Proceedings of the House of Assembly

During the Fourth Session
of the Thirtieth General Assembly of Newfoundland

WEDNESDAY, March 24, 1954.

The House met at 3:00 p.m.

His Honour the Lieutenant Governor delivered the following Speech from the Throne:

MR. SPEAKER AND MEMBERS OF THE HONOURABLE HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY:

Since you last met all the people of the Commonwealth and Empire have been deeply moved by the crowning of a new Monarch as Queen and Head of the Commonwealth. The accession of Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth the Second to the Throne constituted a brilliant milestone in the magnificent story of the British race and its partners. The Coronation itself and the many celebrations that marked it drew to the centre of the Commonwealth and Empire tens of thousands of men and women from all parts of the globe to share, as representatives of tens of millions, in the historic crowning of the Queen. My Prime Minister and my Minister of Education shared with me the privilege and honour of representing you and all the people of this Province in those mighty events.

In conformity with my Government's policy of encouraging the development of the natural resources of the Province, and in keeping with my Speech to you of about a year ago, my Government have procured the appointment of a Royal Commission on Agriculture. Distinguished men have accepted appointment to this Commission, and several specialists in particular aspects of agriculture have been brought to Newfoundland to assist the Commissioners. Members and officials of the Commission on Agriculture have travelled widely throughout Newfoundland and have devoted themselves industriously to the task of investigating all the problems of agriculture in this Province. My Ministers look forward eagerly to the receipt of the report and recommendations of the Commission, for they hope that these recommendations will form the basis of a firm and practical policy for the more rapid upbuilding of agriculture in all its branches.

The Royal Commission on Forestry has more recently been appointed, and again my Ministers have been fortunate in securing the services of men who are noted for their experience and ability in this field. My Ministers hope that from the report and recommendations of the Royal Commission on Forestry there will emerge a clear and practical forestry policy that they can follow with confidence and resolution.
My Government hold the view that these two Royal Commissions are amongst the most important bodies ever brought into existence in Newfoundland, and they are sparing no expense to ensure that exhaustive and thoroughly competent investigations will result. Our forests already are the means of providing a living for a large number of our people, and there is not alone the problem of ascertaining whether larger numbers might be supported by our forest wealth, but the even more important question of discovering whether those who at present live by the forests may continue to do so. Agriculture, in the widest possible meaning of the word, and including not merely ground-crops and grasses, but fruits, livestock, poultry, and fur-bearing animals, already provides a living for a considerable number of people. My Ministers fervently hope, that their belief that agriculture could support many times the present number, will be well borne out by the report and recommendations of the Commission. Agriculture, forestry, and fisheries (to which I shall refer at greater length in a moment) together support the great majority of our population. While I believe that all will welcome other industries, and other sources of income for our people, I believe also that there will be general agreement that the long-run prosperity of Newfoundland depends mainly upon the continued expansion of her fisheries, forest industries and agriculture.

I feel it unnecessary, in view of the great efforts being made and the great sums of money being expended, to do more than merely mention today the significance of the mines and mineral resources of the Province.

It is a matter of common knowledge that provision is made, in the Terms of Union of Newfoundland with Canada, for the appointment by the Government of Canada of a Royal Commission to review the effect of Confederation upon the finances of Newfoundland as a Province of Canada. The reasons for this provision, and the governing conditions, are set forth in the relevant Term. My Ministers realize the importance of this matter and they are resolved to be prepared adequately to present Newfoundland's case in the review. To this end they have invited several well-known citizens to accept membership in a special Commission that will organize and supervise the preparation of Newfoundland's case. I am sure that you have been favourably impressed by the willingness of such prominent citizens to accept membership in the special Commission. They will have the good wishes of all in this Province as they perform this vital service on behalf of Newfoundland.

You will be asked to consider a new Election Act and a new Redistribution Act.

In the view of my Ministers the most important business to be laid before you this session is a Bill to authorize the creation of a Fisheries Development Authority. Almost one half of our people are more or less directly dependent upon the fisheries for their livelihood. Due to a number of causes the fisheries are languishing, and the greatest single need in Newfoundland's economy is some plan for the rehabilitation of the fishermen. It was for this reason that my Ministers urged upon the Government of Canada the wisdom of having both Governments join in the creation of a Fisheries Development Committee. This Committee, which worked for about two years, produced one of the most notable economic documents, quite possibly the most notable, ever produced in Newfoundland. The report and recommendations of the Fisheries Development Committee constitute a practical guide for the development of our fisheries, and my Ministers have adopted them for that purpose. It is the view of my Ministers that many millions of dollars will have to be spent this year and next year and for some years thereafter to carry out the recommendations of the Fisheries Development Committee. Great skill and great care will be needed in the supervision of this spending, and my Government are convinced of the need for a board or body of men of first-class experience and ability in this field. They are confident that in the members of the recently created Fisheries Development Authority they have men who possess these high qualifications. The Fisheries Development Authority will be charged with control and supervision of the spending of a great many millions of dollars in fishery development, and at the same time they will be charged with the responsibility of a close watching-brief, in my Government's behalf, in the day-to-day and week-to-week operation of the many fishery enterprises that their supervision and control will have brought into existence. It is extremely doubtful whether a small group of men in Newfoundland were ever before called to exercise personal control over so many affairs of economic and financial importance as will come under the supervision of this body.

You will be invited to make provision for the needs of the Public Service and to grant Supply to Her Majesty.

MR. SPEAKER AND MEMBERS OF THE HONOURABLE HOUSE OF ASSEMBLY:

I am confident that you will give these and all matters that come before you, your most careful attention, and I pray that Providence will guide and bless your labours.

MR. M. M. HOLLETT (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present to you William Joseph Browne, Member for the Electoral District of St. John's West. Mr. Browne has taken the oath and has signed the roll and now awaits your Honour's pleasure to assume his seat in this Honourable House.

Giving Notice of Motion
HON. L. R. CURTIS (Attorney General): Mr. Speaker, I ask leave to introduce a Bill entitled: A Bill "An Act to Amend the Interpretations Act."

Bill read a first time, ordered read a second time on tomorrow.

MR. SPEAKER: I have to inform the Honourable House that as of 3:00 o'clock this afternoon His Honour the Lieutenant Governor most graciously presided over and opened the Fourth Session of the 30th General Assembly of Newfoundland, at which time His Honour delivered a most gracious Speech from the Throne. For the purpose of accuracy I have now obtained a copy and will now read it to the House,
The Speech from the Throne read by the Clerk.

Orders of the Day
Address in Reply:

MR. MERCER: Mr. Speaker, I rise at this time to move that a committee be appointed to draft an Address in Reply to the Speech with which His Honour the Lieutenant Governor has been so graciously pleased to open this session of this Honourable House. It gives me very much pleasure, Mr. Speaker, to do so. I can assure the House that I am truly grateful for the honour which the Premier has conferred upon me. I realize, of course, that in granting me this honour today he must have had in mind the great and important part the constituency generally and in particular some of her distinguished sons made in the development of this country from the great and historic district of Port de Grave which I have the honour to represent. It is on behalf of myself personally and on behalf of the district of Port de Grave that I acknowledge this honour.

Now, Sir, I was very pleased to note the reference to Her Most Gracious Majesty Queen Elizabeth II. This being the first session of this House since her gracious coronation I again renew my allegiance to Her Majesty and I humbly express our best wishes for a long, happy and peaceful reign. May success crown the remainder of that terrific undertaking in the globe encircling journey of Her Majesty and the Duke of Edinburgh. May God speed them to a safe return home.

It was with much pleasure too, Mr. Speaker, that I noted in His Honour's speech a reference to the view held by the Government that the two Royal Commissions, on Forestry and Agriculture, are, in the mind of the Government, the most important commissions ever to have been appointed in Newfoundland. I realize, Sir, that it will be said, perhaps in the not too distant future, by certain people, that such commissions have been appointed at various intervals down through the ages, and therefore there should be no special significance attached to the creation of these two commissions during the past year by the Government. But, Sir, I note something particular or it might even be spectacular about the appointment of these two commissions: In the first place not only are the commissioners themselves, according to the Speech from the Throne, experts in their respective fields, but they have been and will be assisted by other experts in the various fields which they are investigating. In the second place we have the assurance in His Honour's Speech that this Government will spare no expense to continue and assure the existence of the Commission, and I think in the words of the speech; "until exhaustive and thorough, competent investigations will result."

I am sure there will be general agreement in this House and throughout the country that the Government is well justified in spending any amount of money necessary to continue these two commissions until they do complete a thorough and competent investigation particularly into the possibility of enlarging what I will call our present agricultural sideline undertakings, and change them into real industries which may be a great source of additional employment for our people; and secondly investigate into the best measures to be taken in order to assure con-ervation of our present timber resources, and find out the best methods of reforestation in order to continue with our present employment in the forest industries, and perhaps increase them in this Province. Their efforts to what I might refer to as external administration in that these Bills will help to simplify and modernize the methods of electing members to this House, and at the same time make the representation in this House more equitable.

Now, Sir, if there is one thing that can be singled out in the Speech from the Throne which would be called really great, or greatest of all, then I say that the greatest of all from the Speech from the Throne today emanates from the last paragraph of the Speech with regard to the fisheries. Because this Speech today serves notice to this House and indeed to the country generally that the Government will this year and for years to come concentrate much of their time and effort and money upon the fishing industry. That notice, Sir, in effect states that the Government realizes that the greatest single need in Newfoundland's economy today is a plan to help the fishermen earn a better living. People generally will agree, I am sure, that it was a very wise decision taken by the Government to have the Royal Commission appointed some three years ago to deal with a fishery investigation. It was two years before a report could be completed by that Commission, and it has been another year since it was received. During that period the Government concentrated on what has now become known as the "New Industries." Now, the Speech from the Throne says the Government will concentrate this year and for years to come on the fishing industry. I feel sure, Mr. Speaker, if this Government, with its well known driving force, concentrates on the fishing industry of this country, this year and in the years to come, and with the co-operation of the fishermen and the trade, there will be no doubt about its successful outcome. But we should and must get the co-operation of all people concerned in all phases of the industry.

In conclusion, Sir, I would like to say that even if no other work is brought before this House during this session than those things mentioned in the Speech from the Throne, particularly that part of it dealing with the fishing industry, and if we can as a body discuss and deal with it intelligently, then, Sir, I say, this session will be one of the most profitable ever known in the history of Newfoundland.

Mr. Speaker, I move a committee be appointed to draft an Address in Reply to the Speech with which His Honour the Lieutenant Governor was so graciously pleased to open this session of this Honourable House.

MR. NORMAN: Mr. Speaker, I rise for the purpose of seconding the motion that has been proposed by my honourable friend. I do not intend to go over the ground that he has covered, and I shall not delay the House by taking up every point dealt with in the Speech from the Throne.
There is, however, one matter I would like to touch upon. In speaking on this subject I know that I am voicing the opinions of the great majority of the people I represent in this House—I refer to the fisheries—

The Speech with which His Honour the Lieutenant Governor opened this House today deals with the fact that the most important business to come before this session is the fishery legislation that will be laid before us. This is legislation having to do with the recently appointed fisheries development authority. I am delighted that the fishermen are to come in for such discussion in this session. I am sure all our fishermen will be delighted to know their industry is to receive such consideration and debate.

Mr. Speaker, it would be a shortsighted man indeed who would dismiss our important industries, our mines, our agriculture. These are important sources of wealth and they give a living to a great number of our people. It is not necessary to underestimate them nor pooh-pooh them. No matter how strongly we may feel about the fisheries we can still admit the importance of the forestry, fields and mines. The more mineral development we have the better, the more agricultural development and forest development the better. At the same time we must remember that one half of our population gets its living from the fishery, or, if they do not get it wholly from the fisheries they get the bulk of their living. The majority of us in this House have been sent here from fishing districts where the fishermen are in the majority. The membership of this House represents about twenty-five districts altogether. About nineteen of these districts are districts in which the fisheries are the principal industry of the people. The fishing districts can make or break a government in any general election that may take place in this Province.

I am glad that the two governments have adopted a policy of close and friendly co-operation in fishery matters. I refer to the Government of Canada and the Government of Newfoundland. The two governments got together about three years ago and decided to act together to set up the Fishery Development Committee under the chairmanship of Sir Albert Walsh. I expect we all awaited their report with a great deal of impatience. I can speak for myself and say that I found it very hard indeed to exercise patience while they did their investigating and wrote their report. I am glad today they took the time necessary to do a real job of investigating for it would have been a real tragedy if they had stinted time or trouble to do a real job. It is now and in the future we will benefit from the fact that they took time, all the time they needed, when they had the chance. I fully agree with what the Speech from the Throne says about the great responsibility that lies upon the shoulders of the newly appointed Fishery Development Committee. Sure it is a tremendous job that they are undertaking. It would be a very plain and simple job if they had to take over the management of the biggest fishery firm in Newfoundland. At least it would be a simple and easy job compared with what they would have to do and will have to do in the years at hand. I doubt very much whether there are many in this House today who would like to be in their shoes. They will be responsible for examining in detail every proposal for fishery development proposed by the government or by private enterprise. It will be their task to break down every application for financial assistance to examine it in close detail and decide whether the proposed plan is worth going ahead with. Their “Yes” may decide the fate of many fishing settlements along our far-flung coast, their “No” may spell disaster to dozens of places. It is a responsibility that I would not wish to carry, Mr. Speaker.

I respect and admire this present Government for their fishery policy. They could have rushed in before they were ready; they could have gone ahead without consulting the Government of Canada. Instead of doing so they kept in very close and friendly touch with Ottawa. What they are doing today they are doing after very close consultations with the national capital. I respect their decision to entice very experienced and able men away from private industry to take charge of the actual carrying out of their fishery development programme. I expect there will still be many failures, many disappointments and many heart-breaks before our fisheries have been fully re-organized and fully developed. Anyone who thinks that progress will be steady and unbroken is doomed to disappointment. There will have to be many attempts and experiments and many failures before we can be sure that we are on the right road. I have heard it said that it will cost a hundred million dollars to get our fisheries really organized and really on their feet, and I can well believe it. I do not begrudge a dollar of it. Who is to look for perfection and look for perfection immediately? Wise men know it is not given to mortal men to be perfect, and this great effort to rebuild our fisheries will be marked by some failures. As these failures become known, and the mistakes become apparent, shallow minds will take full advantage of hindsight and will be able to say “I told you so.” Wise and thoughtful men will take careful note of the mistakes and failures and try not to repeat them. They know they will make mistakes but they will try not to make the same mistake twice.

Mr. Speaker, as the elected representative in this House of the great fishing district of Burgeo and LaPoile I am sincerely delighted this year of 1954 to see the launching of the fishery development programme. I say it is not a year nor a month too soon. The fishermen had begun to be very discouraged indeed, but I believe the tide has turned. It has been given to this present Liberal Government of Newfoundland to launch many good things for our people, and now once again, it is their province to do something for the fishermen. I shall back them in it through thick and thin and I believe everybody on this side of the House will do the same.

I have great pleasure in seconding the motion.

MR. SPEAKER: The motion is that a committee be appointed to draft an Address in Reply to the Speech from the Throne.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, in rising in support of the motion, shall I say, ably moved by the honourable member for Port de Grave and even probably more ably seconded by the honourable member for Burgeo and LaPoile, I wish, on behalf of our Opposition to couple with theirs, our loving thoughts and our gratitude for our Gracious Sovereign and all that she means to us in this country and in this Commonwealth. Yes, Mr. Speaker, we couple our feelings with theirs in a sentimental manner in regard to our beloved Sovereign. We are loyal to Her, we love Her. We may say, Mr. Speaker, we have not the same love for Her Majesty's Government here in Newfoundland. That is not to say, Mr. Speaker, that we hate Her Majesty's Government. We give them all the respect which they are entitled to, and I am quite sure that they are entitled to some, and we gladly hand out that respect and we appreciate many, many things which the Government of the day has done for the people of Newfoundland in the past four or five years.

I am glad that the seconder of the motion has stated that they are not unmindful of the mistakes and failures which the Government has made. They say that all wise men make mistakes and failures. I take it therefore, Mr. Speaker, that all good governments make mistakes and failures. However, they have had some crowning achievements, Sir, but unfortunately in the Speech from the Throne today I have not noticed one remark about these crowning achievements of this Liberal Government. To me, Mr. Speaker, the Speech, and I am not going into any detail on the Speech, Sir, the time is not ripe at the moment for that. To me, Sir, and I think to our Opposition too, the Speech sounds somewhat, shall I say, "Fishy." "Fish," "Fish," "Fish," that is all that has been talked about in this Speech from the Throne. I believe they did mention having appointed a couple of Commissions. That is correct. But we do share with the mover and seconder many of the thoughts they have expressed about the fishery. We do hope that in this coming session, much of our time and thoughts will be devoted to the development of our fisheries, Mr. Speaker, although it seems to me that almost like Pontius Pilot they have washed their hands of the fishery and passed it over to the Federal Government in Ottawa if things we hear from day to day are correct. However, we shall not wash our hands of the fisheries, Mr. Speaker, and we of the Opposition will join with the Government in every move they put forward to benefit the people in many hundreds of our fishing settlements around our coast.

The honourable member who moved the motion, Sir, when he saw me as I escorted our newly elected member for St. John's West into this House today, must have had some feeling possibly of regret, for, if I recollect, I did hear the honourable member stand up in another place and say such wonderful and excellent things about our newly elected member for St. John's West. I feel quite sure that he must have had a heart tremor today as I escorted our newly elected member in on the opposite side of the House.

I am glad, Sir, I had that honour today. I have known the member we brought in here today as a man for many years. This man, Sir, is highly educated, at St. Bon's, Victoria College in Toronto, he was a Rhodes Scholar and was elected as a Jubilee Scholar prior to that. He was a Rhodes Scholar at Oxford and was elected to the bar at London and came back here and was elected. And, would you believe, Sir, thirty years ago he walked in here for the first time as a member. In 1925, Sir, I believe, this House was honoured by his presence and it appears we are doubly honoured today, and we are proud that St. John's West put out that feeling which made our honourable Premier hesitate to put in a man in St. John's West against our newly elected man here. I am very proud of the addition to our Opposition, Sir, and I am quite sure he can help us in our deliberations here in regard to the fisheries and all other matters of government of this country. It is a happy augury, Sir, that we have been able to increase our strength whereas the Government on the opposite side have not been able to increase theirs. We have increased our strength at least by one, and I am quite sure we have increased it in many other ways.

We are with the Government in everything they do for industry, not only, Sir, for the fishery and agriculture and mines, but others also. I believe we have backed them on certain economic development which they had at one time undertaken and about which very little has been said by the mover and seconder of the motion. We shall have more to say about that as time goes on. However, Sir, not to delay this House, I wish to join on behalf of the Opposition with the mover and seconder in setting up this committee, and we hope, Sir, when this year draws to a close the happy sunshine of prosperity will shine down on this little country of ours even as today, Sir, the sun of Heaven has shone down almost for the first time in this year of Our Lord 1954. I thank you, Mr. Speaker.

HON. J. R. SMALLWOOD (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker —

MR. SPEAKER: The Honourable Premier will close the debate.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I would like to add my congratulations to those already expressed to the honourable gentleman who moved the motion now before you, and to the honourable gentleman who seconded that motion. I have taken particular notice of the fact that ever since parliamentary government was restored to Newfoundland, this House has been especially fortunate in the quality of the speaking that has taken place here. I have followed the movements of this House and the business of it for quite some years, as a newspaper man before I entered it five years or so ago as a member. So that I am somewhat familiar with the quality of the speaking that has taken place here for some thirty years past. These past five years compare, I assure you, more than favourably with the thirty before.

I, like my honourable friend the Leader of the Opposition, will not go into any of the details of the Speech from the Throne. That is another innovation I have noticed in this Chamber in the past five years. Before that it was the practice on opening day for the Leader of the Opposition to review the Speech from the Throne at some considerable length, sometimes taking as much as an hour to do it. It was usually a very strong speech which attacked the Government in terms, I assure you, much more vehement and much more enthusiastically than those adopted by my honourable friend here today. But in these past five years, beginning with one of the Leaders of the Opposition, one of the long procession of leaders they have had in those past four or five years, (it was the first or second or it might have been the third or fourth of the string of leaders) that began the rather strange practice of dismissing the motion on opening day with a few cursory remarks (and I will have a word “Cursory” understood in its proper meaning). Therefore I will follow my honourable friend's example and deal in no detail whatsoever with the Speech from the Throne beyond saying, as it is my duty and great pleasure to say, that I join in the sentiments expressed in the Speech from the Throne and echoed by the two honourable gentlemen on this side and by the Honourable Leader of the Opposition about Her Majesty the Queen. I had the honour of sharing with my colleague the Honourable Minister of Education, the privilege of attending the Coronation on behalf of the Government of Newfoundland. The Honourable the Minister of Municipal Affairs also attended the Coronation but not as a representative of the Government. He attended as a representative of the War Veterans of Newfoundland. So that there were three of us from this side who had the great privilege of being present at the Coronation of Her Majesty the Queen. I am glad that I became Premier of Newfoundland if, for no other reason than that, holding that office, it also gave me that opportunity. I don't suppose I will ever live long enough to see another Coronation. At least we pray that it will be many, many years before another occurs. Therefore I shall always appreciate it as one of the greatest moments of my life, that I was privileged to sit in the very heart of the British Commonwealth, Westminster Abbey, where all the monarchs have been crowned for a great many years. The world is changing and so great nations have sprung up in late years; Russia is one of the greatest nations the world has ever known, great in size, in wealth, in strength; the United States of America, the greatest nation the world has ever known in size, in wealth and strength, and other great nations. The Mother Country of this Commonwealth has gone down, gone down greatly since the war, but there is some evidence of her climbing back again. I, like most of us, have refused to believe that the great spirit that is the heart of the British can ever lie long prostrate or in the dust. I learned a little more during that visit of what it means to be British, of the pride that one might quite legitimately take without cheap sentiment, cheap flag waving, with honest pride, deep down pride which a man may take in the fact that he is British, that he sprang from these two little islands, England, Scotland and Wales which makes one of them and Ireland North and South the other, that he sprang from that kind of stock. We, of that stock, like to feel that the greatness that is the United States had much the same origin.

