therefore in moving the amendment he can do little more than move it and stand or fall by the vote. But by moving an amendment it cannot put him in order on a matter fundamentally out of order.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I was deliberately trying to confine myself to this amendment. We are opposed to the position that the publication should be extended beyond the Newfoundland Gazette which is an official Government publication, which reports proceedings of the court and reports the statutes and reports insolvencies, etc. If we are to concede it is conceivable to publish the names in that order, we deem it improper to go beyond that, and therefore we have moved that all the words in that sentence after the word "and" should be stricken out. We do not agree that they should be published in at least one newspaper. It should be "at most" one because that gives the Minister the right to publish it in all the newspapers, and newspapers are mentioned to include weekly, monthly and quarterly newspapers. Not in a magazine but in a newspaper that is circulated and will carry the details of the man's offense—his name—and that will be published before thousands of people. Now is it fair, Mr. Chairman, that the name and offense of this particular individual should be published in the newspapers?

MR. SMALLWOOD: To a point of order—Is that debating the principle—That his name should be published—That was all settled at second reading. Am I the only one in the House, Mr. Chairman, whose duty it is to draw your attention to that—I am not the Chairman.

MR. BROWNE: No.

MR. CHAIRMAN: I must sustain that point of order. It seems the honourable member was referring to publication.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Chairman, may I suggest that honourable members of the House who throw up the opportunity to debate a Bill at second reading cannot then resurrect the second reading by doing it in Committee of the Whole.

MR. BROWNE: I don't think very many members on the other side spoke on it at all. And I think the debate is due to the fact that I asked the Minister to postpone it until I got an opportunity to debate it.

However—circulated in the area in which the licensee resides—The Minister cannot pick a newspaper published in Corner Brook to advertise the offenses of persons committed here nor you cannot advertise in the “Humber Herald” nor the “Western Star” nor the Grand Falls “Advertiser” offenses taking place in Trepassey nor other parts of the country because the newspaper is not circulated in this particular area.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Would the Honourable Leader of the Opposition be prepared to move the amendment?

MR. HOLLETT: That the words following “Gazette” be cut out: “in at least one newspaper circulated in the area in which the licensee resides”; and following the word “suspended” in the last but one line—“and all other particulars as to the disqualification or suspension that he deems fit,” also be cut out.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Under the amendment, we now understand, all could be done is that the names might be published in the “Newfoundland Gazette.” Why not that they had been convicted—just the names?

MR. HOLLETT: No the violation of the section should be there, of course.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It does not say that—shall publish or cause to be published in the “Newfoundland Gazette” the name of the licensee disqualified or whose license has been suspended. That is how it would be if the amendment were carried, Mr. Chairman, that is clearly out of order.

MR. HOLLETT: I am perfectly satisfied to leave that there if the Premier objects to it—And all other particulars etc. I don’t like the word “other”, for instance he was found in the car drunk and had Mary Jones in the back seat.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That was stated here—the details were not to be given.

If the honourable gentleman would not include these words it would be in order.

MR. CHAIRMAN: The amendment is that these words be stricken out “and in at least one newspaper circulated in the area in which the licensee resides.”

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, that is in order.

MR. MURRAY: Mr. Chairman, I think the whole amendment of the Opposition is entirely out of order. The only one I can see is in order is the one the honourable gentleman from St. John’s East was talking about when he said that instead of saying “in at least” say “at the most” one newspaper. I think that would be in order. Otherwise I don’t think anything else could possibly be in order.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, may I rise to a point of order—The amendment was accepted by the Chair and we discussed it. Now my honourable friend jumps up and says it is out of order.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I understand, if the Honourable Leader of the Opposition will allow a change in his amendment and confine the amendment to “at least one” being changed to read “at most one” that seems to me to be a perfectly proper amendment.

MR. HOLLETT: The Honourable the Premier asks if I would be prepared to accept the change in his amendment and confine the amendment by striking out the words “at least one” and making it “at the most one.” The Bill is presented by the Government after due deliberation.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, we stand or fall on it—they defeat us and we go out, that is all. The Cabinet has had the matter under discussion for weeks, and we stand or fall on it.

MR. HOLLETT: I don't know that. I made the amendment and it stands. If the Government wants to vote against it then vote against it.

MR. BROWNE: I wonder if the Honourable Minister of Public Works would tell us, now that he is in the House, if there is any precedent for it in Canada?

MR. SPENCER: Mr. Chairman, in reply to the point raised by the two honourable gentlemen on the opposite side of the House this afternoon I made the statement, while it has not been done previously it is done in the Dominion of Canada. I stand behind that statement for the simple reason that we have copied the idea from one of the provinces of the Dominion of Canada. I gave reasons as to why we felt it necessary to put that clause in, and they were very clearly mentioned by me this afternoon. Possibly I would not be in order to refer to them again, and I don't want to prolong the House to that extent, but I repeat; it is the practice in the Dominion of Canada. I do not say all over the Dominion of Canada but it is the practice in some provinces to publish the names of offenders periodically. I have read them myself in the press and have called the attention of it to other members. There is no doubt in the world about that.

MR. BROWNE: What province?

MR. SPENCER: If my memory serves me right, British Columbia—I am speaking from memory.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, with the concurrence of my honourable friends opposite and the concurrence of my honourable friends here perhaps we could amend it to strike out the words "at least" which in a way was suggested by the honourable and learned member for St. John's West.

MR. BROWNE: I don't remember making that suggestion. I thought my emphasis was rather on not having it.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The honourable member did in the course of the debate.

MR. BROWNE: I did not suggest it at all. I think this is a very undesirable provision.

MR. HIGGINS: May I ask how it is proposed to publish the list—one for each individual or a list every week or month or how long does a man's name stand on the unholy roll?

MR. SPENCER: The question is very fair, Mr. Chairman, I would say, speaking from my own knowledge that one publication is all that we had in mind. It is not the intention in recommending this Bill to the House to try and make this thing any more unpleasant than the very Bill itself. To be, personally speaking, it would be rather distasteful to publish details, and if it were a matter for my discretion, if I had to run the show, I assure you very little detail would be published. That is not my intention, nor is it the intention of the Department. As a matter of fact the wording is not mine at all but comes from other legislation, and that is why the wording is there. But as far as I am concerned in the Department of Public Works there is no intention at all to publish details. To publish the names of offenders is all, and we sincercely hope we have not too many names to be published. I wonder if it is possible at this time to say a word or two to convey the reason? If that is out of order I will leave it at that.

I again repeat it is our hope that we will have very few names to be published. Unfortunately this drunk-en driving is becoming very serious to us in this province.

MR. HIGGINS: Mr. Chairman, one more question—if I may? Would the Minister advise us whether this discretion that is vested in him can be delegated to anyone else. Will it be the Minister who decides what details and particulars will be published or does he delegate this responsibility to anyone else?

MR. SPENCER: That is what the Act says—At the discretion of the Minister.

MR. CHAIRMAN: This amendment is that the words in the third line, final paragraph, Section 2 be deleted—"at least"—that these words be deleted.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I would like to say a few words about that. I don't suppose it was ever the intention of the Minister to publish in all the newspapers in the country so that is no special benefit gained by taking out that. It may be clarified a little certainly. I don't imagine that the Minister did intend to give it universal syndicate publication. I welcome what he has stated here—He is going to use some discretion in regard to this. I feel that if he is here next year he will come back and want to take it out again, because I don't think it is going to do any good.

Clause as amended carried.

Clause 3 read:

3. Section 38 of the said Act is amended by repealing paragraph (b) and substituting therefor the following:

"(b) where the licensee has been convicted of theft of a motor vehicle or of any offence under Section 285 of the Criminal Code; or"

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, what offenses are covered by Section 285 of the Criminal Code, could the Minister tell us?

MR. HIGGINS: I might, Mr. Chairman, be able to be of some assistance to the honourable gentleman—it covers drunken driving, driving while impaired by drinking, and I think failing to remain at the scene of an accident.

Clause as amended carried.

Clause 4 carried.

Clause 5 read:

5. The said Act is further amended by inserting immediately after Section 72 as Section 72A the following:

"72A—-(1) A constable, or officer appointed for carrying out the provisions of this Act, may remove to and detain at a place selected by him any motor vehicle the owner or driver of which has been arrested or any motor vehicle which has been permitted to stand upon a highway in such a position that it may cause interference with traffic.

(2) The Minister may in any court of competent jurisdiction recover as a civil debt from the owner of any motor vehicle removed from a highway under sub-section (1) the costs and expenses of the removal and detention and the costs and expenses are a lien upon the motor vehicle, which may be enforced in the manner provided by Section 31 of The Mechanics Lien Act.

'(3) No action or other legal proceeding shall be taken or brought against the Minister, constable or officer in respect of anything done under this section.'

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I wonder if we should have the word "lawful" in that last sub-clause?

Apparently officers carrying out the provisions of the Act may of course move the vehicle when needed, but there may be cases where it was not necessary to move a vehicle, and there may be some damage done to the motor vehicle when it is moved.

MR. HIGGINS: I wonder, Mr. Chairman, does that quite meet the position. Let us assume that Tom Jones is arrested some winter's night. His car is taken and put up at Fort Townsend and freezes up. Now the constable has done his duty to put the car there. He is not a mechanic and knows nothing about it, and as a result the man suffers damages. Has he no redress at all? I would like the Minister to give us some further explanation. That seems a very sweeping provision and deprives a man of his rights.

MR. SMALLWOOD: As a matter of fact I know of a case which the honourable members for Harbour Main-Bell Island are certainly acquainted with. I am personally acquainted with a case like that, and perhaps the Minister would be able to think it over.

MR. SPENCER: Mr. Chairman, as far as we are concerned the clause was very clear to us. If we find the police have to remove a vehicle for such an offense as referred to here, it is merely for the safety and to take it out of the way of somebody else. it cannot be left as an obstruction by the side of the highway. I can assure the honourable gentleman who raised the question, if we had to take a vehicle off the highway it would have to be put in safety, there is no doubt about that.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Chairman, I move we rise and report progress and ask leave to sit again.

MR. CHAIRMAN: It is agreed the clause should stand for further discussion.

MR. COURAGE: Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole have considered the matter to them referred, have made some progress and asks leave to sit again.

On motion report received—Ordered sit again tomorrow.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I move all remaining Orders of the Day do stand deferred.

Motion carried.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I move the House at its rising do adjourn until tomorrow Tuesday at 11:00 of the clock.

On motion the House adjourned until tomorrow Tuesday, June 15, at 11:00 of the clock.

Answers to Questions

HON. F. W. ROWE (Minister of Mines & Resources): Mr. Speaker, yesterday the Honourable and Learned Member for St. John's West, asked a question as to whether or not the flocks of sheep owned by the Government have been sold. The answer to that is "no."

HON. G. POWER: (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, the Honourable Member for St. John's West inquired yesterday about a question. I will have the answer this afternoon.

MR. W. J. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, some days ago I asked a question of the Minister of Economic Development — To lay on the table of the House a copy of the agreement with Chester Dawe. I have been given to understand there is another agreement that has not been tabled. I wonder if the Minister would let us have a copy?

HON J. R. SMALLWOOD (Prime Minister): If there is such a thing I will let you have it. I don't know whether there is or not, but if there is I will table it.

MR. F. FOGWILL: Mr. Speaker, there is a question I directed to the Honourable Minister of Public Works on the 6th. A similar question was tabled, I believe, in April by the Honourable Member for St. John's West. Both question were practically the same. I wonder if the answers would be forthcoming?

HON. E. S. SPENCER (Minister of Public Works): I believe the honourable gentleman refers to a question regarding the contract for public building, is that the one? Questions 71 and 98, I believe. I believe I stated in the House that has been typed, and I don't understand why I have not gotten it. Really I did not get into my office this morning nor yesterday afternoon. Maybe it is there. If it is there I will have it by tomorrow.

Giving Notice of Motion

HON. L. R. CURTIS (Attorney General): Mr. Speaker, I gave notice I will later today, with the consent of the House, or otherwise tomorrow, ask leave to introduce a Bill, "An Act to Amend the Botwood Water Corporation Act," 1952, also a Bill, "An Act to Amend the Local Government (Receivership) Act," and a Bill, "An Act Further to Amend the Summary Jurisdiction Act."

Orders of The Day

Adjourned Debate on the Budget Speech:

MR. M. HOLLETT (Leader of the Opposition): I believe, Mr. Speaker, I took as my text the other day a paragraph from page 5 of the Budget Speech which reads as follows:

"It is to the eternal credit of this Government that from the moment it came into power five years ago it was able to evade entanglement in the age-old romanticism and economic nonsense that had passed for economic policy in government circles. It is to their eternal credit that they were able to go straight as an arrow to the vital truths of economic common-sense."

I endeavoured to show, Sir, and I believe that without any doubt whatsoever that I did show clearly and plainly that the Honourable Minister must have a sort of a new idea of the words "economic common-sense." If it were such a thing that the politicians of other days indulged in what is called the age-old romanticism and economic nonsense then I venture to say that the present government and its present Finance Minister must indeed be heirs to that particular policy which he described in his famous words "age-old romanticism and economic nonsense."

Of course, Sir, when we look back into the past we find that a good many of these governments who did engage in certain policies were indeed governments elected under the name of the Liberal Party and therefore, Sir, it is only reasonable to expect the present government should have inherited some of that age-old romanticism. I have mentioned a dozen and one different cases where indeed it looks like romanticism. I spoke of the Icelandic Boats and the Seigheim Deal and many many others which indeed do not indicate that this government were about to go straight as an arrow to the vital truths of economic common-sense. As a matter of fact the Honourable the Premier himself has called some of these schemes huge flops. I ask the Honourable Minister of Finance, therefore; how, in Heaven's name can he ascribe the words common-sense to certain items of government policy when his Premier described these very things as huge flops. I say, therefore, Sir, that this government must have inherited some of that so-called romanticism and economic nonsense.

Referring to various industries, Sir, we are not condemning all these industries in their entirety. We do not see how it will be easy for some of these to survive in the present-day competition which exists in the world and particularly in this part of the world in which we are very fortunate indeed to have found ourselves. We know that competition, Sir, is the one principle which guides all economic endeavour and which dams or brings to prosperity any ventures which are made under that particular type of competition as we have, free enterprise. In a good many of these industries, Sir, ever since they were established, this government, this country, the taxpayers of this country, taxpaying people, have been making advances by the hundreds of thousands of dollars to keep the industries going. Nobody told the people of this country that that would happen in the first instance. As a matter of fact, Sir, we were told not many years ago but back in 1951 and in 1952 of many many jobs which would be forthcoming from these industries. Indeed the jobs would be so numerous that people would have to be imported and Newfoundlanders who had left this country years ago would have to be invited back from the Mainland to look after the turning of the wheels in the various industries, and that after we had absorbed all the fishermen, taking them away from the fishery, after telling them to haul up their boats and come into the new industries, after that, even after that had been taken care of, we were still to have more jobs and would have to import labour. We have imported some labour, Sir, but unfortunately we are not privileged to see many of our own Newfoundlanders coming back.

I want to make a remark with regard to the gypsum plant, Sir, and I make this statement that, as of February 9, 1952 the directors of the Gypsum Plant were:

Hon. J. R. Smallwood, Premier.
Hon. L. R. Curtis, Minister of Justice.

Hon. E. S. Spencer, Minister of Public Works.

Hon. C. H. Ballam, Minister of Labour.

Dr. A. Valdmanis.

Mr. Ernest Leja.

These were the directors as of February 9, 1952, of the Gypsum Plant. They all held one share each and what I have—

MR. CURTIS: To a point of order, Mr. Speaker. We don't hold any shares, Sir, at any time.

MR. HOLLETT: That is what the Registrar of Deeds tells me.

MR. CURTIS: I may be mistaken.

MR. HOLLETT: You will find that in the Registrar of Deeds. I take it they were—

MR. CURTIS: I thought, Mr. Speaker, we did not even have qualifying shares, but I know we have no financial interest, that is personal financial interest.

MR. HOLLETT: The statement, I believe, is made on the books of the Registrar of Deeds Office. At any rate they were directors. I am wondering if any of these men, any of these directors received fees, and and if so, I am wondering what was the rate—how much was paid?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, to a point of order—I have already informed the honourable gentleman that the directors were paid no fees. I now add, no salaries, except the Managing Director, and he was paid as managing-director, Mr. Leja. He is the only man, who has received one cent, of the directors of the company.

MR. HOLLETT: I welcome the Premier's explanation. I am merely making a statement of fact.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, the honourable gentleman is not making a statement of fact. If he repeats it he is making a statement of a lie. I just told the facts.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, is it safe for any man to rise in his place in this House and make any statement?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Not a statement of a lie.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, this is no lie. This is an absolute fact.

HON. C. H. BALLAM (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, I rise to a point of order. I am one of the ones who is a director of the gypsum plant in Corner Brook, and I was only appointed and only accepted to look after the Government's interest. I can assure you, my honourable friend, that I have never received, Sir, never received one cent. And I do not want my name dragged all over my district as having received one cent even. I would like for my honourable friend to take it back.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I have not received one cent.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker I have not said that they did. If anyone concludes from my statement I said that either the Honourable the Premier or the Minister of Labour or anybody else received anything—if they said I said that then they are the ones who are saying things which I did not say. I said that during the period, Sir, directors fees were paid on an average of $1350 per quarter or at the rate of $5,400 a year.

MR. SMALLWOOD: They were not.

MR. HOLLETT: I named the directors, and the directors were as I have stated, four Cabinet Ministers and Dr. A. Valdmanis and Mr. Ernest Leja.

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Speaker, I rise to a point of order—If my honourable friend says that director's fees were paid on an average of some amount of so much each the implication is that we received them. The honourable member said the directors fees paid were paid on an average of $1350 a quarter—The use of the word "average" and the way the honourable gentleman puts it makes it absolutely suggestive that we did get directors fees when we did not.

MR. HOLLETT: There was no suggestion on my part that either one of the Ministers received that. I said that $1350 per quarter on an average was paid out in directors fees or salaries. Now there is nothing wrong with that—Let us see the accounts—I made a statement of fact. There is no sense in getting up and refuting a statement I know to be a fact—Let us have the documents to prove it.

MR. SMALLWOOD: To a point of order, Mr. Speaker: I happen to be Premier of Newfoundland. I happen to be Minister of Economic Development. I happen to be Leader of this House. I happen to be a director of this company. I say now that not one cent was paid in directors fees from the moment it began to this moment, not one cent to anyone as directors fees. No directors fees have been paid out nor received, not one cent.

MR. SPEAKER: The honourable gentleman should explain his statement. He has stated that a certain sum was paid quarterly to directors as directors fees, and the directors were; and he named certain honourable Ministers and that these Ministers received directors fees. I think the honourable member should explain what he meant.

MR. HOLLETT: There is no explanation I can give except that amount was paid out in directors salaries and fees.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, the point of order is, I say it was not paid out, not one cent of it. The honourable gentleman has to accept that statement from me. He has no choice but to accept it.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, I have a statement here of the gypsum plant's administration for that particular period.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Salaries, not fees.

MR. HOLLETT: Bank Charges $73.60—so it goes on and give a whole statement with a nett loss of $58,201.60.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Is that the explanation?

MR. HOLLETT: Of what?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Of the honourable gentleman's lie. It was a lie.

MR. SPEAKER: Order. The word is unparliamentary.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Not so unparliamentary, Mr. Speaker, as the lie, as I now characterize it, a damnable lie. The gentleman has just given the evidence it was a lie. Out of his own mouth he has given it.

MR. SPEAKER: Order. These words are unparliamentary in any parliament and it is not right for them to be used. Charges may be made without the use of unparliamentary words and explanations may be offered.

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Speaker, I made the point of order, the honourable member said that directors' fees were paid.

MR. HOLLETT: Or salaries.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The honourable gentleman did not say "or salaries" he said fees.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, I ask you to say, Sir, whether I said directors' fees or salaries.

MR. SPEAKER: Order. I don't see any need of having Mr. Speaker in this at all. My recollection was that the honourable member said directors' fees and mentioned the time, quarterly, and the sums, and he read the names of certain cabinet ministers as directors. To begin with I must draw the inference that fees were paid to certain honourable members, which fact was denied by the members. Now the honourable member read from the statement that they are directors' salaries. My recollection is that he used the word fees alone.

MR. HOLLETT: In that case, Mr. Speaker, I shall have to ask that Hansard be produced. I am certain, as certain that I used fees or salaries as I am standing up here today. I don't intend to allow the Honourable the Premier nor the Honourable Minister of Justice or anybody else to accuse me of lies and saying I did not say it. I would like to have the Hansard now so that we could clear it up now. When may we have it, Mr. Speaker?

MR. SPEAKER: The honourable member has a right to ask that. I ask the House for ten minutes' recess until the Hansard is ready.
MR. SPEAKER: I shall have Mr. Clerk read the excerpt from Hansard.

"Mr. HOLLETT: I wish to make some remarks with regard to the gypsum plant, Sir, and I make this statement that as of February 9, 1952, the directors of the Gypsum Plant were the Honourable Joseph R. Smallwood, Premier; the Honourable Mr. Curtis, Minister of Justice; the Honourable Mr. Spencer, Minister of Public Works; and the Honourable Mr. Ballam, Minister of Labour; Dr. A. Valdmanis and Mr. Ernest Leja. These were the directors as of February 9, 1952, of the Gypsum Plant. They all held one share each, and what I have—

MR. CURTIS: To a point of order, Mr. Speaker. We don't hold any shares, Mr. Speaker, at any time.

MR. HOLLETT: That is what the Registrar of Deeds tells me.

MR. CURTIS: I may be mistaken.

MR. HOLLETT: You will find that in the Registrar of Deeds. I take it they were—

MR. CURTIS: I thought, Mr. Speaker, we did not even have qualifying shares but I know we have no financial interest, that is personal financial interest.

MR. HOLLETT: The statement, I believe, is made on the books of the Registrar of Deeds Office. At any rate they were directors. I am wondering if any of these men, any of these directors did get paid directors' fees, and if so I am wondering what the rate, how much was paid?

MR. SMALLWOOD: The answer is no, none.

MR. HOLLETT: The Honourable the Premier replies that the answer is none. I was of the opinion that all these where the Government had money invested or guaranteed in any industry of any kind, that the Government were always requested, and indeed in most cases demanded that a government director be on the board of directors. I am now informed by the Honourable the Premier that even though they were, all these ministers were directors, they received no directors' fees. In making some inquiry, Sir, relative to this plant I find that on August 3, 1952, this plant showed a net loss on operations of some $58,745.10 for a period of ten months. I find that no provision has been made in the account for accrued interest owing the government, and I found that no allowance was made for any depreciation whatsoever relative to this plant. But here is something which I cannot quite understand—During that period directors' fees were paid, directors' salaries were paid and they were paid at the rate of $1,350 per quarter or $5,400 a year.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, to a point of order: I have already informed the honourable gentleman that the directors were paid no fees. I now add, no salaries, except the Managing Director, Mr. Leja. He is the only man, who has received one cent, of the directors of the company."

MR. SPEAKER: That is the excerpt from Hansard.

MR. HOLLETT: On that basis, Sir, I must ask that the Honourable the Premier, if he has based his statement saying I was a liar on the fact that I
MR. SMALLWOOD: It is clear as the daylight the honourable gentleman after I said that we had not received a cent in fees went on saying that we had.

MR. HOLLETT: I said fees or salaries.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The honourable gentleman went on saying that we had. And I said, and we know from my statement to him, that we had not, he then kept on saying we had. He was then lying, then saying what he knew was not true. Then he attempted to prove that it was true by quoting figures, which proved that he had lied.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, I deny that I told any lie, and that I ever told a lie in this House on any matter. I must say, Sir, that I am getting sick and tired of being called a liar. Almost every day of my life since this House opened I have been called a liar by somebody.

MR. SPENCER: Who?

MR. HOLLETT: You shut up.

MR. SPENCER: I got more gumption than that.

MR. SPEAKER: Order—I don't know what the intention of the honourable member is. I have read Hansards from all over the world and I can find nothing even remotely approaching this state of affairs. From the Chair the House is repeatedly warned of unparliamentary language and not the slightest attention is paid. Honourable members fling the word "liar" across this House and "You shut up" and speeches such as that. Not even all the sages of the past, I argue, could possibly rule on such a question as is placed before me this morning. A statement is made. A point of order is raised. Hansard is called for, Hansard is entirely disregarded. I ask the House, what more can I do? I read myself the honourable gentleman's words for you during that period: "directors' fees were paid—directors' salaries were paid". But because an honourable member says something for which he has no grounds, no other honourable member has a right to say that he is "lying." There are other ways of saying it. That word is unparliamentary. Still however the point of order raised by the Honourable the Premier does stand. He objected to the statement that fees were paid. The honourable member who made the statement might have admitted that he could possibly have been in error, that his information did not distinguish between fees and salaries. Why cannot the House accept the words as said. It is a rule of the House that words offensive to an honourable member on a point of order are an offensive statement. When a statement is shown to have been untrue it does not follow, although I am not naive, it is within the bounds of human frailty that honourable members might lie. but we are not concerned with whether what the honourable member told was untrue or true, it was what words may have been used, that is all. Here the statement has been made and denied and then an honourable member denied he made the statement. The Hansard was produced to show that he did. Why not both honourable members retract their offenses and resume the debate?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I am perfectly willing to withdraw my statement that the honourable gentleman is a liar, but I would ask him to withdraw unreservedly any suggestion or hint that any directors of that company received one cent in any shape or form, with the exception of the Managing-Director—Now that is the truth. I ask him to accept it.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, I am quite willing to meet the Honourable the Premier half way almost any time. But I must say, Sir, that I did not say that any of the Government directors on that board received a salary. I merely asked a question. I ask it again. Who got it? The Premier said that the only directors' fees or salaries, or whatever you call it, were received by Mr. Leja. I am prepared to accept that statement, and I had already accepted it, Sir.

MR. SPEAKER: I must now ask the House if the House is satisfied.

MR. SPENCER: Mr. Speaker, I happened to be just entering the Chamber when my name was read so I did not hear it. When the Honourable the Premier stood to deny that statement that the directors of the company named were in receipt of fees or whatever was the wording as put there, I am not going to try to classify that, but my name was read as one of the directors. I want to say now that I have been appointed by the Government as director on several of these companies during the early stages of their formation, I am still a director of one of these companies. It was made clear to me when I was asked by the Government to accept the appointment as a director and to have a share registered in my name that not one penny would ever accrue to me from that share as a director. It was very clearly made plain to me by the Government that I would not in any way receive any fees and that the share was merely in my name in order that I might be in accordance with the Companies' Act to have a registered share, which share was only held in trust until such time as the company was properly operating or sold, as the case may be. The share was then passed over or signed out. That has been done in the case of the cement mill. I was director of that mill until it was sold. When it was sold I merely signed my name to pass the share which had been in my name over. I repeat that I have never received one cent as a director of either of these companies nor as a result of my name being used as owner of a share, I repeat also that that was made clear to me by the Government when I was requested to become a director of these companies.

MR. BALLAM: Mr. Speaker, during the course of this debate, before the recess, I registered my objection to the statement made by the Honourable Leader of the Opposition. I notice that it has not been read out in Hansard. Probably it was later on in it. I just like to have it on record that I objected to his statement.

MR. SPEAKER: I can assure all honourable members that every word in the House is reported. I might further say I took the utmost precaution regarding Hansard in this instance. No honourable member was admitted to the clerk's office. I had a police officer sit near the reporter, for her protection. Not that she needed it from Members of the House. I would like to make that clear. Not even I read over her shoulder. Every word that every honourable member said is recorded although we did not write up the whole Hansard of today.
as it was not necessary. Now if the honourable member will resume his speech.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, thank you! I want to assure you, Sir, that in my position in this House I have the utmost confidence in the whole staff, and I would not even suspect anything. I have absolute faith and trust in the performance of duty of everybody, and I have no reason to do otherwise. It never even crossed my mind that the Hansard extract as read was not exactly as I said it. But Sir, nine-tenths of the little lapses here which crop up back and forth across the House are caused by the fact that heretofore the Government have not given us, the Opposition side, enough of the information which is necessary for us to form a proper opinion with regard to not only these industries but in regard to other matters. We have to remember, Sir, that all the money that was spent in the gypsum plant and by the government, and all the money in the cement plant and all the other new industries is the people's money, and not the government's money nor the Oppositions money.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Will the honourable gentleman allow me to ask him a question—Does he know of any information being sought in the House about the gypsum plant which was not answered properly and in full?

MR. HOLLETT: Yes, I do.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Will he tell the House what it is?

MR. HOLLETT: I do wish I—
Yes, Mr. Speaker, I don't want to tell.
I do wish I could get along. I don't want to spend the summer saying the things I want to say, much of which will bring down the ire and the wrath of the members on the opposite side.
But I can't help that. I am prepared to accept it all.

I was saying, I think, Sir, that we must not forget it is the people's money, taken from the people by taxes in years gone by, that has been spent and is being spent now on certain new industries. Speaking of directors and directors' fees and directors' salaries,
Sir, I believe it has been the custom all down through the years to have government directors—I said previously, on certain industries where the government was financially interested either by cash loans or by a guarantee, and naturally I would expect the Government would be on all these new industries which have been brought into being by the Government. I would not attribute, Sir, anything wrong to any Minister or director who was a member of the Government for his being a director, nor should I attribute anything wrong to him for receiving any salary nor fee. When I discovered $5400 that year was paid out in directors' salaries naturally the question was who got it. I am told now it was Mr. Leja. I am reminded, of course, that Mr. Leja at the present time receives a salary apart from that.
I presume so, I am not sure of that, but he has, I think about $750 per month. And speaking of these directorates, Sir, it is a fact, of course, one person who was a member of this House, and I refer to Mr. Russell, who was at one time a member of this House, when he was also a director of the cement plant or at least of the birth plant. He was offered a job as a director on both the cement plant and the gypsum plant. My information is that he was offered a salary of $2,000 per year as director of each of these two plants.
MR. SMALLWOOD: The statement is completely wrong and unfounded.

MR. HOLLETT: It may be wrong, but that is what I am informed, that is correct. He was offered that by no less a person than Dr. Alfred Valdmanis.

MR. SMALLWOOD: He had no authority any more than the honourable gentleman to do it. He had no authority.

MR. HOLLETT: I have nothing to say about that. I am making a statement which purported to make a statement. It was in Ottawa the offer was made—Perhaps the Premier will recall.

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, the Premier does not recall.

MR. HOLLETT: Anyway, the celebrated doctor begged Mr. Russell to take on these directorates and stated a salary. I am informed also that the only reason Mr. Russell refused to take that, and it must have been a heart-ache for Mr. Russell as it would be for me or anybody else to have to turn down six thousand dollars a year; the only reason he refused was because he felt it would disqualify him under the House of Assembly Act.

We had directors too on the cement plant. When the company was first registered as the North Star Cement Company the directors were:

The Honourable the Premier.

Hon. Mr. Curtis.

Hon. Mr. Spencer.

Hon. Mr. Ballam.

Dr. Valdmanis.

Mr. Ernest Leja.

The same directorate as were on the gypsum plant. I raised the matter, Sir, in connection with that plant, and two of the directors were at that time in the House, I believe, the Honourable Minister of Labour and the Honourable Minister of Public Works, who were directors and were in the House at that time when I raised the question of the purchase of 168,000 bags of cement which is charged to the construction of the cement plant. I was assured by the Honourable Minister of Public Works that most certainly it would not take anywhere near that amount of cement to do the construction which was called for in the contract with Mr. Lundrigan.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The amount in fact was about 60,000 bags or of that order.

MR. HOLLETT: I wonder if the Premier, now having the knowledge that it took sixty thousand bags, could the Premier tell us why the 168,000 were charged to the cement plant as such?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I will tell the complete detailed story at the right moment, which will be in this present session.

MR. HOLLETT: Thank you. After all, we have to remember, Sir, 168,000 bags—I don’t know what acreage that would cover, or how many inches or cubic feet, but quite a considerable amount—I have no idea at all—168,000 bags of cement, I repeat that statement, was charged to the construction of the cement plant, that is to say, that work done by Mr. Lundrigan was paid for, 168,000 bags of cement at $1.30 per bag. Whereas I am now informed that the amount of cement required to carry out the work which he contracted to do was 60,000 bags. The Honourable the Premier will tell us about the rest later.
MR. SMALLWOOD: But may I say in the meantime, there is no mystery whatsoever about it. The only mystery is what the honourable gentleman or his friends on that side are managing to create. There is no mystery, but a perfectly honest, transparent, simple transaction.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, it is rather puzzling to me. I don't want to be continually made out as stupid. I read the contract the other day. It stated the amount which was called for and the amount of concrete which was called for. And the Honourable Minister of Public Works was good enough to tell me approximately how much cement that would take. I found 168,000 and odd bags charged to the construction work going on at the cement plant by Mr. Lundrigan under contract.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It could be a simple matter. The honourable gentleman dealt with it earlier today. It would be that and all the puzzle might exist only in his own mind.

MR. HOLLETT: I must admit there is some puzzling going on in my mind at the moment in that regard. I have gone carefully through the vouchers and bills. I don't want to make any mystery. I want the true facts. I will get the truth. I have no doubt about that. I want facts. If there is any mystery about it, it should have been cleared up before today.

I presume there are directors on the other new industries, that is to say those that were brought in from Europe. I know there are, of course.

Here is another point which I have to state—it is my duty. Sometime ago the Honourable the Premier gave us certain figures concerning wages paid out at this gypsum plant from April to December 1 of last year, a period of nine months. The amount was $373,629.12 and of this amount he said some $67,204.00 were paid out to non-Newfoundlanders, so called, and $306,418 to Newfoundlanders. The Premier stated that some eighteen of the men or of the employees were not Newfoundlanders and that 162 were Newfoundlanders. Now I have taken the trouble to analyse the figures, and I know there are people who have done exactly the same thing, having some knowledge of what is being paid. This is how it works out: 162 Newfoundlanders averaged per day $8.01.

MR. SMALLWOOD: For the period during which they worked.

MR. HOLLETT: For that particular period—April 1 to December 1 last year. There was one manager, not a Newfoundlander, averaging $28 a day. The superintendent who was also not a Newfoundlander averaged $22.88 per day; another assistant, not a Newfoundlander $17.16 per day. There were fifteen other workmen who were not Newfoundlanders who averaged $14.41 per day. That is to say these fifteen ordinary workmen who were not Newfoundlanders averaged $14.41 per day while 162 Newfoundlanders averaged $8.01 per day.

I find that the gypsum plant, Sir, cost nearly three million dollars up to December 31. As I have stated the manager gets $750 a month, the superintendent $600 and the chemist $450. I suppose the same scale will apply in connection with the cement plant. Sir, the sale of this cement plant, and I think I dealt briefly with that the other day, and do not want to go into that now—but the sale of the cement plant is another puzzler, and I think even the Honourable the Premier admitted it is so. What puzzles me is how he managed to sell that plant to Canadian Machinery Holding Trust for $4,749,000. I doubt very much, Sir, whether so far, that is a year and a half ago, if five cents has ever been paid into the Treasury on that account. As a matter of fact we have been told, Sir, that the interest which has been paid has been returned by the Government to this company.

I come now, Sir, to a question which has been troubling us for some time, and troubling the country and every country, I.e. the question of liquor. I know that we hope to get a revenue of $3,320,000 and I have no doubt we shall. I find that last year there were over three hundred odd licensed beer taverns and agents in various parts of the country selling beer, and that was for beer alone, Sir. I raised a point some time ago which I asked every member of the House to consider carefully, i.e., the question of the connection of members of this House, particularly the members of the Government, with beer taverns and beer parlours. I pointed out that it was most important that every member of the House who is elected by the people to serve them should keep his hands free and keep himself free from being connected in any way with making a profit in any way by the sale of alcoholic liquors, beers or otherwise, from which the government collects such huge amounts of revenue, $3,200,000 next year. I think it is absolutely awful for any of us to have been mixed up in this. I don't want to mention any names, Sir, although I can mention the names of people in this House who are deriving what I believe to be profits from the sale of liquor or resulting from the sale of liquor. I could and I did at one time mention one tavern here, the Green Lantern here in St. John's. If there are no members on that side of the House who have an interest in or are making money by reason of the operations being carried on in the Green Lantern then I will be happy to know, and the same thing applies to the beer operators and liquor operations at Beck's Tavern in St. John's. I now ask every member of this House to dissociate themselves from such a business. There is the Piccadilly, Bella Vista, the Old Mill and the Ringside, Mr. Speaker, I do know that honourable members are associated with those places in a financial way, and I could name some, but I don't want to do that. But I will say this; it is most important that the honourable members on this side of the House, if you like, or on the other side should dissociate ourselves completely and entirely from the operations of these places which help to raise such a tremendous amount of revenue. You see, Sir, the liquor business is a problem all over the world wherever we look, in the United States of America and on the Mainland of Canada, and I suppose in every country in the world peoples' Houses of Assembly have been known to be controlled by liquor industries, and they in great measure can control certain industries by those people who are greatly interested in the sale of liquor. I do know, Sir that even in this country today certain liquor interests contribute largely to certain funds having to do with the election of Members to this House. I could state some facts and some figures, but that would bring in people who are not in this House and also some who are in this House, and so I refrain from doing it—I merely throw it out as a suggestion—I remember when I raised the point before there were only two members on the opposite side who got up and said they disassociated themselves completely from any liquor interest, the Honourable the Premier and the Honourable Member for White Bay.

MR. SMALLWOOD: If the honourable member would allow me, the Honourable Member for White Bay three days before he made that statement in this House applied for a license for a beer tavern, and that was only one of the times that he did apply, and I dare say he will continue applying in writing.

DR. ROWE: Mr. Speaker, I should like to rise to a point of order there—The Honourable gentleman just said only two members stood up and said they had no interest in liquor. I think that was the statement. I trust the inference is not meant that because a member did not stand up and publicly disassociate himself that he did then have some connection with the liquor interests. I am quite sure that no member of the government has any connection, Mr. Speaker, and I would like to have myself on record right now. I made a statement here in the course of my remarks on the address in reply.

MR. SPEAKER: The Honourable Minister has no point of order, and may not make a speech.

DR. Rowe: I want to make it clear, Mr. Speaker, I am not associated in any way with any liquor interest of any kind whatsoever, and as far as I know never will.

MR. HOLLETT: Open confession, Mr. Speaker, is good for the soul, they say. As to the two members on the opposite side who did deny any connection I am rather surprised now to know that even one of these two had fallen from grace.

MR. SMALLWOOD: He had fallen when he made the statement, if there is any falling in it.

MR. HOLLETT: Terrible! Terrible! I don't know—On this liquor question, Sir, I would be remiss in my duty if I did not refer to the petition which was supposed to be referred to the Board of Liquor Control, if not to this House. We heard nothing from it. That is the petition from certain residents of St. John's West. Apparently no action has been taken whatsoever. I would like to have some statement relative to that from the government, or is it to be treated like some other petitions of which I know, which have come in to the Ministers of the Crown and have not been presented in this House. I refer to one which was presented on the liquor question from a district in this country to a Minister of the Crown and has not been presented here in this House. That was two months ago. If we in the West End, Sir, have been treated in that respect in that regard then I think something will have to be done about it.

I fail to see how any member or any members or any Minister can afford to neglect to present to this House a petition which is signed by seven or eight hundred people. That has been done Sir, and I know it for a fact, and I have refrained from saying anything about it. But this is probably the last opportunity I shall have to remind that Minister that I would like him to take the necessary action and at least present the petition to the House and hence to the department to which it properly belongs.

I come now, Sir, to the fishery. I would say at the outset that I am concerned about the fishery because as I know and as every member on the opposite side of the House knows, I am deeply concerned about reports which have recently come out from the South West Coast with regard to dragger operations. To be frank, Sir,
I felt that if we could not put all our draggers fishing we would not have a prosperous industry and prosperous fishermen. I have felt that for years, and now, by the statements which have come by way of the press, relative to the possibility of some of these draggers being tied up, very much perturbed over the whole matter, and I am quite sure the Government does also.

In the budget speech of a year ago,
Sir, the Honourable Minister of Finance made the following statement—it is my profound privilege to announce today (that over ten months ago) that a great and far-reaching programme of fishery development is to be launched in this Province. We call upon all fishermen and all merchants to join unstintingly in that great development. There is ample room and great need for all progressive and energetic fish concerns to play a strong part in this programme—

Now, Sir, I am quite sure that the Minister was sincere when he made that statement over fourteen months ago. I am quite sure that he hoped that something concrete would have been done. Now what is this programme? We have heard the Honourable Premier speaking here for four or five days or afternoons on the programme. To us it seems that he really had something there.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, to a point of order—I rise to this point of order as much out of curiosity as anything else, because I would like to have Your Honour's ruling. In a debate on the address in reply and in a debate on the budget speech very great latitude is obviously allowed, and must be allowed to members of the House. But, where a bill is to be debated and members are to have opportunity to debate that matter thoroughly on a special occasion set aside for that debate and nothing else but that debate, or where that occasion has already been provided and the debate has been thorough and all the time that members wanted was given:
in either case is it in order even in the debate on the address in reply or the debate on the budget to discuss the matter, when the member knows and the House knows opportunity is to be given or that the opportunity has in fact been provided in that same session; is it in order to have the fisheries debate all over again, and under this heading?

MR. SPEAKER: That is a very important point raised there. True it is that great latitude is allowed in debate on the budget speech. It is true also that past debates, questions decided by the House may not be revived. It is also true that in the budget speech, the chief topic for debate, extensive reference is made to the creation of a fishery development committee. I therefore would say that while the honourable member is debating this motion, i.e. the budget speech, he may take notice of the fisheries development committee in this case elaborated in the budget speech, and make comment thereon.
Yet it would have to be done within fairly narrow limits because the House cannot re-debate a question which has come before it as a bill and the motion debated on second reading and debated in Committee of the Whole and passed by the House. Therefore I cannot forbid any honourable member referring to the fisheries development committee but he really cannot make a speech on that point because ample opportunity has been given, as I have already said, and the principle decided by the House, and that issue is closed. He will find himself in the position where he can debate only in so far as the general effects on the position of the province and that in a narrow limit. If the honourable member will endeavour to keep within the rules he may continue his speech.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, it is very difficult to know just where we are in this House these days. The Honourable the Premier is likely to object to anything. May I read from page 8 of the budget speech which we are debating now?

"We were successful in inducing the government of Canada to join with us in the Creation of the Fisheries Development Committee. Working for nearly two years under the chairmanship of the Chief Justice of Newfoundland, Sir Albert Walsh, this committee conducted the most painstakingly thorough survey of the fishing industry, of the fishery potential, and of the needs of the industry that ever was accomplished in the history of British North America. We have been busy in this present session of the House enacting legislation to launch our great fishery development programme. This will be by far, indeed it will be incomparably, the greatest development ever known in the fisheries of the northern half of this continent. The Government of Canada have agreed to participate with us in bearing the costs of this great development, which I expect, is likely to cost as much as $100,000,000 on all counts over a period of twelve or fifteen years."

So it goes on, Sir, for nearly three pages, on the fisheries, which concerns a greater number of our people than any other industry in Newfoundland. Yet the Honourable the Premier gets up here in this House and endeavours to stop me from talking about the fisheries.

MR. SPEAKER: I must interfere there. That is incorrect. I gave the honourable member a loophole. He refused to take it, and is insinuating now the Premier is making the rules of the House. That is absolutely incorrect. Whilst I am sitting in this Chair when an honourable member has a right to speak for an unlimited time, he can be sure he will have that right. In so far as the Chair is concerned this bill was brought in and passed. The honourable member has been speaking on it for five minutes, therefore, it is unfair, against the ruling of the House, for the Honourable Member to say that an attempt has been made to stop him from joining in this debate. I had already pointed out that great latitude is allowed.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, may I ask what the Honourable the Premier is trying to do?

MR. SPEAKER: I am not concerned. I am merely concerned with the rules of this House. It is my unfortunate position to have to enforce the rules of this House. I have already said I am not concerned with what any honourable member says. The rule has existed from time immemorial. If the honourable member wishes to try my patience—I do not flatter myself when I say I am the most patient person that I know. I can enforce that rule. I can enforce the rule of tedious repetition in the budget debate. Yet I have allowed the honourable member for the fourth time in this present speech to refer to cement. I made a note of it. If that is not latitude in debate I don't know what latitude is. Now a bill has been brought in on certain matters of fishery development and discussed and all the time any honourable member wished to take within the rules was permitted. There was no limitation. If the honourable member does not avail of his opportunity then I cannot have this rule set aside. It is not right to revive a past debate for the purpose of further debate. I shall have to ask, in view of the honourable member not accepting my previous ruling that he refrain from re-debating the Fisheries Development Committee. He will now continue his speech.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, I do understand that I must refrain from saying anything relevant to fisheries development committee.

MR. SPEAKER: I am not joining in debate.

MR. HOLLETT: I am shouted at from one part of the House; every once in a while someone jumps up to a point of order saying you are not allowed to talk about this and that and the other thing—I wonder where are we tending.

MR. SPEAKER: I can assure the honourable member that the Chair wonders that too.

MR. HOLLETT: The question is as to whether I can refer to the fisheries at all. Well I don't think anybody is going to stop me from referring to the fisheries.

MR. SPEAKER: If the honourable member persists in twisting and distorting the position of the Chair and defying the Chair I will ask him to discontinue his speech.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, I am not attempting this deliberately, but I must say you have a misunderstanding about my attitude. I have obeyed since being here all orders issued by the Speaker, but I am now at logger-heads. I mean I find it difficult to know just what I shall say. The best thing, I think, is to say nothing but leave it alone, leave it at that.

There is one other matter I want to refer to, i.e., the highroads. That is another worry. I have had a considerable number of complaints from people in various parts of the country with regard to the amount of wages paid to them for work on the highroads. The information I get from all of these letters is that these men are working on the highroads, digging ditches, now for the wages of 60c. per hour and in cases they have pointed out to me, they have been working for a number of years on the highroad, and were working in the Commission of Government days and received at that time 55c. per hour. Today they tell me, after five years of this government, they are getting 60c. per hour. That is in certain areas. This year this Government has the unprecedented gall to boast of what they are doing for certain parts of the country and for certain people. They are the greatest government in the world. They have dispensed their largess hither and thither and everywhere but not in the right places. We have fishermen in this country today half starving, we have men working on the highways who are half starving on 60c. an hour. What I am wanting to know Sir is, where is all this largess which the government has been distributing. I want to appeal right now on behalf of these people who are working on the roads with a pick and shovel digging ditches, out all day, ten hours a day, and getting 60c. an hour, five cents an hour more than was paid in Commission of Government days in these particular areas. Railway section men, I am told, are getting $1.20 an hour for doing the same kind of work.

Now, Sir, I was going to say some things in regard to certain matters, but in view of what has happened I refrain. I want to say that always, as long as I am here, I shall endeavour to respect the ruling of the Chair whether it be in Committee or in the House, and I don’t think, Sir, that I shall ever attempt to twist a ruling or distort it. If for some reason I don’t understand a ruling, there again I beg Your Honour’s Pardon. I realize, Sir, unless there is a Chair and a Speaker and one who is all-powerful over debate to decide such questions then we could have no House and no argument at all. I must now, Sir, point out that there has been considerable disorder, no order at all. I shall endeavour, Sir, to go on probing into the expenditure of some twenty millions of dollars in new industries, we shall keep our noses to the ground, so to speak, as a good setter should, to endeavour to find where the government are spending their money, in all areas of this country. If we express ourselves in this regard and it unfortunately injures or hurts some member of the government then I am sorry, but we cannot refrain on that account.

I have great respect for the individual members of the House. I have little respect for the government. I say, that Sir, advisedly, and I don’t mean the individuals in the government. It is unfortunate the state to which this country has come at the present time in the eyes of the world. These things that have been disclosed recently are unfortunate. Let us, in the name of goodness, try to work together and pull together to make this little province in which we live respected and honoured throughout the whole of Canada. I can assure the Honourable the Premier and the members of the House that we on this side of the House will do nothing which will lower the dignity of this country in which we live.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of the debate, to a later hour this day so that the debate might be revived at a later hour this day.

MR. SPEAKER: It being now 1:00 o’clock I do leave the Chair until 3:00 of the clock this afternoon.

TUESDAY, June 15, 1954.
AFTERNOON SESSION

The House resumed at three of the clock in the afternoon.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, before the House resumes I wonder if I might have permission to give notice that I will on tomorrow ask leave to introduce a Bill, "An Act to Provide for the Raising of Funds for Schools in Certain Areas."

I wonder if I might also have permission to table a report, the Annual Report of the Industrial Development Loan Board, together with a letter from the Chairman which contains the following paragraph:

It will be observed that Section 14 of the Act requires the submission of this report not later than the 30th of May and that the report should be laid before the Legislature within fifteen days thereafter. In expressing the regret that the report is a little late, I should like to add that the audit of the accounts of the Board took somewhat longer than expected, and the financial statement was received here only yesterday.

Yours faithfully,

G. M. Drover, Chairman,
Industrial Development Board.

The letter is dated June 11. I found it on my desk when I went back. It was only on the 10th that the audit of the accounts of the Board was received, which is why the Board is so late in tabling the report, as the Act requires. I offer my own apologies, as the Minister responsible for the Board, for the lateness of the receipt of the report.

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Speaker, I give notice I will ask leave to introduce a Bill, entitled, “An Act to Amend the Urban and Rural Planning Act, 1953.”

I might say, Mr. Speaker, a lot of these bills I have given notice of are just really formal bills.

MR. POWER: Mr. Speaker, I would like leave to table answer to question no. 108.
Third Readings:

A Bill, "An Act to Establish the Pharmaceutical Association"—On motion read a third time, ordered passed and title be as on the Order Paper.

First Readings:

A Bill, "An Act to Amend the Memorial University Act"—On motion read a first time—On motion ordered read a second time at a later hour this day.

A Bill, "An Act to Amend the Memorial University (Pensions) Act". On motion read a first time—Ordered read a second time at a later hour this day.

Orders of The Day

Adjourned Debate on the Budget:

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, before I take up the particular points in this debate that I desire to take up, I should like to extend my very sincere congratulations to the Honourable Minister of Finance for a most excellent budget speech. Sir, a budget speech is and can be excellent in one of two ways or in both ways. In the first place it can be an accurate and clear description or picture of the financial state of the jurisdiction, that is to say, of the state or province or country or whatever the jurisdiction may be. Then secondly it can be an encouraging report, a report giving good reasons, acceptable reasons, reasons that do not violate the mind, reasons that do not violate logic, good reasons for being hopeful and optimistic about the position as it is in prospect. Now on both counts the honourable gentleman's speech was most excellent. That is to say, it does give an accurate and a crystal clear picture of our financial position and in addition to that it does give abundantly believable, reasonable arguments to convince us, unless we are blind with prejudice, unless we are so partisan that we prefer to think that all is ruin and disaster, to persuade us that Newfoundland's future is not stormy but bright, that the prospects for Newfoundland are encouraging not discouraging.

Now it seems to me that the functions of a budget speech cannot be more than twofold. Its first function is clearly, is obviously to give us an account of the finances of the period in review. The period is the year just past and the year just about to come. To give a clear review of the finances of that year. The other function is to give a review of the economic jurisdiction, the economic area in question for the period under review, the period just past and the period just coming. On both counts, I submit, the Honourable Gentleman's speech was a most excellent one. It has never been bettered in the history of budget speeches in this House, and I have read every one of them without exception. I have read all the budget speeches ever delivered in this House. I have read them carefully and studiously, and I have compared them. Some of the members here may remember a very notable occasion when I took all the budget speeches between the two world wars and listed them and showed what the forecast was and then showed what the result was in each instance at the end of the year for which the forecast was given. I showed the completely ridiculous and ludicrously absurd attempt of most Finance Ministers of that period between the two world wars to forecast accurately what the revenue and expenditure would be for as much as one year in advance, one year ahead. Now that was not because the Finance Ministers of those days were less bright, less intelligent than the Finance Ministers of today. That was not because the Finance Ministers of those days were less informed than is the Finance Minister of today. It was not because they were less capable than is the Finance Minister of today, and it was not because they were less honest than is our Finance Minister of the present time. It is not greater ability or greater intelligence nor superior education nor more honesty on the part of the present Finance Minister that enables him to produce a document which can be described truthfully as a most excellent one, and as one of the best ever delivered in this Chamber. It is rather that times are different, the circumstances are different, the conditions are different. It is now quite a different task for a Minister of Finance to deliver a budget speech from what it was when Sir John Crosbie and Mr. Harry Brownrigg and Sir Richard Squires and Mr. Peter J. Cashin were Minister of Finance. The times have changed. Newfoundland herself has changed. Newfoundland now is part of the great Canadian Nation. Newfoundland's boundaries now economically and financially extend to the Pacific Coast, from the great Atlantic to the Pacific. We have pushed our boundaries westward. We can leave St. John's now and go for thousands of miles in a straight line to the west coast without leaving our country, we are still in our country, our land, our nation of which this island forms so wonderful and so valuable a part and to which this island with its glorious history, its richness contributes ideologically and in culture so much as to make us all feel intensely proud indeed. That is why a Finance Minister now can present a budget speech which would leave the Finance Ministers between the two world wars quite breathless if they could come back now and hear the Honourable Minister of Finance deliver the figures he did in this speech here a few days ago.

Mr. Speaker, having paid that well deserved compliment to the Minister upon the excellence of his budget speech, and that compliment to Newfoundland upon the excellence of her standing today, I now pass on to some comments on the debate as it has occurred up to the present time.

The first thing, Mr. Speaker, I should like to say that the honourable gentlemen opposite, the Members of the Opposition, appeared to be quite convinced that there is to be a general election in this province this year. They appear, indeed they give all the appearances of honourable gentlemen who have made up their minds that there is indeed to be an election this year. In fact, Mr. Speaker, the Honourable Leader of the Opposition in a radio speech announced not only that there is going to be an election this year but he announced also that he was convinced that the election this year would be held in November. Indeed the honourable gentleman went on with what I thought was very poor taste, with very questionable taste, to say that the Premier was determined to hold this general election before the trial of Dr. Valdmanis is held and he used the name Dr. Alfred Valdmanis. He made the statement that the Premier was determined to hold this general election before the trial of Dr. Valdmanis is held. I thought that was in very questionable taste, not that I mind the reference to myself, and not that I mind particularly any reference to Dr. Valdmanis. But I did think it was in very questionable taste in relation to the general principle that when a man is charged with an offence or with a crime he ought not thereafter until the matter is settled in court, until the evidence is produced by the prosecution and by the defence, he ought not until that is done form part of a political broadcast, as he did in fact in the broadcast in question.

As I said, Mr. Speaker, the first point I wish to make in this speech today is that the Opposition appears to be quite convinced that there is to be a general election this year. They are so convinced indeed that the Leader of the Opposition has called the date of that election as being early in the month of November. They are so convinced, Mr. Speaker, that the Opposition party have launched upon a radio propaganda campaign on each Saturday night for some weeks past, when members of the Opposition have taken to the air to make political speeches. Now in these speeches they have not discussed the United Nations nor the Theory of Relativity nor the imminent destruction in the world through the hydrogen bomb, and I have heard them discuss no part of the Indochina War. All they discuss in these radio speeches, the common theme running through, is attack the government. Their speeches on the radio have this much in common with all their speeches, nearly all—perhaps I am being unfair there—with many, I will say, of their speeches in this House—Attack the government. In short, Mr. Speaker, the Opposition are convinced that there is an election coming, and they have begun their election campaign already. They have begun it in two forms, radio speeches and speeches in this House. I think, therefore, that the general public of Newfoundland might be on guard against talk from the Opposition Party because it is political talk, it is election talk.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, a point of order. Is the honourable gentleman entitled to deal with speeches made outside this House except on a point of privilege.

MR. SPEAKER: I do not think the honourable member has infringed the rule.

MR. BROWNE: I would like to call attention to the last sweeping statement made by the Honourable the Premier which included speeches in this House, to say they were made for political purposes.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, the speeches to which I refer, that is to the speeches made over the radio by honourable gentlemen of this House who are Opposition Members of this House; these speeches on the radio in every instance without exception referred to the business of this House, commented on the actions of the government and were political speeches, propaganda speeches, electioneering speeches. I think the public ought to know.

MR. BROWNE: To a point of order, Mr. Speaker. Whilst I don't want to stop the honourable gentleman from talking, as he has the privilege of talking on the radio, but I suggest this is not the place to debate what is said over the radio.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I have no intention of debating what was said on the radio. I am merely pointing out to the House the fact that the honourable gentleman opposite, the honourable gentlemen of the Opposition, are obviously quite concerned that there is to be an election this year, a provincial election, and that from the moment of that conviction they have indulged in political propaganda and that therefore the public of Newfoundland, the general public, ought to be on guard against their arguments because of course it is just political talk, just electioneering, just propaganda for election purposes. That is my first point, Mr. Speaker, and I hope I have made the point crystal clear. The honourable gentleman opposite for several weeks past have been talking straight election talk.

MR. HOLLETT: What have you been doing?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I have been assisting my colleagues to carry on the business of this province. I can assure my honourable friend opposite if there is one thing above all other things about which I am not thinking and to which I am giving no thought it is an election this year. That is the present tense. Now I will also use the past tense: There has been no topic to which I have given less thought or less attention at any time in the last calendar year than the matter of the election this year. That is past and present. The people convinced of an election are the honourable gentlemen opposite, the Opposition. So as I have not been thinking of elections since I took part in one in July and August of last year, the Federal Election, since then I have not even given any thought to an election not even a by-election, no, not even the by-election in St. John's West. I could have given some thought to that by-election, could have gone out, the Liberal Party, and just won it. We had won it a few weeks before and we saw no reason why we could not win it again.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I will pass this point over, but will come back to it. I want to deal with one or two points brought out by honourable members opposite. There was one point brought out by the Honourable Member for St. John's East, not the Honourable and Learned Member, but the honourable member for St. John's East, i.e. the honourable gentleman who is sitting presently in the House to the immediate left of the Honourable Leader of the Opposition. I hope that when the redistribution Bill is passed, if it is, and when it is passed, that it will have the effect of—

MR. BROWNE: Out of order—

MR. SMALLWOOD: My belief is that I am not out of order. My belief is that the honourable gentleman is wrong when he thinks I am out of order.

MR. BROWNE: Discussing a bill to come before the House.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I am not. I am making a passing reference to it. I am not debating it, not discussing it. I say, I hope that bill will be of such a character as to eliminate the need in this House of distinguishing between honourable members, that it will be simply "the honourable member for such and such a district" that there won't be duplicate membership in the constituencies represented by two men, but only by one man. I hope that will be the case. Having made that point I return to my honourable friend from St. John's East. His speech requires some little attention, little, but some. He said there were no birch forests in Newfoundland, but there are no forests. It sounds like, "Yes, we have no bananas today." We have this and that and the other thing but "We have no bananas today." There are some stands of birch but there are no birch forests. Now to begin with, I am not sure that I understand the difference between a stand of birch and a forest of birch unless the difference is one size. Perhaps a stand is smaller than a forest, or to put it another way, perhaps a forest is larger than a stand. Is a forest larger than a stand or is a stand larger than a forest? I confess I don't know.

My quarrel is with his statements that there are no birch forests, no forests of birch, when in fact there are, when in fact I have been in them, when in fact I have seen them, when in fact I have travelled through them. I could take the honourable gentleman on the highroad between Deer Lake to the West and Springdale or Oxford Brook to the East, the road say between Deer Lake in the West, where it turns to Halls Bay in the East. I could take him along that highroad in the vicinity of Oxford Brook and I could show him a birch forest twenty miles long. Would he call that a forest? With not a tree in it except an occasional pine but birch trees. Is that a forest? Prudently he does not answer, prudently he does not commit himself. He prefers to be esteemed a wise man by holding his tongue, the Bible says so, so he holds his tongue and hopes to be esteemed a wise man. He does not want to bite on that one. There are twenty miles of growing trees, is that a forest? He does not bite on that. If he says, yes it is, then his statement is obviously wrong when he stated there were no birch forests in Newfoundland.

HON. M. MURRAY (Minister of Provincial Affairs): Go to the Northern Peninsula.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I have alluded to one of many birch forests. I could take him up to the head of Bay D'Espoir, to the head of Fortune Bay, the head of Hermitage Bay into great forests of birch. I could take him to an area roughly in the centre of Newfoundland to a forest of birch measuring hundreds of miles. I could take him between St. Georges to the east and Codroy to the west where he would see thirty miles of birch forest, thirty miles of it, where it grows almost monotonously as I have travelled through on the train—Yet the honourable gentleman tells us there are no birch forests in Newfoundland.

Now I come to the Honourable and Learned Member for St. John's West. He boldly and fiercely challenged the budget figures in the part of the budget that gave the Minister's estimate of what the people would pocket in Newfoundland this year from their earnings and other sources, boldly and fiercely and energetically challenged these figures. He said he knows that in the budget speech the Minister's estimate of what the people will pocket this year from woods, the paper and pulp industry, I have the speech here—Forests, paper, pulpwood $43,350,000. Then he challenges the Minister's figure for mining etc. Mining is shown here at $13,365,000. I don't know what he had in mind when he used the word "etc." but he said—Paper, pulp, wood, mining, etc. I cannot take him up on the "etc." I can only take him up on paper, pulp, wood and mining which he specified. Anyhow, he challenged the figure of $43,850,000. That is the figure of what will go into the peoples' pockets from that source in 1954. He challenges the figures of $13,565,000 that the Minister says will go into the peoples' pockets this year in respect of mining. He challenges these figures, and he says they are too high. He challenges the figure for defence. I prefer not to deal in detail with that, but I will deal with it in a general way. I will deal in detail with the other figures. He challenges these figures and says they are too high. Now I don't want to be offensive to the honourable and learned gentleman, but I am reminded of Peter Finley Dunne, the American Humorist, who wrote a lot of his writings during the Spanish American War. In one of his works he had one of his characters, I forget the name now, saying he is going to destroy the Spaniards with one blow, and he is to deliver the blow. Now the honourable gentleman said that $43,850,000 is too high—throw it out—It is too high. But why is it too high? Does he give any hint? No. Does he give any reasons? No. Does he give a substitute figure? No. Does he quote any sources? No, he is the source. It is too high. The Minister of Finance has ready access to the private information of virtually every company in Newfoundland but it is not a good source. The honourable and learned member, he knows—like the "Shadow." Who knows? The shadow knows. The Minister of Finance could not know but the shadow knows the figure is too high. It is just that, too high. That is all—it is too high. Dare we ask him to tell us why? Is that questioning the honourable gentleman's veracity? Is it throwing into doubt his omniscience? Now if he quarrels with the figure of $43 million he is quarreling with the fourteen hundred saw mills that operate in Newfoundland and he is quarreling with the Department of Mines and Resources and its detailed statistics kept in the department there of logging operations and lumbering. These are not figures the Honourable Minister of Finance merely plucked out of the air. These are figures for which he has gone to Bowaters, to the AND Company and to other sources, this is the total of these figures given to the Minister by these people. Now the only possibility that these figures are wrong is the possibility that his additions are wrong, that he did not add them correctly.

MR. BROWNE: I wonder would the honourable gentleman answer a question? Would he give the breakdown of the figures there?

MR. SMALLWOOD: He would not—of course he would not. Let the honourable gentleman ask Bowaters himself. We got it on confidential terms.

MR. BROWNE: May I give you some information from the Canadian Bank of Commerce Report for January 1954 where it says we are 9% below 1953.

MR. SMALLWOOD: So what? The honourable gentleman can get up and read from the Encyclopedia Britannica and give all sorts of casual information that has nothing to do with facts—And the honourable gentleman is not going to get away from it, not by reading casual scraps of information. The firm of Bowaters have given their own figures of what they will spend and they have given that figure in confidence to the Minister of Finance. That is not getting away from the facts. The AND Company has done precisely the same thing again in confidence. The Honourable Minister has added these two figures together so that the identity of each is lost and then added to the result and the total certain other figures showing the sources of income in other wood industries. Now, how is the honourable gentleman going to get over that? How is he going to get over it? It is a bit of a dilemma is it not? It is so brave to stand with a great air of knowledge as of a great economist and say patronizingly that the Minister copied out a nice dinky, little speech. It is not bad in fact. But I disagree with the figures on pulp and wood, it is too high—It is too high—Why I can imitate the Oxford Accent too. I can do that too. But that does not fool me. The accent does not fool me. Then he says that the figure for $15,365,000 for mining is too high—too high—But is it too high? The figures came from Buchans Mining Company from the two mining companies in St. Lawrence, from DOSCO, and they have been added up and that is the total. Now, is it too high?

MR. BROWNE: You don't give the details.

MR. SMALLWOOD: These figures were asked for in confidence and given in confidence. Does the honourable gentleman want the Government now, having gotten the figures in confidence, to reveal them to the House?

MR. BROWNE: It is very difficult for us to have precise information on things like that—"We have it in confidence." We can only go by the general trend, and I can show you that on other production as well.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, read it out from the Encyclopedia. These are facts, not theory. Hard brutal facts. The honourable gentleman cannot get away from that. To do that he has to doubt the word of Bowaters and the AND Company and say that he does not believe DOSCO, the Aluminum Company of Canada, the St. Lawrence Corporation and Buchans Mining Co. That total is the total of four firms, that is what it is. Now unless the figures are incorrectly added, unless the addition is inaccurate, that is a correct figure because it comes from the one class of people who ought to know, the people who are going to pay it out in hard cash in payrolls. They ought to know.

Now defence: On this I am not in a position to talk so frankly. He said it is five millions less. Of course he should know. He has got a secret source that is not open to the Minister of Finance and not open to the government. He knows—Again the "Shadow knows." Perhaps Little Abner gave him the information. The honourable gentleman never heard of him, never heard of Little Abner?

MR. HOLLETT: I have seen him.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Oh the honourable gentleman has seen him himself.

MR. HOLLETT: No.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I don't think he has seen him for several days, has he? Oh I have seen other Pandecs with and without accents. He airly dismisses these figures. Again, "The Shadow knows"—He knows—the Shadow knows—

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, I think the honourable gentleman needs a question to answer. Relating to what he stated, would he or the Minister of Finance give us the values of these particular industries for the last year? The actual earnings and not an estimated one.
MR. SMALLWOOD: No, certainly not. Do you think the Minister of Finance who sent out thousands of letters to firms to give information to be blended and classified into these tables would have any luck when he came to do it again if he blabbered out the figures for the various firms here in the House, surely not—surely not.

Now the honourable and learned gentleman was just as accurate in his rejection of these figures as he was in his giving of certain figures. He said the IBEC Report cost a quarter of a million dollars. That was said in his speech. The cost in fact was $80,000 so that he is $170,000 out on that, about 200% out.

The honourable gentleman then took up this great question of water power and water power surveys, and again he was wrong. He said it should not have taken six hundred thousand dollars to find out how much power we have up there where this survey took place. Well, the point is that it did not. It cost a quarter of a million dollars. Now the difference between $600,000 and a quarter of a million is $350,000—less than he said it was. He said it was $600,000: It was $250,000. Now can we accept very many more figures from that honourable gentleman who has been hopelessly wrong.

Now there has been a lot of discussion of the industries. I was intensely interested to know that the honourable and learned member of St. John's West spoke of Dr. Sennewald and this is what he said. "Why did Sennewald give up the idea of an Optical Plant. Why did he give it up?" This seemed a good idea (quoting from the honourable gentleman) yet he backed out. Now this is most interesting to me because this is the first time any member of the Opposition has described even one of these proposed industries as good, and the only one they admitted as good is the one we did not start. The only one in which they can see anything is the one we did not start at all, Dr. Sennewald's. Now that is one of the funniest things I have ever heard or ever saw in all my life since I was born. That is positively funny. From the coming of Confederation, from the first general election, of all the members who have sat on the Opposition side, the one and only one who said a good word at all for the new industries, actual or proposed, is the honourable and learned member for St. John's West, and the good word he has is for an industry that did not start at all. Now, Mr. Speaker, the fact that the only good word the honourable gentleman has for these industries is for an industry that did not start reminds me of something else—A certain medical doctor left St. John's a good many weeks ago and went to Europe on business and he returned a few weeks ago and he made this remark when he had been back two or three days—That an astonishing transformation had taken place in St. John's. He had noticed a most astonishing transformation, he said. Before he went away the most unpopular man in Newfoundland amongst the Tories of St. John's, the most unpopular figure, the most hated, the most despised figure of a man in all Newfoundland amongst the Tories of St. John's was Dr. Valdmanis. What happened in the meantime?

The only industrialist who has come to Newfoundland for whom as yet up to this moment any member of the Opposition have had any good word to say is Dr. Sennewald. He is the only one. There is not a solitary good word for another, only Dr. Sennewald.
MR. HOLLETT: He paid back the money you gave him.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The honourable and learned gentleman said he thought it was a good idea and that he did not understand why he did not go ahead. He can't understand that.

Now I am going to leap ahead for a moment because it is advertised in a remark of the Honourable Leader of the Opposition as his remark. I made a note of it. It also was published in the papers. But it is my own notes that I am going to quote and not the one in the papers. He said:

"How long must we go on? How long can you keep pouring money down the hungry maw of Fishery Products Limited? How long can you keep pouring money down the hungry maw of Hazen Russell, of Mr. Crosbie."

Mr. Speaker, I have noticed because it is very noticeable, I have noticed that any businessmen in Newfoundland who has any dealings with the Government is extremely likely to be singled out by name by the Opposition any businessman who has any dealings with the Government — Arthur Monroe — "How long can you keep pouring money down the hungry maw of Fishery Products Limited." That is Arthur Monroe, Hazen Russell, Ches Crosbie, Spencer Lake, William J. Lundrigan, all of them highly reputable businessmen, all of them without exception. Is there a businessman in Newfoundland today from one end of it to the other who is a more reputable businessman than Arthur Monroe? Is there one? But the Honourable Leader of the Opposition asks how long can you keep pouring money down the hungry maw of Arthur Monroe?

MR. HOLLETT: Answer it. Do, come on!

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is the spirit. But for Dr. Valdmanis, for Sennewald respect and even affection, but only since they fell into disfavour with the Government. While they were or appeared to be in favour with the Government nothing was too bad to say against them. The Chamber rang and reverberated with denunciations of these men, bitter, savage denunciations. They were attacked, ridiculed, calumniated, nothing was too bad, too vile, to say so long as they appeared to be in favour with the Government. But the minute they appeared not to be, they became the friends of the Opposition.

MR. HOLLETT: That is not correct.

MR. SMALLWOOD: How is the darling of the Tories? It is not reserved for Arthur Monroe, Hazen Russell, C. A. Crosbie, Lundrigan, Andrews, for the other men of energy, of progressive outlook, of dynamic personality, the men who wish to build up Newfoundland. There is a man sitting in the gallery here today, a stranger. He is a small man who has come and gotten a loan from us. We are delighted he has done so to build up the fishery in the area where he has his business. But he is in danger. He had better know right now that he is in danger. The Tories will get after him, the Opposition will turn the heat on him. He will be the victim of Tory propaganda—His hungry maw will be referred to. He will become a victim.

Now, Mr. Speaker, the honourable and learned member for St. John's West in his speech in the debate compared expenditure of Nova Scotia with ours in Newfoundland, current account expenditure in Nova Scotia with current account expenditure in Newfoundland. What he said was this: Newfoundland's current account expenditure is $90 a head, Nova Scotia's is $70, $20 less than ours. That is what the honourable and learned gentleman said. I have here the report of the Bank of Canada in this very matter. The Bank of Canada is the great central bank of the government of Canada. It is not the Royal Bank of Canada. It is the Bank of Canada. It is the great central bank headed by Graham Towers. They have a department attached to it gathering statistical information for all Canada. They have taken the trouble, amongst other things, of taking the Provincial Government expenditures across Canada and the Provincial Governments revenue across Canada. In addition to that they have broken these down under very many subheadings and they have taken great trouble to classify them, to make a common classification all across the ten provinces. In addition to that they have taken great trouble to gather the figures of municipal expenditures and municipal revenue in these provinces, and they have reduced them to a common denominator, obviously confusing. It is no use to compare the figures in one province with another province unless they are comparable figures. They must have a common denominator. How can you compare the salary of a man who is getting five thousand dollars a year with the salary of a man getting fifty thousand unless you reduce it to a common denominator. So they have reduced it to a common denominator and have given the nett figures. Here is the result, the nett figures. Last year Nova Scotia—This is current account expenditure—That is what the honourable and learned gentleman was talking about when he made his wrong comparison—Last year in Nova Scotia on current account the municipalities, the various town and city councils and rural and urban councils, the municipalities, spent $20.3 million, $20,310,000. The province spent $41.1 millions $41,100,000 a total of $61,410,000 last year—that is Nova Scotia.

MR. BROWNE: May I ask the date of that report? I have here the estimates produced in the legislature this year in Nova Scotia.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I am talking about last year, the latest year for which I have accurate figures, not estimates.

MR. BROWNE: No. Mr. Speaker, on a point of personal explanation. I have here the estimates given in the Legislature of Nova Scotia for this year, which I got when I was there, giving the actual expenditures last year, and these figures are less than what my honourable friend has given, $40.1 instead of $41.1 actual expenditure.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Sixty-one and a half million dollars. Now Newfoundland in the same year on the same thing, i.e. current account expenditure: Municipalities $1,700,000 the exact figure is $1,733,000 and the province $82,105,000.

MR. BROWNE: Here are the figures of the Minister of Finance.

MR. SMALLWOOD: These are the nett figures, as I have already told the House. If the honourable gentleman cannot follow me it is regrettable but it is not my fault but his. I have already told that these are nett fig-
The water has been squeezed out, nett current account expenditure. We eliminated the grants and receipts of Federal receipts in health grants and the like.

Nett expenditures by the Province $32,105,000 and the total is $33,838,000 i.e. $81 a head; in Nova Scotia it is $94 a head, $81 a head in Newfoundland.

MR. BROWNE: How did you find that out?

MR. SMALLWOOD: By dividing by 370,000 population. It was in Nova Scotia $94 a head or to be exact $94.9.

MR. BROWNE: Anybody can check your figures.

MR. SMALLWOOD: If necessary yes. These figures were checked by the Minister of Health, a former teacher and a very good mathematician.

MR. BROWNE: It is over $90 a head?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Maybe the House can amuse itself by working on the same figures. Excuse me, the nett figure is $28,300,000: I gave the wrong figure there.

MR. BROWNE: You made a mistake too?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Only a very small one. The figure is right. The second figure is $28,300,000 and the total is $30,330,000.

MR. BROWNE: How did the honourable gentleman arrive at the nett figure of $28,000,000, what was deducted from the total?

MR. SMALLWOOD: The Federal Grants.

MR. BROWNE: All of them?

MR. SMALLWOOD: All of the current account, naturally, as we are dealing only with current account that does not include the Trans-Canada Highway. It includes the health grants and the like, vocational education grants in the Department of Labour and quite a number of grants from the Government of Canada are all eliminated as they are in the case of Nova Scotia figures. That is in order to get the proper comparison. In other words, to compare like with like. These are the figures of the Bank of Canada to make a comparative figures, to make a realistic comparison.

MR. BROWNE: Only estimates.

MR. SMALLWOOD: They are not.

MR. BROWNE: If my honourable friend is reading a report made last October how can he think that can be more accurate than what has been given in the Legislature this year, in March or April?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I have not time to go through all this—it is in very small type, and in the middle of my speech it is not practical to do it. I have to continue.

Now I have to turn to another point. I saw the headline in the Evening Telegram the other day. I did not jot down the date, but it was within the last few days. The headline reads as follows: "Hollett" and that word is underlined with a black ruler. Then there is a colon at the end of it. Then in black type—cement missing—Then a question—is work on cement mill? Then the story goes on, "The question of the missing cement was flung in the House of Assembly yesterday in the third straight day of Opposition attack on what they term..."
the questionable activities in connection with setting up the new industries—168,000 bags of cement went somewhere.”

I will read that again: “168,000 bags of cement went somewhere, during the construction of the cement mill.” “Opposition Leader, Malcolm Hollett wanted to know where.” I should think he would and so would I, if 168,000 bags of cement went somewhere I would like to know where it went, if it happened in Newfoundland. “The cement,” he charged, “was bought by the government from the firm of W. J. Lundrigan, Limited at the price of $1.30 a bag, a total of $218,400.”

Now, Mr. Speaker, I wish to inform the House that the government did not pay W. J. Lundrigan Limited $1.30 a bag. The government did not pay 80c. a bag. The Government did not pay 30c. a bag because the government did not buy 168,000 bags of cement from them. They did not buy 68,000 from them. They did not buy eight—they did not buy six—they did not buy any.

MR. HOLLETT: They paid for it.

MR. SMALLWOOD: No they did not.

MR. HOLLETT: It is up in Finance, Oh yes!

MR. SMALLWOOD: Oh no! We did not buy and did not pay for it. Oh no! We did not buy any cement from Lundrigan. We did not pay him one cent for cement. We did not buy any cement from him.

MR. HOLLETT: I will find the vouchers for it.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, the honourable gentleman is very welcome to go on another hunt for vouchers, all he likes. But I tell him now the government bought no cement from Lundrigan and paid him nothing for nothing, nothing for cement. They did not buy any cement and did not pay them for any cement. I can tell the Opposition now that less than 60,000 bags of cement were used and bought by Lundrigan. I don’t know what he paid and care less. It did not concern us. Now he had to put that cement into concrete under his contract, and he did so, and he was paid for doing that, from $37 to $58 per cubic yard, the standard price in the agreement. I was talking today on the telephone with Mr. Lundrigan, at lunch time, and these are my notes as I took it down.

MR. HOLLETT: Is that the authority for saying the government never paid?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I am the authority, if the honourable gentleman knows a better authority than I to say the government of Newfoundland bought no cement and paid for none let him go and find a better authority.

MR. HOLLETT: The Finance Department.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Better than the Premier? The honourable gentleman is quite welcome to that belief, may it serve him well. Now in the agreement that Lundrigan made the standard price for concrete was $37 per cubic yard in place—I hope the honourable gentleman notices the word “in place.” The price of the concrete was $37 a yard, in place. Now will the honourable gentleman try and remember that William J. Lundrigan, even if he is a friend of this government, is an honourable Newfoundland and an honourable Christian gentleman. Will they try to bear that in mind. In all of Newfoundland there is no more decent Christian gentleman than William J. Lundrigan; a very successful industrialist, a very successful businessman but none-the-less a gentleman, a decent, honourable, Christian gentleman. His contract required him to put standard concrete in place for $37 per cubic yard. Now that price included supplying the cement, supplying the aggregate, supplying all the preparations, supplying the forms, supplying the pouring. That was all $37 per cubic yard of concrete in place. I think my honourable friend, the Minister of Finance, will agree and I think that anyone in this Chamber or out of this Chamber will agree that at that time that was a reasonable price.

MR. HOLLETT: We did not dispute that.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The honourable gentleman does not and did not, and I hope he still does not dispute it. Now as to reinforced concrete, which is a horse of another colour, it ran $40 to $58, where the variations depended on the amount of steel. That was all set forth in the specifications of the plant. Lundrigan had in addition to supplying the cement, aggregate, making all preparations, providing the forms, putting them in position and pouring the concrete, as in the case of standard cement, in addition had also to buy reinforcing steel, and had to buy it in the quantity required under the specifications of the MIAC plans and blue-prints of the mill. The amount of steel varied between twenty and two hundred pounds of steel. I regret that I did not jot down twenty pounds to what and two hundred pounds to what per cubic yard of concrete. That is the main explanation of the fact that reinforced concrete prices ran from $40 to $58 per cubic yard. The difference was accounted for by the difference in the quantity of steel, but it had to be placed in position and had to be bent and fastened and screwed and secured and it all had to be treated in that way. The more of this that had to be done the more time and labour was required. It naturally required more time and labour for two hundred pounds of reinforcing steel than it did for twenty pounds, indeed there was ten times as much labour and ten times as many expenses of all kinds.

MR. HOLLETT: Before the Honourable the Premier gets off that subject would be mind stating that against that the government paid for no cement, paid Lundrigan for no cement? Because, Sir, I must advise him that I hold in my possession copies of vouchers I got at the Finance Department showing, for instance — here are some of them—15,274 bags of cement at $1.30 and then 9,520 bags of cement, and on down the line, 14,208 bags of cement, giving the prices, and the vouchers were up there where the man was paid. I am afraid the Premier was misinformed.

MR. SMALLWOOD: No the honourable gentleman is misinformed. The honourable gentleman is proving once again that he is not capable in this instance at least of taking a document and understanding it.

MR. HOLLETT: Ridiculous.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It is not ridiculous. It is rather, ludicrous. The Honourable Leader of the Opposition tables a question, gets the answer and does not understand but jumps to the wrong conclusion, and a later explanation to the honourable gentleman won't guarantee that he understands. At least I will explain. William Lundrigan, Limited had a contract to erect the mill, to do certain excavations, to build certain forms, to make and pour certain concrete, to insert reinforcing steel and generally to construct and erect a certain large building, amongst the largest ever erected in Newfoundland this great cement mill at Corner Brook. He was paid a certain rate. He did not have the money to finance it from the beginning. He could not just lay out the entire cost of that great enterprise from a construction standpoint and when it was all done send a bill to the government to get paid. Obviously he had not that kind of money. What he got was progress payments. Obviously that is once again a common-place procedure in construction circles. He got progress payments, and the progress payments were related to the amount of progress made. I think, monthly— I am practically certain that payments made to that firm were made monthly.

The amount of each payment was related to the amount of expense to which the firm had gone up to that point. The expenses to which they had gone up to that point consisted, of course, of labour that they had paid or contracted to pay, cement they had bought and contracted to use and pay for and other materials and equipment that they acquired for the purpose of putting them into the plant. Now the fact that there is a relationship in the amount of progress payments made to the firm in the two years or so of the construction period, on progress made month by month, that the size of the monthly payments bore a relationship to the expenditure that Mr. Lundrigan, or his firm rather, had made, does not by any stretch of the imagination mean that the government was buying the cement, except in the very broad sense in which you might say the government was buying the plant. If we were paying to have the plant built then we were buying the plant, in a very loose sense of the word. But if I make a contract with my honourable friend, the Minister of Public Welfare to build a house for me or a barn or poultry house or a pig house, a ten thousand dollar poultry house and if he is a relatively small man, as small to the thousand as William J. Lundrigan was to half a million or more, then my honourable friend may say to me “Well now, what amount is it going to take me per month to get that building erected? I just can’t find that amount. Will you pay me so much when I start and so much say at the end of every week so that I can continue with so much on account? If you do not do that I have to get some financial assistance. I said, all right, I will pay you say at the end of every fortnight. “How much will you pay me?” I will give you progress payments. How will we decide the amount of progress payments? It will have to be according to what you spend, because what you spend will determine what you need. That means I will give you an inventory every fortnight of what I have spent, so much for concrete, so much for glass, so much for nails, so much for sand, so much for aggregate. He presents his bills and I give him a progress payment.

MR. HOLLETT: Then you did not pay for the cement, but it was in the bill you got.

MR. SMALLWOOD: In a list of expenses the contractor had incurred.
He bought the cement and paid for the cement and I paid him for the building, out of progress payments. He did pass me bills, labour bills, lumber bills, glass, cement and bills for anything else he had to buy to perform his contract—We are not buying his cement from him. We bought the concrete in the form of a building. We bought a building. No, we did not buy a building, we paid to get a building built. Now if the honourable gentleman wants to stretch that in any form he likes, and if any newspaper wishes to stretch it in the headlines such as—Cement Missing—

MR. HOLLETT: It is still missing.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It is still missing because it is still mythical cement. That is missing. You can take, the House can take any figure it desires; they could say it is 68,000 bags missing, they could say it is 1,680,000 bags missing or say three million or four million bags of cement were missing, and that would be just as accurate as to say there are 168,000 bags missing because it is purely mythical. It does not exist and never did exist. It is only a figment of somebody's imagination and nothing else.

MR. HOLLETT: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, I must state that together with a clerk of the Finance Department I went through all the bills and arrived at these figures. I admit I don't want to drag any clerk into it. The clerk was there assisting with the vouchers and getting the amount paid for any bill and check for money paid out. I want to explain that so that the Honourable Minister may be sure, because I shall go into that again.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Do by all means. I don't have much faith nor hope that the next digging in will enable him to understand. I hope that by seven or eight times from now, and if he gets a good bit of help he might then begin to get a glimmer of understanding of what these figures are about. I don't think that he will from just looking at them once more. I have so much experience of that gentleman I don't think that will happen.

MR. HOLLETT: I must say the explanation was explicit.

MR. SMALLWOOD: At the outset I said I was going to explain but I was not quite sure the honourable gentleman would understand.

MR. HOLLETT: I still don't understand.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I have no difficulty in realizing that.

MR. SMALLWOOD: If the government did not buy any cement from W. J. Lundrigan they did not pay.

MR. HOLLETT: Why did you pay?

MR. SMALLWOOD: We didn't.

MR. HOLLETT: You did—Why did you?

MR. SMALLWOOD: You did. You did not. The honourable gentleman can go on ad infinitum like that. We did not buy any cement therefore we did not pay for any cement.

Now, Mr. Speaker, this has been a long and wearisome session and much public business has been contracted and the members, particularly the outport members and us farmers and poultrymen are very anxious to get away from this House to our more interesting business of raising poultry, getting eggs laid, and I dare say cabin owners are very anxious to get out to their cabins. So it is no intention of mine unduly to prolong the closing of this Legislature, for which reason I don't intend to go on any longer, I end as I began.

(1) The Opposition are absolutely convinced there is to be an election this year. I know why they are convinced, know all the steps that happened to bring about their being convinced. That is a trade-secret. I won't go into that. That is a trade-secret belonging to the party. Nevertheless the fact remains that they are decided and as a matter of fact they are determined that there is to be an election. They have even named the date, early in November.

MR. HOLLETT: We could name the date now if we wanted to.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Go ahead.

MR. HOLLETT: I don't intend to say but could if I wanted.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I ask the honourable member not to keep it secret from me too long when the date is to be. I think I ought to know this. Maybe they have not decided on the final date, but it is to be early in November. We have that clue to go on. The honourable gentleman said it cannot be June because the Honourable Minister of Mines and Resources and myself are going to Labrador. We are leaving on the boat the “Bonnie Nell” on the 22nd if the House is closed and if not the “Bonnie Nell” is going to be out of luck. After the House is closed the Honourable Minister and I are going down to Labrador and I hope to get back sometime in July. So the election won't be before we get back in July. I understand from the honourable gen-

Now point No. 2 is that the Opposition are girding their loins, and what a set of loins. Anyhow they are girding themselves, Mr. Speaker, and pulling up their socks and girding their loins and donning their armor and getting ready for the election. They are starting now. The campaign is on as far as we are concerned. Talk about Don Quixote and his windmills battling the very elements. They are there in this very election. It is to be the battle of the century, “Battle Malcolm” “Battle Billy.”

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker—

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is unparliamentary, I withdraw it. Anyhow it is to be a famous battle.

MR. SPEAKER: Order.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It is this battle to win this election this year, that the Opposition have called. It is to be a famous battle. Their grandchildren will tell about it, the Battle of 1954—The famous battle of the election.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I go on to a serious point, and this is very serious. I think I have noticed something developing in this present session of the House. I think I have, and I believe I am not alone in this thought. I believe there are other members of the House who think the same thing. I think I have noticed something new in Newfoundland. I think I see the beginning, the deliberate beginning, deliberate with malice aforethought, deliberately purposeful, a decision to bring into Newfoundland and to copy here in Newfoundland some of the worst aspects of McCarthyism as we have seen it in the United States; the technique of the smear, i.e. McCarthyism.

MR. HOLLETT: Who smeared there a moment ago.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The smear is to take this form—Somehow or other this government, somehow, there is no accusation, no direct charge, but the hint is conveyed, the insinuation—

MR. BROWNE: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker—The honourable member is using innuendo here if he is referring to honourable members of the Opposition. If he is, I don’t think he is justified in carrying on this conversation or this speech.

MR. SPEAKER: I will have to uphold the point taken.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Sir, I had not mentioned the Opposition. I had mentioned them and moved on.

MR. BROWNE: Innuendo.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I said the technique is the McCarthy technique.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order—

MR. SPEAKER: My ruling upheld that point of order.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The Speaker ruled, as I understand it, not to apply that description to honourable members of the Opposition. I have not done so, Mr. Speaker, I have not done so. I said it is the technique of McCarthy, the McCarthy technique of the smear, and the suggestion is a suggestion of graft, of corruption.

MR. BROWNE: May I ask the honourable gentleman to whom he is referring?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I don’t know that I can name anybody by name.

MR. BROWNE: May I ask the honourable gentleman to what body or group of people he refers?

MR. SMALLWOOD: “Tories” in St. John’s.

MR. BROWNE: To the Opposition?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, not necessarily.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, I must object to the honourable gentleman going on with accusations of that kind. We are doing our duty, and if we have reason and grounds for certain investigations what are we to do? Are we to drop them or go on with them?

MR. SMALLWOOD: As far as investigations are concerned I take second place to no one in Newfoundland. I act with promptness when I order investigations to be made. I have nothing to hide, nothing.

MR. BROWNE: Neither have we anything to hide.

MR. SPEAKER: It is a delicate matter. Of course such charges ought not to be made against the Opposition. However it is not the business of this Chair to defend a political party.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I think the Opposition opposite would flatter themselves if they think they represent all the opposition to this government or even that they represent all the “Tories.” I think if they believed that they would be kidding themselves. In fact there is far more opposition to this Government than I see across there and far more "Tories" than I see there or see represented there. So I say, Mr. Speaker, I ask the people of Newfoundland to take notice—I am the first to do that—I am the first to ask them to take notice of the beginning of McCarthyism in Newfoundland, the technique of the smear, the suggestion of graft, of corruption. Let us see that it does not grow. There is no place for McCarthyism. There is no place in Newfoundland for the "Smear." If there is graft let it be investigated and no one spared, no one, no one.

MR. HOLLETT: Good.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Absolutely no one spared, if there is graft. I have no reason in the world, none whatsoever, not a scrap of reason to believe there is graft, none at all, not a scrap, on either side of the House.

MR. BROWNE: What about the question mark? What about the man you cannot mention?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Is he a member of the government? Is he a member of this party? Was he ever a member of this government?

MR. BROWNE: The right arm.

MR. SMALLWOOD: And implicitly trusted. But he was not a member of this government nor of this party nor of this House. I cannot guarantee that amongst four hundred thousand people there will never be a Judas, someone to betray us. I can't guarantee that when I place my confidence in John Jones that John Jones will be worthy of the confidence I placed in him. I cannot guarantee that the public chest will not be robbed or that people associated with it would be robbed, but I can guarantee that if I hear of it, if I get the slightest hint of it, if I get the slightest suggestion of it, all I need is the slightest suggestion and let it be my nearest and closest friend and I will call in the R.C.M.P. I don't know any better. I have called them in. I am not at liberty to say but the R.C.M.P. are not the only ones. I can say that the sky is the limit. We will get at the bottom of it and the evidence will be produced in the court where it ought to be, without smears, without hints, it will all come out, every scrap of it will come out and we will see if, for instance, I will need to hang my head. We will find that out and it won't be many weeks before we will see if I am just full of bravado or whistling to keep up my spirits, and we will see if anyone here is whistling to keep up his courage. We know what we know. What we know is a lot more than the honourable gentleman knows, a lot more.

MR. HOLLETT: You should.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I am quite certain, I was never surer of anything in my life than we are of this that we know a lot more about what is known than the honourable gentleman knows about what there is to know.

MR. HOLLETT: That is not our fault.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I am not blaming the honourable gentleman for that.

MR. HOLLETT: That is a matter of opinion.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It is a matter of hard brittle fact. If the honourable gentleman thinks he knows as much as the Attorney General about this whole business—

MR. HOLLETT: Knew it before he did.
MR. SMALLWOOD: The honourable gentleman did not. If he did he was terribly derelict in his duty not to report it to the police. He was not a friend of Newfoundland if he knew and did not tell. The first hint I ever got of this in my life was that same day the R.C.M.P. were called in, that very day. I got evidence that night and I got them out of bed at half-past midnight, and delivered the evidence that very same day.