I noted carefully what my honourable friend said: "That they are not in love with Her Majesty's Government in Newfoundland." I am disappointed to hear that. I have yearned so for the love of the Opposition, I have needed the encouragement that would have given me, and we all feel the need of it, I am quite sure, on this side of the House.

I noted too what my honourable friend said about the mover and seconded of the motion, their failure to mention the new industries. He asks: "Is it in fact 'Fishy'?" That was the word he used "Fishy." My friend is going to hear so much about fish in this session that he will feel like a fish before it is through. But I was interested in noticing that a note of disappointment with the Speech from the Throne by my two honourable friends about no reference to the new industries. "All we have heard about," he said, "is fish, fish." Now in the previous years during which he has been here the same honourable gentleman has complained that all the talk was about new industries and there was nothing about fish. His complaint was that he could not get the Government to talk about fish and all they would talk about was new industries. Today his complaint is that all the talk is about fish. What the honourable gentleman never seems to understand is that this is the way this Government works. When we go at fish, we go at fish, blood, brawn and brain, everything we have, just as when we went into new industries we went into it with everything we had. We are a one-track government, we take one thing at a time, mop it up, clean it up. If it is the Opposition we clean them up, if it is a by-election we go in and win.

MR. HOLLETT: Why did you not?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I will deal with that now. I will tell my honourable friend why.

MR. SPEAKER: Let me here ask the visitors to restrain themselves from making any comment.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I had intended in any case to offer very sincere congratulations to the honourable member (the senior or junior member for St. John's West, I am not sure which). Where and when I use the term I refer to age and not in order of the position or honour or academic prestige or standard of education, but I refer always to age. I am not sure which is the senior and which is the junior member) I refer now to the more recently elected of the two. I congratulate him on his election and welcome him here quite sincerely because, when I am called away from this House or call myself away from it, I should like to leave behind in it some assurance at least that the traditions of the House will be carried on. I am supposed to be the one who sold and hocked the "Pine Clad Hills," sold out our independence, gave away the glorious traditions of Newfoundland. I am supposed to be that "Judas Iscariot" which was the name put on me in this very Chamber by a gentleman who sat on the Opposite side of the House but who is no longer here, I regret to say. He added at least to the colour of this House and somewhat to the gaiety of the nation. But if he were here my honourable friend recently elected could not be here, they could not apparently both be here. But I happen to be one who treasures the very considerable traditions of this House, and one of these traditions undoubtedly is that there should be an opposition. There was not one but now I believe there is one. There was not one but I believe that the honourable gentleman, the recently elected member for St. John's West, is in himself an opposition because of a number of things; because of his educational qualifications to which my honourable friend referred. He is twice a university man, the University in Toronto from which he graduated, I believe, in civil engineering. (Incidentally he will need all his engineering ability in dealing with his new colleagues in this House). He is a graduate of the University of Oxford where he was a Rhodes Scholar. I believe he was graduated in a branch of learning, exactly what I don't know, law or something leading up to law. So that he is a man undoubtedly of great education, few in this House if any, can equal him in that regard. He is a man of great energy, a worker. I like him for that. He is a worker, he works, he is not afraid of work. He is a student, reads and studies and is not afraid to take a document and read study and master and understand it. I like that about him. He is the first member of the Opposition in the five years who will have tackled his work as a member of the Opposition with a sense of his mission and a sense of duty. No other member has done so. The other members of the Opposition from the day this House was restored, five years ago, no other member has given his duty a thought until he walked into the Chamber—perhaps that is going too far—

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, I rise to a point of order—

MR. SMALLWOOD: I withdraw it.

MR. HOLLETT: I only do so on behalf of my learned colleagues. It is my duty.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I withdraw it unreservedly. But I have heard many speeches in this Chamber during the five years that suggested powerfully to me that those who spoke had not given a thought to the matter until they got on their feet, judging only from the content and quality. The inference would be they had never given the matter a single moment's thought until they stood up; and I have stood in this Chamber on at least twenty-five occasions and pleaded with the Opposition to debate as Bill after Bill after Bill went through this House without a solitary syllable coming from the Opposition side.

MR. HOLLETT: We are not under your thumb.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The Opposition does not need to be under the thumb of the Leader of the Government to speak, debate and add their contribution. That is what they are here for. If legislation comes before Mr. Speaker, it is as much the duty of the Opposition to debate it, hammer it out, thrash it out, discuss and analyze it as it is the duty of any member on this side. I say; repeatedly the Opposition failed to do it. While the "Daily News" and the "Evening Telegram" condemned this Government for muzzling the Opposition, we sat here with a sense of futility over the complete failure of our efforts to provoke the Opposition into taking part in debates. Every newspaperman knows that to be true and every member of this House.

Now, that won't be so if I know my honourable friend the newly elected member for St. John's West. I know his record, and I believe my knowledge goes back beyond any honourable colleague of his at this moment. He is a worker. We worked together ourselves many years ago in drafting a Workmen's Compensation Act. Perhaps he knows that I have had the privilege since then as head of the Government of introducing that Bill and it now is a law of the land. My honourable friend was not aware that twenty odd years ago, his new colleague, and I collaborated in the drafting of a modern Workman's Compensation Bill which the Government of that day, of which he was a strong supporter in this House at that time, had promised to introduce, and indeed it was mentioned in the Speech from the Throne. Nevertheless they failed to introduce it so that it was left to this administration to bring it before the House and seek its enactment. If the honourable gentleman did not gain a great deal from his membership in this House, I am sure he has gained a great deal from his membership in the House of Commons in the past five years. He will notice many changes here compared with when he was here before. He will notice that the vandals, the betrayers of Newfoundland, the hockers of the South Side Hills, the vendors of the pine clad hills and our glorious traditions, are the Government who have made at least some little effort to collect and put on display some little symbolism of the greatness of the past. I don't know if my honourable friend has been in the Chamber before today or yesterday? If he has he has noticed these paintings. It was the vandals who did this, the destroyers of Newfoundland's traditions. He will see the Premiers of Newfoundland here upon the walls, the speakers and the premiers. If we are spared he will see other evidence in this building as time goes on that this Government does honour and prize the best of our traditions of the past.

I am glad for the Opposition's sake that he is here. If I were the Leader now of the Opposition I think my joy would be rather mixed with dread and apprehension. I think that would be so if I were the Leader.

MR. HOLLETT: You are suspicious.

MR. SMALLWOOD: As I remember he is the third in the line. As I remember the fact of the—I don't remember whether it was three, four or five, I get mixed up. I have to be told how many leaders there have been. Like the parent party in Ottawa, in my own personal recollection I have known three leaders of the "Tory" party in Ottawa. I well remember Gordon Graydon when he was the leader and John Bracken and now Mr. Drew—three leaders within seven or eight years. So that, if I were the present Leader of the Opposition, if a man who is a parliamentarian, a student, a worker and an educated man of great industry and patience and great determination, I may say that with such a man as that becoming my colleague, I assure you, Mr. Speaker, I would not sleep much at night wondering who is to be the next leader, if it would be I or the new man with five years' experience in Ottawa. As far as we are concerned on this side of the House anyone they care to select as leader will be quite acceptable to us. We will be glad to have anyone of the five of them as leader.

But my honourable friend wanted to know why we did not contest St. John's West. I will tell you now. I will be very candid about it and very frank: If we had gone up and taken this district in this by-election, my honourable friends would still be four, and certain people who should be nameless for the moment, certain people who have been on the pivot, penny-on-edge, as to whether to continue to support this Opposition as the Opposition to the present Liberal Party or to scrap it and create a new one would, I think, have slipped down on one side if we had gone up and taken this election as we could have done so easily. We had done it in August so there was no reason we could not have done it a few weeks later. If, then, these important people who had been considering whether they would continue to support the present Opposition as the Opposition to this Government or create a new one, would have slipped, I think, away from their support of the present party and who knows, perhaps a stronger party might have emerged. So I said to myself; "Better the devil you know than the devil you don't know." "The Opposition you may disappear and perhaps another be created." So I said; "Let us give this thing support, let us give them another man." Now we were in some doubt as to who that man would be. We thought it might be the man it turned out to be and we thought it might be a former colleague of his in the opposite end of the City. They both had found themselves suddenly suspended between winds and water, both of them parliamentarians with no parliament, politicians with no politics. So we kept our fingers crossed and said; "Whichever it will be it will strengthen the Opposition some." Mr. Speaker, along with all the other assistance we have given, all the effort, all the concern for the things introduced to this House, now you must add another, our determination that we would create an opposition where there was not one. We will now watch and if it should be necessary for them to have one more member, say, I think even that could be arranged.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

I move the House at its rising do adjourn until tomorrow, Monday, March 29th, at 3:00 of the clock.

The House then adjourned until tomorrow, Monday, March 29th, at 3:00 of the clock.

The House met at three of the clock in the afternoon pursuant to adjournment.

Presenting Petitions

HON. MR. MURRAY (Minister of Provincial Affairs): I beg leave to present a petition to the House, and before doing so, I would like to take this opportunity of congratulating the honourable member who came into this House a few days ago. The honourable and learned gentleman has had a most distinguished record in Newfoundland affairs. He is the only man in the House who had a seat in the House of Assembly when we had Dominion Government and he is the first Newfoundland who has sat in this House and also in the House of Commons at Ottawa. I am sure the honourable gentleman will do much to bolster up the arguments of the Opposition.

My purpose in rising, as I said, was to present a petition. As you know it is the inherent right of the people to lay petitions before the House whereby they can seek redress for wrongs.
In a year or two we will be celebrating the centenary of Responsible Government in Newfoundland. In those one hundred years a great many petitions were presented; some of them frivolous and some of them of the utmost importance to the people concerned. I very much doubt if ever a petition was presented which had so much natural justice behind it as the petition I am about to present. The petition is from the people of Trepassey, signed by every adult in the area—men and women; from Renews and Ferryland, as well as Kingman’s, Admiral’s, Riverhead, Aquaforte, Brigus and Bauline. The number of signatures on the petition is between 2500 and 3000 and what these people are asking for in this modern day and age is telephone and electric light.

If a stranger were to come to this country, knowing its history, knowing it is one of the places that were earliest inhabited, knowing its proximity to St. John’s, I think such a stranger would say that these people have a legitimate and natural argument for these amenities which are the right of any civilized community.

But that is only a part of the story. In this very district there is generated more than 80% of the hydro-electric power used on the Avalon Peninsula. At Horse Chops, Tors Cove and Mobile hydro-electric power is generated, passes through the transmission lines and is taken out to be used in St. John’s and other areas. Forty-five thousand horse-power is generated there and yet these people are sitting down to read by kerosene lamps and are denied the use of telephone and other modern amenities. It is a situation that should not exist. It is a monstrous injustice.

At Ferryland one of the most modern fish plants in Newfoundland is built and they have to generate their own electric power by means of diesel engines. Diesel engine power is very expensive; that means operating costs are high, and that means that the fishermen are getting less than they should.

Similarly, at Trepassey, there is now in the course of construction a fish plant which will go into operation this summer. That plant has to depend on diesel power rather than electric power, while 45,000 horse-power is generated in the area and transmitted elsewhere.

MR. SPEAKER: Time!

HON. J. R. SMALLWOOD (Prime Minister): I rise to support the prayer of the petitioners so eloquently begun to be moved by the honourable member for Ferryland.

When I invited the honourable member to represent the Liberal Party in the last election, I authorized him to say to the people up there that the Government would make every honest effort to see that electricity was brought to them. We have, indeed, been making and are now making every possible effort to fulfill that pledge, but there are difficulties in the way, with which the honourable gentleman is thoroughly familiar. The fact of the matter is, the company which is generating electricity on the southern shore have not the right to sell electricity in that district.

The Newfoundland Light & Power Company are making electricity, but the United Towns Electric Company have the right to distribute and sell it. In order for the United Towns to generate more electricity, they have to have more equipment; they cannot have more equipment unless they have money; they cannot get the money unless we give it to them. Unless the Government is prepared to give them the money with which to develop, the fact is the United Towns cannot supply any more electricity than they are already supplying.

You have, therefore, the surprising situation, as my colleague has just said, that 45,000 horse-power electricity is being generated, while people just a few miles distant have to use kerosene lamps and industrial establishments are using diesel power.

Quite frankly, in order to supply the power necessary, we have either to nationalize the hydro-electric plants and set up an hydro-electric commission or we must persuade the Newfoundland Light & Power Company to buy out the existing companies in Newfoundland. The Newfoundland Light & Power Company have all the facilities, the capital and the know-how. If we can get them to take over the Union Electric Company at Port Union as well as the United Towns Electric, then, with their drive, their energy and their capital, they will be able to develop all the horse-power potential on the three peninsulas.

It is well in hand. My honourable friend can be of good cheer. He can inform his constituents that they can be of good cheer, that it will not be many years—perhaps even months—before they have the electricity for which they yearn and which they deserve.

MR. W. J. BROWNE: I would like to thank the honourable member for Ferryland for his remarks concerning me, and although I know he is a good historical student, I would like to remind him that the honourable member sitting in front of him—the member for Harbour Main-Bell Island—was also a member in this House when we had Responsible Government. In 1932-34 we had the pleasure of sitting on the same side of the House.

I do not think anybody on this side of the House expected such a discussion this afternoon. We all agree with the desirability of bringing light and telephone to those areas. Every member must know that this a private company and the first thing it figures is how much will it cost to bring the power to the people; and how much revenue it will receive. This is a very broad subject as the Premier knows. The Premier not being able—or the Government has not been able to solve it. I think the Government should certainly give its attention to this proposition.

It seems strange that a member of the Government should present a petition when that petition has to be referred to one of the departments of Government. I presume that is still the procedure; and it will be referred, probably, to the department of Economic Development. I am sure it will have the blessings of this side of the House when the matter is matured.

Moved and seconded that the petition be referred to the department concerned.

Giving Notice of Motion

HON. MR. POWER (Minister of Finance): With the unanimous consent, I move the House into Committee of the Whole on a Bill, "An Act granting an interim supply to Her Majesty," It is calculated on one-eighth of the total vote for 1953-54.
Mr. Speaker left the Chair, Mr. Courage took the Chair of Committee.

1. Carried.

Schedule: 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11 carried.

12. Board of Liquor Control—$40,000.00.

MR. M. M. HOLLETT (Leader of the Opposition): It strikes me as unusual that $40,000 would be needed for the Board of Liquor Control. I was under the impression that it is in good standing; in fact, could advance money to the Government. How correct I am on that I cannot be assured, but it does seem strange to vote $40,000 to the Board of Liquor Control. Perhaps the Minister could explain.

MR. SMALLWOOD: These are statutory salaries voted by the House. The authority to pay is contained in the Motion, otherwise the Board could not pay its employees. The purpose is to authorize payment of salaries and other operating expenses for a short period.

Carried.

13. Municipal Affairs and Supply—$100,000.

MR. HOLLETT: Does the same apply to this? The payment of salaries.

MR. SMALLWOOD: And other expenses.

13. Carried.

14. Carried.

15. Economic Development—$750,000.

MR. BROWNE: Could we have some explanation of this?

MR. SMALLWOOD: It is on Capital Account to clean up items which became due in the year just dying. It is in the form of a revote.

MR. BROWNE: It would help in future if the amount of the revote was itemized.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is done in the estimates.

MR. F. FOGWILL: Would the Premier inform the House how the vote will be spent during the next two months—what particular plants in operation or under construction to which the money will be devoted?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I may say quite frankly that I do not know. We can get it from the Controller of the Treasury. My informed guess would be Eckhardt Mills at Brigus who are drawing from time to time, and who might need to draw at any moment—the shoe plant at Harbour Grace and the new company that took over the White Clothing Company and are now building at the north west corner of the city near the textile mills. These three companies are in the course of construction and under agreement made between them and the Government, we have to make payments from time to time under certain conditions laid down. I assume and believe this three quarter million is reserved for this purpose.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, may I ask the Minister of Economic Development if any of these amounts is to be given to the Hardwood Mill, the Birch Veneer Mill as working capital?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No. This three quarter of a million, I admit, ought to have been broken down. I would rather think that as this thing is prepared by the Controller of the Treasury, we are merely acting as the medium presenting it to the House.

MR. BROWNE: May I direct a question to the Minister of Finance to tell us whether any of this money is going for working capital for any of these institutions?

MR. POWER: What institutions?

MR. BROWNE: Is any of this seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars to be used for working capital for any of the industries?

MR. POWER: I must say that as far as I know I don't think so. I can get that information.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, I believe the honourable Premier stated that some of the money was going to the Eckhardt Mills, but I have no recollection of passing any Bill or amount for the Eckhardt Mills. I am wondering why we have to vote supplementary supply to give these people money unless the thing had been before the House. I can see how we have to pay people's salaries and live up to our commitments relative to any industry. But I don't recollect any legislation dealing with the Eckhardt Mills. Maybe the Premier can refresh my memory. I wonder if the Premier could tell us about that?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I have already said I don't know. I do know it can be only for the purpose of enabling the Government to fulfil its financial commitments. I know that is all the Controller of the Treasury would have in mind when asking the Minister to ask the House for this three quarter of a million dollars pending the bringing down of the budget and the estimates at the proper time. I don't know the breakdown or the details. Frankly, I don't know. I think it is a perfectly simple matter for the Minister to ask someone to phone the Controller of the Treasury for a breakdown, and I am sure he would have no objection to doing it.

MR. POWER: I would like to point out that this amount of seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars will not necessarily be spent. It is a rough shot.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, we would like to have some information. After all it is only seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars they are asking. It might very well be twenty-five millions—but if we had some little information from the Minister as to what the various amounts, apart from salaries, are for.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I do suggest Mr. Chairman, as this is merely interim supply and the estimates proper must come before the House, when, as always in the past, ample opportunity will be given for debate on each and every individual item of the estimates.

As my honourable friend on the opposite side knows they don't need to exercise their watch-dog functions and duties on what is merely interim supply, which also must be debated when the estimates and supply in the main are brought before the House. That is clear, and I think my honourable friend will agree.

MR. BROWNE: I think though the proposal here, seven hundred and fifty thousand for a department that had only two and a half million last year on current and capital account, which is not one eighth. I think it is one-eighth, I could not hear distinctly. It is one sixth.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, one-sixth. But my honourable friend must not suppose that this is the rate at which the money is to be spent throughout the twelve months. Any money to be spent in the Department of Economic Development must be spent over the next few months, after which none is spent except the current expenses of the department. It is only a matter of cleaning up outstanding commitments which would necessitate any money.

MR. HOLLETT: It shows entries for advances for which we have no legislation whatsoever. Items passed in the House I have no objections, but I object to voting supplementary supply for companies we know nothing about. In one instance we have the Eckhardt Mills on which we are asked to vote supplementary supplies. Surely we are entitled to ask about that.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, would the Minister bring us this information tomorrow?

MR. POWER: Yes.

MR. SMALLWOOD: To save time, if it is the pleasure of the committee and later of the House to pass this through, and dispose of it so that we can get on with other business, I suggest we get the information now. Somebody has gone, I believe to get it. We can give the information as soon as it comes in even if this business is passed.

Item 15 carried.

Item 16—Labour—carried.

Total $5,750,000 carried.

Schedule carried.

Resolution read, carried.

Moved and seconded the committee report having passed the resolutions.

MR. J. R. COURAGE: Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole have passed certain resolutions and have instructed me to report same.

Resolutions ordered received—read a first time and concurred in, read a second time.

Honourable Minister of Finance asks leave to introduce a Bill based on said resolutions—read a first time. Ordered read a second time now. Read a second time. Ordered read a third time. Read a third time, ordered passed and title be as on the Order Paper.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, would it be in order for the Minister of Finance to make that explanation?

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, does it not go back into committee again?

MR. SPEAKER: This Bill does not of necessity go to a committee of the whole since the contents of the Bill were discussed in the present committee on supply, which duly referred the annual expropriation Bill to the Committee of the Whole for discussion. This has been a breakdown merely representing one-eighth of the total amount voted on capital and current account last year.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, I don't think it is quite one-eighth of last year's vote.

MR. SMALLWOOD: One-sixth, the same proportion as the rest.

MR. BROWNE: Is it one-sixth or one-eighth?
MR. SPEAKER: I read one-eighth.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Current and capital together.

MR. BROWNE: As you pointed out most of this is to be spent in the next few months, it is not a proper proportion as far as this vote is concerned.

Bill passed.

MR. POWER: Mr. Speaker, I submit here a printer's proof for the public accounts of the Province of Newfoundland 1953 with the Auditor's Report thereof. I request these be laid on the Table of the House forthwith.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, this is a very voluminous document and contains vital information of importance to all the people of the country. A mere tabling of it is not very much help. I wonder if the practice has been considered of appointing a standing committee to examine into the public accounts. They have such a committee, of course, in most legislatures. They have one in Nova Scotia, and I feel sure in other Provinces of Canada. I would therefore, Mr. Speaker, like to propose to the Minister of Finance and to the Premier, the desirability of having a standing committee composed of members of both sides of the House to examine the public accounts just laid on the table.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I am quite sure my honourable friend will be a tower of strength to his own party, and to that side of the House, and insofar as he seeks to advise and guide his colleagues on that side, whom, I am sure, are most happy to be guided by him. But I assure him that as on the first day after opening day that this side of the House will not too readily agree to take guidance from him. I have no doubt whatsoever that procedures in the House of Commons at Ottawa was vastly superior to anything in this little House in Newfoundland. The practice of having the Auditor General examine all the accounts of the government and reporting on them and the practice of seeking permission to having these printed, then printing them and circulating them and allowing the Opposition and the public to have them and to put them on sale in the shops. That practice has been carried out for over a hundred years in this little Island of Newfoundland and has somehow or other seemed to meet the need of the people. If my honourable friend now discovers it does not meet the need of the people, it means he has some mysterious access to the thoughts denied to the people's government on this side of the House and up to now to his own colleagues on that side. As I have said, we will consider it. We have already done so on more than one occasion. If ever we decide to follow that procedure, we will say so, soon after we decide that it is convenient so to do.

MR. BROWN: Would like to correct the honourable Premier. He is mistaken if he thinks the public accounts were never produced in this country in detail before. They were prior to 1934 when they were produced and brought up item by item. There was a large book brought in here and any member could examine it. We did not, it is true, have a committee. I think you will agree that, since the government is so progressive in so many ways and are so anxious to have the last word, I think they will agree it is desirable that a committee be appointed. Then, I think we could think of them with even greater admiration than ever.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Don't think I have nearly as much admiration. There is no change whatsoever in the way it is done now and what was done when my honourable friend was before a member of this House of Assembly. The procedure is that the public accounts are audited. The only difference is that there is a real audit now, there is a treasury control. In addition to the present audit and treasury control, there is a post audit and the results are brought here, as they were today, and permission only asked to have them printed. If this permission be granted they are printed and are circulated. That is exactly as it had been done for over a century in Newfoundland. There is no change whatsoever. The only change is the one my honourable friend has suggested. No doubt, he is full of admiration for what they do in Ottawa, and no doubt he will try to impress all of us on both sides it is better we do it the way they do it in Ottawa. I venture to advise him to hesitate, to suppress any temptation he may have to get us to improve all our ways by merely copying Ottawa.

MR. SPEAKER: The House will realize all this is highly irregular. Honourable members have not only spoken more than once but more than twice. I said that just for the matter of clarification. If any other honourable member wishes to speak.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, just want to ask one question, just one, a plain question that can be answered with a plain "Yes" or "No." It is a supplementary question, whether we on the Opposition side will have made available to us this day a copy.

MR. POWER: The honourable member will be given a copy. I think all the discussion is a little premature as I have not yet had permission to have these copies printed.

MR. SPEAKER: Exactly. The honourable minister tabled the report with the request to have the printing done. I rather imagine he could now perform a feat of wizardry and have them printed in a few seconds. Does the House give permission to print these reports?

Permission granted.

MR. POWER: Mr. Speaker, I have had a quick job done, and ask permission to table these.

Presenting Reports

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, to a point of order: The value of birch on hand. The point of order is that it is out of order for any honourable member to ask a question once it becomes apparent this question is out of order. That is my point of order. I ask Your Honour to rule on it. The honourable gentleman is asking a series of questions about the affairs of a private, limited liability company. By now, I suggest, it has become apparent that is what he is doing. I therefore suggest the question is out of order, and he is out of order in continuing to put the question.

MR. SPEAKER: The honourable member is giving notice of a question that he is about to ask on tomorrow. It would be difficult to rule on the question at this stage.

Answers to Questions

MR. SMALLWOOD: I can answer some of the questions that make up No. I; some of the sections. The Annual Meeting of NALCO is to be held on the 8th or 6th of April. Following that Annual Meeting, the Annual Report together with the Auditor’s Report and Balance Sheet will be available to the Directors and then will be available to the House. As soon as possible after the Annual Meeting, I will table the Annual Report, the Auditor’s Report and the Balance Sheet.

(2) How much money from the Treasury has been paid to NALCO? The answer is $900,000.00.

(3) How many shares in NALCO are presently owned by the Government, and how much was paid for each share?

The answer is 900,000 shares at $1.00 each. That was the original number and it has never been changed.

(4) How many shares are owned in NALCO by (a) Private individuals, (b) Corporations, and what price per share was paid for these shares?

I am not too sure that it is proper to give a complete answer to that part of the question; but as I am in doubt, I will give the House the benefit of the doubt.

Half the capital has to be surplus; that provides for that.
I leave it to my honourable friend to work out the percentage.
I have answered (6) and (7).

(8) What salary was being paid Dr. Alfred Valdmanis at the time of his resignation? Answer $30,000 a year.

(9) What, if any concessions to date have been granted by NALCO—areas where such concessions granted? The answer is, first, The American Zinc Company of Tennessee has a lease of approximately 745 square miles in South East Newfoundland. They have a three year lease in Fortune Bay—exploration lease.

MR. HOLLETT: May I ask the Hon. the Premier to table the answer?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I will do that.

Question 1 (9):

NALCO SUB-C Its June
March 26, 1954.

1. American Zinc Company of Tennessee, St. Louis, Missouri, U.S.A.

Note: Completion of a formal agreement approved and final document not yet signed. However, NALCO and American Zinc are proceeding as if a final agreement were signed, i.e., exploration proceeding during 1953 and will, it is expected, continue during 1954.

Area: Approximately 745 square miles in South East Newfoundland.
The southern boundary rests on Fortune Bay between Anderson’s Cove and Grand Le Pierre, with Meta Pond near the northern boundary.

Extent: 3 year Exploration Period from May 1, 1953 for exploration.

Up till May 1, 1956, in which to apply for a Development Permit for 5 years.

Up till May 1, 1961 in which to apply for a 99 years Mining Lease for an area not exceeding 50 square miles.

Minimum expenditure $45,000 over 3 years exploration period.

NALCO to have right of 30% participation in any new company resulting, as well as 10% royalty.

Area: Approximately 2,300 square miles in Southwest Labrador on each side of the railway from Seven Islands to Knob Lake.

Extent: 3 year Exploration Period from January 1, 1954

Up till January 1, 1957 in which to apply for a Development Permit good for 2 years.

Up till January 1, 1959 in which to apply for a 99 year Mining Lease for an area not exceeding 50 square miles.

Minimum expenditure of one million dollars over 3 years exploration period, less expenditure by NALCO of $299,208 up till December 31, 1953 and any moneys expended by NALCO subsequently to January 1, 1954. (Such latter sums expected to approximate $150,000 are refundable by Canadian Javelin by December 31, 1954.)

NALCO has the right of 30% participation in any new company resulting, as well as a 10% royalty.

This company which previously had a sub-concession area in Central Newfoundland (Notre Dame Bay area) amounting to 1,450 square miles at $250,000 over three years.

Dropped its option as of December 31, 1953.

(10) In the building at Fort Townshend, once occupied by the Chief of Police.

(11) Except in so far as that information is contained in the Balance Sheet audited by Peat, Marwick & Mitchell, I shall have to decline to answer the question.

No Director of NALCO owns any shares of NALCO.

MR. HOLLETT: J. R. Smallwood owns some.

MR. SMALLWOOD: We own none.

MR. HOLLETT: Who owns the 900,000?

MR. SMALLWOOD: The Government. No director of NALCO owns any shares of NALCO.

MR. HOLLETT: J. R. Smallwood on behalf of the Government.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Perhaps I own one—No—The answer is none. We own none in any way.

MR. BROWNE: Who owns the nine hundred thousand?

MR. SMALLWOOD: The Government. My honourable friend owns them just as much as I do. Now, the only part of the question remaining to be answered is the annual report and the balance sheet of the company, which I don’t think we are obliged to table, but I think I shall—the balance sheet and the audit and the annual report.

Question No. 7:

MR. POWER: Mr. Speaker, the answers are being prepared.

Address in Reply:

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, it is a great honour to me to be given the privilege of opening the debate on the motion for an address in reply. This is the first time I have been on the Opposition side of the House, but I have had some experience elsewhere. We are only a small group, but at the same time we represent many thousands of people outside of the House. Further than that, it seems to me that the role of the Opposition in a Legislature is more than being responsible to the people who sent it there or supported its power. It is our duty to probe as far as we can the affairs of the country as they have been administered by the government during the time that has passed. We know the task is big for such a small group as we are here; it may well be it is too big for us, we may not be equal to it. But I wish to say I am very pleased to be here today and associated with these honourable gentlemen on this side of the House, who, in my opinion, have carried on their task so well in spite of the difficulties confronting them. I don't think that the public realizes the difficulties of the Opposition. Whereas the Ministers of the Crown have their offices and their trained staffs and plenty of secretarial help to enable them to answer the questions put to them, and to keep them up-to-the-minute on matters of public importance, the Opposition has no clerical staff whatsoever. It is true that this House provides one stenographer for all the members who are not Ministers. But the Opposition has no staff and is therefore in a predicament in regard to obtaining information or preparing speeches. What we must do we must do in our own time and at our own expense.

I hope that the Premier will pardon me if I draw to his attention, that in other places provision of this kind has been made. I don't know if it has been done in all the legislatures in the different provinces but it has been made in some. He who has proven himself so generous in providing the Opposition with another member and expresses his willingness if it is necessary, to add another to the list, will not hesitate at the mere implementing of our work by supplying clerical assistance. If, therefore, the Premier complains that the Opposition gives him the impression of not having prepared its speeches and that Bill after Bill has gone through the House here without any comments, I think the Premier himself sometimes, from what I have heard (I have not heard him speak here but from what I have heard outside) I have been given the impression of his saying things that he did not intend to say before he started. I have been myself so far removed from the House of Assembly that I have not been as familiar with things that have been going on here since 1949 as I would have liked. I believe it will take me some time to become familiar with things that have been going on.

Now, everywhere, it is the custom to congratulate the mover and second of the motion on opening day. As I had the honour when I was a member here further back, a long time ago, of moving the same motion and seconding it on another occasion, I can appreciate the feelings of the honourable members. I would therefore like to tender them my respect for the good work they have done. As far as my honourable friend, the member for Port de Grave is concerned, he is an experienced lawyer. The honourable Premier may not agree he is as good a one as I think he is myself, but he did the job we expected him to do. As regard the honourable member for Burgeo and LaPoile, I think he approached his task in a very sensible fashion. I think it was wise for him, looking over the Address in Reply, and seeing the promises that are made there, to remind us that even the best intentions go astray, and that the fishery development programme is only an experiment, and there are likely to be many failures and experiments before we arrive at the right solution of the problem. I can point, I think, to some mistakes that have been made in the past in connection with the fisheries. I will only instance one, and that is one in which so much faith was placed at the time, i.e., the importation of Icelandic fishing vessels and crews to show our people how to catch the millions of tons of herring swarming in the waters around our coast. I believe that cost nearly half a million dollars, Mr. Speaker, and the amount of herring caught was insignificant. I remember a captain in Placentia Bay well recognized as an authority on the location of the herring informing me that the boats were out in Placentia Bay and did not know where to catch the herring. He went out in his boat and loaded alongside of them. Because they were ashamed the Icelandic Skippers went away.

MR. MURRAY: If the honourable member knew where they were he should have told the Icelandic Fishermen and saved us money.

MR. BROWNE: Well he went out and caught them. He was in the same business. The Icelandic crews did not come here to learn but to teach our people where to get this vast source of wealth.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Someone pulled the honourable member's leg. There was not a boat-load caught anywhere that year by anyone.

MR. BROWNE: I don't think the gentleman would be telling lies. He is a man from Ship Harbour, Placentia Bay, one of the Powers, and has a reputation for being a straight-shooter and for telling the truth. I don't believe he would tell me anything false. He told me about this instance. In any case it cost this country five hundred thousand dollars. That was one of the failures and mistakes the Government might profit by in the near future. Experience is a dear teacher. The Premier should remember that and the rider which goes with it. "Fools learn in no other school."

Mr. Speaker, I have the honour of having an invitation to the coronation ceremonies this year. Unfortunately I was unable to attend because there was a general federal election in the offing. I am sure all of us join in the sincere expression of loyalty and devotion already expressed so well to the person of Her Majesty, and we hope she may live long to reign over a happy and prosperous commonwealth.

Now, Sir, when I was in Montreal, very recently, I had the privilege and pleasure of meeting some of the members of the Newfoundland Society in that city. I learned there what I think is a rather extraordinary thing, i.e., that last year when the "William Carson" was being launched, (that is the vessel which is going to run between Port aux Basques and Sydney, and from Sydney to Port aux Basques and bring over these millions of tourists that were announced a few years ago), there was no Newfoundlander to speak on that occasion. Out of a thousand guests, I believe, present, there were only six Newfoundlanders. It seems to me, we should have been considered to have had a greater interest in the future of that vessel, and there should have been representation from this country present at that ceremony. Now, it was suggested to me there, that this vessel was built, not so quickly as my honourable friend the Premier predicted when he gave us his famous speech of 1949. He then told us she would be on the Gulf in 1951. It will be some time in 1954, and she will be there a long time before the Minister of Public Works has the Trans-Canada Highway to take the traffic coming over, before the motor cars can be carried away from Port aux Basques. That ship is going to be ready, I believe, some time in July. Now, what are they going to do about that situation? Has the Government any recommendation to make to the Government of Canada or the Canadian National Railway as to how that ship is going to put in its time. She is ready long in advance of the highway. I would suggest, as it has been suggested to me by the members of the Newfoundland Society, and perhaps the Premier may know about that; that ship should begin running between Montreal and St. John's. This year for her maiden ship's trip should make an excursion from Montreal to St. John's. I believe from what I have heard that it would be a very popular move, and many Newfoundlanders, not only in Montreal and the City of Toronto, but in the United States would be glad to come here by that ship and bring their motor cars and tour the country, as far as it is possible on the Peninsula of Avalon, where at least there are several hundreds of miles of roads available.

Another suggestion was made to me, i.e., since June 24 is a holiday in this country it will be recognized by the Newfoundlanders living in Montreal, where they are going to have a ceremony at Atwater Park on that particular day. They have suggested to me that perhaps a hook-up could be arranged for a two-way conversation, and an expression of greetings between Newfoundlanders here and those who live in Montreal. I believe these Newfoundlanders there are interested in the welfare of Newfoundland and would welcome any such arrangement. I trust it can be arranged, and I hope that no politics will enter into it.

I mentioned a moment ago about the roads. The Trans-Canada Highway will certainly not be ready. Now, we know that at this time of year we can't expect all the roads to be in good condition. But I believe a certain general principle must be recognized in regard to road building in this country. I am not sure it has been recognized. This is it: We are not living in a horse and buggy age. The traffic over the roads today in Newfoundland is almost as heavy as over the highroad between Montreal and Toronto, and unless you get modern roads they can't stand up to traffic. The highroads out of St. John's carry the bulk of traffic in this country, and is where most of the motor traffic is concentrated. The roads, therefore, must be improved. I would suggest to my honourable friend, the Minister of Public Works, as soon as feasible we should have paved roads leading out of the city in other directions than those which are now there. We have a paved road to Carbonear; from Waterford Bridge Road to the Goulds, a distance of about six miles; and another, I don't think we are responsible for its building, from here to Torbay Airport. But I would suggest that it is desirable that the pavement should continue on past the Goulds at least to Witless Bay Line. As he told me himself in the past some connection was made with the highroad that runs out to Holyrood. On this highroad you see more traffic in line than at Ottawa, Toronto or Montreal, hundreds of cars in line. There is not very much pleasure in having a motor car when all you can do is get in a procession of other cars and keep on going like that. One has only to go over the road to Torbay, six miles, then get on a road that is absolutely disgraceful, certainly, it was much better twenty years ago than it is today. I was down there a few days ago, and my car stalled on the rough spots, and I got stuck on them and went aground on them. There are huge holes in the road and boulders sticking up.

MR. SPENCER: Having made that remark, can you explain now, why they were better then, than now?

MR. BROWNE: That can be inferred from my remarks. I am not saying they were better to be sarcastic, what I am saying, is that these roads should be paved roads, the roads leading out of the city of St. John's should be paved also important roads leading out of other places where there is a good deal of traffic. It is impossible today to have the roads stand up to the traffic on them if they are not well built. Now, I know in Nova Scotia, I was there a few days ago and I heard the Premier make an explanation about the complaints received up there because the roads had to be closed. They have fifteen hundred miles of paved roads up there. I don't know how many hundred we have here, but I doubt that we have much more than one hundred.

MR. SPENCER: One hundred and twenty-five.

MR. BROWNE: And they have fifteen hundred miles in Nova Scotia. So that my honourable friend, the Minister of Public Works, has a big programme ahead if he wants to put this country in a position to benefit by good transportation. I don't believe this country can make progress until it gets transportation facilities of a modern kind.

Now, Sir, when the Terms of Union were being considered, it seems to me there was a big bargaining factor in connection with the Terms of Union which seems to have been neglected. I remember I believe, hearing my honourable friend, the Premier, referring to the railway as a couple of streaks of steel. Perhaps he did not say, but he did not regard it as a bargaining factor here. I believe we are the only province today out of the ten provinces that has a narrow gauge railway over which the express goes at the terrific speed, twenty miles an hour on an average from St. John's to Port aux Basques. It takes a full day and night to get across. Well, we could have asked, as the other provinces now possess wide gauge railways, for a wide gauge railway. If we could not get the wide gauge railway, which the Federal Government gave the Maritimes, then instead of the wide gauge railway why not the Trans-Canada Highway to be built at Federal expense? If it is the intention of the Government to put this province in as good a position as the Maritime Provinces then it seems to me we should have either a wide gauge railway or a Trans-Newfoundland highroad equivalent to the roads they have in the Maritime Provinces. Since this committee has been appointed to prepare a case for the Royal Commission perhaps it would take that into consideration.

MR. SPENCER: I wonder if the honourable member would say something else the Premier said when he was listening to him?

MR. BROWNE: If you wish to give me a sketch.

MR. SPENCER: I am not complaining. I appreciate very much indeed as a matter of fact his comments, which are very near to my heart. I agree very largely with a lot of things he has said.

MR. SPEAKER: Does the honourable Minister wish to ask a question?

MR. SPENCER: The question I want to ask is whether he would explain some other points the honourable Premier for Nova Scotia made when referring to roads in Nova Scotia. He referred not only to the fifteen hundred miles of paved roads but referred to the mileage of dirt or earth roads. I believe he told the public it required two hundred and sixty million dollars.

MR. BROWNE: Well, my honourable friend has been the Minister of Public Works for nearly five years.
now, and I would not like to tell him too much about road building. He ought to know that himself, and what it costs. I think that the Premier of Nova Scotia said, and he is now the Minister of highways there, that to build good roads would cost about twenty thousand dollars a mile, with stone and gravel. Well, unless you get that sort of road you are going to have continual costly repairs. Roads which were built last year are in poor condition now, and will be in poor condition. I don't see how you can get roads with good driving surfaces unless you build them in a modern way.

Now, Mr. Speaker, realizing my deficiency about the affairs of this country during the past five years—

MR. SMALLWOOD: Will the honourable gentleman allow me? Could he be a little different in this respect from all his colleagues and sometimes say "The Province of Newfoundland." I sometimes find myself thinking of British Columbia when he says "Country." This is a province now.

MR. BROWNE: I am sorry I hurt the feelings of the Premier by referring to my country. It is still my country, and I thought it was his.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I did hope that five years in Ottawa might have—

MR. BROWNE: At any rate, Mr. Speaker, I was about to say that I have been reading the different speeches from the Throne which have been made since my honourable friend took office in 1949, which is now five years. I encountered in looking up these speeches from the Throne some difficulty in that there is no public journals of the House. These were published always since 1838 when we had Responsible Government, for a hundred years down to 1934, and I am very sorry that they are not being published at the present time. But I would advise honourable members, if they have copies of these speeches from the Throne they should preserve them. It is certainly my belief they are going to be literary rarities. In these Speeches from the Throne there are included many lavish promises and fond hopes about our future. I believe that there will be a great demand for them as curiosities in time to come. I hope the honourable members opposite will forgive me if I make some references to their contents. First of all Mr. Speaker, to be fair, I want to give credit to the Government for the executive appreciation they showed of the necessity of improving our public welfare legislation, especially the introduction of widows' allowances and mothers' allowances and dependents' allowances and workmen's compensation. I want to thank the Premier for his kind reference to me the other day and for informing the House that he had the privilege of putting into law a Bill which I had drafted twenty-seven years ago. These are very valuable and beneficial pieces of legislation, and I congratulate the Government on the speed with which they put them into effect. I believe that the dependents' allowances is something that is not in effect in all the Provinces of Canada. I think we have the edge on some of the provinces in so far as that is concerned.

Now, I want to draw the attention of the Premier to the present Speech from the Throne. On the front page I read "Speech From The Throne—Delivered at the Opening of the Fourth Session of the Thirtieth General Assembly of the Province of Newfoundland.” Now, I would like to draw his attention that this is not the thirtieth general assembly of the Province of Newfoundland. We only became a province in 1949. This is therefore only the second assembly of the Province of Newfoundland. This matter was correctly referred to in the first Speech from the Throne which was made in July, 1949, when it said: “This is the First Session of the 29th general assembly of Newfoundland but the first session of the first general assembly of the Province of Newfoundland.” My honourable friend who assured us the other day that he has such a great respect for the traditions of the House and country, will, I am sure, in the future, if he ever has the occasion to draft a Speech from the Throne, again have the right inscription on the front page.

Now, lest I might seem too critical about the Speeches from the Throne delivered in this Chamber, let me remind the honourable members that the Speech from the Throne is drafted by the Premier and so one is satisfied it is taken word for word as the policy of the Government and should forecast the legislation to come in the forthcoming session. Frequently it contains a lot of information concerning the past history of the Government, but generally it should indicate the legislation which is to be forecast. I don’t want to labour the House too much, but I refer to what takes place in other legislatures such as ours and point out this fact, because I took particular interest in the matter, and I hope I will be pardoned for referring to it: The Speech from the Throne given at Ottawa contains all the legislation that is going to be introduced during the session, and it is outlined in the Speech from the Throne.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Nonsense.