MR. SPEAKER: The honourable member just must not allow himself to be inveigled into talking about something it is not proper to discuss.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, Mr. Speaker, and I am afraid we have gone a little too far in this direction. But I repeat—I warn the Newfoundland people—I warn them seriously and sincerely to be on guard against the technique of the smear. That is something we are not used to in Newfoundland. In Newfoundland what we are used to is jack-blunt talk and we call a man a crook and that is that. We call a man a crook and if he chooses we have to prove it or he proves it is a libel, but there are no wasted words about it, there is no stabbing in the back about it, no slitting a man's throat. In Newfoundland if we think a man is a crook we call him a crook, if we think he is a grafter we call him a grafter, that is our style and not the smear. I warn the Newfoundland people to beware of it, or organized McCarthyism against this Government.

MR. HOLLETT: If I may rise to a point there—The Honourable the Premier said: “When we think a man is a crook we call him a crook.” Now I have to refer to being called a crook by the honourable the Premier.

MR. SMALLWOOD: A crook? If I called the honourable gentleman a crook I apologize now, this year, last year or the year before. If I ever did call him a crook it was not in the sense of being a robber.

MR. SPEAKER: The Chair has no recollection of such word applied to any honourable member this afternoon. If honourable members are to go back to years past to bring up points of orders—But that is ridiculous—Will the honourable member continue his speech.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is all, Mr. Speaker, except just one point: If we have an election this year, and if we don’t have it this year, and if we have it next year, and if we don’t have it next year, we must have it the year after, but when the election is held God knows there are enough honest issues separating these two parties about which to fight.

MR. HOLLETT: Hear! Hear!

MR. SMALLWOOD: Without going McCarthying, not American, because he is an insult to America, but going McCarthy. We don’t want to do that. We have eliminated from our politics, and in that I have played my part, one thing that was always a disgrace to our politics, always a disgrace. I played quite a part in eliminating and it does not exist any more. It is not an issue any more. Don’t let us replace one filthy technique with another. Let us keep the smears and let us keep McCarthyism out.

MR. SPEAKER: The Minister of Finance, and I hope that before the debate is over we will have the pleasure of hearing from him even at the risk of prolonging the session of the House.
MR. SPEAKER: If no other honourable gentleman wishes to speak, I will put the question.

MR. POWER: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of the debate.

Motion carried.

On motion the House recessed for ten minutes.

MR. SPEAKER: Before resuming the Orders of the Day I have some answers to questions—Is it the pleasure of the House to receive them now?

MR. SPENCER: Mr. Speaker, I have the answer to Question No. 98 on the Order Paper of May 26 in the name of the Honourable Member for St. John's East. The question was almost identical with one on the Order Paper from the Honourable and Learned Member for St. John's West, and this answer purports to serve as a reply in both cases.

Answer tabled—with following comments:

In the case of electrical installations the work for the year 1953-54 was divided amongst some ten or eleven different electrical firms or operators or companies. In the case of plumbing and heating the work has been divided amongst some twelve or thirteen or more contractors.

What was the extent of Electrical, Plumbing and Heating repairs (improvements and new installations) made in all Public Buildings, Hospitals and Institutions, during the Fiscal year 1953-54.

Were tenders called for such work, if so, table details.

Who were the individuals, firms, companies or persons, performing this work?

What was the amount paid to each individual, firm, company or person concerned?

Answer:

It is the policy of the Department of Public Works to invite tenders for works in all cases where it is practicable to do so, but this can be done only to a limited extent on ordinary works of maintenance and alteration, as it is not possible, as a general rule, to prepare a firm specification on which competitive bids may be obtained. In the case of new buildings or additions, contracts made are all inclusive and cover plumbing, heating and electrical installations as well as erection of structures.

It had been the practice over a very considerable number of years to have one firm attend to repairs to plumbing, heating or electrical installations, as the case may be, in a particular building, and this practice has been continued under the present Government. A firm completely familiar with all the details of the service concerned in a particular building is in a better position to effect repairs with despatch and economy than would otherwise be the case.

The following amounts were paid to firms listed here under for electrical works:

Resumed Orders of the Day:
Committee of the Whole House on the following Bills:
A Bill, "An Act to Amend the Saw Mills Act."
A Bill, "An Act Further to Amend the Highway Traffic Act."
A Bill, "An Act Further to Amend the Alcoholic Liquors Act."
Chairman of Committee (Mr. Courage):
A Bill, "An Act to Amend the Saw Mills Act."
Clauses 1 and 2 carried.
MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I presume it is not necessary for people who have timber in fee simple to get any special license to have someone to cut the timber on their land?
DR. ROWE: Of course not. No. The significance of that, Mr. Chairman, and I am speaking from memory - The Old Crown License definitely said that a Crown License was a License to operate a saw mill on Crown Land, to saw timber taken from Crown Land. It was restrictive, whereas now the restriction is removed, and the timber does not of necessity have to come from Crown Land, but for instance different companies such as Bowaters might ask a man to saw—
MR. BROWNE: Do they have a license for that?
DR. ROWE: If they are to operate on Crown Land.
MR. BROWNE: But on Bowaters Limits which they own in fee simple he would not need a license.
DR. ROWE: Not if cutting on Bowaters Limits.
MR. BROWNE: Is this a sort of protection?
DR. ROWE: This is to liberalize a little more, if the mill, for instance was right on the border he could not saw any timber for Bowater, it had to be cut on Crown Land.
Clauses 2 and 3 carried.
Clause 4 read:
4. Section 10 of the said Act is repealed and the following substituted therefor:

"10. A Crown license entitles the licensee to erect necessary mill buildings on Crown Lands at a location to be stated in the license and to saw thereon timber, wherever obtained, and this right continues as long as the license or any renewal thereof continues in force."

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, that is a considerable difference from the old section which I have in front of me. Is there some reason for that change?

DR. ROWE: It makes a more clear-cut statement of Section 10 in the parent Act. The amendment provides that with a Crown License a person can erect a mill on Crown Lands to saw timber from any source. The original permitted mill owners to saw timber cut only on Crown Land. Most mill owners saved on Crown Land and land privately owned—

Clause 4 carried.
Clause 5:
MR. BROWNE: If he has land of his own don't give him a license?
DR. ROWE: Yes, that is to make sure that they get the timber from their own holding and don't get it directly from Crown Lands.

Clause 5 carried.
Clause 6:
MR. BROWNE: Not that this section takes away the right of private license, and does not entitle the licensee to cut timber on Crown Land. Is there anything a substitute for that?
DR. ROWE: The earlier clause will do that, Mr. Chairman. There is nothing whatsoever in this Act to prevent a man from getting a saw mill license for any legitimate reason.

MR. BROWNE: I think it is to protect the Crown Lands.

DR. ROWE: Yes very much so. It also makes sure that a man has a large timber holding on private land. That does not confer upon him the right to go on Crown Land and get it as well.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I notice here, and draw to the attention of the Attorney General, that a section of the Act is struck out and nothing has been substituted for it. It seems to me the amending Act should be so drafted that something should be inserted. It does not have to be similar.

MR. CURTIS: Would the honourable member suggest putting in anything at all just for the sake of making a section?

MR. BROWNE: There are twelve. One of these could be put in.

MR. CURTIS: I will have a look at the Act.

MR. BROWNE: I take it that is a matter of drafting.

MR. CURTIS: Maybe when the committee rises we could ask leave to sit again and I could look into it. It may be just a matter of renumbering.

Carried.

Clause 7 carried.

Clause 8:

DR. ROWE: Mr. Chairman on that point I should say that the penalties have all been brought together instead of being scattered here and there.

Clause 8 carried.

Clause 9:
MR. BROWNE: Under that clause the licenses are issued for the calendar year.

DR. ROWE: We make a practice, Mr. Chairman in the making of any changes that while this is going on—if we make any changes such as here, in all fairness we should give them a reasonable amount of notice.

MR. BROWNE: Who brings it to their attention?

DR. ROWE: These instructions are all sent out in a monthly letter to every one of our forestry officers throughout the province and they are in turn requested to bring it to their attention. In addition to that sawmill owners are always listed and any changes like that are sent out to them.

Clause 9 carried.

Clause 10:

MR. BROWNE: Why was that made retroactive for four years?

DR. ROWE: That is a point I made yesterday. That refers to a practice which came to us from Commission of Government days. I don't know, Sir, whether it is perfectly legal. At any rate the practice is to hold money to pay for past debts. In order to make sure the Attorney General's Department have gone back to four years. Why it is four instead of five I really don't know, but may be some technical reason.

MR. BROWNE: I directed a question to the Honourable the Attorney General yesterday on this particular section here, which entitles the Minister to collect fees which were not in effect, as least so it seems to me. I am not sure it was in effect.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It probably indemnifies against the possibility of action for something that happened years ago.

DR. ROWE: I think this is to enable us to collect from people who since the 30th day of January 1950 have been operating. They are liable for fees but due to a defect in the Act we were unable to collect for over one year. This is to wipe out that provision in the Summary Jurisdiction Act which does not allow us to take action after one year. It says, "all actions must be taken within one year." We have found it so in this case and in another Act, a bill which I will be bringing in in the present session.

MR. BROWNE: Was the reason for it delinquency on the part of the department officials in not collecting or taking action?

MR. CURTIS: Apparently there was no provision in the Act whereby they could sue. The only punishment they could inflict on persons who sawed without a license was to take them before court for operating without a license. This is to rectify that by making the payment retroactive. In other words if a man operated a sawmill without a license he can be sued for breaking the law but he cannot be sued for the license he should have paid. I understand the object of this is to recover as a debt the amount the licensee avoided paying by operating without a license.

MR. BROWNE: The word is not defined in the clause—the word "Fees." It is usually assumed to be a license.

DR. ROWE: Perhaps I could explain it. As I said repeatedly, after one year had elapsed from the time a man becomes delinquent in his fee we could not collect from him, as the Honourable the Attorney General says, Well this is to correct that defect. Now you might wonder how a year could elapse. Well sometimes, of course, especially in more isolated places in the province it might be a long time, where you have thirteen or fourteen hundred saw mills. The most of these men would be basically honest but then we find some person who after futile attempts on the part of the official was not coming across, until finally the bill was outlawed, so to speak, after one year and we could not collect. We want to get some of these persons in a position where they have to pay that and make sure that they will pay us.

MR. CURTIS: The fact is there is no limitation of time to actions taken by the Crown. Therefore if we don't put in a limitation there a man may be sued in twenty years time for something he did this year. I would suggest we put this bill through as it is, and the Committee will ask leave to sit again, and I will go through this matter, if I can once get to my department.

MR. CURTIS: In the future what would you do?

MR. BROWNE: That is what I mean —for the future.

MR. CURTIS: We could make it the same as the Statute of Limitations, six years. I will take that up.

Clause 10 carried.

MR. BROWNE: That is one point I wish to make and bring to the attention of the Honourable the Attorney General as far as the drafting is concerned. I think a great deal of confusion will arise if this practice is to be followed: section 23 and 26 are repealed and Section 26 is put back, then the next section is 27, so that there is one gap there. It seems to me it would not be too difficult to—

MR. CURTIS: It would be better to split section 26 up into two. I will check up with the draftsman and see.

MR. BROWNE: I think in the future it would be advisable to tell the drafting gentleman that in so far as possible it would be better to keep the numbering conventional.

MR. CURTIS: Surely there is no reason in the world to have section 24 and then 24A and no section 25. I will have to stop somebody's wages this week. I think it is wise to have the clause carried and then ask leave to sit again.

Clause carried.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, do we have to make the fines so heavy?

DR. ROWE: What we have done on that is to raise the maximum from $100 to $500 and from one month to six. The reason is that some offenses could amount to or could involve tens of thousands and in fact sometimes have involved tens of thousands of dollars. That is put there to take care of some of the heavier cases where there might be some large sum of money involved. It is still left to the discretion of the judge.
Carried.

MR. HIGGINS: Mr. Chairman, could I have the permission of the committee to refer back to Section 7. Would it not be more advisable to say Sections 2 to 7 inclusive?

DR. ROWE: Since we are on that section—that date was set consulting with a number of sawmill owners.

MR. CURTIS: I will bring in the revised version. We will let it stay as it is and when I come back it is quite likely then the entire Act will be renumbered and adjustments made.

Moved and seconded the committee report progress and ask leave to sit again.

Committee of the Whole on Bill, "An Act Further to Amend the Highway Traffic Act."

Clause 5:

MR. HIGGINS: It was my understanding that the Honourable the Premier suggested that that might be allowed to stand because of some disagreement on sub-clause 3.

Agreed the committee leave Clause 5 stand and consider Clause 6:

MR. SPENCER: What was the point, Mr. Chairman?

MR. HIGGINS: The position was, Mr. Chairman, that I raised the point and was subsequently supported by the Premier. I questioned the wisdom of this particular section. You could have a situation arise where a man would be arrested for, say, drunken driving, and his car moved off the highroad, say for the purpose of argument, to Fort Townshend. A couple of days later when he is released and goes to get his car he finds the cylinder block is frozen, and he has no redress. The constable may have carelessly left it out in the open. Under this section as it now stands he has no redress and no action or other procedure can be taken against the Minister, constable or overseer in respect of anything done under this section. Or it may be pushed over and left somewhere and somebody gets in and releases the brakes and it runs over a hill and is smashed up. It seems to me the rights of the public are completely ignored.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, another consideration is that a man may not be arrested at all. He may for some reason or defect in the car such as it being suddenly stalled, and then someone comes along and says this ought to be removed and takes it away. He is perfectly innocent as far as any offence goes yet through some negligence of the person who takes the vehicle away from the position it was it is damaged subsequently. Now I can understand the position where it is necessary such as where it is blocking traffic, but I feel there should be some obligation on the part of the person taking the vehicle. That is a fairly important provision because we are dealing here with property—rights, and a vehicle may be worth $300, or $4000 and it is not fair that a man, without his knowledge, should have his vehicle taken away and subsequently damaged through somebody’s fault, and he has no right of action.

MR. SPENCER: Mr. Chairman, the point raised by the honourable gentleman has possibly some merit. There are so many ways these little things can possibly be twisted around. Yet how the honourable gentleman can say a person who has deliberately left a vehicle on the highway is innocent, in the light of the present Highway Traffic Act, is something a little beyond me. He cannot leave a vehicle there and be innocent. If it is a case of a man being picked up and arrested it follows the people arresting him must have the vehicle removed or put out of the way. It cannot be left in the traffic, as an obstruction to traffic. It is just a case of ordinary common-sense. Now I cannot see how any innocent person could deliberately leave a car there. I can also see a hypothetical case where a car may be left there and be frozen before the law enforcement officers arrive. I don't see the significance of anything further. It is merely meant to clear the highway and to permit the authorities to do so and recover the cost from the negligent person.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, only this morning I saw a van with a flat tire outside the entrance to the Cathedral yard in a congested area. I don't know what else was the matter. It certainly would have been beneficial to the public to have that vehicle removed. Now then supposing that it is removed, and in the course of removal or subsequently, due to the neglect of the police officer or the person in charge, it should be damaged. Is it fair or unfair that this person who is mentioned should be responsible?

MR. CURTIS: Is it fair that the police or whoever is doing the moving should have to be responsible? Who is responsible for having the car there? He should call and get the car out.

MR. BROWNE: I notice the Honourable the Attorney General showed some heat there.

MR. CURTIS: Just interest.

MR. BROWNE: Most intense interest. On Saturday all garages are closed and you cannot get anyone to come. You car is moved and subsequently damaged—That could happen right here in the City of St. John's.

MR. HIGGINS: The explanation given by the Honourable Minister of Public Works deals with Sections 1 and 2 but does not deal at all with subsection 3. I do suggest to the Honourable the Attorney General that Sub-section 3 is a direct abrogation of the common lay rights to any owner. Surely when the police or any official take over a car like that—

MR. CURTIS: It is to protect them that section is there.

MR. HIGGINS: I am talking about a man who may subsequently be acquitted. Then he goes back and finds his property damaged or destroyed through the neglect of the police. I suggest it would be manifestly unfair to leave the thing in, and I move it be stricken out.

MR. CURTIS: I, of course, look at it from the standpoint of the police. If a man were drunk in charge we would have to take the car on a frosty night and look after it. I don't think it is fair we should have to look after someone else's car. Let him or his friends do it. He should never be in that position. I think it is only a normal protection the police should have when they have a car dumped in their lap at two or three o'clock in the morning on a frosty night.

MR. BROWNE: On a frosty Friday.

MR. CURTIS: I don't know. My honourable friend knows the police well enough to know they don't go looking for work. No police officer is going to take a car away unless the thing is an obstruction. If he has to do that it is unfair that he should have to be responsible for it. I don’t think it is fair. There will be no voluntary neglect.

MR. HIGGINS: But a lot of involuntary. That is the point, Mr. Chairman. With all due respects, once we start whittling away the rights of individuals then we are heading for trouble. It is all right to say no police officer shall be liable, but you are going to meet the odd one, human nature being what it is. There is Bill Jones car. They don’t know what to do with it. They back it in front of a wall and smash the lights. That happens. The police park a car and does not pull in the brake and a poor fellow in the cell knows nothing about it, until he comes back, releases it and smashes the back fender, and the police are not liable.

MR. BROWNE: May I ask if the Attorney General knows whether there is any precedent for this in any of the Traffic Acts in any of the other provinces, apart from British Columbia?

MR. HIGGINS: The reference to British Columbia this morning had no bearing on this clause. I have just asked the Honourable the Attorney General myself if he knew if this is the only Act on our Statute Book where there is a protective clause for the department in such cases. I am quite certain he was not able to tell me actually.

MR. SPENCER: I would like to add I am quite satisfied the clause has been adopted from legislation elsewhere, not just at our request, but in the light of different opinions. I think we should have it stand and investigated.

MR. CURTIS: Rather than that I think the committee might ask leave to rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again.

MR. COURAGE: Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole have considered the matter to them referred, on the Bill, “An Act to Amend the Saw Mills Act,” the committee made some progress and asks leave to sit again.

Report received. Committee ordered sit again at a later hour this day.

MR. COURAGE: On the Bill, “An Act to Amend the Highway Traffic Act,” the Committee of the Whole have considered the matter to them referred, have made some progress and asks leave to sit again.

Report received. Committee ordered sit again at a later hour this day.

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Speaker, it being now two minutes to six I move the House do adjourn until tonight at 8:30 p.m.

Motion carried. House recessed until 8:30 p.m. tonight.

---

TUESDAY, June 15, 1954.

NIGHT SESSION

The House resumed at 8:30 of the clock.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Before we proceed with the business I would like to move that the House do not adjourn at 11 o’clock tonight to get through the business we have.

MR. BROWNE: I do not agree.

MR. SPEAKER: Moved that the House be not adjourned at 11 o’clock tonight.
MR. BROWNE: Can the Premier just get up and move a motion to vary the rules on the spur of the moment?

MR. SPEAKER: The motion is in order during the sitting. The motion may be made that the House may not adjourn. It is in order.

MR. BROWNE: Supposing it is in order, it seems to be a rush drive the Premier wants to put on, with so much legislation on the Order Paper and we can’t do very good work if we are going to work from eleven in the morning to twelve at night.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I am accustomed to working from 11 a.m. to 11 p.m.

MR. BROWNE: There are not many people like you.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The people of Newfoundland seem to agree on that. It is the feeling of the members of the House that we should work to get the business done.

Motion carried that the House do not adjourn at 11 o’clock.

House moved into Committee of the Whole.

Mr. Baxter Morgan took the Chair.

Committee of the Whole on Bill, “An Act to Amend the Highway Traffic Act.” This afternoon we reached Clause 5.

MR. CURTIS: In connection with that section I have thought it over and checked it over with the staff. I have not been able to get in touch with the people who drafted this section but it will be remembered that some time ago a man was arrested on Topsail Hill and while he was gone his car slipped its brakes and went over the bank. He sued the officer who made the arrest and the late Mr. Fox gave judgment against the police. But in an appeal the decision was reversed. The court held that the police arrested the man and it was not up to them to look after the car. A man accepts responsibility for his car left on the road after the police have arrested a drunk driver or if they have to move a car that is blocking traffic. So many things might happen in either event. If the car is left on the road and somebody steals from it, the police can’t accept responsibility. If the brakes slip we can’t accept responsibility. If the man who owns the car is foolish enough to get drunk and be arrested it is his hard luck. If a car gives out it is a simple matter to get somebody to give him a push off the road but if the car is left where it is a menace to traffic the police have the right to move it or pay somebody to move it. We cannot accept responsibility and I am not prepared to accept an amendment to this law.

MR. HIGGINS: The Attorney General is referring to cars left on the road that may fall over a cliff or into a ditch. The point I made this afternoon is that when the police take over the control of a man’s car and put it somewhere for safekeeping while in custody, if anything happens to that car through over-negligence on the part of the people in whose possession the car is, there should be some redress to the injured party.

MR. BROWNE: May I point out an ordinary case where the police make a search of property and seize goods under a Warrant and they bring them to the Police Station. The man goes to trial and the case against him is dismissed. He is acquitted and he... goes to look for his property, maybe jewellery or watches. It is not there. Who is responsible? The police have come in and taken it under authority. It leaves the way open for a great deal of abuse.

MR. CURTIS: But that is not in this section.

MR. BROWNE: But it is similar. The police take charge of property.

MR. CURTIS: They are forced to take a car.

MR. BROWNE: A man is punished by process of law but he should not have to suffer for someone else's negligence. Negligence is a wrong done to a person and if we can imagine various ways by which one person gets charge of another's property, there are many ways of doing that, and if he has charge of that property he is responsible for it while it is in his possession. This is a great departure from the ordinary law of the land. Where a person has property and if any one interferes with it he should be able to take action against him. It is all right for my honourable friend who represents St. John's East and may have many clients.

MR. HIGGINS: That is a monstrous thing to say.

MR. CURTIS: If people are going to get drunk in charge of cars and are going to get arrested, I do not want to accept responsibility for anything the police do. We are always very lenient and we would not stand on this thing but it is nice to have it there. We have acknowledged liabilities. We might hide behind it in a lot of cases but in a proper case we would not take advantage of this section. It is nice to have it there.

MR. BROWNE: The Minister feels he should get every protection for police officers, one hundred per cent. He says the Crown won't take advantage of this particular section. He may not always be Attorney General. "No action or any other legal proceeding," whatever that means. I suppose he can't even get possession of the car. No legal proceeding may be taken in respect of anything done under this section. I do not know what other legal proceeding is meant there. I suppose no prosecution either. Suppose the police officer should be under the influence of liquor when he takes the car, then he can't be prosecuted. That is not novel and it is not impossible. It is not beyond the realm of imagination.

MR. HOLLETT: It seems to me my learned friends on my right and left certainly have established a case. If I were to be the judge there, which I am not, I would say some little time had to be taken to consider it. The plea has been put up by my learned friends on my right and left that if damage happens to the car where the police leave it, it is too bad for the man who owns the car. The police take no responsibility. The car might have been taken to a dangerous place. It might be dangerous to park or house a car there and yet the Crown is not liable. The man may not even be drunk. He may not even commit a breach as regarding liquor but the police arrest him on a charge and they are allowed to take his car and put it where they like, maybe in a garage or the police garage which might burn down and this man has no right of action against the Crown. I think some saving clause might go in there.

MR. BROWNE: The tendency now in the widest jurisdiction in Canada is to grant the citizen greater rights than he formerly possessed. He does not have to get a pass from the Attorney General to take action against the Crown. I would draw the attention of the House to provisions of the Alcoholic Liquors Act which are similar. Clauses 97 and 98 called the Protection of Officers:

97. When a tribunal before which a proceeding against an officer has taken place, for anything done by him under this Act, has certified that there was a probable cause for the action of the officer, and that it was not malicious, a verdict or judgment shall not be given against the officer for more than five cents damages, nor for any costs of suit.

98. Where in the course of prosecution under this Act, it appears that an officer has acted in good faith under the powers conferred by this Act, the magistrate shall, if requested so to do by the officer or on his behalf, give a certificate if the case be so that there was probable cause for the action of the officer and that it was not malicious.

I did cite an instance where the officer who is supposed to carry out this provision is himself committing an offense under this section. It is a hypothetical case but it might happen and in such a case should the officer get punished? If he did have an accident as a result of being intoxicated or driving carelessly he would be prosecuted by superior officers. Suppose he does damage while committing this offense should he not be liable?

MR. CURTIS: But the difficulty is to determine the condition of the car when it is left there. A man who leaves his car on the road or is drunk in charge of the car when arrested, and when he is in the custody of the police something happens to the car and you will get a tremendous number of disputes as to what condition the car was in. I do not think the Crown, who are the people, should accept the liability of a car the condition of which is not made clear. I am a policeman and I go to a car and try to get it in. How do I know there is no water in the radiator and should not start the engine or I should not drive it because of some defect in the engine and I drive it and ruin, say a gear. We have to protect the people who are forced into this position. I could add to the end of it "In respect of anything done in gross negligence." A man could say, "Oh this car was wonderful when I left it there." It might be in the last stages of dilapidation. I do not know what to say.

MR. BROWNE: I would say "Unlawful." I would say if he commits a breach himself.

MR. HIGGINS: I would suggest the Honourable the Attorney General submit this sub-section to two draftsmen who might put it in a more acceptable way. If you refer back to Sub-section 2 of 72 (a) you will find the minister requires the right to get from the owner the cost of removal and detention of it. One would believe that it is going to be kept in some place where one might expect nothing would happen to it. I would suggest that the Attorney General put a better polish on that.

Item stand.

Clause 6 read:

6. Section 93 of the said Act, as amended by the Act No. 677 of 1953, is further amended as follows:
(a) By repealing subsection (1) and substituting therefor the following:

"(1) Subject to this Act, where bodily injury to, or the death of, any person or damage to property in an amount apparently exceeding one hundred dollars, results from an accident in which a motor vehicle is in any manner directly or indirectly involved, if the motor vehicle is, or is required to be, registered under this Act, the Minister, after receipt of notice in writing of the accident, if he is satisfied from reports of the accident submitted to him that the owner or driver may be liable or responsible for the accident, may suspend the license of the driver and the license of every motor vehicle registered in the name of the owner and/or the driver but, notwithstanding anything in this Act, where the driver's license or car license of any person is suspended under this section that person may, upon notice in writing to the Minister, appear before a magistrate in the district in which the accident occurred—for a certificate that he is in no way liable or responsible for the accident and if the magistrate is satisfied that the person is not liable nor responsible for the accident he may give him a certificate to that effect, and the Minister shall on receipt of the certificate reinstate the driver's license or car license, or both, of that person."

(b) By inserting in subsection (4) immediately after the words and figures "pursuant to subsection (1)" the words "which has not been reinstated under that subsection."

MR. BROWNE: I take it that where a motor car is involved in an accident causing damage say, exceeding $100.00, the Minister on receiving notice of the accident shall suspend license of the driver and license of every motor vehicle granted in the name of the owner. He has two cars and both are suspended and that person may give ten days notice to the Minister to come before the Magistrate and show he is innocent or a certificate that he is in no way liable or responsible for the accident. If an accident occurs while the House is in session, somebody's car is outside, a valuable car and someone runs into it and does some damage, the owner of both cars have their licenses suspended and an innocent man must go to the trouble of going before the magistrate ten days afterwards and during that time he has lost his license, although he is innocent.

MR. HIGGINS: Was this amendment drafted in the office of the Attorney General or the Minister of Public Works?

MR. SPENCER: The drafting of legislation is first prepared by officials of Public Works who handle that business and is then checked and put in legal form by the Department of the Attorney General. The clause to which my learned friend has referred and of which he has skipped a bit, its twofold really. The clause is to protect the innocent person. Whereas now under the Act that innocent person has no redress, and this particular clause was put in to give that person some redress to get out of the dilemma in which he gets. As to the hypothetical case which my learned and honourable friend has cited that is quite true. It has happened on the street and the person who owns the other car, which we might term "A" for purposes of this section, might be at fault. The innocent gentleman in here might not be at fault, nevertheless under the law as it stood up to now, that car could be impounded as well. The honourable gentleman in referring to it did not clearly, I believe, point out that the only case where the license is suspended automatically is in the case of bodily injury or death. Subject to this Act where bodily injury to or the death of any person or bodily damage, it is to prevent the person from operating his vehicle after he might have been involved in an accident which may have caused bodily injury or death. The innocent person under the law would have his license suspended as well and he would have no redress but he would be given ten days to make an appearance before the magistrate and have himself reinstated. I am informed that it is generally being done elsewhere. We do not want to push anything through that is not satisfactory.

Clause stand.

Clauses 7 and 8 carried.

MR. BROWNE: I wonder if the Honourable Minister has any explanation for sub-section (e)? It seems a very strange thing that an insurance company should back out of an insurance policy and let the unsatisfied judgment fund take over. I can't imagine how it could happen.

MR. HIGGINS: And might recover his payment. Would that cover, Mr. Chairman, the position where an insurance company pays a claim for its assured and subsequently under the subrogation clause recover it again from the guilty party. If that is what it means I think it is a very wise application. I don't see why we should have an unsatisfied judgment fund to reimburse insurance companies.

MR. SPENCER: I questioned that and asked for an explanation. It is to make sure that an insured person cannot obtain money from the unsatisfied judgment fund and so reimburse an insurance company. That is to enable the Minister of Finance where an order has been made directing the payment of money out of the fund to retain from such money and pay into the Exchequer Account the amount of any indebtedness by which the judgment creditor might be indebted to the Government. To give you a slightly clearer example of that, I can cite a case where a certain person was injured, went to hospital for a considerable period of time and received a judgment against the offending person to the extent of several thousands of dollars. In the meantime the hospital fees were due, and had assumed quite a sum for several months. I don't know the exact amount. Although the unsatisfied judgment fund had paid the amount then the Government department approached the insured and sought to collect their bill. The person said; I am sorry my money is all spent. That is an actual case that definitely happened right here within a few miles of the city of St. John's when a certain individual was injured, went to hospital and collected the amount from the unsatisfied judgment fund. Yet when the Department of Health endeavoured to obtain the amount to cover hospital expenses the individual said "I am sorry but my money is all spent," that is what (c) means.
MR. BROWNE: My impression of section (c) (ee) was that it was intended to provide, or to prevent rather, a case where a person who is insured with an insurance company and has collided with some other person whose insurance company now pays the injured party's damage. In other words John Smith is insured; we will say, with the XY Insurance Company. He is the aggrieved party and the insurance company pays him and then uses his name to sue the person who is responsible and recovers in his name. As I interpret this section this is to advise the Minister that the application although it is in the name of John Smith is really the XY Insurance Company. I think, if that is the case, the Minister is to be congratulated on it.

MR. CURTIS: It looks to me as if the section is to protect against insurance companies—have the insurance companies pay their bills.

MR. HIGGINS: That is right.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, while we are on the section I wonder if the Minister would tell us how the idea of the unsatisfied judgment fund is working out, and how it stands today.

MR. SPENCER: From what I have learned from the records of the department it is working out very well.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Hear! Hear!

MR. SPENCER: Perhaps that is the briefest way to put it. We have been collecting a dollar a year from each person getting a license up to now. The collections, if I remember rightly, were of the order of $60,000 during the past two years, about $35,000 each year. The total amount paid out, I believe, is something less than $30,000 thus far. That is my understanding, speaking strictly from memory, something like $30,000, unless I am very greatly mistaken.

MR. HIGGINS: I am very happy to hear that. I was under the impression—I know three or four maximum claims to have gone to the $5,000 mark.

Carried.

Moved the Committee rise and report progress and ask leave to sit again on this Bill.

Committee of the Whole on Bill, "An Act to Amend the Alcoholic Liquors Act."

Clauses 1 and 2 carried.

Clause 3:

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I wonder why it is that the Board of Liquor Control does not differentiate now between what is a club and what is a business establishment. Under the definition of club in the Alcoholic Liquors Act—I referred to this before, and I do it again—club means a cooperative society or association of persons which is the owner or lessee of an establishment used solely for the purpose of a social or athletic nature. Yet the government does not seem to be ashamed of it nor does it seem to pay any attention to it. Why is it that the government has persisted in doing this? Even in localities where people have protested and have petitioned the government to take a referendum or a plebiscite in the area, the government still ignores the petition and ignores the wishes of the people. I am referring to the locality of Kilbride and Mount Pearl where the people protested will all the strength in their power against the establishment of the "Old Mill." Is there a nigger in the woodpile? Is there somebody with influence in the government stronger than the wishes of the respectable people who live in that area who have put that petition into the House?

I feel the Government should give an answer to that petition. What are they going to do about it? Are they going to have a plebiscite? I think they ought to give a definite answer. There is sufficient time gone for the government to have given it consideration, and they should know now what they are going to do about it, Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the Premier could divert his attention from the interesting magazine he is reading and pay attention to the business of the House for a moment, and answer the question I have put before him, speaking on behalf of the people who signed that petition put into the government?

MR. HIGGINS: Mr. Chairman, I must say I support very strongly my honourable and learned colleague's objection. Again I would like to revert to the statement made by the Honourable the Premier yesterday in introducing this particular bill. He said, as I recall it at the time, it might be found necessary for the Board to differentiate between clubs and clubs, or between hotels and hotels, and as I understand it, that there might be no reason at all why the Board of Liquor Control would refuse to allow the Bally Hally Golf and Country Club to stay open on Sunday or various clubs operated by the Canadian Legion; but that there might be very good reason why certain other clubs, recognized as such apparently by the Board, should be closed. Now that, I hope, Sir, is not going to be recognized as a principle for the Board to follow. Because you cannot have that situation obtain in this country while preaching democracy. It would mean preaching one thing and practising another. Either the law is to be applicable with equal fairness to everybody or it is not to be applicable at all. We can't make flesh of one and fish of another. Because a club may not have the amenities or constitution of, let us say, the golf club, is no reason why the golf club should be allowed to be open on Sunday and sell the same kinds of spirits as the club on Topsail Road does, which is not to be allowed to open. The principle, Sir, is wrong. I think we should be very careful before we go ahead with that idea.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Shall this clause carry?

MR. HOLLETT: No, Mr. Chairman, it is not going to be carried for a little while, if we can do it, until we get some clear-cut reply from the government as to what the intentions really are. The definition is given in the Alcoholics Liquors Act. It excludes the premises occupied or used for pecuniary purposes. Now we know, Sir, and I have looked up the registration of some of these so-called clubs and find that some of them not only can sell alcoholic liquors but they can do all sorts of things in the particular building which is the club, a building is part of the club. Nobody can tell me, Sir, that a place like the "Old Mill" or "Picadilly" or some such place or other is not there for pecuniary gain. What is it there for? Just for the sociability and lots of it. There is also pecuniary gain in all these clubs. I happen to know the Bella Vista was taken over with a mortgage of $20,000 and that was cleaned up, so that there must be some pecuniary gain for the people who own and operate such clubs.

MR. CHAIRMAN: If the honourable member would remember, these matters are hardly relevant to this clause under consideration, which has to do with hours of opening of the clubs. I don't think the mortgage on Bella Vista is relevant.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, I bow to your decision. The holder of licenses granted in respect of hotels, clubs, military messes. The word "club" is there. That is why it was raised by my honourable and learned friend. I think we should have some clear-cut explanation from the government as to just what they do mean by clubs. It is conceivable that there could be some clubs under this particular section, Sir, which are really clubs in name and in spirit. But there are clubs, so-called, which are not clubs at all. They are there operating for pecuniary gains made by the sale of alcoholic liquor. I think the objection raised by my honourable and learned friend should be taken cognizance of and some explanation should be given on the matter. You cannot simply, by by-passing that condition form clubs in every nook and corner of this island and then say they are not there for the purpose of pecuniary gain but are only there for social purposes—It is nonsense, absolute nonsense. I think the government is stretching its conscience in order to interpret the word club in the way they have done it. We would like to have some clear-cut explanation of the word "Club" there apart from what is in the Act.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, since nobody on the opposite side seems to be interested in the debate, I wish to direct my remarks to the attention of the Minister of Finance and ask him if he would put away his magazine he is reading with such interest. He is the one who is responsible for the administration of the Board of Liquor Control. We are dealing here now with a very serious and fundamental matter, the definition of the word "Club." I have stated that the government has given or allowed—

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Chairman, to a point of order—Any honourable gentleman dealing here with the definition of "Club" is clearly out of order. I don't think the definition of "Club" appears in this clause at all. Therefore the discussion of that definition is not in order.

MR. CHAIRMAN: I must uphold that point of order.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, what is meant by a "Club"? Does it mean an institution for pecuniary gain. The definition says it is not for pecuniary gain so how can we here permit them to carry on business for pecuniary gain?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Chairman, to a point of order—The clause in question is not that there shall be clubs. It is not to define clubs and not to describe them. It is that clubs as well as other things, that is hotels, military messes, railways, steamships and the like shall under the conditions described here do thus and so, that is the principle of the clause. That has been adopted and is not now debatable. What is debatable is whether it shall be before or after 11:00 o'clock or before or after 9:00 o'clock, in the mornings, on week days, and then again what is debatable appears to me to be whether it shall be open on Sundays and holidays including Christmas Day and Good Friday, and under what terms and conditions. It seems to me, Mr. Chairman, all else is out of order in the debate on this clause.

MR. CHAIRMAN: I have already pointed out that out to the committee. The clause under consideration has to do with the opening of clubs on certain days and hours and does not deal with the definition of clubs.

MR. BROWNE: I am quite satisfied that arrangement is all right when applied to bona fide clubs but as to non-bona fide clubs it does not apply to them at all, Sir. Regarding closing and opening surely it is fundamental whether a club should be in existence at all. A petition has been put in to the government for a plebiscite and nobody will give an answer as to what has happened to that petition.

MR. SMALLWOOD: He is out of order in discussing petitions. This clause does not cover the discussion of petitions. He cannot debate anything he likes regarding liquor. He is tied by Laws of the House and Parliamentary procedure to discuss the matters in Clause 3.

MR. BROWNE: I will be fit to be tied if this keeps on. Why do we not get an answer? The Minister of Finance reads a magazine.

MR. POWER: You are out of order. Is he out of order or not?

MR. CHAIRMAN: He is out of order.

MR. POWER: Then I will ask him to sit down or I will sit him down.

MR. BROWNE: Are we going to get an answer?

MR. HOLLETT: Does the Honourable Minister of Finance know to whom he has to address a question? I would point out he has to address it to Mr. Speaker.

MR. POWER: I have sat here the most of the day listening to all kinds of remarks and the like. Let us get on with some business.

Clause carried.

"An Act To Provide For The Regulation of Ferries Used In the Transportation of Persons and Property For Compensation."

Clause 1 read and carried.
Clause 2 read and carried.
Clause 3 read and carried.
Clause 4 read and carried.
Clause 5 (2) read.

(2) The board may at any time revise a tariff of tolls approved by it and after a revision an operator shall not change any toll except in accordance with the revised tariff.

MR. BROWNE: That is rather abrupt, is it not? The Board shall revise tolls at any time. Is there any provision for that as to how it is done. Who is in charge, the Attorney General? It seems an abrupt way to deal with the matter.

MR. CURTIS: It gives them the right. Obviously there will be a hearing.

MR. BROWNE: Is there any provision for the hearing? It seems to me that it does not cover the situation sufficiently. There should be some hearing. There is no provision for a hearing at all. Even under Clause 5 (1). The operator of a ferry puts in his tariff and they consider and let him know and after that they can change it any time. Should there not be provision for a hearing if necessary.

MR. CURTIS: Does it not say the Board shall at any time after a hearing revise the tariff? I wonder does not the current Act cover that?

MR. BROWNE: What section covers that?

MR. CURTIS: Section 248 and 249, Chapter 249.

Clause 5 stand.
Clause 6 read and carried.
Clause 7 read:

7. (1) Every person who contravenes any of the provisions of this Act or the regulations is guilty of an offence and liable on summary conviction to a fine for the first offence not exceeding one hundred dollars and in default of payment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding one month, and for a second or subsequent offence within two years of the commission of the first offence, to a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars and in default of payment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding three months.

(2) Every fine collected under this Act shall be paid to the Department of the Attorney General and shall form part of the Consolidated Revenue Fund.

MR. BROWNE: I wonder if the Attorney General can say whether the fees collected by the Board of Utilities—whether the amount collected is sufficient to pay for the operation of the Board.

MR. CURTIS: Generally yes, they just about balance. When the Board started, the government gave a small loan of $20,000 and they paid back $10,000 and they are ready to pay back the balance now.

Clause 7 carried.
Clause 8 read and carried.
Clause 9 read and carried.
Clause 10 read and carried.
Clause 11 read and carried.
Clause 12 read and carried.
MR. BROWNE: There are two sides to it. The public may want lower rates or the Ferries may want higher rates.

MR. CURTIS: The practice of the Board has been to advertise it and set a day and hear counsel for both sides. That plan is properly covered by the regulations.

MR. BROWNE: Could we look through that before we take it up again.

Clause 5 carried.

"An Act Respecting Ministers To Administer Oaths."

Clause 1 read and carried.

Clause 2 read:

2. (1) The Lieutenant Governor in council may, on the recommendation of the Attorney General, appoint such persons, being British subjects, as he thinks necessary to administer oaths and take and receive affidavits, declarations and affirmations within Newfoundland.

(2) The persons appointed under sub-section (1) shall be styled commissioners for oaths without Newfoundland, and every such person shall write or stamp below his signature on every affidavit, declaration, affirmation or certificate made before or given by him the words "A Commissioner for Oaths without Newfoundland."

MR. BROWNE: I wonder if the Attorney General can tell us if it is the intention of the Government to appoint many such officials?

MR. CURTIS: Only where such an application is so made.

MR. BROWNE: Any cases in mind at the present time?

MR. CURTIS: No, we thought it just as well to cover it while amending the Act.

Clause carried.

Clause 4 read:

4. Every barrister while he is entitled to practise in Newfoundland is a commissioner for oaths and may exercise, either within or without Newfoundland, the powers conferred by this Act and on every affidavit, declaration, affirmation or certificate made before or given by him under those powers he shall write or stamp below his signature the word "Barrister."

MR. BROWNE: I have just looked at the clause about the power, "A Barrister within or without Newfoundland may be a commissioner for oaths." I can understand, with all the necessary documents to be signed now... and barristers are often asked to sign documents, but outside of Newfoundland, it would not happen very often and it would not be very necessary for a barrister to do that. Why give such wide powers there?

MR. CURTIS: This Act is a draft of the Ontario Act. They give the right to barristers outside and we do not see why we should not. I do not anticipate it being used very much.

MR. BROWNE: Will these oaths be good for taking all sorts of documents in the Registration of Deeds and in the Supreme Court?

MR. CURTIS: They are acceptable in the Supreme Court.

MR. SMALLWOOD: To illustrate the effect this clause will have. If and when my honourable and learned friend should run again for the Federal seat and a miracle happens and he would get elected, and he would sit in the House of Commons at Ottawa as before, he would be a Commissioner for oaths under this Act and he could take oaths in Ottawa. Is not that worth working for?

Clause carried.

Clauses 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10 and 11 read and carried.

Clause 12 read:

12. The provisions of this Act are in addition to and not in derogation of the provisions of any other Act.

MR. BROWNE: Can the Attorney General tell me whether this bill was submitted to the Law Society at any time?

MR. CURTIS: No, not to the Law Society but to the Judges of the Supreme Court.

MR. BROWNE: I asked about that a minute ago. What about the registration of deeds?

MR. CURTIS: It does not cover deaths.

MR. BROWNE: Would you read Chapter 141.

MR. CURTIS: Yes, it says: "This acknowledgement within the Province by Registry of Deeds or Judges of Supreme Courts and Commissioners of the Supreme Court and J.P.'s and magistrates or notary public." I would say this will not cover deeds for registration.

MR. BROWNE: A notary public oath is accepted in Supreme Court. You think it will be acceptable in Supreme Courts in matters of estates.

MR. CURTIS: It says so here. I would refer to Section 7.

7. (1) Every appointment made under subsection (1) of Section 2 or subsection (1) of Section 3 expires at the expiration of five years from the thirty-first day of December of the year in which it was made unless it is revoked at an earlier date.

(2) An appointment made under subsection (1) of Section 2 or subsection (1) of Section 3 may, on or before the date of its expiration, be renewed by the Lieutenant Governor in Council for a period of five years from the date of its expiration and a renewed appointment may in like manner be further renewed.

MR. BROWNE: I think that is an amendment we made last year.

MR. BROWNE: So they won't be eligible. Now you think they would be accepted in the Supreme Court as photographic evidence?
MR. CURTIS: The Act says so. "The Lieutenant-Governor in Council may, on the recommendation of the Attorney General appoint such persons as he thinks necessary to administer oaths and take and receive affidavits, declarations and affirmations without Newfoundland for use in Newfoundland in or concerning any cause, matter or thing whether depending in any court in Newfoundland in any wise concerning any of the proceedings in a court in Newfoundland or otherwise."

MR. BROWNE: That means outside Newfoundland—It is in Clause 2.

Clauses 12 and 13 carried.

Motion carried that the Committee report having passed this bill without amendment.

Committee of the Whole on Bill, "An Act to Amend the Shipbuilding (Bounties) Act."

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, I wonder if the minister could tell us on what advice these amendments have been made and for what purposes?

HON. W. J. KEOUGH (Minister of Fisheries and Co-operatives): Mr. Chairman, the amendments are being made on the advice of the Director of Vessel Construction and Inspection of my Department, who is a Lloyds Surveyor and a naval architect in his own right, and an engineer in his own right. I doubt if there is anyone more qualified in Newfoundland at the moment to make such recommendations.

The purpose for which they are made I described yesterday. It is to give authority to continue paying the higher rate of bounties that were set down by the Commission of Government in 1947, and to in future pay bounties on engines on the nominal horsepower instead of on the brake horsepower.

MR. HOLLETT: Is it a fact, Mr. Chairman, that Mr. Harvey paid Holland, Denmark and other countries in Europe a visit last summer in connection with this very thing?

MR. KEOUGH: No.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I wonder if the minister would give us a statement as to how this would be worked out? It is not as complicated as it appears, obviously. Has he worked out this formula to see how the answer is arrived at?

MR. KEOUGH: I have not myself. But I have asked the Director of Vessel Construction to provide me with one. He provided me with the figures. The constant of an engine 6 cylinder x 6 multiplied by the constant of the engine would be 36 x 5 x 6 or 1080. I think that is right.

MR. HOLLETT: Certainly we are not so clear.

MR. KEOUGH: The track is 9 inches. Divided by the number of cylinders which would be 6 plus 5. I think, divided into 1080 would give you the formula.

MR. HOLLETT: That is very clear, very explicit.

MR. KEOUGH: It is very clear to me too.

MR. HOLLETT: Some of the rest of us have taken the trouble to make some investigation on that. After all when we see a Bill like this and if we have the interest of the country at heart, naturally we have to take some little interest in it, and try to see what it might mean to the next fisherman. I did take the trouble to find out what it meant. I think when the minister hears, and I think he has the interest of the fishermen at heart, I think when he hears he would like to hold this up to make further inquiries. Now, Sir, I had an investigation made to find out exactly what will happen under this particular formula. Take a 60 h.p. Buda Engine which is manufactured in the United States of America and under the old rate and Act, before being amended that engine could be $900 or at the rate of $15 per h.p. Under this proposed new rate here, the bounty under this schedule, the bounty will be $1,080 a rate of $17 per h.p. Now there is not much difference, I admit. In other words the bounty is increased from $900 to $1,080. Then take a 44 h.p. Kelvin manufactured in England. I believe under the old rate the bounty on that engine, under the Act would be $660. Under this new amendment it will be $700. Thus an increase of from $14 a h.p. up to $16 a h.p. Then I went across to Europe, to Norway and picked up a diesel engine, a Ratt. 29 h.p. manufactured, I believe, in Norway. Under the old Act the bounty on that engine, 29 h.p., was $435 and under the proposed bounty rate the bounty on that 29 h.p. would be $821 or a rate of $72.20 h.p. We took a 45 h.p. engine manufactured in Norway. The old rate $675 and under this new rate as it worked out under this particular scheme was $2800 or at the rate of $62.20 per h.p.

Now, sir, I do not raise that point at all with any view of upsetting the bill. I take it that everybody has the interest of those people who go down to the sea in ships at heart. But I thought it would be wise to let the honourable minister know that you are, by making that not simple but complicated amendment, giving engines from Norway and Sweden and such places an advantage over and above those engines manufactured in England and the United States of America, and giving the incentive to purchase engines from Norway and Sweden. Indeed, Sir, it would be so great that I fail to see how any Newfoundland fisherman would buy anything manufactured in England or in the United States or in our own land. I want to draw that to the Minister's attention. I would like the minister to take that into consideration and have it checked by his department before this particular section is passed. I don't think that is an unfair thing to request.

MR. KEOUGH: Well, Mr. Chairman, naturally in bringing this Bill into the House I have been guided by my technical staff. The reason they have given me for putting the section forward is that certain manufacturers of the engines today by sticking on extra gadgets like boosters are able to jack up the horsepower, etc., on brake horsepower and therefore can claim a greater bounty payment for the engines. To give something specific: We had an engine recently installed for a boat for bounty. It was, at the rating of nominal horsepower, the bounty on it would have been $2,600 and rated on brake horsepower it was $8,000. There will be some variations one way or the other. I understand from the inspector. He gave me three or four other instances here in the change over from brake horsepower to nominal horsepower. For instance he said a six brake horsepower four cylinder, five inch diameter, 9 and 7 ins. engine on the old rate would be $1,020 and on the new rate proposed would be $1,000. For a 4 brake horsepower (2 cylinder, diameter 6 ins.—the old rate $760 and the new rate $700 and a 5½ brake horsepower engine 4 cylinder 4½ ins. diameter—the old rate $795 and the new rate $800.

MR. BROWNE: How much for a 35 horsepower?

MR. KEOUGH: The old rate $795 and the new rate $800. I feel quite satisfied, Mr. Chairman, that my department has considered this matter pretty thoroughly, and I am afraid I must insist that it stand.

MR. HOLLETT: Well, Mr. Chairman, I am only asking a reasonable request of the minister and he could bring in the result tomorrow. I merely asked him to check the figures and if he finds that I am wrong I am prepared to abide by it or by the decision of the House. If the chief inspector comes back to say that these figures are wrong then of course everything is all right. All I am asking is that this section stand over until the honourable minister can check them, that is all I am asking.

MR. KEOUGH: Not necessary, if the honourable gentleman would supply me with the information that he has. I will have it checked. I would like this to go through Committee of the Whole, and when I find out I will inform the honourable gentleman whether the inspector agrees or not with those figures, and I will ask for the Bill to be recommitted, on third reading of the Bill. That is if the inspector agrees with your figures. If there is cause for taking what is suggested into consideration I will ask on third reading to have the Bill recommitted to Committee of the Whole. I am perfectly satisfied to do that.

MR. HOLLETT: It will come back to the Committee if you find these figures are wrong?

MR. KEOUGH: Not necessarily if they are wrong, but if there seems to be a reason on the basis of the figures for recommitting the Bill.

MR. SMALLWOOD: For instance, Mr. Chairman, the whole purpose of the Bill may be to give a distinct reference to the type of engine which is manufactured in Scandinavia, which is a very massive thing of low grade power, low speed. That is not low speed through the water but low speed compared with high speed engines, the number of revolutions on speed horsepower, RPM with equal speed of the boat through water, with great power, great massiveness. One can almost hit them with a sledge hammer. They are very simple with very few parts compared with other types of engines. It may be a deliberate policy of introducing the use of that kind of engine. I am familiar with a very strong feeling in the Department of Fisheries that favours precisely that viewpoint. That is why the Minister is wise in wishing to refer back to his advisers before going ahead with it tonight, and before giving it the final reading.

Motion carried that the Committee report having passed this Bill without amendment.

MR. COURAGE: Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole have considered the matter to them referred and have passed the Bill, "An Act to Provide for the Regulation of Ferries used in the Transportation of Persons and Property For Compensation," without amendment.

Report received. On motion bill ordered read a third time on tomorrow.

MR. COURAGE: Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole have considered the matter to them referred and have passed the Bill, "An Act Further to Amend the Alcoholic Liquors Act," without amendment.

Report received. On motion bill ordered read a third time on tomorrow.

MR. COURAGE: Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole have considered the matter to them referred and have passed the Bill, "An Act Respecting Commissioners to Administer Oaths," without amendment.

Report received. On motion bill ordered read a third time on tomorrow.

MR. COURAGE: Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole have considered the matters to them referred and have passed a Bill, "An Act Respecting the Appointment of a Commission in Connection with Term 29 of the Terms of Union of Newfoundland with Canada":

Clause 1 carried.

Clause 2:

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, what is meant there by the words "... shall carry out such other duties as the Lieutenant-Governor in Council assigns."

MR. CURTIS: I think, Mr. Chairman, that is just a general clause which would perhaps enable the government to suggest a line which they might follow or pursue in addition to what they do themselves. The government might think that perhaps they might investigate a certain aspect of the situation. That is just to really authorize them to do that. It is just more or less a safeguard.

Clause carried.

Clauses 3 read and carried.

Clause 4 read and carried.

MR. BROWNE: Speaking of the preamble to this important clause, this commission is to recommend the form and scale of additional financial assistance, if any, that may be required by the Province of Newfoundland to enable it to maintain and improve public services. I would include roads. I take it the transinsular or trans-Newfoundland road would be of great importance and that seems to me to be a public service of a high order and
I trust the government will do all it can this year to expedite work on that highway.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Is this in order?

MR. CHAIRMAN: I would like to hear what the honourable gentleman was leading up to.

MR. BROWNE: Not very much except to say that this is the most important part of this bill. This is the purpose of this bill, appointing a Royal Commission to investigate the financial situation of the province.

MR. CHAIRMAN: That was discussed and approved at second reading.

MR. HOLLETT: I might say something that is not in order. I anticipate being called to order. Whether I shall incur displeasure or not I am not sure. It speaks here of public services. I don't know whether public service would include a rate of pay by the government Department, but if it does I wonder would the Minister of Public Works care to comment on the fact that workmen on the public roads are getting not more than 60c. an hour?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Out of order.

MR. CHAIRMAN: I think it is.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I don't think the honourable gentleman is as dense as that. I think he is pulling our legs and he knows he is out of order.

Report received.

MR. CURTIS: When the Committee on Supply last rose, through an omission, they did not ask leave to sit again and consequently it does not appear on the order paper. I would move with the consent of the House that we go into Committee of Supply to deal with the Supplementary Supply.

MR. CHAIRMAN: The motion is that I now leave the Chair and Committee of Supply sit.

Motion carried. Committee of Supply; Mr. Courage in the Chair.

MR. BROWNE: Is there a special grant for these amounts? Are these amounts in addition to the thirty-three million the other day. Is the sum one million included in the expenditure figure of thirty-three million given the other day.

MR. FOGWILL: Does that amount include the treasury bills issued by the loan boards?

MR. POWER: The object of this bill is to sweep up all these special warrants and these are all the warrants issued before. If you want to have an explanation of any of these amounts I will gladly do it. There was another amount paid to the Director of Manual Accounts and another amount paid to the War Office in England.

MR. BROWNE: These are matters arising out of the war?

MR. HOLLETT: Was there an order in council sought for that?

MR. SMALLWOOD: A warrant.

MR. HOLLETT: I have the others but I have no warrant for that. Would it be included in the other amounts?

MR. FOGWILL: Did I understand the Minister to say some of this was due to wrecks of vessels?

MR. POWER: No. I said in respect of merchant vessels. That was our liability at the time during the war. Whatever vessels Newfoundland registered at the time. If they were registered in Newfoundland. This was a pre-Union liability.

MR. SMALLWOOD: And there will be little bills turning up for years to come arising out of transactions before Union.

Item 4 carried.

Item 6 read and carried.

Item 7 read.

MR. HOLLETT: There was special warrant issued for that of $25,000.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes but that is to keep it up.

MR. HOLLETT: If the last government in Council knew so much that they could ask for $25,000 and get it, surely they could put in for more than $100 shown here. Is the $25,000 used up?

MR. POWER: The cost was $615, and that was the total vote.

MR. BROWNE: Would it include the new warden's house. This is an expense in connection with maintenance of the house.

Item stand.

Item 8.

MR. BROWNE: Will not the Minister give us some details? $27,000 is a very substantial amount.

DR. ROWE: The Royal Commission on Agriculture has been in office since June last year, just a year. Two of the members receive salaries, the third does not receive a salary. The salaries are ten thousand and eight thousand for the two members for part of a year. Dean Shaw is being paid at the rate of $8,000 a year. He is not full time. Professor Drummond is the Chief Commissioner. He gets $10,000. They have some technical men on their staff and they are travelling and this would account for the $27,000. Dr. Carr is a member of the commission and I believe he gets about seven thousand a year. It could be eight thousand. They have had other help from time to time, short time help.

MR. BROWNE: Have you had an interim report from this committee at any time?

DR. ROWE: On special aspects we have had reports. The number of amendments we had have come in from either of the two commissions. We have not got reports to publish yet.

Item carried.

Item 9:

MR. HOLLETT: What I cannot understand is why the total vote? The Minister has told us what it is for. Why not put in the actual amount that has been paid out?

MR. SMALLWOOD: The other amounts have been paid out of savings.

MR. HOLLETT: The Minister did not say that. We had the same vote with this object in view on the 18th day of March. Why put the cost in?

MR. BROWNE: The Leader of the Opposition referred to an Order in Council in March of S200. Why was not this amount spent while $42,500 has been spent. How is the amount passed by the legislature?

MR. POWER: That is the total vote.

MR. SMALLWOOD: If the money is spent, hard cash that came into the Treasury in the ordinary course of revenue over and above the necessities of that Department then under the Revenue and Audit Act, surplus in one account may be spent to meet expenses in another account in the same department. We have to have authority nevertheless. First we have to have a special warrant. Later when we come to the House we get Legislative authority for the same thing. Authority to spend for an item for which there was no vote. We get authority from the House.

MR. BROWNE: Why two, two hundred votes?

MR. POWER: Because the money was wanted for two different jobs.

MR. BROWNE: Are the jobs finished now?

MR. SPENCER: At the end of the year we have trouble in that area and it is never possible to estimate the amount required to take care of it. It can't be said to be a completed job. We may have another severe storm there and we could be called immediately to get out there and make some temporary repairs. This includes the one in Sandy Bay.

MR. BROWNE: You had an emergency in Lance au Loup? Where is Lance au Loup?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Down in the Straits.

Item carried.

Item 7:

MR. CURTIS: That represents expenditure we made on the proposed Warden's Home in Salmonier Prison Camp. It is to be large enough to accommodate six or eight wardens who live there for a week at a stretch and it was decided to build a new home and the work will be done mostly by prisoners. This was just a normal vote. They will spend enough to put in a saw mill and get it operated in the Spring. We get the wood on the island and cut it there and I hope the prisoners will do most of the labour. So far we have spent $615.

Item carried.

Item 10:

MR. POWER: The provision was for adjustment of salaries. The balance of the sum required under this vote in the budget speech was for construction of additional hospital accommodation.

Item carried.

Item 12:

MR. POWER: I think during the session last year while considering the estimates we increased the salaries for Managers and Assistant Managers and salesmen. While the House was in session last year, we increased the vote during the consideration of the estimates.

MR. SMALLWOOD: We increased the salaries without increasing the vote.

MR. HIGGINS: I remember the time. I raised it and the Minister undertook to see what could be done.

Item carried.

Item 18:

MR. BROWNE: What was the $38,000 for?

MR. POWER: That was for printing.

MR. BROWNE: Have we any details for this amount? Will the Minister of Supply tell me what the details are?
MR. HEFFERTON: I don’t know the details. Last year we drew up estimates based on advertising and printing for the year and it was reduced against our wishes. We found during the year our expenses were as anticipated and consequently we had to go for more money. All the printing required by the Government is done by the Department and must be done through our department, all the printing, all stationery, all advertising, everything, all the machinery of the Government must come to us in our department.

MR. BROWNE: And also goes to the Minister of Mines and Resources now?

DR. ROWE: That was last year.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, the vote here for last year was increased by $56,000 over the previous year. How could it be said to be very low—Well, if the estimates are printed properly.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Not the previous year but the previous year to that again, surely.

MR. BROWNE: No the account for 1952-53 is $177,256 a vote for printing, and there is one statutory and another of supply $106,763, for 1952-53, an increase of $44,000.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is the estimate.

MR. BROWNE: Well then I take it the actual expenditure ran the figure up to $188,000. But why? That is $88,000 over the previous year. Were there so many needs of printing, stationery and office supplies last year.

MR. HEFFERTON: Yes, but the Honourable Minister of Finance included advertising in that as well as stationery.

MR. POWER: Printing, stationery and office supplies.

MR. HEFFERTON: If advertising is included I think it is the same.

MR. BROWNE: It does not say anything about advertising.

MR. SMALLWOOD: In the term "Printing."

MR. BROWNE: I noticed the vote for advertising in the estimates this year is only $35,000. If it were so much behind last year why not increase it? Was printing, stationery and office supplies increased by $57,000? The one for advertising has not increased. That is a substantial amount over the the estimate, over 25%.

MR. HEFFERTON: I can get the details tomorrow, but at the moment I cannot.

MR. BROWNE: Could we let that stand?

MR. CHAIRMAN: It is agreed this item should stand.

Item 14—Fisheries & Co-operatives:

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, could the Minister tell us where that $900,000 was spent?

MR. KEOUGH: That was spent, Mr. Chairman, for the advance of $1.50 per quintal for fishermen on the sale of codfish. $75,000 was advanced to take care of expenses of the Fisheries Development Authority.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, may I make a suggestion to the Minister of Finance. In future if there were some sub-heads given to those titles here it would save a lot of trouble and questions. We would know what they were without having to ask. The $80,000, what is that?

MR. POWER: For loans to the fishing industry.

MR. BROWNE: The vote now is $902,200, how is that made up?

MR. POWER: The $902,200 is made up in amounts of $20,400, $80,800—The first one is for an experimental grant.

MR. BROWNE: Do you know if that is for a boat, that $20,000.

MR. KEOUGH: I have an idea, from memory, that it was mostly for experimental fishery equipment supplied to firms for Danish seines and fishing equipment of that nature.

MR. BROWNE: Could you get that tomorrow? I am not asking to let it stand. I am asking for the information.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Any information produced will have to be produced tomorrow. But we are not letting the items stand. We are here to vote them through. The honourable gentleman has 98% of the information and can't wait until tomorrow to get the 2%.

MR. BROWNE: The minister was going to tell me how that was made up.

MR. POWER: $20,400 for experimental fishing and loans to fishermen, and $850,000 was required for advances for fishermen.

Carried.

Economic Development: $385,300.

MR. POWER: That is in respect of refund of interest actually paid by industries assessed by the government and conforms with the policy, details of which have been placed before the House. Revision $385,300. The Gypsum Plant with a total vote of $100,000, which has been provided, required $498,000 of which $92,000 was provided in supplementary supply, the balance was from savings in the department. The additional amount for the Atlantic Hardboards, $156,000 proved to be inadequate by $249,500, and $100,000 of this was provided under savings.

MR. HOLLETT: The total amount of all these items is $385,300.

MR. POWER: No, the total amount required including the amount paid out in countervailing savings.

MR. BROWNE: Take one plant at a time—Take the Gypsum Plant. That was $498,000 was it not?

MR. POWER: Yes.

MR. BROWNE: What was that for,

MR. POWER: That was for working capital.

MR. BROWNE: Working capital for what?

MR. SMALLWOOD: To work with.

MR. BROWNE: Do you mean to say the industries had not any cash on hand. That is quite a large amount of money and not the first grant.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Total five hundred thousand dollars.

MR. BROWNE: How much did they have before this?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Five hundred thousand less this amount.

MR. BROWNE: This is not the first amount?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, the first.
amount is all of this less that, or all of $500,000 less the amount.

MR. BROWNE: Does the minister mean to say that the Gypsum plant did not get any previous grant of working capital apart from this?

MR. SMALLWOOD: They got it,
yes.

MR. BROWNE: Last year.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes.

MR. BROWNE: And the year before?

MR. SMALLWOOD: The year before I think a very little, yes. Five hundred thousand dollars has been paid to them in working capital.

MR. POWER: The $92,000 is coming out of countervailing savings, the rest out of this. The total amount for that industry is $490,000, or the total voted on Economic Development $385,- 000 of this $498,000, $92,000 is asked for and is part of this $385,000. The rest came from countervailing savings in the Department of Economic Development.

MR. BROWNE: What mostly was it saved on?

MR. SMALLWOOD: If the honourable gentleman will read the list, if he has last year’s estimates there, I think probably it came out of the vote for the textile mill. I think a vote of half a million dollars was spent for that purpose and this came from countervailing savings.

MR. BROWNE: There was $2,561,- 000 estimated last year. I don’t know what the exact picture was.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I don’t remember the actual figures.

MR. HOLLETT: I think I can tell you. This is the gypsum plant you are on now. There was $160,000 voted for the coming year. That is correct, is it not?

MR. POWER: Yes.

MR. HOLLETT: Over and above the five hundred thousand you had to pay last year. Is this included in the Special Warrant of February 10, 1954 for $300,000 in favour of the Department of Economic Development covering expenditure on new industries? That was a vote for $498,000 and the balance came from countervailing savings and you did not have to vote it again.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I would like to know where the savings were made.

MR. POWER: On the textile vote.
You will see textile had a large amount over.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman,
perhaps the minister will explain.
The total vote for the Department of Economic Development was $2,581,300.
Now that was overspent, was it?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No.

MR. BROWNE: I have the figures here for expenditure. There was a total expenditure of over $2,800,000.

MR. POWER: That would not have any effect on this. The money must have been there. We took it for this purpose. If we had this amount available in this vote at that time and later on the whole vote was overspent that has no effect on that transaction because if we had the money available then the vote was not overspent.

MR. BROWNE: Where did you get the money then for this?

MR. POWER: At the time this money was paid to the gypsum plant the vote for economic development was then not overspent.

MR. BROWNE: Where did you get the money to overdraw, or is it overdrawn by $300,000?

MR. HOLLETT: The Special Warrant on February 10, 1954, under authority of Section 37, authorized an amount of $300,000 in favour of Economic Development to increased expenditure on certain new industries. That, I gather from the honourable minister, is what you could not get from countervailing savings for that particular plant, or for that particular purpose. You took it from this order here, this special warrant.

MR. POWER: That is right.

MR. HOLLETT: I also understand some of this money under this special warrant went to refund interest payments which some of the firms had made.

MR. POWER: Yes.

MR. HOLLETT: Not all firms that paid interest last year, on account of their indebtedness to this government, had these amounts returned to them. Is that right?

MR. POWER: The amount is $198,300.

MR. HOLLETT: And all the interest that was paid last year and the year before and up to date on all the new industries was $198,300?

MR. POWER: That excluded the return of interest due from the cement mill. That was covered under another minute.

MR. HOLLETT: That is right. I have that.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, referring to the statement of the Premier that $498,000 was all the working capital which the company had since the beginning; in the Auditor General's report for 1952-53 he says that in addition to the cost of the plant $400,000 in advances were made for working capital. Do I understand then that only another $100,000 has been advanced as working capital?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I know the whole total amount advanced as working capital was $500,000.

MR. BROWNE: Can anyone tell us how much was spent on the gypsum plant for 1953-54?

MR. POWER: Mr. Chairman, I think I could explain that. 1953-54 is what I am supposed to do at the moment and not going to 1952-53. That is something else again. Expenditure in 1952-53 has nothing to do with 1953-54. Legislative authority has already been passed for it. I am asking for $385,300 under this sub-head. The actual money paid out to the Gypsum Plant was $498,000.

MR. BROWNE: When?

MR. POWER: In 1953-54. Then we covered that from countervailing savings with the exception of $92,000 included in this $385,300.

MR. BROWNE: In other words there was $406,000 paid out of countervailing savings and $92,000 as a special warrant, which you are going to recover now.

MR. POWER: That is right.

MR. BROWNE: Well, then $498,000 was the loss on the gypsum plant for 1953-54?

MR. POWER: Not necessarily. That was working capital, and some of that may be covered by inventory.
MR. BROWNE: Do you know what their position is at the present time?

MR. SMALLWOOD: They have a lot of their capital tied up. They must necessarily always have a very large amount tied up. In fact the great bulk of their working capital so long as it remains at the figure of $500,000 must be tied up in the form of oil. For instance they have three large oil tanks, or whatever you call them. They bring in a shipload at a time, and small tanker loads at a time. Then they have stocks for which labour has been paid and raw material for which large amounts have been paid and operating expenses have been paid. That represents working capital tied up in the form of actual inventory. At this moment they have between three and four million feet of board in inventory in the warehouse for the market. So that at any given moment virtually all of their half million covering working capital is tied up in the forms I have suggested.

MR. BROWNE: Now, Mr. Chairman, is the minister of Economic Development able to give us any kind of a statement. I mean a very general statement, or any figures that we can examine. After all this is the one that can be called a public corporation. Now should we not have some more information about that?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I will be very glad. If I had known about it a day or two ago that we would be debating this I would have had the information here tonight. But I will bring in the information.

MR. BROWNE: This, I believe is the only opportunity we will get to talk about this one.

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, It can be talked about before this legislation is final. I can table it as a public statement at the opening of the House tomorrow or the next day, explaining pretty thoroughly the breakdown of these amounts.

MR. BROWNE: Now, Mr. Chairman, how much interest has been returned, $193,000?

MR. POWER: Yes.

MR. BROWNE: That was returned to all of them? Can you give a breakdown of how that is made up?

MR. POWER: No, I can't.

MR. BROWNE: Which of them have paid interest?

MR. SMALLWOOD: The tanneries, cement plant, the first interest payment by CMIC, I think, had been paid, and that was returned. I think only three had actually paid or were due to pay it.

MR. BROWNE: Was the cement plant one?

MR. SMALLWOOD: North Star Cement; Newfoundland Tanneries, William Dorn Limited; and these are the only ones, I think, with the exception of United Cotton Mills who have paid and I believe Atlantic Films had paid a couple of thousand dollars —I believe that was repaid.

MR. BROWNE: There is a balance here of $100,000. Who gets that?

MR. POWER: So far I have asked for $193,300 and $92,000. Then the provision for Atlantic Hardboards also proved to be inadequate by $245,000. A hundred thousand of that amount is provided under the bill now before the House. So that if $100,000 is added to the amount that is it so far.
MR. BROWNE: What is this for, the hardboard plant now, working capital?

MR. POWER: It is not working capital.

MR. BROWNE: It is another loan covered in another Bill?

MR. POWER: I am asking for $100,000 out of this amount.

MR. BROWNE: That will leave altogether how much?

MR. POWER: $243,156 of that $399,000. Some of that is for working capital. But most of it went to build a huge warehouse that was necessary and also to build a staff house, etc.

MR. BROWNE: I understood this supplementary supply was to supplement the vote that went through last year. The vote was $2,561,000, and that is short by $300,000. How was that made up?

MR. POWER: You can't get at it like that.

MR. BROWNE: The whole vote.

MR. POWER: There was a special warrant for $300,000.

MR. BROWNE: And you look for $385,000 now. Therefore the figures which you gave me cannot be correct. Here is what I am talking about. The figures you made your budget on are here, $2,561,000 and I now show you figures that bring it up to $2,860,000.

MR. POWER: You suggest I submit something that I do not know is correct?

MR. BROWNE: I am sorry if I suggest too much. I have here the figures you gave today in which you said, for the month of March $220,000 spent for Department of Economic Development and for the previous eleven months $2,567,000. That makes nearly $2,900,000 and the vote was $2,561,000. There is a difference of $340,000 between the estimate and the actual expenditure.

MR. SMALLWOOD: What has that got to do with the budget? The budget figures tell what was spent, not what was estimated and what was spent and the difference between the two.

MR. BROWNE: This $385,000, is that an addition?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No. All this supplementary supply is taken into account in the budget.

MR. BROWNE: Should not the figures add up to that? That is the annual grant. If I add $385,000 to it do I get the annual expenditure?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Pretty well.

MR. BROWNE: There must be money outstanding. Is there?

MR. SMALLWOOD: What is meant by that?

MR. BROWNE: This $385,000, is that in addition to the $2,900,000? Does the $2,900,000 include this $385,000?

MR. POWER: Obviously, yes.

MR. BROWNE: You had voted $2,561,000. You did not spend that $385,000.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Not all the $2,561,000 was in fact spent on the things for which it was voted by the House. It was spent but not on identically the same things. It was spent, and more was spent, but not on the things named in the estimates. Not on the things for which they were voted.

MR. BROWNE: How much was spent in the Department of Economic Development last year?

MR. POWER: There was a vote plus a warrant.

MR. BROWNE: Was this $385,000 spent?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes.

MR. BROWNE: Was it added to the grant last year?

MR. POWER: Obviously.

MR. HOLLETT: You might have underspent on some items?

MR. SMALLWOOD: We are not looking for the $385,000. We have spent it and we look for authority to spent it, and now ask the House for that authority.

MR. BROWNE: Should not the grant voted by the House last year plus the Supplementary Supply keep within the expenditure for the Department of Economic Development?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Not necessarily.

MR. FOGWILL: The actual vote was $335,000 not $385,000. In March you got $220,000 and the estimate for the year was $2,561,000. On this vote $385,000, that is Capital Account Expenditure. I notice in the Current Account Expenditure, the total estimated amount is $170,300 and at the end of February they had spent $145,683 plus what they spent in March $220,897 on current account, a total of $366,000. I would like to ask the Minister was there any special warrant for this additional expenditure? This leaves an over expenditure of $195,000 or $196,000. It says so in the various details in the answer we got today on Current Account for the month of March and the month of April to 1953-54 that was spent.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Not over spent. Over spent on what?

MR. FOGWILL: On current account if these figures are correct.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Sounds very odd.

MR. FOGWILL: It seems fishy to me. The actual expenditure the previous year was $154,000 and this year $170,000. Is the $385,000 capital account?

MR. POWER: That does not say it was an over spending.

MR. BROWNE: It must be because the vote was only $170,000.

MR. FOGWILL: The answer to this question was—statement of current and capital expenditure for March 1954 including revenue and expenditure for April under Economic Development—was $220,897.

MR. FOGWILL: Current is left at $50,000. I would like to point out also we already got an answer sometime ago that this Department did spend on Current Account up to the end of February $145,683.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I think that answer is in error.

MR. BROWNE: I would say it should be the other way around.

MR. HIGGINS: It says for the month of March. Two sets of col-
MR. POWER: This includes the $170,000.

MR. FOGWILL: The Minister means the $220,000 listed here has been spent since.

MR. POWER: I did not say that. This Current Account means Current and Capital Expenditure including revenue and expenditure. This must be wrong.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Obviously it must be wrong. I have here in front of me the expenditure of my department for last year. I have not got the total but I have checked the estimates for the current year we have passed with the expenditures for last year and they are not totalled up. The expenditures are nearly all below the estimates. There could not be an over expenditure. I would be happy to give it to you tomorrow. The money is spent. We are only seeking authority for it. It makes no essential difference. The House is entitled to the information and I guarantee to bring it.

MR. HOLLETT: One point I would like the Minister to make some statement on, I think a statement has been made before. I am referring to the Special Warrant in which the Minister of Economic Development says he hereby requests the amount of $200,000 to permit his Department to make payments for certain new industries with payment to be deferred and to continue it to operate its existing service for 1954. Would the Minister tell us how this fits in here with this, "In order to permit my Department to make payments without certain interference." Why should it be done and how should it interfere with the government's economic industries?

MR. SMALLWOOD: It might have crippled the industry. To have paid the interest might have crippled the industry.

MR. HOLLETT: But they have paid it.

MR. SMALLWOOD: And they might cripple it. They might be reduced in working capital to where they were crippled.

MR. HOLLETT: You paid no interest. Did you give them back any amounts?

MR. POWER: We did not pay any interest until there was a return.

MR. HOLLETT: If they had to make a payment of interest in two years time, this might be a hardship.

MR. SMALLWOOD: But it gives them two years longer to get on their feet.

MR. POWER: I have explained the two hundred thousand. The other amount is an entirely different matter.

MR. HOLLETT: You added the grants to your supplementary supply to get your total expenditure for the year, but if you do that you do not get your total expenditure. These figures here were given in reply to question.

MR. POWER: We might have them tomorrow. It would be a good idea to have them in more detail. $92,000 is the amount, we got it by special warrant.

MR. BROWNE: Where did you get it?
MR. POWER: We got it from the Bank.

MR. BROWNE: Then you had to borrow it?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Supposing we did. It is already paid. It is already paid. Whether we had the funds lying around or whether we got it from the bank, we now ask the Government to confirm it.

MR. BROWNE: It might have been borrowed from the bank.

MR. POWER: We might have been in credit at the bank a couple of million dollars.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The Department of Economic Development might have been in credit at the bank.

MR. POWER: $193,300 in respect to refund of interest to the new industry. $92,000 is part of $498,000 we paid to the Gypsum Plant. $100,000 is part of the payment we made to Atlantic Products.

Item carried.

Item 13:

MR. HEFFERTON: During the year we also put in extra equipment in the Health Department. We had a heavy printing bill and there were several new offices during the year. We put in a rotary machine.

MR. BROWNE: Is the rotary machine all they had during the year?

MR. SMALLWOOD: All the Government paid for by Supply.

Item carried.

Committee rose. Report received.

Bill read a first time, ordered to be read a second time on tomorrow.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I move that the House adjourn to sit again at eleven o'clock tomorrow. With regard to the undertaking I gave tonight to give information on Gypsum Plant and regarding the spending in the Department of Economic Development which I believe is shown erroneously, I will get the information tomorrow and it may be a day or two before I get it, but I will get it before the House adjourns.

MR. HOLLETT: Will you give us information as to whether there will be an election this year.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I would not do that. It would be better for them not to know when there is an election so they will pull up their socks.

House adjourned 12 midnight.

WEDNESDAY, June 16, 1954

The House met at 11:00 of the clock in the morning, pursuant to adjournment.

Presenting Petitions

MR. DROVER: Mr. Speaker, I beg to present a petition from the people of Coachman’s Cove, White Bay, requesting that a snowmobile be supplied. We now have a link between Coachman’s Cove and Baie Verte there that will be made passable for motor vehicles so that in stormy weather it will be possible to get into Baie Verte and Fleur De Lys for medical assistance. In the early spring and later fall that is almost impossible, especially when the coast is blocked by ice. The petition, Sir, is signed by 151 voters and I heartily support their request. This is not the first request which comes from that section of the coast. That section of the coast is very isolated and not only are the people clamouring for communications from Coachman's Cove and Fleur De Lys but also have asked for a connection from central Baie Verte to the Trans Canada Highway, which is only a distance of twenty-one miles.

I have much pleasure, Sir, in supporting this petition and ask leave to have it tabled in the House and forwarded to the department concerned.

Presenting Reports of Standing and Select Committees

HON. W. J. KEOUGH (Minister of Fisheries and Co-operatives): Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to table the 4th annual report of the Fisheries Loan Board and the Co-operative Loan Board for the financial year ending March 31, 1954. In each case I believe according to law, I should have tabled them before this time, but they only yesterday came to my desk and so I did not see them until this morning. I may say the reports were forwarded to me under a covering letter from the chairman to the effect that he was delayed in submitting these reports due to the fact that he had to wait on the auditor to finish statement attached to them. I must ask pardon of the House for the delay, but I am afraid it was unavoidable.

Giving Notice of Motion

None.

Giving Notice of Question

MR. M. M. HOLLETT (Leader of the Opposition): To ask the Honourable the Minister of Economic Development to lay on the table of the House a report from the Department of Finance and Auditor General on the following:

(1) On all transactions between the Government or any of the Government Departments and the firm of W. J. Lundrigan Ltd. as to the purchase of cement, showing the number of bags, the prices charged, and the total amounts charged for each listed amount of cement appearing in the various invoices on the following Accounts:

(a) Cement Plant Construction.

(b) Gypsum Plant Construction.

(2) An itemized account of W. J. Lundrigan's claim for the sum of $177,123.54 as final claim, and also a similar account of another final claim for $58,168.68 dated 25/8/52.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the Honourable the Premier has had a chance to remember the copy of the second agreement with Chester Dave, I mentioned yesterday?

HON. J. R. SMALLWOOD (Prime Minister): I have a chance to remember, but unfortunately no chance to do anything about it. We did not adjourn until midnight yesterday. The Cabinet was in session until half a minute before coming into the Chamber at 11:00 o'clock so that I did not have any opportunity before lunch time.

MR. DROWNE: I would like to ask the Minister for Provincial Affairs (I believe he is the one who looks after the matter) if he could explain in reference to a petition for a plebiscite for Mount Pearl-Kilbride area.

HON. M. P. MURRAY (Minister of Provincial Affairs): The petition was laid before the Cabinet. I think the receipt was acknowledged—was it not?

MR. BROWNE: What I want to know is whether they are to hold a plebiscite or not?

MR. MURRAY: It is under consideration.
MR. BROWNE: Well, when can we expect a definite answer?

MR. MURRAY: If there is a meeting of the Cabinet before the House adjourns I will undertake to bring it before the Cabinet. That is as much as I can undertake to do.

MR. BROWNE: I wonder if the Premier is in a position to say?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, I am not in a position to say. It might be considered within the next six months, then again it might not.

MR. HOLLETT: I wonder if the Honourable the Premier could say whether or not it is the intention to present to the House a petition from Burin whether or not there is to be a sale of alcoholic liquor in that area? The Minister is not present.

MR. SMALLWOOD: What Minister?

MR. HOLLETT: The member for Burin District. I think he is the Minister of Health.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Perhaps it would be a good idea if the honourable gentleman were to ask the Minister concerned. He is not in the Chamber. He was at the Cabinet meeting up until 11:00 a.m. I imagine he is doing some departmental business on the telephone. When he comes in later today perhaps the honourable gentleman would ask him.

Orders of The Day

Third Readings:

A Bill "An Act to Amend the Alcoholic Liquors Act."

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, may the members say anything on third reading?

MR. SPEAKER: Except to move to send it back to Committee of the Whole.

MR. BROWNE: This third —

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker to a point of order. My understanding of Your Honour's ruling is that no debate may take place but only that a motion may be made and made without debate. Is that my understanding?

MR. SPEAKER: The motion is the Bill be now read a third time, to which an amendment may be offered that it may be read a third time six months hence. There is no debate on that. Or on another amendment that the Bill be recommitted to a Committee of the Whole House. The honourable member may state the amendment he proposes.

MR. BROWNE: Is it debatable?

MR. SPEAKER: I doubt if you can debate it.

On motion Bill read a third time, ordered passed and title be as on the Order Paper.

A Bill "An Act Respecting the Appointment of a Commission in Connection with Term 29 of the Terms of Union of Newfoundland with Canada".

On motion read a third time, ordered passed and title be as on the Order Paper.

A Bill "An Act to Provide for the Regulation of Ferries used in the Transportation of Persons and Property for Compensation":

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, the Attorney General promised to answer a question as to the powers of the Board under the regulations.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, if the House is agreeable we might defer this third reading until later today. I ask that so that the Attorney General may furnish the honourable member opposite with the information he promised.

On motion ordered deferred until a later hour this day.

A Bill "An Act Respecting Commissioners to Administer Oaths":

On motion Bill read a third time, ordered passed and title be as on the Order Paper.

First Readings:

A Bill "An Act to Amend the Botwood Water Corporation Act, 1952":

On motion read a first time, ordered read a second time at a later hour this day.

A Bill "An Act to Amend the Summary Jurisdiction Act":

On motion read a first time, ordered read a second time on tomorrow.

A Bill "An Act to Amend the Urban and Rural Planning Act, 1953":

On motion read a first time, ordered read a second time at a later hour this day.

A Bill "An Act to Amend the Local Government Act":

On motion read a first time, ordered read a second time at a later hour this day.

A Bill "An Act to Provide for the Raising of Funds for Schools in Certain Areas":

On motion read a first time, ordered read a second time at a later hour this day.

Second Readings:

A Bill "An Act to Amend the Social Security Assessment Act":

HON. L. R. CURTIS (Attorney General): Mr. Speaker, this is a Bill that is designed to amend and to make workable the Social Security Assessment Act which has been found in practice to be defective in some particulars and on that account the enforcement is made more difficult.

It will be noted that the first paragraph is an amendment of Paragraph (k) of Section 2 dealing with the question of interpretation. This amendment is to provide that interest and other charges involved in financial instalments for a purchase are not to be subject to assessment if those charges are additional to the ordinary retail price of the property purchased. For example, if in respect to the purchase of a car priced at two thousand dollars, for cash or instalment payment, the assessment should be on that two thousand dollars and should exclude the additional costs of interest etc. which would enter into the cost of financing the purchase of the property on the instalment plan. I think the House will agree that is proper.

Clause 2, on the other hand, affords an avenue which would permit retailers to break down the ordinary price for buying some separate item which might arise prior to the retail transaction for the purpose of reducing the amount of the assessment.

For example: A washing machine is priced at $200, and a vendor undertakes the instalments at no additional charge or the servicing for a period. The assessment then should be upon the $200 and no deductions would be allowed as a proportion of the figure which might have been intended to cover the labour of car-
This clause provided for the exemption of assessment in respect of installations or supervisory charges which are additional to the ordinary price, and which are shown as separate items in the invoice, but it disallows any deduction from the ordinary price because of the element of cost to cover installations or servicing which is included in the ordinary price to be paid by the purchaser whether or not he avails of this service.

For example: A machine is ordinarily priced at $200 and the sale is made on the basis of $200, plus cost of installation. The vendor's invoice shows $200 as one item and several items of expenditure for installations and servicing. The assessment then shall be upon the $200. If the invoice were to read $256 installed then the assessment would be upon the $256.

This provision for exemption in respect of installation is also intended to be applicable to cost of labour for servicing and the supervision and technicalities in the case of construction and engineering projects.

Clause 3 is amended by adding the following as (1A): "Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act every purchaser who turns in to the vendor as part payment of the purchase price of tangible personal property any other tangible personal property on which he has paid an assessment under this Act, shall pay an assessment only on the difference between the purchase price of the property he is purchasing and the value placed on the property turned in."

Clause 4 provides that municipal tax will be added and that an assessment will be upon the total cost to the consumer: Example: The tax of one cent per gallon on fuel oil in St. John's will be added to the purchase price, and the assessment will be calculated on the total cost to the consumer. So that it is very clear, I think, from what has been said that municipal taxes are being added. The original Act included charges for servicing etc., but now these are being excluded. I think that is in the interest of the consumer.

Now, Mr. Speaker, if you read the original Act, you will find that if you bought a motor car and turned in your last year's car you are strictly liable for a sales tax on the entire price of the car. But that has not been the practice in operation. In operation the Department has allowed credit for a car that was traded in provided that car had paid the assessment put on it. On the other hand if the car traded in was a car that was bought prior to the SSA Act coming into force then there was no credit given for it. I think that is clear. In other words Section 3 is to legitimize what has been done in the past. In other words, if you traded in a car which had paid the assessment you only paid the assessment on the difference between the new price and the value of what was turned in. That covers not only motor cars but washing machines and other items traded in.

Section 4 is just a change, Mr. Speaker, which throws on the purchaser the responsibility for getting a copy of a certificate issued by the Deputy Minister to the vendor thereby that all assessments collected or owed have been received, rather than on the person who sells. That is just an administrative difference.

MR. BROWNE: Would you illustrate it?
MR. CURTIS: Well, I can illustrate it, I think: The existing provisions of Section 5 require in effect that the Deputy Minister must issue a certificate to a vendor before that vendor may proceed to consummate a sale. It is now intended to provide that a person wishing to make a purchase in bulk will incur responsibility for the assessment due and payable and not remitted by the vendor, unless he obtains from the vendor a copy of the certificate from the Deputy Minister to the vendor setting forth all assessments due and payable by that vendor had been received by the department. It just throws the onus on the purchaser to see that the vendor has the authority to make the bulk sale, rather than throwing it on the vendor to get it. Actually the vendor must go to the department in the case of a bulk sale and get authority to sell. Now the responsibility is on the purchaser to see that is done before he buys. I think that is clear enough.

MR. BROWNE: He has to go to the Deputy Minister and get a certificate before he buys?

MR. CURTIS: He is liable to pay it unless he secures from the vendor a certificate from the Deputy Minister allowing the vendor to make that bulk sale. It just shifts the onus to the purchaser.

Now in paragraph 5—the amendments to Section 5 which is an amendment of Section 6 of the original Act—changes two hundred tons to three hundred tons with a view to bringing it into alignment with paragraph (g) and delete the qualifications—for human consumption. "Boats, etc. used in catching and processing fish for human consumption"—those words are being dropped.—"For human consumption." That is to include larger boats.

Section (d) is amended by providing that orthopaedic appliances don't need a certificate from a doctor to become tax free or SSA free. Actually a man goes in to buy a cork leg—I don't see why he should need a certificate from a doctor to say he needs one. It should be sufficiently obvious that he does. So that sub-paragraph is being amended to show that you do not need to have a prescription to get an orthopaedic appliance without paying the tax.

Section (f) Tangible personal property shipped by the seller for delivery outside Newfoundland, including ship's stores delivered to commercial vessels that normally operate in extra-territorial waters. Suppose a man from Sydney bought something in Newfoundland and it is shipped by one of our vessels, there is no sales tax payable if it is shipped from Newfoundland to Sydney, even if the vessel is under five hundred tons.

Prepared meals: Tangible personal property sold at a price of less than 17c. Prepared meals consumed on the premises when sold at a price less than 17c. Originally the Act said 15c., but 17c. divides up properly. The assessment is 3% and there is one cent payable on an assessment of 17c. instead of on 15c. I think that is clear.

Now on prepared meals the original Act provided that the assessment would not apply on prepared meals sold at a price of less than 51c. That is now being made 17c. to equalize the tax paid or the assessment paid by private citizens in their own homes.

The next amendment, Mr. Speaker, is to Section 10—"Every vendor who fails to make returns to the Deputy Minister or to keep records in the form and substance from time to time prescribed by the regulations is guilty of an offence."

The present Act says that every vendor who fails to make returns and to keep records—so you had to have both to get a conviction. You had to prove that a defendant both failed to make returns and to keep records. Now it is either. Anybody who fails to make returns or to keep records. The only change is to change the "and" to "or."

Section 20: "Before taking any proceedings for the recovery of any assessments that are due and payable under this Act or that have been collected on behalf of Her Majesty, the Deputy Minister may give notice to the assessment payer or collector of his intention to enforce payment, but failure to give notice in any case does not affect the validity of any proceedings taken for the recovery of assessments or moneys collected as assessments under this Act."

Under the original section the Deputy Minister had to give notice. This makes it "may" because in any event the failure to give notice did not affect the validity of the proceedings.

Section 25 is an improvement: That is purely an administrative amendment. The over assessment of property which includes the amount of the property involved is an offence. Under Clause 9, an amendment to Section 26 is to provide in effect for inspection.

Section 29 deals with penalty and interest upon any amount collected under this Act at the rate of one half per centum per month from the date that the amount should have been remitted to the Deputy Minister. The object of this amendment is to save taking every person to court. It is a provision that is adopted from the former Newfoundland Income Tax Act, which gave the assessor of that day the right to impose penalties and to charge interest under the Act. Under the Act as presently drafted, that can only be done by a court, which means there is a lot of publicity and notoriety in a case where a fine could be levied. But provisions have been made, Mr. Speaker, for an appeal and Section 18 of the amendment provides for an appeal from the Deputy Minister to the Minister and from the Minister to a Judge of the District Court or a Judge of the Supreme Court. Interests of the vendor are safeguarded, and he can appeal if he does not agree that the assessment made by the Deputy Minister is equitable. At the same time by having the Deputy Minister able to make the fines and charge the interest, which he could do under Section 10 or 11 and again under Section 12, and thus avoid a lot of publicity—but if the vendor or guilty party wants an appeal and wants the publicity he can have it.

The last clause, Mr. Speaker, remedies what we have found the most difficult of all, that is the fact that under the Summary Jurisdiction Act prosecutions for any offence had to be taken within one year. When we started to collect we found that if a man had not paid any returns for two years we could only prosecute for the last year and could not for the first year. The effect of this section is to take away that clause and provide that proceedings may be instituted at any time. This is a necessary amendment, Mr. Speaker, to put teeth into the Act. I am sure the House will agree that if some people are going to pay this assessment all people should pay it, and if some people are escaping they should not be al-allowed to continue to escape. For these reasons, this amendment puts teeth into the Act and makes it possible to enforce it.

Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of the Bill.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, this House will appreciate how difficult it is to give proper consideration to important legislation of this kind of thing under the circumstances under which we are working, coming here morning, noon and night. There is not very much time left to consider a Bill, which in my opinion should have been brought in earlier in the session so that we could get time to compare it in detail.

I am grateful to the Attorney General for the detailed explanation which he has given. But some of the provisions in the Bill are important and need serious consideration and the general extension of this sales tax to certain articles such as food and other necessities of life requires, I think, consideration by the whole House. This Bill is bringing in the bulk of the revenue which the Government gets through taxation, and each year, it seems to me, the Government is enlarging the scope of the Act.

Now one of the provisions that the Attorney General referred to was the question of the prepared meals consumed on the premises. Formerly the application was to meals of less than 51c. and now all meals in between 51c. and 17c. are included in the tax. That, of course, is going to bring in a great deal more revenue, because anyone who goes into a restaurant, if he buys a cup of coffee and toast and pays twenty cents and he is covered here now. I am not so much concerned about the meals consumed in restaurants as I am concerned about the food. Every article of food is taxable, except, I believe—I don't see any articles of food here—but I know flour and pork and beef were, or just milk and flour—but they don't seem to be exempt under this section. Perhaps the Minister can inform me how that exemption is made. But people live on more than flour, pork and milk. I believe it was through a liberal interpretation by those responsible for carrying out the Act that tinned milk was excluded from the provisions, but that in the Act itself or in whatever regulations milk was mentioned, tinned milk was not referred to especially.

MR. CURTIS: Tinned milk is milk, is it not?

MR. BROWNE: Tinned milk is the most important article of food, and tinned milk is the form in which milk is most generally consumed.

Now I appreciate the regulation regarding the exemption of servicing and insurance, etc., on the purchase price of an article sold on the instalment plan. That is only fair. When we consider the tax that is put on by the municipality as again being taxable. The Municipality of St. John's say, puts on a cent a gallon on oil that is delivered to the householder then the Government comes along and puts a 3% tax on that. Now it does not seem to amount to a great deal, but why is there a tax put upon a tax? Is that fair? Is it fair for the Government to tax taxation which the Municipal Council is receiving? It seems to me that it is not fair. I presume that customs and excise are lumped together and the tax of 3% is added to that. That is to say the Government is imposing taxation on taxes. Then we are told that taxation is not very serious or is not very high in this country.

I notice that the provision, when this Bill comes into effect, at the end of Section 3: The purchaser pays assessment only on the difference between the price of the property purchased and the value placed on the property turned in. This is made retroactive. Then there is a provision regarding bulk sales. I understand many persons do come to town and buy a case of beans, a case of peas, a barrel of pork, and a sack of some article, beans or whatever the case may be, they now can pay the 3% right there on that wholesale price. It seems to me that is the price on which they pay it. You cannot take a case of beans and turn them all into tins and say: you must pay 3% on each tin. If he buys a case of beans at a wholesale price, I submit the purchaser should not have to pay whereas the individual buying his goods wholesale should only have to pay 3% on the price he pays.

MR. CURTIS: That is all he does.

MR. BROWNE: I am not so sure.

MR. CURTIS: Might I just interrupt. I think, Mr. Speaker, the position is, bulk sales are really these bulk sales to people who are reselling, and the idea of having it go through the Deputy Minister is that if the person who buys in bulk consumes it himself then he pays the assessment on the price of the bulk sales. If on the other hand he buys it to resell then he becomes a vendor and in turn gets a vendor’s license and resells.

MR. BROWNE: I know from personal experience that the wholesaler is very reluctant to sell to any individual now because of this. But it seems to me there should not be any-thing to stop the wholesaler selling because so many people in our outports require large quantities of food. They can’t be going to the grocery store every day to get their groceries but have to buy in bulk, not in very great bulk but still in bulk, and they should be entitled to get it without having to pay 3% on the price which they pay.

MR. MURRAY: But they don’t under the section.

MR. BROWNE: My understanding is that a man comes in here from say Ferryland and buys twenty-five cases of milk from Mr. O’Leary. Mr. O’Leary is liable for the 3%, and if not the person who buys is liable to pay unless he protects himself by making certain that Mr. O’Leary pays the tax. I am only speaking generally now. But the idea of people buying from the wholesaler and paying the tax whether he is a vendor afterwards or a consumer—

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Speaker, the sale in bulk is defined in the interpretation section. I think my honourable friend should discriminate between the sale in bulk and a wholesale purchase.

MR. BROWNE: I thank the Attorney General for drawing my attention to the definition.

Well now I must say that definition puzzles me because it does not apply to this at all. I thought it was sales for bulk.

MR. CURTIS: No bulk sales.

MR. BROWNE: In other words, if my honourable friend bought out a business as a going concern that would be a bulk sale.

MR. CURTIS: I may not have made myself clear, but that is what I meant. You are getting mixed up with wholesale.

MR. BROWNE: I was thinking of wholesale sales. However, it seems to me that the Government ought to give consideration (I know it is not going to do it) now to the exemption of other things in the list of those things which are taxable. According to the list here the only things exempted are gasoline for boats and vessels, natural water including ice, medical and X-ray pictures and plates, tangible personal property sold to the Dominion of Canada or the United States of America and goods shipped by seller for delivery to vessels of more than three hundred tons, goods sold at less than 17c. and meals of less than 5c. I am still puzzled to know where flour, pork and milk come in. It is not in as an exemption here. Now there are many thousands of articles, heavy machinery and articles of that type, in use by the Government and in use by municipalities and by churches, all of whom have to pay the 3% sales tax. It seems to me it is very sweeping, in fact it is the most sweeping tax I have ever heard of. There are other enterprises besides the fishery and medical equipment deserving of consideration.

I appreciate the necessity of having some penalty for those who don't pay the tax, and the provisions here do not seem unreasonable. But I do not think that the provision which gives the Government no limit for time in which to take proceedings as far as criminal proceedings are concerned is right. I believe that should be altered in Committee. I think there should be a time when a man can feel himself clear of any offence which he may have committed in his youth. Certainly he should not have to go on for the rest of his life always with the dread that some small matter which he had omitted to perform may still lay him open to charge, and knowing there is no limit to it. He may be ashamed to do anything about it or he may not know how to go about settling it up. I think we ought to change that.

But, Mr. Speaker, my chief objection to the Social Security Assessment Act is that it is too general and hits people who have not the means to pay taxes, and upon whom a 3% tax is a very substantial levy, especially when it is on every item of clothing they wear and on every article of food they consume.

MR. FOGWILL: Mr. Speaker, it is useless I suppose objecting very much. We have this 3% Social Security Assessment and it is going to remain. The Government is collecting quite a lot of money through this means. But my chief objection to the collecting of this tax, Mr. Speaker, is the taxation imposed on anything sold at 17c. or over. I think the tax should not be imposed until an article reaches 30c. I don't think the amount of money collected on articles sold between 17c. and 30c. would amount to a great pile.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Quite a bit.

MR. FOGWILL: It may be quite a lot. But I think the Government could afford to release the people from paying 3% tax between these two amounts and take the sales tax at the amount of 30c. I think that people would appreciate that very much because in a number of cases today families are smaller. On articles of food like bread, for instance, which is, I think 19c. a loaf and on that they have to pay this one cent. This puts them in the position of paying 5%. On a 17c article they would be paying 6% tax. That is what it would amount to, I think, Mr. Speaker, the Government should consider that when we go into Committee of the Whole, and have this changed to 30c. After all take some of the young people today, after the picture show etc. they go into a snack bar and have a hot dog which only costs 20c. Why should they have to pay an additional cent if they only need a hot dog or a hamburger on the way home. I think that is where the tax becomes more or less a nuisance when it applies to such small payments under 30c. I think the Government should give consideration to that, and perhaps they may consider it in Committee and we may persuade them, perhaps, to accept that principle.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, I think the principal objection of the Opposition to this tax is the fact that we have to pay it, and I think that applies not only to us but to the Government and anybody in this country. Taxes are dangerous sort of things we don't like to approach and certainly don't like to have to pay. But we do realize taxation has to be imposed to pay the necessary bills of the Government. We do regret that the Government has found fit to tax practically everything. I suppose if we went down to get a birth certificate we would have to pay a tax on it. Every way you turn now, every way you part with money you pay 3% taxation on it. It is a nuisance tax. There is no doubt about that. I wonder if the Government have thought of it along that line and thought of the repercussions as far as putting up the cost of living. You know when that tax was imposed very few of the small stores in the country and very few of the large stores were staffed to the extent that they could handle this thing very easily. They had to increase their staffs. That applied also to the small stores which means, of course, that the overhead of the small stores and the large stores has increased and they have to make more money, and consequently they charge more on their goods. That in its turn puts up the cost of living to that extent. It is undoubtedly a tax which has to be handled, from now on at least, very carefully. It is on everything over 17c. now. I hope it does not go beyond that.

I think it is rather ridiculous, as my honourable and learned friend on my right suggested, to have to pay a tax upon a tax. Taxpayers have to pay municipal taxes and then they have to pay the Government 3% on the tax. Persons who import stuff from the United States of America or from England have to pay a tax on the duty, to pay a tax on other taxes under Section 2 (i). Then if I happen to buy an electric stove and it costs me five hundred dollars, and the man from whom I purchased it comes in and installs it, and the cost to install it is forty-five or fifty dollars, as the case may be, and probably more, I have to pay 3% on that as well.

MR. CURTIS: No, it is the very opposite. That is only if it is incorporated in the price.

MR. HOLLETT: In other words then from now on if I purchase anything like that I have to purchase it at the installed price and not with a view to getting someone else to put it in or putting it in myself, is that right? I am not quite clear. "Where the regulations so provide, the charges for installation or servicing of the thing sold." I take it then if I went in to buy a thing of that kind, attached to the bill would also be an amount for servicing or installation, as the case may be, of that particular item. That would be added to the whole bill and I would have to pay 3% on that. Is that right? The Minister will explain, I suppose, later.

We all realize, as I said before that taxation has to be paid by us all. If we are going to improve the public services and benefit our people we have to collect taxes. We know that.

MR. SMALLWOOD: "Taxes are a cheap price to pay for civilization." As David Thoreau said.

MR. HOLLETT: Civilization, as everybody knows, Sir, is a general term and could mean one thing and could mean another. We have had civilization all down through the ages and sometimes it has not been so hot. I suppose the Honourable Premier is suggesting the higher the taxation the better the civilization?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Very often. And the lower the taxes the lower the civilization.

MR. HOLLETT: He will not find the people amongst whom he has to live and move and have his being agree with him—The higher the taxation the better the civilization—I am quite sure he is not going to get anybody to agree with that. Take in Thoreau's time. I don't think they had to pay on bread and butter or on anything purchased at 17c. today, which would not be even 2c. in Thoreau's time.

MR. SMALLWOOD: On the other hand in Thoreau's time poor old people who were worn out were left to rot in the manure heap. Today we have a better civilization, and today we pay more for it.

MR. HOLLETT: There is something to be said for that I will admit. I don't think there were so many people who had to be paid for in their old age in those days, they just died off before they became old.

MR. SPEAKER: I assure the House nothing pleases the House better than to hear a debate on civilization. But may I suggest it be at some other more opportune time.

MR. HOLLETT: I think, Mr. Speaker, the Premier's point was well taken. Civilization does to some extent depend upon taxation—The words rhyme very well "civilization" "taxation." So if we want civilization we must be prepared to put up taxation. The Government today, Sir, are right on the job. We have no great objection to this particular amendment, Sir.

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Speaker, just in reply to one point made by my honourable friend from St. John's West. The exemptions are provided under Section 36 of the original Act, Sir, which provides that the Lieutenant Governor in Council may make regulations specifying particular items to be exempt from the provisions of this Act.

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Speaker, that all taxes are a nuisance and of course a tax like this is a particular nuisance, and there is no getting around it. The Government has done everything in its power to have this tax collected at the source. There was a Dominion-Provincial Conference on it which my colleague on my left and some others of us attended, and we thought that we had succeeded in getting permission at that conference to get this tax collected at the source, but the Premier of one of the Provinces reneged on his undertaking and we have not been able to do it.

MR. BROWNE: What conference was that?

MR. CURTIS: The Dominion-Provincial Conference on Taxation, the last but one.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It was on constitutional matters.

MR. CURTIS: I think not. I think it was the tax one.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It was the constitutional conference, the Dominion-Provincial Conference to discuss Ways and Means of Changing the Constitution. It was held in the House of Commons Chamber. In that Premier of Ontario proposed the sales tax at the wholesale level and everyone agreed except Mr. Duplessis.

MR. CURTIS: However, Mr. Speaker, throughout the year we have had the tax I have heard absolutely no criticism. I have not heard as much throughout the country as I have heard in this House. As a matter of fact I have often heard people say "Here is a cent for Joey, God bless him" — That is nearly always added—"God bless him."

MR. SMALLWOOD: The second word is not always "bless."

MR. BROWNE: The Minister does not buy his groceries then.

MR. CURTIS: However, Mr. Speaker, I had one other point I was going to mention, but I think it will more properly belong in Committee of the whole.

I move the second reading of this Bill, Mr. Speaker.

On motion Bill read a second time, ordered referred to a Committee of the Whole House at a later hour this day.

Second Reading of Bill "An Act to Amend the Crown Lands Act":

MR. SMALLWOOD: Debate on that has already begun, Mr. Speaker.

MR. SPEAKER: The debate was adjourned by the Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, I must say that since we have been on the job morning, afternoon and night I have not had an opportunity to read this. I am prepared therefore to let the thing go into Committee of the Whole. I take it the Honourable Minister has not brought in anything so very terrible. I must say I have to admit I am agreeably surprised to find we still have some Crown Lands.

HON. DR. F. W. ROWE (Minister of Mines and Resources): More today than we have ever had before.

MR. HOLLETT: Ever before? More than in the last five years. There is not much Crown Land. I admit we own the Crown Lands all right, but if I wanted to get a license to explore for minerals today the Government would not be able to give me that license. But I would know exactly where to go and find a mine right now, but it is NALCO I would have to go to.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That mine that the honourable gentleman knows about is early in November, where he can go right and lay hands on it.

MR. HOLLETT: The mine in early November. We will get a bright product from that mine, Sir. I hope that we on this side of the House will have a plenitude of nuggets resulting from that mine. I can predict that the Honourable the Premier will be greatly surprised at the small number of nuggets which will accrue for the Government side from that particular mine. But that is not the one we are talking about. We are talking about Crown Lands. I think it is tragic, Sir. Any government should have absolute control over all the land which they govern and they should be in a position at any time to grant to John Jones or Bill Smith, an old friend of the Minister's by the way, licenses to explore for minerals of any kind. They have given that over to somebody else, to BRINCO and NALCO. So that if today I want to go and explore for minerals I must go to BRINCO or to NALCO and if I want to go and explore for timber I have to go to BRINCO and probably to NALCO too. I am not sure about that. But, as I said, I am surprised to find out that the Minister still has sufficient authority to bring in this Bill to amend the Crown Lands Act which governs Crown Lands.

I have not, Sir, had time to read this Bill. I must admit that, and I have nothing against the principle in it therefore.

DR. ROWE: If no other honourable member wishes to speak I might add: The very nature of the amendment is such that the Committee of the Whole is the obvious place to make comment. So I move the second reading, Mr. Speaker.

On motion Bill ordered read a second time. Read a second time. Ordered referred to a Committee of the Whole House at a later hour this day.

Second Reading of Bill "An Act to Amend the Cancer Control Tax Act": HON. P. S. FORSEY (Minister of Health): Mr. Speaker, in moving the amendment to this particular Act I would point out that last year this Act was introduced in order to improve health services in the control of this specific disease. The House will recall that this Act was altered in the Committee stage, providing for numerous exemptions so that the amount of tax we had hoped to collect was considerably reduced. This particular amendment is designed to lessen the number of exemptions that can apply and that the only exemptions that shall apply will be purely church functions and school functions.

I might further point out that three years ago this Government spent $120,000 in the control of cancer. In the next year that amount went up to $200,000 and during the past year that amount was increased to somewhere around $800,000. That money is being spent in the transportation of the people afflicted with disease, in paying board and lodgings, in the payment for operations at the General Hospital and other institutions and for burial and in giving abatements to people who have not been able to pay all their bills at the hospital, but have been able to pay some. It has also been spent in the provision of equipment and in giving specialized training to persons in Canada and the United States of America.

I would also like to point out that three years ago the number one killer in Newfoundland was TB and number two was heart failure and three was cancer. Two years ago the number one killer was heart failure and number two was cancer and number three was TB. Last year cancer came to the top as the number one killer in Newfoundland seconded by heart failure and thirdly by TB. The disease, Mr. Speaker, is rapidly on the increase, and paradoxically enough in those countries which have the best and most improved health services such as Denmark, England, Canada, the Scandinavian Countries and the United States, cancer is also either the number one or number two killer in these countries, while in those countries which have little or no health services such as India, cancer is practically unknown. It seems as the mortality rate increases so also does the longevity of life increase and the mortality rate from the disease of cancer also increases proportionately. Mr. Speaker, I submit that the position three years ago with respect to deaths from cancer in this Province was a shame, I submit that two years ago it was tragic and I submit that last year it has been appalling. I also submit we have to look forward and face the situation that the incidence of this disease will increase in the future. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, in view of the fact that this disease approaches somewhat to the status of a national emergency I have no recourse but to move the second reading of this Bill.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, there is not very much to say. I am glad to hear the Honourable Minister introduce the Bill in such an excellent manner, although I think some of the statements he made are entirely contradictory to the statement made by the Honourable the Premier this morning as to increasing taxation to improve civilization and as civilization grows and everything else grows taxes grow. I am inclined to think that taxes are probably one of the things that can be attributed to the existence of cancer. We are not opposed to the tax, of course. I do think though that any money collected for such a disease as cancer should be placed in a cancer control fund and not in the Consolidated Revenue Fund. The Honourable Minister admitted that last year only $120,000 was spent—Was that what I understood?

MR. FORSEY: No, that was three years ago.

MR. HOLLETT: In other words you increase the taxation so you will have more money to spend. In the next year you hope to collect five hundred thousand dollars, I believe. Cancer today is in first place. It almost looks to me the more you increase the taxation the higher the incidence of the disease of cancer.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is explosive reasoning.

MR. HOLLETT: That word dynamic could be used in so many ways, Sir.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The fact is it is explosive reasoning.

MR. HOLLETT: Cancer, Sir, is a dreaded disease in this country. I don't know if I should prefer to die of cancer or heart failure. I am quite sure the Speaker will tell me in a moment.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I can tell the honourable gentleman a more pleasant way of dying—striving to become Premier. It is a very pleasant, long-lunging death and takes an awful long time. It should take twenty-five years.

MR. HOLLETT: That is very interesting. I could make some remark about that but probably the least said the better. I do hope the Honourable the Premier will never be afflicted with cancer or any other of these diseases. I would like to see him removed henceforth and be seen later off the hook in connection with cancer or any other disease. I certainly shall not pass out from over-worry because I cannot have the honour of being Premier, and it is one of the highest honours the country could give anybody. I might say here and now that I have never yet aspired to that high office. I might say further, Sir, that I came into this House, I think everyone in this House knows the conditions under which I came into this present position I hold as Leader of the Opposition. It was something unsought for.

MR. SMALLWOOD: But having now become Leader of the Opposition surely the honourable gentleman is fighting to have the equivalent job on this side of the House?

MR. HOLLETT: I am certainly fighting to remove that which is there presently—I am fighting for that—Or I could put it a better way—I am fighting to endeavour to get those on the opposite side of the House either to mend their ways as to financial affairs of this country or get out. Now that I know it will involve some little trouble for some members on the opposite side, but I hope it is not cancer. But, Sir, I am quite sure that cancer—or I might tell you a little story—Sir, about two years ago, following the re-election which took place up in the West End, for about two and a half months after what I knew I had cancer. I felt I had it. This is just for the benefit of the members on the opposite side who sometimes smoke too much or do anything too much, it does not matter, smoking, drinking or what not. But I went to the doctor and the doctor said there is not much to get excited about, you have been working hard during the election, living on an election diet etc. But I was losing weight and having all sorts of pain in a particular part of my lung and began to worry. So I went to the doctor again and he said; go into the hospital and have X-rays. I said not—if that is it no, I am not going into hospital. But, Sir, as luck should have it, and perhaps the Almighty God designed it—A certain man came to my house and said—Have you increased your smoking lately? I told him, yes, I had during the election, about doubled it. That is your trouble, he said. He was just a lay friend and not a doctor. Well I said, if that is so, this is all—that was two and a half years ago, I have not had a smoke since. Forty-eight hours afterwards the pain went and I have not had it since. I venture to bet that if I had not stopped smoking I would have been dead in six months from cancer. It was probably Heavenly inspired. That is just a moral for everybody—Do not do anything to excess.

MR. SMALLWOOD: You can't scare me. I gave up smoking in January.

MR. MURRAY: I suggest the moral is that you should not take things so pessimistically.

DR. ROWE: I gave it up too.

MR. HOLLETT: I don't think I had actually been pessimistic, but cancer is a serious thing. I favour this Act. But we hope every cent brought in from it will be spent in the control and eradication of that disease, Mr. Speaker.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, I listened with interest to the figures given by the Honourable Minister. $120,000 spent three years ago and $200,000 spent two years ago and $300,000 last year. But when he gave the particulars he said it was spent on hospital expenses, transportation, operations and burial expenses. But this is a Bill for the control of cancer. I would have liked to hear from the Minister as to what measures are being taken to control the spread of this disease in this country, if it is the number one killer, and this is a national emergency. Then I ask what is the Government doing about it? What steps have they taken since this was introduced to control cancer?

MR. SMALLWOOD: The honourable gentleman should not get too angry nor too worried by this talk of his Honourable Leader about cancer.

MR. BROWNE: I am not angry, but concerned. I know how serious cancer is. If there is something the Government should do and don’t do, they are remiss in their duty if they don’t do it. This is a cancer control Act. There is no preamble that says what it is for. The only thing I can see it is for is a means of getting more revenue to help defray the expenses of the Department of Public Health. If it were called a tax to help defray the expenses of the Department of Public Health then it would properly be labeled. It is not properly labeled at the present time because the Minister has given us no information that the money has been used for the purpose for which the tax was imposed.

Now, Sir, there must be many ways by which cancer can be controlled. The Department of Public Health can assist by keeping proper statistics and by clinical examinations, by publicity. The Metropolitan Life Insurance Company of New York has continuously advertised the desirability, in fact the urgency that people who get pains in certain regions, their lungs or that sort of thing, or a lump or anything, should go to a doctor to get examined. But I have not seen very much information of that kind here in Newfoundland. It seems to me that is the most important thing about cancer, to get it early, and get early treatment. Some people become pessimistic if they have some foreign lump in their body and are afraid to go to the doctor. Medical science is such today that with the equipment which doctors have their lives can be prolonged, even though a person is suffering from cancer, by surgery and by X-ray and by the cobalt bomb and by radium. It seems to me there is not enough information given to the public along these lines.

Now I have known several persons who were given up to die because they were supposed to have cancer, who lived for months and years. I know in my own family, my second wife was told in 1936 that she only had three months to live, told by a doctor in a clinic in Boston. Then she went to a clinic in Providence and the doctor treated her down there with X-ray therapy for a malignant growth and she lived for eight years afterwards. I had a great deal of association with doctors dealing with cancer. I think it would be a good thing if the Government would get people to realize that when they have something the matter with them they should go as quickly as they can to a doctor and get advice.

Now the Government can also help in another way, by creating some kind of fund for specialists in that sort of thing so that a doctor may go and learn the latest technique in treating these cases, such as scholarships. We are only a small country and have not the facilities or experience here. But if there is a doctor here interested in that particular disease I think he should be encouraged to follow it up by visits to every place. It is not every doctor who will be interested in studying the disease. It seems to me if we can find one he should be encouraged. I do feel the Government should do something. They have a big field there if it is the number one killer, and if, as the Minister says, it is a national emergency. I hope by this time next year the Minister will be able to bring in a more interesting report as to what the Government is already doing to control the spread of this disease.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, if the honourable gentleman had been in the House when the Act was brought in he would have heard precisely what the Government are doing and proposing to do. I don't think there is any necessity of saying it all over again on this occasion when the Act is merely being amended. The full description was given of what the Government are actually doing and it is quite an activity down in the General Hospital.

MR. BROWNE: The Minister did not say so.

MR. SMALLWOOD: He did indeed when introducing the Act. This is merely an amendment, and there is no necessity of doing it all over again. He has brought us up-to-date since the Bill was introduced last year, on which occasion he told exactly what the Government were doing and proposing to do in connection with the diagnosis and cure of cancer. But today he brought us up-to-date on the peril of cancer.

MR. BROWNE: That has been going on a long time.

MR. SMALLWOOD: He informed us today that cancer has gone to first place as a killer in three years.

MR. BROWNE: It was ahead of TB many years ago.

HON. J. R. CHALKER (Minister of Education): Not in Newfoundland.

MR. BROWNE: I challenge the figures because I have observed them. I have studied these figures for many years.

MR. SMALLWOOD: In Newfoundland?

MR. BROWNE: Yes, and I challenge the figures of the Minister of Health as he gives them here today.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The Minister will of course close the debate and will have an opportunity to accept the challenge.

MR. BROWNE: It is not a very serious one.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Quite serious.

MR. BROWNE: Anyway I may as a personal explanation say I am greatly interested in cancer. I have watched the increase and growth of cancer month by month as the statistics came out from the department. I could see ten years ago that cancer was growing gradually to first place, and it is more than three years ago since it did.

MR. CHALKER: Mr. Speaker, I would like to speak on that. I had a little experience with the Department of Health during my time of office when this Government spent millions of dollars, yes, millions of dollars on cancer control with assistance from the Federal Government in Federal Health Grants.

MR. BROWNE: Millions?

MR. HOLLETT: What were they doing last year when they spent only $300,000?

MR. CHALKER: We had pretty well nothing when we started. We now have deep X-ray therapy machines and very excellent doctors, Dr. Murphy, and Dr. Higgins. I should imagine in the last five years that our services for the prevention of cancer in this country have gone up about 200%.

DR. ROWE: Mr. Speaker, just a brief word on that—A few months ago my boy happened to have to go to the General Hospital. On one of my visits there I happened to run into a doctor who very kindly took me right through the hospital and included in that was a tour of the X-ray and cancer control division. I must say I was very much impressed, Mr. Speaker, I had no idea we were doing so much as we are. I had a long talk with Dr. Higgins, an old friend of mine whom I had not seen since graduating from college. He gave me some figures, which I don't remember. We talked for an hour, Dr. Higgins, Dr. Wilson and a couple of other doctors. I was very much impressed and was highly gratified to realize this Government was spending so much money on such an important matter. I believe everyone of us is greatly concerned because there is no one who has not had some personal bereavement in his family with regard to that. By the law of averages three or four perhaps five or six of us here today will be dead in the next ten years from Cancer.

MR. FORSEY: Mr. Speaker, I did mention in my remarks that money has been spent in the purchase of equipment, deep therapy equipment and X-ray machines, and also that money had been spent in sending people away for courses in the treatment of cancer and in the operation also of radiological machinery. As a matter of fact in the estimates the honourable member for St. John's West will see a department of radiology at the General Hospital, the staff of which is being increased. This was not in existence four years ago.

Now with respect to propaganda: There is a voluntary organization here which does carry on propaganda in connection with the control of this disease, in collaboration, of course, with the Department of Health. These are voluntary citizens who are doing, out of a sense of public duty, a very good job. My figures incidentally were obtained from statistics compiled by a committee of the Department of Health of the Federal Government who have been down here for the past three years compiling statistics on the incidence of the various diseases in Newfoundland. If my figures are wrong it is due to the fact they made wrong calculations.

MR. BROWNE: They may have taken different periods. I watched them month by month for months.

MR. FORSEY: As far as early treatment is concerned; there are various forms of cancer. It is possible to contract cancer and die as rapidly as one week with no possibility of treatment. Some people don't feel the effects of cancer until they are seventy-five and eighty. I am informed that these people who die of cancer at that age may have had it as early as forty, and there would be no possibility of their having any indications that the disease was inherent in their system.

MR. HOLLETT: That is helpful anyway.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It is a mysterious disease.

On motion Bill read a second time, ordered referred to a Committee of the Whole at a later hour this day.

MR. SPEAKER: It being now 1:00 o'clock I will leave the Chair until 3:00 of the clock this afternoon.

WEDNESDAY, June 16, 1954

AFTERNOON SESSION

The House resumed at 3:00 of the clock.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, before the House proceeds with its normal business I rise to a point of privilege, to invite the attention of the House to an account of some of last night's proceedings of this House that appeared in today's edition of the "Evening Telegram." I will read it:

"An attempt by Opposition Leader, Malcolm Hollett to prove that some members of the Government received directors' fees from certain of the new industries was dubbed a damnable lie by Premier Smallwood yesterday. The Premier retracted his remark only after Hansard was produced. It began with the gypsum mill which Mr. Hollett showed made a net loss of $58,000 in ten months. Directors as of February 9, 1952 were the following, he said: Joseph R. Smallwood, Leslie R. Curtis, E. S. Spencer, C. H. Ballam, Dr. Valdmans and Ernest Leja. These had one share each. He wondered did they draw any fees. "No," said Premier Smallwood. "None."

The Opposition Leader then went on to point out an amount set aside for "Directors' Fees and Salaries" of fifty-four hundred dollars a year."

Then, Mr. Speaker, in black-faced type:

"Only Mr. Leja got any of them, said the Premier."

Then resuming in light-faced type:

"Mr. Hollett continued to argue the point and read an itemized list of the gypsum plant expenses, one of them being "Directors' Fees or Salaries." Premier Smallwood pounced upon this claiming that Mr. Hollett had specified directors' fees and not salaries. It was at this point that the Premier dubbed Mr. Hollett's statement a "dannable lie." Mr. Hollett demanded a retraction. The Premier refused. "Produce Hansard and prove it," he said."

Then in black-faced type:

"Hansard was produced. It proved Mr. Hollett right." Mr. Hollett then again demanded that the Premier retract his remark. He was getting tired of being called a dannable liar, he said. "The Premier refused to apologise, however, and claimed that the lie consisted in making the charge that the members of the Government got fees or salaries from the gypsum plant."

The Speaker interrupted to explain that the use of such terms as "liar" were unparliamentary, quite apart from the truth or otherwise of the charge and ought not in any way to be employed."

Then in black-faced type:
"The Premier then withdrew his remark."

Now, Mr. Speaker, I think that any member of this House including Your Honour who was present here last night when this debate took place will recognize at once that this is a most dastardly, a most false account of what took place—dastardly and false—written by a rat, a literary rat named Horwood, a literary abomination, a loathsome scavenger, a man who was once a member of this House and who since then has used the columns of the "Evening Telegram" to conduct a personal campaign of his own against this Government and particularly against me. He was a member of this party. He sat on this side of the House. He has never forgiven me and never will forgive me because I did not take him into the cabinet.

Let us examine the piece in question:

"An attempt by Opposition Leader, Malcolm Hollett to prove that some members of the Government received directors' fees from certain of the new industries was dubbed a "damnable lie"."

Mr. Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition did not make any attempt to prove some members of the Government received directors' fees from certain of the new industries. He did appear to be attempting to prove that some government members received directors' fees from one of these industries, namely, the gypsum plant.

Now that is lie No. 1. It is wrong. It was written by the author, Harold Horwood, he knowing it was wrong, therefore, he lied deliberately and consciously.

"Mr. Hollett demanded a retraction."

The Premier refused. "Produce Hansard and prove it," he said."

The Premier did no such thing. It was the Leader of the Opposition who demanded Hansard. That is another lie. That is a Horwood lie, deliberate and conscious. He lied deliberately, knowingly, consciously. He deceived the public. He deceived the owner of this newspaper. He deceived the editor of this newspaper. He deceived the readers of this newspaper. But he does not deceive the members of this House.

"Hansard was produced. It proved Mr. Hollett right."

Mr. Speaker, it did no such thing. It proved Mr. Hollett wrong. That is another lie, a deliberate and conscious lie, a purposeful lie told to deceive the editor of that newspaper, to deceive the owners of that newspaper, to deceive the readers of that newspaper, but it does not deceive—

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, may I interrupt for one moment. I would like to point out, in my opinion—I had nothing to do with an article printed in the "Evening Telegram" nor the actual nature of it, but I would like to say that in my opinion the point at issue was whether I had used the word "fees" or "salaries". Hansard proved that I did use these words. In that respect I believe it was proven I was correct.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It was proven the honourable gentleman was wrong, and Mr. Speaker, himself, pointed out that fact.

MR. SPEAKER: Order. It is not competent to argue a point settled yesterday. The point is one of privilege. After the Honourable the Premier has made a complaint it is my duty to declare if in my opinion a prima facie case, of breach of privilege exists or not. Then honourable members may speak to the motion but they can't join debate at this stage.

MR. SMALLWOOD: In short, Mr. Speaker, this whole thing is written by this dastardly clown, this loathsome literary scavenger, this filthy rat, that cut-throat—I have never cheated at cards. I have never been detected in embezzlement of funds. This rat here in this account as in many previous accounts is using the columns of the "Evening Telegram" to carry on his own personal grudge against this Government because he hates this Government as the devil hates holy water. He hates me with a deadly and undying hatred because he was brazen enough to think that he ever had a chance to be taken into my Cabinet. He discovered there was not a chance in the world so, he, and another former member of this House, and another, a third who has recently crossed the floor, all three of them, for over a year have been meeting regularly and faithfully talking and concocting ways and means to get at me and to get at this Government. I don't mind any of that—I don't particularly and very much mind even this, but I am quite confident that the owners of the "Evening Telegram" are not aware of what a rat, what a scavenger they are nursing to their bosoms and allowing to use their columns.

Mr. Speaker, I have remarked in this House recently that the House might have to ask itself whether it would or should or indeed in the circumstances could continue to give the privileges of attendance here and to continue to provide facilities that are provided for those ladies and gentlemen of the press and radio and to a representative of a newspaper whose accounts befoul the great tradition of the press, of a free press, who befouled it as that man Horwood is doing as a writer for the "Evening Telegram"—and whether the House won't have to bar him from coming inside the door as a newspaper man, as a press representative. Whether the House might not have to take a particular step to bar a man named Horwood from entering here as a newspaper man on the grounds he is a filthy literary rat, a scavenger not fit to have the privileges of a newspaper man, because he is a literary assassin.

I do suggest that the Evening Telegram, which is a great newspaper, would ask itself if it is being fair to itself, if it is being fair to its readers and the public to allow this man Horwood to continue to use its columns to report the events of this House so that the only report that the readers of the Evening Telegram get of the proceedings of this House are reports written by a man with such a bias as he has. In other words, is it the deliberate policy of the Evening Telegram to have its report of the proceedings of this Chamber written for it by a man who is an active partisan in politics? A man who will slant his reports by the suppression of relevant words and complete omission of entire speeches. For instance when the Minister of Public Welfare speaks, Horwood stands up and noisily walks out of the building. I have seen him do it on three occasions, and we have all seen it. When the Minister of Public Works whose shoes Horwood is not fit to wipe nor lace his boots, speaks, he will get up noisily and walk out of the Chamber. When the Minister without Portfolio spoke here, and made a notable contribution to the debates of this House, a most notable one, he contemptuously dismissed him, and did not even say in his account that the Minister had even spoken at all. Loaded, slanted, full of bias, full of prejudice, political prejudice against this Government. I say, the Evening Telegram might wisely and might profitably consider whether it wants to continue in the position where the only account it gives its readers, the only account, one and only account it gives its readers, of the events of this House is the account written by a man overflowing with political hatred of the Leader of the House and of the Government.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I bring these things to the attention of the House. I could go all over the page, Mr. Speaker. The whole page is full of the missing cement. This whole thing is written to cast doubt, this is a piece of clever slanting in writing to cast doubt on my word, to suggest that there is graft in it somewhere—slanted writing—"He" (that is the Premier) "deplored the fact that the cement had been turned into headlines by the newspapers." Now he adds a new twist, an editorial comment of himself. He mentioned the Premier did not explain Mr. Hollett's figure of 168,000 bags of cement against the less than 60,000 bags which he said actually went into the erection of the plant. Although even his own account up to that point has quoted my stating that there never were any such bags, that these just did not exist, that they were entirely mythical. He quoted that, but ended up with a purely editorial opinion of his in the editorial column. "He did not explain Malcolm Hollett's figures of 168,000 bags against the 60,000 which he said actually went into the erection of the plant." He left it to the reader to explain, to make that charge and say, yes, Smallwood is caught there. Yes he is forced to explain what happened to the difference. It is clever. I admit it is clever in a filthy kind of a way. This man Horwood is carrying on a one-man political campaign of his own and is getting paid for it by the Evening Telegram which newspaper throws its columns open to him to carry on as a supposedly accurate newspaper man who is used to letting the chips fall where they will, whose only concern is to give the facts, all the facts and nothing but the facts. Instead of which he picks and chooses which speeches he will report, he picks and chooses which parts of which speech he will report. He picks and chooses which parts he will omit and which parts he will put in black-faced type so there is less chance the reader will miss it because it is in blackface type. A piece of foul and filthy political bias on the part of a disgruntled former politician whose ambition it is to somehow crawl in on somebody else's coattails into the House of Assembly as he once crawled in on my coattails.

Mr. Speaker, I deem this account written by this man Horwood to be of sufficient importance, and these are only the latest in a long series of similarly slanted, biased and prejudiced reporting of the events of this House by this same writer, Horwood, whom I understand was recently investigated for communism on the score that he was possibly a communist or had possible communist affiliations or connections. This is what the readers of the grand old Evening Telegram are being subject to.

Now I submit the case to this House.

MR. SPEAKER: Let me say first the honourable members are, if they intend to consider this complaint of breach of privilege, to do so on the facts before them, namely the article in the newspaper. The privileges of any House, any parliament, have been hardly and dearly bought. They are a precious heritage and honourable members will do well to think of them as such for remember, privileges may be lost but no new privileges may be created either in Canada nor in Great Britain, and we have therefore to safeguard those we have.

In this instance complaint is made of a piece of reporting in a daily newspaper of a sitting of this House. Is it in the opinion of the honourable members a fair, even a fair, we do not expect a meticulously accurate one, but is it a fair account of what took place in this House yesterday morning? I want to point out too that although the complaint has been made by the Honourable the Premier, a breach of privilege in reporting, is a breach of privilege against the House.

The first part of the article read stated that the Honourable Leader of the Opposition attempted to prove certain members of the Cabinet had received directors' fees. Later on the same article stated that the honourable gentleman's question was proven to be right in that he had not mentioned fees. That in itself is, of course, a contradiction. The House might well ask itself what is the public to deduce from that?

Apart from the privilege of reporting proceedings in the House, I would ask honourable members to notice this (and I attach the greatest importance to this) yesterday a statement was made based on certain alleged facts which the Honourable the Leader of the Opposition had made. A reply was given by the Government. An argument followed, and in the heat of debate expressions were used which ought not to have been used. Hansard was demanded by the Honourable Leader of the Opposition, and not, as the article states, by the Premier. What was decided by reading Hansard I submit to the House is of no concern to anybody but the honourable members themselves. We are not to revive the debate as to who was right or wrong. On a ruling from the Chair both honourable members made honourable amends to each other, and it is so reported in Hansard; the unparliamentary words of one withdrawn and the words which lent themselves to misinterpretation withdrawn by the other. The incident was closed. An article like this, which revives the debate, I do not think is conducive to the dignity and prestige of the House. These are the things that honourable members should consider. While all allowance might be made for the honourable member in lodging his complaint, the personal attributes of the reporter in question really ought not to be considered but merely the account of the reporting itself, as far as the accuracy which the House has a right to expect and the constituents to get is concerned. Actually I can do no other than declare that in my belief a prima facie case of breach of privilege does exist. Now it is for the House to deal with it, either now or to deal with it in committee set up for that purpose.

Does the honourable Leader of the Opposition wish to make a comment?

MR. HOLLETT: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I don't wish to associate myself with any agreement or disagreement over any rule which was made yesterday by this House or Mr. Speaker. Moreover, I do not wish to associate myself with any newspaper or radio in this country, I don't wish to associate myself with any reporter in this country, and I don't want this side of the House to be associated with any move which may be made to debar the press galleries from any citizen of Canada be their reporting what it may, be it correct or incorrect. I do submit that if any breach of privilege has been made, in the future there is a way to deal with it. I certainly don't wish to associate myself with any of the language which was used in this House this day against any person who is not entitled and has not the privilege to reply thereto. I regret it very much.

I can quite see that the Honourable the Premier in the heat of his complaint would probably use the words which I know he might be sorry for afterwards. I might do the same thing. I think it is unfortunate that this things should happen. We on this side of the House, Sir, could many a time and often have complained about the reporting which certainly did not favour us politically. If any statements were made in the press or in any particular place which were wrong, and I myself detect one, I must detect two, but I could not say, Sir, that they were done deliberately. I must repeat there is no political association whatsoever between this side of the House and any newspaper or any radio station. We are as independent as the wind. I will admit to this—and I am debarred from suggesting anything about the ruling made yesterday—but I will submit that it was I who asked for the Hansard and it was not the Honourable the Premier as it appeared in the article complained of. There was one other point, which has slipped my memory at the moment, there are anyway a couple of things there which are incorrect in the statement as read. Mind you, Sir, I have not seen the newspaper and have not read that and therefore I am not competent to judge of the complaint of the Honourable the Premier unless I had read it and studied it. I think, therefore, before any move is made at all to do anything of such a drastic nature as what has been hinted at in the speech of the Premier, I think that time should be taken out to consider as to who should handle it, whether it should be by the House as a whole or whether it should be by a Select Committee, because these statements which were made today, Sir, I deplore them very much. I deplore these statements irrespective of political affiliations of any man in this House or outside this House, to use the terms which have been used. I certainly don't want to be mixed up with them. I don't want to have anything to do with them. As far as the Evening Telegram is concerned, I believe the Evening Telegram has been certainly not in favour of us on this side of the House, not since Confederation. They have been, if we might call them such, our political enemies in that they have not supported us. I think if you don't support a party, you are against it, as the fellow said. Nevertheless the Evening Telegram, Sir, is, and has been for generations, a paper which has been read by all people in this country, respected by everybody. It was one of the first papers I ever read as a boy because my old father always subscribed to it, although even he had a job at times to get the money to pay for it.

Therefore, I suggest we ought not to make any slurs or any charges against the present Evening Telegram because it has hired this or that man. I would say, Sir—it is my suggestion and I believe my honourable friends will concur—they have the right to expect that time should be taken out to consider the whole matter and at least give the members of this House an opportunity to read the paper in which the article complained of appears.

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Speaker, this is a matter which would ordinarily be referred to a Committee of Privileges, but the House is in session and the facts are fresh in all our minds, and the facts speak for themselves, and there is nothing really to investigate between what is our knowledge of what took place yesterday and the report that I have heard for the first time read in the House. I think the suggestion of my honourable friend, the Leader of the Opposition is correct. Perhaps we might just let the matter stand for a short period so that we could best consider it in the light of what is the best thing to do. Certainly the members of this House must be protected. While I am not prepared to make a motion at the moment I do think that perhaps if we do adjourn the matter until a later time today we might have an opportunity to consider it and decide in our own minds what the House ought to do.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I have no desire in the first place to have any action taken hastily. I have no desire in the second place that any drastic action be taken by the House against the Evening Telegram. I am not suggesting that the House use its undoubted power against that newspaper, its editor or its owners. I am only suggesting one thing, that the moment any citizen is elected to this House and carries the responsibility of membership to the extent of speaking on the floor of this House, no newspaper nor radio station has any right whatsoever nor even the shadow of a right to misrepresent or to misquote him, no right whatsoever. No such right exists never did nor ever will. Every member of this House on all sides or no sides, Liberal, Tory or Independent, all members of this House are entitled as of right, just because they are members, if for no other reason, to be protected against a newspaper or radio writer or a newspaper or a radio that misrepresents him in his capacity of a member of the House in his speeches in the House or in his statements as a Minister. If the public are to judge a member of the House by his remarks in the House then the remarks shall be truly and accurately portrayed or not at all. It does seem to me, as one who has spent nine-tenths of his working life in the business of newspaper and radio work, that it is not because a man has walked along the sidewalk possessing all the rights of a citizen and suddenly goes to work for a newspaper and a radio station he automatically acquires rights which he did not possess as he walked down the sidewalk as a private citizen.

It is a good many years since this House took drastic action against a newspaper, and perhaps it has been forgotten just what our powers are in that regard. We are the highest court in Newfoundland, we are above all other courts in Newfoundland, we in this House, not the Government, not I, but this House. We are not above the law as someone quoted me as saying, which I never did say or never would say. We are the highest court in this Island, this Province. We make laws and we create courts. We can make courts and we can abolish them, and we can change them. We make laws and we can repeal them and we can amend them, we can change them. We make laws and we can repeal them and we can amend them, we can change them. We are the highest court in this Province of Newfoundland although we too are bound by the law. As I said: it is quite a long time since there was any occasion for this House to exert its undoubted power in a matter such as the one I have raised this afternoon—and I am the last one in the House that desires that they be used. But I am the first one in the House that desires that every member of the House be protected against calumination, against misrepresentation, against lying and falsehood.—So I am willing to have the matter stand for some hours while we all give some thought to it in between the rest of our duties for the day.

MR. SPEAKER: Is it the pleasure of the House to adopt the suggestion offered by the Honourable Leader of the Opposition and the Honourable the Attorney General?

On motion the matter will stand at the pleasure of the House.

Orders of The Day
Second Reading of Bill "An Act to Amend the Memorial University Act."

MR. CHALKER: Mr. Speaker, this Bill was presented to the Department of Education by the Board of Regents of the Memorial University. It was checked thoroughly by the members of that Department and recommended to the Cabinet for approval.

This is a very important Bill to a certain extent, inasmuch as at the present time all actions of the University are subject to the approval of the Minister of Education. This Bill will amend all those sections, which will mean that the approval of the running of the University will be left in the hands of the Board of Regents. Of course the Government still retains control of the finances and the appointment of the various members of the Board. I may say, Mr. Speaker, that the Government are very proud of the present administration of the Memorial University, now running the University, and we have every faith in them to continue to do so, inasmuch as we are standing behind this Bill.

Mr. Speaker, I move the second reading of this Bill.

On motion Bill read a second time, ordered referred to a Committee of the Whole at a later hour this day.

Second Reading of Bill "An Act to Amend the Memorial University Pensions Act."

MR. CHALKER: Mr. Speaker, this Bill was brought to the attention of the Department of Education similarly to the one just mentioned. It deals with the Memorial University Pensions Amendment Act. The pensions scheme now active in the University is not a compulsory one inasmuch as various professors and members of the staff do not have to join up with this present scheme. This Bill will make it mandatory for every person working on behalf of the University to belong to this scheme. It also will take into account, Mr. Speaker, a professor coming from any other University would not be forced to join this scheme but the amount that the University would set aside if he had joined the scheme would be placed to the credit of the scheme to which he belonged in any other University and retain his pension rights in a University where he is established, and we would pay our proportion of that share.
It also takes care of the pension scheme for the President of the University. This scheme was part of his contract when he agreed to act as President of the Memorial University. It states that upon his retirement he shall receive two-thirds of his salary and in the event of his death his wife shall receive one-half of the basic salary.

There is nothing special in this, Mr. Speaker, and I move the second reading.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, I have not had an opportunity of studying the Bill which amends the Memorial University Pensions Act. In some respects I had to do with the original drafting of the pension scheme for the Memorial University. I notice here that the President is to receive a pension and in the case of his death the widow of the President will get a pension equal to one-half. I wonder whether any consideration will be given to the past President who has served for such a long time and gave such faithful service in the pioneering days of the college. It seems to me that President Hatcher by his faithful attention to his duties throughout the years deserves consideration of a similar kind. I would recommend to the Minister of Education that he take steps, if such are necessary, to bring to those responsible a consideration of something of that kind in the case of President Hatcher.

There does not seem to be anything else of very great importance involved in this Bill.

On motion Bill read a second time, ordered referred to a Committee of the Whole House at a later hour this day.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Before Your Honour calls the next item of business I wonder if I might be permitted to keep a promise I made to the House. I am delighted to have it so soon. I frankly did not expect to have it so soon.

MR. SPEAKER: This is an answer to a question?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, Sir.

MR. SPEAKER: Does the House give leave?—There is a rule that no questions may be asked or answered after the Orders of the Day have been entered upon.

Leave given by the House.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, it concerns Question 108, expenditure for the month of March is shown as $220,897. The account had been queried on the grounds that this expenditure exceeded the total in the estimates for the year which were given. The explanation is the current account estimate contained no provision in respect of the refunding of interest paid by various new industries, and the revised estimates on current account did contain such provisions. The revised current vote of this department was set at $363,600, an increase of $193,200 for the refund of interest. The issues on this account amounted to $195,514 which were made in March and are included in the total of $220,000 for the month. In other words all interest repayments for the years were apparently made in that one month of March, and apparently, furthermore, were made in my department, the Department of Economic Development, which accounts for the rather startling figure that appeared in the answer to Question 108.

Now in reference to the supplementary agreement for the construction of the Birch Plant. The Deputy Minister of Finance sent me this written memorandum: “The only agreement recorded in the Department of Finance has been copied and tabled. It is the original relating to the construction and operations of the plant. Queried all possible sources for agreement at the time copy was made. We must assume no supplementary agreement is in existence.” Mr. Marshall informed me orally the only agreement there was is the one which was tabled. Now I must confess, I have a vague idea that there is a supplementary agreement which was discussed but never effected, I suppose. But I don’t keep these agreements. They are kept either by the Attorney General or by the Department of Finance. We don’t keep them in the Department of Economic Development. Mr. Marshall has informed me that no such thing exists in the Department of the Attorney General nor in the Department of Provincial Affairs nor in the Department of Finance, and he is virtually of the belief, he tells me, that no such second agreement exists.

Finally I promised to give the exact breakdown of the Gypsum Plant. If the honourable gentleman will take down the figures:

The total cost of the plant including the purchase of the equipment and machinery, construction of the building, setting up of the machinery, etc. as per Public Accounts 1952-53 the figure is $2,599,068.73. Cost charged in 1953-54, $214,755.50. With the capital expenditure added to that it makes a total of $2,813,764.23. Let us now deduct customs refunds of duty $40,919.59, leaving a figure of $2,772,844.64. Now another table:

<table>

<tr>
<td>Initial working capital</td>
<td>400,000</td>

<tr>
<td>Apropos of these figures the House may remember that I said the total working capital was five hundred thousand dollars. The figure I had in mind meant these two together, the purchase of shares $100,000 and $400,000 additional working capital, the two together totalling $500,000. Then below that again add to these figures; restoration of loss on operation $283,175.76. Now add all that up and it amounts to $3,566,020.40, or three and a half million dollars. That is the entire capital cost of the plant, entire purchase of the shares, entire working capital, entire losses, the whole thing: $3,566,020.40 to date.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>MR. BROWNE: That does include the $490,000?</td>

<tr>
<td>MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, it is all-inclusive. That is the complete story to this moment, so the Controller of the Treasury tells me. But I am sure the House will appreciate that I do not carry the figures around in my mind. He tells me that is the story to this moment, and that is all I can say.</td>

| HON. S. J. HEFFTRTON (Minister of Municipal Affairs and Supply): Mr. Speaker, this is an amendment incurred by various municipalities. It amounts to an addition to the schedule under the Act. The first makes provision for a little difficulty in connection with making provisions for the Town of Botwood issuing a bond issue of $80,000 for the extension of water services in that locality. The other two amendments make provision whereby Stephenville can raise a bond issue of $600,000 for the installation of water and sewerage on which they have been engaged for the last few months. Thirdly, the Town of Deer Lake to raise a bond issue of $120,000 in order that they may expand their water and sewerage facilities. Finally a small amount of $4,600, a loan received by the local Government Council at Bear Head, Port au Port that they might install a water service, the loan to run for a period of three years.

Mr. Speaker, I move the second reading of this Bill.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, I understood, from what the Minister has just said, the Minister of Public Works, if this Bill goes through, would have the authority, acting on behalf of the Crown, to guarantee a bond issue of $30,000 for the Botwood Water Corporation.

It says “Where any bond or debenture issue is guaranteed under this Act and if the Lieutenant-Governor in Council so directs, the signature of the Minister of Municipal Affairs and Supply or of the Minister of Finance, as the case may be, the signature on the bonds or the debentures of the appropriate mayor or chairman and the signature on the coupons, if any, attached to the bonds or debentures of the appropriate officer of the Local Authority or of the Botwood Water Corporation, as the case may be, may be lithographed or otherwise mechanically reproduced.”

What I would like to know when the Minister replies, Mr. Speaker, is if that is a new thing that has come up? Have we heard of this before, wherein the Minister of Public Works has, acting on behalf of the Crown, to guarantee the bonds of municipal corporations? It seems to me to be curious. May I suggest we change that to Minister of Finance. I understand the Minister of Finance must do that, because he is the direct financing officer of the Government. But it would be very unfortunate if the Minister of Public Works, of all people, has to do that, because he is the representative of the district.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It is only an error. We will change that.

MR. BROWNE: I am glad to know that. Another thing, are these amounts here additions? I myself did not hear all the Minister had said. He has some difficulty in hearing me and I have some difficulty in understanding him. Perhaps when he replies he might refer to that again.

MR. HEFFERTON: Mr. Speaker, the primary part of the Bill is really an addition to the schedule already attached to the Act, the Government Guarantee Act of 1952. Stephenville is new, $600,000. Deer Lake is for an extension of what they have already, and I believe they have a bond indebtedness of $100,000. Bear Head is new. They have had the loan. The work is done, and they want to regularize it under this schedule.

On motion Bill read a second time, ordered referred to a Committee of the Whole House at a later hour this day.

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Speaker, I would move that Item 12 on the Order Paper be stricken out as it is a duplication of Item 13, and I would ask that Item 13 be called.

On motion Item 12 on the Order Paper discharged.
Second Reading of Bill “An Act Further to Amend the Accident Insurance Companies (Licensing) Act.”

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Speaker, it has been found that the provisions of the present Accident Insurance (Licensing) Act enacted in 1939 are absolutely inadequate in this day and age to enable the Minister of Finance to deal satisfactorily with the various types of insurance companies applying for licenses from time to time to incorporate in Newfoundland. Examination of the Act will show (a) that it contains few safeguards in respect of the screening of companies prior to licensing so as to insure that only reputable and financially sound companies are permitted to operate in the province (b) it imposes inadequate primary qualifications and requirements for licensing and (c) the Minister is practically helpless in the matter of the incorporation of companies under Newfoundland law and their subsequent licensing. It will be remembered, a few days ago we passed an amendment to the Companies Act saying that any company incorporated for the purpose of carrying on insurance should first have the approval of the Minister of Finance before the incorporation takes place.

The inadequacies of the Act have caused and are causing the department some concern and have proved to be a great handicap in the efficient supervision and control of companies. There has been a considerable increase in insurance activities since Confederation and it is so imperative that the Minister of Finance be provided with the necessary power to enable him to insure that the interests of the public and of the province are protected at all times.

The proposed amendments set forth in this Bill have been discussed with the All Canadian Insurance Confederations of Montreal, an organization representing a majority of the other than life insurance companies operating in Canada. The Federation is of the opinion that the amendments are necessary and that they will impose no hardship whatsoever upon any reputable corporation.

I will be glad to discuss the details, section by section, in Committee. In the meantime I think the House will be prepared to accept this Bill.

I move the second reading, Mr. Speaker.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, I think that you will certainly appreciate the difficulty that the Opposition are confronted with when speaking to a Bill which we have just been presented with for the first time and having no opportunity whatsoever to examine it. Now it seems to me, that most of the legislation being brought in here this session has been of such a character that it could very well have been considered by a special committee of the House, if I may be pardoned for saying so. In Nova Scotia they have a special Committee on Legislation that considers all minor matters of amendments to legislation already enacted. I believe that we have enough lawyers in this House, under the direction of the Attorney General, to form a suitable committee to examine these Bills, and if any other of the members were interested at any time they could attend as well. I believe it would be most suitable, and I think they would get down to business promptly, and could examine the thing easily and bring in their recommendations to the House. Then they would go through, I think, in most cases, practically automatically. But it is very difficult now for us to pick up a Bill and while the Minister is giving an explanation try and run our eyes over it and see what it is all about.

Now I have not been able to gather all the intentions that are embodied in this Bill, but I do notice one that I feel calls for some comment, that is, the provision contained in Section (5) which changes the license fee for the said license to $50 to be paid before the issue of the same. That is repealed and the following substituted therefor: "The Lieutenant-Governor in Council may by order direct the fee payable for license or renewal of license and the fee shall be paid before the license or renewal is issued."

Now unless there is some very good reason for giving to the Government power to fix fees I think the fees ought to be fixed right here, the same as income tax. The biggest fees fixed on people are settled in Parliament so the license for the insurance companies ought to be settled here in parliament and not that the Lieutenant-Governor in Council may by order fix the fees payable for licenses or renewal of licenses. I would suggest that when we get in Committee that matter be considered. I believe it may be considered that the House could fix the fee here instead of having it left to the Lieutenant-Governor in Council.

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Speaker, there is considerable merit in the suggestion of my honourable and learned friend. Unfortunately when the rules of this House were drafted there were only two lawyers in the House, the then Honourable Leader of the Opposition and myself. And we did not want to create ourselves a Committee such as is suggested. But these Bills I must say are really non-partisan Bills. They have no political significance in them, as we are all interested in the same thing, and this type of Bill might well, if we had such a Committee, have passed such a Committee—and I do think the House might well give some thought to that matter of having some such committee as my honourable friend suggested.

As regards his other suggestion, I think that is a matter we can deal with in Committee. I move second reading of this Bill.

On motion Bill read a second time, ordered referred to a Committee of the Whole later on today.

Second Reading of Bill "An Act to Amend the Civil Service Act."

MR. HEFFERFTON: Mr. Speaker, this Bill has not been distributed.

MR. SPEAKER: I cannot entertain the motion for second reading.

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Speaker, we might defer that order.

On motion order deferred.

Second Reading of Bill "An Act for Granting to Her Majesty Certain Sums of Money for Defraying Certain Expenses of the Public Service for the Financial Year Ending the Thirty-first Day of March, One Thousand Nine Hundred and Fifty-four, and For Other Purposes Relating to the Public Service."

MR. CURTIS: This Bill, Mr. Speaker, is a Supplementary Supply Bill, and I don't think there is any debate.

On motion Bill read a second time.

MR. CURTIS: This Bill was discussed in the resolution stage, Mr. Speaker, and perhaps the House may be prepared to have the Bill read a third time, unless there is a wish to have it go into Committee.

MR. SPEAKER: I think for the purpose of the record if the House only went into Committee of the Whole and rose again.

MR. BROWNE: Is it the practice here to go into Committee of the Whole now on this Bill?

MR. CURTIS: I understood, Mr. Speaker, the practice was, if a Bill had been discussed in Committee and Resolution form we sometimes dispense with Committee of the Whole. However, it is only a suggestion—there is no ulterior motive, just that it is the practice we have followed if a Bill has been discussed as resolutions by way of Committee stage.

On motion Bill referred to a Committee of the Whole House.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, I believe it is the privilege of members when the motion is before the House to go into Committee on Supply to raise any particular grievance they may have.

Mr. Speaker, I wish to raise a grievance now in respect to the petition put in to the Government several weeks ago to which I got an acknowledgement and no further information except for a very unenlightening one that it may be considered within the next six months or the next twelve months.

Now I have received complaints as to what is going on at the Old Mill. I have been told that the place does not seem to be bound by any regulations. It is open from early Sunday morning to late Sunday night with crowds of trucks and cars around there before it is open and there very late. It is open week nights later hours as well. The people in there consider that it is a nuisance the way it is being operated now. There are six or seven hundred people of the neighbourhood of Mount Pearl and Kilbride who protested in the first place to the Board of Liquor Control. They then put in a petition to the Government asking that a plebiscite be held in the area. And it seems to me, Mr. Speaker, they are following the laws as laid down in the Alcoholic Liquors Act, which gives them that privilege, the privilege to petition the Lieutenant-Governor in Council for the holding of a plebiscite.

Now it is true the Old Mill, as it is called, is located in an area where there are not many houses in the immediate vicinity. But today with the traffic the way it is it can cause a considerable annoyance and does cause a considerable annoyance in the place, immediately surrounding this particular location.

In my opinion, Mr. Speaker, and I put it forward seriously, the Government is not carrying out the law or is not seeing that the law is properly carried out when it permits a commercial establishment such as this is, purely commercial establishment, that has no other purpose except the making of money, to be erected there under their auspices, with their full knowledge, and contrary to the wishes of the people who live around there.

Now I submit, Mr. Speaker, that the Government are not treating the public concerned fairly when they refuse to give consideration to their honest petition which has been put forward. I know that the great majority of the people there don't want this institution there, and they have protested on several other occasions against the establishment of it, and in that locality were previously successful but this time they have not been. They protested to the Board of Liquor Control before it was advertised that application was to be made for a license. The law, I say, is not being carried out in that respect. The club is not a club. It is just a joint for the sale of liquor to make money out of people who desire to get liquor, and the Government, Mr. Speaker, ought to take a decent step and give the people the privilege of voting on it by means of a plebiscite.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I here know for the first time that the place in question is not conducted in the most decent and orderly fashion, and hearing it I will certainly take steps before this day is over to check on the allegations to see whether in fact the honourable gentleman is right or correctly informed. If he is correctly informed and if the place in question is being conducted in a disorderly fashion, I will personally request my colleague, the Minister of Finance, under whom the Board of Liquor Control comes, to take immediate action to see that the law is carried out. If the place in question does not conduct itself in a perfectly decent and orderly fashion I will request my colleague to request the Board to close it down. I address myself only to the allegation that it is not being conducted in an orderly fashion.

Committee of the Whole on Bill "An Act For Granting to Her Majesty Certain Sums of Money for Defraying Certain Expenses of the Public Service for the Financial Year Ending the Thirty-first Day of March One Thousand Nine Hundred and Fifty-four and For Other Purposes Relating to the Public Service."

Mr. Courage, Chairman of Committees, in the Chair.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I think, Mr. Chairman, I must agree I have never seen this done before. When the resolutions have passed and a Bill is reported to give effect to them then I have seen it given, first, second and final reading but not put into Committee of the Whole ever. However—

MR. FOGWILL: Mr. Chairman, that is quite true—I have never seen it. But there are one or two points that remain to be cleared up in respect to the total. It seems to me this amount is not in addition to the estimated expenditure last year, it is only part of it.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The honourable gentleman is correct. This amount is included already in the total amount of expenditure for last year. This is the budget.

MR. FOGWILL: In the budget speech, yes. In one sense, Mr. Chairman, only part of this amount is really supplementary supply in addition to the estimated expenditure.

MR. SMALLWOOD: By far the greater portion though.

On motion the Committee rose and reported having passed the Bill without amendment.

Motion reported to Mr. Speaker. On motion Bill read a third time, ordered passed and title be as on the Order Paper.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I wish to suggest to the House—Wednesday is private members' day and the procedure, therefore, to see that we do meet tonight is a little different.

MR. SPEAKER: There is no private members' business on the Order Paper, therefore the rules apply as usually exist.
MR. SMALLWOOD: The same rules? The House can move tonight—I do move the House do not adjourn its sitting at 6:00 o'clock.

Motion carried.

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Speaker, I move the House into Committee of the Whole on items 7, 8, 9, 10, 13, 14, 17, 20, 21.

Motion carried.

Committee of the Whole on Sundry Bills:

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Chairman, might we start on Item 10?

Committee of the Whole on Bill "An Act to Amend the Crown Lands Act."

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, could the Minister tell us the extent of our Crown Lands at the present time, in miles or acres or what?

DR. ROWE: No, I could not off hand. It is a very considerable number of square miles. I could get the information for the House probably tomorrow. You must remember this point: People might have the rights of mineral exploration or timber rights, but that does not mean the land has been alienated.

MR. HOLLETT: What I mean is, to what extent do we have Crown Lands on which no leases have been granted?

DR. ROWE: I would have to have some time to answer that question.

Clause 1 carried.

Clause 2:

MR. BROWNE: Is that the only thing included in timber?

DR. ROWE: There is no definition of timber in the old Act. That same definition is in the Saw Mills Act.

Clause 2 carried.

Clause 3:

MR. BROWNE: What is the reason for that sub-section—Subject to the Approval of the Lieutenant-Governor in Council any license issued, etc.

DR. ROWE: There are certain conditions which may arise whereby through no fault of, or perhaps through Acts of God, geography and other things—I take it the honourable and learned member has read the full section in the parent Act?

MR. BROWNE: I have it here now.

Clause 3 carried. Clause 4 carried.

Clause 5:

DR. ROWE: The only thing in there is the words "and the Regulations."

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, could I ask the Minister to explain just the situation in regard to Crown Lands within the three mile area from the sea. You don't grant permits, I believe, to cut logs in that area except for domestic and fishing purposes. No other logs are permitted to be cut—Is that correct?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Not on Crown Lands, the three-mile-limit lands, not Crown Lands, Bowaters for instance and the A.N.D. Co and Bowaters in Bonavista Bay and Reids.

MR. BROWNE: To what extent has the three mile limit been taken—I only know one area, Baie Verte.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Baie Verte so much, all down White Bay, sections of my district, Gambo, Terra Nova, but that is not on the coast, it is inland, but around that Gambo section a lot of the three mile limit is gone.

MR. BROWNE: That has been gone a long time.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Reids had it then the AND or Bowaters.

DR. ROWE: The Transportation of Timber Bill coming in tomorrow has to do with the three mile limit.

MR. BROWNE: What, another Bill?

MR. SMALLWOOD: This is a hard-working Legislature, the hardest working in all Canada.

Clause 5 carried.

Clauses 6, 7 and 8 carried.

Clause 9:

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, that last section seems to involve something new. This is a case where on the three mile limit the Government are going to put up for tender the rights on Crown Lands and Section 9 says, no person shall cut or remove any trees except that he has obtained a permit from the Minister in accordance with this Act. So that the Minister can sell by auction or by tender the right to cut wood on the three mile limit as well as on any other Crown Land.

DR. ROWE: No. There is a clause before that, earlier in the Act, which prohibits giving a license—Section 59 of this Bill, which says: "Any such license may not be granted on land situated within three miles of tidewater.

MR. BROWNE: Then in Section 9 by giving the permit to cut trees, that is not a license, it is a permit to cut.

DR. ROWE: A commercial permit.

MR. BROWNE: A lease may not be granted on such lands but a permit to cut trees. It seems to me a different phraseology—Why not have the same phraseology used throughout the Act?

DR. ROWE: I may say there—This is not meant for general application but for special cases to get the department out of a difficulty, although not perhaps as crude as that—It is best illustrated by explaining what happened last year. The Government opened the Bond Estate. The Bond Estate had part of it over-matured with too much timber on it. We were advised by technical men it should be opened up and thinned out, and some areas should be well cut because a lot of the timber is being lost. We must keep in mind all the time that timber is a crop and has a life span of sixty-eight or a hundred years, and that there is a certain amount of damage by storms etc. Although trees are blown down they are still sound for a period of probably three years. While there is only a limited amount, as the Bond Property is not very big, but there must have been at least fifty mill owners, and other people who wanted to go in there and cut. Clearly we could not do that. There was only room there for five or six at the most to operate. What then could we do. How were we to select the five or six. In a case of that kind the thing could be handled economically by one operator, and it would have been a good thing if we were able to put it out on tender. We are getting less revenue from timber than any other province of Canada. There is a great contrast between what we are getting and what Quebec is getting. This would enable the Government in certain instances to ask for tenders. This has no relation, for example, to cutting firewood on the three mile limit or for fisheries, but in such special cases as the one just cited.

MR. BROWNE: Will the Minister tell us, Mr. Chairman, how many cut the timber on the Bond land? I am still concerned—Under that temporary arrangement are you going to use this principle or would it all be cut now?

DR. ROWE: What we did was to draw up a plan out there for the management of that area and then recommended what should be done, where the roads should be cut in which vicinity. We should divide it in five lots and the saw mill owners of Whitbourne were given contracts, small contracts.

MR. ROWE: Is the Government getting any return, and how much?

DR. ROWE: I have not the scale, but they obtain a license.

MR. BROWNE: So much per thousand feet?

DR. ROWE: Yes.

MR. BROWNE: Would that be logs—How do you estimate that?

DR. ROWE: I have not the scale, but possibly a small amount on which he saws.

MR. BROWNE: I notice that some birch has been taken there and brought to the Birch Plant. Has the Government been paid for that, do you know?

DR. ROWE: Whether we have been paid as yet or not I don't know.

MR. BROWNE: Is the Government supposed to be paid?

DR. ROWE: Oh yes for every commercial tree that comes off. We brought in a scale two years ago—Not by the Birch Plant but the cutter. We get paid for things like ties and wharf sticks, fencing material, any kind of a log cut out.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I wonder if the Minister could tell us how much stumpage or royalty is collected?

DR. ROWE: Not off-hand. Incidentally that material will be made available in the next few weeks.

MR. BROWNE: How do you assess it?

DR. ROWE: I don't recall off-hand—There are different ways. We have a scale for lumber so much a cord, on raw wood for example $2 a cord—I am not sure. I shall be very glad to bring the scale along to the House sometime this week.

Clause 9 carried.

Clause 10:

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the Minister how many of these areas are in existence at the present time?

DR. ROWE: Mr. Chairman, this is a new section. My honourable and learned friend will see that under the old Act we did have power to set aside a reservation but it was all very vague and confused and nothing ever came of it. But this, I may say, has been done in consultation with the Royal Commission on Forestry. We have had requests from certain areas in Newfoundland—I just recall we have had a request from the Southern Shore and other areas as well.
MR. BROWNE: What part of the Southern Shore?

MR. MURRAY: As the honourable member across knows, the timber lands on the Southern Shore have been burned for centuries. There is a report in Prowse's History where a chap who came out with Calvert reported a forest fire. If there were some sort of protection system set up the trees would reproduce, somewhat like a checker-board system, one protective block and one that could be used. I have had some technical advice on the matter and it is felt the forest would reproduce itself in a few years.

DR. ROWE: In certain areas in Newfoundland we have to prevent a repetition of what happened in history where whole areas were decimated. Like, for example, when I was at Wesleyville the people had to go fifteen miles in order to get firewood, over what once was forest land. Under this, that would be prevented, only the crop would be removed. That is something being done increasingly in British Columbia and Alberta and the Maritime Provinces as well—to set up a forest management.

MR. BROWNE: That is a ten mile area?

DR. ROWE: No, I believe it is three square miles. It could be applied to any area where there is a need at a local level. The people have a right to move in on the three mile limit and take firewood and wood for fishery purposes. But there is nothing to prevent a man going in a small area and cleaning it right off, which may be what did happen in our history. Now we intend to set up some forest management plan which will prevent that sort of thing.

MR. BROWNE: These are very strict rules. I suppose they will protect the Government. What is the purpose of (k)?

DR. ROWE: Well this spells out what we do. As far as (k) is concerned we have been doing that for years: For every person in Newfoundland who cuts, other than the man who cuts for local consumption and domestic needs, firewood, fishery purposes or fencing or anything of that kind, has to have a permit, and he has to make a report on it. We had the regulations but this defies them more clearly. I must say we have done it following a conference of all our field men. We brought them in here sometime last year. They told us some of their troubles and worries. Of course we discussed these matters with the Royal Commission on Forestry. We also had the benefit of our own foresters and a new man from Scandinavia, a highly skilled man. All put together, we have come up with this. Even this however—

MR. BROWNE: I wonder if I may interrupt to ask you a question now? Has the Committee consulted with this Commission as to whether there was any value here in Newfoundland in a process of reforestation?

DR. ROWE: I have asked the Chairman of the Commission to go into that. In fact that is in their terms of reference.

Clauses 10 through 12 carried.
Clause 13 read:

13. Section 117 of the said Act is amended by deleting the word "June" and substituting therefor the word "March".

MR. BROWNE: What does that mean?
DR. ROWE: We have tried to make it correspond to our financial year, that is all.

MR. HOLLETT: Usually the reports are tabled in the next session. Your amendment will mean once the end of March is passed the Minister is liable to produce it and we can ask—"When is the Minister going to bring down the report?" If it was made some other time, say, 31 December that would be reasonable because it would not be rushed. What time of the year are most of the licences and permits given out?

DR. ROWE: It is going on all the time, permits to cut and mineral licenses could be any time. Again it is not intended to be over a year. The Minister presents to the Legislature a report of what has happened up to the end of the preceding year, the preceding June. That is nine months before. That would mean June 1953 in this case.

MR. BROWNE: In other words the statement would be a year behind time.

Clause 13 and 14 carried.

Bill passed without amendment.

MR. CURTIS: I move the Committee now rise and report having passed these two Bills and ask leave to sit again on the others, Mr. Chairman.

MR. COURAGE: Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole have considered the matters to them referred, have made progress and ask leave to sit again.

Report received. Committee ordered to sit again at a later hour this day.

MR. SPEAKER: With the permission of the House it is now 6:00 of the clock. I shall now leave the Chair until 8:00 of the clock.

House recessed until 8:00 p.m.

WEDNESDAY, June 16, 1954.

NIGHT SESSION

The House resumed at 8:00 of the clock.

MR. SPEAKER: Leave was given for this Committee to sit again and I now leave the Chair.

Mr. Courage (Chairman of Committees) in the Chair.

MR. CHAIRMAN: A Bill "An Act to Amend the Social Security Assessment Act":

Clause 1 read and carried.

Clause 2 read:

2. Paragraph (k) of Section 2 of The Social Security Assessment Act, Chapter 41 of the Revised Statutes of Newfoundland, 1952, is repealed and the following substituted therefor:

"(k) "sale price" or "purchase price" means a price in money, the value of services rendered, the actual value of the thing exchanged and any other consideration accepted by seller or person from whom the property passes as the price or on account of the price of the thing covered by the contract, sale, or exchange, and includes

(i) the charges for municipal tax, for customs, for excise and Dominion Sales Tax and for transportation to the port of entry into Newfoundland; and

(ii) where the Minister so provides, the charges for installation or servicing of the thing sold."
MR. HOLLETT: On the definition of sales prices or purchase price. Does it mean the price in relation to the value of services rendered? Does that apply when you ask a man to put up a fence for you? Do you mean there is a sales tax on a service of that kind?

MR. CURTIS: No, that is a contract for services. I explained that very fully when I was introducing the Bill on the second reading. For instance the installation of a washing machine where the services rendered are included in this tax where and if they are added to the price, but if they are separate, so much for the machine and so much for installation, you don't pay for installation, but if the cost of installation is included in the price it is too difficult to break it up, you pay a tax on it.

MR. BROWNE: I would like to know the principle on which the Government charges sales tax on a charge for municipal tax. It is only payable where there are municipalities. A person outside St. John's gets oil delivered to him but he does not pay any municipal tax and he does not have to pay the three per cent tax on that. So the Government is discriminating between people who live inside and outside the city and only a short distance between. One on either side of the boundary and the person in the city pays three per cent on Municipal Tax which is one cent on oil and that one cent is put on by the Municipal Council. And they pay the coal tax which the city formerly got. It does not seem to be fair for the Government to put three per cent on that.

MR. CURTIS: Let us take it out.

MR. BROWNE: I move that the words "Municipal tax" be deleted.

Carried.

MR. HOLLETT: "For transportation to the Port of Entry into Newfoundland." Does that refer to the Excise and Dominion sales tax of imports from separate ports of sending and for transportation to the port of entry into Newfoundland? Sometimes goods are landed into one port which is not always the port of entry. Does it mean we have to pay the tax between the two ports? One is the port of entry and one is not. If so, you are discriminating. Is that not putting a burden on the person who had to purchase such goods. I just ask for an explanation on it.

MR. CURTIS: There is no tax after it gets to the port of entry. A purchase is made in St. John's which is to be delivered to Harbour Grace where there is no tax on freight here to Harbour Grace. It is a St. John's tax. If Harbour Grace resells the tax is on it then.

MR. BROWNE: Suppose the merchant in Harbour Grace imports goods as they come to St. John's, and that is the port of entry?

MR. CURTIS: There is a sales tax up to that.

MR. BROWNE: And suppose it has to be delivered in Bay Roberts. He does not have to pay a tax from St. John's to Bay Roberts?

MR. CURTIS: No.

MR. BROWNE: Is there not going to be difficulty in estimating the tax there? Where there is a through shipment from St. John's to Montreal, won't there be some difficulty there?

MR. CHALKER: If you purchase goods from the Dominion of Canada your price is laid down, St. John's Corner Brook, Grand Falls.
MR. BROWNE: Port-aux-Basques and St. John's.

MR. CHALKER: The price is still laid down C.I.F. St. John's. The goods delivered to St. John's at say three cents a pound, to Port-aux-Basques would be two and a half cents. That would not interfere with merchants in St. John's. He would have to pay on cost delivered to his port of delivery. Anywhere on the Avalon Peninsula you can bring the goods in for the same price from Montreal. East of Bishop's Falls the price is the same, west of Bishop's Falls the price is almost the same.

MR. BROWNE: There are two methods by which small parcels are sent. Express and parcel post. Parcel post from Montreal is only liable to three per cent at port of entry which would be Port-aux-Basques. If it came by air, where is the port of entry? It might go to Stephenville. That transportation would be difficult.

MR. CURTIS: That would apply to goods shipped direct from Eatons to the customer. The majority of stuff would be valued at sales price as sold in St. John's. It is the sales price in St. John's. If you bought an item from Eatons you only pay three per cent on the price you pay for goods plus the freight on the first port it reaches in Newfoundland.

MR. BROWNE: Why put in the freight?

MR. CURTIS: I doubt if they did. I think that is put in probably to cover cases where there are resales by the firms. For instance, included in their costs.

MR. HOLLETT: Supposing somebody brings a load of coal to St. Anthony, LaScie or some place further north from Sydney. Is that three per cent levied on the freight of that load of coal?

MR. CURTIS: Not unless it is resold at St. Anthony.

MR. HOLLETT: If we do that we do something to make it heavy on the people who live further north. You charge them three per cent on transportation.

MR. CHALKER: That is the way it is now.

MR. HOLLETT: I do not care what it is now, but is it right? The freight rates to St. Anthony or further north—there is quite a difference on the freight. The man down there has to pay three per cent over and above what the man here has to pay. I don't think it is fair.

MR. HOFFERTON: I do not think that can be changed at all. If a person in Bay Roberts brings in a cargo of coal say $18.00, the retail price is based on not only cost of the coal but freight and overhead and the rest of it and three per cent is on that. A merchant in St. Anthony finds his price is $20.00 and he has to charge three per cent on that. That is going on all the time.

MR. HOLLETT: Why make it harder on these people down there?

MR. CHALKER: It is just as much a hardship on people in St. John's when things are brought in to Corner Brook and have to come to St. John's.

DR. ROWE: Take a vessel taking freight from St. John's say, to Nain, the freight rates would vary, so much for Seldom and LaScie and Cartwright. I think it would be confusing to make allowances in getting the articles to the merchants.

MR. HOLLETT: Why have 3 per cent on the freight? You have it on the cost of goods?

MR. CHALKER: It would be an awful job to take it off.

MR. SMALLWOOD: This discussion illustrates the point made here some days ago. This is a tax on consumption. It is the worst kind of tax there can be. The more expensive the article of consumption the more tax you pay on it. The higher prices go the higher taxes you pay. It is the very opposite of a tax on income. The higher prices go the less taxes you pay. It is the least desirable kind of a tax, a tax on consumption because the difference between a man with an income of $20,000.00 a year and a man with an income of $10,000.00 is the difference between a man who spends all his income on consumer goods and therefore pays his tax on all his living and the man with $20,000.00 who spends $10,000.00 and pays three per cent on half his income and none on the rest. It is not an ideal tax, it is anything but. I know of no other tax you can adopt in substitution for it that will bring in half or quarter of its revenue. If anyone can tell the Government of another kind of tax that will bring in the same amount of money and will be more easy on the people of Newfoundland I will be most happy. I have racked my brain and can't think of anything but others may. It is the kind of tax that bears most unfairly than other taxes except customs duties which go up when values go up and again bears unfairly on the toiling masses whose income and outgo nearly always meet. They are lucky if their income meets their outgo. We might as well face it. It is not a good tax. It is the best we can find and we are hoping for suggestions to find another one that will give us five or six or seven million dollars a year. We have to carry it out until we get a better one.

MR. HOLLETT: The Premier kind of insinuates we don't pay customs duties in this country. We pay them indirectly. To say we don't pay customs duties is kind of ridiculous. The goods in Newfoundland today are the same kind of article imported into Canada. If we imported goods from U.S.A. and pay some of the duties the price would not be any higher than they pay in Canada.

What I am pointing out is the difference in charges to the man, and I am thinking especially of coal—a man has to pay three per cent tax on the freight and that freight would be much lower than the freight on similar cargoes of coal to a place like St. Anthony or Labrador. That is a discriminatory tax against the man who lives far away from the source of supply. Being a far eastern province of Canada we are many miles from the scene of things and it costs us more to live. By the imposition of this tax you make it more difficult for people in this province to live and that is what I want to point out.

MR. BROWNE: I would like to ask the Minister in charge of the Bill what is the meaning of that clause, "Where the Minister so decides, etc." Is it not dangerous to leave things to the Minister to decide? He can decide one way in one case and another way in another case. What he decided today he can alter tomorrow. Is not this a new principle being introduced to give the Minister the power to decide when the charge should be made?

MR. CURTIS: I take it those are rules made by the Minister which will be of general application once they are made.

MR. BROWNE: It does not say that.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The Minister does not personally intervene in these matters. The Minister of Finance would probably know least of all about these matters and in matters of taxation the Ministers interfere least of all. Ministers of the Crown probably know least about the dealings or collection of taxes. I was Minister of Finance for one year or a year and a half and I went to my office there quite frequently and I know that what I am saying of myself is true of every Minister of Finance we have had, Mr. Quinton and the present Minister. It is true of them as it is of me. Take income tax. All the records of the income tax are there in the department. I refused to look at them, did not want to see any details, did not want to know and refused to know who owed what and why. I said that these are matters for permanent officials who will be here after we are gone and who were here before we came. A politician ought not to have that kind of knowledge of the personal intimate business affairs of such firms in Newfoundland, so I realistically declined and the Minister of Finance did likewise. These matters are sometimes referred to Cabinet by the Deputy Minister for final decision, not in any detail, not with any of the confidential detailed information in these cases. We have taken that stand from the beginning. It is the only honourable and honest stand for a government to take.

MR. BROWNE: That does not relieve the Deputy Minister of his difficulty because the obligation is put on him to decide—Where the Minister so decides—can be read into it, whether it is an agent or the Deputy Minister or Assistant Deputy Minister.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is true of all assistants of the department, virtually always vested in the Minister, I say, in most departments, the Minister just does not do it, does not even see it, merely ratifies what is officially recommended to him.

MR. BROWNE: With all due deference to the opinion given by the Honourable the Premier—On the next page it speaks of the Deputy Minister.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The carrying out of this Act is put into the hands of the Deputy Minister.

MR. BROWNE: I don't think it is right. I don't think it is a good idea to leave it like it is now. I can understand the regulations, but the regulations would have to be published and would be the same for everyone. But as it reads now it gives the Minister latitude I feel he should not have. A friend of his, I won't say contestant but a supporter comes along and says: "Look here, I am getting a refrigerator installed or an electric washing machine and want to get some wire. Don't charge me for installation or for service." He is told, "No, that is all right, I will fix that up." Then somebody else comes along and he does not like the look of him—I am not saying he would do that—

MR. SMALLWOOD: In the subtitle it is the Deputy Minister, but even they would not do it. There is a division and it is the division that actually does it. The authority is nominally in the Minister, nominally in the Government in the beginning, but it comes all the way down to the heads of the division.

MR. BROWNE: Is there a kind of board there, a group of people, is there anything like that?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No.

MR. BROWNE: Who would take these cases and make a general rule?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No.

MR. BROWNE: It seems to me there should be. This is a most important source of revenue for the Government now, and it seems to me they would be justified in having some group of officials constituting a board to deliberate different points likely to arise from time to time and give a decision.

MR. SMALLWOOD: There is a division—Mr. Frank Hue is the head of the division. As a matter of fact the Committee is aware of the fact that, as in the debate on the estimates it was pointed out, a new post was created and provided for in the estimates that we have passed, that of a person immediately under the Deputy Minister of Finance. The duties of that post are to carry out the collection of revenues. Under him will come the collection of arrears in income tax, under him will come the collection of the SSA, but that in turn will in fact be done by the SSA Division, under Mr. Hue. But this chief revenue clerk will be responsible for the collection of this and all other revenues, and he in turn will be answerable to the Deputy Minister. So this sets up the administrative machinery. The Minister knows that there are such persons, but a Minister is primarily a member of the Cabinet, primarily he is a member of the Council. He sits in council with the other Ministers. He does not interest himself in the ordinary business administration of the department because permanent officials who are there and have grown up with it and who will be there after the Minister is gone are obviously the ones to carry it out. So I suggest it is in all well-organized departments. There is no need for ministerial intervention in details of administration in that way, most particularly you don’t with matters of the collection of revenue, that is left strictly to the permanent officials of the department.

MR. HOLLETT: May I ask the Minister what he had in mind when putting in the words “Where the Minister so decides”? He must have had something in mind when he added “Where the Minister so decides.”

MR. SMALLWOOD: This Act was drafted by the SSA Division plus the Controller of the Treasury, the Minister of Finance and Deputy Minister of Finance, went to the legislation department and then came to Cabinet. Not even the Cabinet decided these words were to go there. That was decided by the administrative machinery of the department.

MR. HOLLETT: I am asking the question—Why are the words there?

MR. CURTIS: Somebody must decide in case of doubt.

MR. HOLLETT: The tax has to be paid anyway. Why leave it open that some Minister may decide that John Jones may not pay the 3%. I wonder what effect it will have.

MR. CURTIS: Well—“Where the regulations so provide.”

MR. BROWNE: That would be satisfactory.
MR. CURTIS: I mean to substitute the words "Where the regulations so provide."

MR. HOLLETT: That will satisfy everybody.

Carried.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, may I ask—Why 1950?

MR. CURTIS: That is the drafting of the Act.

MR. HOLLETT: In other words, are you going to collect all the arrears under that particular section?

MR. CURTIS: No, that is the procedure being followed.

MR. HOLLETT: I see.

Carried.

Clause 4 read:

4. Section 5 of the said Act is repealed and the following substituted therefor:

"5. A person purchasing stock through a sale in bulk from a vendor is liable for payment of any assessment collected or due and payable but not remitted to the Deputy Minister by the vendor, unless the person obtains from the vendor a copy of a certificate issued by the Deputy Minister to the vendor to the effect that all assessments collected or owed by the vendor have been received by the Deputy Minister."

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I don't understand why this clause (h) is put in, because the practice here has been to exempt purchases less than 17c.

MR. CURTIS: 15c. it is now.

MR. BROWNE: I asked a shop-keeper tonight just after I left here at 6:00 o'clock and he said he charged the tax on 17c. When I saw 15c. here I was surprised. I went out and asked what he was charging a tax on and he said 17c. I know that from other shops also. I don't know how the impression got about, but I think everyone understands that.

Clause carried.

Clauses 5, 6, 7, 8 carried.

Clause 9 read:

9. Section 26 of the said Act is repealed and the following substituted therefor:

"26. Any person appointed by the Deputy Minister may enter upon the business premises of a vendor or any other person during ordinary hours of business or at any other reasonable time in order to inspect or examine the books of account, records or documents of the vendor or other person, or for the purpose of ascertaining the quantities of tangible personal property on hand or sold or consumed or used by the vendor or other person and that the assessments collected or payable by the vendor or other person have been remitted or paid to the Deputy Minister, and the vendor or other person shall answer all questions pertaining to these matters and shall produce for inspection such books of account, records or documents as the person appointed may request."

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I wonder if the Attorney General could explain what is meant by "every other person." This Act applies only to sales and therefore applies only to vendors.

MR. CURTIS: I was just looking it up to see what the interpretation was. The vendor means any person who in the ordinary course of business in Newfoundland—There might be a vendor who sells not in the ordinary course of business and it must be to cover a vendor not normally a vendor. It might even apply to a private person who sells furniture and stuff privately at a sale or over the radio or something like that.

MR. MURRAY: Or a man who sells his own car.

MR. SMALLWOOD: He is not a vendor as defined in the Act.

MR. HOLLETT: Could the Minister tell us what, if any, action has been taken relative to the collection of overdue assessments? Or could the Minister inform us as to what steps have been taken as outlined here where the Deputy Minister may enter upon any premises—Just what has been done—I remember a statement being made some time back about millions and millions not being paid. I believe the Premier made that statement. Would the Minister make a statement on that?

MR. CURTIS: The Department employs inspectors, Mr. Chairman, who go around from place to place. Time after time we have taken action, but we have really been waiting for these amendments.

MR. MURRAY: As Solicitor General I went to Corner Brook, Grand Falls and Bell Island and took whatever actions were passed along to me by the Department: issued summonses and took them before the magistrates in these towns. I think there were over sixty in Corner Brook and thirty in Grand Falls and about twenty on Bell Island.

MR. HOLLETT: Could the Minister give us any idea as to the amount collected by that particular process?

MR. MURRAY: Well, the thing was fairly badly in default. I think it was principally a propaganda campaign. Afterwards the amounts in default or arrears started to stop. I think it went in one month from three hundred thousand dollars to four hundred thousand.

Carried.

MR. BROWNE: No, I am not satisfied with that explanation. It does not seem to be logical. It is only a vendor who sells. Now the Solicitor General cites the case of a person selling his own car, but I don't think the section applies there. "Any person appointed by the Deputy Minister may enter upon the business premises of a vendor or any other person during the ordinary hours of business or within a reasonable time." I think it reads "the business premises of a vendor" and "The business premises of any other person." But the section assumes the man has a place of business. Now what kind of business is there except a vendor where you would be concerned about his having paid the tax. For instance there would be a movie theatre, or a printer's shop or a shoemaker's shop. But there would be no vending done in those places.

MR. CURTIS: There might be.

MR. BROWNE: Could you think of anything they might be vending, if they were?

MR. MURRAY: If we go back to Clause 4 there might be a possible explanation. That would mean an ordinary person who does not ordinarily do that sort of thing, a person other than a vendor, and surely it would be right for an inspector to enter upon his premises.

MR. BROWNE: I can understand the explanation given now, seeing that section. It means that if a person sells out his business the purchaser must see to it that the person selling out his business has paid his social security assessment, or he goes to the Deputy Minister and gets it in writing to go ahead and buy.

MR. MURRAY: When we get to Clause 9—a vendor or any other person—would he be such a person?

MR. BROWNE: I don't think so.

MR. CURTIS: Would that be a auctioneer. He is "such other person." He only sells for somebody as his agent.

MR. BROWNE: I think an auctioneer may sell articles that are new apart from things they pick up second hand, job-lot. Some of them sell job-lots.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Not all, one or two of them—Mr. Fitzgibbon does not, and he is an auctioneer or he was.