MR. BROWNE: No, Mr. Speaker, it is not nonsense. I have carefully watched, and unless some emergency arises—oh yes, I have watched and I have studied those speeches from the Throne to see how far the Government has carried out its policy. Now, my honourable friend calls it nonsense, but that is exactly what he did himself in 1949 when he referred to some twenty pieces of legislation, whereas, in this Speech from the Throne heard here last Wednesday, we had only a reference to three Bills that are going to be introduced. Yet today on the Order Paper there are eight Bills that were given notice of after the Speech was finished on Wednesday last. I think it is a good practice for the Premier to follow, i.e., to refer to these things in the Speech from the Throne. I noticed that amongst the Bills that he gave notice of there was one Bill to establish the Newfoundland Research and Conservation Association. I don’t know if that ever came to life, but it is good to hear him talking about conservation, it sounds like a conservative but I don’t think he is a conservative yet. He gave notice at that time to a hydro-electric commission. Today we are told that before many months or years pass, I don’t know what kind of promise that is but it certainly gives the Premier a way out. Before many months or years have passed we will have a hydro-electric commission. Then some consideration was given to improving the tourist trade. Now, I have kept some of them. They were well written and some of them I heard him deliver over the radio, and they were certainly well delivered, no one would
I should not find fault with them in that respect. I remember one occasion in particular: The Tourist Trade has not developed very much since 1949. I think the Premier realized its importance—he appointed a very able man as Tourist Director, but that man has not been able to give all his time to the job. He found time to go into the hustings with another official and campaign for Liberal candidates. Where are we going to draw the line? If a person were to go out and campaign for the Conservatives, how long would he remain in a public position in this country?

The Premier told us he had regard for the traditions—he pointed to the enlarged photographs which covered two walls of the Chamber. I had the feeling that these men were looking down in surprise and consternation, and even a look of disdain, when these remarks were made.

Did the honourable gentleman have regard for the traditions when he tolerated members of the Civil Service to go into Poll Booths and into the hustings on behalf of Liberal Candidates? I say it is a disgrace and shows an unfair attitude. Once a man takes a position in the Civil Service, he may take an interest in politics, he may vote, he may go to meetings; but he has no business to go on the hustings or to go into Poll Booths on behalf of any party. Unless it is recognized on both sides, we will not have justice.

Did he have regard for the traditions when he persuaded an official of the Justice Department to resign his position and contest the district of St. John's West.

Did he have regard for traditions when he told the people over the radio that it was a matter of life and death that all Liberal Candidates should be returned with large majorities? The voice of the sorcerer! And the people listened to his appeal.

Did he have regard for traditions when, almost before the signatures were dry on the Terms of Union, he persuaded the Government of Canada to violate one of the Terms of Union. I will be specific. I am now face to face with the honourable gentleman I refer to Section 30 of the Terms of Union—"Salaries of Lieutenant-Governor and Judges."

The salary of the Lieutenant-Governor and the salaries, allowances, and pensions of the judges of such superior, district and county courts as are now or may hereafter be constituted in the Province of Newfoundland shall be fixed and provided by the Parliament of Canada."

My honourable friend persuaded the Government of Canada to take my position off the list; no salary was voted for me. Neither did the Commission Government vote a salary as they expected it to be voted in Canada. So, I was forced to resign in 1949.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is not so.

MR. BROWNE: I was warned about the Premier's denying things. The Deputy Minister of Justice in Ottawa told me that it was true. Other prominent officials told me it was true. You can take either my statement or the Premier's. After I resigned, the position was abolished, and was not renewed in this country until last year.

The Federal Government made provision for five District Court Judges. There are still three vacancies. Where are the two who were appointed functioning? These gentlemen are paid $8,000 a year and are soon to get $10,000. For what? For doing nothing. The District Court Judge for the district of St. John's is in Corner Brook with his family. Surely this Government is interested, or should be interested in these appointments.

MR. SMALLWOOD: We have nothing to do with it.

MR. BROWNE: We have. They were appointed on my learned friend’s recommendation. These two gentlemen—one was a Federal Member at Ottawa, the other was a Liberal supporter—were appointed to these positions.

MR. SMALLWOOD: By whom?

MR. BROWNE: Appointed by the Federal Government on your recommendation.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Who appointed them? Whose employees are they?

MR. BROWNE: I am not going to be cross-examined. The Premier will have an opportunity to explain his misdemeanours, mistakes and injustices.

MR. SMALLWOOD: He will withdraw the word “misdemeanour” or it will be the last word he will utter in this House.

MR. BROWNE: I did not say the Honourable the Premier committed a misdemeanour.

MR. SPEAKER: The word “misdemeanour” was used; a point of order was made accompanied by a threat. I know it is not the intention of the honourable member to accuse the Premier of a misdemeanour and he will be glad to withdraw the word.

MR. BROWNE: Perhaps it was an unfortunate word to use; but I cannot think of a suitable substitute. What I meant to say was that the Government of Canada, on recommendation of the Premier, appointed two gentlemen to positions of $10,000 a year and that they were doing nothing. The Premier will have the opportunity of explaining that fully.

Perhaps my honourable friend who has such regard for the traditions of the country will explain to us why he told the people in the District of Ferryland in 1949 that unless they voted for the present Minister of Finance, not one cent of money would be spent in the district.

MR. MURRAY: The Premier was bantering.

MR. BROWNE: Yes, I heard the Premier made that explanation. But that is not what he told the people in the district. He told the people “make no mistake about it, if you vote for Billy Browne there will not be one cent of money spent in this district.” My honourable friend is a socialist.

MR. MURRAY: Not a Communist.

MR. BROWNE: I do not think he lives like a Communist. He is more socialistic than the Premier of Saskatchewan.

MR. MURRAY: Anything wrong about that?

MR. BROWNE: Yes, a great deal. If the honourable member wants to justify the socialism of the Premier he will have an opportunity of doing so. I know how newspapermen ran after the Premier; educated men have admired his genius in putting through Confederation. Is it not a little too soon to put a halo around the head of the Premier? Should we not wait until we hear more of the industries about which nothing was said in the Speech from the Throne the other day? Nothing at all!

In the address which the Premier gave us on that historic occasion in 1949, the piece d'\'resistance was in the end, when he told us that a Corporation which he would not even name—so sacred was the name—a Corporation which had control over hundreds of millions of dollars—was coming to Newfoundland. This was the biggest news he had for us, that one of the most famous, most wealthy organizations in the whole world was now interested in Newfoundland. He referred to the way he was received by them. He referred to them as a Corporation of wealth and experience. I understand they were the Rockefeller Foundation. They came here. They went away with more wealth and we were left with more experience. It cost $250,000 for that benevolent Corporation to come to Newfoundland, to look over the prospects here and to give my honourable friend a Report. A report which I believe was never published.

The 1950 Speech from the Throne had some good words about agriculture. "My Government is fully aware of the possibility of agriculture." How many people have seen whitetailed deer on the tables or in the butcher shops?

I cannot see much evidence to support that "my Government is giving close study to the problem of finding ways and means—".

A young fisherman was sent to Norway, England, Iceland, Scotland and Denmark. He was suddenly dismissed and was later re-established at the instance of the Premier. He visited those countries and was supposed to come back with the last word on the type of boats to be used. Where are the fishing boats? Who is using them? How many are in existence? Is the Premier satisfied and is the Minister satisfied that that gentleman brought back the last word on the type of boats to be used?

And the long-liners—where are they? We were told the fishermen were going to have more modern means of fishing; they were even going to be told how to market what they had. I remember very well the fishermen coming to me and showing me their little receipts for 25 quintals of this and that, average $4 to $7.00. Men who sold fish earlier got good prices but when October came the price of fish was down so low, men were accepting $4 and $5 a quintal. That was the year I agitated to have the price of $1.30 paid by the Price Support Board. That was the time I considered to be a time for a fishermen's organization. I went to different places, talked to people about it. I talked to my honourable friend the Deputy Minister about it. On February 6, 1951, I advocated it in the House of Commons—the Federation of Fishermen. The Premier took up the idea and I think he made politics out of it. That was a great mistake. There should be no politics in it. Members of the Opposition were not welcome to the Conferences held when those men came here.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The whole Opposition sat on the platform.

MR. BROWNE: I can only say that that is the first I knew of that. I am very glad to hear it. I hope it will be kept non-political. It is not, of course, a magic formula. There is another feature about the organization—the fishermen, to get the full benefit must work along co-operative lines as do the Maritime United Fishermen, therefore, there is a great need for training along co-operative lines and field workers will have to be used to assist fishermen so that they will get the full value out of the Federation.

In that year, 1950, my honourable friend also mentioned the Royal Commission on the Cost of Living. That royal body sat for months, brought in a beautiful report, did my honourable friend satisfy himself as he promised to do—he was going to tear the profiteers limb for limb—was anybody prosecuted? Did the cost of living get cheaper? It was going up while the Royal Commission was sitting. My honourable friend, before Confederation, encouraged the people to think that the cost of living would not go up after Confederation. He did not choose to tell them that in Canada they had subsidies which made certain articles cheaper than if they were on the open market. After the subsidies were taken away and those commodities went on the open market, the prices went up until in Canada itself the cost rose 80 or 90 per cent over what it was in 1949.

In the Speech from the Throne in 1951, mention is made of the new industries and the expansion of others. I do not know how far it was prudent for the Premier to give us information about these industries, but I do not believe the information to which the public is entitled has yet been given. I would like to see a statement here showing how the money which went into the Birch Plant was spent. I challenge the Minister for Economic Development to lay on the table of the House a detailed statement of how that $1,600,000 was spent. Why should we not know? Who owns the money? Is it the money of the Premier or his ministers or is it the money taken from the people of this country when Commission of Government was in power? If it was the people's money, it is our duty to demand from the government full details of every cent spent, and I challenge the Minister to lay that information on the table of the House.

There have been rumors unfair to the gentleman who built the plant. It will be readily recognized that a man placed in his position with a free hand in ordering supplies, he is in a difficult position, and he should be given an opportunity of showing the public what each item cost and how much the mill cost. I do not know if any information was given to the government about the cement and gypsum mill.

In that speech too, we were told that the government had won an appeal in regard to freight rates paid from Sydney to St. John's and along the railway line. Mr. Speaker, we were given an award, but that award only showed that Newfoundland had been overcharged by the C.N.R. since April 1st, 1949. At the present moment, and when that award was given the people of this country had been overcharged by millions of dollars, and I don't believe it is possible for my honourable friend to recover that money. I hope it is. I asked for it when I was a member of the House of Commons, but I was told by the minister of Transportation they were not going to pay it. I believe it runs into something like seven millions of dollars, and I wonder if the people of Newfoundland realize that as a result of Confederation our trade has been changed. Most of our trade today is with the other nine provinces of Canada and we buy from these provinces ten times as much goods as they buy from us. They sell us over a hundred million dollars worth of goods a year, and we export to them only about ten million dollars worth. Now there may be some variation in the figures, but I think that is generally true; they sell to us over ten times as much as they buy from us. On these goods coming from Canada we have to pay these high rates.

One of the things which benefits the people of Canada and is not taken into consideration is the profit they make on goods they sell us, and the taxes the Federal Government collect on the same goods. Now, it seems to me that, if the Terms of Union were not settled in such a hasty manner, a proper term would have been drawn up to protect our people at that time. There is a term in the Terms of Union but it was not good enough to protect us.

Then we were told about the Fisheries Development Committee and the appointment of Mr. Clive Planta as deputy minister. I won't say anything about Mr. Planta. We were told then that a commission was being appointed by the Newfoundland Government to inquire into the prices paid for salt codfish in 1950. Mr. Bruce Feather was appointed a Royal Commission of one to investigate. He investigated it, but I believe his report has never been published. I have not seen it at any rate.

Then we were told about the "Buy Newfoundland Campaign". Now I suppose it is not very pleasant to resurrect these things, but, as I said before, it is the first opportunity I have had to talk about the "Buy Newfoundland Campaign."

MR. SMALLWOOD: I am beginning to think I made a mistake. That is all we are going to have, this old re-hash.

MR. BBROWNE: I know my honourable friend does not like this old hash, but I am very sorry he has to listen to it.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Who else does?

MR. BBROWNE: That was, I believe, sufficiently aired in this House, and it showed thousands of dollars belonging to this country spent without any vouchers to show for the expenditures.

Now I come to the Alcoholic Liquors Act Amendments Act. I think I remember about the Premier telling about the alcoholic liquor act, and saying that was not really its name as it was really a temperance act, going to limit the sale of hard liquor. Well I don't think I will find many people to believe that he or his minister of finance are very active in trying to limit the sale of hard liquor.

We had the other day in a newspaper an account of a complaint which was made by a parish priest in Kilbride, Monsignor Rawlins, in an attempt to limit the sale of hard liquor in the area for which he is the pastor. He took the trouble to write to the Chairman of the Board of Liquor Control last October saying that he had learned that a tavern or club was to be erected within his parish, and he wanted to object as he had previously done against such an institution being established there. He received a courteous reply to say that, if and when an application was received for a license to sell spirits, beers or wines in the area, the Board would give every consideration to his protest before making a decision. Now, I want to say, Mr. Speaker, in my mind the whole operation of the Board of Liquor Control has been unsavory ever since this government took office.

I can well understand the reluctance of my honourable friend the Premier or the Minister of Finance of having a standing committee appointed to examine the public accounts, where the chairman and the past chairman of the Board of Liquor Control could be brought before it and examined as to the things that had gone on in the office of the Board of Liquor Control. Why were three politicians appointed to the Board of Liquor Control in the first place? Was it not bein properly operated by the commission of government? Could it not have been done in the same way since 1949?

I think the country could have been saved thousands of dollars in the salaries being paid to the friends of the Premier. It is an unnecessary expenditure without any increase in efficiency, and that is not justified. But during the past few months, Mr.

Speaker, the residents living in Kilbride were puzzled about the magnificent building going up in their neighbourhood, out of keeping with all its surroundings. It was obviously being erected by people of means, and something extraordinary was expected. Then we saw in the newspaper an advertisement. This advertisement appeared on March 6th, for the first time, to be inserted four times. Signed "Old Mill Properties Limited."

Now, let us see what Section 52 of the Act says. I hope my honourable friend the Premier won't think this is "Old Hash". Section 52: "The board may grant licenses to owners, operators or managers of hotels, clubs, an airport establishment, railway or steamship companies, restaurants, or taverns." Now that is what he is looking for here, a club. What does a club mean? According to the definition here: 'A club means a corporation, society or association of persons which is the owner, lessee, or occupant of an establishment used solely for objects of a social or athletic nature, but not for pecuniary gain and includes the premises occupied or used for any such purposes.

And the regulations which have been published by the Board of Liquor Control contained in sections 13, 14 and 15 deal with a club as well. A license may be granted to a club when it is operated for the object of a society, fraternal or athletic purposes. Now, if you want an illustration my honourable friends will know the sort of club envisaged, City Club, Bally Haly

Golf Club or, I believe, the Veterans' Club. I don't know how many others there are. But there are only three or four genuine clubs in this city. I don't know how many there are outside which come within this definition.

Now, my honourable friend annually holds or is the sponsor to a certain extent, I believe or graces with his patronage a ball which is held in honour of a distinguished Liberal statesman, Sir Wilfred Laurier.

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, in honour of the distinguished Liberal statesman, Mr. St. Laurent.

MR. BROWNE: Well, "The Less

Distinguished Liberal Statesman." He holds on his birthday this Liberal Ball. On the programme there that was distributed to the guests was an advertisement by this Old Mill Properties. I don't know how long ago that was, but it was a couple of months.

MR. SMALLWOOD: February 2.

MR. BROWNE: The 2nd of February, certainly before the advertisement was inserted in the paper. That was not inserted until March 6. Now, Mr. Speaker, either this is law or this is a farce. I think it is a farce when a group of people can go to work and spend forty or fifty thousand dollars in the construction of a modern building on the M. P. Road, knowing full well they are going to get a permit. I say now, they knew full well in advance they were going to get a permit. They would not have done to that trouble and would not have blazoned it in the programme of the Liberal Ball that they were going to open soon.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is pretty sound reasoning. They would be very stupid to build without assurance of getting a license.

MR. BROWNE: I think the law ought to be properly carried out. It has not been carried out. I refer back to 1951 amendment again, introduced to limit the sale of hard liquor.

"Every applicant for a license to sell alcoholic liquor under this section shall before filing his application with the Board give notice of his intention to apply for such license by advertisement in the form prescribed by the Board once a week for three consecutive weeks preceding his application in a newspaper published in St. John's and in a newspaper circulating in the electoral district in which the premises in respect of which the application is made are situated and by posting copies of such notice in conspicuous places in the said area.

If the applicant is going to build a building he must do that and get the permit before he builds the building. Here is a case where he built the building knowing full well he was going to get the permit, and did not advertise it until they had the building. Then practically all the residents in the area protested and the complaint was completely disregarded. It shows that the Premier, the honourable gentleman who sits over there, had given the green light to go ahead with the building. Is this then a genuine club? Is the government really sincere in its liquor legislation? Or is a club only an excuse for selling more liquor and bringing in more revenue into the coffers of the Board of Liquor Control? Does my honourable friend, the Minister of Public Welfare approve of a farce of that kind? What is the name of the club? "The Old Mill Properties Limited." I don't think there is any one here except those personally interested who know anything about such a club.

Now, 1951, that was a big year; that was the year when we had the general election. There was a session that year, a month before the general election, October 23, 1951, the House opened. As my honourable friends probably know there was going to be an election on November 27 of that year, the speech from the Throne was more flamboyant than ever. "Newfoundland," he said, "was never more prosperous." A quick recovery. Newfoundland must be a very buoyant country when it can recover so quickly from a depression which we had in 1950 when we had thousands of people on relief work. "The outlook was bright—No difficulty in selling products—I think it is going to be doubled or trebled in capacity. As for the Gypsum plant the story is very much the same as for the Birch plant. The market demands are incapable of being supplied."
Then we have a proposition for a second mill from people in Europe. The tannery is going to be built. Here is the best one of all. The machinery plant at Donovans. In writing he put the little word "CMIC Donovans." The machinery plant at Donovans. They made a mistake in the Speech from the Throne that time; they meant the "Octagon." It was to be the largest single labour giving enterprise in Newfoundland next to the fisheries. In the next two years it was to employ five thousand men in full time work. Well, how could the people of Newfoundland refuse the charmer when he promises them five thousand men in full time work? Why, you have to go to Montreal to get a business as profitable, as prosperous as the machinery plant that was going to be erected at Donovans. You can go in there now and into the factory and if you can see five men around without having to look around the machines you will be lucky. Well, the Premier cannot escape the accusation that he has been very extravagant in the promises he made to the people from time to time. But in the 1952 Speech from the Throne more than twenty different industries were to be in production or in the course of construction. I have here another interview given by my honourable friend. He gave so many interviews and made so many speeches it was hard to keep up with him. My stenographer got tired of putting them away. But this was one he gave January 8, 1950 to his friend of the "Sunday Herald," "In the past six months I have discussed Newfoundland's position with men owning wholly and controlling no less than three thousand million dollars. Their need is to be shown that we have resources that can be developed at a profit, and you won't be able to keep them out. In fact, if things we now know about come to pass, we will need to import labour in the next five years." That was in 1950. It has only been four years yet. Perhaps by next year we will need a lot of labour for these industries, perhaps we will yet see the five thousand men at the machinery plant at Donovans.

My honourable friend was lost until he found a pilot. That pilot was the Latvian gentleman who was trained in the Hitler Regime, who was a member of a dictator government before he left Latvia and was trained under Hitler's Regime, and worked with Hitler's Regime during the war until he found he was losing. Then this great financial wizard came into the picture and the Premier was on the white course again with a good pilot at the wheel—we are bound for prosperity—Newfoundland would never be more prosperous—I seem to remember statements made by the honourable Premier that one day Newfoundland would erect a monument to the memory of Dr. Valdmanis. The monuments are there, there is no need to erect any more monuments. "I would rather lose my right arm than lose Dr. Valdmanis." "If ever Dr. Valdmanis resigned I would resign my position as Premier of Newfoundland." These were the statements which were made. Well, we have new industries, and is it not a strange thing that in the 1954 Speech from the Throne there is not a mention of them. Why are they not mentioned? The Premier is not ashamed of them, is he? He is proud of them, is he not? He has, I suppose, a little misgiving sometimes. That is the only thing that might be in his mind. But the Government built three plants, the gypsum plant, the birch plant and the cement plant as socialistic enterprises, government-owned, government operated. These were very extreme things for a Liberal Premier to do. Then he calls a snap election in the Fall of 1951 and says he must go to the country for a mandate, when he had already made a Speech from the Throne, speaking about the twenty industries to be in existence within the next few months. I say that election was a fraud, a fraud upon the people of this country. The Premier had embarked upon a socialistic scheme and had already arranged to finance twenty other industries and needed no mandate other than what he already had.

The Government then in 1952 started looking for oil. I can’t say that I utterly disapprove of a moderate effort. But my honourable friend is so impetuous that when he goes looking for oil he goes looking for oil, and he is not going to be satisfied with anything else but oil. So we have Mr. John Fox spending his own money, a wonderful thing. I believe he spent a considerable amount in his search for oil. I am not going to condemn him too strongly for that.

Then NALCO promises important development but as for NALCO a firm or corporation known as Canadian Javelin Foundries and Machinery Company became interested. We heard today an answer to a question which came in to my honourable friend on my left telling us about certain dealings with NALCO. I don’t think they told us the whole story. I have here an article taken from the “Financial Times” I am sure my honourable friend the Premier has seen it. It has certain statements which were not given here this afternoon.

I think the answer my honourable friend gave this afternoon will not affect this statement.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The honourable gentleman should not be too sure, with his opinion of me he ought not to be too sure. Don’t take it for granted. Have a select committee appointed to find out.

MR. BROWNE: My honourable friend sneers at my suggestion to have a standing committee to investigate the public accounts. Perhaps we will have that yet.