MR. BROWNE: And still is.

MR. SMALLWOOD: But he does not sell new stuff and does not hold stuff for sale. He goes in and conducts an auction.

MR. HOLLETT: Would the Minister tell us how many inspectors are employed by the Department in the enforcement of this Act? While he is doing it could he tell us if they discovered many cases where proper books were not being kept? I don't want any names, of course.

MR. MURRAY: I would like to make it clear that I am not the Minister who administers this Act. I was merely acting as Solicitor General. I cannot tell you how many inspectors there are. It is not my Department. I know there were a lot of people in the beginning who did not make returns. But I think the thing is pretty well under control now.

MR. CURTIS: My honourable friend is referring back to a section which has already been passed, section 6. We were stymied on that because the word "and" was there. In other words it was not an offence not to keep records. It was not an offence to fail to make returns. The offence was to fail in both. That is the reason we could not prosecute under that section, but from now on we may.

MR. HOLLETT: Could anybody tell me how many inspectors there are?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Twenty dozen and sixteen.

MR. BROWNE: We were told there were six the other day.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It depends on what is meant. There are three classifications. One is a chartered or certified accountant, a man with a pretty high classification in accountancy. Then secondly men with qualifications in accountancy but not nearly so high and finally there are people who have been taken on but not as established civil servants, but have been taken on for a relatively short time. Some of these are ex-policemen and some of them are men who have good common-sense, practical men with enough experience and intelligence and background to be able to go into a shop and ask to see the entries, the system of recording their collections and their sales. Now all these number, I believe, sixteen for the whole province. Between twelve or fourteen or sixteen.

MR. MURRAY: Six officers Grade VI, six officers Grade V and one Grade VII.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I was not far out.

MR. BROWNE: That makes it thirteen.

MR. HOLLETT: I meant, Mr. Chairman, the people who represent the Department in the section.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Now the honourable gentleman knows.

Clause 9 and 10 carried.

Clause 11 read:

11. Section 30 of the said Act is repealed and the following substituted therefor:

"30. Every person who makes a false statement in any form or return under this Act or the regulations is guilty of an offence."

MR. BROWNE: I wonder what that means there "Every person who makes a false statement is guilty of an offence." He is guilty already. He has not been tried nor given any hearing. He is stated to be guilty in the Act. This court which is above all courts decides he is guilty. It should be "is liable to prosecution for the offence", or something like that. But to state he is guilty. There may be some explanation. It is not always the individual owner of a shop who makes out the returns. It may be that a clerk could make a mistake, or it may be a typographical error. It is here laid down that every person who makes a false statement—

MR. HOLLETT: Why not say every person proven.

MR. SMALLWOOD: You don't have to say every person who is proven guilty of murder shall be hanged, but everyone guilty of murder shall be hanged.

MR. BROWNE: But "everyone who makes a false statement."

MR. SMALLWOOD: Everyone who kills a person under certain circumstances is guilty of murder—that is what it says.

MR. BROWNE: It says "Anyone who makes a false statement in any returns is guilty."

MR. SMALLWOOD: Is he not?

MR. BROWNE: He has to be proven so. But this says "guilty".

MR. SMALLWOOD: This creates the assumption. Carried.

MR. BROWNE: No.

MR. CHAIRMAN: I was about to ask for more order in Committee. I was about to ask that parliamentary rules be adhered to.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I submit a statement like that, without any recourse at all, a man is guilty before he goes to court—I don't know what you can charge him with, but he is certainly stated here to be guilty because he has made a false statement. Now he may have a very valid explanation. We cannot at this moment dispose of all conditions and circumstances likely to arise. But after the thing happens then get an explanation from the man. But here it states—"He is guilty".

MR. CURTIS: Carried.

MR. BROWNE: Is there any answer?

MR. CURTIS: No, a matter of opinion.
Carried.

Clause 12 read:

12. Section 31 of the said Act is repealed and the following substituted therefor:

"31. The Deputy Minister may, in addition to any other penalty imposed by this Act, impose a penalty of not less than ten dollars nor more than one hundred dollars upon every person who fails to make any return required by this Act or the regulations in the manner and within the time prescribed therefor."

MR. BROWNE: Here is the trial. We had the trial and now we have the judge. I object to the Deputy Minister being given power to put penalties on people. I consider that is very bad law. If a man is to be tried and found guilty and punished it should be done in open court. A man can go in to the Deputy Minister's office who will say to him, "You are guilty of an offence and fined one hundred dollars." That has happened. A man came to me to defend him. He was caught smuggling liquor. He was working in the United States and came here as a tourist and he brought a bottle of gin in his pocket and as he was going ashore, the customs officer stopped him and he said to me, "My father is a very prominent citizen. I would not like to go before court. The law permits me to go before the Finance Minister. Will you see that I do?" I went to the Minister of Finance and Customs and he said, "He is fined one hundred dollars." If he had gone before a magistrate he would have been fined much lower, if anything. A judge is supposed to be fair and hear the evidence and say "Now my fellow what would you like to say, have you got any witnesses, is there any explanation for your conduct?" The Deputy Minister is not going to all that trouble, he is interested only in building up the revenue. I draw to the attention of the Attorney General and I feel sure that he and the Solicitor General knows it is true what I say, that a man is entitled to a fair trial and where he goes before the Deputy Minister how can he be given a fair trial? I suggest that provision be stricken out.

MR. MURRAY: How can my learned friend explain the situation obtaining in Finance, when he collects our own income tax? Does he not have the same power, the Minister of Finance?

MR. BROWNE: I do not know, but people have been brought before the courts. A person who fails to make his return is liable. I remember now and if my honourable friend, the member for St. John's East, was here he would tell you that he and I have defended people who have been brought before the court who have failed to bring in their income tax.

MR. CURTIS: But hundreds and hundreds and hundreds of people were dealt with by the Assessor and we are still collecting from them. The case never goes to court.

MR. BROWNE: Is not my honourable friend referring to pre-Confederation debts?

MR. CURTIS: Yes. The Federal Government also today has power and imposes fines without taking people to court.

MR. MURRAY: The income tax is a man's own money and if he can get away with it, God bless him, but this is the Government's money which he holds in trust and he tries to conceal it. He should not be entitled to much consideration.

MR. BROWNE: That attitude has come to mean that people who are likely to be charged with offences do not deserve much consideration. Is not every man innocent until proven guilty? What are the courts for, the Attorney General here? Are not the courts here to try cases?

MR. CURTIS: Not in this type of case. The courts have as many different types of sentences as there are judges. I have seen judges release people who should have gone to goal and other judges for the same offence fined three times as much. I know fellows who say, "I was fined ten dollars in Harbour Main but in St. John's I might have been fined ten times as much."

MR. BROWNE: I am surprised to hear the Attorney General make remarks like that on magistrates in this country. Justice should be tempered with mercy and sometimes it is more beneficial to fine a man ten dollars and five dollars and in some cases no fine at all. British justice has always been administered like that. If you have one hundred dollars for everyone, rich or poor, you get grave injustices. The Deputy Minister is prejudiced against a person appearing before him and anyone who appears before him charged with this Act will not get the justice he deserves as if he goes before a magistrate.

MR. HOLLETT: In making laws I think, I am only in civilian life but I was a magistrate for twenty-five years and I had all sorts of people before me, men who were convicted and merchants who knew little about bookkeeping. I do remember there are still a lot of men in this country carrying on businesses and keeping books who have not had sufficient training in this respect. They are liable to make false returns. They do not mean to make false returns. They make a mistake and it is called false returns here. The Deputy Minister is not going to haul over these files. He could delegate his auditors and they go into a store and discover something wrong, the man has not made a correct return, a false return and he says, "You are guilty, I fine you $10.00" and so on. He fines him right there and then.

MR. CURTIS: Is that not better than dragging him before a judge and having the publicity?

MR. HOLLETT: No, certainly not. Not in the interest of justice. If you have the Deputy Minister or somebody on his behalf go into a store and fine a man $10.00 and put it in his pocket and turn it in or forget to turn it in, you open the road to graft and corruption and lots of people would only be too glad to turn over $50.00 to keep the thing quiet. I think the man should go before a magistrate or a judge. If you delegate all such things as that to the Deputy Minister or the Minister you can do without the courts eventually. My learned friend has made a good point and I think the Government should give it some consideration and make some amendments which would make it a little more like civilized law. I would ask the Minister to allow it to stand over until given more thought.

MR. MURRAY: I do not think you have read the section. A person who has to make a return is an agent. He gets a vendor's license and becomes the agent of the Deputy Minister. It is not to be an obligation to impose on anybody. If he does not make his return the Deputy Minister may put a penalty on him. There is no question of lack of justice. The penalty a Minister may impose is for not carrying out the section, not for making a false return.

MR. BROWNE: Here is what that section repeals, "Every person who fails to make any return required by this Act or the regulations in the manner and within the time prescribed therefor is, in addition to any other penalty imposed by this Act, liable to a penalty of one hundred dollars." He is liable to a penalty of one hundred dollars. It can be seen that in addition to the punishment before the Magistrate he is also liable to punishment before the Deputy Minister and unless there is good reason given for it and I do not know of any, I know it was the practice for the officer to impose penalties, it was the practice here for the Minister of Finance to do it, but I think it is a practice that should be discontinued if it exists now. I do not think it is a good practice. A man should be considered innocent until he is proven guilty. I would like to see the Attorney General who is responsible for carrying out this—

MR. JANES: The honourable gentleman for St. John's West should also add that it is the practice of the Assessor of Taxes here now, I mean income tax—Most of the vendors who are making this return to the Government, for Social Security Assessment, are also liable to fines of five dollars or ten dollars by the Assessor himself. They are also subject to penalties if they do not file by the end of the year. There is nothing strange about this.

MR. BROWNE: You will find the law says that any person who fails to make a return of income tax shall be liable to a penalty of such and such but I do know there were several prosecutions in the Magistrate's Court last year for people who failed. I defended some of them. I know they were brought up and liable to twenty-five dollars a day penalty. They were brought up by the R.C.M.P. before the magistrate. They were not fined by the Assessor.

MR. SMALLWOOD: There were many who were.

MR. BROWNE: These were not. Why was there a difference made? I know they were brought up before the magistrate. I do not know if any were fined by the Assessor.

MR. JANES: I know people who were fined by the Assessor for failure to file employment assessments if they were not submitted by the 15th of the month. They are fined just by the Assessor.

MR. CURTIS: Is it not silly to bring a case like that before court when a man is a day late?

MR. HOLLETT: Two wrongs do not make a right. It is wrong anyway for any person on behalf of the Deputy Minister to fine for making what they call—or neglected to make a return? You will notice by the next clause, "Every person who feels aggrieved by any penalty or interest imposed under Section 29 or Section 31 may appeal to the Minister . . ." First he must appeal to the Minister. The Minister can say, "You are right and you do not have to pay it." If he is dissatisfied with the decision of the Minister he may appeal to a judge or to a District Court. I point out to you that that is all very well in the city where we have judges galore. If I am a shopkeeper and am fined by the Deputy Minister or one of his deputies I can go to the Magistrate, or to the Minister first and then to the Magistrate. There are places along our coastline where you would not see a magistrate for six months and even he is not allowed to hear the case. How is he going to get justice? They have to write to the Minister first and ask what he thinks about it, and how does he know about the circumstances? He can only write back to the man and tell him he is sorry but he can’t do anything for him. He can then appeal to the Supreme Court. He has to come in here and hire a lawyer, like my learned friend or any lawyers on the other side and get them to bring the matter before the Supreme Court.

MR. SMALLWOOD: He has to do that. The case begins in the first instance in court.

MR. HOLLETT: I maintain it should be heard before a magistrate or two J. P.’s. Legislation of this sort ought to be so framed as to not appear dictatorial on the part of any government or any body.

MR. CURTIS: The fact acknowledged by my honourable friend prevents it being heard immediately before a magistrate. He admits there are shopkeepers here, three or four miles from a magistrate, and instead of having a Deputy Minister assess him ten dollars he would have him go before a court or the court in St. John’s.

MR. HOLLETT: The magistrates in this country travel around the coast.

MR. CURTIS: You said he goes every six months.

MR. HOLLETT: When he is required he goes. If a case arises then off he goes.

Clause carried.

Clause 13 read:

13. The said Act is further amended by inserting therein immediately after Section 31 as Section 31A the following:

31A.—(1) Every person who feels aggrieved by any penalty or interest imposed under Section 29 or Section 31 may appeal to the Minister, and if he is dissatisfied with the decision of the Minister he may appeal therefrom to a Judge of the Supreme Court or to a Judge or a District Court within the territorial limits of which the appellant resides or carries on business.

(2) Section 14 and 15 apply mutatis mutandis to appeals under this section.

MR. BROWNE: I would like to ask a question here. This is a new procedure and there is no time set out. A man is fined by the Deputy Minister and he appeals to the Minister. How is he going to get a decision from the Minister? There is no time limit. There is no way to force a Minister to give a decision. He must be dissatisfied with the decision of the Minister before he can appeal to the court. Is there no answer from the Attorney General. He thinks this is good. I am not so satisfied. Then again the Minister is not here. He is not going to take much interest in appeals.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The Minister is in Clarenville attending the launching of a new ferry. He thought it more important to do that than being here attending the passing of this Bill. He knew he had intelligent colleagues on this side of the House. He felt it was safe, that he might take the afternoon off and go and attend the launching of a boat in which he has been tremendously interested. He asked me to apologise for his absence from the House on his inability to be present on this notable occasion of passing this Bill through the House.

MR. BROWNE: I am glad he is presiding over the launching of a boat when the people of Placentia expect a bridge over the gut.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The votes as cast in Placentia show how the people of Placentia feel and how they are likely to continue voting. My honourable friend opposite has good reason to know how the people feel.

MR. BROWNE: The people of Placentia have changed and will continue to change.

Clause carried.

Clause 14 read:

14. The said Act is further amended by inserting therein immediately after Section 33 as Section 33A the following:

"33A. A complaint may be laid and all proceedings may be taken thereon in respect of any breach of this Act or the regulations without limitation of time."

MR. BROWNE: "Without limitation of time." Is there any provision of this kind in the previous Act? I do not think there is. This seems to be a new thing. There used to be a provision in some of the Acts that prosecution had to take place within six months under the Summary Jurisdiction Act, depending on the offence. Within six months. Here there is no time limits in proceedings, either civil or criminal. In regard to civil proceedings it is not so important there is no time limit, but in criminal proceedings there should be some time limit.

MR. HOLLETT: I would like to say that perhaps it would react very well when the time comes, sometime in the future. There are some of you who may have the pleasure of appearing before the courts for breaches of this Act. I think we can get along with that one year from now or five years or ten years.

Clause carried.

A Bill "An Act to Amend the Accident Insurance Companies Act."

Clause 1 read and carried.

Clause 2 read:

2. Section 2 of the Accident Insurance Companies (Licensing) Act, chapter 236 of The Revised Statutes of Newfoundland, 1952, is amended by adding thereto immediately after subsection (2) the following as subsection (3):

"(3) The Minister of Finance shall not issue a licence under this Act to an insurer, other than an insurer incorporated under the laws of Newfoundland, unless that first mentioned insurer is registered and holds a certificate of registry under the Canadian and British Insurance Companies Act (Canada) or the Foreign Insurance Companies Act (Canada), as the case may be, or is an underwriter or syndicate of underwriters which is a member of the society known as Lloyd’s, incorporated by Imperial Statute, Lloyd’s Act, 1871."

MR. BROWNE: Does the Attorney General know if that will include any company doing business in New foundland?

MR. CURTIS: I think not.

Clause carried.

Clause 3:

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, the sub-clause there to which I would ask the Attorney General to give some attention is No. 5. "Notwithstanding anything in this Act, the Minister of Finance may refuse to issue a licence to an insurer or to renew a licence without stating or assigning any reasons for his refusal." I wonder if the Minister would explain the reason why that is put in there?

MR. CURTIS: This clause is the result of experience with companies which tried to get registered here. There is reason to suspect, or there are obvious reasons why they should not be given a licence but it would be better not to explain because it might mean an action for libel or something like that. This Act is an Act to protect the public. Sometimes reasons cannot be given for a refusal particularly if these reasons are such that it might be slanderous to repeat them, and the Minister might get secret information sometimes which it would not pay him to divulge.

MR. BROWNE: That does not apply to renewal of licences does it?

MR. CURTIS: Yes, if something has happened during the previous year. I am sure, Mr. Chairman, my honourable friend knows it is not the intention of the Minister to unfairly discriminate against any company, but sometimes information comes to him in his official capacity as a Minister which he just cannot disclose. Therefore the safest thing to do is to enable him to be able to refuse to give a licence, without assigning any reason.

MR. BROWNE: A man is doing an insurance business and is told—We are very sorry but we can't renew your licence. There is no appeal to anybody at all. It seems to me a very high-handed provision, and I am sorry to see it appearing so often.

MR. CURTIS: It is requested by the companies.

MR. BROWNE: By the companies themselves?

MR. CURTIS: They have asked for it.

Clauses 3 and 4 carried.

Clause 5:

5. Section 4 of the said Act is amended

(a) by renumbering that section as subsection (1) and by striking out therefrom the words "The fee for the said licence shall be fifty dollars, to be paid before the issue of the same"; and

(b) by adding thereto as subsection (2) the following:

"(2) The Lieutenant Governor in Council may by order fix the fee payable for a licence or a renewal of a licence and the fee shall be paid before the licence or the renewal is issued."

MR. BROWNE: How long has that $50 licence been in there? I can see a purpose in this section being changed. A licence is going to be more than fifty dollars in the future.

MR. CURTIS: I will have to look it up and see what it was.

MR. BROWNE: "The Lieutenant-Governor in Council may by order fix the scale of fee payable for a licence or a renewal of a licence and the fee shall be paid before the licence or the renewal is issued." Now that seems to imply that the licence is not the same for everybody. It seems to vary.

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Chairman, we could let that one stand.

Clause 5 stand.

Clause 6:

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, is there a supervisor of insurance in this province?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, Mr. Marshall, Deputy Minister of Finance.

Clause 6 carried.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Section 5 was allowed to stand.

MR. CURTIS: I think, Mr. Chairman, perhaps if we skip into another Bill; and query the point raised by my honourable and learned friend that the Lieutenant-Governor in Council should fix a scale of fees—I move the Committee report progress and ask leave to sit again.

Motion carried.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I think the honourable and learned member should be docked by the House for losing his Bills, costing the Province of Newfoundland a lot of money. He has to get a new copy of every Bill. They must be sent out to his constituents or something.

MR. BROWNE: I don't know where they go. I don't suppose there is any Legislature in Canada that has so many Bills.

MR. SMALLWOOD: We are a hard-working Government.

Committee of the Whole on Bill "An Act Further to Amend the Local Authority Guarantee Act, 1952":

Clause 1 carried.

Clause 2:

MR. BROWNE: To a point of order, Mr. Chairman: What Act are we amending? I can't find it. We must know what we are amending. It is not in the revised statutes under that number.

MR. CURTIS: I don't know why this Act did not get into the Consolidated Statutes unless it is one of the Acts not brought into it. I see it is a money Bill, which I think the Consolidating Committee left out because they presumed it was a Bill which would expire. I think there is a section in the Consolidated or Revised Statutes where it lists Acts which are not repealed but are just not printed. I think that is Volume 4.

MR. BROWNE: It says here "The Minister of Public Works."

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Chairman, I move that the words "Minister of Public Works" be stricken out and the words "Minister of Finance" be written in.

MR. BROWNE: If the Attorney General will bear with me; Section 3 of the Local Authority Guarantee Act speaks of the Minister of Municipal Affairs and Supply acting for and on behalf of the Crown.

MR. SMALLWOOD: In places where they have town councils. This is a place without.

MR. BROWNE: Has not Botwood?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, it has a Water Committee. It was quite deliberately decided not to put it under that.
MR. BROWNE: Then under Section 3 and 3(a) the Minister of Finance would be substituted for the Minister of Public Works.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I move that amendment.

Clause as amended carried.

MR. CURTIS: Just to clarify the point made by my honourable and learned friend. If we look at page 287 of the Consolidated Statutes, Volume 4, it will be noted that the Local Authority Guarantee Act, 1952, is still in force—just not printed.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, the Town of Deer Lake is down here for $120,000 under the 1952 Act. Does this mean another $120,000?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes.

MR. HOLLETT: Would the Minister tell us how many have been guaranteed under this particular Bill altogether in Newfoundland?

MR. HEFFERTON: I cannot tell right off.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Four or five million—maybe five million.

MR. HOLLETT: Could we get something definite on that?

MR. HEFFERTON: Approximately five million dollars.

MR. BROWNE: Four hundred thousand under the original Act and seven hundred and twenty-four thousand under this Act.

MR. HEFFERTON: And amendments last year. $375,000 was loaned to St. Lawrence.

On motion Bill ordered reported passed with some amendments.

Committee of the Whole on Bill "An Act to Amend the Cancer Control Act, 1958":

Clause 1 carried.

Clause 2:

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, that is a very big change. Before for church entertainment, charity and recreation—now are these objects less worthy than the ones for which taxes are being collected. Religious and charity, I think were the principal things contained in the previous Act.

This section gives the Minister power to settle any dispute arising as to whether an entertainment is to be exempt, and there is no appeal, but the tax shall be paid or not in accordance with that decision. I understand from the Minister who introduced the Bill that there were so many exemptions made last year that a good deal of anticipated revenue was lost and now it is hoped to get it back again.

MR. FORSEY: About fifty per cent.

MR. SMALLWOOD: May I give a word of explanation which may save my honourable friends opposite some time. Last year the Act, before it was an Act and while it was still a Bill, came into this House and in the course of the debate on it here in this Chamber it was amended drastically to effect a loss to the Crown a tremendous amount of money running perhaps into the best part of a quarter of a million dollars. Now on second thought it was amended here in the Chamber on the authority of the House after the Bill had been printed, and it was done in a flush of sentiment and some little emotion on the part of all of us, and without too much hard thinking. The hard thinking had been done in the preparation of the Bill, but the amending was done in that flush of sentiment that overcame us here at that time, on both sides of the House. Subsequently we did some hard thinking about it again. Now the tax is not a tax on churches. Clearly it is not a tax on religious entertainments. It is not a tax on religious entertainments given by churches or by religious bodies. It is not a tax on entertainments (period). It is a tax on individual persons of five cents each time they go to an entertainment. It is not the entertainment that is taxed, it is the public. Now when a man or women (children are exempt) shall go to any kind of an entertainment they shall pay to the Government five cents—A meeting would not be classed as an entertainment, of course, but it would depend on who held the meeting—or some sessions of this House—Yes at some sessions we might well be able to charge an admission fee and five cents a head tax—
But everyone over sixteen attending any kind of an entertainment shall pay a tax to the Government of five cents—A meeting would not be classed as an entertainment, of course, but it would depend on who held the meeting—or some sessions of this House—Yes at some sessions we might well be able to charge an admission fee and five cents a head tax—
Except for these all other entertainments are included, not the entertainments themselves but the persons who attend the entertainments. If a person should go tonight, for instance, up to the wrestling matches that are on, he pays five cents to the Government. If he goes to a movie he pays five cents to the Government, if he goes to a ball game he pays five cents to the Government or to a hockey game or to any form of entertainment he will pay five cents to the Government. Now this is the lowest rate of entertainment tax across Canada. It is the lowest. It will bring in per capita the lowest amount of any Province of Canada. In some Provinces the tax is quite a revenue getter. In Montreal for instance, going into the Shrine of St. Andrew, the Province of Quebec, and they have the welfare of the religious bodies at heart—Quebec and Newfoundland have that in common, we have the same school system. Neither of us has any difference. In each there is a strong family feeling, in each of the two Provinces there is a strong religious loyalty, and in each Province we have that intense loyalty to religious bodies and then in a Province such as Quebec to find as you go into a shrine, a famous shrine, you pay your tax to the Government of Quebec, seven cents. We charge five cents to go to a movie or a ball game. We have no shrine, I am glad we have not. It would be a bit embarrassing to tax persons going to a shrine.

MR. HOLLETT: What do you call it?

MR. SMALLWOOD: They call it an entertainment tax. An amusement tax, imposed on people going to a shrine, that is what they do.

MR. HIGGINS: Are you sure that is not the museum attached to it?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, the Government of the Province of Quebec taxes the shrine of Brother Andrew.

MR. BROWNE: Not a museum attached to the shrine.

MR. SMALLWOOD: But it is attached to the shrine.

MR. HOLLETT: We could go to the museum tomorrow.

MR. HIGGINS: I am still not happy about this thing. I remember quite clearly we discussed this matter last year. There are certain leagues which operate in the city here and I refer particularly to the baseball and football and basketball leagues and I hope next winter the hockey league which are operated by groups of individuals, none of whom derive any payment, direct or indirect. These people perform a very definite service to the community. They are very valuable assets to the Government. The form of entertainment they provide is one of safety valves we have. It is a very minor tax but a small league like the football where the admission is twenty cents, a five cent tax makes a twenty-five per cent surtax on that and I honestly can't see it. I can understand on movies where we have a regular clientele and I can understand the Government wishing to charge a tax on bingo but for the people whose only entertainment is this type of athletic outlet, the Government is not so badly off that it needs that amount of money. The amount is not sufficient to justify the imposition of that tax. It is a nuisance tax. I doubt if in the run of a year the gross amount might come to $3,000.00. The amount the Government would collect is surely not going to make or break it. I remember last year we were in accord that regularly constituted leagues, not an outfit such as professional wrestlers, but for amateur sport, I think the House might well consider to exempt such sports and give them the consideration that has always been given them. I do not feel we should tax sport, people who are doing this at no profit to themselves.

MR. SMALLWOOD: We are not taxing the leagues or the players or the employees of the leagues. We are taxing the public every time they go to entertainment. Is there a less onerous way or less severe way to tax people than on their smoking or liquor entertainments?

MR. HIGGINS: I accept the Premier's opinion on practically everything but on what the sporting public will stand. I will go on my own opinion on that.

A few short weeks ago one of the leagues intimated they were going to up the price some small amount. The howl was such that the idea was dropped. If this five cents goes on the very leagues would suffer and it would mean a sizable decline in attendance which might mean the decline of athletic sport in this community which would be a much more serious matter than the loss of a few hundred dollars to the Government Treasury. This is not merely a sentimental appeal and I urge on the Government for the sake of amateur sport that some consideration should be given preservation of sport in this Province. We are, perhaps, the last bastion of purely amateur sport in the whole North American continent. I should urge upon the House to give support to amateur athletics. You will hit this sport.

DR. ROWE: I am sure we all appreciate your great interest in sport and athletic activities. I doubt if sport means more to any man than it does to him. In making any taxes there is the danger of making exemptions. Any activities conducted by a church is one exemption and any activity conducted by a school, in which churches and schools participate, is another. If we start making other exemptions, and while my honourable friend has put forward a very good case, there are other people engaged in other forms of sport and entertainment who could put forward just as good a case. When we start making an exemption when somebody else wants one.

MR. HOLLETT: I agree with my friend on the left regarding the tax on athletic sport. It is very unfortunate. If we read our history we will find athletics are really at the basis of civilization. The Premier said that taxes are the basis of civilization. I do not agree. I do not know why he said that. But athletics are at the basis of good sound manhood and womanhood. It is unfortunate we have to tax them ever so little. Permission was given to put a tax on the upkeep of the stadium and now we are going to tax people who go there. I agree with every remark he made. I want to take advantage of this occasion. I received this letter yesterday from the president of the St. John's Stadium Council. It says—

MR. CHAIRMAN: I do not know whether that is in order.

MR. HOLLETT: If the Chairman objects I will do it some other way. It has to do with the tax and the stadium.

MR. CHAIRMAN: The stadium was not mentioned here.

MR. HOLLETT: And neither was the shrine mentioned here. We were told about the tax and going to a shrine in Quebec and I talk about a tax to go to the stadium.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Letters and newspapers should not be read in the House. The time of the House or the time of the Committee should not be wasted.

MR. HOLLETT: If the Honourable the Premier brought in a chapter of scripture he would be allowed to read it. I should say it in the press and over the air.

MR. CHAIRMAN: That is a reflection on the Chair.

MR. HOLLETT: If it is unfair I take it back. I think it is unfair that I should not be allowed to make a recommendation on behalf of the St. John's Stadium Council. I am not allowed to do so.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I have sympathy with the Leader of the Opposition. I think if he raises the question tomorrow he will have every opportunity to raise the matter.

MR. BROWNE: I wonder if the word concerts there is drawn up to cover every entertainment which can be held in the schools? Does it cover every form of entertainment such as dramatics?

MR. SMALLWOOD: It says such as.

MR. BROWNE: Would that cover operas and plays?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Unquestionably, yes.

MR. BROWNE: Card parties?

MR. SMALLWOOD: They may not be taxed but people who attend them will.

MR. BROWNE: In addition to church sales there are school sales. Mercy Convent have an annual tea and school sale?

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is not an entertainment.

MR. BROWNE: There would be teas.

MR. SMALLWOOD: There is no desire to tax school and church functions.

MR. BROWNE: The fact that school children participated would render it exempt?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes.
MR. BROWNE: Before the Bill goes through, has the Minister any break-down of revenue received from this taxation of the movies and any other forms of entertainment?

MR. FORSEY: No, I have no break-down for the grand total of $160,000.00, and I would say of this approximately twenty-five per cent came from the city or town.

MR. BROWNE: Only $160,000.00 came from that tax and $250,000.00 was estimated.

MR. FORSEY: The Bill was only in force for six months. The tax was imposed in June and it was in August before the personnel began to collect the tax.

MR. HIGGINS: Might I ask one question. Let us assume the football league opens tomorrow night, where do they get the tickets?

MR. FORSEY: It is not in effect yet.

MR. SMALLWOOD: If the tax on sports or other activities turn out to be detrimental we will be the first to come in at the next session and amend it.

Clause carried.

A Bill "An Act to Amend the Memorial University Act."

Clauses 1 and 2 read and carried.

Clause 3 read:

3.-(1) Sub-section (1) of Section 36 of the said Act is amended by striking out therefrom in the second and third lines the words "subject to sub-section (2) ".

(2) Paragraph (1) of sub-section (1) of the said Section 36 of the said Act is repealed.

(3) Sub-section (2) of the said Section 36 is replaced.

MR. BROWNE: This sub-section 1, some words have been taken out.

MR. CHALKER: Yes.

MR. MURRAY: It would be unusual for a liberal arts college to be all under the jurisdiction of the Minister and it should be left to the faculty.

MR. BROWNE: The liberal arts college. This power was given to the Board by the Act and the President of the University and two members elected by the Government. The Board has the power.

MR. CHALKER: They asked to pass it back to the faculty.

Clause carried.

Clauses 4 to 8 read and carried.

A Bill "An Act to Amend the Memorial University (Pensions) Act."

Clause 1 read and carried.

Clause 2 read:

2. The Memorial University (Pensions) Act, chapter 110 of The Revised Statutes of Newfoundland, 1952, is amended by repealing Section 3 and substituting the following therefor:

"3.—(1) Subject to sub-section (2), this Act applies to every person appointed by the Board under paragraph (f) of Section 36 of the Memorial University Act who is employed on a full-time basis upon an annual salary paid wholly and directly by the Board and who was appointed by the Board before attaining the age of fifty-six years, unless, at the time of his appointment by the Board he was:

(a) serving in employment at the Memorial University College,
(b) an established civil servant within the meaning of The Civil Service Act, or

c) a teacher who was making contributions to a pension scheme for teachers in force in New­land.

(2) The Board may, if it deems fit, exempt an employee from the operation of this Act.

(3) Any person to whom this Act is applicable who, before his appointment by the Board, was contributing to a pension plan and who elects to continue his contribution in order to qualify for a pension under that plan instead of under this Act shall so advise the Board and the Board may contribute to the plan an amount not exceeding that which it would have contributed to the Fund in respect of that person in accordance with paragraph (n) of Section 36 of The Memorial University Act."

MR. HOLLETT: On this, the Board may if it deems fit exempt an employee from the operation of this Act. What is meant by that?

MR. CHALKER: From what I have been informed, the old Act did not make it mandatory for all these people to become part of this Pension Act. This amendment does make it so but the Board still can, under certain cases, make it possible for somebody to stay out.

MR. HOLLETT: It states "From the operation of the Act."

Clause 2 carried.

3. The said Act is further amended by inserting therein immediately after Section 13 as Section 13A the following:

"13A.—(1) The President of the Memorial University of Newfoundland shall be retired

(a) on reaching retirement age, or

(b) if he is unable to perform his duties effectively owing to physical or mental incapacity medically certified to the satisfaction of the Board to be likely to be permanent.

and, subject to sub-section (3), the Board shall award him a pension equal to two-thirds of his pensionable salary.

(2) Subject to sub-section (3), when the President dies the Board shall award to his widow an allowance equal to one-half of the pension being paid to the President at the date of his death, or, if he had been retired at the date of his death, an allowance equal to one-half of the pension that he would have been entitled to had he been retired at the date of his death, but this allowance shall terminate on the remarriage of his widow.

(3) Sub-sections (1) and (2) do not apply unless the President contributes to the Fund annually as from July 1st, 1952, six per centum of his salary fixed by the Board."

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, what is the salary of the president?

MR. CHALKER: Fifteen thousand plus one thousand living allowance.

MR. BROWNE: So he is going to get a pension after ten years of ten thousand dollars, and if he should die his widow gets a pension of five thousand dollars.

MR. CHALKER: That is right.

MR. BROWNE: This, I understand, is by contract.
MR. SMALLWOOD: It is what he already had on the salary scale from the Canadian Government, salary and pensions, both the same.

MR. BROWNE: Is he getting a pension from the Dominion of Canada?

MR. SMALLWOOD: He lost it all, and gets nothing.

MR. BROWNE: He gets back his contributions. Could not an arrangement be made for the Government of Canada to carry his pension? But he would not have gotten anything like that for his pension.

MR. CHALKER: He is an exceptionally fine man—We had to pay.

MR. BROWNE: Is the Minister in a position to say how much President Hatcher gets?

MR. CHALKER: Nothing like that amount. But, as I said, negotiations are going on with the Board of Regents to try and rearrange President Hatcher’s pension.

MR. BROWNE: I hope so because President Hatcher served over twenty-five years if not thirty years there.

MR. CHALKER: Twenty-seven years.

MR. BROWNE: The Minister knows better than I do the interest which President Hatcher took in the Memorial College—There are other professors there too.

MR. HEFFERTON: He was retired on full salary for one year and after that two-thirds of his salary.

MR. BROWNE: But the salary was very much less.

MR. CURTIS: On the other hand he made no contributions such as the present man has to pay.

MR. CHALKER: That is right—6% of the fifteen thousand.

MR. HEFFERTON: May I point out that the president cannot retire in ten years unless he is incapacitated, he has to serve more than ten years.

MR. BROWNE: What is the retirement age?

MR. CHALKER: Age 65.

Clause 3 and 4 carried.

On motion Bill ordered reported passed without amendment.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Chairman, I move the Committee rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again, having passed this Bill without amendment and having made progress on certain other amendments.

Report received. On motion Committee of the Whole ordered to sit again tomorrow.

Committee of the Whole to consider certain resolutions in relation to financial assistance to be given to certain undertakings:

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, before Your Honour leaves the Chair I would move that this House do not adjourn at 11:00 p.m. I thought we might go on for half an hour.

MR. BROWNE: No, Mr. Speaker, I object. I think we have had a very strenuous day and we went through a lot of legislation. I think until 11:00 is long enough.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I withdraw the motion, Mr. Speaker.

Committee of the Whole:

Clause 1:

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, we are now considering a clause in connection with resolutions which have to do with seventeen firms to which the Government has advanced money or provided money by means of a guarantee and the total amounts to nearly seven and a half million dollars. I think the public and the House is entitled to some detailed information from the Premier on each of these items, and I am going to ask now if he will give it.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I can do that on the second clause.

MR. BROWNE: That is the schedule.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I am prepared to do it either way. Incidentally before we go on I would like to have an item added to the list. The name of the company I have not got in full. I have not the completely accurate name, but The Union Light and Power, or The Union Electric Light and Power. The Attorney General has gone outside to get the full and exact name. If the Clerk will add it to the bottom of the list, that will make the list complete.
ElecLight and Power Company $1,100,000.

Andrews Labrador Fisheries Limited, $125,000; That is a loan made to the company under the Bank Act, by the Canadian Bank of Commerce under Government guarantee at a rate of 4½% interest. The loan was arranged for a period of one year, commencing on the 18th of October last. In other words; on that date the Canadian Bank of Commerce made Andrews Labrador Limited a loan on the guarantee of the Newfoundland Government, and we now ask for legislative confirmation of the amount owing under the loan as of 31 March 1954, $60,000. Against this there is a security of approximately $68,000. The purpose of the loan was to enable the company to pay for a substantial quantity of salt-bulk fish. The company, as the Committee knows, is equipped with artificial dryers capable of curing fish throughout the winter months. Perhaps the primary reason for the great need of assistance was the situation which had come about under the new methods of fishermen advances of prices last year under the price agreement. Normally the company would not be required to make prompt settlement in cash when they bought the fish. In fact the accepted system was cash advances and a balance over a projected period. A fixed minimum advance meant that the fishermen accepted payment to within a few dollars on the delivery of fish. It was to enable the Andrews Labrador Fisheries Industry that we guaranteed that loan at the Canadian Bank of Commerce for them.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I have here a reply to a question asked by the Honourable the Leader of the Opposition which states that, as of the 20th of February the Andrews Labrador Fisheries Limited had then a loan outstanding of $40,000 and that they had borrowed $160,000 in addition to that on which $80,000 was outstanding and a guaranteed amount of $125,000.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is the item referred to now.

MR. BROWNE: Of which $80,000 is outstanding?

MR. SMALLWOOD: As of the 31st of March there was $60,000 outstanding.

MR. BROWNE: And the others are still outstanding?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes. This guaranteed bank loan was made by the bank on our guarantee. The others are actual cash loans made by the Newfoundland Government some two or three years ago, which they had been reducing by payments back to the Government.

MR. BROWNE: Could the Minister tell us how much has been reduced on the $40,000? I don't think there has been anything reduced on that.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I don't think anything has been recently.

MR. BROWNE: What is the situation of that company at the present time? How does it stand insofar as security for these loans is concerned?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I think the security is excellent. We are quite happy with that. Incidentally the administration of this loan to this company has been taken over by the Fisheries Development Authority, and it is entirely in their hands.
MR. HOLLETT: On that first $40,000 loan, I am not sure if anything has been paid back on that?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I don't know.

MR. HOLLETT: I don't know either. I am asking now if the Minister could find that out for us?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, I can indeed.

MR. HOLLETT: On the other amount of $160,000, the amount owed on that on the 28 February 1954 was $80,000. Then the Andrews Labrador Fisheries Limited were guaranteed a loan for $125,000. Apparently from what I can see now it seems the loan at the bank has not been made good and the Government has to pay over $125,000.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, The banks are not permitted to make long term loans. Their loans are in every instance for a period of less than a year. Therefore they made the loan on the guarantee of the Government for a period of less than a year. Now as the period in each instance expires the Government has to replace the loan, and the Government then makes it for a much longer period. The banks are limited by the Canada Banking Act.

MR. HOLLETT: The total amount as of now owed by Andrews Labrador Fisheries Limited would be $125,000 plus $40,000 or $165,000.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I think that is the amount exactly.

MR. HOLLETT: What I want to know is, on what does the Government take security?

MR. SMALLWOOD: It is a chattel mortgage on everything they have, their property at Bay Roberts and their property at Coley's Point—They have the former James Baird Limited premises.

MR. HOLLETT: That was the $40,000?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, that is more than covered.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, I have been informed that that particular company has had an excellent year. I have been informed they have had great success, so that I fail to see why something has not been forthcoming on these loans?

MR. SMALLWOOD: They have been extending and plowing back and building. We prefer to see them expand and improve rather than just getting the money back. We felt the money in their hands and plowed back into the fishery would be better than just paying back the loans. We could have insisted on having had it, but we did not, as a matter of deliberate decision.

MR. HOLLETT: I know, deliberately—They are in the supply business of these vessels?

MR. SMALLWOOD: They are in the supply business, the salt cod fishery business of supplying fishermen to prosecute it, and in the business of drying fish themselves in their dryers.

DR. ROWE: I would just like to add—I imagine that company has bought more salt codfish in Labrador than any other. Certainly in one section of Labrador there would have been most distressful conditions had that company not operated in the area as it did.

MR. BROWNE I wonder if the interest is charged on these loans?
MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, it is.

MR. BROWNE: Well, why does it not appear in the Act? It just appears here as $40,000. Is the interest being paid?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I think so. I don't think there are any arrears on interest.

MR. BROWNE: Could the Honourable Minister bring in the information?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I could indeed, but I am virtually certain of it right now.

Item carried.

Atlantic Films and Electronics Limited: $50,000.

MR. SMALLWOOD: This one is also guaranteed at the bank to provide for the company working capital which they just did not possess. They are operating on not only insufficient working capital but grotesquely insufficient working capital, so we lent them an additional $50,000.

MR. HOLLETT: That is in addition to the $150,000 cash loan, in other words $200,000.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is right, and we have a mortgage on all their property, worth the best part of half a million dollars, including their big building on Prescott Street.

MR. HOLLETT: I take the Premier's word for that. I do notice from the shareholders and directors, that they have some excellent men on the board of directors. Whilst I have no objection to the Government lending money to assist industries such as the fishery I am very doubtful as to the advisability of this Government going into the moving picture business to the extent of even $200,000 particularly when I see from the estimates, I believe last year, an order in council was made for $500 to purchase films and pictures from this company. So that the Government capitalizes the company to the extent of $200,000 to make pictures for the Government for which they pay them. I am inclined to think this company cost, I am trying to think, one hundred or two hundred and fifty thousand dollars including the amount paid out for pictures and for capital outlay. It is very doubtful as to how far the Government ought to go in that. Here they had a loan from the Government of $150,000 just recently and now it is overdue and the Government has to pony up. I just bring that to the attention of the House. Certainly I do not approve of it myself.

MR. BROWNE: Is the Minister familiar with their affairs, and is he shown their accounts?

MR. SMALLWOOD: We get a financial statement, each month.

MR. BROWNE: How are they doing?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Very well, splendidly, going ahead very rapidly. Their sales in that retail store where they take in films to be developed and printed, coloured mostly, and black and white, are growing with remarkable rapidity. Then in addition they have all kinds of electronic equipment for ships, theatres, etc. They are going ahead very, very rapidly. I see their monthly sales and they are quite encouraging.

MR. BROWNE: I can imagine that. I know it is a profitable business. But I also know they have not paid anything on this $150,000. Have they paid interest?
MR. SMALLWOOD: They are included in the firms we are this year amortizing.

MR. HOLLETT: How many people do they employ?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Sixty or seventy.

MR. HOLLETT: The Premier stated they deal in developing film and that sort of thing, coloured films. Were they not developed by others here?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, it is the first time east of Montreal in fact. People send film from the Maritimes here to be developed and printed.

MR. HOLLETT: This is something else for which the Government can take credit?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I look upon it as one of our new industries, yes.

Carried.

Atlantic Hardboard Industries Limited, $603,000:

MR. SMALLWOOD: We cannot now cover that. I move the Committee rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again.

MR. COURAGE: Mr. Speaker, the Committee of Supply have considered the matter to them referred, have made progress and ask leave to sit again.

Report received. On motion Committee ordered to sit again tomorrow.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I move the remaining Orders of the Day do stand deferred, and that the House at its rising do adjourn until tomorrow Thursday at 11:00 a.m. of the clock.

On motion the House adjourned until tomorrow, Thursday, June 17, at 11:00 a.m.

THURSDAY, June 17, 1954

MORNING SESSION

The House met at 11:00 of the clock in the morning, pursuant to adjournment.

Presenting Petitions

HON. L. R. CURTIS (Attorney General): Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present a petition from Rev. Mr. Lewis Head of Virgin Arm, Mr. Boyd, J.P., of Summerford, Mr. Hall and others of Newstead, Mr. Leslie Rideout and others of Western Head, Mr. Edgar Anthony and others of Cottell's Island, Mr. A. Green and others of Twillingate, Rev. C. Emely of Herring Neck and other residents of Carter's Cove and Comfort Cove, asking for the completion of a road from its present end to Comfort Cove.

Now this area, Mr. Speaker, is a very good farm area, and completion of the road to Comfort Cove will enable people of Comfort Cove, Summerford and vicinity to ship their products to Lewisporte and to Gander and St. John's and to the markets of the Province.

I have very great pleasure, Mr. Speaker, in presenting this petition, and in supporting it, and I would ask that it be received and referred to the department to which it relates.

MR. M. M. HOLLETT (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, with the permission of the House could I raise a point on a question of privilege?

MR. SPEAKER: Permission granted.

MR. HOLLETT: It is a matter of not very great moment. I attempted last evening, and was apparently out of order, in connection with an item which appeared in one of our newspapers in connection with something that I said, relative to this item here: May I read that particular section, Mr. Speaker?

MR. SPEAKER: Yes.

MR. HOLLETT: He maintained moreover that the tax was unnecessary and that it was unfair since it was levied on people who had already made generous contributions to the stadium fund through the one per cent fund. Also argued that there must be some laxness or inefficiency in the management and carrying through of the project since it started out at $400,000 and is now estimated at a million and there is no assurance it will not run into more millions before completed especially if the council handles the tax money as badly as the Government has handled its consolidated revenue fund.

That is an article in the Evening Telegram of June 10. That is more or less as I made the statement. This is the part which I think causes some concern: "If the council handles the tax money as badly as the Government handled consolidated revenue." That infers I was referring to the Municipal Council. But there was another council, a Stadium Council of which I had no knowledge or had forgotten. I received a letter from the Chairman, Mr. O'Leary, saying I would like to call your attention to the enclosed. "As many members have devoted much time and great effort and suffered headaches during the last few years to provide a stadium for St. John's —

I want to point out here, Sir, the remarks which I had made and which were correctly quoted in the Evening Telegram referred to the Municipal Council, and was not intended to injure anybody, I think maybe a political government, I believe the Honourable the Premier, who by the way I want to thank for reminding me this morning of the opportunity to make this statement, I want to thank him for that, but it was more or less a crack at the Government, Sir, and not at the Municipal Council at all, at least not at the Stadium Council at all. I was referring to the Municipal Councils, and particularly it was a crack at my honourable friend on my left in our own party, as I think everybody in the House recognized at that time. Apparently it was taken on the outside, particularly by members of the Stadium Council to be a crack at them, a disparaging remark at them. It was not so at all and I thank you, Sir, for being able to make this explanation.

MR. CURTIS: It just misfired.

Presenting Reports of Standing and Select Committees

None.

Giving Notice of Motion and Question

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Speaker, I give notice that I will at a later hour this day ask leave to introduce a Bill "An Act to Establish the Newfoundland Power Commission." I might say, Mr. Speaker, that this Bill, with the one of which my honourable friend will now give notice constitutes, as far as I know, all the legislation to come before the House, except such Bills as may arise out of the budget.

HON. DR. F. W. ROWE (Minister of Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I give notice I will ask leave to introduce at a later hour this day a Bill "An Act Further to Amend the Timber License (Reversion to Crown) Act.

Answers to Questions

Question No. 109:

HON. J. R. SMALLWOOD (Prime Minister): On the first part of the question, Mr. Speaker, may I say now formally, officially, I would hope finally, but probably not finally, that the Government bought no cement from W. J. Lundrigan or from W. J. Lundrigan Limited. Therefore there was no number of bags. There was no purchase of cement. There was no number of bags. There was no price in connection with (a) the cement plant construction nor (b) the gypsum plant construction. Now I will endeavour to explain the matter with great simplicity:

The Government entered into a contract with William J. Lundrigan Limited, under which that firm was to erect the buildings of a cement plant. The Government entered into another contract with the same firm but this time for the erection of a number of buildings for the gypsum plant. In each contract it was provided that the contractor should erect those buildings at his own expense, according to the specifications and plans and blue prints that were provided to him, in the case of the cement plant by MIAG who designed the plant and in the case of the gypsum plant by the firm of Benno Schildt who designed the plant. Lundrigan was to provide all cement for any of the concrete work, supply the aggregate and was to supply the reinforcing steel, he was to provide the forms and build the forms, he was to pour the cement, he was to insert the reinforcing steel, he was to take the forms away after the cement, the concrete, had set, in fact he was to erect the buildings. Now it is pretty obvious that cement had to go into that concrete. You cannot make concrete, I understand, without cement. Indeed Mr. Lundrigan informed me he used almost sixty thousand bags or getting up towards sixty thousand bags of cement on concrete work he did on the cement plant, not one hundred and sixty-eight thousand bags but something less than sixty thousand bags, which he bought. The Government did not buy it. He bought it.

The Government made progress payments to the firm. I think they were made monthly, each month the firm of Lundrigan would furnish to the Government an estimate. No. 1 was called the first one, and the next estimate No. 2. Each month the firm submitted to the Government an estimate of what progress it had made in fulfilling its contract. It was certified by the resident engineer of the Government Mr. Leja. It showed how much concrete had been poured. The estimate in each case showed how many cubic yards of concrete had been poured and how much cement had gone into that concrete, how much aggregate and steel had gone into it; and how much cement was on hand not used up, how much aggregate, sand, crushed stone, was on hand and how much steel, and how much other material for the job was on hand, and the value of these materials. All this was certified by the resident engineer. On the basis of that a progress payment was made to Lundrigan each month in respect of the total amount due him under the contract. A portion of the total price of the contract was paid to him each month in proportion to the progress he made in the performance of his contract. That proportion was shown by these monthly estimates he submitted showing the work actually performed, the proportion of the contract of this or that foundation actually completed and showing the value of the materials he had acquired and whether they were on the job available for use. On the basis of these monthly estimates he was given a progress payment.

I can only assume that the Honourable Leader of the Opposition, having gone over these vouchers, invoices or statements (the proper word is estimates) if he looked closely would have seen in the top right-hand corner the title Estimate No. 1 and Estimate No. 2. There were seven or eight or more of them, having gone through these and wrongly assumed—he honestly, quite honestly believes, quite honestly but wrongly assumes that it was a case of the Government buying cement from Mr. Lundrigan or from the firm of William J. Lundrigan Limited.

Now the Government bought no cement from Lundrigan. Therefore the answer to part (1) of this question as to the purchase of cement is—None—showing the number of bags—None—the prices charged—None. Now that is in connection with the cement plant.

What I have had said about the cement plant applies equally, I believe, to the gypsum plant. The same arrangement was followed.

Now as to the second part: I have this morning been shown this very account by the Controller of the Treasury, Mr. Marshall, and his Assistant Deputy Minister, Mr. Channing. They got out these and showed them to me. They turned out to be merely the final payment claimed by Mr. Lundrigan in respect of the whole series of transactions I have just been describing. But these will be tabled. These are all being copied and will be tabled here in the House for the honourable gentleman.

Now I do hope—but if the honourable gentlemen opposite are not disposed to accept my explanation—I would honestly like to find some way of convincing them completely and through them convincing the public of the complete and literal accuracy and truthfulness of what I have said here this morning. I would like to—One way would be to ask the Auditor General to submit a report, for him to look into these statements and get a transcript of my statement just made here this morning, and for him to report to the House on the truthfulness and accuracy of my statement.

MR. HOLLETT: That is what the question asks for—I am not doubting your word.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It does no such thing.

MR. HOLLETT: It says—to table a report—there.

MR. SMALLWOOD: But they have not made a report.

MR. HOLLETT: Table a report to this House.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I have never understood that to this moment. I assumed the question assumed the existence of a report.

MR. HOLLETT: If the Honourable the Premier will read that question I think that is what it said.

MR. SMALLWOOD: If that is what the honourable gentleman wanted it ought to have been put in the form of a question, not in the form of a motion—Resolved the Auditor General be requested to furnish to the House a statement showing (a) (b) (c) or whatever it is. I would prefer that that be done. I would like that very much so as to put it beyond the realm of debate and political discussion.

MR. HOLLETT: That is all I want.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I wish the honourable gentleman had made it clear in his notice of question. But it is anything but clear. He knew in his own mind what he wanted, and I have therefore left it unanswered.

Orders of The Day

Third Readings:

A Bill "An Act to Provide for the Regulations of Ferries Used in the Transportation of Persons and Property for Compensation":

On motion read a third time, ordered passed and title be as on the Order Paper.

A Bill, "An Act to Amend the Shipbuilding (Bounties) Act":

On motion read a third time, ordered passed and title be as on the Order Paper.

A Bill "An Act to Amend the Social Security Assessment Act":

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, on a point of personal explanation: Last night when this matter was in committee I pointed out it was inadvisable and undesirable to leave the Deputy Minister the powers of imposing the variable penalties. The member for Fogo said the income tax department was doing the same thing. I did not think they were because of my own experience. Today I got in touch with the manager of the Income Tax Department, and I have here an Income Tax Return saying the failure to file income tax imposes a penalty of 5% of income tax unpaid at that date, and the interest will be 6% per annum. That is a fixed penalty, not variable, and the taxpayer knows beforehand what he is up against. In the other case it is a variable penalty, and I am sure the Deputy Minister himself can hardly desire to have thrust upon him the responsibility of graduating the amounts and of acting in the nature of a judge imposing sentence. That is the point I made last night, and I see now I was correct in what I said and that the member for Fogo was wrong. Perhaps the Attorney General or the Minister in charge, in view of that, might consider it desirable to have a change to $10 or 6% and not give the Deputy Minister the responsibility of declaring the punishment.

MR. CURTIS: I am quite agreeable, Mr. Speaker, to have third reading stand over to check the point. I might say I knew they did have a penalty for income tax. I received one myself about a week ago, fining me a certain amount because my tax returns were two days late in arriving. Actually they were there in time, but I don't know what happened to them.

MR. MORGAN: I think both the honourable member for St. John's West and the honourable member for Fogo are right. I notice he has a personal income tax from there, on which the penalty is 6% on unpaid tax. On the large form, which I believe has to be in by the end of February there is a penalty of $50 if they are not in on time and for the deductions on employees forms there is a penalty of $10 if they are not filed by the 15th of the following month, so that both the honourable members are right.

MR. SPEAKER: Order: I am afraid when I permitted the honourable member to make what was purported to be a personal explanation but really was a discussion—Perhaps if the honourable members would stop fidgeting in their chairs—and I can show parliamentary precedent for honourable members being asked to leave the room for doing that when Mr. Speaker is trying to explain something to an honourable member.

I said I permitted the honourable member to explain some part of his speech. That does not mean that a full-fledged debate can take place on the honourable member's explanation. There is no motion before the Chair, except a motion for third reading.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Might we let that stand, Mr. Speaker?

MR. SPEAKER: I might say the Chair would like to hear—might not like to hear but does want to hear what is said—How is the Chair to hear with a continuous racket going on?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Hear! Hear!

A Bill "An Act to Amend the Crown Lands Act":

On motion read a third time, ordered passed and title be as on the Order Paper.

A Bill "An Act Further to Amend the Local Authority Guarantee Act, 1952":

On motion read a third time, ordered passed and title be as on the Order Paper.

A Bill "An Act to Amend the Cancer Control Tax Act":

On motion read a third time, ordered passed and title be as on the Order Paper.

A Bill "An Act to Amend the Memorial University Act":

On motion read a third time, ordered passed and title be as on the Order Paper.

A Bill "An Act to Amend the Memorial University (Pensions) Act":

On motion read a third time, ordered passed and title be as on the Order Paper.

Committee of the Whole to consider Certain Resolutions in Relation to Financial Assistance to be Rendered to Certain Industrial Undertakings:

MR. SPEAKER: Leave was given yesterday for this Committee to sit again today. I do now leave the Chair:

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, on this motion for you to leave the Chair, I wish to bring up another matter.

MR. SPEAKER: I don't think the honourable member can, not on a motion to leave the Chair, but to leave the Chair in a particular sense of the word—On Supply—

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, it is not a personal grievance but a public grievance.

MR. SPEAKER: I do not understand.

MR. BROWNE: It is customary in other parliaments, and the same rule would prevail here, on motion for the House to go into Committee on Supply all members have the right to bring up grievances.

MR. SPEAKER: I am well aware of that rule. But I am not quite so sure it applies when leave was given for Committee to sit again, and I ask "I do now leave the Chair" but permission was given last night for this Committee to sit again.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The motion was made and carried yesterday that we go into Committee on this, and is not being made this morning.

Committee of the Whole:

MR. CHAIRMAN: The Committee read the schedule, and we had come to Atlantic Hardboard Industries Limited, $603,000.

MR. HIGGINS: Mr. Chairman, before we go on—the Honourable the Premier promised to give us the name there.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Union Electric Light and Power Company of Port Union, $1,100,000.

Before we go on could I crave the indulgence of the Committee to have the Deputy Minister of Finance do what he and other deputies do on the estimates, sit up near so that I can consult him.

Agreed.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Last night, I think, Your Honour called Atlantic Hardboard Industries Limited:

MR. HOLLETT: Will the Honourable the Premier allow me now—Yesterday there was some little doubt about the exact amount owed now at this moment by Andrews Labrador Fisheries Limited, and Atlantic Films and Electronics Limited, and as he now has the Deputy Minister—

MR. SMALLWOOD: I promised to have that today, and I will, but suppose we don't hold things up now on it? We are now at Atlantic Hardboard Industries Limited, $603,000, $285,000 of that is by way of cash advances from the Board and $318,000 of it by way of guaranteed bank loans. The total amount was advanced by the Government or by the bank on the Government's guarantee, to enable them to double their output, to double the productive capacity of the plant. That was done in the Fall. They installed a second dryer, which is a very large piece of mechanical equipment, almost identical with the first one. The Committee is possibly aware of the fact that the process consists of taking green logs and chipping them into chips in one building and blowing the chips underground, by underground conveyor into the main building and then returning them through a dryer and evaporating the moisture so as to have perfectly dry chips. These chips are then made into pressboard or fibreboard.

They have doubled up their productive capacity by getting another dryer, exactly similar to the one they had before, a very large piece of equipment about the length of this room, not as wide nor not as high. Then they have a third dryer not nearly so big as these two. The chip from that is a very white and thin chip and very much smaller. It is run through hammer mills and knife mills and reduced to exceedingly fine white chips which have to be dried in this new third dryer. Then again this was to pay for new chipping machines, three of them, of entirely new design.

MR. BROWNE: Excuse me, Mr. Chairman, how many is a quorum?

MR. CURTIS: Ten.
MR. BROWNE: You settled on that?

MR. CURTIS: Well according to the Act.

MR. SMALLWOOD: There are certain other pieces of mechanical equipment. Then having decided to double the productive capacity of the plant because they are on a three shift day, (they work 24 hours a day, three shifts) it became imperative that they build a warehouse for their finished products prior to shipping. So they have erected a huge new warehouse, built at the railway siding. It is of asbestos cement and with a steel frame and concrete floor. So, Mr. Chairman that was the purpose of these loans.

I am sure that my honourable friends are going to ask the total now outstanding and perhaps we can give that—About one and half millions, I would say.

MR. HOLLETT: I thank the Honourable the Premier for his explanation. My figure is $1,563,000 and that is probably correct.

Relative to the statement made by the Honourable the Premier I believe that the Atlantic Hardboards would be entirely dependent upon the operations of Newfoundland Hardwoods for its supply of material. I am not sure that is correct, but that is the impression I get.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Upon whom?

MR. HOLLETT: The Atlantic Hardboards are dependent on Hardwoods?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No.

MR. HOLLETT: Where do they get their chips and other things?

MR. SMALLWOOD: They have bought their wood from approximately one hundred persons around and near St. John's, within a radius of fifty miles of the city, over one hundred persons. Nearly four hundred persons have been involved in cutting and hauling the wood. The largest collection of pulpwood type ever assembled on Avalon is now I suppose assembled in there on the grounds of Atlantic Hardboard Industries Limited, covering many acres of neatly piled pulpwood for chipping and drying into this fibreboard.

MR. HOLLETT: I have been told that that industry is one that should really be a success. I feel more inclined to think that too if it is not dependent on the other.

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, it is not.

MR. HOLLETT: They can get their own raw material. It is not a by-product of the other?

MR. SMALLWOOD: They can use some of the birch, of course, for a birch surface on their fibreboard and plywood.

MR. HOLLETT: I have seen some of it, and must say it looks very attractive. I do hope they will succeed. But they have to remember that they now have one million, five hundred and eighty-three thousand dollars. Of course they are a private company, and we have been told no interest has been paid. We don't know what they are doing. I will maintain also, of course, that the people of this country have the right from time to time to have progress reports relevant to a concern in which they have invested money. I think any shareholder of any company is entitled to know that. In fact all private companies do that. They make reports from time to time as to the standing of the company, and not only its financial affairs, but as to its output and various things which the shareholders should know. Now we don't know, and the House of Assembly even, does not know just exactly where this plant is situated as far as its output is concerned, as far as its sales of products are concerned, and what success or otherwise it is having. I must say right here, that is important. If the Government wants to get the goodwill of the people, and after all it is their money which is in these things, they ought to take the people into their confidence from time to time. I don't mean to say any time any company has a little up-set or set-back they have to go and herald it all around the world. But from time to time there should be a report, I will not even say record, as to the conditions of an industry into which the people have put their money, in this case where they have put a million and a half dollars. Would the Honourable the Premier tell us how many employees are working at that plant?

MR. SMALLWOOD: In and around that plant there are about 120, in and around the plant itself.

I may say, Mr. Chairman, in reply to my honourable friend (1) the company is operating in the black.

MR. HOLLETT: Good!

MR. SMALLWOOD: They are the first of all the new industries to get in the black.

MR. BROWNE: The only one so far?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I don't think so. (2) In regard to this company, indeed in regard to all the new industries the Government receives monthly a balance sheet of each of them. We have received a monthly balance sheet from every one of them, although we don't make that public. It is delivered to me monthly, a balance sheet of every one of these new industries. So that the Government do know how they are getting along.

MR. HOLLETT: Does the Honourable the Premier think it is against the interest of these companies to let the House know?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Of course, most certainly, by all means, obviously, I don't think it is even arguable that the monthly affairs of a new industry be published to the world. They have enough disadvantages as it is. The disadvantage of selling from Newfoundland in Ontario and Quebec in competition with the firms established up there. Then on top of that to have all their affairs published monthly or even annually or even semi-annually.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, the Honourable the Premier comes back every once in a while to advance money to these companies, without even allowing us to talk about it. In this particular industry here they have made a cash loan of $285,000 and then a guaranteed bank loan which they now have to make good of another $318,000, and the Honourable the Premier tells us that is to double the output. I hardly think that the House is justified in voting a large amount of money like that on the mere say so. Why could not the figures be produced here or the reports be produced here to give us some idea and some reason for voting this.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I don't know whether my honourable friend on my left, the Leader of the Opposition, asked the Minister for information as to the amount of the investment which the promoters of this company put in to it themselves.

MR. SMALLWOOD: From memory, I think it is four hundred thousand dollars.

MR. BROWNE: That means to say the Government of Newfoundland have invested about 75% in it.

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, excuse me, they have not four hundred thousand but six hundred thousand dollars in it.

MR. BROWNE: That is not exactly a fifty-fifty basis.

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, it is the first that was not.

MR. BROWNE: It is nine hundred thousand by the Government towards six hundred thousand by them.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is right.

MR. BROWNE: Now the Minister does not wish to give the details of the operation of the plant. At the same time there is certain information to which I think the House is entitled—I would like to know the date on which it was agreed that they would not have to pay interest, and how long the amortization lasts for?

MR. SMALLWOOD: The same date as all of them, and the same amortization as to all of them, on the same terms.

MR. BROWNE: Does the interest charge pile up, or is there none being charged for the two years.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That goes on the interest. It is only postponed.

MR. BROWNE: When the two-year period is up will there be any such thing as an accumulated period, or is that a two year period without interest?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No. If it is a ten year agreement and in each of the ten years they have to pay interest, if for two years they don't pay it.

MR. BROWNE: How many years have they paid this amount?

MR. SMALLWOOD: All this was debated when the Bill itself was presented. It is in the contract. The contract is statutory, available to all of us.

MR. HOLLETT: Will the Honourable Minister tell us who are the directors?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Dr. Weiss, a Swiss. Dr. Valdmanis was but is not now. They recently had a directors’ meeting. The directors are all here now from Switzerland at this moment. There may be one or two others whose names I don't remember.

MR. HOLLETT: Any Government directors?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No. But they are asking that a Government director be appointed. They feel it will keep them in close and friendly touch with the Government. The Government are considering now appointing Mr. Pushie, the Director of Economic Development, who is a director now in several of these and is to be on more of them.

MR. HOLLETT: On that point—It used to be a practice to have a member of the Government and I certainly approve of it, even if the Government has to pay the director, and even if the Legislation is required to be brought in to make that lawful. I think it should be done. As I see it somebody must be on that Board of Directors responsible to the Government for a million and a half dollars. I think the Government would be justified. I don't know what my colleague think, but that is my thought on the matter. Any company in which the Government has invested the people's money should have a director from the Government on that board of directors in order to keep the Government in touch with what is going on.

MR. CURTIS: Actually, Mr. Chairman, that is the reason we did not put on a Newfoundland Government member. We would be afraid we would be criticized for that.

MR. HOLLETT: I don't think the Government should be afraid of that. I believe you should have responsible men there from the Government. Mind you I am not saying anything derogatory to any Deputy Minister nor staff, but I say there should be a member of the Government, and I don't care where in the Government, but the Government is responsible to this House and that director would be able to tell us something about it, if it were in the public interest, and I say, only in the public interest. If I want to criticize the Government on a political platform that is another matter. But here in this House I say, definitely it is the Government's responsibility, and therefore the Government should be represented on the board of directors. I suggest if it is possible you should have a man, and it is immaterial to this House what these companies have to pay that director, except I know it would be a reasonable amount. I believe a director should be paid for careful attention to the matter of these industries. Until they have paid off all their indebtedness to this Government, the Government ought to have a director on the boards. That is my opinion.

MR. HIGGINS: I agree entirely with my honourable Leader. It appears to me if the Government has a representative on the directorate of Bowaters, which sometime, I presume, did have Government assistance, in the case of these particular industries where there has been so much talk, loose talk, perhaps, it might perhaps not be an unfair activity if there were a Government director. I do feel that the Government would be more reassured and certain it is that this House would be quite satisfied. At least then we would not be dependent on reports that are transmitted to the Minister from time to time. If there were a Government director, the House could say to him: "Mr. So and So, what is the position of the particular industry?" I feel that the Government, even at this stage, might give some thought to it.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I have already thought about it seriously, but find I don't like the idea. I will, however, think about it anew in the light of the suggestions. I am informed there is an Act which gives the Government the power to nominate one or more directors for each assisted company. I did not know that. But apart from the power, we can always get the power by bringing in a new Act if this did not exist. I just wondered whether we should make these industries political by appointing a politician on the board. My whole idea was to make these independent politically.

MR. HIGGINS: Will the Honourable Minister explain why there is a Government appointee to Bowaters?

MR. SMALLWOOD: That happened twenty-five years ago. Perhaps at that time it was used as a political football.

MR. HIGGINS: At the time, in fact, it was so regarded.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It was so looked upon, and Coaker seized upon it at the time as a good way to get jobs for his followers. Why I remember when Mr. Clyde Lake was appointed a director the walkin rang with: what a scandalous thing it was, this rotten government finding jobs for supporters, and dipping their hands in the chest again. That was the talk. I wanted to keep these industries away from that, although I was probably wrong.

MR. HOLLETT: It is rather late in the day to try and keep them out of politics now.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I tried to do that from the beginning.

MR. HOLLETT: I think perhaps it would have been better if they entered a little more into politics.

MR. CURTIS: There are none on the A.N.D. Company nor Buchans Mining Company.

MR. HOLLETT: There was a guaranteed loan to Bowaters, and it was under that Act a director was appointed.

MR. CURTIS: No, because that Act, Mr. Chairman, calls for one Government director for every two others. That Act does not apply.

MR. HOLLETT: It is definite—There must be. I rather think the Government should not fear whether it enters politics or not, they should do what is right in the matter. After all you did have Mr. Russell on the Hardwoods one. He was there three months, I believe, I see nothing wrong with that.

MR. SMALLWOOD: There has always been a Government director on that from the beginning. Mr. Russell was the first one and I was the next.

MR. BROWNE: Has it been any good? Mr. Chairman, here is what I would like to get at, the Government originally loaned, I believe, advanced, $920,000 (odd thousand) which they called a loan, and then gave a Government guarantee of something like six hundred thousand. And the company is not able to meet its obligations of $600,000 on which $285,000 had been taken in cash and the balance due to the bank. This procedure is to turn it into a full-fledged loan, and add it to the other.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Exactly. When it was advanced the loan was made, one by us and one by the bank on our guarantee. It was made after we had decided to expand their loan by that amount.

MR. BROWNE: Now is there a mortgage?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, on everything.

MR. BROWNE: Now if between the time the House prorogues and the next session of the House the company comes to the Government and says it would like another half million dollars, the Government has power to guarantee another half million dollars, is that right? Is there any limit put on in regard to Government assistance?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No the only limit is what the Government honestly feel the Legislature will ratify subsequently. The honourable gentleman knows that. That is constitutional practice. That is constitutional precedent.

MR. HOLLETT: Will the Minister tell us what is the interest rate on the bank loans for these?

MR. SMALLWOOD: They pay the interest on the bank loans, we do not. The interest on the bank loan is paid by the borrower and not by the guarantor.

MR. HOLLETT: After you have to make good the cash?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Then it is all over—You see?

MR. BROWNE: You paid the interest though on that six hundred thousand dollars.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It was in two amounts. Part was paid by the Government out of the Treasury and part paid by the bank on the Government's guarantee.

MR. BROWNE: Who is paying the interest on that?

MR. SMALLWOOD: They are—The borrower pays.

MR. BROWNE: On the $285,000, that was cash from the Government, and there was no interest paid on that.

MR. SMALLWOOD: No that was within the period of the moratorium.

MR. BROWNE: I see. Is the company making provision for depreciation in its account.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes.

MR. BROWNE: The normal depreciation?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Normal depreciation.

Carried.

Bonavista Cold Storage Company Limited $1,050,000.

MR. SMALLWOOD: This company is, of course, the company controlled by Mr. Hazen Russell. It consists of a plant at Bonavista, a large plant, and it consists of a plant about to be built or actually commenced construction at Grand Bank. The Government agreed to finance for that company a new plant that they proposed to put up at Grand Bank. The Government agreed to put up $1,050,000 for that purpose. That was the Grand Bank plant $1,050,000. That plant was to be completely modern including a fish meal plant. Now in addition to that $1,050,000 the Government has agreed, and this was a subsequent undertaking, to advance another $600,000 to enable them to replace North Atlantic Fisheries as the operators of certain trawlers and draggers that the Government had previously financed for that latter company. Is that clear?

MR. HOLLETT: Yes.

MR. SMALLWOOD: To put it this way: They took over the loan but at a lower rate, as I will explain in a moment. Under the agreement dated 1 August, 1952, a loan was arranged to Bonavista Cold Storage Limited for a million and fifty thousand dollars through the Bank of Nova Scotia at a rate not to exceed five per cent, to be paid to the bank by the first of October 1954. In other words it was a short term loan on the Government's guarantee.

MR. HOLLETT: That was the $1,050,000?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes.

Now I ought to go on a little further to explain that not all of the $1,050,000 was to be spent on the Grand Bank plant. In connection with the Grand Bank plant the amount to be spent was $700,000. The remaining $350,000 was to be spent on the enlarging and extending and improving of the company's plant at Bonavista where they were to provide additional freezing and additional storage facilities and also cold storage facilities for holding baited gear for long-liner fishermen, as well as to provide facilities at Bonavista for the handling of vessels and for additional wharf space for fishermen and their boats. Now that explains the total of $1,050,000.

Now as to the $600,000: The Committee will note the total is $1,650,000. Under an agreement dated 5 May, 1951, the Government guaranteed a loan of $675,000 to the Northlantic Fisheries Limited at the Bank of Nova Scotia at an interest rate of 3½%. That loan was to cover the estimated cost of purchasing three draggers. Repayment of the loan was to be made in fifteen equal instalments, to commence in the second year after the issue of the loan. Subsequently, a loan which had been reduced to $100,000 was refunded, and under an arrangement with the Bank of Nova Scotia a new loan was guaranteed to Bonavista Cold Storage Company Limited for a like amount of $600,000 to purchase the draggers whose names were "Blue Mist", "Blue Foam" and "Blue Comet." The values of the draggers were set up in the accounts of the company as at $130,000 for the "Blue Comet", $260,000 for the "Blue Mist" and $210,000 for the "Blue Foam", a total of $600,000.

Early in the present year the "Blue Comet" was lost, and the proceeds of the insurance claims are now coming through. The loan will thereby be reduced by $130,000. In other words of the $1,650,000; we have guaranteed at the Bank of Nova Scotia to Bonavista Cold Storage Company Limited and which the bank has advanced to them a loan of $600,000, is for the purposes I have mentioned; (1) to enable them to put in a completely new plant in Grand Bank and to enlarge and extend their plant and facilities at Bonavista, and (2) to acquire these three new draggers.

MR. HOLLETT: May I ask why the Northlantic Fisheries should want to get out from under and get rid of these draggers? Is there any particular reason?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I have my opinion, I would prefer not to give it.

MR. HOLLETT: I must say the situation with regard to the Company is very cloudy to me at the present time but the Honourable the Premier gave a good explanation of it. Now we know where we stand as far as Bonavista Cold Storage is concerned. We wish them all the luck in the world. Can the Premier tell us who are the directors of that firm?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Hazen Russell and his two sons, I believe. I can't say I know of any others. If my colleague, the honourable member for Burin, were here he would probably know who were the directors at Grand Bank. I believe there are some Grand Bank people who have invested, people in the community who are represented by one or even more directors.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the Minister if he knows how much capital stock has been taken up by the shareholders themselves? What is the proportion, in other words, of Government loans and private money?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I am afraid I don't know. But I can find that out.

MR. BROWNE: I am concerned with the assets, and with the value of the assets.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I can get my colleague to phone and get the information immediately.

MR. BROWNE: I take it the loan now to Northlantic Fisheries has been paid off.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is right.

MR. BROWNE: Now in connection with the assets of the company, is the Government satisfied with the mortgage they have?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Completely satisfied.

MR. BROWNE: This loan of $1,650,000 is to be let out on progress report; I take it, and not all loaned at one time?

MR. SMALLWOOD: They have only drawn up to the end of May an amount of $456,000.

MR. HOLLETT: Towards the plant in Grand Bank?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, towards the whole loan except for the draggers, towards the $1,650,000.

MR. HOLLETT: Could the Minister tell us the present state of construction at Grand Bank?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I am afraid I cannot.

HON. P. S. FORSEY (Minister of Health): Mr. Chairman, the site for the plant was furnished last year, and the dredging is completed in the harbour. The actual construction of the plant has been started about three weeks, I would say; the buildings, which I understand are steel buildings, have been purchased, and the equipment for the plant is either here in St. John's or at Grand Bank.

MR. BROWNE: It will go into operation, I suppose, sometime this year?

MR. FORSEY: In September.

MR. BROWNE: In view of the big investment being made in the fisheries it is very important to know what the attitude of the United States is going to be in regard to the petitions from New England Fisheries. I suppose you have no information on that at all?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No.

MR. HOLLETT: In regard to these three draggers, they will operate out of Grand Bank when that plant is completed?

MR. SMALLWOOD: There is no assurance that they won't take an occasional load to Bonavista if in the inter-play of economy that is the thing to do. It is all the one company.

MR. BROWNE: There is just one point: I was informed this morning that the fish are running. I don't know where they are running. But that the fish plants threw away a great quantity of fish yesterday and they were not able to handle it.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Here?

MR. BROWNE: Here in St. John's.

MR. SMALLWOOD: There must have been an awful lot if they could not handle it.

MR. HOLLETT: Before we leave... that—Is there any encouragement the Premier could give relative to the fresh fish industry. There are conflicting reports. I was of the impression that fresh fish filleting was one of our greatest hopes.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I remember that here in the National Convention there was quite a debate on that whole question of frozen fish. We discussed the question of American Tariffs and the like. I remember that I left here one morning, or left my house, and went to the American Consul General and went through all his statistics. I came here to the Chamber that afternoon fortified with a great quantity of statistics and papers and figures which I proceeded to give to the members of the Convention. Now from that moment and before that and ever since that up to now the frozen fish industry has fluctuated between periods of fantastic prosperity and periods of less than fantastic prosperity and even periods of no prosperity. It has fluctuated rather violently, rather jaggedly. It is not an industry that has just moved steadily forward. It has moved forward with great jerks and moved backward sometimes with great jerks. But looking at it over a period of the last ten years it is incredible the amount of progress that has been made. Right now there is a little bit of gloom, although the markets right now are really excellent. It will be up and down. There will be gloomy talk and optimistic talk. But a high-protein food such as fish, if put up palatably will be in demand. Who can doubt it? It is a high-protein food, and when it is put up in palatable form it will sell.

MR. HOLLETT: There is one thing concerns me, and that is the difference in price fishermen receive for this product such as rosefish and haddock. If we look at the prices paid to our fishermen here at Ramea and Burin and the prices paid in North Sydney and Halifax we must all be impressed by the difference in prices paid. It makes all the difference between prosperous and happy fishermen and poverty-stricken fishermen. Now that has been indicated to us over the past winter months when many of our fishermen in these draggers were not able to maintain their families on the prices paid. That was in January of this year when our people were getting 2¼c. and 2½c per pound for codfish while they were getting 4½c. up to 5c. in Sydney and Halifax. Now therein, Sir, lies something which I think the Government ought to interest itself. I see no reason why a strict watch cannot be kept in the interest of the fishermen relevant to the prices being paid in the fishery. I know it may cost more to produce here. I have already said it costs more to produce in Bonavista and LaScie, and the further you go north it costs a little more. On the other hand I don't see how the cost from Ramea and St. John's and Burin is so terribly much more than in Sydney and Halifax. Yet our fishermen starve on 2½c. a pound whereas the fishermen in North Sydney and Halifax are prosperous on 4½ to 5c. per pound. I believe there is some field for investigation by the fisheries department of this newly set-up fisheries committee. I think they should be instructed to make a thorough investigation. We must give the producer a good profit as the overhead is high and the wear and tear terrific. On the other hand we have to look after the fishermen. I would suggest to the Government that one of the first duties this FDA should have is to do something about that, and then they would justify in some small measure these salaries which we are paying them. I am quite sure the Premier will agree with that.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Well, Mr. Chairman, if I were sitting on the opposite side of the House I could indeed too, turn on that. But as I am bound to have some sense of responsibility whilst I am on this side of the House, which the members on the opposite side don't always feel they must have—but on this side I must have dealings with these companies and try to get other companies to come into Newfoundland. We are negotiating now with an American company to establish in the fishing industry here and are negotiating with a tremendously big Canadian Company, a Mainland Company. I don't think it would be very strategic of me to say anything other than that. The more plants the better. Perhaps in the end the competition, perhaps, who knows, will produce the results that my honourable friend and I would like very much to see.

MR. BROWNE: Where does the FDA come in in regard to this loan?

MR. SMALLWOOD: It comes in to administer it. In fact they are in charge of the administration of the loan right now.

Carried.

Gold Sail Leather Goods Limited, $50,000.

MR. SMALLWOOD: This is a thing which happens to be very close to my heart, personally. This is the fancy leather goods plant in Harbour Grace. We have financed them almost entirely. Mr. Schaefer, the man in charge, came out here himself from Germany over three years ago. I told him just straight business-like of that fifty-fifty deal. You put up half and we lend you half, match your investment. He just could not get the necessary permission. He went back to Germany, had his picture published in all the papers telling how he was moving to Newfoundland. The German Government just put its foot down, and would not give him permission to export one dollar, and he did not get it. Subsequently, in Germany, I visited the plant and the famous Offenbach exhibition of which he is the head.

I made up my mind we just had to have that little industry in Newfoundland. I believed in the crafts and skills of these men and in our tannery making the leather, especially our own sealskin leather. It seems a little fantastic to have all our sealskins exported to England and there turned into beautiful leather goods. I determined that had to be done here in Newfoundland. Dorn is doing it. He is making absolutely beautiful leather of all kinds including Newfoundland sealskin leather. The Newfoundland sealskin leather turned into women's handbags is really something to see. Well I wanted that little company to turn that leather into handbags, brief cases, attache cases, wallets and purses and all kinds of fancy leather goods. These attracted enormous attention at the Trade Fair in Toronto, I would say candidly that in North America today, the United States of America and the Mainland of Canada, the one firm turning out the most beautiful quality of leather goods is this little plant at Harbour Grace. Any of the honourable gentlemen opposite who wish to go in and see them—that reminds me of what I said here in this Chamber a short time ago: The members of the Opposition ought to go in and see these plants, visit them and see what they are doing. That was published in the newspapers. Mr. MacLellan, head of the Bus Company which recently put the new bus in operation for the CNR, telephoned me and extended his invitation to all members of the House; if they wanted to go around the bay and visit all those plants, he would put his bus at their disposal.

MR. HIGGINS: Who will feed us?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Perhaps we will feed ourselves. But we would see Koch Shoes and Leather Goods. They have a beautiful cafeteria where they eat their own meals. The whole staff eats there. I am sure we would get a lunch there.

MR. HIGGINS: That sounds enticing.

MR. HOLLETT: The total amount on this particular item then, I believe, is $100,000.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes.

MR. HOLLETT: I believe the Minister said they found it impossible to get any money out?

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is right. Perhaps because Mr. Schaefer was too prominent a man. He is the President of the Leather Goods Manufacturers of Germany. He is the President of the Fair and Exhibition. He is the advisor for the Leather Goods Association of Germany. He is a very prominent man.

MR. CURTIS: There was one other reason, which the Honourable the Premier forgot to mention. If he had brought any German money he would have to return all his profits to Germany. Of course we wanted him to use his profits here in expansion. We thought it would be much better to have the money kept in this country.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, while on that point, did any of them bring out any German money?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Not a cent.

MR. HOLLETT: Of course we can’t investigate that here—I don’t know if I ought to say the thing in my mind now. I would have to consider, I think, pretty seriously, but—is this the same company that made Joseph’s coat?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, not even the same town.

MR. HOLLETT: Were they in competition?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, one makes clothing, and the other makes leather goods.

MR. HOLLETT: They could make clothing?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, they never made leather clothing.

MR. HOLLETT: I see—A hundred thousand dollars now we have put out on that, a small amount relatively.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the Minister where this is located and how many people are employed?

MR. SMALLWOOD: It is located in what was the big fish building of Crosbie and Company at Harbour Grace, on the property that was once the shipyard. The best industrial property on the East Coast of Newfoundland, without any doubt. It has a wharf with 32 ft. of water at the head at low tide, several acres of land, a railway siding of its own, high transmission lines pass immediately by it, the highroad passes immediately in front. It has a very large staff house, which the Germans have remodelled so that it is absolutely beautiful on the inside. They have taken away the big board fence running along in front and are putting flowers in there now. The other building runs at right angles down at the back, the large fish stores that have been rebuilt completely. That is the home of the Gold Sail, here it is called Canadian Leather Goods, Limited. The name had to be changed, by the way, and I don't see how we can leave in that name, as the name is now "Gold Sail." There was a Canadian Leather Goods Company already registered in Canada; and they had to change the name. They employ at the moment, I think, about twenty people. They began with one person, one girl, a Harbour Grace girl. They are building it up. They have to train them. It is a very skilled trade this fancy leather goods, principally a handicraft. They have now up to twenty. Incidentally Koch Shoes are now up to eighty. I was in there on Sunday and went through it. The footwear they are making there is as good as Hart ever made. It is beautiful.

MR. HIGGINS: They don't do custom work, do they?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, but I dare say they would.

MR. HIGGINS: I can't get a pair of shoes to fit me.

MR. BROWNE: Did the Government buy this premises from Crosbie?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes.

MR. BROWNE: How much did the Government pay for it?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Actually the transaction is not consummated—there. I would be more inclined to say if there were no reporters here. It is a contra-account between the Department of Finance and the company. It is the result of a contra-account.

MR. HIGGINS: You mean the Gold Sail?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, Crosbie and Company and the Department of Finance, under which we will acquire this property. I don't think the deal is actually completed yet. I don't think the purchase or exchange of contra-account has been consummated as yet. But in the course of a very short time I believe the actual details of the purchase of the property will have been completed. Certainly by the time the House meets again we will be able to table more details on that.

MR. BROWNE: Did the Government sum up the value of the property?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, it did.

MR. BROWNE: Now then the Government acquired that for a certain period. But is the Government renting this to these companies?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No selling it to two companies, to Koch Shoes so much.

MR. BROWNE: The same premises?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Not the same. so much to Gold Sail, so much to Koch, the rest we hold for someone else.

MR. BROWNE: Have you sold to Koch already?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes.

MR. BROWNE: How much?
MR. SMALLWOOD: About a third.

MR. BROWNE: Do you know the price?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I don't remember exactly.

MR. BROWNE: I am sure the Government did not make a profit.

MR. SMALLWOOD: We did not want to make it.

MR. HOLLETT: The price paid the Government for this property, is that included in that advance of $100,000, or is that something special? The money which the Government will have to pay for the premises, is that part of this advance of $100,000 to this firm?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No.

MR. HOLLETT: That is over and above?

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is apart from it.

MR. HOLLETT: You will then sell it to Koch Shoes and Gold Seal?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, that is right, and to any others who come along with any project we approve of we can sell the remainder.

MR. BROWNE: It is not easy in business to build up. I know they have some goods on exhibition down here at the hotel. Is the Minister in a position to say whether any contacts have been made outside of Newfoundland?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, the vast bulk of the stuff will be sold across Canada, Morgan's, Ogilvie's, Hudson Bay Company and Birks (Fancy Leather). They are in competition with everyone and they can compete.

MR. BROWNE: How do they stand, or is it too early yet?

MR. SMALLWOOD: It is too early yet. They only started this winter, two or three months ago.

MR. FORSEY: Mr. Chairman, apropos of the question relevant to the Bonavista Cold Storage; Mr. Russell was not in town. I was speaking to his son. They have their original contingent liability at the bank paid off, and also liquidated the liability, the insurance on one dragger which was lost. They have some $600,000 in capital in Bonavista Cold Storage. The directors are: Mr. H. A. Russell, Mr. Paul Russell, Mr. Frank Peck, Senator Gordon Bradley, Mr. Gordon Elliott, Mr. R. Russell, Mr. R. A. Russell, Mr. W. M. Buffet—

MR. CHAIRMAN: I think I might remind the Committee of the time.

Item carried.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Chairman, I move the Committee rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again presently.

On motion report received. Committee ordered to sit again presently.

MR. SPEAKER: It being now 1:00 o'clock I do now leave the Chair until 3:00 of the clock this afternoon.

THURSDAY, June 17, 1954.

AFTERNOON SESSION

The House resumed at 3:00 of the clock.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, might I ask the Honourable the Premier if he is tabling certain documents which he promised to table this morning?
MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes.

MR. HOLLETT: Does that include these at the Finance Department? The reason I ask is because a most disparaging remark, this time regarding myself, has come out of Corner Brook.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I stood with a view to writing this very document, and gave way to my honourable friend. As I understand it the document came in from the resident engineer, in duplicate, one set to the Deputy Minister of Economic Development, Mr. Short, and the other went to the Department of Finance. What I have now tabled. These received at the Department of Economic Development I would hesitate to table. These went to the Department of Finance. They are identical, I understand. I believe, the Deputy Minister tells me they are identical to the best of his knowledge. So that there would not be much point in tabling the complete set. Now if there is anything the honourable gentleman wants in these files he has only to ask, although that is all I have got. He has only to ask, or he has only to go to the Department of Finance and/or the Auditor General and he could get anything else not here which is in either of these Departments.

Mr. Speaker, could we go into Committee of the Whole on Resolutions on Financial Assistance to be rendered to Certain Industries?

MR. SPEAKER: Leave was given earlier that this Committee sit again, at a later hour this day. I shall now leave the Chair.

Committee of the Whole on Resolutions:

MR. SMALLWOOD: I may say, Mr. Chairman, Mr. Marshall has made all his plans to fly today to Ottawa. I believe he is going at five or six o'clock. I don't know what time this afternoon he has to leave and go home and pick up his bags and go on to the airport. He will remain here, I understand, until it is absolutely necessary for him to leave to catch his flight.

I think we have come to Fishery Products Limited: $8,187,000.

Mr. Chairman, this large amount of $8,187,000 is all of it to enable the firm of Fishery Products Limited of which, as the Committee knows, Mr. Arthur H. Monroe is the active head, to greatly expand in this Province. In fact this very large sum of money represents quite an important part of the Government's fishery development programme for this year, and last year, and this coming year.

Under an agreement dated 16 July 1953 it was agreed to make a direct loan to the company of $1,687,000. Of that $937,000 was paid when the agreement was signed. The balance of $750,000 was committed to be paid in monthly instalments of $50,000 continuing—The loan of $937,000 is payable on the first day of December, 1973. During its currency it is to pay 3½% interest per annum. The $750,000 is repayable on or before the 31 December 1978 and bears interest at the rate of 3½% per annum. The balance of the instalments to be paid to the company monthly under the later agreement is $500,000, i.e. of the $750,000, of which, as my honourable friend, the Leader of the Opposition said, I believe correctly, a certain amount has so far been paid.

MR. BROWNE: Eleven months, about $550,000.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Now in addition to that there was an agreement dated June 1, 1954, under which an additional loan of $1,500,000 is to be advanced to the company. This bears interest of 4% per annum, payable annually. The principal sum is to fall due for repayment at the end of 22½ years. Now, Sir, this large sum of $3,187,000 is lent to this company to enable them to proceed with fishery development in the fishery plant at Greenspond, St. Anthony, Long Harbour, Trepassey, Burin, Change Islands, Joe Batts Arm, Catalina, Bay de Verde, Twillingate. Virtually all of these plants are recommended or are being recommended or are to be recommended to engage in the processing of block frozen fillets, block frozen fish. But the loan in respect to Trepassey is to enable the company to increase its facilities in Trepassey to take care of the block frozen, exclusive of block frozen fish that will be provided in these plants around the Island. The block frozen fish will be moved to the plant at Trepassey and from there shipped to market. But Trepassey is the central plant of this greatly ramified system of fish plants scattered around the Coast of Newfoundland. In the central plant at Trepassey the hope is, and the plan is, to breed the fish fingers, fish sticks, and to cook them. But the materialization of that hope and plan depends, of course, upon the outcome of the recent negotiations and discussions and representations in the United States.

MR. BROWNE: It does not depend only on that, because the American fish dealers themselves seem to object. Even those who are anxious to get the fish don't want us to cook them.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is quite so, Mr. Chairman, this is pretty well the story of the amount for which we seek sanction now for advances to Fishery Products Limited.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, that is a tremendous amount of money, and I suppose there is no precedent for it in any other Province in the Dominion, of a Provincial Government lending a company such a large amount of money as that at such a low rate of interest. The Government seems to be going into the business and taking the risks without getting any share of the profits.

Now I would like to know, if the Minister would tell me, what is the capitalization of this company or what it was before they received this first loan. Could he tell me that?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I speak from memory, Mr. Chairman, I think it was of the order of four million dollars.

MR. BROWNE: Do you know how much of that is paid up?

MR. SMALLWOOD: All of it.

MR. BROWNE: You don't know the liability?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Not at the moment. I have the balance sheets of the company running back for seven, eight or nine years.

MR. BROWNE: I understand that is a company affiliated with another company in the United States with headquarters in Cleveland, which is controlled by Mr. Monroe as well—Is that correct?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Monroe has in Cleveland a central sales office from which he operates to market his products throughout the midwest and southern west of the United States, and indeed, other parts of the United States. It is a sales company. In addition to that the laboratories there working by the way of experiments and testing new ways, including fish fingers and fish sticks. But not including that, the property here is worth around four million dollars. It is probably one of the biggest fishing companies in the world, in the whole world. In the United States, there are one or two bigger; B.C. Packers in British Columbia, would be as big as Fishery Products. But they are an immense concern. They are really one of the biggest fishing companies of the whole world. After all they have a fleet of ten draggers. In addition to that they have a fleet of three if not four refrigerated boats, carriers. Mr. Monroe or his company is one of the biggest ship-owners of the world. Not the biggest nor anything like it, but one of the biggest. They have a huge plant at Burin. My honourable friend the Leader of the Opposition is well aware of the tremendous plant they have at Burin. Then in addition they have these plants up the coast, four plants up the coast, and in addition they have all these others scattered around throughout the northeast coast and on the coast of Labrador. It is astonishing what a ramified, widespread concern this company is. To me, if ever anything out of the way happens to Mr. Monroe in the next five, eight or ten years, it will be a terrible calamity to Newfoundland, and I may say a calamity to the Government, because the Government have gone in behind him financially, as the Committee can see, to a very large extent. We look to Mr. Monroe with his drive and energy and the whole staff he has built up, which is quite an organization. He brings men in from all points of the compass, Sweden, Norway, Germany, Holland, wherever he can find a good fishery technologist. He gets them and he has built up quite a fisheries organization. It is through him that the Government are hoping to see quite a bit of fishery development taking place. Quite frankly, Mr. Chairman, we don't apologize for the largeness of this amount. If anything we would apologize, if we felt like apologizing, for the smallness. We are very pleased Newfoundland has an Arthur Monroe. We are sorry Newfoundland has not more Arthur Monroes.

MR. BROWNE: He is the exception to the fish merchants?

MR. SMALLWOOD: There are a number of exceptions. He is not the only one.

MR. BROWNE: But the chief exception.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, the chief exception.

MR. BROWNE: Now the Premier has told us how much depends on Mr. Monroe, and if anything happened to Mr. Monroe the Government might suffer. I wonder what security or protection the Government have in case anything should happen. It is customary in many businesses to have a man like that, on whose life and health depends the success of the undertaking, insured. I don't know whether the Government has given any consideration to that. It seems to me so much depends on Mr. Monroe it might be advisable to have his life insured.

MR. SMALLWOOD: In favour of the Government?

MR. BROWNE: The other thing
I wish to mention is in regard to the time. This money has been given, all this money has been loaned or is being loaned since July 15, 1953. In other words in this last period of less than a year, three million dollars has been loaned to the company. Now when the Premier replies again, I wonder if he would tell me if the company themselves are putting any extra capital into these new plants. Or are these new plants, all of them, being entirely financed by funds furnished by the Government? Then I would like to know what security the Government are going to get for the money put into this.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The company, from the date it began operations, has never declared a dividend. It has never taken any profits out of the business. Every dollar they have ever made has gone promptly back into the business for expansion. That is why not too many years ago they began small and built themselves up without any Government loans to be a very big fishing company. It was always because they reinvested in themselves, in their own expansion, the profits they made instead of accumulating surpluses. Consequently they have always been short of working capital, always, from the moment they were formed to this very moment. So much so that when it came to this quite extra-ordinary expansion of the past two years they were entirely unable to finance it because every dollar they have ever made then existed in the form of ships and factories and plants and fishing property, fishing assets. Therefore all of their expansions during the last two years have been financed by the Government through loans, all of it, I think, without exception. I think, without the exception of a single dollar all of it has been financed by Government loans. I anticipate that much more of it will be financed over and above this $8,187,000. The only reasonable limit or limits that we would wish to impose or that we see any necessity to impose upon advances to this company for fishery development will be the limitations that would be dictated to us by market conditions and prospects in the world, especially in the United States, and by the success Mr. Monroe would have in building up a competent staff to replace himself some day. In other words if he can train young men of energy and native ability such as Cam Eaton, if he can continue to drill and train men, bright intelligent young Newfoundlanders, clean-cut, energetic, ambitious, dynamic, if he can continue to gather men like that about him, train them in his business, he can build up one of the world's great fishery companies in Newfoundland. In that Newfoundland, of course, will benefit, the locality of it will benefit, the fishermen will benefit, Newfoundlanders generally will benefit.

Now as for security: Our security is mortgages. We take a mortgage on every asset these loans create. We think we are pretty well covered. We think we are pretty well secure on these loans.

MR. FOGWILL: Mr. Chairman, the Premier has indicated to the Committee that this company in its operations has been making a profit. I wonder could the Premier indicate to the Committee in any way, or express an opinion, as to the amount of profit which they have been making and plowing back into the business, so that the Committee would be aware of it, and the amount of success or otherwise which they have had through t heir operations in the past few years?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I would say that is an ingeniously worded question. I think on reflection the honourable gentleman does not expect me to indicate to the Committee the nat­ eur of the profits the company made. The Government knows be­ because we have the balance sh eets. Th e private members of this side of the House do not know, but the members of the Cabinet do. We have reviewed the balance sheets of the company, and we know just as their bank manager knows, but private members do not know, on either side of the House and the public do not know.
And I flatly don’t think I should,
certainly not without asking permission of the company. I doubt that they would give that. I doubt that they would want to do that. I might say the profits they made were much greater during the late war than they were since. I think that was proba­ ibly true of all the frozen fish companies during the war. As is well known, they operated on behalf of the British Government. Every pound produced was produced for the British Government, and was almost like Government to Government, fixed guaranteed prices. I think the profits were much more substantial then than they have been since.

MR. FOGWILL: Well, Mr. Chairman, I wonder if the Premier would go as far as to tell us in the Commmittee if in the opinion of the Government the profits are substantial, sufficiently substantial as to assure,
Sir, that we really have a sound investment?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I am afraid
I could not go that far. I remember that I recently read a balance sheet, and I would have to remember earlier balance sheets to stack up against this latter one. In the postwar period, if we just forget the war period, I could not say their profits have been of an order to make us feel absolutely cock-sure, cockey about this three point eighteen million dol­ ars. No, to be quite candid and honest about it it may boil down to this, the Government are taking a chance on backing this energetic and progressive Newfoundland firm in its programme of fishery expansion.

MR. FOGWILL: Mr. Chairman, that being so I wish to assure the Government as far as the investment of the Government in this fishery production is concerned that I wish it success. But it is very difficult for the Opposition to really express an opinion on it without having information which is sought. But I hope there is not too much of, we will say, a gamble or of taking a chance in this.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman,
I am not quite sure whether my colleague asked or whether the Premier has any idea as to really how much the Fishery Products has plowed back into the industry. I remember the Premier said they had not declared any dividends for some time but that they plowed back every cent into the industry. Would the Premier wish to say to what extent money has been plowed back into the industry by this Fishery Products Limited?

MR. SMALLWOOD: The honourable gentleman is now asking what profits have been made, as I said they were all plowed back. The only fresh capital the company got was its profits. I cannot conscientiously say what the profits were, I cannot do that.

MR. HOLLETT: Assuming they had profits and plowed them back into the industry; what I am trying to get at is, what right has any company to plow back into the industry any profits or excess profits which they may have had when the fishermen who are fishing from day to day on the Grand Banks, jeopardizing their lives, working day and night, when they cannot be paid a reasonable wage but a wage bordering on starvation. I referred this morning to 2½c. or 2¼c. paid here in comparison to 4c. and 5c. paid in Halifax and in North Sydney. I maintain if it were possible for Fishery Products to plow back profits into the industry they might have been well advised if they paid their fishermen a little more and plowed less back into the industry; and then come to the Government and look for a loan. I say yes, give them all they want, if they are going to pay the fishermen a living wage. But they are not doing that now. None of the fresh fish fishermen are getting enough to live on properly. I say that because it has been told me by proper authorities. I know probably they would be much better off than people who prosecute the salt cod fishery but they are not living well enough on 2½c. a pound for their fish. So I feel if Fishery Products are going to continue in this policy of plowing back into the industry every last dollar they get, and call it a profit, as a matter of fact, I say, since the Government have such interest, if there are any profits at all they should be plowed back to the fishermen and not into the fishery. That is the point I want to raise.

Now I take it that $3,187,000 is the full amount that Fishery Products are indebted to us at the present time or is it not five millions including all the details at the present time?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I am unable to state at the moment.

MR. HOLLETT: The way I read it, since this Government came into power: The loan of $937,000 has to be paid back in 1974. $750,000 will not be paid back until Dec. 1978. Some of us won't be here, at least not on this side of the House, then. In addition to that there was a guaranteed loan of $110,000 on 2 February this year, $44,000 was owed on that, There was another guaranteed loan of $850,000 and on that on 28 February this year Fishery Products Limited owed $279,500. Then there was another guaranteed loan of $350,000, and they owe that fully. Now am I to add the $3,187,000 to that? If so then we get the full amount of the loan as over five million. Before we talk further I would like to know approximately the amount which they owe us. Possibly we will get that when the Deputy Minister comes back.

While I am waiting for that, Sir, there was one statement the Honourable the Premier made just now, in good faith I have no doubt, about Mr. Monroe being a sort of a genius, an exception to the rule amongst merchants, he and a few others. We were told of his ability to turn out men in the industry, and he spoke of Mr. Eaton. Now I would like to inform the House that Mr. Eaton was connected with the salt fisheries long before Mr. Monroe had him in his employee. I am reliably informed that when Mr. Monroe discovered Mr. Eaton, he had what it takes in the way of business ability. I was told he more or less robbed the Salt Fish Association of Mr. Eaton and gathered him unto himself and put him in charge up in his office here in St. John's. Not only did Mr. Monroe do this but he was smart enough to endeavour to take from the fish trades Association their present secretary, Mr. Harvey, so I am informed on reliable authority. So I would suggest that Mr. Monroe is almost a dangerous sort of person around if he is going to take all the men from other fish merchants and allocate them to himself, and then perhaps on account of that be able to come to the Government and get loans of the order of this one now being discussed. I maintain, Sir, very few men are of the type that the Honourable the Premier speaks of. We are more or less all alike. Some of us have a little more aptitude for one thing than another. For instance the Honourable the Premier has an aptitude for politics. I don’t suppose there has been a slicker—No, I won’t say slicker in the derogatory sense—I should say smarter politician in this country than the Honourable the Premier. He has an aptitude for that. But I hesitate to say that there have not been smarter men as far as dollars and cents and financial affairs are concerned, although he appears to have some ability in regard to that. As a matter of fact we were blessed, I suppose, to have had him with us the last five years.

MR. CHAIRMAN: A little off the subject, I believe.

MR. HOLLETT: This is not a eulogy.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Maybe the Honourable Leader of the Opposition is not feeling well—he does not sound like himself.

MR. HOLLETT: I am saying no particular man has an excess of brains. As I pointed out, if Mr. Monroe more or less, I say, steals almost from the Salt Codfishery Association and from the Fresh Fish Trades Association and gets these men, then naturally he is smart enough to come here and get these loans from this Government and add them up until he finally has gotten an awful lot of money from the Government. I would say it is not so much a Fishery Products industry as it is a Newfoundland Government industry. Now I wonder if we could have the exact amount, or the approximate amount owed by way of loans, cash loans and guaranteed loans to Fishery Products?

MR. SMALLWOOD: If the honourable gentleman will allow me I will bring that later on today.

HON. W. J. KEOUGH (Minister of Fisheries and Co-operatives): Pardon me, Mr. Chairman, I think I can help there. I have some figures here I gave to the House during the debate on the estimates for the Fisheries Development Authority. The figures that I have from them was that there has been loaned or will have been loaned to Fishery Products after this final amount provided in the budget this year, there will have been loaned to Fishery Products Limited altogether $3,676,000 of which there has been repayments in respect of $100,000 and $350,000 and in respect of another loan, altogether roughly $57,266 repaid. Subtract that and you get the amount.

MR. BROWNE: That does not seem to cover the loans that we know of. The Minister speaks of a $850,000 loan and a $110,000 loan, that is $960,000 on which $57,000 has been paid. That leaves $403,000. What about the $37,000 loan in existence or is that still in existence?

MR. KEOUGH: That is still in existence.
MR. SMALLWOOD: One was absorbed into another, Trepassey Fisheries.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, in that $8,187,000, we now find the amount of $1,687,000.

MR. KEOUGH: Yes.

MR. HOLLETT: Also the amount of $1,500,000?

MR. KEOUGH: Yes.

MR. HOLLETT: I see.

MR. FOGWILL: All cash?

MR. KEOUGH: Will be.

MR. HOLLETT: Now the guaranteed $44,000, that is still owing I take it.

MR. KEOUGH: That is the balance of the $110,000: That $44,000 is still outstanding.

MR. HOLLETT: $350,000 as of the 2nd of February, is that in addition to these large amounts of $1,500,000 and $1,687,000. Anyway if the Honourable the Premier is going to present the figures I don't see why we should rack our brains about it.

In regard to the whole idea of the fishery, Mr. Chairman, we should do nothing which would in any way hamper the Government or Fishery Products or any other fishery concern if they are trying to develop the fishery. But I would want to impress on all the people getting loans for the fishery that a lot depends upon how well the men who work in that industry live in this civilization which was talked about the other day, this new civilization. Incidentally would the Premier tell me how many people directly get employment from the operations of Fishery Products Limited here in Newfoundland?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, not at the moment, I cannot, but I have got all that information.

MR. HOLLETT: It seems to me it would be very helpful if we had that.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Roughly half of all in the whole Province in the frozen fish industry in Newfoundland.

MR. HOLLETT: They have fifty per cent?

MR. SMALLWOOD: And possibly a bit over.

MR. HOLLETT: Over fifty per cent of all the people employed in the fresh fish industry in Newfoundland are employed by Fishery Products Limited?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes. I will bring in the additional information.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I asked a question there and was not sure the Premier answered it: Have we got mortgages?

MR. SMALLWOOD: To cover all our advances, yes, chattel mortgages, fixed mortgages.

MR. BROWNE: He is going into new places like Long Harbour and Trepassey. As each function occurs is there a mortgage to cover that?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, each individual one.

MR. BROWNE: Are you sure?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, I am sure, on all the new places.

MR. BROWNE: Any mortgage on the plant at Burin?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, on the new plant, on the things which the loans create.
MR. BROWNE: Yes, but that is a 100% risk we are taking there?

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is right. If we take mortgages on their former plant we cripple all their hopes of ever being carried by the bank, we upset their bond position.

MR. BROWNE: Have they yet other loans besides?

MR. SMALLWOOD: They have bonds.

MR. BROWNE: What type bonds, do you know?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I don't know.

MR. BROWNE: Any loans from the Federal through the industrial banks anywhere?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No.

MR. BROWNE: What sort of bonds?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Private bonds.

MR. CURTIS: Mortgages issued through industry, I think for about four hundred thousand.

MR. BROWNE: That is a first mortgage. I take it, on their plant. In other words we lend them, say, $350,000 and they put a plant in Trepassey for instance, and we take a mortgage on a 100% financing.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It is either that or not getting it at all or doing it ourselves. The choice is plain enough. Let us do without fishery development or do it ourselves as a socialistic Government or lend the money to private enterprise to do it in that way.

MR. BROWNE: Well you did all this without the Fisheries Development Authority, before that authority was organized. This has been under consideration, I suppose, for some time?

MR. SMALLWOOD: The latter parts have emanated from the fisheries development scheme. All the latter ones, one half million to two millions, are projects that have reached us via the FDA.

MR. BROWNE: The Government is taking a chance with Mr. Monroe.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is right.

MR. CURTIS: You also have the guarantee of the company to repay plus the specific items created by our investment. It is not a hundred percent security. I understand the company has a little over two million dollars.

MR. BROWNE: Well I am glad to hear an authoritative source on that. The Premier a few minutes ago said four millions.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Not in capital, in assets. The honourable gentleman asked me if they had that much shares. I said, no, not shares, assets.

MR. BROWNE: Has the Government seen to it that all this property is fully insured?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes the FDA does that.

MR. BROWNE: Any mortgage on any of the ships?

MR. SMALLWOOD: All mortgaged, all we have financed.

MR. BROWNE: How many?

MR. SMALLWOOD: About three, I believe. They lost one fully covered by insurance and we allowed them to spend the same money to replace that ship.
MR. BROWNE: I noticed by the newspaper this morning—Incidentally in Ottawa the fishery officials believe that General Eisenhower is likely to give a favourable reply to the companies protesting. I noticed also that several of the Gloucester firms, or at least one of them, has sold its draggers to people in Halifax or Lunenburg as they are leaving the business—So they are really dependent on Canadian fish.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Before the item is carried may I make just one point, a declaration of faith. The investment in fishery development is well protected provided it is invested in good companies, good concerns. If it is not safe then what is safe in Newfoundland? If we cannot gamble on fishery development had we not better in Newfoundland just fold up and all hands emigrate? If we cannot build an economy on developed industry, Sir, there is nothing else worth backing. I am sure that is the feeling of the Opposition as it is of all Newfoundlanders. We have got to gamble. We have got to take a chance. The whole fishery from the beginning of Newfoundland’s history has been a gigantic gamble. The fishermen gambled on the weather, on the markets, gambled with the very elements. It is all a gamble, the whole fishing industry, the whole fishery economy has been a gigantic gamble. Well the Government said, either Newfoundland is going ahead or she is not—she is or she is not. She is if there is fishery development, and she goes back if there is not. Because what in God’s name are fifty, sixty, seventy, one hundred and fifty thousand people going to do in Newfoundland if there is not employment in the fishery for them? What are they going to do? They are going to get out. That is all there is for them. You can create this, that and the other thing which will absorb some of the growing population but gamble, by all means gamble.

The total amount, by the way, is $3,859,000—four million—It is not exactly four millions, it is one hundred and fifty thousand less than four millions.

MR. HOLLETT: The Honourable the Premier speaks of gambling—Yes, we know that the fishery is a gamble in one sense of the word, all life is a gamble as far as that is concerned. But nobody agrees with dealing the joker to the same individual continuously, and it is continuously here in this instance. Four million dollars has been loaned to Fishery Products. Now there are, I have no doubt, other fish firms, fish merchants, who are also interested not only in their own welfare but are interested in the fishermen amongst whom they live.

MR. CURTIS: We have never turned down one.

MR. HOLLETT: You have never turned down one—I suppose the fault is they don’t ask for enough.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Or not enough of them come and ask, that is right.

MR. HOLLETT: That is very strange. I was talking to a man only two days ago. He endeavoured to get a loan of $40,000 in connection with fisheries, to increase his potentials. He was turned down. And I know various other people from the fisheries who were loaned money and I know those who tried to get loans and they did not get them. They were turned down. I know it is a gamble but the point is, I hope you are gambling in the right direction. I have pointed out the prices going to the fishermen, 2¼¢ to 2½¢ for codfish whereas in Nova Scotia, Halifax and Sydney they get 4¢ and 5¢ a pound. Now I say, instead of Fishery Products plowing all their profits, and nobody tells us what the profits were, into the industry and building and building and building it might be a little wiser if they plowed some of them back to the fishermen who catch the fish. I am reminded of a report in here not many years ago, I believe on fishery prices and I believe it was Fishery Products who refused and did not pay the extra dollar a quintal to salt fish fishermen on the northeast coast but it was paid by all the other merchants who dealt in salt fish. That Fishery Products Limited who had lots of money said; no, we are not going to pay it. I want to know, if we are going to gamble and deal the joker out, let somebody else see the joker occasionally. Let it not all go into one hand.

I am entirely behind loaning money to re-establish the fishery. But let us be reasonable. Let us not dish out this money in such a way that it will be impossible for Fishery Products’ competitors to operate. That is the main thing, I think.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I just want to make one other observation in regard to the Premier’s statement, a very important statement he made when he said we have to gamble, the fisheries being a gigantic gamble, and either Newfoundland goes ahead or she does not go ahead, and where are many, many going to go if they have to get our. Now it does not seem to me to be sound practice for a Government to be gambling, and gambling such huge amounts of money. It is not the Government’s money. It is the money of this country. I don’t think the people of the country, if they realize what is going on, want to see it gambled. It seems to me that is what they are doing at the present moment. They are taking quite a chance. This money is paid out, invested, before the decisions come from the American Government as to what they are going to do about the fishery. If their decision is favourable then it is all right and we stand a good chance until something else turns up. But there are a good many ups and downs, and nobody knows that better than Mr. Monroe, in this business. From a distance I have watched Mr. Monroe carry on for many years, and his father before him. His father told me how he worked up from a thousand to half a million dollars, then Mr. Arthur Monroe seemed to be losing even his father’s gain. Now he seems to be in a pretty safe position and can come to the Government and get a loan up to four million dollars, which only Governments or the biggest companies in the world can get. This Government is certainly showing great faith in Mr. Monroe, and I hope it will be well placed. But I don’t like to hear the Premier talking about gambling with the funds of this country. I think we have to get as much security as we can, and we have to be sure the Government is going to get back this money again. If there is a gambling element in it the odds should be in our favour that it is going to be returned to us and not the fifty-fifty chance we are told about.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Chairman, I would like the Honourable gentleman to tell me, if he is capable of doing it, and if he is not I would like his Leader to tell me, if he is capable, and if neither one is capable
I would like a challenge to go out all over the Island of Newfoundland for someone to come and tell me or send me a letter or telegram if he can’t come, to take up the telephone, but by whatever means he might adopt, even to sending a carrier pigeon, I would like somebody to convey to me this piece of information: which I have not got at this moment, I lack; how do you develop the fisheries of Newfoundland without gambling?

MR. BROWNE: Do you want me to answer?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, in fact we do—How can that be done? It never was done since Newfoundland began. It never has been done up to this moment. They could never develop the fisheries without gambling. The merchants had to gamble, the fishermen had to gamble. The fishermen gambled their lives. They gambled their boats every day they went out. They gambled their fishing gear, don’t they? Look how often their fishing gear and traps are swept away, wrecked, lost. Their salmon traps, the salmon may not come, the salmon nets may be swept away. The results of hard labour may be swept away in a night. Is that not gambling? A fisherman gambles when he goes in debt for gas and oil, for gear, for rubber boots, for oilskins. He goes in debt on his company’s account. He goes in debt on his personal account. Before he catches a codfish he has gone in debt, every fisherman in Newfoundland. The merchants go in debt to the bigger merchants, and the bigger merchants go in debt to the banks. That is the pattern. There has never been any other pattern in our fishery from the dawn of our history.

MR. HOLLETT: That is true of everything.

MR. SMALLWOOD: But it is particularly and more especially true of our fisheries. It is also true of agriculture but not nearly so true as it is of our fisheries. It is like the story: A fishermen was asked—Which would you rather be in an airplane accident or blown up with dynamite? He said he would rather be in an airplane accident. When asked why he answered: “Well, in an airplane accident there you are but in a dynamite accident where are you?”

So it is in fisheries: In agriculture you are on the land. You are reasonably safe. Oh, a man could fall in a hole and break his leg, yes. But out on the ocean there is not only the gamble of getting fish or not but there is the gamble of taking your life in your hands virtually every day.

I would like the Honourable Gentleman to tell me how to get fishery development without gambling.

MR. BROWNE: As the Honourable Leader of the Opposition said, there is a gamble in everything. We don’t know but the chandelier will fall down on the Attorney General’s head as he walks along there. There is always a certain risk. The Queen while in Montreal stood in front of the St. Mary’s Memorial Hospital then stepped into a car. As she did so a big piece of cornice stone fell from six stories up to where she had been standing two or three seconds before. I do wish to point out there is such a thing as an element of risk and such a thing as a gamble, something which we cannot afford. Now the Premier has challenged the whole country to tell him some way or other of carrying on this business.

MR. SMALLWOOD: No I did not.

MR. BROWNE: That is what it
1936 HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY PROCEEDINGS

amounted to. He read the fisheries report and spent five days illustrating, but seemed to overlook or at least, did not stress what benefit it was going to be to Newfoundland if Mr. Arthur Monroe controlled the whole fishery 95% or 100%. Where are the fishermen then? The Honourable Leader of the Opposition pointed out now they get much less for their fish than Nova Scotia. I would say they get probably much less than in Quebec.

One of the reasons the fisheries are still not organized, and I think which the Fishery Development Committee remarked upon, and the previous Fishery Committee set up under Judge Kent, was the Development of Cooperatives. As I said before, the Minister of Fisheries and Co-operatives was asleep in that regard, and the Government is asleep today. What is it doing to set up Co-operatives?

MR. SMALLWOOD: We are a little bit away now from this loan.

MR. BROWNE: The Honourable Premier asked for a challenge—Is not this problem fundamental? Did not the Premier tell us that all down through the ages the fisheries have been a problem, a gamble always. They received assistance from the Government and still receive assistance from the Government. You are giving four million dollars to Fishery Products Limited. You are gambling at less than you can borrow. You are losing 1½% on that loan. The Premier is inconsistent when he speaks like that. There was no one ever heard criticizing the merchants as much as he did. Yet he is putting four million dollars in the hands of the biggest of them. Now, Sir, without elaborating, because I know it is a little beside the point, but the chief thing is that any Government should get it in its head, that it is the fishermen we want to build up in this country. We can only do that by doing it as they do in Nova Scotia. The pattern followed in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick and Quebec is to build up the Co-operative movement and help to make the fishermen prosperous. There is a picture in the Canadian Fisheries Annual of an exhibit of fish by the United Fishermen of Gaspe Bay and Montreal. That is what they are doing down there. I know it is not as big there as in Newfoundland. But I said from the moment that the Fishery Federation was formed it would never do any good unless it copied the ideas of Co-operative teaching and the people went into it co-operatively. Now there is the answer to the Premier's question as to how to get away from gambling; and to reduce gambling to the lowest level we have to get the fishermen in charge.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I happened to be the one who invited Monsignor Coady down here.

MR. BROWNE: On my recommendation made in the House of Commons February 6, 1951. Further than that he could have been brought down here at the expense of the Federal Government and the Co-operative movement could have been assisted with finances from the Federal Government and would have made more progress if the recommendations I made had been accepted.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Well I would be the last one, I think, in this House, even after my honourable and learned friend has done so and even after the Honourable Minister of Co-operatives has done so, I would still be later than they in saying anything against the Co-operative Movement. Before anyone in this House advocated it I did.
Before the honourable gentleman did I did. I began in 1925.

MR. BROWNE: Advocated it here in Newfoundland?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I advocated it right here prominently and publicly. I was an active member of the Grand Falls Society in 1920 and am still a member.

Going back to what I said—We will gamble to develop the fisheries or we won't develop them (period): So far from agreeing that people of Newfoundland don't want the Government to gamble on the fisheries I think they do. I think anyone who wants to make an issue of that in the forthcoming election in November of this year, or at any time—Should the Government gamble upon the fisheries—the party that says yes will win and the party that says no will be ignominiously defeated. We say yes because it is the proper thing. We are not only paying lip-service, we are asking the Committee to vote here now today three million dollars. Earlier in the estimates we asked the House to vote around four million or three to four million dollars for Fishery Development. That is not lip-service. That is actually taking our political life in our own hands and risking it on Fishery Development. We are prepared to do that. We do that gladly. We are not doing it unwillingly. We are not being driven to do it. No weight of public opinion is forcing us to do it. Not even Mr. Arthur Monroe nor all the others to whom we have lent money have persuaded us to do it. It is because we ourselves believe in it. Indeed we lead the forces that believe in it in Newfoundland. We are in the vanguard. We are, if anything, inducing and persuading people who are a little reluctant in their faith.

Now that is a gamble. This will bring our investment in the fisheries by the end of the present financial year to about ten millions of dollars. That, I would say, is probably around half the capital of B.C. Packers, one company, admittedly a big company. I was talking in Vancouver two or three weeks ago with the head of the company, H. R. MacMillan, who was good enough to call up to see me at my hotel. His company is B.C. Packers, a huge concern which has a capital of ten million anyway. Incidentally it was founded by a Newfoundlander, who died a pauper, the great Captain Gosse. I did not know that until I was in Vancouver the other day. He died a pauper, a man whose name even in Newfoundland was a household name. He was the founder of B.C. Packers, today in the world the largest of all fishing companies. Yet this Government, the whole of Newfoundland, will have an investment only of ten millions. That is the capital of one company. When Newfoundland gets an investment of one hundred million dollars or a couple of hundred million dollars or say a quarter of a billion in an utterly up-to-date, utterly modern, stream-lined fishery then perhaps our fishermen will make a civilized living out of the fishery. Then perhaps we will have a little stability in the fishing industry, our fishing economy.

Is there anyone in this House who can give me a logical reason why in the whole world Newfoundland should not be in the vanguard in Fishery Development? God knows that except for Iceland and the Faroe Islands there is no country on earth in which fish means so much to the economy as fishing means to the economy of Newfoundland. God knows a prosperous fishery means more to Newfoundland than it can mean to any other part of Canada. Why should we not be in the lead, why should we not be in the vanguard, never being afraid to spend millions, and if we have not got the money we have to borrow. We have got to invest actually. Although I admitted it before, I say this now; I am going to give the Opposition a nice handle to hang on me.

MR. HOLLETT: What handle is C. D. Howe supposed to have—brushed aside a million dollars—He said once in the House of Commons—What is a million or so here and there—Was not that the remark? Possibly my honourable friend was there and heard him.

MR. BROWNE: "What is a million?"

MR. SMALLWOOD: Now I am going to give the Opposition some satisfaction. I am going to say; "What is three million dollars?" What is four millions, five millions, what is it? What is it stacked up against the need in Newfoundland for raising the standard of living of good people, good hard-working people, God-fearing people, people who had never had a break until Confederation. They got a break then, but they cannot live on that break forever. Good, hard-working, God-fearing people who for four and a half centuries have clung to the rocks on our coast and tried to grabble with their fingernails a living, just enough to stay alive, to keep body and soul together. They never had much of a break. Now you talk about four million dollars to give them a little better living.

Now just one final point—The Honourable Leader of the Opposition talked of the fishing companies making profits and the fishermen not getting enough for their fish. True, absolutely right. But surely it is not until now that he has learned that. He is a Master of Arts in economy. He must have learned at Oxford University, surely, that all capital in the world that ever was capital, as Abraham Lincoln said: "All capital comes from labour." Does he suppose any firm was ever built anywhere or any other firm without profit? I would say that the frozen fish industry which has become a rather important thing, quite sizable, has been financed by three classes of persons (1) the fishermen by getting a lower price than could have been paid. They subsidized the upbuilding of these companies. (2) the Governments which lent them capital and continues to lend them capital and (3) they themselves who put in some initial capital. Even this initial capital, where did that come from? It came from the fishermen. Where did the capital the Governments lend come from? Where? Say it!

MR. HOLLETT: The same answer.

MR. HOLLETT: Certainly not Monroe.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Largely fishermen. So that all the capital in these fisheries industries now came from the owners who got it out of the fishermen in the first place, who now patronize them by getting less for their fish than could be given them, and from the Government who got it largely from the fishermen. There is nothing new about that. That is the story of economics. That is the story of private enterprise throughout the world. There are people who oppose that and people who like it. I am in between, somewhere in between. But this is not an occasion for raising all these social questions. There must be a better occasion than this for that purpose.

MR. HOLLETT: The Honourable the Premier has turned the matter into a political argument, and has made a political address. I think the Honourable the Premier is ready to say, more or less, that we are opposed to investing money in the fishery. I also stated we favoured the investment in the fishery by the Government. But one of the points we are concerned with is that one or two men in the country are monopolizing all the Government money being invested, Bonavista Cold Storage, Limited, or Mr. Russell, Fishery Products Limited or Mr. Monroe. It is quite true they are able men, I think. I don't know them all. But when I look at the loans which the Government made, I think, seven million dollars has gone into the fishery and this man, Monroe, got practically four million dollars, and that other man got two millions. That is six million out of seven million which has gone to two men. I am asking the Government to beware and to be careful that they do not make a monopoly out of it, nabobs of the fishery, so that they can say to the fishermen—If you want to live go and fish in my boat.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The honourable gentleman's followers wanted these men here in this House, nabobs.

MR. HOLLETT: No, some of the salt fish merchants in here, the despised ones, the scavengers of Newfoundland according to the Honourable the Premier. It illustrates and bears out the argument put forward by my honourable and learned friend that the salvation of any people, here particularly, the salvation of the fishermen must start with the fishermen themselves and must build up from that. I think any member in this House who had gone into the Co-operative Movement or any movement must admit the uplifting of any people starts from below. We must start below and build up and not start at Arthur Monroe and Hazen Russell and pour the revenue which the Government collects into their hands and let them dispense it. No, it must come from the people. I grant you we will support every move made by the Government to build up the fisheries, but I do not want it to be said or thought that we of the Opposition or any man in this House is opposed to spending money in regard to development of the fishery. I do maintain, however, that caution has to be exercised.

MR. JANES: I don't know what the fishermen of Fogo Island would think of this discussion. They had two of Arthur Monroe's plants operating in Fogo District. He was there operating at Joe Batts Arm, a large fishing community, and for reasons best known to Fishery Products Limited, I suppose, they had to withdraw. They have gone back again now. I don't know, Sir, if the fishermen of Fogo or Change Islands have any particular interest in Arthur Monroe. I don't know if they have any particular interest in seeing Arthur Monroe make any profit on fish. But I know they have a particular interest in living themselves, getting enough to eat and a house to live in.

If any of the honourable members on the opposite side of the House think these fishermen through co-operatives are capable of doing that, Sir, then they should go down and tell the people there how it should be done. I have worked with the cooperative movement myself, and I would make this observation: It depends on the day and age in which we live. We have fishermen in Newfoundland who worked as hard as any fishermen in the world to try and build co-operative organizations and failed, failed, failed miserably. I would remind the honourable members for St. John's West, what might be ideally possible is not always financially possible nor is it always practical. Many of the factors which operate in Quebec and in Nova Scotia, the factors which help the co-operative movement, do not exist in Newfoundland, never did exist and I don't suppose ever will exist.

If we must have fishery development the plants must be built, the plants must be managed, and they must not only be financially managed and have general management but there must be technical management, which cannot be provided by the fishermen today. Over a period of years I see a possibility for them to do it. But they are not prepared to wait that long. There is no fishing community in Newfoundland today, Sir, which does not want a plant which is going to take the fish out of their hands for processing in whatever manner it might be processed. Whether the plant is owned by the Government or by Arthur Monroe they are not one bit concerned. They have their hands full in trying to maintain their fishing equipment and fishing gear and trying to get new boats and engines. They have their hands full. Yet we talk about imposing upon them the financial costs and responsibilities of building plants, of finding technical management for these plants, of building up market organizations. It cannot be done, Sir, there is no fishing community in Newfoundland can do it, and no group of fishermen. It is unjustified, and I would be the last person to ask them to do it because most of the fishery development going on today is largely experimental. Are we going to ask the fishermen of Newfoundland to get themselves involved in experimentation directly? I know they are involved indirectly. I know they are involved every time a loan is made to fish companies by the Government. But it is quite another matter if we are going to involve them directly, quite another matter, Sir. As I said before, what could be ideally possible is not always practical nor always financially possible. That is the problem which faces the Government and the fisheries of Newfoundland. If the methods which are employed at this moment to build up the fishing industry should twenty years from now prove wrong, surely there will be answers to right that wrong. Arthur Monroe is being asked to be the great octopus as the Leader of the Opposition recognizes him to be.

MR. HOLLETT: Nobody said that. Would the honourable member permit me to ask a question? Will he explain to me why Arthur Monroe did not pay the extra dollar increase in 1953 when other merchants did?

MR. JANES: Mr. Chairman, that has nothing whatsoever to do with the discussion. As I say, if Arthur Monroe or Fishery Products, Limited, is the great octopus, the great monopoly the Opposition sees, surely there will be legislative powers in the Government of the day when that happens to remove that octopus. Until that day comes let us get development however we get it.

Carried.
Hanning Electric Limited $120,000:

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Chairman, Hanning Electric Limited, Newfoundland Asbestos Limited, Newfoundland Hardwoods Limited, Superior Rubber Company Limited, United Cotton Mills Limited are all in the same category, in the same position of needing additional working capital and needing it because the estimates upon which the original loans to them were made proved to be optimistic as to the costs of construction in Newfoundland. Therefore more of the total loan in each case was eaten up on their construction than was anticipated leaving them in each instance short of working capital. So therefore these are loans of additional working capital. In the case of Hanning Electric Limited the amount asked is $120,000. The original loan to them was $325,000, bringing it now, with this amount if agreed on, to $445,000. The company is just now going into production. They were delayed for some time through the absence of a very, very special type of floor they needed that had to be completely acid resistant. This floor is now laid. They brought a man in from Germany, I believe, to do it. I believe they had to bring the tiles and some other chemicals in also. They now will take people on steadily in increased numbers.

Incidentally, the storage batteries they made are undoubtedly excellent quality. I have talked with various garage-men and battery dealers and car and truck owners and they all speak very highly of these batteries. Mr. Heyson, the General Manager, at my suggestion, called recently upon Imperial Oil in Toronto. They sent some of their people into the plant to examine it. They have taken some of the batteries of Hanning Electric and have put them under test. Mr. Heyson is now visiting them in Toronto with a view to getting some substantial orders for Atlas Batteries. My understanding is that they have to make and sell thirty thousand batteries a year to enable them to pay all expenses, to amortize the loan and pay themselves a small profit.

MR. HOLLETT: Car batteries?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Any kind of storage batteries, not merely car batteries but ship batteries, marine, all kinds, some almost as big as that table. They are really very high-class batteries these people manufacture. There is one thing about it that the Committee will agree on, these Germans, if before they come here are successful operators in this, that or the other thing, then they are amongst the ablest and most resourceful industrialists of the whole world. If Mr. Hanning is a successful manufacturer of batteries in Germany, as he is, it is likely that he will be a successful manufacturer of batteries here.

MR. BROWNE: That is $425,000—What is the value of the plant that they bought with them? They could not have bought very much machinery to go against this $425,000?

MR. SMALLWOOD: If only my honourable friends opposite would accept my invitation to visit these plants. The honourable gentlemen opposite are elected representatives of the people of Newfoundland and not just of their own constituents. The people of Newfoundland through the Government, through this House, have advanced considerable money to create these industries. Now I hold it is the duty of the gentlemen opposite, if they have ever had any feeling that they are alien and strangers to these plants, which I doubt, to abandon that feeling and to visit and see the plants. If my honourable friends did that and went into this battery plant they would see a very fine little plant. It is not one of the bigger ones. But they would see it is a very fine plant with the very latest machinery one will find anywhere in the world in plants of that kind, and it is a very, very fine building, probably the only one of its kind in North America. It is a concrete building prefabricated and built indoors during the winter and assembled afterwards. The foundations were laid the previous fall, and the building fitted together like a jigsaw puzzle. There is not a scrap of wood in the whole building and it is virtually indestructible as far as fire goes.

MR. BROWNE: I have been inside that, where I made the observation: "Where is the machinery?" Did they buy $325,000 worth of machinery to put against this $325,000 the Government loaned them? I understand here they were supposed to put up fifty-fifty or fifty per cent of the investment. Have they got that amount there?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I have not the figures here now. As far as the original deal was concerned they have lived up to their part as we did.

MR. BROWNE: Fifty-fifty?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, they have done that.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, I don't intend to say very much on this, but we are all a bit worried about this company continuously coming back year after year and month after month requesting more money. The total investment in the first place was $325,000 to put the plant there and start it going, and the Hanning Electric Company would buy all the machinery. Now there is another loan of $120,000 and next year I hope there won't be another $125,000. We have as directors there Max Braun-Wogan, Gertrude Braun-Wogan. I have no doubt they have good people there, very efficient. I can assure this House we have heard of Max Braun-Wogan. He has done good service. He was one time employed by the Department of Economic Development, if I mistake not, and was sent out to Gander to collect Dr. Sennewald, and he made a good job of it. The Premier has to smile every time that is mentioned because he attributes that move to his own ingenious mind, I am quite sure.

MR. SMALLWOOD: No? It was election time.

MR. HOLLETT: Braun-Wogan went out and captured and brought in Dr. Sennewald by an RCAF plane. He brought home the bacon or brought it to that plane, the eye-glass man. But there was nothing we can do about it. I hope he is just as successful in bringing home the money.

Newfoundland Asbestos Limited—$90,000:

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Chairman, in the absence of the Attorney General who is in another part of the building for a short while, I will give the best explanation I can on that amount.

There was an amount of a quarter of a million dollars advanced to this company a year and a half or two years ago. Now the company needs another $90,000 and tells us that is the end.

In the absence of the Attorney General for a short while perhaps we had better pass over that and let it stand for the time being and come back to
MR. SMALLWOOD: This is an amount that was lent to the company by the bank on the Government's guarantee. It was lent to them to provide additional working capital to restore lost capital, lost in actual operations from the day the company started production in the Hardwoods Plant, that is to say the birch plant. They have steadily lost money, never broke even, never got in the black. They have been in the red from the day they commenced production. For a while they got within sight of being in the black, or of breaking even. For several months they were actually operating just barely below the breaking-even point. Then they ran into great difficulty in connection with logging. I may say, Mr. Chairman, that is really one of the greatest difficulties that has plagued Newfoundland Hardwoods Limited, the birch plant. They have had tremendous difficulty in assuring the plant a continuously adequate supply of suitable logs, birch logs, for the purpose of making veneer and plywood. The birch is our Newfoundland hardwood. Except for portable mills going in to the birch and sawing out railway ties from birch our Newfoundland people have not had very much experience down through the years in the handling of hardwoods. It cannot be floated. It can actually be floated all right under certain conditions, but not under conditions that would be practical. If you bark a birch tree you can float it or if you dry it. But either renders it unsuitable for the purposes of the plant. So practically speaking you cannot float birch. It is especially heavy and difficult to handle, and difficult to lift, difficult to move. It is a clumsy heavy wood which our people have never been accustomed actually to handling to move it any distance, except as I say, they have had considerable experience in taking portable mills into good stands of birch and cutting down the birch and then chopping it into slabs and shipping it to the nearest railway head. So that under the best of circumstances our plant has had great difficulty and would have great difficulty in supplying it with an adequate supply of suitable logs. But to make a difficult situation much more difficult we have had terribly difficult winters. Take this past winter—it was very bad from a logging point of view and the winter before was just as bad. In the months when logging ordinarily ought to have been practical and reasonable the great thaw set in with no frost and no snow. When you have that kind of thing happen you have the greatest difficulty handling even soft woods. But when you get that sort of thing it is really terribly difficult and almost impossible to handle a much heavier and much more difficult hardwood. So for two winters running they have had great difficulty in keeping the plant supplied with an adequate quantity and an adequate number of birch logs.
of the outcome, then there will be brought to the operations of the plant highly experienced, highly experienced personnel in the matter of hardwood logging, in the supervision of logging operations in hardwoods in the province of Quebec, practical experience gained in the Province of Quebec in the cutting and hauling and handling and shipping of hardwoods, of birch. Now that is precisely, as I have been pointing out, the thing above all others, I believe, that has been lacking in the operations of our birch plant, really efficient logging operations for hardwoods. These have been lacking from the beginning to this moment. It seems to me from a very close association with the plant from the first pouring of the concrete that no matter how efficiently you operate the plant as a plant you will not have the success you need until the logging operations, the cutting, the moving, the shipping of the birch logs is conducted with absolute efficiency. I can give as my firm opinion that it is not because of the freight on the logs from the site to the mill. That is a very serious obstacle, but it is rather by the absence of efficient logging operations in the birch to the point of the railway head, to the point of placing the logs aboard the train.

Then secondly they are still lacking in Newfoundland in a really efficient method of shipping birch logs by water, by boat. The ordinary type of vessel in Newfoundland is not constructed with a view to the quick, economic and efficient movement of birch logs by water. Now that has got to be solved. May I say this, Mr. Chairman We have enormous quantities of birch in Newfoundland, many thousands of miles. We have undoubtedly the greatest stands of healthy birch left now in North America except for British Columbia, the greatest, biggest stands, hundreds of millions of feet of birch. We have the birch. It is excellent in quantity and quality. It is not as big in diameter as you will find elsewhere in North America. It is on the average an inch to two inches smaller in diameter but it is healthy, it is not diseased. We have the birch. We have the plant. It is a good plant. It has excellent equipment. The layout of the plant is excellent. All engineers have agreed on that. And I am in strong hope that negotiations that are going on this moment, going on today and went on last night when we left this House here—I went from here straight to my office for a meeting with certain people presently in the Province with whom we are negotiating—I am in strong hopes that as a result of these negotiations the birch plant and the whole operation will get a great new lease of life which will enable it to benefit from the mistakes that have been made up to the present time. I have great faith indeed in the possibilities, the practical possibilities of our birch industry becoming a real giver of labour, a real giver of employment in Newfoundland. Up to now I will admit frankly it has not been conspicuously successful. It has never yet succeeded in getting in the black although until logging difficulties came as a result of bad winters we were in sight of getting in the black or breaking even.

That is the position, Mr. Chairman.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, I am quite sure we were all impressed by the hopes expressed by the Honourable the Premier relative to the hardwoods plant, the birch plant. I am not familiar with the manufacture of birch. I have seen birch trees growing. I have seen this birch plant. Incidentally before I go further I want to raise a point on that. I believe the directors of the company are Chester Dawe, Sybil Dawe, the Premier and Mr. Mercer. I was reminded no later than today by the Premier that we were at liberty to go and visit these plants. As a matter of fact on a number of occasions the Premier has suggested that.

MR. SMALLWOOD: May I interrupt? One of the plants sent a letter to all the members of the Cabinet asking them please to visit them.

MR. HOLLETT: Why did not the members on this side receive a similar letter, in view of the Premier's invitation?

MR. SMALLWOOD: These letters were sent to the Cabinet four or five months ago, before I extended this invitation.

MR. HOLLETT: I want to say this—Arising out of questions we were invited to visit the Finance Department. In connection with the birch plant there was certain information which the Finance Department did not have. They had some of the vouchers. The suggestion was made that myself and my honourable friend on my right visit the birch plant. On the 14th I think it was or the 15th of June we did just that, and we went out to that plant. We stopped at the gate and went to the office. We were met by Mr. Greene who was in charge, I believe he is one of the head officials out there, and was at one time a manager of a bank I think, Mr. Thomas Greene. At any rate it was suggested that we might see the plant. So we took advantage of that, and Mr. Greene showed us through the main building of the plant. We looked at some of the machines. It was the first time I had been there.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Were they operating at the time?

MR. HOLLETT: No nothing operating unfortunately.

We went through—There were two or three men around there.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It was lunch hour.

MR. HOLLETT: Whatever the hour they were not there anyway. the honourable and learned member for St. John's West and myself were conducted around the building. We saw some of the machinery etc. Now we did that because in the first instance we had been invited by the Honourable the Premier to do so, and secondly because we had been invited to do so by a responsible official of the company. It was the next day I received a letter, addressed to Mr. Malcolm Hollett, 18 Maple Street, St. John's, dated June 15. "It has been brought to our attention that you recently visited our premises on Topsail Road. Please be advised that this is private property and that unauthorized persons are not permitted to enter the plant without express permission. We must therefore ask you to refrain from entering the premises at any time in the future otherwise an action of trespass will be instituted against you—Yours very truly, R. C. B. Mercer, Secretary, Newfoundland Hardwoods Limited."

Well, Mr. Chairman, I must say I was greatly surprised. I was not at home when the letter arrived. It arrived by hand. I wondered what time the RCMP would be after me, but they have not turned up yet. Now there is the position. We have been asked on many occasions in this House by the Honourable the Premier to visit these plants. We did visit this plant.
in all good faith. We were shown around by a responsible official of the company. We did not steal anything. We did not take away any of the machinery. And to and behold I get this letter next day threatening me if I put my head inside the door of the Newfoundland Hardwoods Plant an action for trespass would be taken against me. It was signed by the secretary who is also one of the directors.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I would like to know where we stand if we accept the invitation of the Premier. He has extended an invitation no later than today that we visit these plants. I would like to know what is the explanation. Why were we ordered not to? I might say my honourable friend on my right received a similar letter, word for word, signed by the same individual. We are on the Opposition and we represent a certain number of people in the country, indeed represent all the people in this country as much as any member on the opposite side. Into that plant has gone millions of dollars of Government money. Yet Mr. Mercer had the audacity and indecency to direct a letter like this to the Leader of Her Majesty's Opposition after we had been expressly invited by the Honourable the Premier himself, who is also a director, to visit not only this plant but all the plants in the country of this nature. I don't know where we are getting—"We must therefore ask you to refrain from entering the premises at any time in the future otherwise an action of trespass will be instituted against you." I want to find out from the Honourable the Premier if my honourable friend on my right, myself or any of us are likely to be sued for trespass on these premises. I take it some explanation has to be forthcoming, and I was wondering if the Honourable the Premier could explain?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I surely hope the honourable gentleman does not think I extended the invitation with any hope or thought he would be sued for trespass if he accepted the invitation. I am a director of the company, but I knew nothing of the letter until the honourable gentleman read it. I was not consulted in the matter. It seems to me the kind of a letter called "a lawyer's letter" than a director's letter. It might have some faint connection with recent events in this Chamber, recent statements and the like. Perhaps the honourable gentleman is too big a man to take a letter like that too seriously. Perhaps he would be willing to agree that if I invited him to visit these plants, and if he accepts, anyone who stands in his way better watch his toes before they get trod on by the Premier of Newfoundland. When I invite anyone to visit any of these plants that public money has financed, in which Newfoundland has a direct stake, I think the invitation stands.

Now on the other hand I don't think I have a right to invite anyone to enter any private property casually or unannounced or unexpectedly. I think that ordinary courtesy has to be shown in these matters if we are going to visit them. I personally presume to go to these plants, any of these plants, day or night, whenever I feel like it. I often go at 1:00 in the morning to a plant to see how it is.
ties that other members don't presume to take. Maybe if I accompanied you this afternoon or after dinner tonight that might be better. Because these plants frequently just leave orders to the personnel that no strangers are to be admitted. Then we have the embarrassing position of a member of the people's House, a member of the Legislature, being debarred by somebody at the gate or the door of some plant in which Newfoundland has invested a considerable sum of money.

MR. HOLLETT: I understand I am not to go there and my honourable friend on my right is not to go to this plant again under penalty of punishment. This private property with three million, six hundred thousand dollars of Government money, and we go there on the express invitation of the Honourable the Premier, and then we get that. Sir, I would add to what I have already said if any people who are on the directorate have no more courtesy than indicated in that letter I would suggest the Honourable the Premier do his utmost, as soon as possible, to get rid of any entanglements he or the Government may be in in regard to that individual. I hope I have made myself perfectly plain on that.

I wonder if we could have now the exact amount which has gone into that plant by way of Government funds.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Three and a half million.

MR. HOLLETT: That is the total amount? This $550,000 now?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Included in that.

MR. HOLLETT: For running expenses.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the Premier if this is a private company why he could not hold them responsible under their agreement—In accordance with their agreement they are supposed to pay full normal depreciation to the Government on this plant, and were to keep the Government free from operating losses?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Well we faced reality. The money was being lost in actual operations and we did not insist on their paying. We knew they could not pay it, not these amounts. It was either we paid it or the company would be sued for debt because most of these were debts due for wages, for supplies, for commercial wood payments, logs etc. We paid it to keep the plant running. We are in strong hope that we won't have to continue doing that.

MR. BROWNE: I am very glad to hear that. It is very good to know and to hear the admission come from the lips of the Premier this afternoon. I know it must be hard for him to make that admission. It is good to see he is prepared to face the situation now in regard to the position of the Newfoundland Hardwoods. Was there any money invested by the Dawe family at all, any real money put into this?

MR. SMALLWOOD: $25,000.

MR. BROWNE: Are you sure of that?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, I have not any doubt.

MR. BROWNE: I have, I won't say why. I have considerable doubt about their putting real money into it. Does the Premier know whether Mr. Dawe received any salary?
MR. SMALLWOOD: No, never a cent. In fact I may say that so far from receiving a salary Mr. Dawe himself claims that he is out scores of thousands of dollars by his connection with it.

MR. BROWNE: I know what he claims, but I don't credit that. Mr. Dawe built the plant at the expense of the Government. I suppose it is not very much good rehashing what went on in connection with that. But, as I have said before, in my opinion it was a very loose agreement which was made between Mr. Chester Dawe and the Government. I hope the experience which the Government has gained will keep them from ventures of this kind again. I hope that the experience which the country has had and the loss it is likely to suffer will prevent an agreement of this kind again.

Now, Sir, in view of the fact that this plant is in the market and that negotiations are taking place at the present time for its sale I think I will have to forgo the remarks which I had intended to make.

Northeastern Fisheries Industries Limited, $50,000:

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Chairman, we made a loan to the company owned by Mr. Si Moores, that is the plant at Harbour Grace and the one at Fermeuse. We made a loan of $350,000 to enable him, or them, to purchase two draggers, two new draggers, to serve their plants. It turned out that $350,000 was not enough and they needed an additional $50,000. It was July 11, 1951 that we arranged this loan of $350,000 through the Bank of Nova Scotia, bearing interest at the rate of 4% and guaranteed by the Government for the building of three draggers. It was found this amount would not meet the cost and so we increased it. The repayment is to take place over a period of fifteen years in equal annual instalments of which the first instalment is payable on 23 July 1954. That is the explanation of that $50,000.

MR. BROWNE: $400,000 is the total.

MR. SMALLWOOD: But it is only $50,000 now. The $350,000 was taken care of before.

Carried.

C. F. MacLellan: $45,000.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Chairman, Mr. MacLellan is the head of the bus company. He is the gentleman who bought the ferry that is to be put in use between Portugal Cove and Bell Island, and the Government lent him some of the money with which to buy it. The story is this: It all happened at a time when Bell Island was left without any ferry service at all, a very serious situation, as at that time they were two or three weeks without any ferry service, and were completely marooned. One boat was laid up getting its engine repaired and something happened to the second boat. At all events the people of Bell Island hurriedly formed a citizens committee led by the honourable gentleman who represents the district, particularly the Bell Island part, led by him and by the mayor of Bell Island. They came to see me and we talked over the matter. I did discuss it with two companies operating ferries over there and nothing satisfactory came out of it. I called on Mr. MacLellan. He is a go-getter, a progressive type of man and not nearly all of his energies are absorbed in the bus company. His surplus energies could be used, I thought, to Newfoundland's benefit. I called on him and asked him why he did not take hold of this ferry situation. He did look around for a ferry, he said. I told him if he found a ferry then come and see us. He found a ferry and took Captain Jack Whelan up to see it and he took others to see it and he finally came back and told us he had the ferry all right, but did not have quite enough money to buy it, so we lent him this $45,000.

MR. HIGGINS: It was $30,000 this time last year. Just before the House closed he was allowed $30,000. Somewhere in the interim it became $45,000.

MR. SMALLWOOD: He has hypothecated his controlling stake in Capital Coach Company as security for this loan. We have got security. He controls the company. I believe he has the major shares. He has hypothecated those to us for this advance, and also the ferry is there, so that we are pretty well protected.

MR. HOLLETT: I have a reply to a question saying that the amount guaranteed Mr. MacLellan was $75,000. He borrowed $75,000 and the amount owed as of February 28th this year was $75,000. That information was given me by the Department of Finance.

MR. SMALLWOOD: He has paid $30,000 back. My honourable friend the Minister of Public Works whose interest in Bell Island is so well known to this House, as he spent so many years of his life over there, has been pursuing actively the job of arranging to have a ferry wharf built, or two ferry wharves, one on each side. He has succeeded brilliantly in getting one done and he is now busily engaged trying to get arrangements made to get another one built on the Bell Island end. A certain type of dock is required where the ferry fits right into the landing which will enable traffic to drive through. He will succeed, I believe, and with a little help from the Government, Mr. MacLellan will get that ferry service to Bell Island. That ferry is already here and there is to be a second one, a second boat.

MR. BROWNE: In the meantime I wonder if the Minister of Public Works will tell me whether there is a wharf built at the present time for the ferry?

HON. E. S. SPENCER (Minister of Public Works): Not at Bell Island. At Portugal Cove it is completed.

MR. BROWNE: I did not notice it there on Sunday.

MR. SPENCER: It is attached in a sense to the old pier, that section to the side. There is one stub of it out there that has to be extended a bit further out around the nose.

MR. HIGGINS: Mr. Chairman, might I ask the Minister what is going to happen? He says there is to be another ferry go on. Does that mean the two companies now operating are to go out of business?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I don't see that unless they choose to go out.

MR. HIGGINS: Are we in the position now that the Government is subsidizing Mr. MacLellan, (who is a fine man, and I say that advisedly, as I know him) at the expense of two local companies to put them out of business there.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Frankly I do not know. I do know this; both directly and indirectly I appealed strongly to the other two companies to put something decent and modern on that run, and they did not and would not. Then I asked Mr. MacLellan, but only after the others had refused, I feel the interest of the people of Bell Island and the Mainland who travel back and forth is paramount to those companies who would not keep up with the times.

MR. BROWNE: How big is the boat?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I don’t remember the details. It is a fine big boat. She is across the harbour over at the Government wharf. It is worth going over on board her.

MR. FOGWILL: Is she ready to go into service?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Before the run is ready for her she will be ready for the run.

Northeastern Co-operative Fisheries Society Limited, $22,733:

MR. SMALLWOOD: Now, Mr. Chairman, this is a bit of a sad story, a little story I am a little ashamed to have to tell. That is a co-operative society in Change Island that got into difficulties. It is a long story and some of it can’t be told here and some of it does not concern us at all but is an internal matter down there. My honourable friend, the member for Fogo, knows the story pretty completely, and my honourable friend the Minister knows it completely, far more than I do. The Loan and Guarantee Act of 1951 authorized a guaranteed bank loan for this society of $55,000. The purpose of that loan was to enable them to acquire certain premises at Change Islands for the erection and installation there of buildings, machinery, and equipment for the purpose of drying codfish, in other words, a fish dryer. In fact they did put in a fish dryer somewhat similar to the one put in at Lourdes and the one put in at Fortune, three of them in Newfoundland of a design, I think, which was controlled by Quebec Maritime Fishermen’s Co-operative Movement of Quebec, the Quebec United Fishermen. Well it did not work, that is about the size of it. Subsequently the society was unable to pay this amount which was guaranteed through the Canadian Bank of Commerce and the Government made it good. On July 10, 1953, two payments were made to the company of $22,733 and $4,914, the latter $5000, roughly being an unconditional grant, a liquidation of the society’s commitments on appointment of a liquidator. On the 30th of June the liquidator passed over to the Minister the following assets: General stores and supplies, mechanical stores and electrical supplies, building, machinery and tools, office equipment, wares, general equipment and tools, a total of $50,000. The Minister then found himself the owner of fifty thousand dollars worth of a co-operative plant, wharf, equipment, machinery, dryer and all the rest of it. In addition to this amount there were certain other assets valued at approximately $400 but not mortgaged to the Government were listed. The Government lent them this amount to pay their debts, and now asks the House to confirm it.

MR. HOLLETT: There was an Order in Council for that? Altogether you have advanced to that concern, as far as I can make out—

MR. SMALLWOOD: $57,000.

MR. HOLLETT: Then $35,000.

MR. SMALLWOOD: No the $57,000 includes that. Here it is—guaranteed bank loan, paid in full $35,000.

MR. HOLLETT: That is paid off—I see.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, that $35,000 was paid by the Government?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I am afraid so. I don’t know. Yes.

MR. HOLLETT: In that case I am right in the first instance.

MR. BROWNE: I have the loans here $57,733, February 28, that is one. The other one is an amount of $35,000 but is not mentioned as being owed. I take it it is included in the $57,000.

MR. SMALLWOOD: We lent $35,000 finally paid off and $22,000, which brings it to $57,000. They owe us now $57,000.

MR. BROWNE: That was lent a long time ago?

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is right. Lourdes cost us about the same roughly.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask what is the situation at Change Islands as far as the cooperatives are concerned now.

MR. JANES: The original society was the Seaway Co-operative Society which was a joint consumers-producing organization. In 1949-50 they decided to split their operations and the Sea-way took over the consumer end to be purely a consumer society and Northeastern now became a producer.

MR. BROWNE: A gambling society.

MR. SMALLWOOD: They went into the fishery.

MR. JANES: While the Northeastern Co-operative Society Limited has gone into liquidation the consumer union is still standing and have a very good credit union there. But in regard to the Northeastern, in all fairness I think I should point out, apart from the small amount of money due the fishermen for fish that had been spoiled in the process of drying the only creditors of the society were people who had advanced them material from the society for the construction of the plant and for the installation of equipment. It is all tied up in equipment.

MR. BROWNE: They have not been paid?

MR. JANES: I think some, yes.

MR. BROWNE: By the Government, Mr. Chairman, the Premier stated or hinted that that dryer was responsible for this as it did not work well. Now are there any other dryers of that kind in use at the present time? The reason I ask is that a couple of years ago I went to see the experimental station of the Federal Government in Halifax. There they explained to me the work they had been doing on dryers and showed me a pilot plant they had there in the station suitable for small fishermen. I have always been surprised that that knowledge has not been passed on here and has not been taken up. Why did they go to Quebec to get the plant and not to Nova Scotia?

MR. KEOUGH: I think I can help out a bit there. In the days when most of the Change Islands people had their own schooners and went to Labrador and produced a heavy salted fish and used a heavy salt fish dryer, overnight the fisheries changed so that by the time the plant was completed there were very few going to Labrador bringing back heavy salted fish, so they were actually trying to get light salted fish from a heavy salt fish dryer.

MR. BROWNE: You mean that after 1950 the Minister of Fisheries in Ottawa told the people who went to Labrador they went at their own risk, and then they stopped going. I believe that is a fact.

MR. KEOUGH: Whether they slopped on that account or not, they stopped.

MR. BROWNE: Yes, full stop. Carried.

St. John's (Newfoundland) Stadium Company Limited—$100,000:

MR. SMALLWOOD: That one I suppose requires no explanation.

MR. FOGWILL: That was the money paid over to the stadium?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes. Carried.

Superior Rubber Company Limited—$150,000:

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is additional working capital. As a matter of fact they had very little working capital at all when they got the plant finished. The amount advanced was a million dollars and by the time all of it was advanced and spent the company was reduced to the position of having very, very little working capital indeed. We have advanced them $150,000 and believe we will have to give them another $150,000, not completely for working capital, however, as part of it is to get another piece of equipment. They have decided to go into something not done in Newfoundland and not done in the Maritime Provinces, a completely modern recapping of tires, where tires can be completely retreaded. That is quite a profitable industry. They are going to do that. Got the equipment on order. I may say in connection with this company it is rather interesting to see the speed with which they are going ahead. Max Braun Wogan nearly died and was, I think, months on his back—he was three months in hospital. He was down there in the General Hospital and they could not diagnose his case. He had seven or eight or nine doctors, I think. They took him on a stretcher to Germany where a famous German doctor diagnosed and treated him and cured him. Four or five weeks ago he came back here. The following day the owner of the plant who could speak no English and could not do anything about him anyway, arrived. That was five, maybe six or seven weeks ago. It took them a week or ten days to get going. They began with a staff of some fifteen or twenty and are now up to nearly a hundred. They began making rubber boots. They began producing forty pairs a day and they are now up over two hundred pairs a day, seven hundred pairs a day is their capacity, and they are going swiftly towards a production of seven hundred pairs a day of rubber boots, men's, women's, and childrens', including thigh boots, right up and ordinary knee boots as they call them.

This is another plant that I would like the honourable gentleman to go and visit. The honourable member for that district, who is not here, has tremendous interest in it, and has great faith in it, as I have myself. I want the Committee to know that in my opinion that $150,000 is not going to be enough. There will have to be an additional $150,000 before 1954 is over. I believe we will have to give them another amount of working capital.

MR. BROWNE: The Government has already put a million into this—I know the Premier said: "What is a million dollars?"

MR. SMALLWOOD: In connection with the fisheries.

MR. BROWNE: What did Mr. Braun Wogan and his associates put into it.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The same.

MR. BROWNE: We don't know that. The reason I mention that is that I have been told that some of the machinery in there is over thirty years old.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Some may be much older and some would not, some of it but not much of it.

MR. BROWNE: So that it is second-hand.

MR. SMALLWOOD: A lot of it is second-hand.

MR. BROWNE: Well then surely machinery in a small plant like that does not cost a million dollars?

MR. SMALLWOOD: It is a very big plant.

MR. BROWNE: Now I have also heard they don't follow the Canadian standard in regard to electric wiring.

MR. SMALLWOOD: They follow the German code.

MR. BROWNE: But is the German code permissible in this country?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I don't know. But I would say it is a perfectly good code. I would say also that of all the plants that exist in Newfoundland, English, American, Canadian and native Newfoundland, if you want to see high-class installations go to some of these German plants.

MR. BROWNE: It is a different one.

MR. SMALLWOOD: All right it is perfectly good. I will admit it is not stylish looking, but at Atlantic Hardboards, that is artistic looking, that is classic looking. These Germans are not bad at electrical stuff.

MR. BROWNE: I know that. But bearing on what I said before about second-hand machinery that went into it. Who valued that plant? Have they really got a million dollars invested in this plant or is our investment very much higher in proportion to the German investment?

MR. SMALLWOOD: They have it in there. May I say this about the old machinery. Virtually all of that machinery in that plant is second-hand, virtually all of it. In fact there are only two plants of all our industries, or three plants of all our new industries whose equipment was not all brand new. One of them was Atlantic Films, the second one is the Tannery at Carbonear. They removed a plant from Germany. They removed the plant and moved it bodily out of Germany to Carbonear. It was a second-hand plant. The third one is the rubber plant. Now as to the rubber plant it is not entirely but mainly second-hand. But the honourable gentleman will see when they go to visit that plant that the equipment might be a hundred years old, as it is not, but it could be, and be just as good as it was when it was made. I will give an example: In the plywood building in Newfoundland Hardwoods Limited there is a steam engine that went into use. It was made in England 90 years ago. It is in there today at the Newfoundland Hardwoods turning over just as smoothly and efficiently as in its first year in operation. It was brought in second-hand for the Harvey Bread and Butterine Factory. It is the one that operates the lathes. The honourable gentleman must have seen it in the plywood building. It is delivering just as much and more and does not cost one cent to operate, not one cent, because it burns waste and it delivers the steam power not only for the lathes but it delivers the vapour to steam the logs. That is a machine that is 90 years old and 90 years hence will be just as good as it is today.

MR. BROWNE: Like Grandfather's Clock.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, there is no stopping it. When you see the large roller in the Superior Rubber Company bring the raw rubber that is put in huge machines that just kneads it as you would dough —

MR. BROWNE: Needing a lot of dough.

MR. SMALLWOOD: They take the raw rubber and put it in one of these great machines and that machine seventy or eighty years from now will be kneading raw rubber. It does not get old, and will be working just as efficiently as it did the day it was made.

MR. HOLLETT: What is the name of that machine?

MR. SMALLWOOD: It is an old English machine.

MR. HOLLETT: Watt?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, since Watt.

MR. BROWNE: I am rather surprised, Mr. Chairman, because I had heard stories about a lot of machinery in some of these plants being second-hand and rusty and have just laughed it off, thinking, that is not possible.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Why did not the honourable gentleman ask me? I would have told him.

MR. HOLLETT: We did not think it was necessary. I did not think there was any second-hand machinery there. I have seen the places and some of these machines, and I am surprised that they are second-hand. I am more mystified than ever now about these new industries. I thought we were getting perfectly new, stream-lined machinery right up-to-date, the last word in machinery. Now I find out some of it is 90 years old. I wonder if the Premier would tell us if there is any second-hand machinery in CMIC?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, none. I told the honourable gentleman, in three plants.

Mr. Chairman, I move the Committee rise, report progress and ask leave to sit again.

Motion carried.

MR. COURAGE: Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole have con-considered the matter to them referred, have made progress and asks leave to sit again, at a later hour this day.

On motion report received. Committee ordered sit again at a later hour this day.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do not adjourn at 11:00 o'clock tonight.

Motion carried.

MR. SPEAKER: It being now 6:00 of the clock I shall leave the Chair until 8:00 o'clock tonight.

THURSDAY, June 17, 1954

NIGHT SESSION

The House resumed at 8:00 of the clock.

Committee of the Whole to consider Certain Resolutions in Relation to Financial Assistance to be rendered to Certain Industrial Undertakings:

MR. SPEAKER: Leave was given earlier for this Committee to sit again I do now leave the Chair.

Superior Rubber Company Limited:

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, the Premier stated in answer to a question that a good deal of the machinery in this Superior Rubber Company is second-hand and that some of it is quite old. Now I wonder if the Premier could let us see a list of the machinery which was imported and placed against the million dollars given by the Government? I understand that company is one of those which had to put up fifty per cent of the capital against the Government's fifty per cent. If the machinery in that plant or a great deal of it is second-hand then it must have been bought at a considerably depreciated price.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It was already owned by the owners of the present plant.

MR. BROWNE: Do you mean it belonged to Mr. Braun Wogan?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Let me put it this way—The owner of the plant at Holyrood is the owner of a very large plant on the Continent of Europe, and in connection with that large plant on the Continent of Europe he had a very large amount of equipment which he shipped to Holyrood.

MR. BROWNE: From Hamburg?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, that was the Tannery. In the case of the Tannery, this William Dorn was a Czechoslovakian and was able quite freely without hindrance or obstacle to remove himself and anything he had to this side of the Atlantic. Actually in fact what he did was to dismantle an operating factory and remove it to Carbonear.

MR. BROWNE: We are not talking about Mr. Dorn but the Superior Rubber Company owners. Would the Premier let us see a schedule of the machinery imported which must have been valued at a million dollars against the million dollars put up by the Government.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, I would be glad to let the honourable gentleman see a list of the machinery. I have not got it with me, but I will certainly bring it.

MR. BROWNE: That is no good. Why is it not here tonight. I thought you had it here today.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Channing did not have any lists of machinery with him in any case, he had only the general factual background of these loans.
MR. BROWNE: Well, Mr. Chairman, can the Minister of Economic Development tell us who the person was who valued the machinery as it was landed here?

MR. SMALLWOOD: The customs people did that—The Federal Customs people.

MR. BROWNE: Could the Minister tell us what the value of the machinery was in the customs?

MR. SMALLWOOD: The machinery and all else imported was about a million dollars.

MR. BROWNE: What is meant by “all else”?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Machinery, equipment, supplies, raw material.

MR. BROWNE: Did they bring raw material in?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, before they began production. That is all part of that million dollars put up by them.

MR. BROWNE: When was the million put up by the Government?

MR. SMALLWOOD: From time to time throughout the whole period.

MR. BROWNE: Did the Government actually invest it or give it?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Lent it.

MR. BROWNE: The whole million?

MR. CHAIRMAN: If the honourable members would forgive the interruption—It does seem to be a rather strange way of conducting a debate in Committee, one honourable member standing up to speak and holding the floor while another honourable member sits down and answers, so the conversations go on back and forth. Nobody addresses the Chair. Now I must call this to order:

MR. HOLLETT: Yes, Mr. Chairman, I was about to draw your attention to that.

I am wondering if the Honourable the Premier, Mr. Chairman, would give us something of the history of this man Braun Wogan. Is it a fact that he came out here as a civil servant to the Government. How did he arrive and in what capacity?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I think not on his first visit but on his second visit he came as a temporary assistant in the Department of Economic Development. It was at a time when we arranged it in Germany. I, at the time, invited some fifteen or eighteen quite important German industrialists to come to Newfoundland. I did that in Germany. I invited them to come here within the next few weeks or months thereafter. I got so many coming that it was more than Dr. Valdmanis who spoke fluent German, could cope with, and we needed a German speaking official who spoke good English and German as well and who was active and energetic for a few months in that department so that he could meet all the German industrialists that arrived and converse with them and act as liaison between them and the Government. Max Braun-Wogan accompanied me on my first visit and indeed accompanied me and such men as went with me on our various trips in Germany. I knew him intimately, quite well, in fact had become close personal friends with him. He knew our programme, our policy and knew the way we operated. He was, therefore, a valuable man for the two or three months we had him. It was during that period
MR. HOLLETT: That being so, we are up-to-date on his history to that point: How comes it then that he suddenly becomes a director (as far as I know he may be an owner) of two of these industries, Superior Rubber Company, to whom we have loaned one million dollars and now an extra $150,000, and to Hanning Electric to whom we have loaned some $537,000? That is nearly two million dollars. How come that he suddenly transformed from a civil servant with the Department of Economic Development to an industrialist to control two large plants on which, in my opinion, the Government’s fate really hangs today as to the success or otherwise of these various industries? That is what I would like to know. How could that individual suddenly become a great industrialist and a director on the Board and actually control the fate of these two industries? I wonder if the Minister could tell us why he was so chosen?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I don’t think he controls the fate of any industries. He is a director of Superior Rubber. I don’t know if he is a director of Hanning Electric. I only know he is a director of Superior Rubber, and he does not control the fate even of that industry. I think the owner controls the fate of that industry.

How did he happen to become a great industrialist?

I have some doubt of the accuracy of that description. I don’t think he is a great industrialist. I think he is a very able, competent and very affable and friendly person who makes friends wherever he goes. He has a good many friends in Newfoundland. How did the transformation come about?

Well, after he had worked here for several months he went back, as his period of service had ended. The summer of the following year he returned here and set up in business. He set up an agency business, I believe he had some local directors including Mr. C. A. Pippy for a while. He was an importer and exporter but principally an importer of goods for which he had agencies here and on the mainland of Canada. While he was in that business several of the German industrialists, notably Hanning Electric and Atlantic Harboard Industries, Limited, and Superior Rubber, these three industries (it might be only these three, but it certainly included these three) needed a man here who knew English and German, who had entry to the Government, who had entry to me. So they appointed him, one after the other, as their representative, their resident representative in Newfoundland. In that way he became the local and indeed for a while the only resident representative of these companies. Now subsequently one of these companies invited him to become manager, Superior Rubber Company, because the owner spoke no English, and is only now beginning to learn English. The others, the owners of Atlantic Harboard Industries Limited and Hanning Electric Limited, both spoke excellent English, but the owner of Superior Rubber Company does not speak any English at all. I am reminded of the fact that he was once a fairly substantial industrialist in Europe himself when he was personally the owner of a cement mill, before the war, in Poland. At one time in Latvia he was managing director, I think, of a company which owned and operated a cement mill, and a gypsum plaster board and plaster lathe mill, in which British Plastensboards were substantial shareholders. His father, I believe, was a banker in London, in a German bank there.

MR. HOLLETT: Thank you, Mr. Chairman, that was very interesting.

MR. SMALLWOOD: He is quite an interesting fellow.

MR. HOLLETT: A story out of the pages of a storybook. He came out here as a civil servant with the Department of Economic Development, got to know people and went back to Germany. I won't go into details. There were a number of German industrialists who thought they would like to start in business in this country. Then the Government started to pay out loans to various industrialists. I take it, this Max Braun-Wogan who is a director of Superior Rubber Company, Limited, is also in all probability a director of Canadian Machinery Holding Trust?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No.

MR. HOLLETT: He is not. I take the Honourable the Premier's word for that, but he does have great influence with them.

MR. SMALLWOOD: None.

MR. HOLLETT: None whatever? I have heard that as of November 18, 1952 the directors were Grube, Max Braun-Wogan and Dr. Thormahlen. I take it that is pretty good German.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Just an amateur.

MR. HOLLETT: I have not visited Germany in a long time.

Max and Gertrude Braun-Wogan and Buckhardt, these are directors at least, as of November 1952. The Premier has great hopes for this Superior Rubber Company and there is no reason why we should endeavour to cast any new doubts on this company. I do hope they succeed. It is very difficult for us to see, Sir. We remember the way in which these new industries were introduced to this country and to us by the Honourable the Premier. We remember the high hopes that were held out in 1951-52. It is therefore a bit disappointing tonight to find that we have to vote for these several industries extra amounts ranging from $150,000 to $298,000 and $387,400. It is a bit disappointing and really heart-breaking. I wonder if the Honourable the Premier could tell us how many people are employed in Superior Rubber Company at the present time?

MR. SMALLWOOD: They began about six weeks ago, I think, with some eight or ten people and were making forty pairs of rubber boots a day. They are now up to over two hundred pairs of rubber boots a day and they are up around eighty people. Their capacity is seven hundred pairs of rubber boots a day, towards which they are working quite rapidly. Mr. Grube told me in Holyrood on Saturday last, when the Attorney General was with me, that a year from now the plant would employ four hundred people. They would then be up to capacity in rubber boots, seven hundred pairs a day of different sizes and grades and qualities, of course.

MR. HOLLETT: Do you mean long rubbers?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Knee boots and thigh boots for men, women and children, and also foam rubber products, and they would be in tire recapping long before that.
MR. BROWNE: Can the Premier tell us if the land was purchased by the Government?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I believe it was.

MR. BROWNE: I heard it was not purchased and that the owner was looking for a very high price for it. Do you know if the sale has gone through?

MR. SMALLWOOD: The land was bought by the Government in several parcels of course. One was owned by the Honourable John S. Currie, and on it was a nice bungalow since used for a while, I believe, for offices, and now by the chief chemist of the company. Then there was the site underneath the hill on the level. That was purchased from somebody else there. There was some, I believe, belonging to the family of Furey. There are several parcels of land there, all bought and paid for. I believe there is some question about one parcel, but not the one upon which the plant stands.

MR. BROWNE: I also heard the Minister of Public Works in this case did not observe the rule about putting the fence back 33 feet from the centre of the road. I don't know if that complies with the law or not, but their fence is out there very prominently.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I have not as yet asked my honourable colleague, or I don't think I have, but they have asked me to ask him (they asked me as Minister of Economic Development) if he would fill in the far-off corner of the road and widen the road at the far-off side below the bank, so that they would perhaps be further back from the centre of the road. In other words they had to dip out the bank a long distance in, and every four or five feet into that big bank as high as this room cost money. So as a matter of fact I was the one who took the responsibility, and I said, all right go ahead, don't go in any further as that must be costing a lot of money to dig out. We will fill in the road across from you, and widen the road at that point, which will bring the corner of the building further back relatively from the centre of the road. Where the fence is I do not know.

Terra Nova Textiles Limited—Carried.

United Cotton Mills Limited—Carried.

Union Electric Light and Power Company:

MR. BROWNE: What is the capacity of the plant now controlled by Union Electric Light and Power Company and what is the demand that they expect to be able to supply and the number of customers, the distance and so forth? That seems to me to be information we should have on a proposition like this, after all it is a million dollars.

MR. CURTIS: Actually, Mr. Chairman, in the next session we will have to bring in a Bill giving this company a franchise on a connection for Port Union area. We will be given a mortgage on what they are building now plus what they have so we will have an additional mortgage covering a guarantee on their existing outfit.

Frankly the position is a very fortunate one in that neighbourhood. We have to either develop electricity or lend them the money to develop it. So we are killing two birds with one shot, getting electricity and instead of financing it one hundred percent we are financing it about 65% to 70%.

MR. BROWNE: Who is going to build the plant for them?

MR. CURTIS: The Power Corporation of Canada.

MR. HOLLETT: Now that we have come to the end of these loans or guarantees, cash or otherwise, I wonder if I may ask, Mr. Chairman, what is the total amount now of cash and guaranteed loans outstanding, including these we are passing tonight? Would the Minister be able to tell me that?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I promise to have it here tonight before we rise. I will table the complete information. I have asked the honourable gentleman to go off and get it for me. I could give the honourable gentleman that—as a matter of fact, find it in the Public Accounts.

MR. BROWNE: Fifteen months out of date.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It is easy to see what has been added since.

MR. HOLLETT: There are others besides there.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I promise to have that information here tonight. It must be around twenty-five million or thirty million dollars contingent liability.

MR. HOLLETT: The point I want to make is that we ought to know just how far we can go with guaranteeing loans for payment of interest. We will have to borrow the money and pay interest on that loan and service it, and it is going to cost a considerable amount of money, two or three million dollars a year.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, if we have to pay it.

MR. HOLLETT: Most of it is cash loans.

Item carried.

Newfoundland Asbestos Limited—$90,000:

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Chairman, that is a guarantee asked for in connection with the Newfoundland Asbestos Limited plant at Lewis Brook, Port-au-Port Peninsula. The position is this: The Government some years ago, upon the recommendation of an engineer, Mr. Rukeyser, who is supposed to be an outstanding engineer in Canada for asbestos, decided to put $250,000 into the development of an asbestos mine or potential mine at Lewis Brook. Last year we had to ask for further amounts of $40,000, and this year we have to ask for $90,000. It was understood originally that $280,000 would be sufficient, but due to the fact that the road is not finished and due to the fact that Mr. Rukeyser had an injury to his leg which made it difficult for him to get back and forth over the bad road I am afraid he let us down a bit. In any event the figure that was fixed for the cost of the construction of the mill was underestimated. I am not sure the present vote of $90,000 will complete the proposition, but it will go a long way towards it. I may say the company concerned is very co-operative with the Government and is prepared to do anything in reason. The company realizes that it is in default and that we can wipe them out tomorrow, but they are prepared to make any arrangement at all. The idea of this vote is to enable us to negotiate further with a view to getting this mine producing. It is thought beyond question it will be in production this fall, but, as I say, they want the money before they can do anything further. I might say this was examined by a sub-committee in Cabinet consisting of my honourable colleague the Premier, the Minister of Mines and Resources and the Minister of Public Works and myself. The company, as I say, is willing to co-operate in every way, is willing to operate on our terms or even if necessary get out of the picture and make room for someone else.

MR. FOGWILL: This company had a cash loan of $250,000 plus a guarantee of $75,000 last year.

MR. CURTIS: $40,000 last year.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is included in this amount.

MR. FOGWILL: Then there is another amount, I understand, in respect of shares purchased by the Government in the company—$75,000.

MR. CURTIS: That was in the $250,000, I understand.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, how much money have they invested themselves in this proposition?

MR. CURTIS: They carried out the development purely at the request of the Government. The Government is perfectly satisfied there is enough asbestos there and they acquired the property. We agreed to find the working capital to build the mill and operate it, on our own terms. First we had preferred shares which not only gave 6% but carried with it a ten per cent of all income, in addition to 5% mining tax. The Committee just referred to will shortly be negotiating a new arrangement. I can assure the House that we will do everything we can to get as much as we can for the Government. If we put up a state balance, I think, another $100,000 or $90,000, Mr. Seibert, one of the large shareholders is willing to have his own company in St. Lawrence enter into an agreement whereby if that is not sufficient they will undertake to put it through themselves. They offered to withdraw from St. Lawrence a manager there and put him in charge of operations, and offer him as an inducement some of his own shares to get the proposition underway.

MR. FOGWILL: That has been up there quite a long time. We have reports from time to time that are very encouraging. What I would like to know is the mill in operation on the site?

MR. CURTIS: Yes.

MR. FOGWILL: Would the Attorney General tell us something about it. How much has been proven?

MR. CURTIS: Over a million dollars worth of ore is proven up. The machinery is either on the site or at the end of the good road, waiting to get the road finished.

MR. FOGWILL: How long would the road be?

MR. CURTIS: Eight miles, but it is pretty bad.

MR. HOLLETT: Do I understand the Minister to say four or five directors are a committee?

MR. CURTIS: A committee of the Cabinet to make final negotiations.

MR. HOLLETT: What are the conditions required—Another $100,000 in addition to this?
MR. CURTIS: I don't think this is going to see the job through. I don't think it can. I think the estimate we had originally either was too fine or else the cost turned out to be much higher than expected. Certainly the expenses of getting in there were much higher than anticipated because of the road?

MR. HOLLETT: Just how far are the Government prepared to go? That outfit is up there a long time, and they are not yet in production. I do hope the Committee set up will look after it. Mr. Chairman, I think possibly while the Attorney General has given the details regarding the finances of this property it might be helpful to the House if they knew that a proportion of the tunnelling had been done there to prove up a certain amount of ore, and following that an asbestos mine could be brought into operation. Would the Minister tell us how many tons of ore has been proved up, approximately?

MR. SMALLWOOD: It is over a million dollars in value, we have not got the figures.

MR. FOGWILL: You must know the tonnage.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, but one does not carry around that information.

MR. BROWNE: I think it is rather dangerous for the Government to go so deeply into those ventures.

MR. SMALLWOOD: We get the money back handsomely, and what is more we start an industry.

MR. BROWNE: It is more of a gamble than the fishery.

MR. SMALLWOOD: If the honourable gentleman had read the report he would think differently.

MR. BROWNE: Is there any report on the operations up to the present time, if so, I would be glad to have it—if the Minister has any report to show us now.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I would be glad if the honourable member would remind me to produce it. If the honourable gentleman does not remind me I may remember it. I have a good memory. Look at all I produced today.

MR. HOLLETT: After two and a half years they have only proven up a million dollars worth of ore. We have to ask ourselves whether it is a good venture.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It is over a million dollars proven and blueprinted but indications are for millions of dollars worth in addition to that in reserve.

MR. HOLLETT: There are lots of places in the world where asbestos is found. Whether it is out there or not is another matter.

MR. CURTIS: It is an excellent quality.

MR. HOLLETT: If that is the case why not prove up more than that?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I agree that hope deferred maketh the heart grow sick.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, I thought I had the floor—if I have not I will sit down.

MR. BROWNE: At the same time I would recommend that as soon as possible the Government get out of it. Carried.
Preamble carried.

On motion the Committee rose and reported having passed the Bill without amendment. Report received.

On motion said resolutions read a first time, ordered read a second time. Read a second time and concurred in.

On motion a Bill based on said resolutions introduced. On motion read a first time, read a second time.

MR. CURTIS: I wonder, Mr. Speaker, would the House prefer to go into Committee on that Bill right away.

MR. HOLLETT: As long as the sections are read.

On motion Bill now referred to a Committee of the Whole House.

Clauses 1, 2, 3 carried.

Clause 4:

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, I feel I must draw attention again to the fact—I am not rising to object at all—but I must draw attention to the fact we have year after year for the past five years been making cash loans and guaranteeing money in very high amounts, and this particular section, of course, makes it lawful to do so. I cannot let this opportunity pass without pointing to the fact that we are saddling posterity, our children and children's children with a debt that has to be paid, particularly on these guaranteed loans, and the cash loans also. We have to borrow money from the public in order to meet these loans and make payments of yearly interest and for servicing. It already involves ten million and we have to borrow twelve million which makes it $22,000,000. Some of the money we borrow this year will go into that eight and a half million dollars here, but we have jumped from three million dollars up to twenty-five millions in these five short years. We must not forget we are a small Province and that one time our people came near starving in the country because we had a debt and had to find five million dollars a year interest when at the time we only collected a revenue of about seventeen millions, and had to borrow five millions in order to pay our interest on our debt. Now we are a Province of Canada it is true, we are now in the arms of Canada, but that is not going to help us when it comes to paying interest on debts and servicing these bonds. We have to collect the money from our people to pay the interest on our debt, and if it went to twenty-five millions in five years what will it go to in the next four years should the people of this country see fit to re-elect the present administration, which I hardly think they will. Another four or five years of this borrowing and we shall be up to forty million dollars or perhaps more, a national debt on which our people will have to pay the interest, and they will also have to pay for public services which have to be improved if our people are to be satisfied to live in this country. One of the honourable members on the opposite side the other day stated that we have now almost reached the limit of taxation. If we continue borrowing, I say, we have not even started to approach the amount our people will have to be taxed in order to service these bonds.

So I want to point out to the Government now that any further borrowing after this year on the part of this or any other administration should be given very careful consideration because it is destroying whatever chance this Province has of coming in to a better economy. A check, at any rate, has to be placed on excessive borrowing for capital expenditure on certain industries. Fisheries, yes, we all believe the fisheries have to be improved, they have to be improved to the extent that our fishermen can live by the amount of returns for the number of quintals of fish. If we put the money in that we are getting it back from the fishermen who will be benefited thereby and the revenue will benefit. I hope that the revenue will benefit by the moneys going into all these new industries. We have heard it said today that the cement plant was to be sold or the birch plant, rather, is to be sold. We have put four and a half million dollars, I believe, into that, and we have to find money to service that and to keep it up. I say sell it, yes, sell it by all means. I don't see—of course I had better not refer very much to that—But I do think that that was one plant where they should have been so hopeful of success on account of the fact it was based upon a native product of our own. But anyway, get away from that. I merely want to raise a voice against careless spending, about wastefulness, and I think it is about time the Government got down to hard economic facts that our people can only be taxed relatively small amounts in excess of what they already are being taxed if they are to reach that full life we hear of.

HON. G. J. POWER (Minister of Finance): Mr. Chairman, I would like to have a word to say on this business. I think I was one of the people, or probably the one person in the Cabinet who believed at the beginning there was something wrong with this idea of borrowing. I believed we should not do it, and that it was an indication we were in bad circumstances. Well, I have been convinced otherwise since, and I think anyone who looks at the matter intelligently will be also. For instance if we are going to spend, say we are going to build schools and hospitals and do all the things in public service and the additional public services which need to be done this year. Is it fair that the people who work and pay taxes in Newfoundland this year should have to pay for that? Should not a loan be raised and have that spread over ten or fifteen or twenty years and let the people who will enjoy those benefits during that period take their share of the burden?

MR. BROWNE: That is fair.

MR. POWER: And I think too that the fact that every Province of Canada goes into the bond markets every year and raises a bond issue. I don't know now if Alberta does every year but I know all the Provinces raise bond issues from time to time and the American Government raises bond issues. What is wrong with Newfoundland doing it? It is good financial practice and in the other Provinces of Canada and also good financial practice for the Federal Government. Then what can be so wrong with it as far as Newfoundland is concerned?

MR. HOLLETT: I have to point out on that, Mr. Chairman, the Eckhardt Mills, for instance, is not hospitals and schools and it is not a road. The same is true of United Cotton Mills and Superior Rubber. We have borrowed money to finance them. But that is the business of commerce and banks. They should be able to borrow money from banks. There is no reason why we should saddle our people with loans to finance these things. Yes, saddle the people with debt for the public services, hospitals and Mr. Smallwood: Mr. Chairman, I think we are all out of order.

Mr. Chairman: It seems to me I have allowed too much latitude. I allowed the Honourable Leader of the Opposition to make a second reading speech and then had to allow the Honourable Minister of Finance to reply.

Mr. Smallwood: Mr. Chairman, if I might finish?

Mr. Chairman: It is perfectly all right if the Honourable the Premier wishes to express himself.

Mr. Smallwood: I just want to extend the line my honourable friend has followed. He will be prepared to support too the idea of borrowing money to build hospitals, schools, roads. But I would be very much more prepared to borrow for economic development because with economic development you raise your money with which to build roads, hospitals and schools etc.

Mr. Chairman: I am afraid all this is out of order in Committee. Very much out of order.

Mr. Browne: What is the purpose of Committee if we cannot make some observations? Mr. Chairman, I do not want to say very much, but to deal with some of the details here.

Mr. Smallwood: Should have done that on second reading.

Mr. Browne: We are on Clause 4 dealing with guaranteed bonds and debentures. The Minister of Finance referred to building schools and hospitals and roads and that sort of thing. Certainly there is no doubt about that. Nobody disputes borrowing where it is necessary; but this is a function which the Government should not be doing.

Mr. Smallwood: Why?

Mr. Browne: The Minister of Economic Development has got ideas.

Mr. Smallwood: Tell us, why not?

Mr. Browne: Because the Government has not the facilities for carrying on business and observing and keeping track of those things for which they advance the capital and funds of the Government to do it. The Government is not intended to do that.

Mr. Smallwood: They are doing it all over the world. Has the honourable gentleman heard of the RFC? Does he not know that thousands of business firms in the United States are financed by the United States Government?

Mr. Browne: So what? This is not the United States. This Government is a Government of three hundred and seventy-five thousand people, and the Premier should remember that he has not the revenue of the United States behind him in the reckless, or perhaps that is too strong a word, but in the offhand way in which he talks about lending money. I suggest to the Premier to go easy. See how these things get on. He is in deep now. And all the time he is giving these guarantees etc. he is giving these charges against this country and limiting our own powers to borrow. So that when you go into the bond market you are faced with a picture of twenty-five million dollars you have guaranteed. There is no doubt about it, a guarantee is a liability. Now the Premier is so optimistic about these things, and there is never going to come a rainy day.