Now, Mr. Speaker, in 1952 we were told a firm known as Coverdale and Colpitts had been engaged by the Government to investigate the cement, the gypsum and the birch plants, because it was the policy of the Government to sell these plants. That was in 1952. Now, two years later have they been sold? And if so, what money has been received? Because at that time over nine million dollars of Newfoundland money had been put in to these three plants, and it was the intention of the Government to use that money, not in the same way, but for the encouragement and assistance to other industries for further economic development. How much has been returned so far? How much have they got back out of the birch plant? I would like to know how much money we have spent on the birch mill since 1952, I will wager it is over a million dollars. Also on the gypsum mill—it seems to me Mr. Speaker that, that report was not published. I have not seen it, nor any of our members here have seen that report.

I wonder if the Premier later on will make available to us a copy of that report.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It was tabled in the House.

MR. BROWNE: I have not seen it. A report of the value and prospects of these plants.

In 1953 we were still prosperous. Never before were we so prosperous. Never before have we experienced such prosperity. Economic development is going on, mills and factories—now, we are going to develop the natural resources; the fisheries are going to be given attention, the mines and forests and soil of Newfoundland. Now, that these things I have mentioned are established the Premier goes on to first things. In other words the Premier put the cart before the horse, the secondary before the first. He should have given attention to the primary industries in the first place. How much more valuable would it be to the people of this country if he had for their money put in fish plants in 1949? How much more value to the people of this country, for their money, if he had put it into roads since 1949? How much better off would the people of this country be, if the money, put into the development of industries for the benefit of people living in Europe were put into the soil?

The chief cause of the prosperity of this country for many years has been the large expenditure by the American Government on defence work.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is not so.

MR. BROWNE: Millions of dollars have been spent by the Americans in this country.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, but there are millions on other things.

MR. BROWNE: To qualify that—I have not finished my sentence—since 1949 we have had the benefit of old age pensions and family allowances, improved veterans and other legislation of that kind, and the Government's spendings on public works.

The Rockefellers came and left us and we did not benefit. Now, my honourable friend recently has introduced another financial corporation, the Rothschilds. I hope that their effort in this country will be more beneficial to the people than their counterpart in the United States. I hope that all this talk of helping the fisheries is really going to mature, and that all the talk about helping the farmers and the soil this year, in the Speech from the Throne, we have promises of that. Action is now heading up for us in connection with the fisheries. There will be general agreement, I believe in welcoming, other industries and other sources of income for our people. I believe also there will be general agreement that in the long run prosperity in Newfoundland depends upon the continued expansion of the fisheries, forests and agriculture. I wish my honourable friend had recognized the importance of that statement five years ago. I don't think he did. One would expect, with the experience he had in farming and in raising various kinds of agricultural animals that he would have given more assistance to the development of agriculture in this country.

Now, Sir, I am going to cut my remarks short, because the hour is getting late and there is not much time left today. But, I think that we have come to the end of an era in this country, we are starting a new chapter when we get a Speech from the Throne that does not mention these great industries in which so many millions of dollars of Newfoundland money have been invested. We are told we are going to get fish, fish, fish until we become fish. I think my honourable friend is drawing a great red herring across the industrial trail he has blazed in this country. It will remain to me a mystery why no mention has been made of the industries and the uncertainty of the prospects for so many of these industries, and the fact that it is a matter of great concern for all the people of Newfoundland. I feel the Speech from the Throne should have referred to them and told us how they are going along. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I beg to move, seconded by my honourable friend the member for Harbour Main-Bell Island, that, "We respectfully submit to Your Honour that this House regrets the Speech from the Throne contained no reference to the financial conditions or progress of the industries in which so large an amount of the surplus of the people has been invested."

MR. SPEAKER: I see six o'clock.

MR. FOGWILL: Mr. Speaker, are we going to sit tonight?

MR. SMALLWOOD: It is not our intention. The honourable gentleman wishes to move the adjournment.

MR. HOLLETT: I understand, Mr. Speaker, the honourable member for St. John's West made an amendment seconded by the honourable member for Harbour Main-Bell Island.

MR. SPEAKER: The honourable members are confusing themselves quite unnecessarily. The honourable member has spoken. It is six o'clock and an honourable member has moved the adjournment. I am now about to put the motion to adjourn the debate.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I move the House at its rising do adjourn until tomorrow Tuesday at 3:00 of the clock.

The House adjourned until tomorrow Tuesday, March 30, at 3:00 of the clock.

TUESDAY, March 30, 1954.

The House met at 3:00 of the clock in the afternoon, pursuant to adjournment.

Answers to Questions

MR. SPEAKER: Prior to making a ruling I want to remind Honourable Members that the greatest latitude possible is allowed both in the asking and answering of questions in this House. However, there are certain principles which Mr. Speaker has to keep in mind when assessing the admissibility or otherwise of questions. I would refer you to Question No. 5 on the Order Paper of yesterday for I am about to rule as inadmissible sub-questions (5), (6) and (7).

Now, let it be understood at the outset, I could permit these questions to go to the Minister who might, I do not know, refuse to answer. However, because of the principle involved, which I shall make clear, I am not doing that. I must disallow the questions on a number of specific grounds. I would refer you to "Beauchesne" p. 119. "Questions may not contain: Innuendo, inferences, imputations, relate to character or conduct of persons in other than a public capacity. Questions may not be asked which deal with matters not within the official knowledge of the Minister nor those dealing with matters of a private nature, nor may they seek information set forth in documents equally accessible to the questioner."

I do not know what answer the Honourable Minister would make if the question were allowed, but for the purpose of this ruling I must assume that he would answer. Instantly the question becomes dangerous in the extreme and capable of effecting great mischief. I feel sure the effect in that direction would be much greater than is foreseen by either the Opposition or by the Government at this stage. For example: I doubt if any list of shareholders is up-to-date and many of them would therefore contain names of people who in actual fact are not shareholders at all but merely stenographers or other office employees who were present in the office where the act of incorporation was done. Honourable members must be aware that the very idea of selling alcoholic liquors or handling or being associated with them in any way is extremely repugnant to a great many people in this country and most especially in Newfoundland. Therefore I think it follows, that to table in this House a list of people who are shareholders, and so by the most modern and rapid means disseminate the information to the public at large would be, to say the least, to bring shame and opprobrium to a great number of innocent people who have absolutely no chance whatsoever to defend themselves.

The House therefore must agree that this would constitute a breach of parliamentary privilege. While Mr. Speaker does not sit as the guardian of the public yet he does hold custody of the rights and privileges of the parliament.
Referring to sub-section 6: It must be inferred, for the insinuation is that some honourable members have a proprietary or monetary interest in the sale of alcoholic liquors or in places in which such liquors are sold. I say: "It may be inferred" whether that is the case or not I do not know. But it must be remembered that when a gentleman becomes a member of a House of Assembly he does not forfeit his right to his life as a private citizen. True, while he sits in this House or in any House as the mouth-piece of his constituents his actions and his life so far as it is public and his actions in a public capacity are subject to the scrutiny of the House; but it is no concern of the House nor of the public at large, how any member earns his living or invests his money provided such is done in a legal and legitimate manner. If otherwise be the case it would be a matter for the courts and not for this House. There are two main principles I see here, the one I have already stated that of personal questions. I burned considerable midnight oil on this subject and I find that questions much less harmful than these have been ruled out of order time and again. The most important principle I see here seems to me to reach so far afield as to be alarming in its proportions. If I permit these questions to be asked and answered and especially answered, you must see that I hereby set up a precedent which will remain to haunt the occupant of this Chair for years to come, and since new precedents are made common property to all parliaments in the Commonwealth the results are so far-reaching as to be positively alarming.

You see, if I allow a Minister to answer questions relating to the private life of any honourable member I shall have then empowered Ministers to investigate the private lives of members of this House. What protection can any honourable member then seek from Mr. Speaker in any attempt which might be made in future to impeach his honesty or integrity. If I permit the Opposition to apply this dangerous and far-reaching method of attack today it follows that honourable members on the government side might very well employ such tactics, and much more effectively tomorrow. Once started how can such great public mischief be stopped or even controlled.

Further I must take cognizance of the purpose of the questions as intimated by the honourable member who spoke yesterday. (The honourable member referred to these questions, therefore I may here make this reference to his speech). Since I must instantly rule out of order any attempt by one honourable member to impute criminal or other forms of misconduct to other honourable members, it is difficult to see how I could permit the same object to be attained even in an indirect or circuitous manner. Therefore, for these reasons I must rule the questions out of order, on the grounds that, if answered, they would constitute a breach of parliamentary privilege since they would work harm against certain innocent members of the general public, impute misconduct to members of this House, and that they would create a precedent which would be attended by incalculable dangers.

I have gone to some length in making this ruling and to make it clear that I am merely ruling on the principle involved.
Finally I have to say that there is no debate on Mr. Speaker’s ruling. However, it is possible for any honourable member who wishes to appeal the ruling to the House.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, may I say just a word: I have no intention whatsoever of questioning your ruling except to make this remark about sub-section (5) of Question No. 5.

MR. SPEAKER: There is no debate. If the honourable member is permitted to make a statement, Mr. Speaker must reply and instantly he takes part in a debate. It is contrary to all standard practice. The ruling is merely on the principles involved which I take it upon myself to state are probably more far-reaching than any member of the House realizes.

MR. HOLLETT: I wonder if Your Honour would indicate again the principle involved in sub-section (5)?

MR. SPEAKER: The ruling has been given.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, may I ask a question? Would it not be more in order, or if you could give us notice in advance that you are to give a ruling so that if we have any argument we might raise it before a decision.

MR. SPEAKER: I would be very happy to answer—in order to do that we would have to bring into effect a system of dealing with questions which does obtain in other Houses. As a result I can assure the honourable member the Opposition would suffer greatly. The greatest latitude is allowed—for instance it is not correct for a member to give notice of questions to be asked. In order to tell the honourable member in advance what I am to rule out of order, I must have at least two days, therefore they must be either placed in the bag on Mr. Speaker’s Chair or passed to the clerk so that it can be indicated whether answers are to be given or not. Therefore, by giving notice of questions, which might be disallowed, certainly there is no other thing for the Chair to do other than ruled.

HON. J. R. SMALLWOOD (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I wonder would it be possible for Your Honour to order that typewritten transcripts of Your Honour’s remarks and other remarks since be prepared at the earliest possible moment and circulated to the Leader of the Opposition and a copy to me and we perhaps could have a copy to circulate to the press. Your Honour could, I think, order that.

MR. SPEAKER: It will appear in Hansard so I see no reason why it could not be done.

Then, in fairness, does any other honourable gentleman wish to appeal?

MR. HOLLETT: By doing that and casting no reflection I would not wish to have the matter circulated. I abide by your judgement, Mr. Speaker, but reserve the right to refer to it in debate but not to your ruling.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I suggest the ruling of Your Honour be circulated.

MR. SPEAKER: I think honourable members are entitled to it, because if we had a daily printing of “Hansard,” honourable members would have it in the morning.
MR. SMALLWOOD: No. 4; the answer is being prepared.

HON. G. J. POWER (Minister of Finance): Section 4 of No. 5 tabled.

MR. HOLLETT: Is it the intention to answer 1, 2, and 3?

MR. POWER: Yes. (6) Was answered yesterday. (7) Is being prepared.

MR. FOGWILL: On that point, would it be possible for the Opposition to be given a copy of questions separate from the ones tabled; or, if the copy given to the Clerk could be given to me to have a typewritten copy made?

MR. SPEAKER: I think it is quite easy to make more than one copy.

MR. BROWNE: Would it be improper to have only the questions which are not answered carried forward to the next day? Then we would have only the questions which have not been answered on the Order Paper.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I do not agree with that.

MR. SPEAKER: It will not be lost sight of.

HON. E. S. SPENCER (Minister of Public Works): Question No. 8. The answer is in the course of preparation.

MR. SMALLWOOD: In connection with (9), I must decline to answer all sections of it except subsection 7 which I will answer, because it deals with money advanced to this private company by the Government out of the Treasury. I will not answer the others because these are questions which should be more properly addressed to the company itself. Perhaps they will answer them. The Opposition may as well give notice of questions about Bowrings or Harvey's or Bowater's or any other private company. The questions would be much more properly addressed to the companies concerned.

MR. HOLLETT: May I interrupt?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I have the floor; if he asks me to relinquish it, I shall do so. He should not ask the Speaker.

MR. HOLLETT: I ask you for nothing.

MR. SMALLWOOD: You will get nothing, except to stay in Opposition. As long as he is elected he will stay there.

Regarding Section 7, I will give the information tomorrow or whenever I get the information in my hands.

MR. POWER: Answer to Question No. 11 tabled.

Question No. 11:
(1) (a) Social Security Assessment, See Answer to Question 7 (2).

(b) Gasoline Tax—$1,980,826 (to 28/2/54).

(c) Cancer Control Tax—$73,629 (to 28/2/54).

(d) Rental Mineral Leases, Royalties, etc.—$278,455 (to 28/2/54).

(2) (a) No overdraft at present time.

(b) $1,793,585.26 (at 28/2/54).

(3) Information being tabled in reply to Question 3 (E).

(4) See Answer to Question 6 (3).

HON. DR. H. L. POTTLLE (Minister of Public Welfare): The answer to No. 12 is being prepared and also the answer to No. 13.

MR. SMALLWOOD: In connection with No. 14 (1). I do not think it is any business of this House and I decline to give the information. I suggest that question be more properly addressed to the Company. They might or might not care to give the information.

(2) $300,000 has been spent by the Corporation thus far.

(3) After the annual meeting of the Corporation and the information is supplied me, as soon thereafter as is feasible, I will furnish that information to the House.

(5) “To what extent has Brinco exercised its option to take up exploration leases as granted under Section No. 3 of their Agreement with the Government?” These leases, I believe, are leases referred to in sub-section (2) of the question. Actually it is only within recent days that the Corporation has taken up its option on the 50 square miles in Labrador and the ten square miles in Newfoundland for the purposes of exploration.

Answer to No. 14 (6) tabled

Answer to Question 14 (6):

MR. SPENCER: Question 15 is in the course of preparation.

HON. L. R. CURTIS (Attorney General): In reply to No. 16 there are some vacancies in the Magistracy and I have no doubt that appointments will be made in due course. As regards the other part of the question, I may say it is still under consideration.

HON. DR. F. W. ROWE (Minister of Mines and Resources): With regard to No. (17), the answer is “yes the government has one cabin on the Gander River. The Cabin was built with the consent of the Departmental officials of the Commission Government in 1947 at an approximate cost of $1500.”

(3) It is used mainly by parties coming to Newfoundland at the invitation of the Government.

(4) The property was used in 1953 from August 8th to August 12th. The party consisted of Brig. Genl. Lovett, Colonel Lux, Colonel Anderson, and Mr. Gwathmay of the United States Army Engineers, accompanied by the Chief Game Warden.

(5) Yes. Guide-Caretaker, Orlando Gillingham, approximately 1½ months at $250 per month; Aaron Layte, cook, approximately 10 days at $250 per month.

The Honourable Minister of Health tabled the answers to question No. 18:

Question: Is it the intention of the Government to publish the report of the inquiry conducted into the administration of the Hospital for Mental and Nervous Diseases?

Answer: Yes.

Question: In the case of employees suspended during the inquiry but exonerated by the findings thereof, is it the intention of the Government or the Department to reinstate any or all of such persons in their employment?

Answer: Each individual employee's case will be considered on merit as vacancies occur.

Question: How many employees in all were suspended or dismissed during the investigation carried out by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police?

Answer: Fourteen.

Question: Have any of these persons since been employed in the Department of Health or any other Department of Government?

Answer: Yes. Dr. G. J. O'Brien as Consulting Psychiatrist at the St. John's General Hospital with effect from December 1st, 1953.

The Honourable Minister of Public Works tabled reply to Question No. 19 by Mr. Higgins:

1. Question: The total amount spent on the Trans-Canada Highway in Newfoundland (a) Since April 1st, 1949; (b) In each fiscal year since 1949. How much of this amount was expended (1) by the Federal Government (2) by the Provincial Government?

Answer: (a) 7,217,830.
(b) 1949-50 1950-51
(1) Nil 957,844
(2) 208,675 1,376,832
1951-52 1952-53 1953-54
998,670 527,845 945,003
1,059,492 463,679 710,290

2. Question: Give (a) the total number of men employed last year on the Trans-Canada Highway in Newfoundland and (b) the total moneys spent in wages.

Answer: All work on Trans-Canada Highway is carried out under contracts. Payments to contractors are made on the basis of units of work performed. Records are not kept in the department of the number of men employed by the contractors or the moneys paid in wages.

3. Question: Give the total mileage of new road construction on the Trans-Canada Highway in Newfoundland (a) since April 1st, 1949; (b) in each fiscal year since April 1st, 1949.

Answer: (a) 120 miles of road have been rough graded.
(b) 1949-50 1950-51 1951-52 1952-53 1953-54
4.5 miles 49.2 miles 29.1 miles 12.4 miles 24.8 miles

4. Question: How many miles of road remain to be constructed, and the number of bridges together with approximate of costs apart from paving?

Answer: 480 miles. As the final route of Trans Canada Highway has not yet been decided, it is impossible to give the exact number of bridges, but the approximate number is 40, approximate cost, including bridges $33,000,000, apart from paving.

5. Question: How many miles of secondary roads were constructed during the past fiscal year and where located? Give the cost and the names of the contractors or builders.

Answer: 90.5 miles at the following locations:

St. Anthony—Cooks Harbour.
Bunyans Cove—Musgravetown.
Extension Road North Harbour.
Placentia Bay.
Buchans—Badger Road.
Rocky Harbour—St. Pauls.
Lumsden—Musgrave Harbour.
Kings Point to Indian Brook.
Rock Harbour Spanish Room.
Meadows—Irish Town.
Cook's Brook—Frenchman's Cove.
Phillips Head—Point au Bay.
Most of these roads were constructed by Departmental forces. The others were done by J. Goodyear & Sons Ltd., Western Construction Co., Ltd., and W. J. Lundrigan, Ltd.

6. Question: How much money was spent on repairs to secondary roads during the past fiscal year?

Answer: $2,100,000.

MR. POWER: (20) the answer will be ready in a couple of days.

MR. SMALLWOOD: (21). I guess it is in the course of preparation. I have not got the answer.

Orders of the Day

MR. SPEAKER: The question now is the amendment submitted by the honourable member for St. John’s West. I must inform all members that this amendment constitutes a motion of “no confidence.” Every member of the House may speak to it with one exception—that being the honourable member who moved it. Honourable members must confine themselves strictly to the subject of the amendment.

MR. FOGWILL: I rise now to support this amendment so ably proposed by the honourable member for St. John’s West.

If I may be permitted, I would like to take a moment or two. I would like to congratulate the honourable member on his being elected to the District of St. John’s West and in taking his seat on this side of the House. I feel sure, Sir, that the honourable member will be not only a great help to the Opposition and will be a great asset to them, but because of his wise experience in Government matters and as a Rhodes Scholar, he would be a help not only to the members of Her Majesty’s Loyal Opposition, but would be of great assistance to this whole Assembly.

Now, in support of the Amendment, much can be said. In the first instance it appears to me, Mr. Speaker, that when this Government took office in 1949, they were at their wits end as to how to go about laying down some foundation whereby the people of this Island could be employed at work of a permanent nature. Of course, at that time, in 1949, our industries were limited. But in 1950 the Government did begin to be-stir itself in respect to the introduction of new industries into this Island.

Now, Mr. Speaker, when a group of people such as we have in this House—and I would include the members on this side of this House as well as those on the opposite side—after so many years of no experience in government life, suddenly find themselves in the saddle, so to speak, in the place where they have to govern Newfoundland, it seems to me that the government took fright, knowing our industries were limited—that they were confined to those old industries like the fisheries, or the comparatively new ones like mining and pulp and paper—in 1950, shortly after they were elected, they decided to branch out into something new—industrial development!

The first thing they did after acquiring the services of that great man (who is now lost to us)—Valdmanis—after acquiring his services, the government did decide to invest certain amounts of money in the building of a Cement Plant. So in 1950-51 the government did put $1,119,945 into the building of a cement plant and in the following year 1951-52 they spent $2,222,635.75. And, Mr. Speaker, in the next year, into this same plant they spent an amount of $895,738.93 of the people's money. That was for the building of the plant.

Besides this amount, they spent other amounts. In 1951-52 they spent an additional amount of $136,432.36 and also in 1952-53 they spent $63,567.64. A total investment, not of government money, but the people's money—the people of this Island—of $4,738,319.00.

Now, one thing I am disturbed about—the cement plant cost $4,738,000 in round figures. The Auditor General's Report for the year ended March 31, 1952 had this to say:

"Cement Mill: Since the close of the 1951-52 financial year the Cement Mill has been sold to North Star Cement Limited for $4,340,000 and the shares in this Company, owned by the Government and having a par value of $100,000, have been sold to Canadian Machinery Holding Trust for $200,000. Funds to purchase the Cement Mill were advanced by the Government to North Star Cement Limited and this amount together with $400,000 advanced to the Company for working capital, making a total of $4,740,000, is secured by a first mortgage on the fixed assets of the Company in favour of the Government and bears interest at the rate of 4¾% per annum. The amount for which the Mill was sold represents approximately the sums expended by the Government in the construction and equipment of the Mill plus certain commitments amounting to $115,000 approximately, made by the Government in connection with the erection of the plant, and unpaid as of the date of sale."

Now, Mr. Speaker, in the Report of the Auditor General for the year ended March 31, 1953, it says:

"Department of Economic Development—Statement No. 17
96. Subhead 1553. (01) Interest on Loans, $195,899. Since 31 March 1953 Executive Council have ordered, subject to ratification, by the Legislature, that agreement made with the operators of Industrial plants, to whom Government loans have been made, be amended to provide that:

(I) Payment of interest of such loans be deferred for the first two years from the date of commencement of construction;

(2) Any interest paid by the operators be refunded, and

(3) Amortization of the loans start four years from the date of commencement instead of two years.

To date a total of $121,994 of the above amount has been refunded."