HON. J. R. CHALKER (Minister of Education): What is the amount in Prince Edward Island?

MR. BROWNE: I know in Nova Scotia I don't think they do this sort of thing. I don't know any Province except Saskatchewan, where they tried and failed.

MR. CHALKER: Ontario.

Carried.

MR. BROWNE: Under 6, there is a provision which gives the Government power to defer interest and the commencement of amortization of a loan. Now why is the Government taking power to do this sort of thing? Not only are they lending money but they are taking the power now to defer payment of interest. I don't see that this country can afford to go into business to such an extent as that.

MR. CURTIS: This is a section to justify what we have told the House has been done all along. That is a retroactive section to enable us to defer interest in the first two years and extend it over a longer period. It is not the intention to do that with regard to any of these loans we have here now.

MR. BROWNE: You have power.

MR. CURTIS: I know, but don't intend to exercise it. This is just a section to ratify what we have done.

MR. HOLLETT: I understand that, Mr. Chairman, but how far can the Government carry that idea? It seems to me bad enough to have to borrow money to loan to anybody particularly to people who come in from outside to set up business. We as a people have to borrow money to lend to these people and we also have to borrow money to pay the interest on a loan which we raised to give to these people.

MR. SMALLWOOD: We don't—Not at all.

MR. HOLLETT: We do, Sir, there is no question about that.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, all the questions in the world. It is just not so.

MR. HOLLETT: It is so. We borrowed the money to give them and we have to borrow another twelve million dollars now. You could get away from it by taking it out of current account.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is how we do it, exactly how we do it.

MR. HOLLETT: But have to pay interest, would you not? For interest on a twenty-five million dollar loan, this twelve million dollars involved there and previous loans, and you won't get rid of it at a cent less than 7% interest and servicing these loans. That is a rate of $750,000 or thereabout on twenty-five million dollars—I think that is right. That you have to get somewhere. If you don't borrow it if you take it out of the peoples' pockets to pay the interest on the loan, which you had to borrow in the first place to give these people. That to me is crazy financing.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It is not true.

MR. HOLLETT: It is true.
MR. SMALLWOOD: Where is the twenty-five million dollars? Account for the twenty-five millions given to these people.

MR. HOLLETT: I did not say given but lent.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Where is it? Account for it. Add it all up.

MR. HOLLETT: All right you are going to bring in figures—Let me now—I am not a moron, but according to the papers I am hardly able to open my mouth but somebody says I lie. I referred to another of these industries, the Hardwoods, Newfoundland Hardwoods, involved here, I referred to that and also to another which is not here and unfortunately I cannot now say anything about it. I was told I was telling lies. Now I see there is a retraction in the newspapers in Corner Brook saying I am not a champion of truth and honour. The House will be glad to know certainly that I am not a champion of truth and honour or of anything else merely because I said that the Corner Brook people sold cement to the Government, and I have the document here, the proof of it given to my by the Government—But that is another matter.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Order—I think that is out of order.

MR. HOLLETT: Yes, Mr. Chairman, that is another matter. That is all I have to say, Sir.

Carried.

Schedule carried.

On motion the Committee rose and reported having passed the Bill without amendment. "An Act to Provide for Advance and Guarantee of Loans by the Government and to Amend Certain Statutes Relating to Loans."

Second Reading of Bill "An Act to Amend the House of Assembly Act":

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, this is a Bill whose natural effect will be to increase the membership in the House of Assembly from twenty-six now to thirty-three.

My first recollection of the House of Assembly is of a House that had a membership of thirty-six members. I think that for all the first part of the present century, after the year 1900 and for perhaps a decade or more prior to 1900 the membership of the House was thirty-six. Sir Richard Squires increased the membership to forty around the year 1928 or 1929, somewhere around there, after he came in in the election of 1928.

MR. BROWNE: The Monroe Government made it forty.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The Monroe Government between 1924 and 1928 increased the representation from thirty-six to forty members, and he made all constituencies, I think, one man constituencies. But Sir Richard Squires, after the election of 1928 and before the election of 1932, for reasons of financial urgency and for the purpose of economy reduced the number from forty to its present number of twenty-eight, or further he reduced the number to twenty-seven. Then as one of the Terms of Confederation the number was increased by one from twenty-seven to twenty-eight. That was to include Labrador for the first time as a constituency entitled to return one member to the House of Assembly. So that today we have a House of twenty-eight members. The population of Newfoundland today is about 380,000 souls. When it was about 200,000 the membership in this House numbered thirty-six yet today with 580,000 we have only twenty-eight. The present Bill would raise the number to thirty-three and would make all constituencies one man constituencies, each of them electing one member to this House.

Now the additions are, and I begin in the far-north—first in Labrador—We divide Labrador into two constituencies, Labrador North and Labrador South, each of them electing one man. On the west coast we divide Humbermouth District into two constituencies, each of them electing one member. We do that by splitting the present Humber District into two with a line running roughly north and south in the vicinity of the town of Corner Brook, and naming the two constituencies Humber West and Humber East. Again on the west coast we divide the District of St. Georges-Port au Port, which is presently one constituency electing one member to this House, into two separate constituencies, one of them being the Peninsula of Port au Port and part of the mainland of the Island of Newfoundland to the east of the isthmus and including Harmon Field and Stephenville. The rest of the District will be the District of St. Georges. Coming east we divide the District of Grand Falls into two. We run a line almost exactly north and south between Grand Falls and Windsor to the west and Botwood to the east. West of that line we include the Town of Grand Falls and the Town of Windsor and the Town of Bishop's Falls and the Town of Badger and the Town of Millertown and Buchans—But not Bishop's Falls, excuse me, that is the District of Grand Falls. Now east of that line are Bishop's Falls, Botwood, the settlements out the bay and Notre Dame Junction, Northeast Arm, Lewisporte and Gander. That is the constituency of Gander. In connection with the District of Gander, one small settlement of Gander Airport, that is the Terminal and also Union East, that one section is in the District which I have the honour to represent in this House, that is Bonavista North. But in the new Bill we have put all of Gander in the District of Gander and removed it from the District of Bonavista North.

I may say here a purely personal thing—I am personally very sorry to have lost part of Gander in Bonavista North. I have sentimental attachments to Gander, and I regret seeing it, even the little bit of Gander presently in my district of Bonavista North leaving my district and going into the new district of Gander. No I admit that logically it is the right thing to do.

There are then no other changes until you get eastward to the District of Harbour Main-Bell Island. In that district we have separated Bell Island from the District of Harbour Main-Bell Island so that the mainland part of the district that is out here in Conception Bay becomes one district electing one member and Bell Island itself becomes one district electing one member. That is not an increase because it is presently a two-man district electing two members. It will now be two separate districts with each one of them electing a man, so that the same area will elect the same number of men now but in a different way.

Then a slight change is made in the District of Ferryland. The southern boundary of Ferryland District is pushed a little to the west to come around to Peter's River—The northern boundary is shifted a little in the area of the Goulds— I will come back to the District of St. John's. Then the District of Placentia-St. Mary's has been made into two separate districts, one the District of St. Mary's and the other the District of Placentia East. No change is made in the District of Placentia West nor in the District of Burin. But in the District of Fortune-Hermitage and again in the District of Burgeo-LaPoile we have made a difference in the boundary. We have pushed the boundary further north to take in part of the area of the island which was not in any district. There was actually an area of Newfoundland which did not belong to the district at all. So we have extended the boundaries of these two southwest coast districts to include those unoccupied and unclaimed areas of Newfoundland.

Now coming to the District of St. John's. We have divided the districts— presently St. John's is in two districts, St. John's East and St. John's West. Each of these districts elects two members, in fact all four of them are sitting opposite me at the present moment. St. John's West is one constituency and elects two members. St. John's East is one constituency and it elects two members. What we have done is to divide St. John's into four districts each of them electing one member, St. John's North, St. John's South— These are, speaking approximately, the externs of the city, the northern extern and the southern extern. Then there is the city itself, which is divided into two, east and west, each of them electing one member. Thus we get St. John's North, St. John's East, St. John's West and St. John's South.

I have here a map of the whole Province showing the new districts. I will table it especially for the benefit of members on the other side. At the same time I will table copies of all the constituencies, or maps of all the constituencies for the benefit of my honourable friends opposite. They will see here Humber District as it stands today. What we have done is run a line north and south through Corner Brook West and Curling and all of both is in Humber West, Corner Brook Townsite and Corner Brook East and Humbermouth and everything east of that is in Humber East. In Grand Falls District which was all of this, we run a line north and south and this is Gander District and that Grand Falls District. St. Barbe is left the same and White Bay is the same. All these constituencies are the same except Bonavista North where this section is made here to take all of Gander into Gander District and take it out of Bonavista North.

Then again the House will see here in Harbour Main District, Harbour Main is one district by itself and will see Bell Island as a separate district. There has been a slight change made here on the northern end of Ferryland District but on the southern end no change. St. Mary's District consists of all St. Mary's Bay and Cape Shore northward up to but not including Point Verde. That is the District of St. Mary's. The northern boundary remains the same. Here in Fortune-Hermitage and Burgeo-LaPoile we simply brought the boundary a little north to take in unoccupied and unallocated territory which existed in the old maps.

This is a map of Humber District East, which I table. This is St. Barbe and White Bay; Bonavista North showing Gander or a section of Gander to be taken out of it. This is the District of St. George's showing Port au Port taken out: this is the District of Port au Port; this is the District of Lab-rator North and Labrador South; this is the District of Burgeo-LaPoile; Fortune-Hermitage, Placentia West, Placentia East, the District of St. Mary's, District of Ferryland. Here is the District of St. John's North; the District of St. John's East; the District of St. John's West; the District of St. John's South. Here is the District of Gander. Here is the District of Bell Island with Harbour Main left off and the District of Harbour Main with Bell Island left off. Here is the District of Grand Falls.

I think, Mr. Speaker, that is the explanation. In Committee of the Whole on the Bill I have no doubt whatsoever that members of the House on all sides will want more detailed information. We will, of course, be glad to give all the information we have affecting this Bill.

Mr. Speaker, I move the second reading of the Bill.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the Premier would consider moving the adjournment. We certainly have seen nothing. I have seen the Act, but the voters' list, anything at all—I wonder if the Premier would adjourn the debate.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Of course, Mr. Speaker. There is no desire in the wide world that when it is introduced for second reading it has to be debated before the honourable gentlemen on the opposite side are ready to proceed—all that is appreciated and I move the adjournment of the debate.

MR. HOLLETT: I wonder, Mr. Speaker, if the Honourable the Premier would indicate what time he expects this to get through?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Whatever time it takes. There is no time limit on it—any amount of time.

On motion debate on second reading adjourned.

MR. SPEAKER: The Chair appreciates it would be impossible for the Opposition or the back benchers to discuss such a Bill without having seen the maps, neither has Mr. Speaker himself seen the maps.

MR. HOLLETT: May we have a ten minute recess, Mr. Speaker.

On motion the House adjourned for ten minutes.

Mr. Speaker returned to the Chair.

Second Reading of Bill “An Act Further to Amend the Civil Service Act”:

HON. S. J. HEFFERTON (Minister of Municipal Affairs and Supply): Mr. Speaker, one of the most important amendments in this particular Bill is—originally in the Civil Service Act, section 9 said no person not a British subject shall be appointed to an established post. Within recent years we have had occasion on several instances to engage professional people, particularly in the Department of Health, who have come to us and stayed with us some considerable time. So that there is an amendment proposed here whereby a person who is not a British subject yet may be appointed to an established post in the Department of Health or other departments as well. For instance in the Department of Public Works amongst others.

Again, Sir, we have had several instances where teachers after spending a number of years at their profession, contributing to a pension, have left the teaching profession to enter the civil service. Provision is made in the Civil Service Act where teachers' pensions—where it is possible to carry forward the pensionable years from one to another. But we have instances where a teacher, spending as many as fifteen years in the teaching profession and four or five years subsequently as a civil servant, and then for some reason or other leaves the civil service and goes on to Federal employment, in one particular instance, at the request of the Government, has come back to the provincial service—A provision here in this Bill makes it possible for the years of service as a teacher provided his pensionable payments are still there and his years as a civil servant can be counted as pensionable years, but not the years, of course, in which he was a Federal employee.

Another section makes it possible for teachers and civil servants who had put in a considerable number of years of service and have left either the teaching ranks or the civil service in order to enter public service, that is to say, to contest seats for the House of Assembly, should political fortune deem it possible that they are not able to hold on to that public service, or for some reason or other they wish to re-enter the civil service, they may count as years of pensionable service the years which they had either as teachers or civil servants prior to their entering public life, but their years of service as public servants of the Crown shall not be counted as pensionable years.

There are a few changes in the sections dealing with gratuities, making a distinction between the gratuities to persons who have only put in ten years of service and those who have put in a much longer period. In addition to that there is another amendment to this particular Bill which has been circulated. The new amendment is not in the hands of the members of the House, but I shall endeavour to have the copies circulated tomorrow morning.

MR. BROWNE: You mean there is an amendment to that already?

MR. HEFFERTON: No not an amendment but an additional section. We have had several instances where people in professional and technical capacities have been taken on on a contractual basis for a term. Under the Civil Service Act people cannot be contracted for a term, they can only be contracted during life. Consequently we have added to the Bill before the House now a further amendment, so that people in professional and technical capacities can be under statutory legislation engaged for a definite term of service and not during life.

Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of this Bill.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, like so many other Bills this is just thrown at us. We have no time to study it, no time at all. This Bill embodies principles which are unique. I don't believe there is any province in Canada has provisions like the Minister has just tried to explain. This Government is being run for the benefit of the Liberal Party. That is why they have those provisions in it. Now there is a new provision that a foreigner can become a member of the civil service. Where in the world will you find a provision where a foreigner can become a member of the civil service? Dr. Sennewald could be appointed immediately to the civil service as soon as this Bill passes; Germans, Latvians, people of any nationality have the same privileges as any citizens, without having to go through the five years which the Department of Citizenship and Immigration requires.
Then—Then this delightful section, section 6. I am sure the Minister was ashamed when he read it.

MR. SPEAKER: Order.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I suggest to Your Honour that is entirely unparliamentary, and the honourable gentleman ought to be required to retract it.

MR. SPEAKER: I have already called—Order. It is unparliamentary to say the Minister ought to be ashamed—

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, I withdraw that statement—I think the Government ought to be ashamed, if that is not unparliamentary.

MR. SPEAKER: I am afraid it is.

MR. BROWNE: Well, Mr. Speaker, I will read it and people can understand themselves. I withdraw the statement—but let me read it.

"Where an established civil servant retired for the purpose of (a) contesting an election or a by-election for the return of members or a member to the Parliament of Canada or to the Legislature of the Province."

Now then, when he retires for that purpose and within two years after he contested the election, if he was not elected, or within two years after he ceased to be a member of the Parliament of Canada or of the Legislature of the Province, if he was elected, he applied in writing to the Minister to be reappointed, and before the expiration of three months next following such application is re-appointed an established civil servant, all services done before by him count for him.

In other words my opponent who ran in the Federal Election in August last retired from the civil service with about ten years of time served which entitled him to a pension, if he should retire from the position he now has as a member of Parliament he can go back to his job just the same as if nothing had happened. And the Premier tomorrow, if he has an election this year, or if he has an election any year, can go around to the civil service and say—"Won't you go to the District of Port au Port or to the District of St. George's, Placentia West or St. John's North," all these new constituencies—"I want you to go, you need not worry if you are defeated, you can go back to your job." That is something new. That is a beauty I wonder who cooked up that one? I think that is either attributable to the fertile mind of the Premier or the Minister of Finance. I can't imagine who else would have thought that up.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Thank you!

MR. BROWNE: You are welcome! I wonder if the members of the Civil Service Organization or of the Provincial Employees were consulted in regard to this provision. The Minister did not say anything about them when he was introducing the Bill.

MR. HEFFERTON: Why should it?

MR. BROWNE: Because when the Act was passed in 1947 I was president of the Civil Service Association, and we spent months considering with the Commission of Government every clause that was in it before it was introduced and passed. Now you throw it at us and say, here it is, put it through all its readings tonight and tomorrow and it becomes law without giving any consideration to the implications. That is not the only Bill that has been done with, it is done with twenty-five Bills on the Order Paper today which are expected to go through.

Mr. Speaker, it is pretty difficult to stand up here on the spur of the moment and discuss a measure as far-reaching as the provisions of this Bill. I can't say from listening to the Minister's explanation what is involved in this. I think we should have time to study it and consult with the officers of the Civil Service Association. I don't think this should be rushed through like that. Certainly since I am on my feet I suppose I have to do something. I am going to move that this Bill be not now read a second time, but that it be read a second time six months hence.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Speaking to that, Mr. Speaker, I suggest that it is out of order, a simple negative vote would get the same effect exactly. I would speak now to the main motion.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, surely the Premier should wait until you have given a ruling. Is it out of order to move a six months hoist for a Bill? I suggest it is perfectly in order, and it is the only thing to be done.

MR. SPEAKER: Yes, it is in order.

MR. HOLLETT: In that case I rise to second the motion of my honourable and learned friend for a six months hoist for this Bill, Sir. The statement made by the mover of this motion, Sir, sums up the general complaints which anybody should have against a Bill such as this. It states "a person who is not a British subject shall not be appointed to an established post." But it provides that a person who is not a British subject may be appointed in a professional capacity to established posts. So they can syphon off all the foreigners in this country to the Department of Health not only as civil servants but we can make the jobs pensionable for them. I don't suppose that is any hanging matter really. Still it seems to me rather strange that a person coming into this country who has spent most of his life in another, a foreign country, can become a civil servant in the Department of Health in an established post, and from there can go—As a matter of fact I presume can have an established post.

MR. CHALKER: They are doing that all the time.

MR. HOLLETT: Not as civil servants?

MR. CHALKER: Yes.

MR. HOLLETT: Foreigners in established posts?

MR. CHALKER: No, not established posts. But we have many Irish doctors coming in here and they wish to become civil servants or they are not going to come. We have had great difficulty in getting sufficient doctors.

MR. HOLLETT: Irish doctors are civil servants, are they not?

MR. CHALKER: Not when from Southern Ireland.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It is not quite so terrible as it sounded.

MR. HOLLETT: Bad enough. As a matter of fact it is worse, I expect, than we can see at first sight. After all we have not had an opportunity of reading it. These doctors can come out of the Department of Health and go as teachers or go into any other job afterwards becoming established.

MR. CURTIS: The word professional is there.
MR. SMALLWOOD: Medical doctors going to leave and become teachers?

MR. HOLLETT: They might under the Department of Medicine they are going to set up.

MR. SMALLWOOD: What is wrong with that?

MR. HOLLETT: I am quite sure this should not be rushed upon this House at this particular time of the night, when we of the Opposition, particularly ever since 11:00 o'clock this morning—and to bring in this Bill without anybody having an opportunity to study it and expect us to talk on second reading. I think the member on my right is perfectly in order to move to give it a six months hoist. We have enough legislation now, if the Premier is going to get to Labrador, north or south, wherever he is going.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Both.

MR. HOLLETT: I hope the Premier will take a copy of this Bill down there and talk about it down there. It is a good spot to talk about it. Certainly this is no spot to talk about it tonight. I don't know—We are all quite civilized here tonight after having seen certain documents brought in, which I can't refer to at the moment—I don't feel civilized after certain matters which I will talk about on another occasion. A six months hoist I suppose would mean they would just have to postpone it until after the election. Then there would be time to study it and it might be passed upon. I don't see any particular reason to rush this thing through nor that particular section where an established civil servant retires to contest an election. As my honourable friend pointed out all the Premier has to do is select a good slate. He threatened here one time not long ago when he turned around to a member and said—"I could take the whole lot of you and get a new crowd to go out and win the country"—That is a doubtful matter. But if he is to be allowed to get the best men in the civil service to run in various districts, I strongly suggest it would be a good opportunity to bring back a good majority here. I don't think that is fair. Certainly he is going to take Liberals, and I expect good men in the civil service. If they happen to be defeated, or if they are elected and serve out a term, they can go back to their jobs, and get their pensions rights from the very date of their appointment twenty years ago or what not. I put it to you, Sir, that looks to me to be rather strange, that the Premier or any man who is the Leader of the Government should be able to go to the civil service and pick out the best men there to run. It might be for the betterment of the country, I grant you, but not as I see it. It is not clean politics because we of the Opposition or any opposition would not be able to go to the civil service and take out the good men.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Why not?

MR. HOLLETT: Because you would proceed to fire them immediately after the election if they were not elected.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Nonsense.

MR. HOLLETT: I suppose they would be taken back with open arms by the present Government. There is no question about it you might get good persons. The Honourable Minister of Mines and Resources was a civil servant for a good many years. He did run for an election and was elected and is now a Minister of the Crown. I don’t know if under this Act he would, after he gets defeated next November, if he could go back to his job.

DR. ROWE: I have no intention.

MR. HOLLETT: I don’t know which particular section he is going to take this time. I would advise him to go as far north as possible. Mr. Speaker, that has not been explored down there. There are probably lots of mines and minerals down there.

I do think there is no particular reason, and no reason has been given, why this particular piece of legislation is to be brought in here. I presume we would be told sometime. I am quite sure that my honourable friend here is quite justified in moving a six months hoist. Without talking unduly on this, Sir, I have much pleasure in seconding the motion.

MR. SPEAKER: The original motion was that this Bill be now read a second time, to which an amendment has been moved and seconded that the word “now” be deleted and the words “six months hence” be substituted. Any honourable member who speaks now will speak to the amendment and will not be considered to be speaking to the main question.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It may be a little difficult to distinguish between the motion and the amendment to the motion. The reasons why the amendment ought to be defeated are, of course, the reasons why the motion ought to be carried. It is a little difficult to distinguish between them. I think that on sober reflection, careful, calm reflection, by the honourable gentlemen who are now disturbed by other matters will show that this is very wise legislation, very wise. A large part of it came directly from the United Kingdom. In the United Kingdom a member of the teaching profession may and often does enter public life and if he does his pension rights as a teacher are fully protected by law. So we propose to do the same thing. Similarly, I believe, in the United Kingdom if a member of the public service goes into public life any pension rights he had earned as a member of the civil service are protected and preserved, and we wish to do the same thing.

MR. BROWNE: Are you sure of that?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I am certain about teachers.

MR. HOLLETT: Nonsense.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The honourable gentleman likes that word. We are not often wrong in a matter such as this. Now, we think this is a very wise piece of legislation, very wise. Take, for example, the honourable gentleman who is Minister of Mines and Resources. He was a school teacher for many years in Newfoundland, not a great many years, but for many years. Then he was a civil servant for some more years, and as a teacher and as a civil servant he undoubtedly qualified himself excellently to be a member of this House. There is no question of that. Other honourable gentlemen who are here—The Deputy-Speaker came out of a school straight into this Chamber as a member of the House. He is undoubtedly qualified, indeed qualified himself very well to be a member of this House by his training and work as a school teacher. As did the Honourable Minister of Public Welfare, who is absent, the Honourable Minister of Fisheries and Co-operatives.

MR. SPEAKER: I was going to rule the Honourable Leader of the Opposition out of order when he made reference to the Minister of Mines and Resources on the grounds that it could be considered a personal reference. I regret I did not do so. Now I have to allow the Premier to make references also to honourable members. I would ask it be borne in mind such comments as these are really personal.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I do not wish to be personal. I wish only to illustrate the point. Take the honourable and learned member for St. John's West who for many years was in the public service of Newfoundland, and in a very distinguished position.

MR. BROWNE: Very low, very low.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I will say a very distinguished position. I don't know if he was pensionable or not—Frankly I do not know. He resigned.

If the Honourable Minister of Finance were here I wonder would the honourable member say what he did about him while he was out of the House.

MR. POWER: What was that?

MR. SMALLWOOD: He said this legislation originated in the fertile brain of the Honourable Minister of Finance.

MR. POWER: This one here?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I don't know if the honourable member was pensionable or not. This legislation, I should imagine, would preserve any pension rights he had. Now I ask this question? If there is a magistrate in Newfoundland anywhere or a judge or a teacher or a civil servant who has the honourable ambition to become a member of this House, if he is elected, should he be discouraged or encouraged to do so? Should he be called upon to sacrifice twenty-five or thirty years of pension rights earned? Because if you are a civil servant and you voluntarily pay towards your own pension rights, and if you quit to become a public man from being a public servant, should you be required to make that sacrifice? We think not. That is what the legislation is about. On second thought: While it is true that some members on this side of the House will benefit from it, that is true, I would suggest that for many years to come men on both sides of the House will benefit. If any political party has difficulty in getting good types of men as candidates this legislation if it passes into law makes that task easier for all parties because the very Opposition itself will have it easier to find magistrates, civil servants, teachers to become candidates for their party, if the pension rights of these persons are protected by law, by statute. That is what this statute is.

Now on the other point, foreigners: I was a little startled, I admit candidly, when this legislation came before Cabinet, that we were going to start making foreigners established civil servants, I was startled. I admit I have had to send the deputy or assistant-deputy now and then across the water to recruit doctors, nurses and the like, not only nurses but doctors for public health services, not as institutional workers but as departmental workers. Just as often as not he would come back without success, without having recruited anyone. Now we want to make it easier for him to recruit, to be able to offer civil service status to doctors and nurses and dentists. They won't all be Germans. They won't all be Latvians. Here we have another instance. We have brought in an outstanding Latvian as a forester, a Mr. Finn Frost, a Swede, as chief forester for Newfoundland. As the law stands we cannot make him an established civil servant. We have to engage him by contract. My colleague, the Minister of Public Works has got to scour North America for roads engineers. He has got Germans, Latvians and Lithuanians, and I don't know what. And what we have to do is take each one by contract. Now these men when they get in their jobs they judge the thing that we did was to entice them away from where they worked. So as they have been enticed by us so others begin to entice them away from us. Now we cannot offer them established posts so they have succeeded in enticing them away. We can hold them and must hold them or our road building stops. The only way to do so is to establish them as civil servants in which case at the end of a proper period of time they become eligible for pensions. That is the way to hold them, doctors, dentists, nurses, road engineers, professional men who are very difficult to get and for whom there is tremendous competition in the effort to get them. I think that the honourable gentlemen on calm reflection will agree that this is good legislation.

But there is one other point—We will vote against this amendment. We did not bring it in to have it debated six months hence which means it will not be debated at all, as the House will not be in session six months hence. Therefore it is a way to kill the Bill, a well-known way, a good parliamentary scheme.

MR. HOLLETT: Bring in another after next fall.

MR. SMALLWOOD: We don't want to bring in another. We don't want to do it now. Possibly the honourable gentleman does not want us to do it because, we think we should have done it long ago. We will vote against the amendment.

On the other hand I don't know where the honourable gentleman got this thought of rushing. Who has been suggesting rushing through? He is the only one who spoke to it. The honourable member of the Opposition was the only one who spoke to the amendment. I don't remember his saying anything about this having to be rushed through. It merely went through normal procedure. When the order was called the Minister moved it. Now it is open for debate. If the honourable gentlemen opposite are not ready to debate it, we have never yet in five years refused an adjournment of a debate. If the honourable gentlemen are not ready to debate it, well and good, we will wait until they are ready. I don't mean to say if they are not ready for a year, but within a reasonable time.

MR. HOLLETT: Six months.

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, we don't wait six months.

MR. SPEAKER: In view of the infrequency of such occurrence as this matter I feel it my duty to point out now that both honourable members for St. John's East may speak to this amendment and still speak to the main question, provided the amendment is lost. If the amendment is carried, of course, there is no question left. Any other honourable member may speak to the amendment without forfeiting the right to speak to the main question.

MR. FOGWILL: Mr. Speaker, I will speak to the amendment. It has been pointed out by the Premier that at no time has any request by the Opposition been refused to adjourn any debate. Now that may be so.
However, Sir, this legislation, as far as I am concerned, must be something the Government has had in mind for a long time. I don't see any reason why more time could not have been allowed to study this Bill, not only by the Opposition but the Government members too, the ordinary members on the Government side, just as well as many of our citizens who perhaps may be vitally concerned with this kind of legislation.

Speaking to the amendment, Sir, I know the amendment will be lost. I don't see any reason why we should be here now at 11:00 o'clock in the night in the month of June. We may be here the day of the races as far as I am concerned, I don't care. Mr.
Speakers I am not going to say any more. I think it is wrong to hand a small opposition legislation of this sort in the middle of June at 11:00 o'clock in the night. I support this amendment. I think there should be men on the opposite side, if they have any common sense—

MR. SPEAKER: That remark is out of order.

MR. FOGWILL: I withdraw it then, Sir.

MR. HIGGINS: Mr. Speaker, I support the amendment. I know I am only wasting my time too. It seems to me that legislation that is known to certain of the executive for a long time, because they don't draft up an Act like that out of a clear sky—I don't know whose fertile brain originated it. I am not going to decide that. Certain it is that the probabilities are that the back benchers on the other side of the House are just as ignorant of this Act as we unfortunately are on our side.

MR. COURAGE: No.

MR. HIGGINS: I very nearly, Mr.
Speaker, fell into error and said, "Speak for yourself young men" (the poetic quotation).

But I don't see the great necessity for proceeding with this legislation. It is quite obvious that the amendment is going to be lost. I formally record my support of it.

MR. SPEAKER: The question is that this Bill be now read a second time. The amendment will be put in the form "that the word 'now' do stand part of the question." Therefore honourable members who vote aye will be voting against the amendment and honourable members who vote nay will be voting for the amendment.

Motion put.

MR. SPEAKER: In my opinion the ayes have it.

MR. HOLLETT: Divide.

MR. BROWNE: Divide.

Division.

MR. SPEAKER: The "ayes" will stand and honourable members as called will resume their seats:

Hon. the Premier, Hon. the Attorney General, Hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs and Supply, Hon. Minister of Fisheries and Co-operatives, Hon. Minister of Finance, Hon. Minister of Labour, Hon. Minister of Public Works, Hon. Minister of Mines and Resources, Hon. Minister of Provincial Affairs, Mr. Morgan, Mr. Button, Mr. Janes, Mr. Norman, Mr. Courage, Mr. Mercer, Mr. Canning.

The “nays”:

Hon. Leader of the Opposition, Mr. Browne, Mr. Fogwill, Mr. Higgins.

Motion carried seventeen to four.

MR. BROWNE: On a point of information, Mr. Speaker: Was that the main motion which has been put? If the amendment were put it should have been the other way and those in favour of the amendment should stand.

MR. SPEAKER: I think the honourable member will find the procedure to be correct. The main motion stands. It is now before the House that this Bill be now read a second time. Is the House ready for the question?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, before Your Honour puts the question, if the honourable gentlemen opposite are not ready to go ahead, two have spoken and two have not, and there is another honourable member not present.

MR. SPEAKER: I thought I made that quite clear. The honourable members for St. John's East may speak to the main motion as may the Honourable the Premier himself.

MR. HOLLETT: If I may, Mr. Speaker, I was informed after I spoke that I would not be allowed to speak again. I suggest I might in courtesy have been told that before—I should have known the rule.

MR. SPEAKER: I am almost inclined to resent the use of the word “courtesy”. It is not my duty to tell honourable members when they may speak to the motion. They are supposed to know the law. I think I went beyond my scope even to point out that the two honourable members might speak and how you may vote. I assure honourable members if this House wants the full rigor of procedure carried out it can be done but it won’t be nearly so comfortable a House.

Now the main motion is before the House—if no honourable gentleman wishes to speak I will put the question.

Motion carried. Bill now read a second time.

MR. SPEAKER: The Minister in charge of the Bill is to tell the Chair when he wants the Bill to go to Committee of the Whole House else the Chair presumes that the House is not going to refer it to a Committee of the Whole.

MR. CURTIS: Tomorrow, Mr. Speaker.

On motion Bill ordered referred to a Committee of the Whole on tomorrow.

Second Reading of Bill “An Act to Amend the Botwood Water Corporation Act, 1952”:

MR. SPENCER: Mr. Speaker, this Act is merely an amendment to provide for the addition of a Government member who may be added to this Botwood Corporation. Honourable members will know in the original Bill there shall be a corporation consisting of seven members which shall be called the Botwood Water Corporation, and such members may be appointed as may be necessary to conform with the provisions of the Subsidized Institutions Act, chapter 46 of the Revised Statutes of Newfoundland, 1952. The Subsidized Institutions Act provides that two members may be members of the Government. This corporation is operating at the present time with seven members appointed in their community and has been conducting the business of the Corporation up to the present time it is true. However, for the information of the House I might say, in connection with this Bill, that they were assisted by the members of the Government whom they requested. The Public Works Department assisted them in the organization. Now this provision is merely to provide and legalize the appointment of two Government members on the corporation. I move second reading.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, when the Minister is replying he might give us some information as to who the people are, who will be designated to be members. I gathered from him that it was an official of the Department of Public Works who helped them organize, and there are two members of the Government, I think, he said.

MR. SPENCER: I meant of the Government service, the civil service who were assigned the duty of sitting in with this corporation to assist them, I presume, in carrying out their duties. The Government is trying to assist now and this is part of the policy of helping finance, and the Government has a stake in the proposition and we require that somebody will be there to watch the interests of the Government and see the thing is carried out properly.

MR. BROWNE: Well, Mr. Speaker, it seems to me the Government is trying to do too much in all this legislation, giving assistance, trying to run before we can walk. Local Government should be built up like everything else from down to up and not start at the top with big propositions. The people in Botwood, it seems to me, should study out the proposition themselves and be in a position, with guidance of course, to be able to carry out the proposition such as this, as should other communities as well. I forget what the amount is that the Government is going to advance in connection with this.

MR. SPENCER: We are not advancing anything—We are guaranteeing a loan.

MR. BROWNE: Well, a Government guarantee of $30,000. That reminds me of a chap who came to us and said, look here, I was just down to the bank to get a loan, but they could not give me a loan unless I got some friend of mine to put his name on the back. I just want you to put your name on the back, that is all. That is all the Government is doing. It is a good thing to encourage the communities to organize but I take it this is only just a water corporation just for the mere purpose of bringing the water to the community. I don’t know what steps the Government took to encourage them to form a community council or a town council. They have not done it. Would it not be better to do that? We have the machinery there.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The honourable gentleman does not know Botwood, I can see that now.

MR. BROWNE: Well, as my honourable friend here knows it, but it seems to me a community like Botwood so close to the progressive community of Grand Falls—

MR. SMALLWOOD: I tried to get a town council in Grand Falls once.

MR. BROWNE: Well, Windsor has one.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The very first in Newfoundland outside the city.
MR. BROWNE : There does not seem to be any reason why Botwood should not do the same thing. But there is an educational job to be done there in encouraging these communities to form these councils. This seems to be the end result and not the proper way to go about it.

MR. HOLLETT : Mr. Speaker, I don't wish to say very much on this. Whilst I agree with some of the things said by my learned friend, that we have to be careful about the backing of notes and guaranteeing bonds and that sort of thing, I said that before tonight—I agree with that part of it. I do also think that the matter of forming this water corporation in Botwood is something which I believe would redound to the welfare of the people there. The Premier said something about not knowing Botwood. I do know it. I have visited it many times, and I think we can do some little thing towards assisting the people there to get a clean supply of water. We will then at least have done something and put some money in the right direction. I am quite sure that my honourable friend on my right will not vote against the principle of that at all, but merely the principle of backing notes here, there and everywhere.

I do agree that this Bill is a good Bill, at least in my opinion it is a good Bill.

On motion Bill read a second time, ordered referred to a Committee of the Whole House on tomorrow.

Second Reading of Bill "An Act to Amend the Summary Jurisdiction Act":

MR. CURTIS : Mr. Speaker, I would not introduce this Bill at this hour but it is a purely formal one. Under the provisions of the Summary Jurisdictions Act as provided in Section 115, chapter 117, volume 2—Whenever any building or property shall be injured or destroyed by fire, the magistrate or justice nearest to the place in which the fire occurred shall make an investigation to ascertain the cause or origin of the fire and such magistrate or justice may enforce the attendance of such persons, to give evidence before him as he may require, by summons or warrant and examine them under oath, and the proceedings and all depositions connected therewith shall be returned to the Attorney General for such further proceedings as may be prescribed by law.

The object of this amendment is to make it unnecessary for magistrates to hold such inquiries in the event there already should have been an inquiry made under the Fire Prevention Act. In other words it would be foolish to have two inquiries into the same fire. Therefore it is proposed to add at the end of the section the following:—

Provided the magistrate shall not be required to make an investigation into a fire, where the Attorney General has notified him that an inquiry into that fire has been or will be held under the Fire Prevention Act, 1954.

I think this is obviously necessary and obviously desirable and I think there can be no possible objection to it, and I move the second reading, Mr. Speaker.

On motion Bill read a second time, ordered referred to a Committee of the Whole House on tomorrow.

MR. SMALLWOOD : Mr. Speaker, I move all remaining Orders of the Day do stand deferred, and that the House at its rising do adjourn until tomorrow Friday at 1100 a.m. of the clock.
The House then adjourned until tomorrow, Friday, June 18, at 11:00 a.m. of the clock.

FRIDAY, June 18, 1954.

MORNING SESSION

The House met at eleven of the clock in the morning, pursuant to adjournment.

Presenting Petitions
None.

Presenting Reports of Standing and Select Committees
None.

Notice of Motion

HON L. R. CURTIS (Attorney General) : Mr. Speaker, I give notice I will, before the House goes into Committee on several bills, ask leave to have the Third Reading of the Bills:

1. An Act Further to Amend the City of St. John’s Act.

2. An Act Respecting the Inspection of Fish.

To have the third reading of these two bills rescinded and that these two bills be recommitted with a view to making minor amendments. This is in accordance with the Rules of the House as amended last session.

Answers to Questions

MR. M. HOLLETT (Leader of the Opposition) : Mr. Speaker, before we leave answers to questions I wonder if the Honourable the Premier received the answers from the Finance Department?

HON. J. R. SMALLWOOD (Prime Minister) : The Finance Department is busily at it and asked me if it would be all right to have them this afternoon. I told them it would. They will, they told me, have it ready this afternoon. It is quite a job they are doing.

Orders of The Day

First Readings:

A Bill, “An Act to Establish the Newfoundland Power Commission”:

On motion read a first time—Ordered read a second time at a later hour this day.

On motion read a first time, ordered read a second time at a later hour this day.

MR. W. J. BROWNE : I wonder when the Attorney General is likely to bring in a bill, An Act to order only a certain amount of Bills to be brought in in each session?

MR. CURTIS : I would have great pleasure in doing so.

Second Reading of Bill, “An Act to Provide for the Raising of Funds for Schools in Certain Areas”:

MR. SMALLWOOD : Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of this bill.

MR. BROWNE : Mr. Speaker, I wonder if we could have a copy?

MR. SPEAKER : I am about to hold the motion as the Bill has not yet been distributed.

MR. CURTIS : Mr. Speaker perhaps the order might stand and we could go ahead with items 13 and 14.

Second Reading of Bill, “An Act to Amend the Urban and Rural Planning Act”, 1953:
Mr. Speaker, there are a few relatively minor amendments, yet one of them an important amendment to the Urban and Rural Planning Act passed in 1953. The first amendment calls for the substitution of the preposition “to” for the conjunction “or” in the original Act. It was a typographical error.

The second and more important amendment—In the original, section 6 (2) refers to section 11, but section 11 deals only with an interim development plan. An amendment is put in so that could be carried out not only by an interim Government but also in the final plan. In section 32 and 33 some reference is made to section 11 so that we can take action by interim Government for final plans for rural and urban planning.

Mr. Speaker, I move the second reading of this Bill.

On motion Bill read a second time and ordered referred to a Committee of the Whole House at a later hour this day.

Second Reading of Bill, “An Act to Amend the Local Government (Receivership) Act”

MR. HEFFERTON: Mr. Speaker, we have a curious anomaly in this legislation dealing with town councils and incorporated areas. It is proposed to revoke an order incorporating a municipality by order of the Lieutenant-Governor in Council, but apparently being legally appointed cannot be dismissed from office except on certain grounds such as imprudence or irregularity of some kind. This amendment to the Receivership Act empowers the Lieutenant-Governor in Council to appoint a receiver and wind up the affairs of a council.

I move the second reading of this Bill, Mr. Speaker.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the Minister would mind telling us if such an experience has already happened, and if there is occasion at the present time for the use of the legislation which he now proposes?

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, this is the first time I have had occasion to look at this. I take it this is meant for the special purpose that municipalities may be disbanded by order in council when in default or in danger of defaulting. This would cover a multitude of sins, when they deem it in the best interest of the municipality and its creditors that the municipality be disbanded and its affairs wound up. It seems to me, Mr. Speaker, this is a peculiar piece of legislation. For instance we pass legislation empowering the electors in a certain area to elect their own town council. As we all know the establishment of town councils in this country has been the aim of the Commission of Government and also of this Government for a number of years. Our passing into Confederation demanded rather that impetus be given to that matter of establishing local Government in various populated areas. Now we find where the Lieutenant-Governor in Council has reason to believe it is desirable when the majority of the electors in a municipality desire that the said municipality be disbanded then the Lieutenant-Governor in Council may by order disband the municipality and appoint a fit and proper person to act as receiver.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I feel that that is just a Bill brought in to clean up the mess which came about by the complaints which were made in the area of the Town of Bonavista and the subsequent statement that the Honourable the Premier made relative to what would be done in that area following the Federal Election, I believe it was. We all realize, of course, if the majority of people in any area are not in favour of a town council it is going to be very difficult to establish one there. But once having established it and once it has been established by law, passed by the Legislature I fail to see how we can consistently pass legislation which would upset or affect the establishment of such a town council without repealing it altogether, repealing the parent Act which gave the people the power to set up the town council.

We have been told that in that particular area a town council was established by fraud. We are told in this House that the setting up of a town council by fraud particularly when done under an Act of Parliament and under the supervision of the departmental officials is a mere act of fraud on somebody's part, either one of the electors or one of the officials. Does that nullify the setting up of the town council, I think the legal members of this House would be better qualified to decide on this question than I am. I just raise the point. I don't think, Sir, we are going to get anywhere with town councils in this country if as a matter of expediency this Government or any other Government is going to disband a town council because they have reason to believe the majority of the electors are not in favour of it. I bet there are many other areas where the majority are not in favour of town councils. In all these cases where the Government have reason to suspect that they have a right—it does not say "shall" but "may" by order—they may do it—in this case it was very expedient. Now, I happened to be in the Bonavista area while the controversy was on, and I was told by people that it was a most peculiar manner in which the elections were held. I was told—how truthful or correct it is I do not know but it sounded very funny to me—I was told that it was the idea of the Government to set up a town council. It was the wish of a good many reputable citizens in the area to set up a town council. I was told that the method of electing it was somewhat in this manner: People who were appointed to take the ballot—mind you they did not come to a place and vote—they did not come to an established place where there was a returning officer and vote. But people were appointed to go around with tin cans with a little string and a hole in the lid, and give a ballot to a man or a woman, who came to the door and they voted wherever they were and brought out the ballot and put it in the can which the man carried. Here is where the fraud reputedly came in. The people appointed to go around with tin cans to accept the ballots went to those people in favour of town councils and got their ballot but neglected to go to the people they knew were opposed to it. Now that is the story given to me. Whether it is correct or not I have no reason to know. Probably the Minister would be able to tell us.

What I want to point out is that the returning officer and people appointed to go around were, I am informed, appointed properly, went around and they did their work. If they did not do it correctly I maintain that is no reason why the town council would have to be set aside simply on the whim of some person in authority or some members of the Government just as a matter of political expediency. The people of Bonavista were promised, after the election is over we will fix it all up. This is the Act which will fix it up. I don't like the Act, Sir, I think it is the people themselves who have to decide whether they want the town council, and the people themselves, once they have established the fact they want local Government then have to grin and bear it like the people of the whole country of Newfoundland who have to grin and bear, this Government if you like, or any Government we get down through the ages for governing in a Province or a country. We got it—does some higher power than take it away from us? The British Government took away from us our Responsible Government away back in 1932-33 and the right to vote in years gone by, but that was another matter. But here is a place, Sir, where this Government has written into the law of this country, any area which so desires and so expresses its desire may set up a town council. They go ahead and do that. What I want to know is this: Is the mere fact that some officials neglected to do their duty perhaps in the taking of the votes, does that nullify the election and nullify the town council which was set up?

Now I don't know what is best for Bonavista. I have left that to the people themselves. I am thinking only of the country as a whole, and thinking only of the danger of this thing. You might have the same thing apply in Burin today, where I believe there is a town council. The Lieutenant-Governor in Council may suddenly get the idea that the majority of the people in the Burin area don't want a town council any longer. Then the Lieutenant-Governor in Council without any more ado may go ahead and disband it and wind up the whole thing and say; very well that is all there is to it. I don't believe, Sir, that is the right and proper way to do it. I don't know how it can be done. I quite see it is a problem. I quite see that if the majority of the people in any area don't want local Government then it is too bad. But I say once having accepted the rule of law as to local Government then the people in that area, not only Bonavista but every other area all over Newfoundland—must accept, hold on to and see that the local council goes all out to improve conditions in the community or area in which it has been set up.

I am certainly opposed to the principle of the Bill whereby the Government or the Lieutenant-Governor in Council merely on suspicion or merely on the fact that it has reason to believe that the desire of the majority of the electors in a municipality is against local Government, that municipality must be disbanded and order the whole thing wound up. I am opposed to it wholeheartedly. I say once we have accepted local Government and once we have established a local council then I believe it is the duty of this Government or any Government to back up that local council. Because there are means, Sir, in the parent Act whereby the Government can assist the local councils and back them up and help them improve conditions. As a matter of fact they do it every day. We did it yesterday when we made a loan to a town council. So this Government ought not to disband it but see to it that it does its job in the best interest of the community in which it is established.
That is my feeling about that, Sir, and I am opposed to that Bill.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker—What is this? — The Lieutenant-Governor in Council may by order disband the municipality and appoint a fit and proper person to be and act as receiver—Where, when and why? Well, in the case that any municipality is insolvent or is in imminent danger of insolveney and that it is in the best interest of the municipality and its creditors that the municipality be disbanded and its affairs wound up; or that it is the desire of the majority of the electors in a municipality it be disbanded and its affairs wound up; and the municipality is not indebted to the Crown in right of Newfoundland and there is not outstanding any bond, debenture loan or other indebtedness of the municipality which has been guaranteed by the Crown.

In case any municipality is insolvent—is there anything wrong with that? Is there anything wrong with the Lieutenant-Governor in Council disbanding it and appointing a fit and proper person to act as receiver if the municipality is insolvent or is in imminent danger of insolveney? There is nothing wrong then with an Order in Council disbanding it. Would the Opposition strike out this Section 2 which is already in the Act?

MR. BROWNE: All right in that case there is no objection to that—

MR. HOLLETT: Yes there is.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Does the Opposition object to that—If there is insolveney there should be no receiver appointed?

MR. HOLLETT: You gave them a loan.

MR. SMALLWOOD: We are talk-should say no. The people of Bonavista in a secret ballot vote to undo what they had done in connection with a town council, and vote to abolish it—we should say no. The Opposition says no, do they, but we don't. This Government said; if you had a secret ballot properly conducted and a clear majority are opposed to having a town council we will abolish the town council. We are going to do it. That is that. We are going to do it. We don't care who likes it. The Opposition says no, do they, but we don't. This Government said; if you had a secret ballot properly conducted and a clear majority are opposed to having a town council we will abolish the town council. We are going to do it. That is that. We are going to do it. We don't care who likes it. The people don't like it so we abolish it. They proved they don't like it in a secret ballot, so we are winding it up. That is democratic, very democratic.

MR. C. BROWN: Mr. Speaker, I would like to say one word. It is a well known fact that all who ever attempted to create a town council in Bonavista met with dismal failure. I remember when the local Government agent went down there to ascertain the wishes of the people on this town council movement, I remember he held at least two public meetings of the residents of the town, and it was later decided to hold a secret ballot. That, for some reason, could not be arranged at the time. I think a Committee decided it would be better to bring the ballot boxes to the peoples' houses so that every citizen of voting age in Bonavista would be given an opportunity to vote on the town council question. My honourable colleague, the member for Labrador, and I attended the first meeting they had down there. I assure you his lot was anything but pleasant. Apparently some of those who volunteered down there to take the ballot boxes around the town missed certain houses and the ballots were not deposited in those boxes. There were other reasons of course for that. The people themselves at the time were not at home or refused or they did not mark their ballot paper for the clerk when he came around.

I think, Mr. Speaker, this is a good piece of legislation and will get the Government out of a very uncomfortable situation.

MR. HOLLETT: Heart! Heart!

MR. BROWN: I think the sooner the council is legally dissolved the better. I assure you, Sir, nothing was done deliberately to defraud the people of Bonavista. That is something I would like to make clear, because every honest intention was expressed, and the methods carried out were the best that could be carried out at the time the council was organized. I think if the voting was not done in the proper and democratic manner that some democratic amendment should be made, and this is democratic legislation as I see it. There was no suspicion as far as the Lieutenant-Governor in Council was concerned or any grounds for suspicion, if everyone knew the situation just the same as I know it.

Mr. Speaker, I give this piece of legislation my whole-hearted support.

MR. HEFFERTON: Mr. Speaker, may I make just one or two comments? Disbanding a municipality that is insolvent or in imminent danger of insolvency or in merely taking what is already in the parent Act, and the very wording is reason enough to believe it is taken from the parent Act. I don't believe for one moment it can be based upon any off-hand statement made by any individual. I merely mean the Lieutenant-Governor in Council would take steps to ascertain just what were the wishes of the people within the municipality. Now (b) provides for steps to be taken once the Lieutenant-Governor in Council has reason to believe that the people have decided they do not want to continue. In the case of Bonavista there was a very large percentage of people who voted in a plebiscite on this particular subject, and some 80% of those who voted against incorporation. Now, as I said just now, under existing legislation we can revoke the order of incorporation and we leave there a council, if no longer desired by the people, in the position where it is unable to function or to function with any degree of success. Consequently there seems to be no other resource but to invoke some legislation whereby the council can be dismissed.

Mr. Speaker, I move the second reading of this Bill.

On motion read a second time—Ordered referred to a committee of the whole House at a later hour this day.

Second Reading of Bill, “An Act to Provide for the Raising of Funds for schools in Certain Areas.”

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I move the second reading of this bill, I should like to explain at the very outset that this I do at the urgent request of the Humber Municipal Association. That Association has been pressing for more than a year for legislation that will enable town councils to impose a school tax if they wish to do so.

The Humber Municipal Association is a federation made up of town councils in the Humber Area as well as other organizations. They held at least one very largely attended public meeting in Corner Brook where resolutions were unanimously adopted advocating this legislation. They then appointed a very large deputation to come to St. John's to interview the Government on the matter. They did so. They came to my office where I had the Minister of Education; the member for the district, the Honourable Minister for Labour; and perhaps one or two other ministers of the Crown. We discussed the matter. I pointed out to them then it was not as simple as it might appear to them to be. That there were great and even grave constitutional issues at stake as they are written into the terms of Union between Newfoundland and Canada. I told them that before I would even dream of acceding to their request, that is the request to introduce to this House this legislation of today, before I would dream of acceding to that request I had to be satisfied personally, in my own mind, absolutely satisfied beyond all doubt that the introduction of this kind of legislation would in no sense nor degree conflict with that great principle incorporated in the Terms of Union, and if the ecclesiastic authorities of Newfoundland approved, I made that very clear to the deputation. They assured me on that occasion that the public meeting in question had been attended by people of all classifications in and around Corner Brook including clergymen of various denominations who took prominent positions.

MR. BROWNE: All of them.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I say of all the denominations, who took a prominent position on the platform they assured me of that. I told them that re-assured me, but that I would need to satisfy myself much more particularly on the matter than that mere fact was likely to do. So I did take all proper steps to ascertain from all, I repeat, all ecclesiastical and church authorities and denominations, the major denominations, what denominstitutions are recognized in law for school purposes, what their attitude would be. By direct approach and through various ministers of the Government I had these approaches made and for nearly a year there have been conversations back and forth, and I am able to assure the House that this legislation does not meet with the disapproval of any major religious body in Newfoundland. The fact is, I am bold enough to say, it meets with the approval in general of all the major religious bodies, I will not say that every last dot and syllable of the bill inevitably meets the approval of the ecclesiastical authorities but I do say that nothing in this bill meets with their disapproval and the overwhelming bulk of it meets with their approval.

It is purely permissive. It says merely that if a town council wishes to impose a school tax it may do so under conditions described here. It says also, and I invite the attention of the House to it, Page 9, Section 12: "This Act shall be construed to the end that all moneys raised thereunder shall be allocated to School Boards in the manner prescribed, by Term 17 of the Terms of Union with Canada, set forth in the Schedule to the British North America Act, 1949, for the allocation to schools of public funds of the province provided for education." That is to say that all public monies appropriated on the basis of non-discrimination between the denominations. So it is provided in this bill. Funds raised under the Bill shall be appropriated on the same basis exactly as provided in Term 17 of the Terms of Union. In other words, Mr. Speaker, the principle that public monies shall be appropriated as between the major religious denominations for school purposes. That principle is carried into this bill so as to provide that any money raised by means of a school tax shall likewise be distributed amongst the denominations on the basis of non-discrimination as between one denomination and another of those that are recognized in law in Newfoundland Law as being denominations for the purpose of schools and education generally.

The details are set forth here and can, of course, in Committee of the Whole be discussed at such length as the committee may desire, that honourable members may desire, and as they may need. The principle is that we in this House of Assembly shall permit municipal areas to impose school taxes if they so desire and if they do so they shall do it in accordance with conditions described in this bill. Secondly that this ties in with the principle that the money raised shall be expended on the basis of non-discrimination within the major denominations as provided in Term 17 of the Terms of Union.

Mr. Speaker, I move the second reading of this Bill.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if this bill could lie over for the week end?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Let us say, let it lie over, and not say when. We are not going to rush it, not going to railroad it. Yes, let it lie over. Honourable members may inform me privately when they are in a position to proceed with it and when they have satisfied themselves my statements are correct in connection with it.

MR. HOLLETT: We are not disputing your statement.

MR. SMALLWOOD: No. — No.
On motion debate on second reading adjourned.

Second Reading of Bill, "An Act to Make Provision for the Award of Pensions in Certain Cases."

HON. M. MURRAY (Minister of Provincial Affairs): Mr. Speaker, this bill is merely the extension of a principle adopted —

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the honourable gentleman would wait until we find the Bill.

MR. MURRAY: Mr. Speaker, honourable members were told when the Act Further to Amend the Civil Service Act was introduced, it was explained under Clause 6, when an established civil servant retired for the purpose of contesting an election he would be re-instated in the civil service. The Bill which I am talking to now asks to make provision for what is merely an extension of that principle adopted last night, it applies the same principle not alone to established civil servants but also to employees of the Board of Regents of the Memorial University, members of the constabulary and rangers of the old Newfoundland Ranger Forces and teachers. It carries the principle, Sir, along to its logical conclusion. Where under Section 6 of the Civil Service Act a person could apply for reinstatement and as such retain all previous rights and previous liabilities. Suppose a person dies or attains the age which could have retired him before being re-established or would suffer a mental or physical incapacity the pension rights already built up for him would not also die with him and these pension rights would be kept alive.

Under Sub-clause 2 of 3 such a person has a right to re-enter the civil service two years after being defeated or retiring from Parliament when he could apply to the minister of the department from which he retired for re-instatement at the rate and salary at which he retired. It is merely, as I said, an extension of the principle adopted in the Civil Service Bill to keep alive the pensions earned by people who resigned to enter into political life.

Mr. Speaker, I move the second reading of this Bill.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, it is very hard to just listen to an explanation and see all the implications. I wonder if the minister would agree to let it stand for a while and give us a chance to read it?

On motion debate adjourned.

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Speaker, perhaps the House might now go into committee on items 3 through 7 and items 8, 9, 13 and 14. Before making that motion, Mr. Speaker, I would ask leave and move that the third reading of two bills be rescinded.

(1) A Bill, An Act Respecting the Inspection of Fish.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, may I suggest the proper procedure would be for some other minister to move the bills be re-committed or ask leave of the House that the bills be re-committed for the reasons cited.

MR. CURTIS: As a matter of fact I was not the minister who brought in either of these, so that I ask that third reading be rescinded and that the bills be re-committed.

On motion third reading of bills rescinded and ordered recommitted.
MR. BROWNE: I don't know whether such a motion is debatable, I suppose it is. It has never been considered before. I do wish to point out that rushing through legislation as we are at the present time is bound to cause errors to be made and omissions. On our part we cannot really cover all the work, and there is an enormous pile up of work at the present time and it is impossible for any legislature to give it the proper attention.

On motion Bills item No. 3 through 7 and 8, 9, 13 14 on the Order Paper of today and A Bill, An Act Respecting the Inspection of Fish, and a Bill, An Act Respecting the St. John's Municipal Council referred to a Committee of the Whole House:

Mr. Speaker left the Chair. Mr. Courage, Chairman of Committee:

A Bill, An Act Respecting the Inspection of Fish:

MR. CURTIS: We agreed between ourselves to take out the word "knowingly" and reduce the fine from $100 to $10. It think that has been accepted and I recommend it to the Committee.

MR. BROWNE: I am satisfied with that arrangement. That is what I had in mind from the beginning.

On motion Clause 12 was amended by striking out the word "knowingly" and striking out $100 and substituting therefor $10.

On motion Bill passed with some amendments.

A Bill, "An Act Further to Amend the City of St. John's Act":

MR. CURTIS: When this Act came before the House, Mr. Chairman will remember I informed the Committee of the Whole House that I had been in touch with the Mayor and there was, what I considered, an offensive clause therein in as much as it gave the council the right to collect a poll tax on people who not only lived outside the city limits and within a mile—but who worked outside the city limits and within a mile, I did not think that was fair to tax a man who both lived and worked outside the city limits. I agreed they might tax a man who lived outside, within a mile, and worked in the city or who lived inside the city and worked outside. But I did not think a man living and working outside this one mile limit should be taxed. They agreed. But in making the amendment here we just strike out the words "or within one mile thereof". But the effect of cutting out is that, if we let it stand like that, people who lived in St. John's and worked at Fort Pepperrell won't have to pay the poll tax. So that there has been a new draft made, and the new draft has been circulated around. I would ask that my honourable friends would just take this typewritten clause submitted by the solicitors of the city.

15 (1) The Council is empowered by resolution of the Council to levy and impose on and collect from every person (other than those expressly exempted from payment under this Section) of the age of twenty-one years or upwards who, at any time during the twelve month period preceding the 31st day of December in any year, resides in the City and is gainfully employed, or resides within one mile of the City and is gainfully employed in the City, an annual Poll Tax not exceeding twenty dollars ($20) per annum payable on the 1st day of July of the year 1954 and in each year thereafter in respect of the annual period January 1st to December 31st in each year.
Mr. Chairman, I think that makes it abundantly clear. The effect is that if the tax payer resides in the city and is gainfully employed anywhere, or if he resides within one mile of the city and is gainfully employed in the city. I think that is very clear. I would move that amendment, Mr. Chairman.

MR. BROWNE: Is it now agreeable to the Municipal Council?

MR. CURTIS: Yes. The Council drafted this.

MR. FOGWILL: Before we go off the section—the taxation as it now exists is $20. I was wondering if they are going to have a scale of rates and amounts for different people and what would that be based on?

MR. CURTIS: I understand the intention is to have it based on the income of people, in other words, if a person earns less than two hundred dollars a year there is no Poll Tax. The ladies will pay less or a lower rate than the men. The idea of the Council is to grade it down and have no tax imposed on those getting less than—

MR. FOGWILL: In other words it is going to be scaled on income? In other words an income tax.

MR. CURTIS: No—The only thing is they want to exclude domestic and charwomen and people who really cannot pay. I understand this is a tax the Council accepts full responsibility for levying. We don't have anything to do with levying it. I understand there are some groups, feel should not be obliged to pay. It is not a tax on income but it is based on people of certain income brackets.

Carried.

On motion committee passed this Bill with some amendments.

A Bill, "An Act Further to Amend the Accident Insurance Companies (Licensing) Act":

MR. BROWNE: We had gone as far as Section 5, which was allowed to stand.

MR. CHAIRMAN: That section was not passed but allowed to stand.

MR. CURTIS: I think we made an amendment, a scale of fees, payments for licenses on page 7.

Carried.

On motion committee passed this Bill with some amendments.

A Bill, "An Act to Amend the Botwood Water Corporation Act", 1952:

MR. BROWNE: I presume that is the one we are dealing with where two officials of the Department of Public Works may be appointed.

MR. CURTIS: Yes, that Act in the revised statutes calls for the Government to appoint one out of every three members of the corporation. In this case if there are several they want to retain, rather than ask them to resign they appoint the Government members in addition.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Representatives of the Department of Public Works for the last forty years have sat as directors on various water company boards, Placentia, Harbour Grace, Carbonear, for instance Mr. Manning, for the last twelve years was a director for the Government on some water company until the water company was recently absorbed by the town council, and I think the idea is to have a representative.

On motion bill passed without amendment.
A Bill, "An Act to Amend the Summary Jurisdiction Act":

On motion Bill passed without amendment.

A Bill, "An Act Further to Amend the Civil Service Act":

Clauses 1 carried, 2 read:

2. Section 9 of the Civil Service Act, chapter 22 of The Revised Statutes of Newfoundland 1952, is repealed and the following substituted therefor:

"9—(1) A person who is not a British subject shall not be appointed to an established post: Provided that persons who are not British subjects may be appointed in a professional capacity to established posts.

(2) This section shall be deemed to have come into force on the first day of January, 1950."

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I took exception to that clause last night. I believe the Government could get over the difficulty they have in connection with doctors that come here from Ireland, as a great many of the doctors who came out here in the past four years have been Irish doctors and belong to the Republic of Ireland are not British subjects. I don't know how many of them are anxious to take out British Citizenship, and I am not sure if any of them are. But under the Citizenship Act of Canada which I think was passed a year or so ago, the citizens of the Republic of Ireland have been granted Canadian Citizenship without having to go through any formality whatsoever. Therefore I would suggest, as a beginning, this section be read as follows: "A person who is not a British Subject or Canadian Citizen or rather not a Canadian Citizen nor a British Subject shall not be appointed to established posts." I believe that would get over the difficulty of the Irish doctors. If that is the only difficulty, I take it there are other doctors concerned. I take it that persons of other nationalities are being considered at the present time as well. That was not explained to us last night. I wonder would the Minister elaborate on it.

MR. HEFFERTON: Mr. Chairman, I might say this particular section came from the Department of Health, dealing largely with doctors whom they have engaged in recent weeks and months, particularly Irish doctors, although among them are several others. We have had several persons during the last three or four years not only in the Department of Health but in other departments and this particular amendment should not necessarily be tied down to that particular department. For instance we mentioned last night here a Norwegian engaged by the Department of Mines and Resources—If he stays, why should he not become a civil servant?

MR. BROWNE: This won't assist a person not a British Subject—That is the same as the law now and only deals with the Department of Health. You are not considering anything else at the moment? It seems you want to amend it to read now, a person not a Canadian Citizen nor a British Subject. That is the way out, and the way it ought to read. Now we had that Canadian Citizenship described to us in the Election Act which was passed to us the other day. Why distinguish between Canadian Citizen and British Subject? A Canadian Citizen is a British Subject, but a British Subject may not be a Canadian Citizen. A person born in South Africa is a British Subject but not a Canadian Citizen. So that if it is the wish to include all British Subjects I would suggest you certainly should exclude those persons not Canadian Citizens nor British Subjects. The Honourable Minister of Health is now here and perhaps he might explain. Other than Irish doctors is anybody else affected by this in your Department?

HON. P. FORSEY (Minister of Health): Yes, all over the British Isles, and from Europe and Germany, no.

MR. BROWNE: The next section says a Civil Servant, if required, shall take the Oath of Allegiance to Her Majesty. While there is no objection to the civil servants taking the oath, certainly it is customary they should do it—I don't remember if I had to do it. I think it would be a bad precedent to go beyond the Act. What is the matter with having contracts with men. We have them for men in higher standing, the three men in the Fishery Authority are contractual and the President of the University and the same with people on the Agricultural and Forestry Commission.

MR. CURTIS: Actually Mr. Chairman, we are going to try and cover that by adding a clause to the present Bill because at the moment the situation with regard to the contractual civil servants is extremely unsatisfactory. I understand unless a contract is made and ratified by the Legislature it is not binding. The Government actually cannot contract for civil servants, and have had several supreme court cases to that effect. Of course we want local people if we can at all get them. We want Canadian Citizens if we can get them at all and English Citizens. But we cannot let the services fail just because our style is cramped. Now I can quite see it would not be wise to have them in the Department of Justice and no sensible Government would consider for a moment bringing anybody into the Department of Justice who is not a Canadian Citizen, but in the case of health or building needs when they are professional help I really can't say that I can see any objection to our being permitted to engage foreigners, and that is really the object of this amendment. We have found that the position of bringing foreigners and having them under contract is not satisfactory, the first thing they want to do is move out and we can't hold them. So this is a clause to aid us in getting the type of men we think we ought to get for the public services. We maintain the Justice Department is a little sanctum sanctorum. I think my honourable and learned friend will agree on that.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I think the matter is fundamental—A person who becomes a civil servant becomes an established servant of the state and a servant of Her Majesty and should be a loyal citizen. A person who is a citizen of another state is not ordinarily eligible to become a civil servant or at least an established civil servant and occupy an established post in another state unless they come to this country from another British Country. It seems to me to be going very far. I don't know of any precedent. I know that in the United States you cannot become a member of the civil service and get an established post if you are not a citizen. I feel that is also the way it is in regard to the Federal civil service. I am wondering if there is not some constitutional objection.

MR. CURTIS: Our old friend we have been talking about so much lately was in the civil service in Canada.

MR. BROWNE: Dr. Valdmanis? No, Dr. Valdmanis was employed in the Department of Immigration, I believe, largely as an interpreter, helping people of his nationality coming to Canada as displaced persons. He held a very minor position, I believe, and his salary was only $100 a month. He was a part-time and not an established civil servant. I don't know of any person in fact, and I feel quite sure that is so.

MR. CURTIS: I don't know—By the way secrets are leaking out, I think they must be a lot more slack than we are.

MR. HOLLETT: That is the basic case of MacCarthyism, the fact they put all kinds of persons in the civil service right up to the State Department, and they are paying for it now. I hope we are not laying the foundation for MacCarthyism here. Although he is undoubtedly a fine man. He is a product of the times in the United States and is brought about by the very sort of thing we are doing now by putting into the various Departments of the Government people who are not British Subjects and who are not Canadian Citizens.

MR. CURTIS: Really it is not the situation here. All these people intend to become Canadian Citizens and it is only a matter of time. They must within a year file their intention of becoming naturalized. This is just a case of improving the civil service.

MR. BROWNE: I understand that it is a matter of expediency on the part of the Government. But from a constitutional angle has it been examined and compared with the civil service requirements of the Federal Government? It seems to me we should hardly make a departure from established practice. This Act was drafted, as I said last night, between the Civil Service Association and the Commission of Government. Mr. Wilde acted in its behalf and submitted drafts to us. We went over every clause and had consultations and went back and forth for several months before it was finalized. So I feel quite sure this is a copy of the provision in the British Act.

MR. HEFFERTON: Look at this thing again from a health angle for a moment, or take the Department of Public Works where they have to establish posts or resident engineers and they find themselves unable to get them for these established posts in Canada or Britain. But suppose they are able to find two from the United States or two from Europe and they come. Now what are they going to do? Either they appoint them to established posts that are there or create other posts to put them in which are exactly similar. That is what this is for. To allow a person not a British Subject to be appointed to an established post. I can't see any difference.

MR. HOLLETT: They are thereby pensionable.

MR. HEFFERTON: Mind you if they are contractual or unestablished and serve a number of years they are entitled to gratuities. So why should they not be established and entitled to pensions if they are there the required length of time?
established they may be removed at any time. It might be an advantage from another point.

MR. BROWNE: The Attorney General mentioned a few minutes ago that we should insert some sort of a provision as to their becoming citizens or if they don't become citizens they should lose their positions. Why not consider the opposite angle and grant them established posts once they have become citizens. I feel a good many would want to become citizens. If we make it so they can get these posts without becoming citizens then there is no need for them to change their nationality. If there was a term here providing that they should become citizens—Persons other than British subjects appointed to established positions should become citizens within five years from the date of their entering into those posts—Then they shall be entitled to be considered as established civil servants from the date of their appointment. Would you consider that?

MR. CURTIS: In the meantime I would like the section to go through. I certainly think the point raised by my honourable friend is one the government would consider. We all want to do what is right.

MR. HEFFERTON: With the deletion of within five years.

MR. BROWNE: That would certainly make it wiser still.

MR. CURTIS: We just want to cover Public Works.

MR. BROWNE: I just want to record my objections to this. I know it is no use doing it. I made a suggestion I think is reasonable in a case like that. As the Attorney General knows, we have not had any time to consider other such legislation in the other provinces nor in England, comparative legislation.

MR. CHAIRMAN: The amendment is that the words in the last line of sub-clause (1) "in the Department of Health" be deleted.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, any department it would mean then. That makes it wider. In other words a person not a Canadian Citizen can be appointed to the civil service in any department of the government even the Department of Justice now.

MR. CURTIS: In a professional capacity, yes.

MR. HOLLETT: I wonder where we are tending now. I think there is plenty of time to look over it. There is no particular rush—You are not going to these countries looking for new industries any longer. Now you are going to have them flooding in looking for jobs in the civil service. I don't blame them. I would do the same thing myself. We have to consider our own people who are Canadian Citizens and Newfoundlanders. We have heard a lot about specialized skills and skilled workmen and skilled architects and skilled everything. Eventually we will have to get a MacCarthy here to clean out some of these departments. I am very much opposed to making it wider now other than in the Department of Health. I agree I don't care who is to be brought into this country to do something for the people in regard to health. But for any other department of the government I see no reason why we should extend the privileges to that degree. The Attorney General mentioned the fact that the Justice Department would not like to have such people in the department. Now his wish is being overruled by this Act. We may even have a minister down there now who is not a Canadian Citizen under this Act, as far as I can see. I think some consideration should be given to this. We are not opposing it simply because we are in Opposition, I assume the honourable minister—but it is a serious thing, and I think it should be compared to similar legislation in other provinces and in Canada as a whole.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Carried.
Opposition voted nay. Motion carried.

Clause 3:

MR. BROWNE: What does that mean, Mr. Chairman? In other words, a person brought in to the service over the age of fifty years in December 1947 may on appointment to an established post, be credited with not less than ten years of pensionable service—right off the bat. This reserves some explanation.

MR. HEFFERTON: In the first place, sub-section (a) is self-explanatory and is the same as in the parent Act, and sub-section (b). Suppose a man had gone out some years and comes back to an established post and had served for fourteen years or more he could be credited at the most with ten years of pensionable service—right off the bat. This reserves some explanation.

MR. BROWNE: To a point of order, Mr. Chairman, the minister says this isn’t the same as the Parent Act.

MR. HEFFERTON: It is exactly the same only it has been changed around a little in the wording—that is how it is interpreted by me.

MR. BROWNE: What about (b)?

MR. HEFFERTON: That is the one I just explained. A person may, after some years out, come back into the service to an established post.

MR. BROWNE: There is a difference, is there not, in that clause (b)? The first one applies to provisions that have been in the Act since the Act was first introduced in the country in 1926 and has only been carried forward—that is if a medical man or a professional man has ten years’ experience outside and is appointed to a position and he is over the age of forty he would get consideration for the time spent practising. But this is a new one, is it not? Being appointed to an established post after the age of fifty years may on appointment to an established post be credited with not less than ten years of pensionable service—Why is that being brought into this?

MR. HEFFERTON: It says any person who is engaged in an established position any time since 1947 and shall have put in not less than ten years of pensionable service—Why is that being brought into this?

MR. BROWNE: It does not say that.

MR. HEFFERTON: That is what the lawyer explained to me.

MR. BROWNE: A lawyer may have explained to you, but I assure you, Mr. Chairman, I have a very high opinion of the minister’s intelligence and I am sure he can read that section but cannot read that into the section. With deference therefore may I be permitted to read it?

"A Civil Service Certificate shall not be issued in respect of any person who shall after the eighteenth day of December, 1947, be appointed to an established post after having attained the age of fifty years, but where any such person

(a) is appointed to an established post in a technical or professional capacity, a Civil Service Certificate may be issued to him; or

(b) may, on appointment to an established post, be credited with not less than ten years of pensionable service, a Civil Service Certificate may be issued to him, with the approval of the Lieutenant-Governor in Council.

MR. HEFFERTON: That is where any person has put in not less than ten years service which he put in prior to 1947.

MR. BROWNE: It does not say that.

MR. HEFFERTON: That is how it goes. I argued the same point with the legal men in the Department of the Attorney General.

MR. BROWNE: There must be some authority to create it when he comes back. If a person is employed in the civil service and leaves then he is out. I know later on in this Bill there are provisions to put him back again. But there must be some directive contained in an Act which says when he comes back he shall take up the credit of what he had already earned years ago.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, I think my honourable and learned friend has something there.

MR. HEFFERTON: Oh yes, I know he has something there.

MR. HOLLETT: I am going to read that now.

MR. HEFFERTON: I wonder would it make the position clear, although it is perfectly clear to me, with the substitution of the words "can" for "may". That where it can be shown he has ten years already in.

MR. BROWNE: This embodies something new. A person resigns from the civil service and comes back and takes up where he left off again.

MR. HEFFERTON: Yes.

MR. BROWNE: It is certainly a new thing.

MR. SMALLWOOD: When he resigned for a purpose.

MR. BROWNE: We are not dealing with that now. This deal with persons over fifty years who have been out perhaps fifteen years and come back and having worked more than ten years in the civil service can get back the time already put in and be credited with those years. Supposing a person resigned from the civil service say in 1941 when salaries were low, and now he comes back in 1954. On what basis is he going to get his pension? If it is to be based on the last years of service he comes back into a very nice position. He has not worked all through these years yet he is credited and gets a pension under this Act on the last years. It seems to put him in a very favourable position. What is the idea of doing that? What is the Government doing this for?

MR. HEFFERTON: I move the committee rise and report having made progress, as it is nearly 1:00 o'clock, and ask leave to sit again.

On motion the committee rose and reported the following.

MR. COURAGE: Mr. Speaker, the committee of the whole have considerred the matters to them referred and have passed a Bill, "An Act Respecting the Inspection of Fish", with some amendments.

On motion amendments read a first and second time and concurred in.

On motion Bill ordered read a third time on tomorrow.

MR. COURAGE: Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole have considered the matters to them referred and have passed the Bill, "An Act Further to Amend the City of St. John's Act", with some amendments.

On motion said amendments read a first and second time and concurred in.

On motion Bill ordered read a third time on tomorrow.

MR. COURAGE: Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole have considered the matters to them referred and have passed the Bill, "An Act to Amend the Accident Insurance Companies (Licensing) Act", with some amendments.

On motion said amendments read a first time and second time and concurred in.

On motion Bill ordered read a third time on tomorrow.

MR. COURAGE: Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole have considered the matter to them referred and have passed the Bill, "An Act to Amend the Botwood Water Corporation Act", 1952, without amendments.

On motion report received. On motion Committee order to sit again at a later hour this day.

MR. SPEAKER: It being now 1:00 of the clock I do leave the Chair until 3:00 of the clock this afternoon.

THURSDAY, June 18, 1954
AFTERNOON SESSION

The House resumed at three of the clock in the afternoon.

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Speaker, I think we could go into Committee of the Whole on the same bills.

MR. SPEAKER: Leave was given earlier for this committee to sit again today. I will now leave the Chair.

Mr. Courage Chairman of Committee of the Whole:

"An Act Further to Amend the Civil Service Act":

MR. CHAIRMAN: The Committee was considering Clause 3 of the bill.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, I am more or less mystified about that section. A civil service certificate shall not be issued in respect of any person who shall after the eighteenth day of December, 1947, be appointed to an established post after having attained the age of fifty years —

MR. CURTIS: But in the case of technical or professional capacity there is an exception.

MR. HOLLETT: But there is an exception somewhere else. I don't think I can hold this bill up very much longer, but I do not like the whole bill. I am worried about the civil service, definitely worried. You won't have a civil service worth talking of over the years if you carry on the practices contained in this bill. Civil servants who entered elections can go back again and be reinstated in the job, etc., etc. You can put them out in the next election and put them back in again. I wonder if the minister would tell us if there is any precedent in any other province in Canada for such an Act as this?

MR. HEFFERTON: That I could not say.

MR. HOLLETT: Does the minister know or does the Premier know? That is what I was wondering, Mr. Chairman, is there any precedent on the Mainland of Canada in any of the provinces for such provisions as contained in this particular bill or this particular section? Could the Attorney General inform us?

MR. CURTIS: No, Mr. Chairman, we don't copy any other provinces—if we copy them it is only to get past the Opposition.

MR. J. HIGGINS: Mr. Chairman, I find that reply rather disturbing but also rather unconvincing in the light of amendments of other Acts. In other discussion we are told the story that they do it in British Columbia. I still can only see in this legislation something entirely novel, something which the government has not yet justified other than to explain the reference.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, nine times out of ten every amending Act since 1949 we are told it is like they have in other Provinces or like on the Mainland, or copied word for word.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The honourable gentleman also complains when we say it is copied from other Provinces and now when it is not he complains just the same, so we are damned if we do or if we don't.

MR. HOLLETT: The copy should be produced. I would say this was never copied from any Province on the Mainland of Canada or anywhere else in the British Commonwealth. I think we ought to copyright it.

MR. CURTIS: I think the honourable member is right, we ought to copyright it.

MR. HOLLETT: No, not here, the civil service under the British Constitution is one of the finest institutions ever set up or ever established, and Great Britain is proud of the civil service and the civil servants are all proud of Great Britain, and we as a part of the Dominion belong to that great Commonwealth of Nations and should endeavour to keep our civil service out of politics absolutely. There is no place in politics for the civil service. Sir, this is going to create all sort of jealousies if you are going to pick a man from this Department and put him down in Labrador and from that Department and put him somewhere else and then because he did not win the election put him back in the job again and he gets his pension. I have no objection to his getting his pension, no objection to his leaving his post and going into politics, but I do have objections, when he comes out of politics, to his going back into that position again.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Are we on Committee of the Whole or second reading? Are we arguing the principle of the bill or the details?

MR. HOLLETT: I am still opposed to the principle.
MR. SMALLWOOD: Is it in order for the honourable gentleman to say he is opposed to the principle?

MR. HOLLETT: Well I must say, I must answer, yes.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I asked if it was in order to say in Committee Stage whether he is or not.

MR. HOLLETT: In order or not, I am opposed to the principle of that Bill.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I got the honourable gentleman off his feet, did I not?

MR. HOLLETT: I can get up again.

Clause 3 and 4 carried.

Clause 5:

MR. HOLLETT: That, Mr. Chairman, refers to a teacher, not only a Newfoundland teacher but people who have taught school in other parts of the world. I take it—is that correct?

MR. HEFFERTON: Mr. Chairman, this particularly applies to those who put in fifteen years as teachers in Newfoundland schools and some three or four years engaged as supervisors or then as principal of one of our schools, and then accepts employment for three years in some federal post. What we want to do is to allow the years he served as a teacher and a provincial civil servant to be carried on to the years of service.

MR. HIGGINS: It is only for one individual?

MR. HEFFERTON: Well at the moment it did come up for one particular individual.

MR. HOLLETT: That explanation causes me to say there is no objection.

The point is we are not fully acquainted with the reasons for some of these.

MR. HEFFERTON: I gave that last night.

MR. HOLLETT: I probably did not catch it.

MR. HIGGINS: Mr. Chairman, I can understand in the case of a teacher such as the Minister referred to in the previous sub-section—but in the case of a man who elects to try his luck and go into politics who is defeated or who may if he is elected and is out of his particular branch in his Department for five years, depending on how often an election is called, even if he is re-elected for ten years, then if he is unfortunate enough on his third time around to be defeated or if he decides to retire and go back to the peaceful calling of the civil service, automatically he goes back without losing his seniority or pension rights. It does not seem sensible.

MR. SMALLWOOD: "Seniority" is that there?

MR. HIGGINS: No, I read that into it—No harm trying—as I have said, these things do seem to me to be unfair. I move that sub-section (a) be stricken and the rest of it stand.

MR. FOGWILL: Mr. Chairman, I support the amendment suggested by my honourable friend. We have a civil service now, I believe, quite free and clear of politics for a long time. The Commission of Government, I think, put the civil services on a fairly decent standard regarding politics, and I believe they are better for it. Now this thing here will tend to put those employees in the civil service more or less on a political basis and it possibly may be the cause eventually of patronage. Mr. Chairman, anybody in the civil service if they wish to leave their jobs can do so like anybody else and give it up. If they wish to enter political life I think the same should apply to the civil service. But this section here does not protect the civil service from the political aspect of the Newfoundland life, not the way it is now.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, I think that my honourable and learned friend on my right would like to have a few words on this, so I will proceed to talk until he arrives.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Who is the leader and who is the follower?

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, that injection, may it be commented upon?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, it is out of order.

MR. CHAIRMAN: The Honourable the Premier is definitely out of order.

MR. HOLLETT: The Premier is out of order! I think that is highly unusual.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Now the Honourable the Leader of the Opposition is out of order.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, the greatest evil this will bring about is that some of the finest men in the civil service will be drafted by the powers that be, the Leader of the Government, to go out in politics and contest a district because of his appeal as a civil servant to the electorate. I will be fair to one honourable member on the opposite side and say that by reason of his going into politics the civil service has lost one of the finest men they had and one who was doing one of the most important jobs that could be done in this country and doing it in a most excellent and efficient manner until he got mixed up in politics; and he was mixed up in politics quite a little while before—

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, to a point of order—Has not the principle of this clause been adopted—is it now debatable in Committee of the Whole?

MR. CHAIRMAN: It seems to me that would be the principal part of this clause and possibly the whole Bill.

MR. HOLLETT: I was not speaking to the principle of the Bill. "Where an established civil servant retired for the purpose of contesting an election or a by-election for the return of members or a member to the Parliament of Canada or to the Legislature of the Province"—I do not like that particular section because of the fact that it will tend to take some of the finest men in the civil service away from the jobs they know best.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Chairman, to a point of order—Can the honourable gentleman express his general opinion of this general principle—It is not out of order to express his opinion of the general principle which has been adopted? This principle has been passed by the House of Assembly—Can the Committee of the Whole now debate what has been adopted by the House of Assembly?

MR. CHAIRMAN: I must sustain that as a point of order. I believe the same argument and almost the same words were used in the debate on second reading.

MR. HOLLETT: Yes, Mr. Chairman, and will be used after we are dead and gone, I am afraid. One hardly knows just what one must say in a case like this. When one attempts to give a reason why the section should be deleted from the Act one is said to be out of order.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Is there an amendment before the Chair?

MR. CHAIRMAN: I am afraid I won't be able to accept that amendment according to the rules given here by Mr. Speaker a few nights ago, according to that rule by which I am bound. I am afraid that I find it impossible to accept that motion because it will interfere with the principle of the Bill.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, do I understand one cannot make an amendment?

MR. CHAIRMAN: One can make an amendment, but this amendment seems to strike at the very root of the Bill. If the honourable member will allow me—That is exactly a parallel case to the case we had here a few nights ago. In that case the Honourable Leader of the Opposition and the honourable members of the Committee will remember Mr. Speaker gave a ruling which was sustained by the House, that the amendment could not be accepted. Therefore, in this case, I think the honourable and learned member for St. John's West will have to agree with me on that point. I am afraid I cannot accept the amendment as they are exactly the same.

MR. HIGGINS: Mr. Chairman, as I said earlier, it is no harm to try.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Carried.

MR. HOLLETT: No, Mr. Chairman, it is not carried and it is not going to be carried yet. I do maintain there are various things involved here and particularly one that would strike at the very heart of the civil service. I think this particular section is the one that could do the most damage to our country. I am not going to talk about the principle, but this section will take from the civil service men who are most valuable where they are today. But how far is this going to go? The Government can depend on its civil service, depend on the integrity and honesty and ability of the civil service. In great measure it does not depend largely upon the elected members but the Government depends upon the permanent civil servants, and it is up to any country or Province of Canada to endeavour to build up a civil service which will be beyond reproach, will be above politics. It does not take a lot sometimes to get above politics—but the civil service should be definitely above it and there should be no way whereby any man or any Government should be able to draft men from the civil service.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Chairman, to a point of order—is the honourable Leader of the Opposition going to defy your ruling just as though you had not spoken? Is he going to go right on completely ignoring your ruling and having the second reading stage in Committee of the Whole? I ask Your Honour for a ruling, and I ask Your Honour if the honourable gentleman or any other honourable gentleman is out of order.

MR. CHAIRMAN: I will have to uphold that point of order.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, I apologize, I shall not get out of order again on this particular section. I don't like it and I think it should come out. I was a civil servant myself one time—But there it is again—You can't touch this thing at all—This is the most peculiar thing. We will have to get somebody to amend our rules, I think, so that the rules will allow one to bring up the merits or demerits of any particular section or sub-clause. On this particular clause, (6) I think I have shown as my colleagues have shown it is a dangerous one in the hands of any government.

MR. HIGGINS: Mr. Chairman, with reference to your explanation as to the ruling on the suggested amendment, might I be perhaps permitted to say that an earlier amendment suggested by me was not complete because further perusal of the sections would indicate it would mean not only the deletion of (a) but also paragraph (d) because both are integrated. But I do, Sir, with all respect, suggest that you can delete one of these objections without affecting the rest—

MR. CHAIRMAN: I have made a ruling that this particular amendment the honourable member suggested does seem to strike at the very root of the principle.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I am sorry I was not here when we began the discussion of this section. I presume this is the one to which objection has been made before—When an established civil servant is retired for the purpose of contesting an election—Consider what is involved in that—He does not retire because he considers that he should contest an election, I mean to say, the leader of some party, very likely the leader of the Government party comes along and says—We want a man for a certain district, St. John's West for example or Ferryland—we want you to go and run—

MR. MURRAY: It would be no use for him to go to Ferryland.

MR. BROWNE: That is not what I heard today.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Order.

MR. BROWNE: If the person says; "No, I don't feel like it. I have been here ten years and have built up a pension and my promotion is coming up with a higher salary." He is then told he need not worry about that. We just passed a Bill. We can put you back again, put you at the head of everything. You don't need to worry about that. Why these boys who are the favourites of the Government will get all the privileges if they are eligible candidates over men who are not political minded and who have been in the civil service for years.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Chairman, on a point of order—I suggest the honourable and learned gentleman is now discussing the principle of the clause which has not only been debated but has been adopted in second reading. He is therefore out of order. It ought to stop, any further discussion of the principle of this clause—I put that to Your Honour.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Order—There was some discussion on this matter before the honourable member came into the Chamber on an amendment which I would not entertain because of a ruling which was given recently and this seemed to be a parallel case. This clause here does seem to be the root of the whole matter and the principle of the whole Bill. As a matter of fact it was discussed, I think, quite fully in second reading. It does seem to me that belabouring the point in Committee is not in order.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, may I be permitted to answer the point of order raised. We are discussing the matter now not in a general way but clause by clause. Does the Premier wish to say that every clause of this bill should be passed as is and is not susceptible to any change except to put in a comma or a semicolon or leave out a comma? Does the Premier mean that?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, Mr. Chairman.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, we got this Bill last night after 11:00 o'clock and were expected to deal with the whole principle and all sections of it—how could we possibly do that? Now we are in committee dealing with it clause by clause and the Premier objects to doing that. What can we deal with on this particular section?

MR. SMALLWOOD: It is now being inferred by the honourable and learned gentleman that I am taking an unreasonable attitude in demanding second reading debate when they were not ready and therefore they have been deprived of the opportunity of debating the principle at second reading and they are forced to debate it in Committee of the Whole. I submit to Your Honour that is entirely unfounded and entirely unfair. At no point has any Bill been forced upon the Opposition nor have they at any time been forced to debate a thing at second reading when they were not ready to debate it. The honourable gentlemen have only to ask at any time that any Bill submitted for second reading be deferred, and we have yet to refuse to do it. But if the honourable gentlemen wish a second reading to debate and take advantage of the opportunity presented at second reading then when it comes to Committee of the Whole I submit that they, as we, are bound by the Rules of the House and the rules of parliamentary practice and procedure, and they are not permitted, (not by me and not by Your Honour) by the Rules of the House to discuss the principle of any clause of a Bill in Committee of the Whole when that principle has been adopted at second reading. There would not be a Committee of the Whole if it were not adopted at second reading. I submit the whole thing, Your Honour, is out of order.

MR. CHAIRMAN: I would hardly say, any principle of a clause, but I would say any principle of a bill which goes to the root of the matter, and this does seem to be a very strong principle.

MR. BROWNE: Well, Mr. Chairman, what does this mean, in Beauchesne, 3rd. edition—In Committee the Bill is considered clause by clause—Each clause is a distinct question and must be separately discussed. Now then the Premier says; don't discuss it.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The Premier does not say any such thing nor anything even remotely approaching that. I said we cannot discuss the principle once the principle is adopted by the House of Assembly, which it may do only at second reading, and thereafter there is no discussion of the principle. Now I did not make that rule. That rule was made before I was born.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, I submit there is a general principle to every bill, but in every section there may be some sort of an adjunct as far as the principle is concerned.

MR. SMALLWOOD: His Honour the Speaker ruled on that already within recent days.

MR. HOLLETT: It does not matter—you missed the point.

MR. CHAIRMAN: I cannot agree with the last remark of the Honourable Leader of the Opposition. A Committee Chairman is bound by the ruling of the Speaker supported by the House. I am afraid I cannot rule otherwise.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, according to the Premier's argument we are not allowed.

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, Mr. Chairman, that is not my argument.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Suppose the honourable member continues, then the Premier may speak.

MR. BROWNE: This is an entirely new section and has nothing to do with any other section in the Civil Service Act—31A states that a person in a post established and pensionable shall retire for the purpose of contesting an election for the return of members or a member to the Parliament of Canada or to the Legislature of the province or upon entering the Civil Service of Canada; and he was not eligible for the award of a pension on retirement—Where he retired for any of the purposes referred to in paragraph (a) and within two years after he contested any such election, if he was not elected, or within two years after he ceased to be a member of the Parliament of Canada or of the Legislature of the province, if he was elected, he applied in writing to the Minister to be re-appointed, and before the expiration of three months next following such applications is re-appointed an established servant; or where he retired for the purpose referred to in paragraph (b) and is re-appointed an established civil servant immediately after he ceased to be employed in the Civil Service of Canada, all service done by him before such retirement which if he was eligible for the award of a pension on retirement would have been counted as pensionable service shall be credited to him as pensionable service on his appointment.

In other words, if he is elected for five years and two years after that, which is seven years, after leaving the job can be re-appointed if he applies in writing. Now, Mr. Chairman, I was puzzled last night when I saw that, and was not sure what it meant. Now I would like to ask the Premier to explain what the last few lines mean—where an established civil servant retires for these various purposes—Suppose he had ten years service in the civil service, and if he were eligible for award of a pension on retirement, would it be counted as pensionable? If he has been a certain number of years in the civil service and then becomes a member of parliament or a member of the House of Assembly and then after five years, or ten or twenty-five years he goes back into the civil service of this country again, the time he spent in the civil service previous to his retirement and becoming a member of parliament or of the House of Assembly shall count for him as pensionable service or be credited to his pensionable service on his retirement.

Now, Sir, how can we discuss that except by reference to the rules of the civil service as they exist here and in Canada? How can we? I don't see what we can do about it unless we were to consider if it should be half the time spent or three-quarters of the time or some variation in that part of it. It seems to me it is up to us to point out that we have a Civil Service Commission here now who are supposed to have to do with appointments. Surely it is up to the members to point this out and to ask to what place in the civil service should the man come in. Supposing a man is an assistant-deputy when he retired and after five or ten years he comes back and looks for a job again—is he eligible to become an assistant-deputy or deputy minister or should he take a position over those who have been in the service during his absence? At what scale should he go in if that is going to be allowed? That man can go in over the heads of people working during his absence. It seems to me here that the government is going to create a great deal of jealousy and dissatisfaction in the civil service, and therefore, Mr. Chairman, they are going to do a lot of harm to the efficiency of the civil service. Everybody will be coming to the government and hoping that they will be asked to stand for an election because they know that they risk nothing when they do. If they are elected they are all right—They can go back after their term expires, and if not elected they can go back right away. Why, Mr. Chairman, this is almost the same as it was thirty or forty years ago. We are going back. We are going backwards and not moving ahead at all. Now if a man was laid off a job because his job was done away with it should be a different thing. But when he resigns from his job he can't expect to go back where he was when he did resign. It is a very bad situation.

Clause carried—(Opposition voted against the motion).

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I wonder would the Minister explain to us the difference between this and previous sections?

MR. HEFFERTON: The difference is between persons who put in a total of fifteen to twenty years and persons who put in more than fifteen. There is a distinction made between ten and fifteen as laid down here. We put in over fifteen years when they get what is laid down in the Act.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, do I understand that that is the limit which retired persons under these sections get—one fortieth of his average monthly salary or wages during the last thirty-six months of his service for each completed month of service?

MR. HEFFERTON: That is gratuity and not a pension.

MR. HOLLETT: I see. He is entitled to some sort of pension also?

MR. HEFFERTON: He is not—gratuity is different altogether from a pension.

MR. HOLLETT: Is that multiplied by the number of years' service?

MR. HEFFERTON: It is multiplied by 36 months.

MR. HOLLETT: In other words less than a month's salary.

MR. HEFFERTON: That is what it was in the original Act.

MR. HOLLETT: That is not very much. If there is any use in doing so I would like to suggest to the Government to reconsider that amount in gratuity of less than a month's salary after fifteen years of service.

MR. HEFFERTON: No, it is a little more than that, after fifteen years it gives him one and one-third.

MR. HOLLETT: It is not very much in any case, after spending all these years in the service of the Government and then becoming incapacitated or sick or something and unable to go on any longer, he is given a month's gratuity and then Good Bye. Well, I must say this government is very charitable in many cases but in that they are not very charitable, I am not blaming this government any more than those heretofore. I really think they ought to consider something a little better than that for civil servants.

MR. BROWNE: There are two grades now instead of one—A person who has completed ten years now gets one-fortieth of his average monthly salary during his last thirty-six months of service. In other words if his average monthly wage was, say four hundred dollars a month—I don't think that is a very big sum for ten years of service, about $1200—After he has served fifteen years he gets one twenty-sixth, which is the same as it was before.

MR. HEFFERTON: Mr. Chairman, the next one was circulated this morning—The amendment says—the Act is further amended by adding thereto immediately after Section 48 as section 48A.

MR. BROWNE: Now, Mr. Chairman, on a point of order—What may we discuss in regard to this, which was not passed last night? Should this go through all readings? How can we discuss the principle involved here. We are not having the second reading on it.

MR. HEFFERTON: Do you want an answer? It is getting beyond me. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the section.

MR. HOLLETT: I would say we could go ahead with the section. I think the minister should be upheld in his efforts to increase the value of this Act, certainly they should go ahead.

MR. SMALLWOOD: If the honourable gentlemen would like to stay until seven or eight o'clock tomorrow morning we are quite willing to adapt ourselves to their convenience.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Order—might I suggest this clause has not been put. It was just read by the Clerk.

MR. HEFFERTON: Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the clause.

MR. BROWNE: Can an amendment proposed by the Minister be withdrawn, Mr. Chairman?

Mr. Chairman: It was not moved. No motion was before the Chair.

MR. BROWNE: Is it not assumed that it is moved when it is read—I wish the Honourable the Premier would keep quiet.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I wish the honourable gentleman would keep quiet.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, do I understand that was not moved?

MR. CHAIRMAN: It was not moved. It was read and objected to and then the committee got completely out of order. I asked the Honourable Minister if he wished to move that clause and he said no. Therefore there is no motion now, apart from the preamble.

On motion the bill was passed without amendment.

Committee of the Whole on Bill, "An Act to Amend the Urban and Rural Planning Act, 1953":

Clause 1 and 2 carried; Clause 3:

MR. BROWNE: Has there been a problem of this kind arise?

MR. HEFFERTON: We have two at the present time.
MR. BROWNE: In St. John's?

MR. HEFFERTON: No, Corner Brook.

Bill passed without amendment.

Committee of the Whole on Bill, "An Act to Amend the Local Government Receivership Act":

Clause 1 passed. Clause 2:

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, may I ask the minister how he proposes to get reasons to believe it is desirable for a municipality to be disbanded and its affairs wound up? How is he going to get a reason of this kind? I can understand a plebiscite.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The only instances in which we intend to abolish is as a result of plebiscites held by secret ballot. That is the pattern of that procedure.

MR. BROWNE: Would the honourable gentleman tell me who was in charge when a plebiscite was held?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, we appointed Mr. Hubert Fisher, a very reputable citizen of Bonavista to be returning officer. He conducts the plebiscite according to regulations and procedures—that is to say he opened a series of election booths throughout Bonavista Town, appointed deputy returning officers and poll clerks and policemen, and on the day in question all eligible to vote did so.

MR. BROWNE: All?

MR. SMALLWOOD: All who were able to do so, and eight per cent of those voted against the town council. Now, that, we believe, is enough to make the Lieutenant-Governor in Council believe that there is a desire of the majority of the electors in that municipality, that the municipality be disbanded, its affairs wound up and—where we get equally good reason to believe that in the case of any other town council except those envisaged in section (c) of this clause, we will do likewise, wind them up.

Bill passed without amendment.

Committee of the Whole on Bill, An Act to Amend the Saw Mills Act.

MR. CURTIS: My honourable friend the member for St. John's West did not like the wording of section 9. I might say that the department has considered it and we feel that the wording is perfectly understandable and that there is no object in changing it. Under the Interpretations Act there is no question but that means sections 2, 3, 4, 5, and 6. It may not be worded the way I would like it worded but I am prepared—

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, on a point of correction there—would you look at the side note of sections 2 and 6. Not to come in force until January 1955.

MR. CURTIS: That is a mistake because the side note is not part of the Act—I think, Mr. Chairman, that should be section 2 to 9.

In connection with sections 10, 11 and 12—I suggest we take section 11 as it is now and call it section 10 and bring it up to where section 10 is—Then we have the new clause 10 and then take out section 12 altogether.

Now there is one other point. On section 26 my honourable friend raised the question as to section 26 with regard to perpetual liability to prosecution. I would suggest if you would refer, Mr. Chairman to the fourth line following (a) and (b) that section 26 is liable to penalty.—Now then I would add after that—"And any such complaints may be made any time within six years from the time the matter of such complaints arose. Mr. Chairman, I think that answers all the points raised by the honourable member.

On motion clause as amended carried.

Bill passed with some amendments.

A Bill, "An Act Further to Amend the Highway Traffic Act".

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Chairman, this too was held up at the suggestion of my honourable and learned friend from St. John's West. I believe Section 6 was allowed to stand. The position is this: under existing law if a car is parked and someone else runs into it your license is held up. Why an innocent person should be held up in that way does not seem satisfactory to me. So I have had a new section drafted, and I wish to submit it to my honourable friends opposite.

"(1) Subject to this Act, where bodily injury to, or the death of, any person or damage to property in an amount apparently exceeding one hundred dollars, results from an accident in which a motor vehicle is in any manner directly or indirectly involved, if the motor vehicle is, or is required to be, registered under this Act the Minister, after receipt of notice in writing of the accident if he is satisfied from reports of the accident submitted to him that the owner or driver may be liable or responsible for the accident, may suspend the license of the driver and the license of every other motor vehicle registered in the name of the owner and of the driver, but, notwithstanding anything in this Act, where the driver's licence or car licence of any person is suspended under this section that person may, upon notice in writing to the Minister, appear before a magistrate in the district in which the accident occurred for a certificate that he is no way liable or responsible for the accident and if the magistrate is satisfied that that person is not liable or responsible for the accident he may give him a certificate to that effect, and the Minister shall on receipt of the certificate reinstate the driver's license or car license or both of that person."

Mr. Chairman that takes the place of the Clause 6 at the top of page 1.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, there is a point there I want explained. My honourable and learned friend said there was a very good reason for that amendment. I will quote a case in point myself. Last year I was parked by the side of the road and a car came along and ran into me. Naturally we called the police. It was in the daytime, at noontime.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It was not during the election, was it?

MR. HOLLETT: No—I ran into a telephone pole then. I am not ashamed to admit it.

MR. CURTIS: We took away the licence of the pole, that is all.

MR. CHAIRMAN: It is very nice to see the committee in a pleasant mood, but I suggest the Honourable Leader of the Opposition has the floor.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, I agree, the members on the opposite side are very rude—As a matter of MR. CHAIRMAN: I must remind the Honourable Leader of the Opposition of the rule about personal remarks, and personal reflections.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, I was parked by the side of the road. The damage was about $100 to me and about $400 to himself. We called the police, of course, and went on in our cars. It looks to me that under this Act the police could come along and hold up a car, under this section, until such time as the minister would absolve us from crime.

MR. CURTIS: This remedies that.

MR. HOLLETT: Could the police give permission to go on if they consider you are not to blame?

MR. CURTIS: I think so. I think this makes it fairly plain.

MR. HOLLETT: What I want to know is can the police hold the car?

MR. CURTIS: No, they have no authority to hold your car.

MR. HOLLETT: Thank you.

MR. HIGGINS: Mr. Chairman, I direct attention to sub-section (3) of Clause 5:

MR. CURTIS: Yes, that is a bit harsh. I directed that it be revised and the new draft I submit would be this: "No action or other legal proceeding shall be taken or brought against the Minister, constable or officer in respect of anything done under this section where the action or other legal proceeding is not based on malfeasance or misfeasance.

Honourable the Minister of Finance to move the House into Committee of Ways and Means.

HON. G. POWER (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, if no other member wishes to speak in the budget debate I think I shall go on now. I won't keep the House long because everyone here is sick of speeches as I am and won't want to hear very much. But there are a few points I would like to make, and I will be very brief.

Incidentally I notice that the Opposition did not like the budget. I could see that they would not. It was not the kind of a budget an Opposition would like. In fact in my three years' experience of budget speeches I have come to the conclusion that the members of the Opposition seem to be allergic to the kind of budget speech we produce on this side of the House.

Now, Mr. Speaker, the Honourable and Learned Member for St. John's West, whom I think spoke first in the debate, charged that I delayed the budget speech in order to include certain figures of revenue shown to be due in March, before March 31. Now I think that remark was a bit unworthy of the honourable gentleman because by virtue of his experience I think he knows that such a thing would be impossible under the auditing system that we have today. If the budget speech had been delivered on the 31st of March the figures would be the same as if we had delayed it until Christmas. Any payment due from Ottawa before March 31, even if the actual cash were not in hand, would be included. So that there is no point whatsoever in delaying the budget speech for that reason because that reason did not exist.

Also the honourable gentleman quoted certain figures that puzzled me considerably. For instance he said the waterpower survey cost the government $600,000 and he also said that the IBEC Report cost $250,000. The actual figures, Mr. Speaker, are $80,000 for the IBEC Report and $250,000 for the waterpower survey. Now I wonder if the honourable gentleman would tell me where he got these figures he quoted? I don't know where they exist. I have never seen them. I have never seen any reference anywhere to $600,000 as being the cost of the power survey nor have I seen any figure anywhere of $250,000 for the IBEC Report. So that the only conclusion I can come to is that the Honourable gentleman just plucked these figures out of the air. Well now, that is not the kind of thing that I would Now he also said my estimate of the income the people would have in 1955 was a way out and grossly exaggerated. I think he said that the figures were fantastic. Well, Mr. Speaker, anyone at all can get up and say a figure is fantastic. But he must have some grounds for saying so. The honourable gentleman, I think, by his own admission, did not have any grounds for saying so. He did give some reasons which were not statistical reasons. It took quite a lot of time and work to get these figures, and Mr. Speaker, I will say here again; these figures were as honest as we could make them. I believe the people of Newfoundland will earn $230 million this year. I am glad that they will earn it. It reflects the great level of prosperity here in Newfoundland, a level of prosperity which has never been excelled in all our history.

Now he also said that my argument with regard to unemployment insurance was a bit of a joke—if five million dollars were paid out in unemployment insurance that was an indication, in his estimation, there was unemployment and therefore depression. But, Mr. Speaker, we all understand that most of the work that goes ahead in Newfoundland is seasonal work, and if people get enough seasonal work during the appropriate seasons to qualify for unemployment insurance that certainly indicates, if they took five millions in unemployment insurance, they were doing very well during these seasons.

Now he also doubted my statement that there was prosperity in Newfoundland and hopes of prosperity in the coming year. The reason that he gave for his doubting that was that certain motorcar factories on the Mainland had been curtailing their operations and, I believe, laying off some... of their staff. I investigated that and I found that the General Motors Corporation in Canada had just finished a five million dollar expansion programme and they were raising their production of cars this year from two hundred and nineteen thousand cars last year to three hundred thousand this year, and they were raising their employment level from eleven thousand to fourteen thousand. That does not look as if any depression were starting there in that industry. As a matter of fact I don't know of any industry all across Canada, except textiles maybe, which shows any evidence that there is a recession brewing on the North American Continent.

Now the honourable gentleman in his remarks made some suggestion that no one knew how many horsepower existed in Swift Current, and he said it would not cost $600,000 to find out. Well, it did not cost $600,000 to find that out. There were three watersheds surveyed under the waterpower survey, and these waterpower surveys must be necessary otherwise great corporations such as BRINCO would not engage in such surveys and spend huge amounts of money paying for them. Now the English Electric is the big electric company in BRINCO and they have announced that they are going to spend a million dollars in development of Grand Falls. Well there must be some value in determining how much horsepower is in a certain place otherwise they certainly would not spend a million dollars to find out. If the Government of Newfoundland spent two hundred and fifty thousand dollars to prove the power potentialities of three watersheds in Newfoundland I think they were perfectly well entitled to do so. It was a good thing to do, good for the people of Newfoundland to know what we had. Too long we have been listening to this romanticism—Newfoundland has wonderful natural resources. We have this and we have that. I have heard that all my life, yet no one knew what it was. It was all very vague. Everyone believed it. But actually when we came to examine the matter no one knew what we had in Newfoundland. We are the first government who has ever made a concentrated effort to find out what really exists in Newfoundland as far as natural resources are concerned.

Now I thought the honourable gentlemen were a little bit contentious against BRINCO. That is explained because I remember when it was introduced here first the honourable member for St. John's East referred to it as "Bunco." Well he was different in his opinion from Sir Winston Churchill because he thought it was a good idea. I remember when the House of Rothschild was mentioned here there were smiles from the other side of the House. But the House of Rothschild is head of the greatest financial empire in Europe, and the companies that they have brought into that great "BRINCO" altogether make up the greatest concentration of development capital that was ever brought together. So I maintained when I said it was a great achievement for the Premier to have formed that great company. I think he was fully justified and I believe that history will justify his achievement in years to come, and that BRINCO will be the one thing he did that was the biggest of all his achievements for Newfoundland. I am not flattering him now, because privately, I think, I am his severest critic, and I do not flatter anyone, as people on this side will know. I believe great things will grow from BRINCO, the great combination of English companies motivated with the idea of regaining the great place England once had. They will obviously put effort and money into this thing, and if there is anything worth while developing in Labrador and Newfoundland I think those people will do it—If they don’t find anything we might as well forget it.

There was some criticism, I believe, from the Honourable Leader of the Opposition, no it was from the Honourable and Learned Member for St. John’s West, with regard to the locations of the industrial plants. Well, the most of them are located in Conception Bay. Conception Bay, I think is the most populous place in Newfoundland, and it would be a place that would be struck hardest, I believe, if we had a recession. If there are plants in Conception Bay I do not think that the rest of the country resents it very much, I know the people where I come from have said nothing because the plants have gone to Conception Bay. They don’t care where the plants go so long as people get a job, and as long as the economy of the country is built up, and the future of Newfoundland children a little better assured.

Now the birch plant, in my opinion, is the best of these industries because it has the greatest potential as far as wages are concerned. In fact during the past year there were over six hundred and fifty people working in the birch industry in the woods and in the plant. Now when we consider that the great development at Buchans only employs about eight hundred men you must admit the birch industry we have started, even if it is only going at about quarter capacity, has great potentiality, if it can hire 680 men at that stage. When it gets in full production, which it will in time, I believe a couple of thousand people will be working in the birch industry in Newfoundland.

MR. BROWNE: It is to be sold.

MR. POWER: They are not going to take it away I hope. If the birch plant is sold it will be operated here in Newfoundland for the benefit of the people of Newfoundland just the same as if the government operated it or if Newfoundland Hardwoods operated it.

MR. BROWNE: Better.

MR. POWER: Maybe—But I will say this—A lot of criticism has been launched against Newfoundland Hardwoods. It seems a lot of it was highly unjustified. They had to take an entirely new industry and take people who knew nothing, workers who knew nothing about the mechanics of that industry and had to train them. The turn-over in employment over there was terrific at times, and they had to change over and change over and that has delayed the full development of that industry, I suppose, a year or a year and a half.

Another thing I am going to say which will probably come as a shock to people is that these industries have been under-capitalized. I know very well the birch plant can hire 680 people when it is in quarter or half production and that it would hire probably twice as many in full production, and that many would be far more than are engaged in the mining industry at Buchans. I know very well the amount of money that went into the development of Buchans must be far greater by millions and millions and millions than has gone into the birch plant, about twenty-five millions, I believe.
Well, as you can see, Mr. Speaker, this Government has not been so crazy and extravagant in spending three million eight hundred thousand on the birch plant, and if six hundred men alone, and even if it never gets any better than 660 men it will be a great step forward in economic development in Newfoundland.

The Honourable the Leader of the Opposition goes back again to the Icelandic Boats. Now my honourable colleague on my left here and I have listened to the talk about the Icelandic Boats until it grows pretty nauseating. Nobody has ever defended this thing as it should have been defended. In fact, if my colleagues would agree, I would put millions of dollars in the estimates this year to follow the same idea as was followed in these Icelandic Boats. Actually on the West Coast of Canada and the United States billions of dollars have been spent tracing the migration of the herring, also in Norway and Iceland as well, with the result that at a certain time of year they can tell approximately where the herring are. In the first day of fishing, I think, in the Norwegian Herring Fishery this year they sailed out to the point where they knew the herring were, and put down their nets and took three hundred thousand tons of herring in one day fishing. There are just as many herring in Newfoundland, but no one knows where they are.

MR. MURRAY: The man from Ship Harbour knows.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The shadow knows.

MR. POWER: The honourable member for St. John’s West told a story about a man from Ship Harbour fishing near the Icelandic Boats, and he got the herring and they did not. Now I have thought about that and examined it. I have never been a sort of trustful soul, but I do know that the Icelandic outfit were not equipped to fish in shallow waters. They did not have gill-nets or these things to fish in shallow waters, and I do not know anyone in Ship Harbour equipped to fish in deep water. Therefore they could not be fishing in the same place. That is No. 1, and No. 2, the herring that could be caught by equipment the Ship Harbour fisherman had could not be caught by the equipment the Icelandic Boats had and vice versa. So that, Sir, is a story like a good many others, just an old wives’ tale.

MR. HOLLETT: The Sweetest Story Ever Told.

MR. POWER: I don’t know what that means! Now, Mr. Speaker, you remember that during the National Convention Mr. Cashin presented a budget in which he forecast a revenue and expenditure for Newfoundland under Responsible Government for three years ahead, I think. In that budget he informed everyone, he was very very vehement about it, that the prosperity we were enjoying in Newfoundland was not the result of the war, it was our natural expansion. Well, Mr. Speaker, an awful lot of people did not believe that. But there were 28 other men in the convention who got up and agreed with him. I heard the Honourable Leader of the Opposition reiterate that the prosperity which we were enjoying in Newfoundland was not the result of the war—And Lo and Behold! Here the other day I heard him argue with the Premier that the prosperity we had since 1940 was due to nothing else but the war.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, I must rise there to a point of order—
That is a statement I never uttered in the National Convention nor supported in the National Convention nor felt I ought to. Every country when it is not directly engaged with war within its own borders profits by a war. I don't think anybody in the National Convention, particularly not twenty-eight, ever said that. I would like to make that correction—The Minister of Finance is a little astray in his facts.

MR. POWER: I think I heard the whole 28 say—

MR. HOLLETT: You think—You think a lot of things.

MR. POWER: In fact it did not suit them then to say it was the war that brought prosperity. They argued then that Newfoundland should carry on and that wars made no difference. All we had to get was Responsible Government and customs duties in vogue again and everything would be built up. Now we have some prosperity and they try to detract from that by telling us that; well we might have done some things, but if it had not been for the war we would not have had anything new. Actually the prosperity enjoyed during these years prior to the war and during the convention was not prosperity but a reduction of profits to a more tolerable level and a standard of living the people now know compared to then is vastly different. No, all we have to do is to send our minds back to Sunday afternoon on Military Road in 1943 and remember how the children were dressed, and go out and walk along there on Sunday afternoon now.

MR. BROWNE: It is not so good now.

MR. POWER: The honourable gentleman must have been blind in these days.

MR. BROWNE: They were well dressed then.

MR. POWER: I know the honourable gentleman might have been doing well. A great many people were, and it is a common human fault to forget how other people are living—Anyway I saw plenty of poverty around Placentia in these years, and I saw a little of it myself, I know. I got my living from the land in some of the hardest years that ever came in Newfoundland. Now it was not much of a living it is true, but it was sufficient and enough that I could sometimes share a little with those who were less fortunate than I. I can tell the honourable gentleman that I know there was plenty of poverty in Newfoundland in the years 41, 42, 43, 44, and 45. I know very many old people who got their five dollars each month who did not die from starvation but died as a result of the weakness of their system by a sort of slow starvation that existed over a period of years. Anyway if the war did not do it in 1941 and 1942 I don't see how the honourable gentleman can argue the war has done it now.

MR. HOLLETT: The war had some effect on it naturally, did it not?

MR. POWER: I don't think so, and did not think so then. Now I remember the honourable gentleman talking about taxing the people's stomachs. I really don't know what he means, but he did say we were taxing the people's stomachs.

MR. HOLLETT: The honourable gentleman does not know what it means?

MR. POWER: Then I remember the honourable gentleman making speeches advocating a return to Responsible Government as he knew it in 1931. Well now if he went back to—

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, I rise to a point of order—is the honourable member referring to my speech on the budget speech?

MR. POWER: I have heard the honourable gentleman say—

MR. HOLLETT: In the budget speech? I am asking a question.

MR. POWER: Then we are to assume the honourable gentleman did not want Responsible Government as it existed in 1932. I thought he did. It is my mistake.

MR. HOLLETT: Did I say that in the budget speech?

MR. POWER: It does not matter where—did you want it or did you not? It seems to me you did. Anyway—tax on the people’s stomachs—he said—but if we had to go back to 1933 what would he find—that is what he wanted—it would not be taxing but that would be kicking the people in the stomach—fifty per cent duty on bread, canned meats, fruits and things like that. I would be horrified to think what would happen in Newfoundland if tonight you could apply fifty per cent ad valorem duty such as existed in 1932 to everything that comes into Newfoundland today. No one in Newfoundland would be able to live above the level of poverty.

Now the honourable gentleman does not like the idea of raising a loan. As I mentioned last night, it is accepted practice that every Government in the world follows. It seems that therefore we are allowed to do what every other Government does—The Honourable Leader of the Opposition said, I think, that we would be twenty-five million dollars in debt when we raised this new bond issue.

With the limited experience I have had when you talk about the financial position you must consider your assets as well as your liabilities. The honourable gentleman forgot that we are about eleven million dollars in credit in Ottawa, have nineteen million dollars invested in industrial programmes and, I think, we have around seven millions invested in the Fishery Programme. So that actually, if you take our assets against our liabilities, after we have raised this twelve million dollars loan we will be still very much in the black. As far as loans are concerned, as I mentioned last night, I think it would be unfair to ask the people who live and work in Newfoundland today to pay for all the improvements that we are going to make this year in the public services or money that we are going to invest in Economic Development of the country. In either case it would be wrong to ask those who work in Newfoundland today, this year and pay taxes to pay the full cost of that because generations to come will enjoy these facilities and the jobs that are made available. So that I think it is undeniable that the costs of these things should be spread as far as possible. The only way we can do that is by raising bond issues for the longest period.

I have heard a lot of discussion here, and I have heard the Premier wonder about the policy of the Opposition. Do they have a policy or do they not? Well, the Opposition have never said they had a policy, at least I have never heard them say. At one time I thought they did. I remember many sleepy afternoons here when the honourable gentlemen were tearing into mouth wipes so that one would think there must be some policy there.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, may I interrupt the Honourable Minister to ask a question? Could he inform the House whether or not he has been paid back the ten thousand dollars on mouth wipes?

MR. POWER: The ten thousand dollars on mouth wipes. As far as I remember in respect to mouth wipes, they were of better quality. I think that was proven here one afternoon by the Honourable Minister of Health. Then for some mysterious reason these mouth wipes were not mentioned for, I suppose, about six weeks. Some honourable gentleman had gone off on a new tack. Well there still was not anything that you could get your teeth in, in so far as the Opposition’s policy was concerned. So we were wondering and wondering, myself and my honourable colleague on my left, then I heard the honourable and learned gentleman from St. John’s West go over the entries. He had a good many doubts to express about the cement plant. But I think he knew we were trying to sell the cement plant—the gypsum plant I mean—and I feel it is going to be much more difficult to get a good deal now, more than before the honourable gentleman made his speech. The honourable gentleman should not be so unkind. It belongs to him as well as to others. As far as I know the honourable gentleman would like to have it understood that he goes around suggesting good things to do. Well, the fact that he did not suggest the building of the gypsum plant is his hard luck and not mine.

Anyway, after hearing their talks and their plans and their dire predictions we came to the conclusion that there was a policy—that the Opposition did have a policy—and the only kind of policy it could be was a scorched earth policy—because it seemed that everything we are trying to do for the life and betterment of Newfoundland—the gypsum plant—that is a joke—the cement plant—Hal Hal the birch plant—well everything was wrong—all down the line the same thing. All over the country people who otherwise would feel there was some hope for Newfoundland being developed economically and industrially have come to think that the place is hopeless.

If these things cannot succeed, Mr. Speaker, and if Fishery Development cannot succeed then Newfoundland cannot succeed and will eventually be abandoned. If it is abandoned because it can’t be developed, what does it matter what was spent. At least those who are satisfied to make a try at it should not receive the cruel and twisted criticism that I have heard voiced here in this House—because in shedding doubt on these things you can only do them harm—I have not heard one word of praise for all the efforts and all the work that has been put into these things by the Premier and by the Cabinet—Now I would not expect—
MR. HOLLETT: Not in the whole country?

MR. POWER: I mean not in this House. Oh yes! the honourable gentlemen have reported at very great length both on the radio and in the press, and when they shed doubt on these things there are people in Newfoundland who think that what they say is true.

Now I am one who believes in the future of Newfoundland, and not for any foolish reason either. I know that as far as the Fishery is concerned I have never seen a live codfish, and I don't know anything about the mechanics of catching fish. But I do know that because of the development of medical science and because of the improved sanitation around the earth the population of the earth has increased and is increasing at a tremendous pace. In fact, in North America in ten years time the population will be sixteen million higher than it is today.

Well, as everyone knows, the production of meat proteins has not kept pace with the increase in world population. Everyone knows that people must have proteins to live. The only alternative to meat proteins is fish proteins. Since Newfoundland is undoubtedly richer in fish, I suppose, than any other place on the earth, the time must surely come soon when these proteins will be sought after by the hungry millions of the earth. In fact the meat proteins that are now produced for the most part by commercial feed contain from 16% to 20% fish proteins. In poultry business I know that all poultry feed contains 17% to 20% fish meal. So that however you look at it, whether the population of the earth is fed by meat protein or not, there will be a great demand for fish and fish proteins, and an ever increasing demand as time goes on. I have the feeling in my heart that you will see before twenty years time a great and prosperous fishing industry in Newfoundland. The historical time has come for that, in my opinion, not alone have we got great prospects because we have a rich fishery, but we have other very great resources as well.

We have in the Province of Newfoundland the greatest deposits of iron ore in the world. We have the richest deposits of lead and zinc in the world, and, according to the American Mining Authority, we have the greatest deposits of fluorspar in the world, rich fluorspar. Besides that we have, I think, the greatest untouched coniferous forests in the world. As everyone knows, as the populations of the world have risen, the demand for wood products has increased to such an extent that even great countries like the United States have had their forests denuded. Here we are 380 thousand people, and that is a lot of firsts, Mr. Speaker, for 380 thousand people. It is a lot of firsts for a few—a great rich fishing potentiality, great coniferous forests in a world hungry for lumber, pulp and paper, great deposits of iron ore, lead, zinc, fluorspar and other great possibilities that I will not speak of now because of my association with NALCO, and of which I have some knowledge.

I am one of those, Mr. Speaker, who believes that Newfoundland's prospects are bright and that the prospects of our children who will live and work here in Newfoundland will be much better than our prospects were. I believe that if we live another twenty or twenty-five years we will see Newfoundland rates, if not the richest per-capita then one of the richest of the Provinces of this Nation of Canada. I feel that the Liberal Government of Newfoundland will have contributed a great and indispensable contribution to the uplift and betterment of this place we all love so well. That is not foolish sentimentality because when you say you love a place — I think everyone loves the place where his roots are down—If he does not there is something wrong with him. In spite of all the criticism and all the jeers and all the rest of it, we are going to go on trying to make Newfoundland a better place for our children and for our children's children.

Motion that the House now go into Committee of the Whole on Ways and Means carried.

Mr. Courage Chairman of the Committee.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I don't know who is looking after this gasoline. I wonder if the Minister could tell us how much is being collected in gasoline at the present time?

HON. E. S. SPENCER: (Minister of Public Works) : $2,000,000.

MR. BROWNE: What is the rate now?

MR. SPENCER: 14c. a gallon.

MR. BROWNE: Is there any other tax levied on it besides that 14c. the Minister gives us? Does the Minister know the landed cost of gasoline?

MR. SPENCER: No.

MR. BROWNE: Because when we come to consider the costs of gasoline in the United States compared to here.

MR. SPENCER: That is a matter for Imperial Oil or the importers, we don't know that.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, why is it being increased a cent a gallon, if there is a surplus already in the budget?

MR. FOGWILL: Mr. Chairman, I would like to point out that the present tax is 14c. and, I think, subject to a Federal 10% tax too, and that would bring it to approximately 15½c. a gallon and this will bring the total to about 16½%, over 50% on the cost of gasoline, and the tax in Newfoundland, I believe, is the highest in any Province.

MR. SMALLWOOD: No.

MR. FOGWILL: Very few any higher or even equal to it. I believe it is higher than any in the United States.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, the resolution says that it is expedient to bring in a measure to collect an extra cent. Can the Honourable Minister tell us why it is expedient?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Carried.

MR. HOLLETT: It is all very well to say it is expedient. My honourable colleague on my left says there is about a 50% tax on gasoline in this country. I am reminded of something which the Honourable Minister of Finance said relative to certain taxes prior to Union, very high customs duties and all that sort of thing. I wonder if he would consider we are taxing like that in the present day, prices for instance on gasoline or tinned beans or fruit juices.

MR. POWER: Just imagine 50% ad valorem.

MR. HOLLETT: Yes, just imagine, but not as much as you pay for it now.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Order. I think the honourable members should keep the debate relevant.

MR. HOLLETT: I was trying to draw out from the Minister, Mr. Chairman, if it is expedient for some particular purpose. For instance we have a tax for the support of cancer control and we are going to bring in some sort of an educational tax on people for education. Now what is that particular tax for? Very shortly it will be seen that all we are doing here is authorizing the Minister to collect that tax, an extra cent on a gallon of gasoline—I wonder if the Honourable Minister would tell us the expediency for a cent a gallon on gasoline now. It is a tax on travel. I am inclined to think the tax on gasoline is already fairly high in this Province where there are so few roads over which to drive. If the tax on gasoline is to be devoted to improvements of the roads well and good I am happy to agree with the principle involved.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I asked the amount actually collected last year and the Minister of Public Works said it was two million dollars. Now is that correct?

MR. SPENCER: That is about correct.

MR. SMALLWOOD: In round figures.

MR. BROWNE: We must know the exact figures.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Give notice of the question and the exact figures will be produced tomorrow. Does the honourable gentleman think we all carry these figures, hundreds of them, around in our heads? The round figure is two million dollars.

Carried. Preamble carried.

That it is expedient to bring in a measure to authorize the Lieutenant-Governor in Council to raise a loan upon the credit of the Province in the sum not exceeding twelve million ($12,000,000) dollars.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I suppose there is not much to be said here now. The Minister has given us, I think, a pretty good idea of where it is to be spent; between roads, fisheries—$3,000,000 to fisheries, to the Fisheries Authority for distribution. I wonder if he could supply the figures, if he has them in his head—Between five and six million for roads, is it? Over five million on roads. Does the Minister remember what the balance is for?

MR. POWER: Mr. Chairman, all this is in the estimates.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It is to finance the coming activities of the Government in so far as surplus earnings do not do it.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, could the Minister advise us just what the rate of bond interest now might be, approximately? The last one, I remember, was 4%.

MR. POWER: It will be less now.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Considerably less.

MR. HIGGINS: May I ask, Mr. Chairman, is the market for this loan assured now?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Our last loan is selling at precisely 106 and we expect this one will be sold at a much better rate than the last one was sold, and I expect a very ready demand for it.

MR. HIGGINS: Have you picked out the broker?
MR. SMALLWOOD: We have been in touch with various financial authorities on the Mainland. At least they have been in touch with us. We were asked by about some half dozen business houses in Canada, each of them, to allow them to handle the issue for us—We can pick and choose between them.

MR. FOGWILL: I understand then it is the intention to float it on the Mainland of Canada. If I may be permitted, Mr. Chairman, to ask a question—When they floated the last ten million dollar loan was not an attempt made to sell that in the United States at first?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No. NALCO made an attempt, yes.

On motion committee rose to report having agreed to certain resolutions.

On motion said resolutions read a first time; read a second time and concurred in.

MR. SPEAKER: The Honourable Minister of Finance asks leave to introduce a Bill based on said resolutions.

On motion Bill read a first time—"An Act to Authorize the Raising of a Loan on the Credit of the Province" and read a second time.

A Bill, "An Act to Amend the Gasoline Tax"—On motion read a first time.

On motion read a second time.

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Chairman, I think we ought to go into Committee of the Whole on those two Bills as the wording is rather different than the resolutions—

Motion carried.

Mr. Courage Chairman of Committees.

On motion a Bill, "An Act to Authorize the Raising of a Sum of Money By Way of a Loan on the Credit of the Province", passed without amendment.

On motion a Bill, "An Act to Amend the Gasoline Tax", passed without amendment.

On motion the Committee rose and reported having passed the Bills without amendment. On motion report received. Bills ordered now read a third time. Read a third time, ordered passed and title be as on the order paper.

MR. SPEAKER: It being now 6:00 o'clock I do leave the Chair until 8:00 p.m.

THURSDAY, June 18, 1954.

NIGHT SESSION

The House resumed at 8:00 of the clock.

Second Reading of Bill, "An Act to Provide for the Transportation of Timber Over Streams and Lakes and For Other Purposes in Connection with Crown Lands".

HON. F. W. ROWE (Minister of Mines & Resources) Mr. Speaker, originally back in the Reid Contract when Reids were given large tracts of land, and unlike the practice of the present Government were given in fee simple—This Government does not give land in fee simple. Reids were given all these large tracts of land in fee simple. Shortly afterwards, as all the world knows, a great number of disputes arose regarding rivers, passageway through rivers and particularly with regard to the three-mile-limit and the traditional rights of Newfoundlanders to cut on that three-mile-limit. As a result of this dispute, quarrels and what not, an Act was passed in 1904 called the "Transportation of Timber Act". It was called that because amongst other things the chief thing in it was that people were given the right to pass through the rivers which were on Reid’s tracts even though Reid’s were supposed to own the rivers. Also in that Act it was declared legal for citizens generally to cut timber off the three-mile-limit of Reid’s blocks, where Reid’s blocks went right to the seashore, as they did in many cases. The 1904 Act provided that citizens of the country could cut timber and wood for their own domestic requirements, for fuel and fisheries. However that 1904 concession, valuable as it was, was never very clearly worded and as a result, especially within recent years, some misunderstanding has arisen about it. In this amendment we have here, we state definitely and clearly what the rights of the Crown are on this three-mile-limit. In other words we assert and define the rights of Crown Lands on this Reid’s timber. Nevertheless in asserting such a right we have, at the same time, to protect certain interests of the Reid’s. For example: Their right to go through the three-mile-limit to get to the hinterland of their blocks.

This amendment then defines and asserts the Crown’s rights to timber on the Reid’s blocks where those blocks are part of what we call the three-mile-limit.

I move second reading of this Bill, Mr. Speaker.

I might say, I have here the 1904 Act, in case any honourable members would care to have a look at it.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, not having seen the original Act and not having seen this amending Act honourable members will appreciate how difficult it is to make any comment on it or the observations of the Honourable Minister. But taking them as he stated them—I believe what they really involve is a declaration on behalf of the public that the three-mile-limit where it conflicted with the area claimed by the Reid’s—that the three-mile-limit belongs to the Crown.

DR. ROWE: The timber on it.

MR. BROWNE: And that the public have the same rights in respect of that as they have on any other Crown Lands within the three-mile-limit?

DR. ROWE: Yes.

MR. BROWNE: That is the declaration the Crown is making. Has there been—the Minister can tell me when he answers—any negotiations with the Reid Newfoundland Company on that score? Because these rights, as the Minister well knows, were given to the Reid’s in consideration of their building the railway many years ago, and were similar to those which were given in Canada to the Canadian Pacific Railway and other railway companies when they were built. But remember in those days there was no sentiment for great stretches along the railroad and only small sections were occupied. So it seems to me that all we would have to criticize in the Bill would be if it were an infringement of any rights which have been acquired—

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, there is no schedule to this Bill. There is a schedule here but it does not happen to be in the Act, for some reason or other. I can quite see it is a good Bill. It makes law what is already law, of course, that timber on the three-mile-limit belongs to the Crown. Is there any schedule to this Act, I wonder, Mr. Speaker? If there is I should like to have a look at it.

MR. CURTIS: I have the original Act here before me, Mr. Speaker. The areas are all set forth in the schedule, and consist of about forty areas of land.

MR. HOLLETT: In what parts of the country?

MR. CURTIS: Mostly on the West Coast although there is some at Gambo and some at Clode Sound and Dunville, Random Island, West of St. John's, North Harbour, Come-By-Chance, and certain land on the West Coast. The original Act is dated 1904 and was not brought into the consolidation of 1914. I think there was always some question as to whether or not it was a private or a Public Act. Because the Act says: Whereas the Reid Newfoundland Company is entitled to certain lands—it immediately begins to cut down their rights. So far as I can see it looks to me the Reid's still own the land but did not have the right to cut timber on it—It is a most unusual Act—It came up recently in the Supreme Court in a case involving the floating of logs in Salmonier River.

MR. HIGGINS: And is coming up in another case.

MR. CURTIS: Because it is a general Act and seems to make reservations around lakes—Nevertheless I think that has been interpreted by the Courts as a Public Act. In any event the position is that in that original Act it said that the areas of lands marked down and described and set forth in the schedule — In other words it shall not be lawful for the company to sell, lease or use or cut or permit to be cut thereon wood or timber for any purpose.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, may I just ask the Attorney General this question—We had, I understand, alternate blocks of so many square miles— Was not that the way it was granted? Where the railway ran close to the shore then he would be on the three-mile-limit, is that the position?

MR. CURTIS: I have really never seen the plan. I suppose it is up at the Department of Mines and Resources now. But apparently the Reid's owned the freehold although they had no right to cut the timber nor use the timber on it. This Act just defines the right of the Government with respect thereto. I might say the Department has been in touch with Mr. Gordon Stirling, representative of Bowaters, who I think actually owns most of the areas in question. I understand that the Act which we have before us has been amended in accordance with their agreement, and they have accepted this Act with the amendments. So that I don't think the House should have any hesitation nor any feeling that any private interests are being disturbed. The only reservations that Bowaters wanted was the right to cut roads through the property to get to their own property inside. This Bill gives them that right, and also provides what is to be done with the wood cut down in such cases.

DR. ROWE: Some of Reid's property was far from the railway and somewhere in the area lying between Cape Freels and Gander Bay. As the Attorney General said, we do respect the rights of Reids in this—For example: Nobody is allowed to put up a log cabin without the consent of the Reids. Also if they want to develop a mine or anything like that on their land they have the right then to do that.

On motion Bill read a second time —On motion referred to a Committee of the Whole House at a later hour this day.

Second Reading of Bill, "An Act Further to Amend the Timber Licenses (Reversion to Crown) Act":

DR. ROWE: Mr. Speaker, two years ago this House passed a Timber License (Reversion to Crown) Act, bringing back to the Crown large numbers of tracts of timber land. Last year an amendment to that was made which excepted certain areas for reasons which we explained then. Now this amendment merely states that where such exemption was made the land may not be transferred nor disposed of without the consent of the Lieutenant-Governor in Council. That, I think, is the essence of that amendment.

Mr. Speaker, I move the second reading of the Bill.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, I think we will have to agree with this one because, like the other one, it is most peculiarly written. I understand the Minister of Mines and Resources much better than I do this.

On motion, Bill read a second time —On motion ordered referred to a Committee of the Whole House at a later hour this day.

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Speaker, when the House was in Committee on Ways and Means I submitted some resolutions which increased the salaries of the Auditor General and the Controller of Finance to ten thousand dollars from nine thousand dollars a year. The House in Committee on Ways and Means did not consider these resolutions because they felt they were resolutions for Committee on Supply. But as supply had been voted and as the amount of $10,000 for these two officials appeared in the estimates I take it that perhaps the House would give leave to introduce them as a bill to Amend the Audit Act, to fix these two salaries which are statutory. If my honourable friends will look at the estimates, Mr. Allan was put down at $10,000 and Mr. Marshall also. But the Act dealing with the appointment of these two officials says they are not to be paid more than $9,000. Therefore I would ask leave to introduce a Bill, "An Act to Amend the Revenue and Audit Act" so that we can carry out the actual amount and pay them the amount that has been voted—If the House is prepared to do so?

MR. HOLLETT: We could move to go into Committee.

MR. CURTIS: I do that Mr. Speaker,—I move we go into Committee on Supply.

MR. SPEAKER: Committee of Supply is on the Order Paper—I do now leave the Chair.

Mr. Courage Chairman of Committee.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, before the House goes into Committee of Supply I wish to bring up another matter, which I wished to raise the other day and could not do it because the Committee had already been sitting.

This, I think, is a very important matter. As it may be the last opportunity that I shall have of bringing it up I would like to do so now. I think when honourable members hear it, if they don't know the facts, they will think it is incredible that such a thing as I am going to describe should happen here.

For a long time I have heard various rumours about it, and the way that the Board of Liquor Control has been granting licenses to applicants and the juggling that has gone on in connection with the issuing of these. I have heard that they are not being fairly and impartially administered and given out, and that friends of the Government are preferred to other people when it comes to the question of issuing licenses. Recently I was informed by a prominent citizen representing a group renting a building known as the "Avalon Club" situated at Long Pond, Manuels, and carrying on the business of a club, so called, there for about three years. They were accustomed to engaging some person to act as manager. Now I might say it was not a club within the meaning of the Act but a club such as those other clubs we have heard so much about, like the "Old Mill". It sold liquors. In February 1953 they engaged a certain gentleman to act as manager. I believe they let it to him for carrying on the business there, and they supplied the liquors, which were delivered, and the club was opened. The license was paid. They were operating two days only when it was suddenly closed by the Board of Liquor Control. The gentleman who told me of this transaction told me he had received two letters successively. One letter was to the effect that the manager he had engaged was not qualified to act as an operator, and was not qualified to hold an operator's license, and therefore he could not conduct the club. Then he received a second letter cancelling his license, and returning his cheque for $200.

The gentleman who informed me said he interviewed the manager who said: "That will be all right, I will clear that up." He arranged an interview with the Attorney General and went to the office of the Attorney General, as it was only a matter of discussion. The Attorney General suggested to my informant that he send a letter to the Board of Liquor Control saying he wished to have that other party appointed and that he would get an operator's license. He could not believe he had received from the Chairman of the Board of Liquor Control a letter stating the manager was not qualified. Then he went to the Chairman, and the Chairman told him the same thing—"You write me a letter and the matter will receive immediate attention." He wrote the letter and delivered it at 4:00 o'clock in the afternoon, when the Chairman was not present in the building. Monday morning he telephoned and said that the Board had met and had given the matter serious consideration and the license would be granted, to send in the $200 and he would get his license.

So he did send in the $200, and he got the license and opened the business and carried on for another year. They paid the renewal of the license this year, 1954, and he was talking to the Chairman of the Board, telling him all the expenses he had been put to and how he had a new manager engaged this year and had spent some money getting fixed up etc. He left the Board of Liquor Control and went out on the street. There he was accosted by another citizen who said to him: "I want to see you a minute, I have a license for Manuels." He said, "What do you mean, you have a license for Manuels?"

"We got the license for Manuels. We are going to operate in your club, the Avalon Club."
He answered, "No you are not. You must be crazy!" "We sent in our cheque and have been carrying on now since the first of the year."

So a day or two later he went back to the Board of Liquor Control and saw an official of the Board, Mr. Vincent, and said to him:

"I met a person on the street here a day or so ago, and he told me he had a license for Manuels and that he is going to operate in our club. This is a strange thing to happen. This is not right. This is wrong, because we have spent hundreds of dollars to fix it up and we are all set to go."

"Well," Mr. Vincent said, "Did you not get the letter we sent you?"

"No," he answered; "I did not get any letter."

"Well, a letter was sent to your office by hand."

"Well, he replied, perhaps you can look up your files and tell me the contents of the letter."

Mr. Vincent looked up the files and said; "I am sorry to have to tell you your license was cancelled and is going to another party. Another party got it."

So this gentleman was referred to the firm of Mercer and Mifflin and he conducted negotiations with Mr. Mifflin, and had to sell out his interest in the business.

Now, Sir, it seems to me that this is a very strange occurrence and deserving of investigation. The Board of Liquor Control is a public body. I know the appointments are political, but they have certain duties laid down which are supposed to be carried out and they are supposed, like everybody else to administer the law without fear of favour. They are not doing it.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I beg to move that all the words after the word "that" be stricken out in the motion and the following inserted instead:— "In the opinion of this House consideration should be given to the question of setting up a commission of inquiry, under the Public Inquiries Act, for the purpose of investigating the manner in which functions of the Board of Liquor Control have been administered during the past two years."

MR. FOGWILL: Mr. Speaker, I second that motion.

MR. SPEAKER: There is an amendment offered to the motion "I do now leave the Chair."

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, I rise to support that motion. I think the motion is to set up a board of inquiry under the Public Inquiries Act to investigate the Board of Liquor Control. Let me say right now, Sir, I have great admiration for the Chairman of the Board of Liquor Control. I have known him for a number of years. I am not what you call friendly or not a particular friend of his or he of me. But I do know his reputation, and I say right here now, I have every respect for him. So that nothing I may say will be taken, I trust, to cast any aspersions upon the integrity of the Chairman. There are vicious rumours or stories coming to the ears of the Opposition. It is known of course that we as an Opposition do receive complaints from people, and we have seen enough to know that a good many of these complaints are unfounded. Some of them probably are from people who are disgusted etc. We take that into consideration. But I do know there are various cases of either mal-administration in the Board of Liquor Control or some lack of proper administration in regard to carrying out the Liquors Act. I mentioned the fact here a day or so ago of a complaint having come to me, as Leader of the Opposition, from a group of people in another district, not my own district at all, in which they stated they had some months ago forwarded a petition to the proper authorities for presentation to this House and that that petition has not yet been presented to this House. This petition came from Burin. I myself have spoken to the member for Burin on that matter. He informed me that he did not receive the petition in the first instance but only a copy, and that the petition went in to the Board of Liquor Control. We can all see therefore that it was somebody's duty to see that the petition arrived into this House and was presented. I think sufficient thought should have been given to the feelings of the several hundred people who signed that petition in the District of Burin, to be presented to this House, particularly on this important question of petitions coming in relevant to the Administration of the Board of Liquor Control. The Board of Liquor Control can only do the best they can to carry out the Act, and I know that in a few instances the Act under which the Board is set up has clauses therein which may be interpreted very widely. Even on the definition of a club, there seems to be quite a latitude. I think there is a case for investigation as to what constituted a club or how far the Board of Liquor Control may go in giving a license to a club to sell hard

MR. SPEAKER: I do not think the honourable member is speaking strictly to the amendment now.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, I am citing some cases that would indicate there should be a necessity of an inquiry. If I have overstepped the bounds, Sir, I apologize. Would I be correct, Sir, in referring to one other instance where I deemed it—I want to give one which would justify the remarks I am making in support of the measure, if I may, Mr. Speaker, without overstepping the bounds. I want to make reference once again to a petition which was presented on behalf of a number of people in the district of my honourable and learned friend on my right and myself from St. John's West. That was in connection with the opening or closing of a certain club, so called, in the district of St. John's West. No apparent attention has been given to that petition although we are informed that some seven or eight hundred people living in the area or in the vicinity of that club expressed their desire by petition and sent it either here or to the Board of Liquor Control. No action has been taken in the area or in the vicinity of that petition, although that may have been done. I had no knowledge of the petition. I had nothing to do with it coming in here. But I think, Sir, any petition coming in to the Government should be presented here, particularly on this important question of petitions coming in relevant to the Administration of the Board of Liquor Control. The Board of Liquor Control can only do the best they can to carry out the Act, and I know that in a few instances the Act under which the Board is set up has clauses therein which may be interpreted very widely. Even on the definition of a club, there seems to be quite a latitude. I think there is a case for investigation as to what constituted a club or how far the Board of Liquor Control may go in giving a license to a club to sell hard liquors in certain areas in this country. The advisability, Sir, of having agents here, hither and yon all over the country to sell the products or at least the goods of the Board of Liquor Control is another matter which might be gone into. We know that everybody now is looking for a beer license. Only tonight when I went home from this House a letter was on the table awaiting me from a man in another district, a man I don't know, complaining he had applied for a beer license to the Board of Liquor Control and to his member, one of the Northern Districts, and he had not even received the courtesy of a reply. He was written to me to ask if I could get the license for him to sell beer. Whilst I don't think I would have any success even if I tried to get a license for that poor man—But there is something lacking, Sir, when the Board of Liquor Control is coming under the criticism of people who even in some cases themselves are anxious to have dealings with that Board.

I strongly support the motion made by my honourable and learned friend from St. John's West for the setting up of this Royal Commission of Inquiry, and I hope that, if the Government feels so disposed that they will put it into the hands of the Minister, and I know they will all be fair-minded and will give the whole thing favourable consideration. Let me repeat here again that the Chairman of this Board, in my opinion, even though some mal-administration may have gone on, is one of the finest, most decent of Christians the Government could have had when they took over the Board of Liquor Control from the Commission of Government.

Thank you, Sir.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, the selection of the Chairman, of the Board of Liquor Control was my own personal choice, and my colleagues in the Cabinet agreed with my choice, so the appointment was made. The choice of members of the board was my choice—My colleagues agreed with me—So the appointments were made. The first Chairman was the honourable gentleman who is now the Minister of Finance. He was replaced by a very close and intimate personal friend of mine in the person of Mr. Anthony Mullowney. Mr. Mullowney and I together in his home at Gander launched the Confederation Campaign in Newfoundland. Tony Mullowney and I, just the two of us, in his home and in his office. He was then Superintendent of the works at the building of the Royal Air Force Transport Command at Gander and had a suite of offices in his own building. That was the building belonging to that one Department. He had an apartment there. We virtually lived together in the sense that I spent a great deal of my time in his home at night and in his office in the daytime. It was in his office and on his typewriter that I wrote the first letters of the series of letters on Confederation I published in the Daily News. So that when my close friend, the present Minister of Finance, resigned his position as Chairman of the Board of Liquor Control I thought at once of Mr. Mullowney, because he is a man of undoubted integrity, of outstanding ability. From the moment he went in there as Chairman of the Board I have never heard a single whisper suggesting he was not operating the Board with great efficiency and great objectivity and great honesty. I am not satisfied from anything that has been said here tonight that that is not still the case. I see no reason in the world, not the slightest hint of a reason for appointing a public inquiry into the administration of the Board of Liquor Control. There has never been a board of any kind in Newfoundland associated with the Government that has been so honestly and so efficiently operated as the Board of Liquor Control. To suggest that a public inquiry be made into it is simply ridiculous, and I shall vote against it.

MR. HIGGINS: Mr. Speaker, one of the outstanding characteristics of the Honourable the Premier, and an admirable characteristic and one for which I must say I have always honoured him is his loyalty. But a serious charge has been raised here if the statements made by my honourable colleagues are based on facts. Then I suggest the assurance of the Premier that he is personally satisfied and personally confident.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Will the honourable gentleman yield? I don’t want to speak again. But I ought to have added that I will personally investigate this with Mr. Mullowney and have him explain to me personally the circumstances surrounding the cases alleged by my honourable friends. My honourable friend knows himself, and I understand, it is the Treasurer of the Tory Party, Mr. Claude Hall who is the person concerned.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Claude Hall has no official position whatsoever with the Progressive Conservative Party. Now if there is a Tory Party in the town perhaps he is, but I know he has no connection with us, Sir, I want to correct that.

MR. HIGGINS: As I was saying, Mr. Speaker, I welcome the Premier’s assurance that he himself is prepared to go into this matter. I have no doubt he will. I am prepared to accept the honesty of his statement that he is himself perfectly satisfied of the integrity of the Chairman of the Board. Indeed whilst I cannot claim acquaintance with Mr. Mullowney what little I do know of him certainly leads me to believe he is everything we have been assured he is. Certainly he is a most courteous gentleman with whom to deal. That is not the point, Sir. The point is that the Premier asks this House to accept the fact that he is satisfied that there is nothing wrong. We have been told on other occasions about another person with whom it is unnecessary to name, that this man is beyond the shadow of any suspicion. Later it was found out that confidence so generously given was found to be misplaced. I cannot speak with any certainty as to the truth of the statements made by my honourable and learned friend. I can speak with some knowledge of the fact that the statements have been made and made openly within the past year, not only to me but to many people who have repeated, second-hand though it may have been, and in the retelling they may have been distorted. It may be perhaps that an injustice may have been done. But, Mr. Speaker, as long as statements like these are made openly by people who, to the best of my knowledge, are entitled to believe that an ugly feeling persists and there may be some basis in fact for them, if there is even the slightest basis for believing anything is wrong, then I think to apply the principle raised by the Honourable the Premier himself with reference to other matters, it should be investigated. For that reason, Sir, knowing as I do some of the statements, not vouching for the facts but only to say I have heard that same story in various circumstances, I will support the motion.
MR. POWER: Mr. Speaker, I would like to say a word to that. I have some knowledge of what went on up to a while ago in that place called the Avalon Club. Now I don't think the party under discussion has much to complain of by way of discrimination because he already has another premises. But as far as I remember he got that during my term of office with the Board of Liquor Control, and they operated the place for a few months and it was closed half the time and open sometimes. Anyway the next thing we knew they had rented the whole thing, license, building and all to another party, I think, by the name of Doyle, without any consultation whatsoever with the Board of Liquor Control, which, of course, is highly irregular. We called them in and had a talk about it, and let that go. Then there was another operator. I may say what the condition of the place was anything but satisfactory under him. I know that the inspectors closed it up several times. Anyway there were a lot of things happened. I heard some of them, people phoned me about it. But I do know that Mr. Hall has not been persecuted in any way. He has, as I say, another license in St. John's. The very fact that he can continue his license would not be regarded as persecution. Even if he were refused, as the Act goes, there is no appeal against the decision of the Board, and I don't see what there is to investigate.

MR. MERCER: Mr. Speaker, it is very rarely that I rise to speak on an occasion of this sort, and I would hesitate to do so this evening, Sir, if it were not for the fact that, in my opinion, the honourable and learned member for St. John's West has deliberately tried to malign my firm, and I have no intention of taking it.

MR. BROWNE: To a point of order, Mr. Speaker, the honourable and learned gentleman is imputing a motive to me. I did not deliberately try to malign his firm. That is, not deliberately. I suggest he is out of order in saying that.

MR. SPEAKER: The honourable gentleman ought not to make that remark that the honourable member had deliberately tried to malign his firm.

MR. MERCER: All right, Sir, I shall withdraw the word "deliberately" and proceed to explain how the honourable gentleman came into possession of these facts and it is then up to this House and the public in general to deduce from what I say now whether he did or did not.

Well, Sir, the company which operates the Avalon Club at the present time, the principal shareholder of that company, is a client of mine and has been for some fifteen years. So that it was not a case of his being told on the street by Claude Hall or anyone else to go up and see Mercer and Mifflin and get your license. I want you to understand now, Mr. Speaker, I had nothing absolutely nothing, to do, no dealings whatsoever with this tavern or club. I do know what went on. I also understand now that for some months this club was closed and the last manager put there by the owners, one of which was the person who told the story of the honourable and learned gentleman from St. John's West, had been before the Supreme Court on several occasions by writ, so that they finally had to get rid of him, and the Board of Liquor Control had to close him up. That was done some months before. I believe, Sir, that I have just as good a source of information on this as and perhaps better than the honourable and learned member from St. John's West. The owners were trying for some time to sell the club or to sell the furniture and finally the man who had been a client of mine for several years told me he was going to get a license there and asked me if we would incorporate his company. He was held up for about ten times the amount that the club property was worth and finally it was sold for about five times what it was worth because he was trying to get rid of it, because of the gentleman who was manager of that club against whom several writs had been issued and if somebody had not taken over and paid up the same, the informant of my honourable and learned friend would have had to pay it out of his own pocket. He was trying to get rid of it as best he could. I can tell my honourable and learned friend right here and now, regardless of my honourable and learned friends being quite incensed or not that it is absolutely false and distorted in every way.

MR. BROWNE: Surely it is a matter of record—if I may answer the honourable gentleman. It is a matter of record this license was taken away on February 1953 and restored and they operated for a whole year afterwards and then it expired, as far as that man's operations were concerned—

MR. MERCER: They carried on several months without anybody being there because several writs had been issued against the manager, and they could not get anyone to go there and were losing money. Then he comes along and gives these false, distorted facts to the honourable and learned gentleman. I can assure this House that if we have an inquiry the honourable and learned gentleman will be ashamed of himself for taking that information and bringing it into the House.

MR. FOGWILL: Mr. Speaker, as a person living in this town I hear lots of rumours in connection with how the licenses are issued by the Board of Liquor Control, but I don't generally pay any attention to such rumours which I hear every day and every week, as the case may be, as to how you should go about getting a license to operate a tavern or a club, I pay no attention to it. But, Mr. Speaker, I have been informed by my honourable friend and learned member for St. John's West of this matter and how the method is used to issue licenses. It is on those grounds, Mr. Speaker, I wish to support this motion that a commission of inquiry be appointed to look into this question. I have no reason at all to disbelieve my honourable and learned friend, in fact I do believe him. I don't think he would bring forward this motion unless he had some valid reason and facts which he had on hand are true. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I do support this motion that a commission of inquiry be appointed to look into methods of issuing licenses to clubs, etc. I thank you very much, Sir.

MR. SPEAKER: The honourable and learned member for St. John's West cannot speak again. Let me say here—he did not say he was producing facts. He made it quite clear he was reporting what had been said to him.
DR. ROWE: Mr. Speaker, I don't as a rule speak on this matter either. In fact I cannot claim to have any particular knowledge of these affairs for reasons that are fairly well known. I do submit, Mr. Speaker, there are some grave and serious problems connected with the whole business of liquor. That has been well eulogized here by both sides of the House this year. Now after what I heard here tonight on this matter and particularly after listening to the remarks made by my honourable and learned friend from Port de Grave it would seem to me that it might be very well for the honourable member who has made that amendment to suggest now that an investigation be made into his friends who supplied him with the information, and I don't know them—I don't know any of them.

MR. BROWNE: He is willing to come in.

MR. SPEAKER: Order—Is the House ready for the question?

MR. CURTIS: —

MR. SPEAKER: The honourable minister will close the debate. The motion to leave the Chair was made by the honourable the Attorney General.

MR. CURTIS: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I just want to say my name was brought into this. I have a vague recollection of these people coming in to see me as does, it seems to me, practically everybody who has a grievance against any department in the government. These people came to me, and if my recollection serves me right, I got in touch with the Chairman of the Board and found out what the difficulty was and advised them how to settle it. As far as I am concerned that is my only interest in it.

MR. SPEAKER: To the motion that I do now leave the Chair an amendment was offered. The motion is now that the words "I do now leave the Chair" shall stand part of the question. Those who vote "Aye" will therefore vote against the amendment. Those who vote "Nay" will be voting for the amendment.

Motion put.

MR. SPEAKER: In my opinion the "Ayes" have it.

MR. BROWNE: Divide.

On division:

"Ayes"—Hon. the Premier, Hon. Mr. Curtis, Hon. Mr. Keough, Hon. Mr. Power, Hon. Mr. Murray, Hon. Mr. Ballam, Hon. Mr. Hefferton, Hon. Mr. Spencer, Hon. Dr. Rowe, Mr. Brown, Mr. Button, Mr. Morgan, Mr. Courage, Mr. Canning, Mr. Mercer.

"Nays"—Hon. Leader of the Opposition, Mr. Browne, Mr. Fogwill, Mr. Higgins.

MR. HIGGINS: Mr. Speaker, before that question is put—There is a matter to which I would like to revert, and I am not quite sure if I am in order. This is by way of a grievance. Yesterday in committee in reply to a question addressed to the Honourable the Premier when I asked him if the loan to Mr. MacLellan meant that in effect the Government were subsidizing him to the detriment of local companies operating the present ferry service, the answer I was given was to the general effect that neither of these companies had shown any interest in improving their service.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I did not say quite that. I said—and I repeat now—I asked them if they would undertake a really modern, streamlined service on that tickle and neither of them was willing to do it. The company that came nearest to it is the firm that is controlled by George Neal Limited, but the other firm would not. As a matter of fact the other firm refused point blank the repeated request of the Public Utilities Board to lay the necessary information before it.

MR. HIGGINS: On this point, Mr. Speaker, if I may, I was this morning contacted by the operators of the "Kipawa", at least one of the operators, who had seen in the "Daily News" some reference to the question and the answer made by the Honourable the Premier. He advised me that as far back as the Autumn of 1952 the question of ferry operations was discussed by his company, the company operating the "Maneco", the company controlled by the Neals, and the Premier; and that the Premier felt it was essentially a matter for private enterprise, and, so I am informed, suggested to them that amalgamation might be the best way of ensuring a good service.

Mr. George Crosbie was the one who told me that from that time onward the two companies gave continual attention to the matter especially as regard to the new vessel for the run, one designed to meet the conditions peculiar to that tickle. They told me they consulted a shipbuilder in the Province of Nova Scotia and they referred them to the builders in the United Kingdom. Indeed he told me that he had sometime ago contacted the Public Utilities Board and submitted to them a plan or plans, I am not quite clear on that, of the type of vessel they proposed. Of course before the company could go ahead and build or buy, I am not quite sure of that, or acquire, we will say, and have the vessel made available they wanted some guarantee that they could get a franchise. Up to this morning they had received no definite answer one way or the other.

The reason it is important, Sir, is that as a result of that information he referred me to an agreement which he said existed, a copy of which I subsequently obtained from the Department of the Registrar of Deeds in our court house here. Here it is, an agreement made November 19, 1953, between Mr. MacLellan and a company known as the Newfoundland Transportation Company Limited, a company duly incorporated under the Law of the Province of Newfoundland, etc., dated, as I say, November 1953, whereby Mr. MacLellan as vendor agreed to sell 64 shares of the vessel to this corporation and also agreed, in the words of the agreement, the vendor will obtain for the purchaser an exclusive franchise to operate a ferry service between Portugal Cove and Bell Island in the Province of Newfoundland for the purchase price or consideration of $175,000. Now that was the vessel and the franchise.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I am not particularly concerned with whether Mr. MacLellan made money on this deal, or whether it was our money used to finance it. The point I do make is this, Sir: if there is anything to this undertaking on his part to provide an exclusive franchise I do feel, Sir, that our local interests seem to have been sadly neglected more particularly if there is any truth to the statement made by Mr. George Crosbie that they have, in fact, both companies been actively pursuing this matter some time past, and have gone to the expense of executing the plan or plans of the proposed vessel and submitting it to the Department of Public Utili-
MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, on that point—I stated here the other day and earlier tonight, and I repeat it now, all of this arose at the time of the almost complete breakdown of the ferry service between Portugal Cove and Bell Island, when the whole population of Bell Island were up in arms, held a public meeting and appointed a public committee, a very representative committee, of somewhere between ten and twenty members; all of them came over and interviewed me and asked if I could do something to remedy the situation. I began at once interviewing the two companies concerned, one of which is George Neal Limited, which I did on the telephone, the other being the firm headed by Mr. George Crosbie, whom I approached through intermediaries, as we don't happen to be on the best and most intimate personal terms. So I got a very close friend of mine and a close friend of his to approach him and deal with him on the matter. Nothing came of any of it, nothing, positively nothing. It ended in a complete vacuum, nothing, emptiness, nothing. Much more, after six or nine months I got the present deal lined up through Mr. MacLellan by merely asking him to come to see me about something else. He did not occur to me as a man who could solve the problem. He came in to see me about some business problem, and I said: "You are the very man to take over a headache I got." He asked what that was. I told him the ferry system or lack of one for Portugal Cove - Bell Island. I asked him if he would tackle it and see what he could do. He told me, if you want me to I will. A few weeks later he came in and said: "I got your problem solved. I got the boat, everything, but I have not quite enough money to buy it. He asked if the government would lend him some money. I said: "I believe we will." That was months after I had ceased to hear a single syllable—I will say this: George Crosbie was stubbornly and determinedly refusing point blank to have anything to do with the Public Utilities Board. He defied them. He refused information which they felt they had a perfect right under law to demand. He refused it quite point blank and continued ignoring them and virtually told them to "go to Hell."

MR. SPEAKER: Order.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The words are in quotations which I am using, Mr. Speaker. Although I think in the end he did back down, I believe the Public Utilities Board threatened the full law on him, and in the end the Board either went in to examine the accounts of the company or at that point they caved in and gave the information required. But the deal with MacLellan came about long after all attempts had failed completely to get anything done by these two companies. Now the one of the two companies which appeared to be most willing was George Neal Limited. Mr. W. R. Neal himself, with whom I talked, did seem to be interested in the matter and anxious to do something about it, but in the end he had to give up. Now I am most interested but not too terribly impressed to hear that the two companies had been working like trojans ever since to try and work up an amalgamation. I would like to know how long after all this happened they submitted this plan. I think this has been going on about two years.
MR. HIGGINS: Only last year you voted the loan.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is so, but two years I think—I am speaking from memory, and a lot of things have happened—but I think it is about two years, since the situation arose first.

MR. HIGGINS: If I remember correctly the "Kipawo" was out of action and there was only one boat.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That was in 1952.

MR. HIGGINS: Mr. MacLellan only appeared on the scene about twelve months ago.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is right. Therefore, as I said, it was months and months after this thing cropped up first. I approached these two companies while the deputation was still in here in St. John’s from Bell Island. They came in here while the trouble was still on. I approached the two companies and for five or six months after that before I was able to find a solution in the person of Mr. MacLellan. I think it is excellent. Cutting passenger rates and freight rates and giving an up-to-date service, and I am not too worried about the two companies concerned, not worried at all.

He authorized me to announce a 20% reduction right off. I have announced publicly that the rates are going to be cut by 20% for passengers and freight rates. Whereas the other two companies were demanding an increase. Now where should our sympathies lie?

MR. SPEAKER: Order. Perhaps it was because of the extremely, I will say, parliamentary conduct of the Honourable and Learned Member for St. John's East that I did not interrupt him in his so-called grievance. I want to say this though: in the opinion of the Chair it is not a grievance but merely a renewal of the past debate in which the honourable member brought new evidence to support a question raised last night. I think his question in that matter might more properly have been taken up when questions were called on the Orders of the Day.

MR. HIGGINS: Mr. Speaker, I can say it won’t happen again. I was afraid I might not have the chance later.

Mr. Speaker left the Chair.

Committee of the Whole on Certain Resolutions—

On motion Committee rose to report having passed the resolutions without amendments. On motion report received. On motion the Committee asked leave to sit again.

On motion said resolutions read a first time, read a second time and concurred in.

MR. SPEAKER: The Honourable the Attorney General asks leave to bring in a Bill based on certain Resolutions—"An Act Further to Amend the Revenue and Audit Act".

On motion read a first time, read a second time.

MR. CURTIS: I don’t know, Mr. Speaker, whether you intend to have this Bill go through Committee. It has been discussed already. I move that the bill be now read a third time.

Bill read a third time, ordered passed and title be as on the Order Paper.
Second Reading on Bill, “An Act to Make Provision for the Award of Pensions in Certain Cases”:

MR. SPEAKER: The debate on second reading of this bill was continued by the honourable and learned member for St. John’s West.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, I think you will appreciate that ever since the Minister of Provincial Affairs moved the second reading of this bill that we did not have much time to give it any prolonged consideration. In fact we did not have time to give it any attention at all.

I know that this Bill when it becomes law will be read with the Civil Service Act, the Memorial University Pensions Act, the Education (Teachers Pensions) Act of the revised statutes, and as one reads it one sees that it is intended to apply to persons who have been formerly employed as civil servants or employed with the Memorial University or employed as members of the teaching profession generally, and it also applies to members of the Constabulary, and who were once members of the Constabulary, and members of the ranger force who retired from their positions and contested an election for the return of members to the Parliament at Ottawa or to the House of Assembly. Now since 1949, going back to that memorable day, at any time from that day on, a person, it says, I presume, has been or will be employed in the various capacities which I have mentioned, and is not eligible to receive a pension or a gratuity on his retirement. Such a person, when he attains the age when he would have received a pension, if he were still employed or if because he became ill mentally or physically would have been retired, would become eligible for a pension just the same even though he had left the services of the Government fifteen or twenty years ago.

Now there is a provision, of course, in this Bill that determines whether a pension, allowance or gratuity may be awarded to such persons, the only service which may be taken into account, i.e., to say, if he had put in ten or twenty or fifteen years he will get credit for that. It might not amount to a lot of money but a man serving in the police force or at Memorial University or the Department of Justice or any other department and goes into political life and stays until he reaches the age of 65 can then come back to the Government and say about that little retirement gratuity or pension to which I am entitled, for which the Minister of Provincial Affairs has brought in a bill in 1954. I think I have a little sum there—I think you should give me interest too. I don't know if there is any provision for it, but it would be nice. If there is not such a provision I think when we get into committee an amendment will be made to provide for interest at the normal rate of say 3%, the same as in the Savings Bank.

This bill seems to fit in with certain amendments made to another bill which is before the House in regard to the civil service. Now I have never heard of anything like this. I wish when the Minister is replying he would tell us if there is any precedent for it. We are living in such a strange new world now that anything is likely to have happened, and it may be that the Minister can point to some precedent. I have never heard of it before. I don't believe it is in the English Act, in fact I feel sure it is not nor in the Canadian Act because once a person leaves the service, if he resigns, then he is finished.
I believe this bill too also provides a pension for his widow if he should die. In other words even though he is not a member of the civil service or of the teaching profession or of Memorial University or anything else he is building up a certain royalty which will be tardily rewarded. I don't know—perhaps the Minister can tell me whether I will be entitled to that myself. I spent fifteen years as a judge, a very small judge, the Premier told me.

MR. SMALLWOOD: A magistrate.

MR. BROWNE: No a judge—ex-officio magistrate.

MR. SMALLWOOD: A sort of a courtesy title.

MR. BROWNE: No, Mr. Speaker, a position in which a long line of distinguished men preceded me. I did my best to live up to it at a time when the amount of business was very much greater than it was when my predecessor was there. I might say the position of judge of the District Court was a very old position. Originally there were two of them. Perhaps my honourable and learned friend, the Attorney General, can remember there were two there, Judge Conroy and I believe Judge Knight. I don't know whether Judge Little was. Back in the old days anyhow the original position in St. John's was to have two judges, and there was one judge of the district court at Harbour Grace. I am sure there will be many people in the civil service now, although I suppose there were not many, who would have gone into politics to be members of one Legislature or the other—I don't know what is going to happen if they get defeated sometime.

MR. BROWNE: On either side—You know, "the fortunes of war." The Premier is too well acquainted with the history of political life in this country not to know that the pitcher that goes to the well, etc., will some day be broken.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is the old school.

MR. BROWNE: Yes—And though he may have learned a lot from the mistakes of others he must remember that still stands true, no matter how popular a man may be, the time will come when people will weary of him and look for someone else. However, the point I was making was this: Where a person has gone into politics and does not win, in the two years mentioned in the Act he has to be re-appointed. I think he would have to be a humble soul or a person assured of sympathetic ears when he appealed to go along for reinstatement. I know encouragement has been offered to some people to do that, but the people I am thinking of did not feel humble enough at the time to do it.

This is an interesting bill. It is a pity the Minister did not tell us more about it, how he came to think it up and what was the origin of it because I am sure it is deserving of an article in some of the humourous magazines.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, just a word or two.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Is that a promise?

MR. HOLLETT: I did not get the remark. I shall remember when we adjourn to pick it up. I said a few words about a similar Act referred to by my honourable and learned friend. In my opinion this Act and the other Act are the first beginning of the undermining of the civil service in this country, when a man, like the Premier if you like, can go into some office in some departmental setup and say, I want you to go to Green Bay, all right, get ready—Your pension is all taken care of, go and represent the Government, and if you don't get elected that is taken care of too. That, Sir, is something which any Government, not referring particularly to this Government, will hold over the head of good and reliable men in the civil service who have probably spent ten or fifteen or twenty years in the civil service. I think they should have written across the face of it, Sir, "For service rendered" a bill for services rendered since 1st. April 1949. As I look across at the opposite side of the House I see men who at that time and since were members of the civil service. I look to Ottawa and see them.
I see men there, two of them, who come under that, Professor Fraser and Mr. Power, both members of the House of Commons.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Three.

MR. HOLLETT: They are here being looked after for services rendered. And Ranger Stick.

MR. SMALLWOOD: No Stick is out.

MR. HOLLETT: Who is the other? You are only upsetting me.
You see I get upset very easily lately.
This is for services rendered and it should be written across the face of that bill. Because we do know there are people who since the 1st of April 1949 and prior to the 1st of April 1949 worked hard to try and carry out the plans of the Premier on the opposite side of the House, the Government side of the House—He also paid off a man last year, but that man is not here.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The honourable gentleman is very pleased about that.

MR. HOLLETT: He was paid off last year, Sir. Well I have no objection to it, Mr. Speaker, no great objection to the Bill. I believe a man who works hard in the civil service or in the teaching profession and is misguided enough sometime in his life to get out and go out into politics, I think he should be really looked after,
I almost think he should be taken out of circulation all together and put somewhere where they do put people.
It is not an easy life in politics, and I think some of them are going to be very disappointed if they think that by going into politics they are really going to enjoy life, because I assure them they won't enjoy it too well if we continue to put this country in the state of debt that we are getting in at the moment. Sir, I will dub this bill now, and this will be known hereafter as the Act passed by the Legislature in the year of Our Lord 1954 at the request of the Honourable Minister of Provincial Affairs for services rendered by teachers, rangers, professors.

MR. SMALLWOOD: And judges.

MR. HOLLETT: The honourable member who occupied that seat, does he come into that too?

MR. SMALLWOOD: You don't suggest that would make any differce to the honourable and learned member.

MR. HOLLETT: The honourable member who sits here?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I grant he does not sit over here.

MR. HOLLETT: There are others over there now who won't be sitting over there after November. Anyway I hope they will be taken care of for services rendered. They were taken out of the teaching profession, ranger force, out of Memorial University, out of I don't know where—I don't know whether there were any taken out of the constabulary?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, we have an ex-policeman.

MR. HOLLETT: That is all I want to say.

MR. MURRAY: Mr. Speaker, as the honourable member for St. John's West has pointed out, this bill should be read in connection with sections of the Act to Amend the Civil Service Act which passed this House. In that Act the principle was established that if a person left the civil service or having been a member of the staff of Memorial or a policeman or ranger, if he left his position and entered public life it was established that his pension rights would be preserved. The honourable member for St. John's West wanted to know if he were an established civil servant at the time he resigned to go into public life, well if he were not of course the Act does not apply.

The present bill, Sir, is purely to carry out that principle which was established to its logical conclusion, if a man can remain in the public service until he is 65 and if he were defeated by an ungrateful populace after terms, it might take him two years to get around to applying for reinstatement, but in the meantime if he should happen to die or become mentally or physically incapacitated his pension rights still stand.

MR. HIGGINS: Don't you think that is enough.

MR. MURRAY: Once having established the principle that a man can enter the public service, enter public life, I think it is only logical to add this measure. When we look across the House and see former civil servants carrying out their duties so splendidly we think it is a pity that people should be denied so we give certain authority under this Act which applies both ways. A person, after all, Mr. Speaker, might wish to enter public life to save the country from dictatorship or to become a watchdog or even to become a Tory, and as such it is only right that his rights should be preserved.

MR. BROWNE: You are joking of course?

MR. MURRAY: Oh yes, of course.

On motion bill read a second time—Ordered referred to a committee of the whole House later.

Seconding Reading of Bill, “An Act to Establish the Newfoundland Power Commission:”

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I do not intend to speak to the motion that this motion be read at this present time, but to suggest rather that we have a recess for ten minutes. In the meantime I would like to invite the attention of the House to the very distinguished company we have present in the Chamber tonight, in the person of the Chairman of the CBC, Mr. Dunton, accompanied by two members of the Board of CBC, one of whom is the Newfoundland representative on the Board, Mr. Gordon A. Winter, a former Minister of Finance of this Province. I am sure that I speak for all of us when I extend to Mr. Dunton, the Chairman of the CBC, a cordial welcome not only to this Chamber but to the Province on the occasion of his first official visit here since he became a manager of that great broadcasting organization. It is one of the most responsible of all positions in all Canada. I am quite sure that all Newfoundlanders and particularly all members of this House are proud to have him come to Newfoundland at this time. We hope that his stay and the stay of his colleagues will be most pleasant. It is a pity he did not come in good weather. These last two or three days, as the House knows, are not at all typical of good summer weather. If he would remain a while until our summer really unfolds in all its glory and riches I am sure that he would carry back with him to other parts of this great Canadian Nation an even better impression than he will of the climate of Newfoundland. Mr. Speaker, if the House is agreeable we might have a recess and I could resume my speech after the recess — Would that be in order?

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, before we recess I would like to join the good wishes of the Opposition to those already expressed by the Premier in extending a welcome to the Chairman of the CBC, Mr. Dunton. I am very glad to hear, and I am quite sure we of this side are very glad to have him here. The Premier said he has responsibilities. I am quite sure the word "responsible" would not have the same meaning for our honoured guest as it would have for some of us here. But he did use the word quite a lot — "Responsible Government" of course. I am referring to, Sir. We have "Responsible Government" now I suppose — But we are very happy to welcome Mr. Dunton, and I might properly offer this suggestion to him, through the Premier, that it might be advisable sometimes to get a mike in here.

MR. SMALLWOOD: We had one.

MR. HOLLETT: I am quite sure we could enter the whole world through a channel of the CBC. I have known some cases in the immediate past when it would have been wonderful, and I am quite sure Mr. Dunton could charge a fee so that the whole world could listen in sometimes — Sir, we are very happy to welcome him.

House recessed for ten minutes—Mr. Speaker returned to the Chair.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I rise to move the second reading of this Bill, "An Act to Establish the Newfoundland Power Commission". Ever since we have been in office we have given continual thought and continuous consideration to the problem of an adequate and efficient supply of electricity in Newfoundland. As a party we stand for the establishment of a hydro-electric commission similar to that of Ontario and of other provinces of Canada. Shortly after we took office I approached a very distinguished Canadian hydro-electric engineer, asking him to come to Newfoundland and organize a hydro electric commission and head it up. He would not come. He was willing to come as a consultant but not to remain here and to organize and to become the permanent head of the Newfoundland Hydro-Electric Commission. That was a great disappointment to us. Since then however, and on further reflection, we were not so sure that it is a hydro-electric commission we want. That is to say we are not so sure now as we were that we want to nationalize the production and wholesale of the hydro-electric as they do in most of the other Provinces of Canada. But we are quite sure that we have got to do something to take control and take the right to regulate hydro-electric matters. Last year the Government invited or requested the Ontario Hydro-electric commission to recommend to us two men, each of whom was to do a certain piece of work. One of these was quite distinguished in Ontario, a hydro electric man himself, Mr. Jeffery. Mr. Jeffery came here and did a notable piece of work for us and submitted a very notable and very capable report. In it he recommended strongly that the time had now come when we must delay, at our peril, we must set up some control to see that what hydro potential we have in Newfoundland is used to the maximum public advantage. For instance, when he was here we had an application from the Union Electric Light and Power Company of Port Union to guarantee a bond issue of 11 million dollars to enable them to develop part of the Trinity Pond Watershed on the North Side of Trinity Bay to enable them to serve the whole of the Bonavista Peninsula with power. We submitted that request to Mr. Jeffery. Now at the same time we submitted to him certain data and certain information in connection with the tentative proposals of the Newfoundland Light and Power to develop at Swift Current, and we submitted to him also certain demands that had been made upon the Government that we should compel United Towns Electric Company to give better service than they were giving, notably on the Burin Peninsula and on the Southern Shore, that is to say, the District of Ferryland; and in the District of St. Georges-Port-au-Port because in these three areas of Newfoundland they have a franchise, and in the case of the Burin Peninsula an exclusive franchise to sell hydro-electricity to the public. We laid all these before Mr. Jeffery. He told us if we were not prepared to establish a hydro-electric commission that would take over this production of power and the sale, or the wholesale of the hydro-electricity to utility companies who would retail it to the public, then certainly we ought to be prepared to set up at least a central body that would co-ordinate the activities of existing companies, and companies that may come, to take active charge of a programme of rural electrification.

Now the House is aware that we have a Public Utilities Commission. The Public Utilities Commission is set up particularly to regulate the public utilities companies. But I doubt that the Public Utilities Commission is likely to be adequate to deal with the matters set forth in this bill, which will be the responsibility of the new body we are now proposing. They will of course be closely associated and there will have to be close co-operation between them. But they will be separate bodies with separate functions.

I mentioned rural electrification. We have been giving a great deal of thought to that matter. I asked Mr. O. L. Vardy to interest himself particularly in this whole matter of rural electrification. For that purpose he visited most of the Provinces of Canada where he made an on the spot study of what is done in the other Provinces of Canada to provide electrification in sparsely populated areas.
generally known as rural areas, thereby giving it the name of rural electrification, the farms, the fishing villages and farm villages.

He has gathered a great deal of data which I have in my office. The Board that will be set up by this bill will be charged with the particular duty, amongst other duties, of taking charge of the whole matter of rural electrification in so far as the government is concerned or will be concerned in that field.

The whole purpose of the bill is pretty well set forth in Section 72 on page 6, where it sets forth that there shall be a commission. It sets forth how they are to be constituted, how they are to act and the like. It is in two sections (a) and (b);

The Commission shall
(a) investigate existing and potential developments for generating electrical power and energy from water power, coal, peat, gas, oil, or any other source and for transmitting such power and energy with a view to supplying electrical energy and power wherever needed throughout the province and increasing where necessary the existing supply, and towards that end shall
(i) undertake research and investigations of any kind that may be necessary;
(ii) make special research and investigations with a view to ascertaining and recommending the measures to be undertaken to secure rural electrification in the highest possible degree; and

(b) make recommendations to the Government for the development of electrical power and energy and the transmission thereof to those parts of the province where a supply is necessary and for the necessary increase of any existing supply, with particular emphasis on the supply of electricity in rural areas.

So that, Mr. Speaker, both parts of this section sets forth the functions and duties of the commission.

Now, Mr Speaker, I would not suggest to the House that the prime purpose, let alone the only purpose, of this power commission is to be handling rural electrification. I would not suggest that. But I do suggest that rural electrification will form a major part of the work of this Newfoundland Power Commission. It may be asked if we have any one in mind for the positions. I have to answer frankly that we have not. It is a board of three to five as provided here. It is also provided that we may appoint one member of the House of Assembly. In most of the provinces or in some of the provinces at least across Canada the practice is to appoint a member of the Cabinet to a power commission, to have a cabinet member in the body that controls electricity and hydro-development within that province. We will probably do the same thing, and have a member of the Cabinet serve as a member of that commission, and if not a member of the Cabinet then a member of the House of Assembly supporting the Government, to maintain, if not a direct connection, an indirect connection through the intermediary of a Member of the House.

Now I must confess frankly that I have no one in mind.

MR. BROWNE: But lots of applicants.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I imagine there will be no great difficulty in filling that part of the commission, i.e. a member of this House. The greater difficulty, I should think, would be to get able and competent men to do the technical work, professional members of this board.

Mr. Speaker, it is a most important piece of legislation. I regret that it comes later rather than early in the session, because it is one that deserves more debate than we are likely to give it at this late stage of the present session. I move the second reading of the Bill Mr. Speaker.

MR. MURRAY: Mr. Speaker, in spite of the lateness of the hour, I feel I must speak briefly to this measure and give it my full support. Because, Sir, there exists in the district which I happen to represent a situation which I think it unparalleled anywhere else in Canada. In the District of Ferryland there is generated practically all the electrical energy which is used on the Peninsula of Avalon. If you go out the road there, Sir, you will see huge transmission lines, big modern transmission lines bringing electrical energy out of the district. Still people up in the district are living by the light of kerosene lamps and using batteries for their radios. That, Sir, seems to me a situation which does not exist anywhere else in Canada.

We have up there in Ferryland one of the most modern fish plants in North America, and in Trepassey the most modern fish plant in the world. Yet these plants have to be supplied with what electrical energy and power they require by diesel engines. The district which is, I say, producing about 75,000 h.p. and supplying all the rest of the Avalon Peninsula—it does not even make economic sense, Sir, I think you will agree, and it does not make for moral justice.

Now, Sir, since I came into this House I have been bawling this out in season and out of season. I had promised the people up there to do what I could to see they get lights and telephones. I think it is only right that my district should have these things in this day and age. But Sir, I made very little headway in arguing the thing for two years. I have gone to the people up there operating in charge of the electrical energy and in charge of the distribution who had an exclusive franchise, but they stood behind their franchise and we were powerless to do anything about it. Now, Sir, I think, as the Premier has said, the time has come to do something about it, and the people with a franchise having exclusive rights over our waterpowers should be made to realize they only hold that franchise for the benefit of the people and for the public.

Sir, I hope this bill we are about to put through will be the means of rectifying the situation which exists in my district. If it does not then we should go the whole way and introduce a hydro-electric commission in Newfoundland, and take over concessions altogether. If people don’t live up to their obligations which they assume where they get exclusive rights over our waterpower.

I have great pleasure, Sir, on behalf of the people of my district in supporting this bill and I hope it will be the means of bringing about the moral justice they are entitled to.

MR. SPENCER: Mr. Speaker, I do not intend to delay the House very long in my remarks on this bill. Since my association with the government I have learned, and have known for some time, that the policy of the government has been to provide hydro-electric power as extensively as possible, to really electrify, if I might use that word, literally electrify Newfoundland.

It is unnecessary for me to repeat what has already been said by my colleague, the Honourable Minister for Provincial Affairs. My district does not exactly suffer in quite the same way that his does, but I agree with him that it is an absolute injustice to generate the power in the district and then export the whole thing without giving the people of the district the services which they should be entitled to by virtue of the natural product in their own area.

In sections of my district we have electricity. In other sections we have water power and the people in the district, particularly in the area of Lewisporte, have been stressing and making their desire known to the Government with a view to further development. I am happy that the Government is about to bring in this bill which is really something to spur the business of providing electricity for the whole of Newfoundland. Certainly, Sir, I sincerely hope that in the not too distant future the people in the district which I have had the honour to represent for the past four or five years will have their desired hydro-electric power.

I support this bill with everything I can put behind it, Mr. Speaker.

Dr. ROWE: Mr. Speaker, I have a very brief word to say in support of this bill. This morning I had a conversation with the general manager of the Iron Ore Company of Canada. He told me that his company has invited the Premier of this Province to press a button in, I believe, the first week in September, that would set in motion a great power development in Labrador, the power that will keep the wheels of the great iron development on the Labrador turning. The Premier announced here a few weeks ago that BRINCO, the British Newfoundland Corporation, will be spending $1,000,000 this summer on an investigation of the power resources of the Hamilton River Watershed. Again this is to be in my constituency. I think this development together with this bill and the statement of policy enunciated by the Honourable the Premier here tonight indicates that this Province is now perhaps for the first time really grappling with the tremendous need for power which indeed has increased out of all proportions during the past ten or fifteen years. We have areas in Newfoundland—my honourable colleague referred to my own home town of Lewisporte, where many people a few years ago built themselves up, one could say, by their own boot straps, and brought in their own diesel system and electrified every home in that great and progressive community, I believe, three times the cost of what we are paying today. Nevertheless they made up their minds they were going to have the amenities of life. Other communities have done likewise. Within a few miles of that town we have a potential there, I believe, of twenty-five thousand horse power if it were developed. In conjunction with other waterpower resources in that area it would not only give the people of the Northeast Coast an easier living and an easier means of living but it might mean the economic salvation of part of that coast which up to now has not been too optimistic for the future.
I support this bill, Mr. Speaker.

MR. C. BROWN: Mr. Speaker, I would like to add my support to this legislation now before the House. The need for electricity on the Avalon Peninsula is a great one, but I am sure the House will agree that we who represent the districts off the Avalon Peninsula and different sections of Newfoundland and including Grand Falls and Corner Brook and other sections know the need is tremendous. I for one have been flooded with requests that something be done to supply power and electricity for the District of Bonavista South.

I support the legislation, Sir, and look forward to the day when the whole of Newfoundland will be supplied with power necessary for her requirements.

MR. COURAGE: Mr. Speaker, since I will not have the opportunity of speaking to this bill in committee, I would like to say a few words now. This is a very important bill, and I have much pleasure in supporting it. I note that the duties of the commission are to investigate potential development. In that respect I would like to reiterate what has been said by various other members of the House of Assembly, and I hope this commission will undertake the electrification of Newfoundland. What I mean by that is the development of our waterpower to bring light to our people. I hope also that they will investigate existing and potential developments to generate electric power.

In connection with this point I would like to inform the House that I could not let this bill go through without saying a few words because of the fact we have a great deal of potential development for generating electricity in the district which I have the honour to represent, the District of Fortune Bay and Hermitage. There is some 600,000 horse power that is capable of being developed in Bay D'Espoir besides the considerable developments that are possible in other parts of Fortune Bay, Bay Du Nord River for example; Long Harbour River, Grand LePierre River, all these are capable of development anywhere from sixty-five to one hundred thousand horse power each. I hope, Sir, that something for Newfoundland in general and that a great deal for the South Coast in particular will come out of that appointment of this commission, I have much pleasure in supporting the bill.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, now that the Government side has exhausted—

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, No—Not exhausted.