Now, Mr. Speaker, in the same Report handed us a few days ago, on Page 17 it says:

Agreement of Sale and Mortgages Receivable—Statement No. 38
20. North Star Cement Co. Ltd.
$4,623,219.—The repayment of this amount is secured by a first mortgage on the fixed assets of the Company. The mortgage bears interest at the rate of 4 3/4% per annum payable in equal half-yearly instalments beginning 5 January 1953. The Company is required to repay the principal sum in yearly instalments of not less than 3% thereof beginning 5 July 1953 and terminating 15 July 1964. Any balance outstanding as of the latter date is to be refinanced."

Now, Mr. Speaker, in regard to the Cement Plant: It appears to me that the Cement Plant, whereas it cost four million seven hundred thousand dollars, it was sold for approximately one hundred and fifteen thousand dollars less than it cost the Government of this Island. I would like to know why? Whereas the cost of the plant to the Government was four million seven hundred and thirty-eight thousand three hundred and nineteen dollars. It was sold for four million six hundred and twenty-three thousand two hundred and thirteen dollars.

Now, Sir, as far as the Gypsum Plant is concerned the total cost of the Gypsum Plant was two million one hundred and ninety-nine thousand eight hundred dollars and working capital four hundred thousand, share capital one hundred thousand. The total cost, Mr. Speaker, three million one hundred and ninety-nine thousand and eight dollars. The Birch Plant. Sir, the cost was one million, seven hundred and eighty thousand, eight hundred and forty-eight dollars, and working capital advanced by the Government nine hundred and sixty thousand dollars besides which the Government has guaranteed a loan of one hundred and fifty thousand dollars to these people, a bank loan. So that the total cost of the Cement Plant, the Gypsum and Birch Plants amount to ten million five hundred and thirty-two thousand.—That is a lot of money, Sir. Some of these I read before. I gave you the total for 1950-51 on the Cement, Gypsum and Birch and the Newfoundland Fur Industry, Newfoundland Canadian Machinery and Industrial Construction Limited, United Cotton Mills, Leather Goods, Asbestos and North Star Cement and Atlantic Gypsum, total nine million six hundred and thirty-six thousand six hundred and sixty-three dollars and sixty-two cents.

Now, Mr. Speaker, there is another amount in this for another year ending 1953 where we find a total expenditure on capital account of five million four hundred and fifty-six thousand eight hundred dollars and sixty-one cents, embracing cement, gypsum and birch, Newfoundland Tanneries, Canadian Machinery and Engineering Limited, United Cotton, Newfoundland Asbestos, North Star Cement, Atlantic Hardboards, Atlantic Optical, Hanning Electric, Atlantic Films and Electronics Limited, a total, Mr. Speaker, of eighteen million, five hundred thousand dollars. Now, what I want to know, Mr. Speaker, is—We have heard quite a lot in this House on questions by the honourable members of the Opposition—But in the press, as we go along day by day, there are black headlines every day, every week—The present government is living on headlines. But how many people are employed and are to be employed and what hope is there for the future, etc. I would like to know how many people have been employed by these industries by the spending of this eighteen million dollars? Is there two hundred, five hundred, six hundred or a thousand? I will say there... are less than a thousand persons. But I will take the figures of one thousand persons employed by spending this eighteen million five hundred thousand dollars. If we have only one thousand persons employed, which I don't think, it is costing this Island eighteen thousand dollars to make work for one person. That is a lot of money and people of this Island can't afford it.

I want to say something about this machine plant, but let us have a look at the cement plant first. Now the figures as outlined by the Department of Economic Development in this book which was given to the Opposition some time ago indicate there is a total, Mr. Speaker, of roughly about one hundred and twenty people, for an expenditure of four million seven hundred thousand dollars. Further, Mr. Speaker, this plant is supposed, according to the great Doctor Valdmanis's summary of the total revenue of the plant, the money which it was supposed to earn, the total revenue, was supposed to be two million less the cost of bags for cement, one hundred and eighty-two thousand, so that the net was two million two hundred and fifty-two thousand seven hundred dollars, less the cost of one million sixty-two thousand nine hundred and ten dollars, leaving a balance net revenue of one million two hundred and eighty-nine thousand seven hundred and ninety thousand dollars, less depreciation. This plant should, according to that, produce a revenue each year of eighty thousand dollars, Mr. Speaker.

The Gypsum Plant, Mr. Speaker, is similar. I am not going through all the details of this, it is not necessary. But the number of people employed in this plant is roughly about the same as those who would be employed in the Cement Plant. Mr. Speaker, according to this file which we have, this Gypsum Plant is supposed to bring in to the Government a revenue in the vicinity of seven hundred thousand dollars per year, with an employment roughly of one hundred and twenty or one hundred and twenty-five people.

Now, this one here, this Machinery Company, Mr. Speaker, this is the best one of all. This is the one that was going to put Newfoundland on its feet, this Machinery Company. I remember in 1952 when this plant was opened, the great fanfare. Mr. Jameson on the radio, CJON I think it was, in his explanation of the operations of this plant said very emphatically over the air in speaking of its opening, of the great roar of machinery which somebody or other would produce by pressing a button. I don't know if this House pressed a button or not, probably it may have done so, but, Mr. Speaker, this plant which was supposed to build many things, that little place in there, an ordinary machine shop such as you would find in any town wherever you may go. Then we find here in the prospectus of this plant that they can build all these things including elevators, pipe systems and crushers, and even in general the treatment of steel and other goods, Mr. Speaker, for defence purposes. It goes on to say that in no way does this list give a complete picture.

Then the report goes on to say: "It is planned to start the operation of the plant August 1, 1952." I believe that was the day it started. "On that date the plant will be in working condition and will be tested."

How many conveyors did they build in the first production period? Any? That is what the Opposition wants to know. What have they built out there?

Steel construction for high-tension power lines—How much have they built? These are the things they were supposed to build in the first period of operation. Have they built any? We people on this side have been asking these questions and we would like to know. The people are entitled to know. It is the people's money that has gone into the plant in the amount of two and a half million dollars. We would like to know, and the people want to know.

I feel sure the second period should be in effect now. Have they done any of this work? Now they are also supposed to manufacture cleaning machines, washing machines, cleaning machinery for mills, etc. Have they done any of this work? They have not done any of it, Mr. Speaker. I will go on further and say this much: It is to be expected, no doubt, Mr. Speaker, any plant of this size would have some little difficulty getting into operation. There is no doubt about that. But this plant went into operation in August 1952, and that is quite some time ago. If this plant is supposed to build the things which were outlined to this House of Assembly in this volume by the Director of Economic Development for which the Minister is responsible, it is time we are informed whether or not this plant is doing this work. To my knowledge it is not doing this work. To my knowledge, Mr. Speaker, this plant out there in no small measure is interfering and taking away the work formerly done by some of the small machine shops in St. John's as well as the Newfoundland Dockyard. From my own knowledge, Mr. Speaker, I do know that there have been bearings sent up from one of the fishery firms on the Southside, bearings of an engine in one of these boats, and not only one but several occasions they have been sent to the Machinery Plant out at the Octagon to be remetalled and machined and what happened? These bearings had to be sent back by the Machinery Plant to the dockyard to be remetalled because of the fact that they were unable to do it. It was only last week, to my knowledge, Mr. Speaker, I know one of the employees of that Machine Plant at the Octagon came to the dockyard and asked one of the mechanics there how you go about the operation to make the metal stick to the bearing. He did not know how to do it, and he, with a mess of spots of metal all over his pants, and he did not know how to make it stick to the bearing. Now this work, Mr. Speaker, is going from these firms. I do not know why. I do know this, much of the government's money, much of the people's money is invested in some of the firms on the Southside. Whether or not that has any bearing on why the bearings were put into the Octagon Plant for remetalling I don't know. It is possible nevertheless, Mr. Speaker, this Machine Plant, which in the first instance has no foundry could not melt a piece of cast iron, had no panel shop, no panel maker, no motor, they could not melt a piece of brass, they do not have a crucible to melt it in. In fact, all this plant is doing now is interfering with the small shops which had previously done all this work in this city. I know they are interfering with the work which formerly went to the dockyard. I am not saying this as an appeal for the Newfoundland Dockyard, but only as a fact, so much of the work formerly went to the dockyard now goes to the Machine Plant at the Octagon. I don't know whether the people concerned who have this work to be done are advised to send it there because of the fact that government money is invested in their business. I don't know whether it is true or not, it is possible. But in any case much of the work that is going to the Octagon comes back to the dockyard to be reprocessed and is returned to the Octagon to be machined. Now I know, Mr. Speaker, quite a number of the people employed in small machine shops in St. John's and have been personally associated with many of them; they are my friends, I worked with them this last thirty-five years, and I don't have to tell this House or divulge the name of any people who give me any information, because it would not be right. But, Mr. Speaker, I will say this now: That in July 1953, according to the Minister of Economic Development, the Machinery Plant at the Octagon should have had three hundred and fifteen workmen, they have about one hundred and forty. These three hundred and fifteen men would be working 63,024 hours a month at a wage rate of $61,763 per month.

Now, Mr. Speaker, this plant has failed in its purpose. It is very difficult, Mr. Speaker, to see how the plant can succeed, some orders are forthcoming from the Mainland so that they could set up a production schedule. But it is my opinion, as far as this Machinery Plant is concerned, the Government took a gamble and put the money in this plant with the idea in mind they were going to depend upon some Department of the Federal Government putting defence orders in this plant. That is the way I look at it. Now, they have not received any order whatsoever, as far as I know, from the Department of Defence, nor perhaps is it likely that they will receive any. But in any case, Mr. Speaker, all of this money which the Government has spent in the amount of roughly about eighteen million five hundred thousand dollars, and if at a conservative estimate one thousand people employed because it was spent, it would have cost the people of this Island eighteen thousand dollars for each person who possibly got permanent employment.

Now, one more thing, Mr. Speaker, when we passed a Bill in respect to new industries in this House in October 1951 and while that Bill was being passed we were very few here while that Bill was being passed in this House, Mr. Speaker. There were more people, more honourable members on the opposite side of this House reading the evening paper while we four or five were trying to do our best to find out how the people's money in this Island was being spent, disinterested, that is what you were, it was not water you were spending but money, hard earned money. I don't blame the Opposition, Mr. Speaker, for being curious about how they spent the money and with what reason. What reason did the Government have to believe these industries could succeed. There was no reason given in this House yet, Mr. Speaker, no reason by the Government. What reasons did they have? Why did they think these industries could succeed? Could they give us any reason? No reason at all, Mr. Speaker, except on the advice of a slimy politician from Europe. Now, if this Government is going to adopt the attitude that any slimy politician who can come in here and be employed by the Government, make his salary while employed and then gently get out and say good-bye, then I don't thank God that Dr. Valdmanis came here even if the Premier does so. He was no gift from Heaven to this Island. I say this much, Mr. Speaker, he made his pile and beat it and the Government are the suckers, and Mr. Speaker, by being advised by somebody who lived a very short time on this side of the water, by being advised by this person, I say the Government made a great mistake, Mr. Speaker, in spending the people's money not your own money. I only hope and trust there will be some lasting benefit accrue to the people of this land by the spending of their own money. It is nothing to be laughed off or sneered at. We are very few, we have been given very little information about the things which have been going on, and we want to know, and the people want to know, Mr. Speaker. Mr. Speaker, I support the amendment.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, in rising to support the motion of want of confidence from such a small band of, shall I say incompetents as we have been described by the Leader of the Government, and thinking of our audacity to imply a lack of confidence in the Government on the opposite side of the House; I have been thinking as the last speaker, the member for St. John's East has been speaking; just where and what cue would I take to justify myself for supporting a motion of want of confidence in the Government, the only Government we have ever had, according to some people, and the last speaker gave me the cue, and it was Valdmanis. Valdmanis, the man who in co-operation with the Government brought in these new industries about which we have been trying to get some information but consistently are being refused. Why do I say; there is the cue? Because, Sir, I am lead to think, convinced by events which have happened in the last few weeks, either the Premier of the country has lost confidence in Valdmanis, or Valdmanis has lost confidence in the Premier. There is a lack of confidence somewhere on the other side of the House. Therefore, we, Sir, are justified in moving a motion of want of confidence, particularly on account of these new industries.

Now, the last speaker, the member for St. John's East, has gone into the details very thoroughly on some of the industries, but it will be my duty to perhaps repeat some of the things which he has said. I will start with the North Star Cement Company Limited. We find that as of March 31, 1953 that that plant, that cement plant had cost the taxpayers so far four million six hundred and twenty-three thousand dollars. That was so of March 31, 1953, and I have to refer, as did my colleague to page 17 of the Auditor General's Report in which the Auditor General makes a comment $4,623,213, and says the repayment of this amount is secured by a first mortgage on the fixed assets of the Company. What Company? The North Star Cement Company, Sir, has as directors as of December 19, 1952, Joseph Smallwood, one share, Edward S. Spencer, one share, Leslie R. Curtis, one share, and the Minister of Economic Development, 996 shares.

These shares, Sir were later sold and allotted, but Donald holds on to his share.

MR. SPEAKER: Order—any more disturbance from the galleries and they will be cleared. Visitors must keep absolutely quiet.

MR. HOLLETT: Now, I have here a copy of the agreement, and if anyone can tell me, after I read it, who owns the plant; I would like to know.

"THE AGREEMENT made in St.
John's . . . BETWEEN Joseph R.
Smallwood, Minister of Economic Development" (I believe he had 997 shares) "acting for and on behalf of Her Majesty the Queen (hereinafter called the Government) of the one part AND North Star Cement Company . . . . (hereinafter called The Company) of the other part AND Canadian Machinery Holding Trust, a Company incorporated under the Laws of Switzerland of the third part . . . ."

There it is—the Minister of Economic Development, the Company and some mysterious Company in Switzerland.

"WHEREAS the Government owns the Cement Plant—" (that is a statement of Fact).

"NOW THIS AGREEMENT WIT-NESSETH—the Government will sell and the Company will buy—" (The Company is not the Holding Trust) "purchase price of said plant shall be the amount spent therefor by the Government."

The Government has advanced $400,000 for working capital. The Government sells to the Company and the Company consists of the Cabinet. They advance them $400,- 000 for working capital.

The Government sold to the North Star Cement Company this plant, but they sold their shares to the Holding Trust.

That is about all there is to it. They do not get anything; there is no consideration. They sold without consideration. It is signed "James A. Power." The Common Seal of the Company was affixed in accordance with the regulations; it is signed by J. R. Smallwood as Director and E. S. Spencer as Director. It is also signed by another name which is indecipherable. I defy anybody in this House to make out that name which is signed as Attorney for the Canadian Machinery Holding Trust.
Now, I would like for somebody to tell me the position with regard to the Cement Plant. We cannot get any information on it. We know it was sold to the North Star Cement Company who indeed owned it in the first place and operated it. The shares passed to the Holding Trust and what they are doing is anybody's guess. The people are not supposed to know anything about this deal in which they have four and three-quarter million dollars which was squeezed out of them in the days of Commission Government.

That is about all I wish to say about the Cement Plant. We shall be asking more questions on that. I do hope the Government will see fit to give us some information on this Holding Trust Company. We would like to know what happened. We would like to know if the North Star Cement Company has paid interest into the Government. They were definitely supposed to do it; but I see now that that has been deferred too. They are going to give them four years before they have to pay and if they want a little more time, they will probably get that too.

Now, the Birch Plant. That is operated by the Newfoundland Hardwoods Limited. We shall see who are the Newfoundland Hardwoods.
Nominal Capital $100,000. Directors: Chester E. Dawe (now in Florida sunning himself); Phyllis M. Dawe; Joseph R. Smallwood (I know him);
R. C. B. Mercer. 253 shares of $100 each. The shareholders of the Newfundland Hardwoods: Chester Dawe, 251 shares; Phyllis M. Dawe, 1 share and R. C. B. Mercer, 1 share. That is the Newfoundland Hardwoods.

Now the Auditor General's Report, Page 18, has this to say:

"BIRCH PLANT: $1,788,649—The Birch Plant is operated by the Newfundland Hardwoods Ltd.' (which is, in other words, Chester Dawe) "under a fifteen year lease, the consideration being an annual rent of one-half the net profits of each year's operations plus depreciation on buildings, plant and equipment. To date no revenue has been received from this source.
In addition to the cost of the plant, Government has made advances from time to time to the Company for working capital. Such advances, on which no interest has been paid, totalled $906,645 as of 31 March, 1953.
At that date the Company also had a bank loan of $150,000 which was guaranteed by the Government."

That was at the end of March, 1953; it has probably gone well over that now. I would say, without fear of contradiction that they have probably been advanced another $200,000 or $300,000 since that time. The Birch Plant was built by the Government out of the people's money. Yet, when I ask a question what do I get?
"We cannot give you the information."
They do not even say it as nicely as that. And in connection with that plant, something has happened which, to me, is very serious. The Birch Plant was, I always thought, the great hope of the Government industries. There was apparently lots of wood; lots of birch (so we were told); plenty of veneer wood and all sorts of wood. Yet, on the 23rd of the month, thirty-three men and women were laid off. When one of the radio stations approached the Manger, Baird, asking why these people were laid off they were told "there is no work." I have been told there is no wood. I am told that there was some political interference in Springdale over the cutting of birch. If any big factories costing nearly four million dollars are going to be interfered with by politicians, and the birch could not be cut on time, how can the Birch Plant win? There was no birch cut in Springdale until late in the Fall and then it was too late.
Sixty-three men and women (mostly men) laid off; told to go home; possibly there was no birch; while the man responsible suns himself in Florida. I presume he is in Florida—he may be in Montego Bay, but I imagine he would steer clear of that.

We have been charged here in this House with neglecting our duties.
We are told we come unprepared.
We have to be well prepared, we are told. Now, I wish every industry had been a success. Some would have been if there was any business ability on the other side of the House. I have here a list of Wage Rates and and hours of labour in Canada in 1952 on Plywood and Veneer, etc. I find Clipper Operators, general rate across Canada S1.12 an hour; rate here in Newfoundland, 85c. an hour.
Core Layer and Sheet Layer, 82c. in Newfoundland, across Canada, S1.53.
Dryer-operator, in Newfoundland, women—48c.; men 82c. across Can­ da—$1.00. Lathe Operators, across Canada, $1.91. We get 92c. (And yet, sixty-three employees are laid off. Is it any wonder there is lack of confidence? We, too, lost confidence in Dr. Valdmanis and a lot of people, a long time ago. Press Loader, 82c. in Newfoundland; $1.18 across Canada. Press Operator, 85c. in Newfoundland; $1.27 across Canada. Veneer Grader, 82-85c.; across Canada $1.17; British Columbia $1.55. (They have bigger trees out in British Columbia). Veneer Grader (women), in Newfoundland 48c.; across Canada $1.21; 65c. in Quebec; $1.48 in British Columbia. Veneer Patcher, women, in Newfoundland 50c.; across Canada $1.28.

When we look at the amount of money spent—the people's money, not the Government's—when we think that sixty-three people have been laid off—(there are only 80 left there)—at this time of the year; when we think the answer given is "no work;" when we look at these wages and compare them with those across Canada—is it any wonder why we brought in a motion of lack of confidence in the Government. I say that if we had done less, we would have been lax in our duty. Personally, I never had much confidence in the people on the other side. I do not dislike a man because he is not a business man; but I do not like a person who believes he is "it," that everything he touches will turn to gold. Unfortunately, that gold turns back into dross, and it looks like that will happen to the $4,700,000 which we put into this Birch Plant.

Now, the Gypsum Plant. My colleague has already referred to it. The prospectus for that was presented to us, with gold letters across the front, and it showed that on paper it would make a profit of $780,000 a year. And the Cement Plant was to make $800,000.00.

Before I leave the Birch Plant, I would like to say that in "Newfoundland Is On The March" (I believe we all heard of that), there is one reference to this Birch Plant.

"We have, as you know, established a very modern new industry on this birch. This new factory is now manufacturing veneer, plywood, flooring from birch. Shortly it will be manufacturing 2,000 flush-doors a week." I wish they would open some of the doors and let the people go back to work. That would be much better.

Now, the Atlantic Gypsum Limited. The directors as of February 9, 1952—(and I have no reason to suspect they have changed)—Messrs. Smallwood, Curtis, Spencer, Ballam, Valdmanis and Leja—they all have a share each. Page 18 of the Auditor General's Report has this to say:

"GYPSUM PLANT $2,599,008—The Gypsum Plant is operated by Atlantic Gypsum Ltd., a Crown corporation with a paid up capital of $100,000. In addition to the cost of the plant, advances for working capital totalling $400,000 have been made to the Company. No revenue has been received by the Government from the operations of the Company." I am tempted to ask what did they do with the revenue they made? Why have they not paid it to the Government? This was to turn in a revenue of $780,000 in each and every year of operation. This thing cost two million, nine hundred and ninety-nine and some odd dollars—three million dollars. I suspect it has gone well over that amount now.

That is the Gypsum Plant, Sir. I have some more information on that; but whether it is worth taking up the attention of the House, I do not know. I doubt it.

Now, there was a shipment of plasterboard, I believe, sent up to Montreal and we tried to get some information as to what happened to that but never, Sir, could we get anything at all about it except we know it cost about $946.00 to send it up there. Now, before I go on to the other industries, Sir, here is something else, in "Newfoundland on the March" and I believe we are all familiar with it. "My estimate of the total number of new jobs to be created by these new industries and mines is something between six and seven thousand people. That will be full-time employment and another fifteen hundred will get part time employment. I have no doubt such a volume of employment will result in another thousand people getting their living indirectly out of these industries. The total number of Newfoundlanders involved would thus run perhaps as high as 30,000. The annual wage bill should run to something around $10,000,000."

No wonder, Mr. Speaker, that we should move a vote of want of confidence. The various industries, these which I have mentioned and others I am about to mention cost this country anywhere from twenty to thirty million dollars. I cannot get any nearer than that to it and nobody else, and we are told we are to get all these jobs, yet we find people getting laid off practically every day.

These first three plants, Sir, to which I have referred, we are told that they were built by the Government on the advice of Dr. Valdmanis, "that great man without whom I would not want to be Premier." That great man, Sir, to whom we were to erect a monument out here in Bannerman Park. By the way I have seen some cement blocks out there now. I wonder if these are the ones we are to use to erect a monument to that man's departed spirit from Newfoundland.

MR. FOGWILL: Tombstones.

MR. HOLLETT: Oh tombstones? A new industry? As a matter of fact I have heard it said, Sir, that if Dr. Valdmanis resigned then the Honourable the Premier would resign. He has not yet passed in his resignation, Sir, to my knowledge. But Dr. Valdmanis has gone, and I think we shall not see him again, according to the Premier, unless he comes back on personal business. Yet three days later he is back here sitting in on a conference with a certain company.

I was going to say something about the Canadian Machinery and Industries, Sir, but I think I will leave that as I go along and turn to page 109 and 110 of the Auditor General's Report. There is something there which I think is very important for the people of this country to know, but we will come to that later, Sir.

Now I have already mentioned the three industries and I want to run through the others quickly just to give the House an idea, and I am quite sure that some members on the opposite side have no idea at all as to how many new industries there are. I have touched on Newfoundland Hardwoods and on the North Star Cement, and now I come to the latest one formed up, the "Eckhardt Mills Limited," share subscribers, Alfonso Eckhardt, Fred Peck of St. John's, he must be a Newfoundlander, yes he is a caretaker. Witnesses Florence Noftall and Marjorie Dawe. Do you notice that "Dawe" name, Mr. Speaker, it will occur quite often as I go through these.

I mentioned the Atlantic Gypsum already, Sir. Newfoundland Tanneries, William Dorn; share capital three hundred thousand dollars. I note that Donald Dawe has one share. But I think he has lost it. They have transferred it. Atlantic Gloves, Limited—That is a beaut; share capital two hundred thousand dollars. Gazelle skins, Sir, I can smell them now. They come from the heart of Africa and are to be brought here to manufacture 114,000 pairs of those gloves so they can pay off all the loan. It will employ fifty, sixty to one hundred people and make a profit from the 114,000 pairs of gazelle skin gloves.

Sir, a gazelle is just an ordinary buck that is almost like our caribou. But it is a long way away from here. It is a raw material which has to be brought in here. The director of Atlantic Gloves Limited comes from Hamelin where the Pied Piper came from.

Canadian Leather Goods Limited—Koch—he gives his address as Harbour Grace. I am sure he is not a Harbour Grace man, and Donald Dawe, I think he is a St. John's man. The deeds contain an agreement between Koch and Canadian Leather Goods Limited where Koch sells for forty-five thousand dollars and Koch, Shaffer and Dawe have one share each. We have "Koch Shoes" I suppose it is the same "Koch"—Share capital $1,000,000—Directors as of August 24, 1953—Koch, Donald Dawe, Marguerite Dawe, registered office, Curtis and Dawe. Koch gives his address as Buenos Aires, Argentina.

-Hanning Electric—Solicitors Curtis and Dawe.

Canadian Machinery and Industrial Construction—Two million five hundred thousand dollars. There is something wrong there, two million five hundred thousand dollars, because I saw in the Auditor General's Report last night as I went through it, it is listed there as two million five hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars. One of us asked a question as to why this extra twenty-five thousand dollars was paid out. Perhaps the Honourable Minister could answer that question now? We shall ask it, Sir, but of course the Government will reserve the right not to tell us anything, at least I suppose it is a right.

Under agreement dated October 10, 1952, CMIC transferred twenty thousand shares to Canadian Machinery Holding Trust Company, a mythical company, Sir, incorporated under the laws of Switzerland for machinery received and valued at two million dollars. I made the strictest inquiry, thorough inquiry at the Registrar of Deeds and Companies, and they have no knowledge whatsoever of this company. They don't know who they are, or nothing at all about them. Yet they have this deed there registered by the Canadian Machinery Holding Trust, transferring twenty thousand shares to them, in a company in which we have invested two million five hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars.

*Could we ask a question, I wonder, Mr. Speaker, as to the identity of Donald Dawe? I take it that would be answered. We shall ask it. Canadian Machinery Company, Switzerland, 30,000 shares. In other words this is the story: There is a mysterious company not registered in Canada and a search reveals no particulars whatsoever of the personnel of the company, the significance of the trust company, and the signature at the Registrar of Deeds Office is indecipherable. Can you imagine any official contracting a deed like that where even the registrar himself could not decipher the name of the man, nor the address. The whole picture is there. The government made an agreement with these people to send in machinery and said, we will give you two million five hundred thousand dollars to go ahead. They did that and got in the hole. Then the Canadian Machinery Holding Trust, exactly the same fellow, takes the twenty-five thousand dollars shares as security against the machinery they perhaps sent over.

Then we have Canadian Hardboards Industries Limited and Atlantic Hardboard Industries, United Cotton Mills, two million dollars of the people's money up here in St. John's West. I know all about it. Dawe has one share there also. He is always there in every one of them. Solicitors Curtis and Dawe.

Atlantic Films and Electronics Limited, we have a question going on the Order Paper about that. I don't suppose we will be told about it. We know the government advanced them some of the people's money and we know the directors of the company as of Sept. 24, 1953. Dawe is there again, I noticed there is a bit of Newfoundland there.

Terra Nova Textiles, the latest one, capitalized at one hundred thousand dollars.

Now, as far as I can find out, Mr. Speaker, these are the new industries introduced by the Government. These are the new industries into which have gone anywhere from twenty to thirty million to forty million dollars of the people's money, squeezed out of the people's sweat and blood away back from 1942 to 1949, I suppose or from 1944 to 1949, that is when all that money came in, forty-six million dollars. Yes, well over half of it has gone out to these companies. Yet when we, the people's representatives, ask the government to give us some information about these and ask questions, in our opinion legitimate questions, since we ourselves are the shareholders in the birch, gypsum and cotton mills just as big and bigger than any German, Latvian, Swiss or anybody else. Yes, we are shareholders, and we are the directors because the government are the directors, yet they can't tell us because it is not in the public interest; not in the best interest of the public to know what happened to public money. Did you ever hear the like?

Sir, I will make some remarks about the Atlantic Optical Company. That is Sennewald, but I won't go into the story.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Do — Yes— Tell us.
MR. HOLLETT: Would you like to hear it. I will tell it.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Don't miss anything.

MR. HOLLETT: That man, Mr. Speaker, Dr. Sennewald came out here and he wanted —

MR. SMALLWOOD: Who brought him out and paid his way? Mr. Gordon Higgins, and paid him a thousand dollars.

MR. HOLLETT: You can't put me off that way. I am going to tell the rest of it now. We all remember the trip the Honourable the Premier and the Honourable the Attorney General made. I think it was to Hamelin. It is a pity the Pier Piper was not there. They went over and advertised this promised land of Newfoundland with all sorts of opportunities for industries. Germans, Austrians, any kind of industrialists to come out here and out comes Dr. Sennewald. But you know, Mr. Speaker, Dr. Valdmanis did not like Dr. Sennewald. Dr. Valdmanis would have nothing to do with Dr. Sennewald. Doctors are jealous, I suppose, of each other. He told him to go back and he went back. I believe he paid his expenses to get him out of the country. He went back to Germany. Anyway he then said in the newspapers about the rumpus going on in Newfoundland between Mr. Gordon Higgins and the Honourable the Premier. At that time he heard all about it, and he said to himself: "This is a chance for me to make a quick dollar." I can try to tell the truth as much as I can. He immediately wired or cabled Gordon Higgins that he could come out and give certain information. Do you know the information he said he would give? He said that if Gordon Higgins had the information which he, Sennewald, would give, then certain Germans who were carrying on here, who were getting money from the Government to build new industries would be kicked to blazes out of the country, as quick as a flash of lightning. That is the information, not in so many words, he gave to Gordon Higgins. He, being a politician, thought if there is information over there the people should know, if these Germans and foreigners were coming into this country were as this fellow said, then it would be as well to get him out here, and he paid his passage. A great laugh — And the Honourable the Premier, Sir, heard all about it, he was coming out — and who did they get to do the job? Who did they go to? A man, Sir, who I believe is the chief in two or three industries for which this country, this government, have paid out hundreds of thousands of dollars — Max Braun Wogan — said Valdmanis; "This is the boy to do the job." Called him up and said to him: "Get out to Gander, and in the name of the "Lord" get hold of that fellow Sennewald, put a stop to it." And he went out and literally put a gun to his head and said: "Don't do it! It won't be good for you to do it! We will do everything the Premier promised — if he said he will give you two hundred and fifty thousand to start an eye-glass factory." Sir, that is what happened. He held him off, brought him in and barred him in a room in the hotel and took him on Signal Hill to talk, the place where previously the wireless was started, but he was not afraid of that, and he took him up there and finally persuaded that poor, little, innocent Dr. Sennewald — May I inject here, Sir, that man is at the present time interning at the General Hospital, and where do you think he goes but into the Veterans' Ward. I would not say here what has been told me by one or two of the veterans whom he came to see. I have advised all veterans to tolerate him as long as they can. This Dr. Sennewald is now interning there—But I am ahead of my story—He got two hundred and fifty thousand dollars, Sir. At least the government voted it to him to build an eyeglass factory and make sure everything would go all right, already paid Al Vardy, I believe, and his associates a good many thousand dollars, a hundred thousand dollars for a building up in the West End and was going to put this fellow, Sennewald in the top flat. He came and did not like it very much and did not see much chance to make eyeglass frames so he got cold feet and went back and forth and back and forth and back and forth between Newfoundland and Germany trying to get machinery out here. Finally he got some out here, but he gave it up. Of course he could not do it. I see now the government advanced him one hundred and ten thousand two hundred and ninety-three dollars and fourteen cents of which now he has paid back one hundred and five thousand dollars. I am going to ask the government now what happened to the other five thousand dollars? Is he going to pay it back to us or is he not? He is now an interne down at the General Hospital. Sir, if we could only be living twenty years hence when the history of this government on the opposite side is written and understood by the people—it is not going to take twenty years though.

MR. SMALLWOOD: We have nineteen years to go.

MR. HOLLETT: I think it has only about eighteen months to go. I was talking about Sennewald, but I think I will leave him now.

MR. SMALLWOOD: No—let us hear more Sennewald—do.

MR. HOLLETT: I can tell you more. If you like hearing about Sennewald we will go along. We are wondering about that $5,290.14.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, you get after that.

MR. HOLLETT: Sure will.

There are one or two other little things I have to mention if I may—Page 19 of the Auditor General's Report regarding security for cash loans and guarantees on bank loans in the Auditor General's Report, March 31, 1954—Agreements relating to loans listed under the heading Economic Development and under the heading of Guaranteed Bank Loans requiring that assets of the companies concerned be insured and that any loss under such policy or policies of such insurance be made payable to the Government. The Auditor General says: I have to state that in a number of cases the insurance coverage in effect is substantially less than the cash loans on or the bank guarantees as the case may be. All such cases as have come to my notice have been brought to the attention of the department concerned.

Mr. Speaker, we asked a question on that point last year. All we got in reply was about half an answer. Now, we find the Auditor General has drawn it to the attention of the various departments concerned. Everyone is supposed to be insured to cover the amount of the mortgage, but they are not insured in that amount. I go on to page 21 of the same Auditor General's Report, and I know that my colleague has read it, but it is so important that I want to read it again.

"Interest on Loans, $195,899. Since 31 March, 1953 Executive Council have ordered, subject to ratification by the Legislature, that agreements made with the operators of industrial plants, to whom Government loans have been made, be amended to provide that: (This is from the Auditor General's Report) "(1) payment of interest on such loans be deferred for the first two years from the date of commencement of construction; (2) any interest paid by the operators be refunded, and (3) amortization of the loans start four years from the date of commencement of construction instead of two years."

In other words according to agreements passed by this House they would start to amortize the loans at the end of two years, and the Executive Council, without leave or license of the Government, go to work and say increase that, after passing it here they could not wait to bring an amendment in here. Remember Mr. Speaker, I did ask questions about the interest last year, and the Government told me, and they have gone to work now and paid that back to these people—then they expect us to have confidence in this Government with regard to these industries. You know, Mr. Speaker, I am afraid our people are blind to what is going on and they have reason to be. I recently picked up a magazine issued by the Board of Trade here in St. John’s and I came across a description of the various new industries. It was authoritatively the verdict of the Board of Trade of St. John’s and it went down to list one by one of all the new industries which I have listed. And Mr. Speaker, if you can find where they say any reasons to doubt one hundred per cent success in each of these new industries then you are able to find things much better than I. Everyone was described by the Board of Trade as a going concern, a paying proposition, and great praise was given to the Government for what they have done—that was the Board of Trade—I was shocked. They put it in that magazine; they put it in the Board of Trade Journal as facts. The Birch Plant is 100%; same thing with the Gypsum Plant and the others. Their magazine not only goes across this country, but every country in America. Of course, the Board of Trade is all right. It is okay. I take it that the Government and the Board of Trade are like “that” (placing two fingers together). They love each other. Vote of confidence! Anyone who takes the trouble to look at these things—it would break your heart. I wish everyone of them would succeed.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Sure you do—always did.

MR. HOLLETT: I always did. William Dorn manufactured one coat and gave it to the Premier. No wonder the Premier would say Wm. Dorn was okay.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Is that an honourable thing to say? For the sake of honour, take it back.

MR. HOLLETT: When the people get to know the facts—and please God they will. I wish we could inject some common sense with regard to new industries into the individuals who are trying to run them.

The Birch Plant cost three million dollars; 63 people are now walking around—laid off; the others are underpaid. Some had to leave it; others were told to get out. The Birch Plant was one of the places where they were looking for a 5c. increase. They got it from the Conciliation Board set up by the Government. But when they came to the Premier, the Premier said "No." He said "we cannot afford it."

MR. SMALLWOOD: It is true.

MR. HOLLETT: You ought to be ashamed of it. As my colleague has said, the railway is laying off men—men who used to do the work now being done by the Machine Plant. The Cotton Textiles and Terra Nova Textiles are taking the place of the White Clothing Company and the Newfoundland Clothing Company.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Is not that a good thing?

MR. HOLLETT: No. If you had helped these industries instead of crying "shame!" they might have done better. I believe the Newfoundland industrialists have calibre equal to any part of Europe.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Bring in a flag so that it can be waved.

MR. HOLLETT: We will wave flags, if you will follow them. We honour and respect the Flag, and for that some of us got pretty harsh treatment from some of these who are now the "babies" of the honourable gentlemen on the other side. But that does not make us love them any more.

MR. SPEAKER: Could you get back to the subject of the new industries?

MR. HOLLETT: I was speaking of foreigners and the new industries. I have been called a "traitor" in this House. I have been called a "skunk" on the subject of new industries. I hope they will succeed every one of them. I am anxious that they do succeed, but with all the mollycoddling they are getting, I do not see how they can. The cost of the Birch Plant has gone up and up. They come to the Premier and say "we want $200,000," "we want another $250,000" running expenses; so that from one million it has gone up to three million or more. And now people are laid off and they expect us to have confidence. I hope they can keep going until the honourable gentleman on the opposite side sees fit to adjourn this House and call an Election, which will not be long. We have no confidence with the management of the new industries—no confidence in the way in which they have been handled by the present administration. If they could give us the facts to create in us confidence—but they refuse to give us the information—they refuse to tell us anything about the new industries. The only thing they give us is what is already public knowledge. Valdmanis was getting $25,000 a year when this industry was begun; that was small stuff for him. I do not know whether the Honourable the Premier fired the man who concocted the new industries or whether the shoe was on the other foot. Definitely we are going to know.

I support every word spoken by my colleague. It is not much for the Government to do—give the people of Newfoundland the facts; it is just as well to give the facts now, not prolong the agony. There is nothing like the truth. Suspicions will make us all—and not only us—turn against the Government, but will make the people of the country turn against them. Give us the facts and let the devil take the hindmost. They promised the Government to do a job and they are not doing it. Some of the industries must pay off. There is very little sense in bringing in industries which will sink beneath the surface the industries already established here, unless the ones coming in can pay higher wages. We see labour discontent and unrest in the Government instigated new industries.

I heartily support and second the Motion for Want of Confidence in the way the new industries have been handled by the Government.

MR. SPEAKER: Is the House ready for the question?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I would like to close the debate with a few remarks. Most of the things I wish to say, I intend to say them in the debate on the motion. I want to say now one or two things about the Birch Plant. In my view and in the view of my colleagues, the Birch Plant is certainly one of the most promising of all the new industries. It is one of the most natural of the new industries, because the raw material is found within the Province in great supply and high-grade quality.

At the moment, the Birch Plant is practically prostrate, as also is every plant of that kind on the North American Continent at this moment—every plant of that kind—every veneer and plywood plant in North America—all across Canada—all across the United States—all across Mexico and Central Canada—the entire industry is virtually prostrate. That is a fact. This Government did not bring that fact about. It is virtually impossible today to sell veneer or plywood anywhere across Canada or in the United States. It has become a complete drug on the market. Doubtless when it recovers, as it will, it will again be a drug on the market. It has happened before, but it has always recovered. This condition, then, is reflected at the plant at Donovans. Anyone is at liberty to check that statement—they can check with or communicate with plywood manufacturers, St. Therese, Quebec; the manufacturer at MacMillan, B.C. They can ask the Board of Trade for the names of plywood manufacturers or they can write the Department of Trade & Commerce of Canada, or the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, or Canadian Manufacturers Association, Toronto. The plywood and veneer industries are in a worse condition than they have ever been in history. As I say, that condition is reflected in the plant at Donovans. I hope there is no jubilation over that on the other side of the House. I hope no one is glad that sixty odd Newfoundlanders have been laid off. I hope no one is glad of that. No one on this side of the House is glad of that.

An attempt has been made to justify lack of confidence in the present administration. It was made in the abysmal ignorance of the fact that the industry is in a perilous condition.

MR. HOLLETT: For how long?

MR. SMALLWOOD: It has been so for months—it began last Fall. I have unshakable faith in that Birch industry. The Birch Plant is the best there is. We have one of the last great reserves of birch timber in the New World. Here in Newfoundland and on Labrador we have great reserves of timber; we have proved that. It cost money to prove it, but now we know.
We have a thoroughly modern, thoroughly efficient, high-class management within the walls of the mill. We had come to the point where we were breaking even—getting out of the red. We had come to that, when, unfortunately, this happened. It is the sort of thing that happens and which you learn to expect in these industries; namely, that its progress is never even—it is now up; now down; now back; sometimes holding its own, marking time. But it will come back. It will succeed. If it takes a million to do it, we will find it and spend it and make a success of the plant.

I will not go into the one hundred and one mis-statements made by the honourable members of the Opposition.

MR. HOLLETT: Unless the Premier intends to tabulate the mis-statements or falsifications or whatever they are, he should not refer to them.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I did not say lies or falsifications.

MR. SPEAKER: A mis-statement does not mean a deliberate attempt to falsify; it might be made with the best of intentions.

MR. SMALLWOOD: A misinterpretation of fact. The Leader of the Opposition and his colleagues made statements which, if I wished to take the time, I could blow to smithereens. But I do not think the public are interested. I think, after all, it is what they expect from the Opposition. They do not expect us to take up every little misinterpretation and answer it; because my policy since I have been in office is to answer one in one hundred mis-statements made. I see them appear daily, every day of the week, in both newspapers. I hear them daily on radio stations and in this House. I will not try to answer them. After all, your friends do not need it and your enemies will not believe it.

Here is one from his colleague when he says that approximately 18½ millions were spent on each industry—he called it “approximately 20 millions,” to be generous, to be optimistic, to be conservative. Of course his colleague has always had a bitter hatred of me.

MR. FOGWILL: I have never expressed any hatred for the Premier of this Province.

MR. SPEAKER: No Mr. Speaker in this world has powers as omniscient as to say if a person loves anybody or hates anybody.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I apologize to you and to my honourable friend and to the House; and I do it generously, and I expect to be quoted as I have often been, as having been ordered to do so. I do not expect the newspapers to have any influence on the public of Newfoundland. It does not matter what they print. In my district not one hundred families see both of the newspapers put together. CJON is a fine, decent radio station; so is VOCM. It is in the newspapers that the malicious mis-quoting is done, and I do not have to jump thirty feet to reach those who are doing it. I know who they are. I will not waste any more time of the House. Every word I have said was wasted; let them go ahead and say it. And now let us have the vote and vote down this silly amendment, this silly stupid amendment. Let us push it aside.

MR. BROWNE: I suggest the Premier has no right to use the terms “silly” and “stupid” here; there is nothing to justify it.
MR. SMALLWOOD: I did not call the Opposition "silly" and "stupid;" I merely said the amendment was stupid and silly. They moved the amendment and we discussed it. If the use of these words hurt their feelings, if I ought not to use them, then I will withdraw them. It is not silly and stupid. Let us push it to one side. Let us have the vote on it and give it the treatment it deserves. That being done, let us get down to the people's business.

MR. SPEAKER: Will the honourable members supporting the amendment please stand.

Messrs. Hollett, Browne, Fogwill and Higgins.

Against the amendment:
Hon. the Premier, Attorney General, Minister of Public Works, Minister of Finance, Minister of Public Welfare, Fisheries and Co-operatives, Minister of Health, Minister of Provincial Affairs, Minister of Labour, Minister of Municipal Affairs and Supply, Minister of Mines and Resources; Messrs. Courage, Morgan, Button, Janes, Brown, and Norman.

Supporting the amendment—4.

Against the amendment—18.

The amendment is defeated.

MR. SMALLWOOD: With your indulgence and that of the whole House, could we call it a half minute to 6 o'clock and dispose of the Order Paper in that form? Would you call No 1 and we can dispose of that in a moment?