MR. HOLLETT: The gaseous matter of power! I would like to say a few words in connection with this bill. Now I don't expect to be appointed to the chairmanship or anything of this commission. It is amusing to me you know, Sir, the amount of work which has been done by this government by way of commissions. There is a commission for everything. Since 1949, I think, there has been a commission on every avenue of life in existence in this country, a different kind of commission, of course, Sir—a commission on fisheries, price inquiry on food, forestry commission, all the ills of this country as far as forestry is concerned will now be taken care of, an agricultural commission, a fishery authority, and I could name a half dozen more. In every case, Sir, it seems to me that there has been considerable delegation of work and authority which usually is vested in the government being transferred to some other body, but work which should in a good many cases be done by the government itself. After all, we are not such an immense province although we do have some territory in the Labrador. But I don’t expect we shall have much to do with the development of hydro-electric power down there. Then again we have had all sorts of investigations. I note the first thing this commission has to do is to investigate existing and potential developments for generating electrical power. Well, I think, we had a hydro-electric survey in this country, which I believe cost considerable money. I take it the government now have obtained the necessary information to indicate just where lies that potential power. So that I take it along that line this particular commission which is to be set up won’t have a big job to do, they know right where they are going to put their finger on the power and almost on the button to press the switch to bring electricity to various parts of our land.

We are not of course against the bill at all. We are not opposed to it. But I must say I am rather amused with the sort of come-upness of the members of the Government on this bill, everyone wanting it in his district. I am quite sure whoever is appointed chairman of this commission is bound to have it in his district, I hope he does. I know we need electrification in this country. But of course electrification like everything else depends upon the ability of the people to pay for it, particularly over a widely extended area. The thing has to be done in an economic way. I take it if there are certain areas, for instance on the Ferryland Coast that have not got electricity, there must be some cause for that other than just cursedness and stubbornness of the operating company up there, particularly when that is where they get all the water power from which they develop their electricity transmitted to us in here and elsewhere over the country.

It is nice to know however, that we have another commission, a power commission. There are one or two objections which we must deal with in committee of the whole. I think it is hardly worth while wasting time over it at this late hour of the night. But I would point out that the government intends to give to this commission the power to borrow money, and the Minister promises to guarantee any loan which they may make. Only yesterday, I think, we had a bill brought in here in connection with Union Electric Light and Power Company, and a loan of over a million dollars was given to these people. I am wondering as to why we were in such a rush to grant that loan if we knew this commission was coming so soon? I should think we should have these investigations on the part of the commission into the advisability or otherwise of voting a million dollars to this concern, whom I believe have assets of about $130,000, and last years, I believe—

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, is this in order?

MR. SPEAKER: Not strictly so.

MR. HOLLETT: Was it not power for these companies we were talking about or was it something else? Light and power—At any rate I think it would have been advisable to delay the giving out of that loan, if we had known that so soon we were going to have this all-powerful commission which is to investigate the potentialities, undertake research and investigations and examine all proposals—Exactly the same thing was done by the power survey made some years ago, and of which, I think, we have had no report tabled here as yet.

Now, Sir, we are not against this Bill. As I said, there are one or two paragraphs in it that need a little attention. For instance: There is one there where the commission may from time to time borrow money for the purpose of this Act. That is an interesting way to bring it in, I know, because it always leaves it open, and they can fill in the numbers of dollars at will. And to secure the repayment of money borrowed, issue bonds, debentures or other securities of the commission in such form and containing such terms and conditions and at such a rate of interest and at such times as the Lieutenant-Governor in Council determines.

I suppose it is essential to have a power commission. I don't know. We have been getting along a long, long time without it. But as I say, this will be a sort of effort to lighten our darkness in this country—"Oh Lord We Beseech Thee"—I do hope the commission will flourish, and that they will electrify the darkened areas of our land as quickly as possible. We support the bill, Sir.

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Speaker, there are just one or two things said by the Honourable Leader of the Opposition to which I think we should make a reply. Because he has drawn attention to the fact that the amounts have not been filled in, I would like to say the Government proposes to suggest they be bounded by a million dollars there.

MR. BROWNE: Just a million?

MR. CURTIS: Yes, just one million, not that the million will be needed or used because there are many places which can get electricity after investigations by this power commission, but it is not the plan of the Government at the moment to set up a commission which will start to develop water powers, generate currents and make it available to the people. Rather, it is the present idea that the new commission will investigate such sections as have been suggested by my honourable friend, the Member for Ferryland. Down there, as he said, you have water power being used everywhere but in the location of its origin. The duty of the power commission will be to find out why the power does not go to these unlighted places, and to find out what department of the Government, Mr. Speaker, can look into that.

MR. BROWNE: Economic development.

MR. SMALLWOOD: What authority have we got?

MR. BROWNE: That would not stop you.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I must admit there is something in that—where development of Newfoundland is concerned very little stops us.

MR. CURTIS: Nevertheless, I think Mr. Speaker, I have the floor. The commission can investigate and find out just why electricity is not being brought into these places, these settlements on the Southern Shore, and just why St. George's area is not lighted, and consider a district such as the one I represent which has no benefit of electricity. Unfortunately it is an island and has no water power. Therefore the power commission will have to consider other means of providing electricity. But the idea of the power commission primarily, Mr. Speaker, is to find out the circumstances. Perhaps all that is needed is supplementary lines to these little areas. There is about fifteen miles between Old Perlican and Hant's Harbour. In that area of about fifteen miles the electricity goes up one Bay and up the other Bay and a little area in between is without electricity. Perhaps the power commission may say it is not economic to join on these two circuits unless the government gives a subsidy. The government might well turn around and say; well we will build the transmission line and rent it to you until it is self-supporting, or the Government may lend the money for the transmission line. But this Government at the moment, Mr. Speaker, has not the authority, and nobody knows just what they should do, nor how far we should go in order to aid these people to get electric lights. But it seems to be ridiculous for settlements to be without electric lights when electric wires run within fifteen miles. If the government has to go in and help these people to get electric lights they will do it. But before we do it let us have a body who knows what to do and how far we ought to go, and let that body investigate. Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of the debate.

On motion debate on second reading adjourned.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I move the House do not adjourn at 11:00 o'clock, this night.

MR. HOLLETT: I object, Mr. Speaker. Is that a debatable motion? I presume it is. Because if it is I would suggest that the House do not support it. We have been sitting here every night now until 11:00 o'clock and one night it was nearly 12:00 o'clock, from 11:00 o'clock in the morning. The government who are in favour of a five day week and a forty hour week for other people should practise what they preach. Certainly as far as the Opposition is concerned I think they should remember we have been under a tremendous handicap to have new bills such as this one we were discussing a moment ago placed before us for the first time today, and do all the other work we have been doing, and at the same time trying to take in the discussions of such important measures. We have not had time Sir, to look at a new bill since about two weeks ago. We had a very important bill passed to this House in connection with redistribution, and I for one had not had time up to about 4:00 o'clock this morning to even look at that most important bill. It is absolutely nonsense to sit here from 8:00 to 11:00 o'clock every night. Certainly we oppose that. After all we have another day tomorrow, at least I hope so. I don't see any reason why the members of this House should be rushed to death simply because the Honourable the Premier wants to go to Labrador next week. That apparently is the case, and I register my opposition very strongly against staying here after 11:00 o'clock in the night.

MR. FOGWILL: Mr. Speaker, I wish to register my disapproval of staying any later than 11:00 o'clock tonight. I can assure the people we are doing enough. We have only a few members on this side, and some of the bills I know — but perhaps the government thinks we should not look at them or study them — perhaps we are not supposed to— At least we do try to give some study to them in the time at our disposal. But we have not had time to give any study whatsoever to many of them. I for one don't want to sit after 11:00 o'clock tonight. We are here for quite a long time every night and in the morning, and I don't see any reason at all why we should continue after 11:00 o'clock tonight. There is another day coming. We can get through the work of this House even if the Premier is not present. He could go to Labrador if he needs a rest, if he works any harder than us, I don't know, at least he has intimated that to us. He is a hard worker, and I don't disbelieve him. He could go on to Labrador tomorrow, and we could attend to the business here without any rush and without him around to tell us he thinks we should work later hours, like the government has been trying to do with the Opposition this week.

MR. HIGGINS: Mr. Speaker, for the sake of solidarity if nothing else I must support this objection. It seems to me a strange anomaly that the government which from the moment of its inception has proclaimed itself the champion of the toiling masses, this government which has magnificent legislation for the protection of the workers from exploitation, should now exploit the members of the House. It seems to me a monstrous injustice. Indeed, Sir, words practically fail me. I can only say that I am against it.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, just to close the debate, as it appears to have been a debate—We are not at all anxious that the Opposition should work one iota harder than we do ourselves. Long before this House comes in session the members of the Cabinet, at least, have done a day's work. Besides we want to make up for some of the time Mr. Claude Hall used up on us tonight. He used up an hour and a half of our time. We want now to do some of the province's business.

MR. HIGGINS: Of course if the government had been here instead of Jamaica.

Motion carried — That the House do not adjourn at 11:00 of the clock this night —

Second Reading of a Bill. "An Act to Establish the Newfoundland Power Commission"—adjourned debate:

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Speaker, I adjourn the debate. I have nothing else to say.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, I am sorry that the Honourable the Attorney General adjourned the debate. He should have left it open. Then we would not have had to work after 11:00 of the clock.

Mr. Speaker, I want to say once again that it is an unpleasant thing to have to take up a matter so important as this when we have only seen it for a few minutes, and upon which we heard the address of the Premier and then the chorus from the party supporters on his side, which gave us very little light upon the subject.

Now, Sir, I am sure we all recognize the importance of the development to the greatest possible extent of electrical power in this country, and the extension of transmission lines to every section of the country. I was interested to learn that the Premier, very early in his career in office as Premier, had invited Dr. Thomas Haig here. Because Dr. Thomas Haig was a lecturer in hydrology at the University of Toronto when I was a student in civil engineering and he was my lecturer, and what little I learned about the development of electrical power I learned from him. He was a very good teacher. He was serving there under another very admirable person who was responsible for the development of the great plant on the Niagara River, which developed three hundred thousand horsepower. It seems strange that the government which started out with such good intentions five years ago should wait until the eleventh hour on the last day practically of the session in 1954 before they introduced this bill which gives expression to their hopes. I don't know whether they are serious about what they are saying or not. It does not seem to me to be very convincing to introduce this here like they have done tonight when none of the members, I suppose, outside the Cabinet have had the opportunity to study the measure. Certainly as far as we are concerned they don't know anything about it yet, and the public does not know anything of what they propose to do. I think before this measure should be gone through with, it should be published so the press and the public generally should have an idea of what it means.

Now, Sir, the Attorney General in his remarks said that this commission did not intend to do any tremendous thing at the present time. They could investigate certain areas where one would wonder why there was not electricity, where there was electricity on one side of a peninsula and electricity on the other side, and yet within a short distance there was no electricity. Now I know the Attorney General is an excellent businessman. I know that he understands that a company that is in business for making money will sell to anyone who will buy where he can sell at a profit, and if they can't make a profit then they don't sell. That is the reason, and he knows that is the reason and every member of the government knows the reason the electricity is not extended further than it is, is because it does not pay.

Now all the members are naturally very anxious to have electricity, I know the Southern Shore better than my honourable and learned friend, the Minister for Provincial Affairs.

MR. MURRAY: I don't think you do.

MR. BROWNE: I have been going up there a lot longer.

MR. MURRAY: Once every four years.

MR. BROWNE: No I can say I have been many more times on the Southern Shore than my honourable friend.

MR. MURRAY: Perhaps that explains the results last fall.

MR. HIGGINS: They did not know you well enough.

MR. BROWNE: I did not have the opportunity that my honourable and learned friend had of being able to spend such a long time there at the public's expense and to visit every house in the district. I would have liked to have been able to do that, but that was not possible. But I did spend a lot of time up there and I know the district fairly well and I know what the needs are as far as electricity is concerned. I would like to see electricity up there. I am quite sure all of us have wondered like he has why it is that here the potential power sits and here there is power development and why is it that people have not get electricity. On the South-west Coast the Honourable the Deputy-Speaker said here tonight that there is a big potential development down in Bay D’Espoir of 600,000 horsepower. But what will they do with it if they get it? Supposing some investors came along tomorrow and said here are two hundred million dollars. You can develop the 600,000 horsepower down there and get electricity. What are you going to do with it? Who is going to buy it? Who is going to use it? The reason that power is developed to such an extent on Avalon is because that is where the industries are concentrated and in Corner Brook and Grand Falls, and Buchans.

MR. SPENCER: Must we keep it that way?

MR. BROWNE: No. Of course we must not keep it that way. The honourable member knows I don’t wish to see it kept that way. I would like to see it expand. They might not be able to do an awful lot, and I don’t expect they will without government subsidies, as the Attorney General said. There may be a little gap here and there they will fill in to bring electricity to certain hamlets and settlements which would not otherwise get electricity without some sympathetic body like this which is prepared to help and encourage expansion.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Hear! Hear!

MR. BROWNE: Now generally speaking we must all remember that it costs money to build power lines, and that it costs three times as much today as it did only four or five years ago.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Nearly twice as much.

MR. BROWNE: I think it would cost more than that. Now I don’t want to go into detail in connection with this Union Light and Power Company, but taking that development as an illustration there is a plant down there at Port Union and one little plant at Clarenville which originally was a very, very small development. Now it is proposed that they are going to enlarge it and the government, in my opinion, have been very optimistic that such a small organization can carry through such a big financial reorganization. They have only got about 70, 80, or 90 kilowatts at the present time and their assets are only $130,000.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is not so. This is the Power Corporation of Canada’s report here. I did not see this yesterday.

MR. BROWNE: Yes, $138,319, and the government are going to give them a million dollars. It seems to me the government ought to be careful about things like that. As my honourable friend, the Leader of the Opposition, said, it is a pity they should do that before the power commission or some organization is there to see that if loans are given or funds are extended to any companies that there is a certain proportion of their own investment. I think there is a recognized percentage between bonds and common stock. It is supposed to be 60-40 whereas according to figures given it is about 90% bonds and 10% common stock. That is not a sound investment. The thing is too fine with not enough margin. It would be very difficult for them with the capital they have to carry out such a big development and leave a margin for safety, and I believe we would be in great danger unless that proposition is watched.

The Honourable the Premier in his interesting remarks — I must say I found them very interesting and there are some things upon which we probably agree once in a while—I found his remarks very interesting, and I am sure we all would like to see an expansion of the development of electricity. He mentioned the report of Mr. Jeffery. I don't know if that has ever been tabled. But if it is available I would suggest to the Premier that he allow the members of the Opposition to see it.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It is confidential. I would be quite happy to provide it if it is not published.

MR. BROWNE: I would be very glad to see it. I don't suppose anybody in the whole of Canada has more experience than the high officials of the Ontario Hydro-electric. The Premier spoke about sending Mr. Vardy away to see what is going on up in the Canadian Provinces. They have a tremendous number of industries who are clamouring for power. They want power and they got to have it. It is a matter of life and death to some of the industries there to get the St. Lawrence Seaway fixed up so they could develop a million horsepower on the St. Lawrence River. They got to have it for the industries that won't be born unless they get the power. We here are only dealing in small units. The largest we have is situated at Deer Lake. That is the place where industry is concentrated in its greatest form in this country. Here on Avalon we have a great demand for electricity, and a big domestic demand. But once you leave the Avalon Peninsula or even go to sections like my honourable friend speaks of down on the Southern Shore, with at least three miles between each section as you go along and sometimes perhaps eighteen miles over which transmission lines have to be carried, and it would cost thousands of dollars a mile to bring it there. Now then every thousand dollars invested must bring in a certain amount of returns a year. If not they will not put the money in. If they put it in this Government must be prepared to subsidize it. As far as the Government is concerned they have to work it out and see whether they can afford it or not.

There is no question at all, we would like to see water power development. Of course it is the combination of water power and industry we would like to see. The Premier certainly deserves recognition for the ambition which he has to harness the two together and have the water power harnessed to the industries. Of course it is heavy industry which takes the most power really, the paper plants, big iron industries, and iron making, a large amount of heavy equipment, which use up large amounts of energy. The small plants do not take very much, even cold storage, the amount consumed at Bonavista for example, the second largest plant in the country is insignificant when you think of a big development. So that these are problems which have to be borne in mind.

My honourable and learned friend, the Minister of Provincial Affairs, thought very hard of a company which has a franchise up there—it must be remembered they did not develop any electricity up there. They had to bring electricity from Seal Cove or Topsail miles and miles away.

MR. MURRAY: Not in the past year or so.

MR. BROWNE: Yet the Newfoundland Light and Power, if they have to bring it on to the settlements, have to figure on transmission lines and figure out what the demand will be. I notice the Union Power here with their proposals say the Public Utilities Commission have given them the right to increase their rates 37½%. My honourable and learned friend was not aware of any hearing in connection with that.

MR. SMALLWOOD: There was a hearing. The Commission went down and held a hearing on it. It was a public hearing.

MR. BROWNE: Well 37½% is a tremendous increase in rates. If other companies were given such encouragement as that I am quite sure that they would be expanding. If that is the figure they feel would bring them the necessary return, I hope that the Power Commission after it is appointed will watch this development.

I think, Mr. Speaker, I have said all that I have to say in regard to this matter. But I do wish to point out why it is a good thing that members should be anxious and impatient to get electricity and put as much pressure as they can on the Government to speed the development and try and bring about conditions where there can be further expansion of electricity. At the same time we have to remember there is a practical difficulty to be overcome. I don't think in this modern age that we should put any obstacles in the way of bringing to the people as much light and as much power as we can with the great resources which we have in this country.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Hear! Hear!

MR. FOGWILL: Mr. Speaker, I want to say one or two words in respect to this bill. I think the main point at issue is to try and give some assistance to people living in rural areas where they may have the use of electricity for lighting and electrical appliances etc. Now of course the Government realizes just as well as I do that is a costly undertaking, and as it has been pointed out by some of the clauses in the Act, it will have to be subsidized by the Government or by the taxpayers. Yesterday when we discussed another bill — perhaps we should not make any reference to it—the Premier did mention a figure, I think, in respect to some hydro-power which was going to be laid down in connection with the Port Union Electric Light Company. I think he mentioned the figure of $100 per horsepower. I did not want to question the Premier at that time. I have a pamphlet here and the estimate of costs of laying down the turbines and generators is $250 a horsepower. That is quite a different figure than the Premier quoted yesterday.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is quite high.

MR. FOGWILL: It is a reasonable amount today. Besides that, Mr. Speaker, the cost of distributing that horsepower runs about $400,000 and the income is not so great, particularly when you are serving rural areas, as is expected to be done under this Act. It is going to be very costly. I think the Power Commission, I do not know a big lot about it—but I think the Power Commission and the Government also should consider all the factors in respect to laying down electric horsepower, and consider the question of laying down steam or diesel, because it is much cheaper to lay down diesel and steam than hydro-power.

MR. SMALLWOOD: In some cases but not all.

MR. FOGWILL: Always the initial cost of a steam plant is much less than hydro, of course steam and diesel cost much more to operate. I have not much more to say, but to make this suggestion—Yesterday I was under the impression that the Premier said $100 which I thought was wrong. My honourable friend who has just finished speaking pointed out that where the use of electricity is at its peak is in the industrial areas and in the places where there are large numbers of people like Corner Brook, Grand Falls, St. John's and perhaps the larger towns in Conception Bay. Therefore if the Government is going ahead and is going to electrify and bring electricity to all rural areas it is going to cost a lot of money, a considerable amount—I have no objections to the bill, but I would like to point out the fact that it is going to cost a lot of money. I hope that when this commission gets underway and begins to do its work that they will be well advised in what they are about to do, and that it will be done as cheaply as possible, particularly when we take into consideration that it is going to cost the taxpayers of Newfoundland quite a considerable amount of money to electrify the rural areas.

MR. HIGGINS: Mr. Speaker, I have nothing to say of this bill except to say I am behind it. It certainly deserves the support of the House. It is rather an idealistic concept. It seems to me to be creating an authority which is going to be almost a NALCO of light and power. I notice the provision is made that the Electricity Distribution Act is not going to apply. I do hope that that is not going to mean—and if believe we had the assurance of the Premier—a good camping ground for members of this House. Because the idea behind this legislation is sufficiently good to render the thought of anything of that nature repugnant.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Hear! Hear!

MR. HIGGINS: Well, I hope we will have the money to do this. I can only say the idea is worthy of support of the whole House.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I will not detain the House long. I should like with real sincerity to thank and congratulate the honourable gentlemen opposite. It appears that the way to get them to make good speeches is to make them stay behind after school closes. The honourable and learner member for St. John's West delivered what appeared to me to be the best speech he has delivered as yet since he came back into this Chamber. I was genuinely interested in it, and I am pleased by it. But then that is not surprising because I understood the honourable gentleman is a civil engineer or some kind of graduate engineer, and he would be interested. My greatest regret is that our people in Newfoundland have not done what they have done on a pretty considerable scale in the Province of Quebec where there must be hundreds of small local electrical co-operatives. It is an interesting development. I don't know if that development exists anywhere else in North America or anywhere else in the world.

MR. BROWNE: Yes, Czechoslovakia, thousands of them.

MR. SMALLWOOD: In Quebec Province the people of many communities form co-operatives under which they build a transmission line from their villages to the nearest high-tension or larger transmission line, and they supply themselves with the electricity from the generating company at cost—It is in the end at cost. Now they are subsidized because subsidizing these little electric co-operatives is part of the rural electrification scheme in the Province of Quebec. I suppose it is too much, at least in our time, to expect our Newfoundland people to form electricity co-operatives or for that matter very many other kinds of co-operatives. They just don’t seem to go in for it very readily or very voluntarily. I must say I appreciate the remarks of the honourable gentleman opposite especially the honourable and learned member for St. John’s West and the honourable member for St. John’s East.

If we are going to subsidize we might as well face that. You cannot expect a company to run a line from its main transmission line for two or three miles down to that cove down there to serve some twenty people. They would have to charge so much for the light that the people would not pay it. So that it is quite out of the question. What is done across other Provinces is that the Government subsidizes the transmission line that runs from the main transmission line down to the villages. Possibly that has to come—if it makes the difference between making it economical to run a little branch line down to a village or not. When we think of here in Conception Bay, in Trinity Bay North and South Side of Bonavista Bay, the central part of Bonavista Bay and up the northeastern shore and possibly right around by Peter’s River, right around and come up that shore there, you cannot expect a commercial company to do that on its own. They would lose their shirts. We have to subsidize them if the people are going to get electricity. This Government are going to pay a large part of it. We are prepared to do it and I believe the Opposition will agree with us in that it will be the unanimous wish of the House to do it. I am delighted, Mr. Speaker, to see the support there is for the bill.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, if you would accept a motion to adjourn I would like to make the motion.

MR. SPEAKER: I think honourable members would like to set a date for committee stage on this bill, otherwise it will die.

On motion ordered bill be referred to Committee of the Whole on tomorrow.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I move the remaining orders of the day do stand adjourned and the House at its rising do adjourn until tomorrow, Saturday, June 19, at 11:00 a.m. of the clock.

On motion House adjourned until tomorrow, Saturday, June 19, at 11:00 a.m.

SATURDAY, June 19, 1954

MORNING SESSION

The House met at 11:00 a.m. of the clock, pursuant to adjournment.

Presenting Petitions:
None.

Presenting Reports of Standing and Select Committees:
None.

Giving Notice of Motion and Question:

HON. L. R. CURTIS (Attorney General): Mr. Speaker, I give notice that I will at a later hour this day, with the consent of the House, ask leave to introduce a Bill, "An Act to Provide for Allowances for Disabled Persons".

Answers to Questions

HON. J. R. SMALLWOOD (Prime Minister) : Mr. Speaker I promised the day before yesterday that I would on yesterday table the answers to that last question directed at me. When I promised it I meant the promise. But I regret to say that the Auditor General and the Assistant Deputy Minister of Finance were still at it at midnight yesterday and I don't know how long beyond, and are meeting again this morning to make the report. I hope to have it by noon today. I told them if they did not have it until this afternoon it might be tabled. They will get it as quickly as they can. I may say in advance that the report will confirm completely the statement I made that there was no purchase of cement whatsoever. That is the report from the Auditor General himself. He is working on compiling it. I won't anticipate the answer any more than to say that I hope to table it before the day is over. If by any chance we should not be meeting throughout all of the day then I will deliver it to the Leader of the Opposition and he can have it published or anything he cares to do with it. I am anxious to have it tabled.

MR. M. M. HOLLETT (Leader of the Opposition) : If I may, Mr. Speaker, I am just as anxious to have it. If there is any error in the statement I made I would like to have it cleared up. The indications are that there seems to be something in this matter where I found thousands of bags of cement were charged up to the construction of the plant over and above what was called for, charged up in the bills. To any lay reader, I will call it that, it is quite apparent from that it was—Anyway I am prepared to accept any report from our very fine Deputy Minister, and the Auditor General.

Orders of The Day

Third readings:

A Bill, "An Act to Amend the Social Security Assessment Act"—On motion read a third time, ordered passed and title be as on the Order Paper.

A Bill, "An Act to Provide for the Advance and Guarantee of Loans by the Government and to Amend Certain Statutes Relating to Loans"—On motion read a third time, ordered passed and title be as on the Order Paper.

A Bill, "An Act Further to Amend the Accident Insurance Companies (Licensing) Act"—On motion read a third time, ordered passed and title be as on the Order Paper.

A Bill, "An Act to Amend the Botwood Water Corporation Act, 1952"—On motion read a third time, ordered passed and title be as on the Order Paper.

A Bill, "An Act to Amend the Summary Jurisdiction Act"—On motion read a third time, ordered passed and title be as on the Order Paper.

A Bill, "An Act Respecting the Inspection of Fish"—On motion read a third time, ordered passed and title be as on the Order Paper.

A Bill, "An Act Further to Amend the City of St. John's Act"—On motion read a third time, ordered passed and title be as on the Order Paper.

Second Reading of Bill, "An Act to Provide for the Raising of Funds for Schools in Certain Areas."
Adjourned Debate:

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, like so many other Bills the Opposition have not had the time to study this one with any thoroughness. We read it through, of course, and we have here the explanation given by the Premier. As far as I am personally concerned I realized this was inevitable once we went into Confederation and the chief sources of revenue were taken over by the Federal Government it was impossible with the provisions, with power left, to raise sufficient moneys to carry on provincial finances certainly in the same fashion as 1949. Therefore I foresaw, and other people, I suppose, foresaw the same thing, it would be necessary for municipal authorities, soon as established to seek means to augment the grants they are going to receive from the Provincial Government. That is what is happening now. Although there should be a little disposition on the part of many people to tax themselves and want to tax themselves—Yes in prosperous communities such as Corner Brook and Grand Falls, Bell Island and a few other places there may be a desire on the part of the people to improve their educational facilities, and they can see before them an opportunity of raising from the great industrial enterprises in their midst substantial amounts of funds necessary for the improvement they desire.

We have the assurance of the Premier that this matter has been briefed with the heads of the various religious denominations in the country and that they have not expressed any disapproval of the measure. As far as I can see myself I think it is covered and protected in a provision of the Terms of Union which has to be respected. On that account we have no complaint to offer in this matter. The period in which we live, in which there is such a demand for education and all facilities of education expansion particularly of materialistic kind is a great departure from the practice that was in vogue for a long time. Education was looked upon in two ways; that it was a charitable thing to provide for the education of people not able to provide it for themselves—One of the first schools established here in St. John's and in Newfoundland too was by the Benevolent Irish Society, of which my honourable and learned friend here is an officer. That was done for the purpose of educating the children of poor people. The other function of education was to provide for the brightest students so that they could go on and become leaders in the community. But times have changed, and there is now almost universal demand that education and the advantages of education should be instilled into everyone. One, I suppose, of the most pronounced proponents of this idea in this country was the late Senator Vincent P. Burke. I always remember him as advocating that the poorest boy in the country, the son of the poorest fisherman, should have the same advantages as the son of the richest person in getting a university education. That applied, of course, where the disposition is there, and where the talent was there to be developed. But in every country, and especially in Canada, there has been continuous and new provisions made for the advancement of scholars.

The National Research Council of Canada every year gives seventy or eighty scholarships to enable students from Canada to go to other countries to pursue their studies in higher branches of learning. At the present time in Europe there must be nearly a hundred students sent abroad by the National Research Council of Canada. I don't think Newfoundland gets many advantages under that system. I remember bringing the matter up to the National Research Council and saying that Newfoundland should get a certain share. It cannot be expected that Newfoundland would be able to compete with various advanced educational institutions in Montreal and Toronto and the bigger societies in Canada. Well, they say, we can't do that, Newfoundland might win all of them. I told them they knew perfectly well when they were saying that they did not mean it.

However, this is a step towards providing better educational buildings and institutions and enabling the schools in some of the sections of the country to get better teachers, and to get as much of the modern facilities which schools ever seem to desire and demand now. In Ottawa there have been some marvellous buildings erected, very modern in every respect, and gymnasiums. I don't know whether we can hope to compete with institutions that have been erected there because Ontario is a very wealthy province and Ottawa is a very wealthy city. At the same time this Bill will enable the municipal councils and other community councils and organizations to assist in, and the communities themselves, to assist in improving their schools under their jurisdiction. Therefore, Sir, we do not oppose this Bill — In fact, finding it inevitable, we have to support it.

MR. HOLLETT: I have just a word or two Mr. Speaker — I could go on for days on this Bill. I think the Honourable the Premier quite understands there are quite a lot of things I could say. He would understand that I would be perfectly justified in saying, because my memory goes back to some years ago, certain things and statements about taxes. But it is not my intention to do that. As my honourable and learned friend said, it is inevitable.

There is something which I see there — The Lieutenant-Governor in Council is given the authority to put what is called taxation authority in every area practically in Newfoundland. There is a danger in some cases. Of course there is a new tax authority — a taxation authority can impose a tax of not less than five dollars on all members of a community who are owners of property in a school tax area. I take it the Lieutenant-Governor in Council before setting up a taxation authority will of necessity consult the people in any particular area or have a sort of request from that area before they would dare put in such a tax. There are places of course where they have to insist they tax them for the support of education and other things. There is no question about that. But I believe the Bill is based on a request to have the tax instituted. I take it various authorities in these areas have been consulted and their consent has been more or less received. When I say authorities I mean municipal and not the religious bodies at all. I think education is something everybody has to be concerned with. And whilst religious bodies ought to be consulted I believe the communities as a whole are the ones to say whether or not they shall have a fresh and new tax put on them for anything, in fact that is what the people do when we here in the House of Assembly bring in a new taxation Bill. There is certainly nothing here we can oppose at all. It is in the interest of the people that they have education and we can’t have education unless we tax ourselves to pay for it. So that we do not oppose the Bills, Sir.

HON. S. J. HEFFERTON (Minister of Municipal Affairs and Supply): Mr. Speaker, may I say first of all in answer to something which the honourable and learned member for St. John’s West said about the urgency of this matter and Union with Canada. Some of us who were interested in education were arguing for this sort of legislation long before the Terms of Union with Canada were consummated in 1949. We argued it because, although under the Education Act of 1916 boards of education were enabled to make loans they were only able to do it on the security of their board members. There was no systematic method whereby they could collect and pay off the loan which they might incur. Even the pledge system for the building of schools was used here at least thirty odd years ago. I remember when Bishop Feild College was built we had a pledge system whereby contributors pledged themselves for five years. Now even that is not too secure a system for raising money. More than that during the last twenty years or a little longer than that the population trend of concentrated large numbers of people in certain industrial centres has increased and it is from there we are getting the requests for some ways of financing for larger and more expensive schools than were built in one and two room schools around the outports.

Now that brought up another problem — Under the system which we had and still have the building grants had to be distributed on per capita school enrolment basis. The amalgamated schools may have 1/15 of the total population of the island, and they are the ones who find the pinch most, yet if we take the larger denominations they are able to distribute their proportions of the building moneys according to their own needs. For instance the Church of England, the largest single unit, not as large as the Roman Catholic, is divided into dioceses. Now then in a school in White Bay and in Corner Brook, outside an amalgamated area, they can divide the money and on can be done this year and the other next year. That is not so with amalgamated schools. Their first amount was so small and consequently the problem was very very acute indeed. This matter has been given considerable attention by school authorities and by people who have been keenly interested in trying to develop a better school system long before 1949. Now the demand has been accelerated during the last two or three years not by the Act of Union but by the trend of education, for regional schools, which are far more expensive naturally, than the ordinary schools which we have been accustomed to. And people knew they just could not be built out of current moneys for school buildings such large and modern school buildings, which would give to the children a better education than we have been accustomed to. But the problem has become more and more urgent as we become more and more of an industrial people. For that reason the question of trying to find some way of raising moneys which would allow such schools to be built now and paid for over a period of years has been given considerable attention by all those interested. It is as the result of this consideration that this Bill has been introduced here in this session. Mr. Speaker, I support the Bill.
MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, there are just one or two points.—One is in reply to the Honourable Leader of the Opposition. That is whether we consulted the churches in this matter. We did not consult the churches to find out whether they were in favour of giving authority to the municipalities to impose school taxes. We don't consider that to be any of the business of the churches. We did consider it to be very much the business of the churches to see that all public funds whether they be raised directly by this legislature or by the authority of this legislature delegated to municipalities or to anyone, all public funds devoted to school purposes, shall be spent on the basis of absolute non-discrimination as between these religious denominations that have been recognized for school purposes. In other words, that the denominational rights that existed at the date of union should continue unimpaired. Now the churches had, right at the date of union, a very great stake in seeing that these rights were preserved. And as this legislation infringes directly upon that question we did consult with the Ecclesiastical Authorities for that. That I think is common justice and common sense. And we will always do that as long as we remain in office. We will make no move affecting the basic rights of the denominations in education without first consulting these religious bodies.

Now the second point that arises requires a little more emphasis than it has received in the debate—the fact that this is entirely voluntary. This legislation is not enacted to impose upon the municipalities any requirements that they shall tax people for school purposes. Rather are we acceding just a little unwillingly to an urgent request expressed by the Humber Municipal Association that we give them the right to impose a school tax. They asked for it. Not only did they ask for it but they importuned us. Not only did they hold a great public meeting where the matter was fully discussed and ventilated and agreed upon, in Corner Brook; not only did they appoint a large deputation that came to St. John's to see the Government and did see the Government on this matter, but since that moment they have by letter and by telegram continually importuned the Government to bring this legislation to pass.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, may I ask a question? When the Honourable the Premier said "they" to whom does he refer?

MR. SMALLWOOD: The Humber Municipal Association to which I referred at the outset. That is a sort of a federation of the municipalities of the greater Corner Brook area and possibly other organizations, perhaps service clubs and the like. At any rate, I think, they must be accepted as being thoroughly representative of the citizens of that area in certain matters, not in all, but in certain matters. The Bill is brought in here by us only because it is urgently and repeatedly requested by the Humber Municipal Association. The Bill itself is not one that obliges any area or any group of people in Newfoundland to impose a school tax. Rather it is one which authorizes any such area to impose it if it wishes to do so. The initiative lies entirely locally in each area concerned.

Now, Mr. Speaker, it seems to me that whereas in the ordinary outport the people will continue to do what they have done from time immemorial, that is to say, they will with their physical labour assist in the building of their own denominational schools and thereby make a great contribution to the school system, a great and valuable contribution, taxing themselves for the upbuilding of their school systems by their own physical labour.

MR. HOLLETT: They always did that.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Not only will that continue as from time immemorial, but in the newer and more industrialized, and shall I say, more unionized, communities that has become impractical. You could not imagine the great school buildings of Corner Brook being built by voluntary labour. It is just not practical.

MR. BROWNE: There is a pretty big one in Freshwater, Placentia.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Was that built by voluntary labour?

MR. BROWNE: It was built under the direction of Father Penney.

MR. SMALLWOOD: With unpaid, voluntary labour?

MR. BROWNE: Yes.

MR. SMALLWOOD: But even between Freshwater and Corner Brook there is a very great difference. Freshwater is not what you would call an industrial town. It is a large place but it is not a Grand Falls nor a Corner Brook nor a Bell Island nor a Buchans. In such communities as I just indicated it might indeed be more practical if the people's contributions be made in the form not of their own personal voluntary labour but rather in the form of a modest tax paid by all on a basis of general application. At all events that is what they think, and it is they who have asked for this legislation, it is they who wish to impose that taxation. All we ask this House to do is to pass this Bill to authorize them to impose their own school taxes if they wish to do it. It is entirely voluntary.

On motion Bill read a second time. On motion ordered referred to a Committee of the Whole House presently.

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Speaker, I move we go into Committee of the Whole on items 9, 10, 11, 12 and 14.

Mr. Courage (Chairman of Committees) in the Chair.

Committee of the Whole on Bill "An Act to Provide for the Transportation of Timber over Streams and Lakes and for other Purposes in Connection with Crown Lands":

Clause 1 carried.

Clause 2 read:

2. Section 4 of the Act 4 Ed. VII, Cap 13, entitled "An Act to Provide for the Transportation of Timber over Streams and Lakes and for other purposes in connection with Crown Lands" is repealed and the following substituted therefor:

"1. The areas of land set forth in Schedule A to this Act and marked, numbered and described on plans signed on behalf of the Government and R. G. Reid respectively and now on deposit at the office of the Minister of Mines and Resources shall be held by the Reid-Newfoundland Company, Limited, subject to the reservations and conditions that all trees growing or situated on any portion of any such areas which is coloured green on such plans are the property of the Crown in right of Newfoundland and shall be held by the Crown and dealt with and disposed of in all respects in accordance with The Crown Lands Act, Chapter 174 of The Revised Statutes of Newfoundland, 1952, and regulations made thereunder as if such trees were growing or situated on Crown Lands, and all such trees may be removed therefrom, and all logging camps and other installations necessary for the cutting, removal or sawing of the trees may be constructed, erected and placed thereon or thereunder, and in respect of any such portion licences and permits to cut timber may be issued under The Crown Lands Act, and Crown licences may be issued under The Saw Mills Act, Chapter 188 of The Revised Statutes of Newfoundland, 1952, as if that portion was Crown Lands, but the owners or occupiers of such portion may construct and maintain roads thereon and for the purpose of such construction or maintenance cut and remove trees from that portion, where the Minister is satisfied that the cutting and removal are necessary for those purposes or either of them, and subject to such conditions as may be prescribed by the Minister respecting the disposal of any trees so cut: Provided that logging camps or other installations necessary for the cutting, removal or sawing of trees may not be constructed, erected or placed on any such portion without the consent of the owners or occupiers of that portion, if such consent is not unreasonably withheld, and provided further that upon the bona fide sale of any portion of any such land for settlement, or upon the bona fide sale, lease or use of any portion of any such land for mining purposes, the portion sold for settlement, or fifty acres of the portion sold, leased or used for mining purposes, as the case may be, shall thereupon be freed from such reservations and conditions, and the Minister of Mines and Resources shall, upon the application of the Reid-Newfoundland Company, Limited, grant a certificate with plan attached that such portion of land or part thereof is freed from the reservation and condition.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, could the Attorney General say whether there were mining rights which were given?

MR. CURTIS: Fee simple, Mr. Chairman.

MR. BROWNE: Does not that carry with it the timber on it?

MR. CURTIS: It does, Mr. Chairman, but as I pointed out, under the Transportation of Timber Act 1904, by agreement they lost these timber rights.

MR. BROWNE: What does the fifty acres mean?

MR. CURTIS: That is the usual amount they allow mining companies.

MR. BROWNE: Yes, when they do a certain amount of work they get fifty acres.

That is absolutely fee simple? You can’t touch that?

MR. CURTIS: No.

MR. HOLLETT: The right then in land still lies with Reid-Newfoundland Company or their assignee, and the wood on it and the mineral underneath?

MR. CURTIS: They still have the mineral, but the trees are in right of the Crown.
MR. BROWNE: What I want to get at is this. Take fishermen, for instance, who want to go in on that, they still have a right, by getting a licence from the Crown, to go in and get necessary wood.

MR. SMALLWOOD: They have the right they have in respect to any timber on any Crown Land.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I wonder if I could ask the Honourable the Attorney General what did bring this up now?

MR. CURTIS: I think, Mr. Chairman, the Honourable Minister is not here and I don’t really know what did bring it up. But I believe it was brought up because, I think, that cutting there was getting out of control. The idea is to control it and find out just how it can be utilized to the best advantage.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I believe it is an interim recommendation from the Royal Commission on Forestry.

Clause carried. On motion Bill passed without amendment.

Committee of the Whole on Bill “An Act to Make Provisions for the Award of Pension in Certain Cases”:

Clauses 1 and 2 read and carried.

Clause 3 read:

3. (1) Where at any time from the first day of April, A.D., 1949, a person who is employed as an established civil servant, an employee of the Board of Regents, a teacher, a member of the Constabulary, or a Ranger retires for the purpose of contesting an election or a by-election for the return of members or a member to the Parliament of Canada or to the Legislature of the province and he is not eligible for the award of a pension or a gratuity on retirement and thereafter he

(a) attains the age which if he was then so employed would render him liable to retirement;

(b) suffers a mental or physical incapacity which if he was then so employed would render him liable to retirement; or

(c) dies,

a pension, allowance or gratuity shall subject to this Act be awarded to or in respect of him under the relevant statute as if he had not retired from such employment and was so employed upon the happening of any of the events referred to in paragraphs (a), (b) and (c): Provided that in determining whether a pension, allowance or gratuity may be awarded to or in respect of such person and the amount thereof the only service which may be taken into account is service which would have been counted as pensionable service at the date of his actual retirement, if he had been eligible then for the award of a pension.

(2) A pension, allowance or gratuity may not be awarded under subsection (1) unless within two years after he contested an election, if he was not elected, or within two years after he ceased to be a member of the Parliament of Canada or of the Legislature of the province, if he was elected, the person to or in respect of whom it is proposed to make the award notified the Minister in writing that he desired immediate reinstatement in the employment from which he retired and was not within three months after the date of such notice offered reinstatement in such employment not lower in rank, salary and emoluments than the post from which he retired, but this subsection shall not apply to any person in respect of whom any of the events referred to in paragraphs (a), (b) and (c) of subsection (1) occurs before the expiration of any such period of two years.

(3) The award of a pension, allowance or gratuity under subsection (1) to or in respect of any person who retired from employment, as a member of the Board of Regents, or as a teacher is subject to the condition that all premiums payable in respect of any pensionable service counted for the purpose of determining whether a pension, allowance or gratuity should be awarded to or in respect of him and the amount thereof were paid by that person and have not been refunded to him or, if refunded, have been paid by him again with interest to the date of payment at the rate of three percentum per annum.

(4) Where a person referred to in subsection (1) referred from the Constabulary or the Ranger Force the question whether a pension or gratuity shall be awarded to or in respect of him, shall be determined, and the amount of the pension or gratuity, if awarded, shall be calculated, in accordance with The Civil Service Act.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, this is a very special piece of legislation designed to provide pensions for a great many members on the opposite side of the House, and members supporting that political party—It seems to me they are all there —

MR. SMALLWOOD: "All there"?

MR. BROWNE: I won't say anything about their being all there mentally—but they are all there physically—I can see there established civil servants who retired for the purpose of becoming members of the Legislature, employees of the Board of Regents of the University, teachers, members of the constabulary—but I cannot see any rangers.

HON. M. P. MURRAY (Minister of Provincial Affairs): Oh yes! He is not here.

MR. BROWNE: So this is a special Bill And, Mr. Chairman, I raise the point of order than anyone interested in this legislation should not be present when it is being discussed and voted on. I don't think it is in order for persons to vote pensions to themselves.

MR. SMALLWOOD: How can the House of Commons do it?

MR. BROWNE: They contribute to it.

MR. SMALLWOOD: They voted it to themselves. How did they do it?

MR. BROWNE: They did it by legislation. But this legislation is a special reward for persons who went into politics at the request of the Premier.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Are not pensions to the members of the House of Commons a special reward for their having gone into politics?

MR. BROWNE: But not a special award in regard to services performed elsewhere.

MR. SMALLWOOD: We vote ourselves pay and expenses, don't we?

MR. BROWNE: That is slightly different —

MR. CHAIRMAN: Order—I would suggest that the honourable member continue his speech and other honourable members refute his argument when he sits down.

MR. BROWNE: Now the only one I see left out of here is Mr. Pickerskill. I don't know what is going to happen in his regard. He was very obliging, and stood for the District of Twillingate, or whatever it is in the Federal Election, last year on the nomination of the Premier of this Province. I don't think the Civil Service Act can make any provision such as this. I think we ought to make some gesture for the great friendship that exists and the high regard that exists between the Premier and the Secretary of State, and the high regard he has for him. I think we ought to make an ex-gratia grant to that gentleman.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Will the honourable gentleman move it?

MR. BROWNE: I leave it to someone on the other side of the House to move it. But I put it forth as a very worthy suggestion.

MR. CURTIS: I don't think, Mr. Chairman, Mr. Pickersgill will be needing any pension for many, many years to come and subsequent legislation may take that up.

MR. BROWNE: I think it would make the Bill more general. It applies to about 80% of the candidates of the Premier and the Liberal Party so far. I think it ought to cover them all. And if some arrangement could be made with private employers perhaps we could have them included here in this section. I don't know, but it is worth investigating—My honourable friend, the Leader of the Opposition suggests the fish merchants should be included.

MR. SMALLWOOD: They will provide it for themselves.

MR. BROWNE: Now there is a question I would like to ask here in regard to the third last line in Clause 3. I don't think gratuity or service is granted for less than ten years' service under the Civil Service Act.

MR. MURRAY: That is correct, yes.

MR. BROWNE: What is the meaning of that—Anyone who has less than ten years' service.

MR. MURRAY: May get a gratuity but not a pension. Women civil servants may get a gratuity on marriage.

MR. BROWNE: We are not considering any women at the present time—But in regard to men in the civil service with less than ten years' service to their credit —

MR. MURRAY: They have no pensionable rights.

MR. BROWNE: Have they gratuities? Gratuities should be regarded in the same light as pensions—However perhaps some other member may have a question to ask.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, I agree with what my honourable and learned friend has said. I think I learned yesterday, but I am not so sure I did—I will say now this Bill in my mind writes the epitaph of the present Liberal Administration. They realize, I am quite sure, at last they are dying, fading out of the picture.

MR. SMALLWOOD: "Darling, I am growing old."

MR. HOLLETT: So like all sensible men, I take it, they decide it is about time they make some preparations for the future. So they prevail upon the Premier, who is one of the softest hearted men, I suppose, in this world.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The Honourable Gentleman does not believe that?
MR. HOLLETT: His heart is so soft it can be kneaded in almost any shape. And they got after him saying: "We have had the reactions from our various districts and it is about time we decided to do something about it." So they prevailed on the Honourable the Premier to bring in this Bill to take care of a good many of them. I have a list here of ten members of the present Provincial Government who will or could or may at some time in the near or perhaps distant future benefit from this particular piece of legislation which is designed to give pensions to those who were in the teaching profession and those who were in the Ranger force—at any time from the 1st day of April, 1949. That in itself confirms what I have already said.—Whether he is defeated or not defeated.

MR. CHAIRMAN: I believe the Honourable Leader of the Opposition is getting involved in the principle there.

MR. HOLLETT: I think that concerns me most.

MR. CHAIRMAN: As the Honourable member knows, this is the committee stage.

MR. HOLLETT: I was forgetting that, Sir. It was unintentional, I assure you. But may I say this Sir, and I say it with all sincerity, I am not interested at all with the perhaps very small amounts, in some instances, which will or may accrue to any individual of these ten people on the Government side whom I see now, and I don't see them all there, who will benefit. I am not worried about that. The point I am worried about is the very thing I am not allowed to speak of now, Sir, the very thing which tends to make the Civil Service beyond rea member whose term of office has expired shall be eligible for re-appointment.

MR. BROWNE: "Subject to good behaviour" does not mean to say they can be removed only by an address of the House of Assembly to the Governor.

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Chairman, I move to amend that—"A member of the Commission shall hold office during pleasure, for a period.

Clause 4 as amended carried.
Clauses 5, 6, 7 and 8 carried.

Clause 9:

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, could we let that stand for the present time?

Clause 9 stand.

Clauses 10, 11, 12, 13 and 14 carried.

Clause 15:

MR. HOLLETT: I wonder if it would be advisable to have a council bring the matter up before the Assembly. I know they have wide powers in all matters. That is every-day work as far as the Government is concerned. Up there they can make contracts, construct, maintain and operate works for generating electrical power and energy from any source, acquire by purchase, lease, expropriation or otherwise any land, waters, water privileges, water powers, works developed, operate, use or adapt for generating electrical power or energy from water power and for the transmission thereof in the province. That might cost millions of dollars. Of course there are restrictions following after.

Clause 15, 16, 17 and 18 carried.

Clause 19:

MR. BROWNE: Should the minutes of the Commission be eligible for inspection by members of the Legislature when the House is in session?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, but not to be published to the press, but open to members.

Carried.

Clause 20 carried.

Clause 21:

MR. SMALLWOOD: On this, Mr. Chairman, the suggestion is "one million dollars" to be inserted in the blank space in 21(a) borrow money for the purposes of this Act but the aggregate of the amounts borrowed and outstanding shall not at any time exceed one million dollars.

Now, if in the course of four or five years they come to that amount and have need for another million we could amend the Act.

Clause 21 as amended carried.

Clause 22 read:

22.—(l) Subject to the approval of the Lieutenant-Governor in Council, the Minister of Finance may from time to time

(a) make loans to the Commission out of money in the Consolidated Revenue Fund; or

(b) guarantee the repayment of the principle of and interest on money borrowed by the Commission, but the Minister shall not make or give such loans or guarantees in any financial year except to the extent that the Legislature has authorized him to make or give such loans in that year.
(2) The Minister of Finance shall make or give a loan or guarantee under this Act only in such manner and subject to such terms and conditions as the Lieutenant-Governor in Council shall approve.

MR. BROWNE: There has been no provision made this year for any loan.

MR. SMALLWOOD: No.

MR. BROWNE: In an enabling Act it is not likely.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It will take a little time to find the right persons to constitute the Commission.

MR. BROWNE: It may take a year.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It may take all of this year to get them set up, and after they are set up they will want to take their time and not rush but carefully review the situation, making a careful study of the whole gamut of the situation. I should imagine that we would be fortunate if we came in here in the next session to ask the House to vote some money to that.

MR. BROWNE: You won't have the Royal Commission appointed next year?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, I doubt it.

MR. BROWNE: I was concerned there how far that clause 9 (5) would go.

Claus 22 and 23 read and carried.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, may we turn back to the clause having to do with salaries being paid. "Shall pay such salaries or other remunerations as the Lieutenant-Governor in Council may determine." I suppose I could not ask if any set salaries have been thought of?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, we have not the foggiest idea. That I should think would depend on the men we could get. It is no use in doing it at all without an outstanding man to take charge, and to get that we would probably have to pay him a good salary. It is a very highly skilled specialist field. We hope to get Newfoundlanders, and get one probably recommended by the Ontario Hydro-Electric Commission and trained by them. This is big stuff, and deals with big costs.

MR. HOLLETT: Only one million dollars.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Well at one time. There probably will have to be amendments. It is big stuff. It is the stuff of which a country is made, power, the basis of virtually everything. And we should not have this at all unless we have an outstanding man to take charge of it, and to get such a man, I don't think we will get him for less than $12,000 or $15,000 a year, frankly.

MR. HOLLETT: I hope he is a Newfoundlander, that is all.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I hope he is.

Bill passed with some amendments.

Committee of the Whole on Bill "An Act to Amend the Timber License (Revision to Crown) Act":

On motion Bill passed without amendment.

Committee of the Whole on Bill "An Act to Provide for the Raising of Funds for Schools in Certain Areas."

Clauses 1 and 2 carried.

Clause 3:

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the Minister if any other places besides Corner Brook have put in any request for this legislation?

MR. HEFFERTON: I could say that Bishop Falls talked about it and Grand Falls, I believe, so there is some report although there is nothing official on it.

MR. BROWNE: As the other Minister is a business man, I should like to ask the Minister of Education if any other locality besides Corner Brook expressed any desire for this legislation?

HON. J. R. CHALKER: (Minister of Education): No.

MR. SMALLWOOD: There was a hint from Grand Falls, I believe, and Deer Lake and Gander.

HON. DR. F. W. ROWE (Minister of Mines and Resources): And I happen to know that is so of the people of Lewisporte and they are very much interested in this. It is also a very prosperous place.

MR. SMALLWOOD: And fast-growing.

MR. HOLLETT: I notice the Lieutenant-Governor may declare any municipality or any portion etc., to be school tax areas. I am wondering if it is wise to put in a clause there indicating that a request had been received from such an area by the Lieutenant-Governor.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, I am a great believer.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It is covered in sub-section 5. We are most definitely not going to give it unless the people want it.

MR. HOLLETT: You still have your authority to declare — That is only by-the-way sort of. I suggest it be amended. You cannot force education down people's throats, the move must come from the people themselves on a request to the Lieutenant-Governor in Council to impose this tax. I would suggest something should be inserted there to indicate a request had been made from the municipality or area.

MR. CURTIS: I think that could be assumed.

MR. BROWNE: Can we not put it in there, the Lieutenant-Governor in Council may, upon the request—

MR. CURTIS: Yes, there must be something to start it.

MR. HOLLETT: I think it should be — a request based upon the opinion of the people in the area.

MR. MURRAY: Human nature being what it is, I think the act would become absolutely inoperative if one were to wait for a number of people to request taxation. You have to have leaders in the community who can realize the full implication and to set it in motion — “before an order is made to subsection (1) the Minister of Education shall give three months' notice, by publication in a newspaper circulating in the area which would be affected by the order, or by such means as he may consider adequate. It is the same method as is followed in the local councils set up. Then he gets the reaction of the people in the area. If it were thrown open I don't think any attempt whatsoever would be made to evoke it.

MR. HOLLETT: You still have the right to put it in even though the people protest.

MR. MURRAY: Yes, the right is there.
MR. HOLLETT: You may.

MR. SMALLWOOD: We may get suicidal impulses.

MR. HOLLETT: Some people would rather commit suicide than die a natural death.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The honourable gentleman must not hope too strongly. We are not going to do that.

MR. HOLLETT: I think that it would make the Act more palatable to the general public. I am only raising the point. Go ahead and cut your throat.

MR. HEFFERTON: Mr. Chairman, I do not think the point is too important at this particular juncture. I do know that in one particular instance the requests which have come in have been backed up by a majority of the people, largely because they have been accustomed for many years to payroll deductions for education in one or two communities in the area where that is so. But, Sir, I rise not particularly to answer that, but to move in sub-clause 2 - the Lieutenant-Governor in Council may, under this section declare (a) any municipality or (b) any two or more municipalities, in order that there may be a majority of two or more, as in the Humber District.

MR. MURRAY: It may be easier to put it in as sub-section (d). Carried.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, I may be a bit old-fashioned but I do remember back to the days in some of the outposts, and my own younger days, when schools were built by the people not because some nabob or some premier of some government said they had to build a school. No, they got together and called a meeting and decided they wanted a school.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The nabob was the clergyman.

MR. HOLLETT: Easily the clergyman, but not always - Well what is the Church if it is not the people?

MR. SMALLWOOD: The honourable gentleman is getting into a very fine theological argument.

MR. HOLLETT: I am now very anxious to get out.

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, no — Theology fascinates me.

MR. BROWNE: In sub-section (3) the Lieutenant-Governor in Council may by order and under sub-section (2) the Lieutenant-Governor in Council may declare any municipality to be a tax area. Then under (5) "Before any order is made under sub-section (1) the Minister of Education shall give three months' notice." Well then does he have to give three months' notice under sub-section (2)?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Surely.

MR. BROWNE: In other words if the people of the municipality ask for one or the people of an area are not of a municipality - the same conditions ought to apply.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Order — I am quite sure the stenotypist cannot take down the proceedings now.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I was going to suggest the way to solve this would be to have it read—The Lieutenant Governor in Council may under this section (a) by order declare any — and then in (5) (1) before any order is made under sub-section (1) or (2).

MR. CURTIS: Yes.

On motion clause as amended carried.
MR. MURRAY: Mr. Chairman, I don't like that amendment, quite frankly. I think the purpose is clear enough as it stands under (1)—sub-clause (2) just says municipality.

MR. BROWNE: But the point is it is not in two, it is not referred to.

MR. MURRAY: It does say this sub-section shall not be deemed to limit the general—

MR. BROWNE: But sub-section (5) does not apply to (2).

MR. MURRAY: By implication (2) must be included in (1).

MR. CURTIS: I think the Minister is right. Sub-section (2) deals entirely with (1) and an order will be made under (1)—(2) just amplifies it. I think section (1) is all right.

MR. BROWNE: All right.

On motion amendment striken out (Clause stands as is).

Clause 4 carried.

Clause 5:

MR. HOLLETT: Duties of what council?

MR. MURRAY: Any council set up under the Local Government Act.

MR. HOLLETT: In other words the school tax authority would assume the duties of a municipality.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Actually the municipality will probably be appointed the school tax authority.

MR. BROWNE: This is only under the Local Government Act there.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes.

MR. HOLLETT: I am not quite sure on that—I am sorry to delay the proceedings. We shall be giving to the school tax authority all the powers and duties etc.

MR. MURRAY: Keep on reading.

MR. SMALLWOOD: All the mighty power of a town council converted into a school tax authority—But it is only for the purpose of collecting the tax.

MR. HOLLETT: Some of these do collect a poll tax—And this is a poll tax. I think this is a duplication of effort.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The School tax authority will probably be in every instance the town council.

MR. HOLLETT: Yes but if they have not a town council?

MR. MURRAY: A school tax authority must have a representative of a school board of every board which operates within the area, which means denominational representation.

Clause 5 carried.

Clause 6:

MR. FOGWILL: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask a question—There is a qualification here in regard to taxation on females. They don't have to pay the tax unless they are earning $600. What about the male? I think the same qualifications should apply in both cases. A male person could be working and only earning $200 and is subject to the tax and a female may be earning $590 and would be exempt.

MR. BROWNE: I think that is a very good point.

MR. MURRAY: We had in mind domestic servants when we put in the provision. But I don't see why it should not apply to males also, Sir.
MR. BROWNE: It says here employed three months. They might not be able to make very much in three months. I think it should be the same.

MR. HOLLETT: I hope by that you are not trying to limit the yearly income of the male to $600.

MR. BROWNE: This $600 applies to single persons only, does it?

MR. CURTIS: No, taxpayers.

MR. BROWNE: The point is, Mr. Chairman, it is a tax of not less than $5 on owners of real property and then in addition a tax of not less than $5 on all adults over the age of 21 years. But it can only be imposed as one or the other?

MR. MURRAY: Yes.

If the word “male” were stricken out it would mean all persons — and then strike out sub-paragraph (5).

Clause as amended carried.

Clauses 7 through 14 carried.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I see no provision here for the regulations being tabled.

MR. SMALLWOOD: There should be.

MR. BROWNE: Clause 11 says they may be made, but does not say whether they should be published or tabled in the House. I take it all regulations should be tabled.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes.

MR. BROWNE: I think I suggested this before, but I would suggest it again to the Attorney General: Regulations ought to be kept like the Acts and put together in some kind of book form. I don't know whether it could be done in the Department of the Attorney General. As it is it is very hard to locate them. It is a terrific job for a lawyer to locate these regulations to all the Acts—One must go through all the Gazettes to find the regulations.

MR. CURTIS: We will give some thought to that.

On motion the Committee reverted to Clause 11.

Amendment (2) “Regulations made under sub-section (1) shall be published in the Newfoundland Gazette and shall have effect from the date of publication or from such later date as may be stated in the regulations and shall be laid before the Legislature within fifteen days after they are made, if the Legislature is then in session and if it is not, then within fifteen days after the commencement of the next ensuing session.”

On motion amendment carried. Bill passed with some amendments.

On motion Committee rose to report progress:

MR. COURAGE: Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole have considered the matter to them referred and have passed the Bill, “An Act to Provide for the Transportation of Timber Over Streams and Lakes for Other Purposes in Connection with Crown Lands,” without amendment.

On motion report received. Ordered read a third time now.

On motion Bill read a third time, ordered passed and title be as on the Order Paper.

MR. COURAGE: Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole have considered the matter to them referred and have passed the Bill “An Act to Make Provision for the Award of Pensions in Certain Cases," without amendment.

On motion report received. On motion ordered read a third time now.

Read a third time, ordered passed and title be as on the Order Paper.

MR. COURAGE: Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole have considered the matter to them referred and have passed the Bill "An Act to Establish the Newfoundland Power Commission", with some amendment.

Report received. Said amendments read a first time, read a second time and concurred in.

On motion Bill read a third time — Ordered passed and title be as on the Order Paper.

MR. COURAGE: Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole have considered the matter to them referred and have passed the Bill "An Act Further to Amend the Timber License (Revision to Crown) Act", without amendments.

On motion report received. On motion Bill ordered read a third time now. Ordered passed and title be as on the Order Paper.

MR. COURAGE: Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole have considered the matter to them referred and have passed the Bill "An Act to Provide for the Raising of Funds for Schools in Certain Areas."

On motion report received. On motion Bill read a third time, ordered passed and title be as on the Order Paper.

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Speaker, there is one small item outstanding. I wonder if the House would take a motion to not leave the Chair at 1:00 o'clock?

Motion carried.

MR. CURTIS: A short time ago, Mr. Speaker, I gave notice I would ask leave to introduce a Bill "An Act to Provide for Allowances for Disabled Persons". I now ask leave to introduce this Bill.

On motion Bill read a first time.

Second reading of Bill "An Act to Provide for Pensions for Disabled Persons."

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, in June past the Parliament of Canada or at all events the House of Commons passed a Bill, No. 642, entitled "The Disabled Persons Act". This Act in its third section says: "The Minister (meaning the Minister of National Health and Welfare) "with the approval of the Governor in Council may, on behalf of the Government of Canada, make an agreement with a province to provide for the payment to the province, in accordance with this Act and the Regulations to the Act, in respect of allowance paid by the province, pursuant to provincial law, not exceeding in respect of any recipient forty dollars or fifty per cent of the amount of the allowance paid by the province monthly to the recipient which ever is the lesser, Payment to a province, pursuant to this section, shall be made only in respect of a recipient who has attained the age of eighteen, and has resided in Canada ten years immediately preceding that date, is totally and permanently disabled, as prescribed by the regulations, and is not in receipt of allowances under the Blind Persons Act nor under the Old Age Assistance Act nor an allowance under the War Veterans Allowances Act, nor a pension under the Old Age Security Act, etc."

That Bill which has now become Canadian law, requires that any province desiring to benefit under it shall enact its own legislation, hence this Bill today. The Federal Act enables the Minister of National Health and Welfare to make an agreement with the Minister of Public Welfare of the Province. Our Bill as of this moment enables our Minister to make an agreement with the Canadian Minister of National Health and Welfare covering the reimbursement by Canada of half of the pension up to $40 a month for disabled persons who are not otherwise taken care of.

I may say this is nothing new to us. We have our own legislation under which we make this payment to disabled persons. But we are not being reimbursed to any extent whatsoever for our expenditure. Under that agreement we will be reimbursed for half or probably more than half of what we are presently spending. No, it cannot be more than half of what we are presently spending. I move the second reading of this Bill, Mr. Speaker.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, we are thoroughly in accord with the principle of this Bill. The principle is to give the Government power to enter into an agreement with the Federal Government. I believe the province will save an amount of money by entering into this. I don't know exactly what is paid out at the present time — We are thoroughly in accord with this, Sir.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, when I was a member of the House of Commons, each year we used to have a series of inter-office visits. On several occasions I was very interested to know that Newfoundland was doing this sort of thing when they were not doing it federally. This is, I think, the outcome of negotiations which they carried on for several years. There is one question I would like to ask the Premier — Does the disabled person get this as a right? Will he be entitled to it under that Act as a right?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, I think it is not mandatory—Our own disabled persons allowance —

MR. CURTIS: There is no appeal from it.

MR. SMALLWOOD: If I don't know — If the Minister were here he would give the answer. I just plainly do not know.

MR. MURRAY: If he were incapacitated within the regulations he would have a right.

DR. ROWE: Mr. Speaker, I don't know, but I presume the answer to this question is that regulations and provisions will be laid down, and if a person applies and meets with the conditions he gets his right, if he qualifies.

MR. HIGGINS: In the same way as a man who attains the age of 65?

DR. ROWE: In the same way — If he meets the conditions and qualifies then it becomes his right.

MR. SPEAKER: Order.

MR. SMALLWOOD: A person gets the right if he meets all the qualifications of the Act. Then it becomes mandatory on the Minister to pay it. provided also the Legislature votes to him the money with which to do that.
On motion Bill read a second time. On motion referred to a Committee of the Whole House now.

Mr. Courage (Chairman of Committees) in the Chair.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, in regard to the administration of the Act. I wonder will steps be taken at an early moment to publicize this.

MR. SMALLWOOD: As soon as this is signed, which may take some little time, a complete explanation will be issued. What is more to the point these welfare officers, of whom there are upwards of one hundred, I believe, are thoroughly well aware of all the details, and it is through them really that the people get to learn more about it than by any other means. It is the personal contact, the welfare officers meeting all kinds of people and spreading the information more so than the newspapers and radio in matters such as this.

MR. HOLLETT: I can't understand my honourable colleague asking that question. I am quite sure it will be publicized.

MR. SMALLWOOD: We will try to make it known.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, in the Old Age Pension Act there are provisions covering payments if a person should die. It seems to cause a great deal of confusion in the minds of the persons concerned whether they should return it or not, or whether they are entitled to it. I wonder if that will be provided for in the regulations or should it be included here?

MR. CURTIS: That will be in the regulations.

Clauses 1 through 11 carried.

Clause 12: Regulations:

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Chairman, I think really this clause also ought to provide that regulations be tabled in the House, and I would suggest the insertion of the same clause as we discussed in an earlier Bill today — That regulations made under this Act should be published in the Newfoundland Gazette and tabled within fifteen days, etc.

On motion new clause, No. 18 added, to cover the amendment.

On motion the Committee rose and reported having passed this Bill with some amendments.

Report received. On motion said amendments read a first and second time and concurred in.

On motion Bill now read a third time, ordered passed and title be as read.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I move all remaining Orders of the Day do stand deferred.

DR. ROWE: Mr. Speaker, with permission of the House, I would like to present a report of titles issued by the Department of Mines and Resources, we are required to do that, also a list of sawmills which are operating in Newfoundland at the moment.

With your permission also, Sir—I was asked a question, informally, with regard to royalties and sawmill rates etc. I promised to bring it along. I would like to table it too. It will be here then if any Honourable member wishes to get any information from it.
SAW MILL LICENSE to Operate in Province of Newfoundland From 1st April, 1953 to 31st March, 1954.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, in moving that the House at its rising do adjourn until Tuesday at 3:00 of the clock I might say that His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor has indicated his willingness to and desire to be present on that occasion to prorogue this House at 3:00 of the clock on Tuesday, June 22.

May I say Mr. Speaker, that this unanswered question from the Leader of the Opposition addressed to me on the report by the Auditor General and the Deputy Minister of Finance upon certain transactions, if I do not have it to deliver to the Honourable Leader of the Opposition then it will be tabled here in the House on Tuesday, before the Lieutenant-Governor arrives. I repeat what I have said earlier; the Auditor General and the Assistant Deputy Minister of Finance, as the Deputy Minister has gone to Ottawa, worked all day yesterday and late last night and this forenoon on this report, in the hope that I could table it here today. I am afraid that I am partly to blame for its not being ready this morning. I told them I thought it would be all right to have it by this afternoon, thinking this House would be in session this afternoon. But I assure the honourable gentleman it will be forwarded to him before Tuesday, or else tabled here on Tuesday.

On motion the House adjourned until Tuesday, June 22, at 3:00 of the clock.

TUESDAY, June 22nd, 1954.

The House met at three of the clock in the afternoon, pursuant to adjournment.

Answers to Questions
HON. J. R. SMALLWOOD (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker at the last sitting of the House I promised that, unless I was able to do so meanwhile, I would table the answer to a question asked by the Honourable Leader of the Opposition, No. 109, on the Order Paper, asking for a report from the Auditor General and the Department of Finance on the question of cement allegedly purchased from the firm of William J. Lundrigan, Limited. I stated orally that the Government had bought no cement from the firm of Lundrigan. The report from the Auditor General and from the Assistant-Deputy Minister and Assistant Comptroller of the Treasury (in the absence of Mr. Marshall) confirms the answer I gave.
QUESTION NO. 109.

Part (i)

It is extremely difficult to answer this part of the Question in the form in which it has been asked. The fact of the matter is that in the final analysis, no cement— as such— was included in the cost to the Government of the work done by W. J. Lundrigan Ltd. on construction of the Cement and Gypsum Plants, although up to the time of the final Progress Report, payments had been made on account of materials on hand including cement. This is more fully explained below.

The actual position is as follows:

(i) Payments to William J. Lundrigan Ltd. were made on the basis of Progress Reports checked and certified by the Resident Government Engineer, Mr. E. Leja. There was a total of 31 such Progress Reports throughout the period of construction— 18 for Cement Plant and 13 for Gypsum Plant.

(ii) On each report in addition to details of the work performed, there was a listing of “Materials on Hand for Project”.

(iii) In this listing of “Materials on Hand for Project” each month was a varying number of bags of cement i.e. cement which the Company had on hand for use in the construction of these two plants.

(iv) The quantities of cement shown on the various Progress Reports totalled, in the aggregate, 195,065 bags. This, of course, does not mean either that 195,065 bags of cement were used in the construction of the plants or that this quantity was purchased from the Company by the Government. Each amount of cement shown in the individual Progress Reports represents merely the inventory which the Company had on hand at the end of the period covered by the report. The Progress Reports submitted by the Company were cumulative; that is to say, the first report covered all the work completed as of the date of the report and payment to the Company was made accordingly. The second report covered all the work completed to the date of that report and payment made thereon, less the amount paid to the Company on the basis of the first report, and so on until final report was submitted. Payments, therefore, were also cumulative.

(v) Reverting to the statement above that in the final analysis, no cement—as such—was included in the cost to the Government of the work done by the Company on construction of the two plants, reference must first be made to its contract with the Government which provides, inter alia, that “payments... for materials delivered will be paid by the Government” (Paragraph 3 of Part V of contract). Pursuant thereto, the Company was paid, following each Progress Report, the cost of the cement which it had on hand as shown in such Report but, at the same time, a deduction was made in each report for the amount paid for cement on hand as shown in previous reports. The overall result of this procedure was that, in the final analysis, the Company was paid by the Government only for the concrete work actually done. In effect, therefore, the Government paid the Company in the first instance for the cement which it purchased for the job; this cement was subsequently converted into concrete by the Company and the Government billed for the cost of this concrete work less the amount previously paid to the Company by the Government on account of the cement purchased.

(vi) Statements setting out the position relative to the above are attached hereto.

Part (2)

(a) Itemized account of sum of $177,123.64

CEMENT PLANT

- (i) Final Payment of 10% Holdback  $39,529.22
- (ii) Net balance due on completion of contract  41,813.58
- (iii) Extra-contractual payments  42,194.62
- (iv) Transportation costs for Grinding Mill Tube  2,600.90
- (v) Payment in respect of Social Security Assessment  3,153.03

GYPSUM PLANT

- (i) Payment on account of 10% Holdback  22,332.05
- (ii) Extra-contractual payments  2,802.58
- (iii) Payment in respect of Social Security Assessment  1,677.43  26,812.06

CEMENT & GYPSUM PLANTS

- (i) Payment a/c increased costs of labour and material  21,520.23

$177,123.64
(b) Itemized account of $53,468.68

The figure of "$177,123.64" set out above appears in the supporting document to voucher 15-88D dated 9th August, 1952. This document was prepared on the basis of a statement of account as at 4th August, 1952 submitted to the Comptroller of Finance by Wm. J. Lundrigan Ltd. The full amount of $177,123.64 was not paid, but, instead, the amount of $132,000 was paid on account as follows:

(i) Cement Plant: $100,000.00
(ii) Gypsum Plant: 32,000.00

$132,000.00

Subsequently on 25th August, 1952 and 2nd September, 1952 advice was received from Mr. E. Leja, Resident Engineer in Charge, that a balance of $53,468.68 was outstanding on account of Cement Plant and $9,653.83 was outstanding on account of Gypsum Plant. These amounts were paid by Voucher 15-148A dated 6th October, 1952.

It will be observed from the above, that the figure of "$53,468.68" was not additional to the figure of "$177,123.64" but was the actual balance owing on account of Cement Plant after a partial payment of $100,000.00 had been made on account of the "$177,123.64".

G. W. ALLAN,
Auditor General.

J. G. CHANNING,
Asst. Comptroller and Asst. Deputy Minister of Finance.

HIS HONOUR: In Her Majesty's name I assent to these Bills.

MR. SPEAKER: May it please Your Honour, it is my agreeable duty on behalf of Her Majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects, Her faithful Commons in Newfoundland to present to Your Honour a Bill for the Appropriation of Supply granted in the present session.

Whereupon the Clerk read the following Bill entitled:

A Bill "An Act for Granting to Her Majesty Certain Sums of Money for Defraying Certain Expenses of the Public Service for the Financial Year Ending the Thirty-first day of March, One Thousand Nine Hundred and Fifty-four and for Other Purposes Relating to the Public Service".

HIS HONOUR: In Her Majesty's name I thank her loyal subjects, I accept their benevolence and I assent to this Bill.

His Honour the Lieutenant Governor was then pleased to make the following speech:

Mr. Speaker and members of the Honourable House of Assembly:

I am glad to be able to relieve you of the responsible duties of this extended session and I desire to express my appreciation of the zealous manner in which you have applied yourselves to the discharge of your legislative labours.

Many of the measures to which you have given your attention are of paramount importance to the future of Newfoundland. The enactment of the Newfoundland Fisheries Development Authority Act and the generous provision you have made to finance its operation mark the initiation of a policy which cannot but affect the destiny of many thousands of our fishermen and which will, I trust, make their position in the years to come one of greater security.

The complete rehabilitation of our fisheries will require a long and tedious effort, but the destiny of the industry on which so many of our people depend makes any such effort a paramount duty of my Ministers, a duty which they will not shirk. Unfortunately Newfoundland has all too few agencies through which my Ministers can work, but such as there may be will be utilized by them to their utmost extent and capacity.

For the first time in forty years an attempt has been made to bring the Election Act completely up to date, and this Province can now boast of an Act that contains the best features of the Federal Act and the Acts of the other nine Provinces. While of course, in the final analysis an Act must be judged in its application it is hoped that enactment of this measure will facilitate the holding of elections and speed up the announcement of their final result.

My Ministers are well aware that under the Terms of Union the Government of Canada will appoint a Royal Commission within eight years from the date of Union to review the financial position of the Province and to recommend the form and scale of additional financial assistance, if any, that may be required by my Government to enable it to continue public services at the levels and standards reached subsequent to the date of Union. It is the intention, therefore, of my Ministers to raise the standards and levels of our public services and for this purpose large expenditures will be made during the current year. Increased provision has been made for educational and health services and no effort will be spared to accelerate highway construction. The passage of a Loan Act will provide finances for these purposes.

During the present year a measure has been introduced in the Parliament of Canada providing for the granting of allowances to disabled persons. In this respect my Government has led all the Provinces of Canada in enacting "The Social Assistance Act" I have today assented to a further Act which will enable my Ministers to enter into an Agreement with the Government of Canada whereby that Government will contribute toward such allowances as are paid out by my Government.

For some time past my Ministers have been concerned with the need for rural electrification. There are many areas in Newfoundland where both fishing and development is retarded because of the difficulty of securing power and lighting at reasonable rates. Some of these areas are within a short distance of sources of supply which though developed are still not sufficiently near to justify economical transmission. In other places water powers are available but private industry has shown no disposition to undertake the expenditure necessary to bring about the development of a much needed supply of electricity. During the past year some progress has been made in this connection and the passing of a Power Commission Act will enable my Ministers to get further knowledge to enable them to deal with the situation in places where remedial action can be taken. It will be the hope of all that the efforts of my Government in this connection will be successful.

I thank you for the liberal supplies which you have provided for the various Departments of the Public Service. These will be expended with due regard to economy and efficiency.

It is very gratifying that the returns of the fiscal year recently closed show the finances of the Province continue in a healthy condition.

In taking leave of you at the close of this session, I desire to express my sincere good wishes for your prosperity and general welfare.

His Honour left the Chair.

Mr. Speaker in the Chair.

MR. SPEAKER: I have to inform this Honourable House that at 3:00 of the clock this afternoon His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor prorogued this fourth session of the 30th General Assembly of the Province of Newfoundland until Wednesday, the 18th day of August next. This Assembly is prorogued accordingly until August 18, 1954.
Journal and Proceedings of the Fourth Session Thirtieth General Assembly of Newfoundland

Begun and holden at St. John's in the Province of Newfoundland on Wednesday, the 24th day of March, Anno Domini, Nineteen Hundred and Fifty-four in the Third Year of the reign of Her Majesty our Sovereign Lady Elizabeth the Second, by the Grace of God of the United Kingdom, Canada, and Her other Realms and Territories, Queen, Head of the Commonwealth, Defender of the Faith.
WEDNESDAY, March 24th, 1954

His Honour the Lieutenant Governor having fixed the hour at which he proposed to open the present Session of the Legislature at three of the clock in the afternoon of this Wednesday, the 24th day of March, the Members of the House of Assembly met in the Assembly Chamber at three of the clock in the afternoon, when Mr. Speaker took the Chair.

At three of the clock the Sergeant-At-Arms announced that His Honour the Lieutenant Governor had arrived.

His Honour entered the Assembly Chamber preceded by the Sergeant-at-Arms.

Mr. Speaker left the Chair.

His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor took the Chair.

His Honour was then pleased to open the Session with a Speech from the Throne as follows:

Mr. Speaker and members of the Honourable House of Assembly:

Since you last met all the people of the Commonwealth and Empire have been deeply moved by the crowning of a new Monarch as Queen and Head of the Commonwealth. The accession of Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth the Second to the Throne constituted a brilliant milestone in the magnificent story of the British race and its partners. The Coronation itself and the many celebrations that marked it drew to the centre of the Commonwealth and Empire tens of thousands of men and women from all parts of the globe to share, as representatives of tens of millions, in the historic crowning of the Queen. My Prime Minister and my Minister of Education shared with me the privilege and honour of representing you and all the people of this Province in those mighty events.

In conformity with the Government's policy of encouraging the development of the natural resources of the Province, and in keeping with my speech to you of about a year ago, my Government have procured the appointment of a Royal Commission on Agriculture. Distinguished men have accepted appointment to this Commission, and several specialists in particular aspects of agriculture have been brought to Newfoundland to assist the Commissioners. Members and officials of the Commission on Agriculture have travelled widely throughout Newfoundland and have devoted themselves industriously to the task of investigating all the problems of agriculture in this Province. My Ministers look forward eagerly to the receipt of the report and recommendations of the Commission, for they hope that these recommendations will form the basis of a firm and practical policy for the more rapid upbuilding of agriculture in all its branches.

The Royal Commission on Forestry has more recently been appointed, and again my Ministers have been fortunate in securing the services of men who are noted for their experience and ability in this field. My Ministers hope that from the report and recommendations of the Royal Commission on Forestry there will emerge a clear and practical forestry policy that they can follow with confidence and resolution.

My Government holds the view that these two Royal Commissions are amongst the most important bodies ever brought into existence in Newfoundland, and they are sparing no expense to ensure that exhaustive and thoroughly competent investigations will result. Our forests already are the means of providing a living for a large number of our people, and there is not alone the problem of ascertaining whether larger numbers might be supported by our forest wealth but the even more important question of discovering whether those who at present live by the forests may continue to do so. Agriculture, in the widest possible meaning of the word, and including not merely ground-crops and grasses, but fruits, livestock, poultry and fur-bearing animals, already provides a living for a considerable number of people. My Ministers fervently hope that their belief that agriculture could support many times the present number will be well borne out by the report and recommendations of the Commission. Agriculture, forestry and fisheries (to which I shall refer at greater length in a moment) together support the great majority of our population. While I believe that all will welcome other industries, and other sources of income for our people, I believe also that there will be general agreement that the long-run prosperity of Newfoundland depends mainly upon the continued expansion of her fisheries, forest industries and agriculture.

I feel it unnecessary, in view of the great efforts being made and the great sums of money being expended, to do more than merely mention today the significance of the mines and mineral resources of the Province.

It is a matter of common knowledge that provision is made, in the Terms of Union of Newfoundland with Canada, for the appointment by the Government of Canada of a Royal Commission to review the effect of Confederation upon the finances of Newfoundland as a Province of Canada. The reasons for this provision, and the governing conditions, are set forth in the relevant Term. My Ministers realize the importance of this matter, and they are resolved to be prepared adequately to present Newfoundland's case in the review. To this end they have invited several well-known citizens to accept membership in a special Commission that will organize and supervise the preparation of Newfoundland's case. I am sure that you have been favourably impressed by the willingness of such prominent citizens to accept membership in the special Commission. They will have the good wishes of all in this Province as they perform this vital service in behalf of Newfoundland.

You will be asked to consider a new Election Act and a new Redistribution Act.

In the view of my Ministers the most important business to be laid before you in this session is a Bill to authorize the creation of a Fisheries Development Authority. Almost one half of our people are more or less dependent upon the fisheries for their livelihood. Due to a number of causes the fisheries are languishing, and the greatest single need in Newfoundland's economy is some plan for the rehabilitation of the fishermen. It was for this reason that my Ministers urged upon the Government of Canada the wisdom of having both Governments join in the creation of a Fisheries Development Committee. This Committee, which worked for about two years, produced one of the most notable economic documents, quite possible the most notable, ever produced in Newfoundland. The report and recommendations of the Fisheries Development Committee constitute a practical guide for the development of our fisheries, and my Ministers have adopted them for that purpose. It is the view of my Ministers that many millions of dollars will have to be spent this year and next year and for some years thereafter to carry out the recommendations of the Fisheries Development Committee. Great skill and great care will be needed in the supervision of this spending, and my Government are convinced of the need for a board or body of men of first-class experience and ability in this field. They are confident that in the members of the recently created Fisheries Development Authority they have men who possess these high qualifications. The Fisheries Development Authority will be charged with control and supervision of the spending of a great many millions of dollars in fishery development, and at the same time they will be charged with the responsibility of a close watching-brief, in my Government's behalf, in the day-to-day and week-to-week operation of the many fishery enterprises that their supervision and control will have brought into existence. It is extremely doubtful whether a small group of men in Newfoundland were ever before called to exercise personal control over so many affairs of economic and fin-cancial importance as will come under the supervision of this body.

You will be invited to make provision for the needs of the Public Service and to grant Supply to Her Majesty.

I am confident that you will give these and all matters that come before you your most careful attention, and I pray that providence will guide and bless your labours.

His Honour left the Assembly Chamber.

Mr. Speaker resumed the Chair.

Hon. the Leader of the Opposition introduced Mr. William J. Browne, member for the District of St. John's
West, to Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Browne took his seat in the House.

Hon. the Attorney General asked leave to introduce a Bill entitled "An Act to Amend the Interpretation Act".

On motion of Hon. the Attorney General the said Bill was introduced and read a first time and it was ordered that the said Bill be read a second time on tomorrow.

Mr. Speaker announced that His Honour, the Lieutenant-Governor, had been pleased to make a speech to the members met in General Assembly and that for greater accuracy he had obtained a copy.

The Clerk then read the said speech at the table.

It was moved by Mr. Mercer and seconded by Mr. Norman that an address of thanks be presented to His Honour in reply to the gracious speech which he had been pleased to open the present session of the Legislature and that a Select Committee be appointed to draft such address in reply.

It was ordered accordingly and the following gentlemen were appointed to such Committee:

Mr. Mercer.
Mr. Norman.
Mr. Higgins.

Hon. the Attorney General gave notice that he would ask leave to introduce a Bill entitled "An Act Further to Amend the Newfoundland Corporation Income Tax Act, 1949".
Hon. the Minister of Provincial Affairs gave notice that he would on tomorrow ask leave to introduce a Bill entitled "An Act Further to Amend the Exploits Valley (closing hours) Shop Act".

Hon. the Minister of Municipal Affairs and Supply gave notice that he would on tomorrow ask leave to introduce the following Bills:

A Bill "An Act to Amend the Rent Restrictions Act".

A Bill "An Act to Amend the Water and Sewerage Corporation of Greater Corner Brook Act, 1951".

Hon. the Minister of Education gave notice that he would on tomorrow ask leave to introduce a Bill entitled "An Act Further to Amend the Education Act".

Hon. the Minister of Mines and Resources gave notice that he would on tomorrow ask leave to introduce a Bill entitled "An Act to Amend the Undeveloped Mineral Areas Act".

Hon. the Minister of Public Welfare gave notice that he would on tomorrow ask leave to introduce the following Bills:

A Bill "An Act Further to Amend the Mothers' Allowances Act".

A Bill "An Act to Amend the Corrections Act, 1958".

Mr. Hollett gave notice of questions.

Mr. Fogwill gave notice of questions.

It was moved and seconded that when the House rises, it adjourn until Monday afternoon, March 29th, at three of the clock.

The House then adjourned accordingly.

MONDAY March 29th, 1954

The House met at three of the clock in the afternoon, pursuant to adjournment.

A petition was presented by the Hon. Minister of Provincial Affairs from residents of Trepassey, Re Telephone and electric lights.

Hon. the Minister of Finance gave notice that he would presently move the House into Committee of Supply to consider the granting of interim Supply to Her Majesty.

Hon. the Minister of Finance informed the house that he had received a communication from His Honour the Lieutenant Governor, which Mr. Speaker read to the House as follows:

The Honourable the Minister of Finance:

I, the Lieutenant-Governor of the Province of Newfoundland, recommend that, pending the tabling of the Estimates for the Financial Year 1954-55, a vote on account of Five Million Seven Hundred and Twenty Two Thousand Dollars calculated on the basis of roughly one-eighth of the total vote for the year 1953-54 to meet essential public services, be provided by the provincial Legislature.

(sgd.) Leonard Outerbridge,

Lieutenant-Governor.

March 29th, 1954.

Pursuant to notice and with unanimous consent, the House resolved itself into Committee of Supply to consider certain resolutions in relation to the grant of interim supply to Her Majesty.

Mr. Speaker left the Chair.

Mr. Courage took the Chair of Committee.
Mr. Speaker resumed the Chair.

The Chairman from the Committee reported that they had considered the matter to them referred and had passed certain Resolutions granting Interim Supply to Her Majesty and recommending that a Bill be introduced to give effect to the same.

The said Resolutions being read a first and second time, it was moved and seconded that the House concur with the Committee therein and the said Resolutions were agreed to.

On motion of the Hon. the Minister of Finance, the Bill entitled "An Act for Granting to Her Majesty Certain Sums of Money for Defraying Certain Expenses of the Public Service for the Financial Year ending the thirty-first day of March, One Thousand Nine Hundred and Fifty-five, and for Other Purposes Relating to the Public Service" was read a first time and it was ordered that the said Bill be read a second time presently.

Pursuant to order and on motion of Hon. the Minister of Finance, the said Bill was read a second time and it was ordered that the said Bill be read a third time presently.

Pursuant to order and on motion of Hon. the Minister of Finance, the Bill entitled "An Act for Granting to Her Majesty Certain Sums of Money for Defraying Expenses of the Public Services for the Financial Year ending the thirty-first day of March, One Thousand Nine Hundred and Fifty-five, and for Other Purposes Relating to the Public Service" was read a third time and passed and it was ordered that the said Bill be printed, being entitled as above, and that it be submitted to the Lieutenant-Governor for his assent.

Hon. the Minister of Finance tabled "Public Accounts of the Province for the Year Ending March 31st., 1953, together with the Auditor General’s Report thereon".

Mr. Mercer on behalf of the Select Committee appointed to draft a Reply to the Speech of his Honour the Lieutenant-Governor, presented the Report of the Select Committee as follows:

To His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor,

Sir Leonard Cecil Outerbridge
Knight Bachelor.
C.B.E., D.S.O.
May it please your Honour,
We the Commons of Newfoundland, in Legislative Session assembled, beg to thank Your Honour for the Gracious Speech which Your Honour has addressed to this House.

(Sgd.) Isaac Mercer
G. M. Norman.
James D. Higgins
Assembly Room
March 29th., 1954.

On motion it was ordered that the debate on the Address in Reply be deferred until a later hour in the day.

Mr. Hollett gave notice of Questions.

Mr. Higgins gave notice of Questions.

Mr. Fogwill gave notice of Questions.

His Honour then said "In Her Majesty's name I thank her loyal subjects and assent to this Bill."

His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor was then pleased to make the following speech:

MR. SPEAKER AND MEMBERS OF THE HONOURABLE HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY:

I am glad to be able to relieve you of the responsible duties of this extended session and I desire to express my appreciation of the zealous manner in which you have applied yourselves to the discharge of your legislative labours.

Many of the measures to which you have given your attention are of paramount importance to the future of Newfoundland. The enactment of the Newfoundland Fisheries Development Authority Act and the generous provision you have made to finance its operation mark the initiation of a policy which cannot but affect the destiny of many thousands of our fishermen and which will, I trust, make their position in the years to come one of greater security.

The complete rehabilitation of our fisheries will require a long and tedious effort, but the destiny of the industry on which so many of our people depend, makes any such effort a paramount duty of my Ministers, a duty which they will not shirk. Unfortunately Newfoundland has all too few agencies through which my Ministers can work, but such as there may be will be utilized by them to their utmost extent and capacity.

For the first time in forty years an attempt has been made to bring the Election Act completely up to date, and this Province can now boast of an Act that contains the best features of the Federal Act and the Acts of the other nine Provinces. While of course, in the final analysis an Act must be judged in its application it is hoped that enactment of this measure will facilitate the holding of elections and speed up the announcement of their final result.

My Ministers are well aware that under the Terms of Union the Government of Canada will appoint a Royal Commission within eight years from the date of Union to review the financial position of the Province and to recommend the form and scale of additional financial assistance, if any, that may be required by my Government to enable it to continue public services at the levels and standards reached subsequent to the date of Union. It is the intention, therefore, of my Minister to raise the standards and levels of our public services and for this purpose large expenditures will be made during the current year. Increased provision has been made for educational and health services and no effort will be spared to accelerate highway construction. The passage of a Loan Act will provide finances for these purposes.

During the present year a measure has been introduced in the Parliament of Canada providing for the granting of allowances to disabled persons. In this respect my Government has led all the Provinces of Canada in enacting "The Social Assistance Act". I have today assented to a further Act which will enable my Ministers to enter into an agreement with the Government of Canada whereby that Government will contribute toward such allowances as are paid out by my Government.

For some time past my Ministers have been concerned with the need for rural electrification. There are many areas in Newfoundland where both fishing and industrial development is retarded because of the difficulty of securing electric power and lighting at reasonable rates. Some of these areas are within a short distance of source of supply which though developed are still not sufficiently near to justify economical transmission. In other places water powers are available but private industry has shown no disposition to undertake the expenditure necessary to bring about the development of a much needed supply of electricity. During the past year some progress has been made in this connection and the passing of a Power Commission Act will enable my Ministers to get further knowledge to enable them to deal with the situation in places where remedial action can be taken. It will be the hope of all that the efforts of my Government in this connection will be successful.

I thank you for the liberal supplies which you have provided for the various Departments of the Public Service. These will be expended with due regard to economy and efficiency.

It is very gratifying that the returns of the fiscal year recently show the finances of the Province to continue in a healthy condition.

In taking leave of you at the close of this session, I desire to express my sincere good wishes for your prosperity and general welfare.

His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor left the Assembly Chamber.

Mr. Speaker then said:

It is the will and pleasure of His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor that this General Assembly be prorogued until Wednesday the eighteenth day of August next, and this Assembly is prorogued accordingly.