MR. SPEAKER: That item is called now. If time remains, we will move to the debate on the Address in Reply.

MR. HIGGINS: I move the adjournment of the debate.

The House then adjourned until tomorrow, Wednesday, March 31st at 3:00 of the clock.

The House then adjourned accordingly.

WEDNESDAY, March 31, 1954.

The House met at 3:00 of the clock in the afternoon, pursuant to adjournment.

HON. J. R. SMALLWOOD (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, this is the fifth anniversary of the greatest single blessing under God that ever came to Newfoundland. It is the fifth anniversary of Confederation! I am aware of the fact that there are still a few people in Newfoundland who have never become reconciled to Confederation and never will; and as I would not wish to mar the happiness of this anniversary, I shall not claim that Confederation has been a complete success for all our people; I think, though, that an overwhelming majority of the Newfoundland people bless the day that their country became a Province of Canada.

I thank God that I was privileged to play a part in bringing Confederation about. I thank God that I am privileged today, in this House, to rejoice in this fifth anniversary. I thank God that the blessings of Confederation have come to our people.

The thousands who favoured Confederation and voted for it have the satisfaction of having fought for a great and good cause. The thousands who did not favour it and voted against it, have the satisfaction of having opposed Confederation in sincerity and honesty of purpose.
Most of the tiny band of us who launched and led that great movement—that greatest, that most idealistic movement in Newfoundland's history, are still together. One or two have gone to their final rest. One or two have deserted our ranks. The rest of us offer thanks to Heaven that we were privileged to play so great a part in our country's destiny; that we still have life; that we still have respect and friendship for each other.

I pray that as a Province of Canada we shall continue to go forward as we have done this five years past and that our people will go on from triumph to triumph.

Presenting Petitions

MR. COURAGE: I ask leave to present a Petition from the people of Bay D'Espoir for a road connecting Bay D'Espoir with the Trans-Canada Highway. Approximately six thousand people live in this area and feel that the road is an absolute necessity. The construction of such a road, too, will greatly develop tourist trade; aid transportation to hospital, and to one of the finest salmon rivers and big game areas.

This petition is signed by some 1,500 residents of Bay D'Espoir and I have much pleasure in recommending it to the House. I may say, that coupled with this Petition for a road connecting Bay D'Espoir to the Trans-Canada Highway, there is need for a road around Bay D'Espoir itself. That is being attended to little by little. I am this year asking the Department of Public Works for two bridges for the Bay D'Espoir area. Bay D'Espoir is one of the richest and most beautiful areas in Newfoundland, it is a tourist's delight and it is a district which, one of these days, will come into its own as one of the beauty spots of the Province. If we are to develop tourist trade, there must be a road connecting Bay D'Espoir. There is also an argument in the fact that in the valley back of the bay there is a great deal of land which, to my mind, would be suitable for farming and fruit raising. It might surprise honourable members to know that I brought back quite a number of large apples. I know it was a great surprise to the Minister of Mines & Resources. Those apples were much larger than tea cups and as for taste, they were comparable to the best Nova Scotia apples.

I have much pleasure in supporting this Petition and in asking that it be laid on the Table of the House and referred to the Department concerned.

Moved and seconded that this Petition be received and referred to the Department concerned.

Carried.

MR. DROVER: I beg leave to present a Petition from the residents of Raleigh, Ship Cove and Whiteway asking for a branch of road going from St. Anthony to Cooks Harbour. This branch of road is less than a mile long and will be of great service, particularly to the people of Cooks Harbour and Raleigh; it will be of great assistance in getting people to hospital and will eliminate much suffering and hardship. This branch road would be of great assistance also to those who are smelt fishing and salmon fishing. We feel also it would encourage tourists to come there to trout and fish.

The Petition is signed by 150 voters from Raleigh and Ship Cove. It is understood by me that the road that was planned to go from St. Anthony to Cooks Harbour would go by way of Pistolet Bay. Apparently this is not so.

I wish also to say in support of this Petition that the cold storage at St. Anthony plans to take this year, 1954, 150,000 pounds of smelt from Pistolet Bay. That will mean that approximately $25,000 will go into the pockets of the people in the area. Already Mr. Ashbourne the Federal member, has begun negotiations to see if it is possible to have a wharf built to take care of the needs of the fishermen.

I have much pleasure in supporting this Petition and respectfully request that it be laid on the Table of the House and referred to the Department concerned.

HON. E. S. SPENCER (Minister of Public Works): I rise to briefly state that I support the prayer of the Petitioner.

It has been my privilege to fish in the area to which the honourable member refers and I know the road leading from St. Anthony towards Cooks Harbour around Pistolet Bay in a "U" form. As has been the practice of the Department, and the policy of the Government, wherever a main road is put through, we always aim where reasonably possible, to connect spear roads to communities through which the road passes. The prayer of the Petitioner requests that this be done there.

I support the Prayer and have a fair knowledge of the good which can come from such a road, the assistance it will be to the fishermen and to those visiting the hospital at St. Anthony.

Moved and seconded that this Petition be laid on the Table of the House and referred to the Department concerned.

Carried.

At 3:20 p.m. His Honour the Lieutenant Governor arrived.

MR. SPEAKER: Your Honour, it is my agreeable duty on behalf of Her Majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects, her faithful Commons of Newfoundland, to present to Your Honour a Bill for the appropriation of supply granted in the present session and to request your Honour's assent thereto.

"An Act for Granting to Her Majesty Certain Sums of Money for Defraying certain Expenses of the Public Service for the Financial Year ending the Thirty-first Day of March, One Thousand Nine Hundred and Fifty-five and for other Purposes Relating to the Public Service."

HIS HONOUR THE LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR: In Her Majesty's name, I thank Her loyal subjects and I accept their benevolence; and assent to this Bill.

His Honour the Lieutenant Governor leaves the Chamber.

HON. C. H. BALLAM (Minister of Labour): I beg leave to lay on the Table of the House a Petition from the residents of Howley, praying that a road be built to connect that town with either Deer Lake or the main highway going through to the north of that town.

Deer Lake, as you know, is a town of some one thousand people. It is in the heart of the country, south and east of the Humber River and the main highway going along thereby.

Howley is a lumbering centre, as most of its people engage in pulpwood business and in lumbering of other kinds, chiefly for Bowaters and in some cases they conduct private businesses of their own. Deer Lake is some ten or twelve miles away, but it is separated from Howley by the main dam at the foot of Grand Lake and Grand Brook, which would present a very difficult proposition in getting a road through by that route. There is another alternative route to the north, joining up with the main highway, by way of a narrow neck of land and water over which a bridge is built at the foot of Grand Lake.

The people of Howley have no resident doctor and no Nursing Station, and in the case of illness very great difficulty is had by the people there in getting the sick to hospital for medical aid. It has only one piece of railway, and they do not have a train every day.

In connecting up Howley with the main road, you would be opening up some good country, a country that would lend itself not only to good woods operations but also to a good tourist centre. There are many rivers at the foot of Grand Lake. There are many farms in the area also and it is one of the best game countries in the Province.

I certainly support this Petition to the utmost and I would ask leave to lay it on the Table of the House for the consideration of the Department concerned.

Moved and seconded that this Petition be laid on the Table of the House and referred to the Department concerned.

Carried.

into Agriculture and repairs to the breakwater at Sandy Point, St. George's, the total costs of which new services are estimated at Fifty-seven thousand dollars ($57,000).

Dated at St. John's, Newfoundland, this 26th day of June, 1953.

Minister of Finance and Chairman of the Treasury Board (Sgd.) W. M. MARSHALL.

Under the terms of Section 37 (2) (b) of the Revenue and Audit Act, 1951, I, F. W. Rowe, Minister of Mines and Resources, do give it as my opinion that the grounds for making issue of up to $50,000 in respect of the costs of the Commission of Inquiry relating to Agriculture, are urgent.

The basis for this opinion is that it is essential to press forward, with all possible speed, the work of the Commission so that the Government may be enabled to formulate an Agricultural Policy for the Province as a whole.

Dated at St. John's, Newfoundland, this 26th day of June, 1953.

(Sgd.) F. W. ROWE,
Minister of Mines and Resources. (Sgd.) W. M. MARSHALL.

Under the terms of Section 37 (2) (b) of the Revenue and Audit Act, 1951, I, E. S. Spencer, Minister of Public Works, do give it as my opinion that the grounds for mailing issues of up to $7,000 to cover the cost of making essential repairs to the breakwater at Sandy Point, St. George's, are urgent.

The basis for this opinion is that it is essential that storm damage be repaired as early as possible lest future gales further damage and eventually completely demolish the structure to the grave damage of the inhabitants of the area.

Under the provisions of Section 37 (2) (a) and (b) of the Revenue and Audit Act, 1951, I, S. J. Under the terms of Section 37 (2) (b) of the Revenue and Audit Act, 1951, I, W. J. Keough, Minister of Fisheries and Co-operatives, do give it as my opinion that it is urgent that a provision of $150,000 be made for the recently established Fisheries Development Authority and $5,000 to enable fishermen to replace the lobster gear lost by them through storm damage during the present calendar year.

The basis for this opinion is that it is in the public interest to press forward, with all possible speed, with Government plans for the encouragement of the fishing industry and that, if these provisions are not made immediately, the resulting delays and obstacles will severely retard progress.

(Sgd) W. M. Marshall.

Under the terms of Section 37 (2) (b) of the Revenue and Audit Act, 1951, I, Myles P. Murray, Attorney General (Acting) do give it as my opinion that it is urgent that a provision of $25,000 be made to cover the erection of a Warden's dwelling at the Salmonier Prison Camp.

The basis for this opinion is that the accommodation facilities presently provided for Wardens at the Camp are most inadequate in view of the fact that, due to their schedule of duties, they are required to be in attendance continuously for long periods. It is considered essential and in the interests of the Crown, therefore, to proceed immediately with the erection of a dwelling which will ensure satisfactory board and lodging facilities for them during their periods of duty.

(b) Recent enforcement measures have resulted in the payment of a substantial number of arrears of assessment.

HON. E. S. SPENCER (Minister of Public Works): Question No. 8, Mr.
Speaker, these answers are, I understand, being typed today and it is hoped we will have them for the next sitting of the Assembly. That applies also to all other questions directed to me.

MR. POWER: The answer to question No. 10 is in course of preparation.

DR. H. L. POTTLLE (Minister of Public Welfare): Mr. Speaker, the answers to question No. 12 are being prepared. I think I should add that the records of the Department of Public Welfare are not in this respect as a rule set up to give information with regard to electoral districts. But I may say for the information of the Honourable Leader of the Opposition that the answers being prepared are being adapted as far as possible to the form of the question asked.

HON. W. J. KEOUGH (Minister of Fisheries and Co-operatives): Mr.
Speaker, I will be in a position to supply the answer to question No. 13 tomorrow.

MR. SPENCER: The answer to question No. 15 is in course of preparation.

HON. P. S. FORSEY (Minister of Health): The answer to question
No. 18 and to all questions, Mr.
Speaker, directed to the Department of Health are being typed today.

MR. SPENCER: The answer to question No. 19 is in course of preparation.

MR. POWER: The answer to question No. 20 is in course of preparation.
Question No. 24:
MR. POWER: Mr. Speaker, that question should be directed to the Honourable Minister of Economic Development. (Answer in course of preparation).

Question No. 25—In course of preparation.

Question No. 26—In course of preparation.

Question No. 27—In course of preparation.

MR. SPEAKER: With reference to Question No. 26, sub-section No. 6 in its present form is out of order in that it asks for an expression of ministerial opinion. However, Mr. Speaker does have the authority to amend the question under certain circumstances, so that I do then strike out the words "The Minister's Opinion." The Honourable Minister is then at liberty to answer or not as he sees fit.

Orders of the Day

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, we could go on with items No. 3 to No. 10.

First Readings:
A Bill "An Act Further to Amend the Newfoundland Corporation Income Tax Act, 1949."

On motion read a first time, ordered read a second time on tomorrow.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the Minister in all these cases could give a brief statement as to the purpose of this legislation so that we can have some idea of what they are about before the second reading?

MR. SMALLWOOD: In reply to that it is not the custom, and I don't propose to suggest it become one.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, I think the Opposition deserves a little more consideration. The Premier jumps up and answers any question asked the opposite side of the House.

MR. SMALLWOOD: To a point of order.

MR. BROWNE: I am speaking to a point of order too.

MR. SPEAKER: The honourable gentleman did not so preface his remarks.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, my point of order is that the honourable gentleman is out of order in debating the matter now. This is not the time for a debate on that matter. The honourable gentleman is out of order for that reason.

MR. BROWNE: Surely, Mr. Speaker, I can debate the point of order the Premier has raised? We are given notice here now of a certain amount of legislation and the Premier is asking the consent of the House to change the Orders of the Day. He got up here a few moments ago and said he would like to go on with No. 3 to No. 10 and then came back to No. 1—If we did not agree to that he could not do it.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The honourable gentleman cannot disagree.

MR. BROWNE: I have made a reasonable request, that an explanation be given by the Minister concerned of the Bills introduced—just stating the purpose of the measure—Is not that a reasonable request? How are we going to study these matters and be prepared for second reading?
coming up tomorrow if we are not given some indication as to what the legislation now to be introduced is about?

MR. SPEAKER: These questions can be very easily answered from the Chair. I do feel constrained to suggest the practice of that great virtue, patience, on the part of honourable members. The Orders of the Day were entered upon and it is the right of the Leader of the House to call government business in the order in which the Government prefers to take it up. True, today is Wednesday—but as we have no private members' business on the Order Paper, government business then takes precedence for the simple reason that there is no other business. Were there any private members' business on the Order Paper then that would be called first.

Now as to first readings: While it is true that at first reading Honourable Ministers may make statements as to what the legislation proposed to do, it is not very often done, and has not been the practice in this House to do so at all. The Minister can do little more than state the title of the Bill. On the order for second reading the Minister introducing the Bill explains its purpose at some length and debate follows thereon. But whenever the honourable members on my right ask for a postponement of the debate in order to study the Bill I shall always entertain that motion for the reason that we do not have the machinery in this House to provide all members with the Bill days beforehand. I may say that honourable members on my left have always been prepared to grant such extensions and when honourable members on my right ask for a postponement honourable members on my left are always willing to grant it.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, may I ask then another question—Is this Bill a money Bill?

HON. L. R. CURTIS (Attorney General): I think my honourable friend is referring to the Bill, “An Act Further to Amend the Newfoundland Corporation Income Tax Act, 1949.” I presume it could be a money Bill more or less. But it loses that character to us, Mr. Speaker, because it is an amount we do not collect ourselves. I think I can give my honourable friends a full explanation on that tomorrow.

MR. BROWNE: It is only that I think it should be introduced by way of resolution.

MR. CURTIS: It is not a money Bill in that respect. It does not impose a tax but amends a Bill in some details, and therefore, I don’t think it is strictly a money Bill, inasmuch as it only provides for the method of collection and does not change the rate.

MR. SPEAKER: On motion Bill has been read a first time. Ordered read a second time on tomorrow.

MR. SPEAKER: Honourable Minister of Provincial Affairs asks leave to introduce a Bill, “An Act to Amend the Exploits Valley (Closing Hours) Shop Act.

HON. M. P. MURRAY (Minister of Provincial Affairs): I ask that first reading of this Bill be deferred, Mr. Speaker.

MR. SPEAKER: Does the House give leave to have this Bill deferred?

On motion leave was granted.

A Bill “An Act to Amend the Rent Restrictions Act,” on motion read a first time, ordered read a second time on tomorrow.

A Bill "An Act to Amend the Water and Sewerage Corporation of Greater Corner Brook Act, 1951."

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, this seems to be the sort of Bill which empowers the raising of money for taxation. I don't know how far the Act goes, but from what I have read in the paper I believe this is intended to deal with the sale of certain property over there from one corporation to another. Is the Minister in a position to say whether this is a money Bill or not?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, it is not, Mr. Speaker.

On motion the Bill was read a first time, ordered read a second time on tomorrow.

A Bill "An Act Further to Amend the Education Act."

On motion read a first time, ordered read a second time on tomorrow.

A Bill "An Act to Amend the Undeveloped Mineral Areas Act."

On motion read a first time, ordered read a second time on tomorrow.

A Bill 'An Act Further to Amend the Mothers' Allowances Act."

On motion read a first time, ordered read a second time on tomorrow.

A Bill "An Act Further to Amend the Corrections Act, 1953."

On motion read a first time, ordered read a second time on tomorrow.

Address in Reply:

MR. HIGGINS: Mr. Speaker, in rising to take part in this debate my first duty is to pay tribute to the mover and seconder of the Address in Reply, the honourable and learned member for Port de Grave and the honourable member for Burgeo and LaPoile. It is not the first time that the honourable member for Burgeo and LaPoile has spoken, indeed if I mistake not, he discharged the same duty last year. But his stay on the Government benches seems to have moved him out of that quiet, honest and unassuming manner of saying things, and this year he spoke with much more gusto, he intoned the praises of the government's programme with a fervour which really deserves commendation. Of course the honourable and learned member for Port de Grave could be expected, coming from the profession he adorns, to be able to make a case for anything. As I have said, Mr. Speaker, both of these gentlemen deserve well of the House.

I would like also to be associated with the welcome that was extended to the newly elected member for St. John's. I agree wholeheartedly with everything that the Honourable the Premier said on opening day.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Don't remind me of that now.

MR. HIGGINS: I can't help it if a man likes hash—we will get on to the hash later. As I said, it is one of the few times I could subscribe wholeheartedly to the Premier's expression of opinion of the way things are done. And I know that I speak for my colleagues when I say he has already proven his worth to us.
The Speech from the Throne itself: as my Leader said, we in this House are all as one insofar as our loyalty to the person of Her Gracious Majesty the Queen is concerned.

I noticed the reference in the Speech from the Throne to representation of this country or province at the Coronation last year, and as it is perhaps the last time I will have a chance to be honestly —

MR. SMALLWOOD: Nonpartisan?

MR. HIGGINS: I was going to pay an honest tribute to the Honourable the Premier—I will say it now exactly as I said it last year when this House was told of the personnel of the delegation going over to the Coronation, the Honourable the Premier and the Honourable Minister of Education as representatives of this House—Whatever else one may think of the Premier, whatever one may say of him, when the occasion arises to represent this country in a nonpartisan manner, he does it and does it well—So that I say, Sir, with that reference to the Coronation we are all in accord.

Now, so far as the Speech from the Throne itself is concerned there is very little to be said. We have all heard that old saying—indeed I believe reading the first Hansard, the only Hansard that has been published of proceedings of this House since its revival, the Premier himself remarked that it is usual to say that the Speech is remarkable more for what it did not contain than for what it did. That certainly was true of the Speech from the Throne the other day, so true in fact, that the Editor of the Evening Telegram was moved to write an editorial on it, whether by way of praise or blame I do not know, although judging from the comment that paper daily gives to the Premier I would be inclined to say it was by way of praise.

Now, Mr. Speaker, the one thing that dominated that speech was "Fish." We have been told that we are going to have fish in all its forms and manifestations for the greater part of this session. His Honour said: "While I believe that all will welcome other industries and other sources of income for our people, I believe also that there will be general agreement that in the long run the prosperity of Newfoundland depends mainly upon the continued expansion of her fisheries, forest industries and agriculture." Now that, Mr. Speaker, is a far cry from Throne Speeches of the past few years. All that we heard last session and the session before was new industries. On opening day the Premier said that the Leader of the Opposition had complained in the last session that the Government insisted on talking about new industries while the Opposition wanted to talk about fish, and he raised quite a chuckle when he said—when the Government wants to talk about fish the Opposition wants to talk about new industries. Yes, Mr. Speaker, the Opposition does want to talk about new industries, but more important, the people want to hear about the new industries, the people want to hear the Government, their Government, tell the whole story of these industries. It has been said, "Look, we are fed up talking about this stuff, about industries, it is only cold hash." I don't know whether it is cold hash or warm, but hash properly describes the mess the Government has made of this industrial programme, it is a beautiful hash, and unfortunately somebody has to keep stirring up that hash and trying to get a few bits of meat out of it. So far the people of this country have no idea as to where their money has gone, Mr. Speaker, I submit that the Government cannot properly keep pushing off questions about these industries by trotting out the stock answer—it is not in the public interest—or even more hypocritically by saying it is not proper to ask these companies to give any information because after all we have only loaned them money and that does not give us any right to find out what they are doing with their business. Well, I don't know, Mr. Speaker, that may be very sound ethically, I do suggest it is very bad business. I could not conceive of any member of this House particularly any member who might be in the real estate business who would advance money to any outfit and not want to know what they are doing with it. That might be all right in the early stages when drawing up the prospectus or sales talk, but that cannot hold water at the present time. I suggest that if these industries were as sound as we were assured they were when the Government was breaking its neck to give them money, they should be in a position to show that they are able to make money, employ Newfoundlanders and pay back the loans made to them.

What is the position? I do not know how many were assisted. I remember the Leader read off a list of companies—Eckhardt Mills, Newfoundland Hardwoods, Atlantic Gypsum, Newfoundland Tanneries, William Dorn, Superior Rubber Company, Atlantic Gloves, Canadian Leather Goods, Koch Shoes Ltd., Hanning Electric Company, Canadian Machinery & Industry Construction, North Star Cement Company, Atlantic Hardboards, United Cotton Mills, Terra Nova Textiles. That is fifteen. Apart from those fifteen, we do know there was one company which was going to do a lot of work—the Optical Plant. Who does not remember when the Agreement to give Dr. Sennewald $150,000 was presented in this House? Who does not remember the Premier's paying tribute to this renowned physicist who was offered the Nobel Prize, when he belaboured the fact that he had just escaped the Iron Curtain? We remember his telling us that this man had satisfied the Government, despite earlier misgivings; he was going to manufacture glass frames, going to bring the Imperial Optical Company of Canada and any other supplier to its knees: Where is he now? He is now a house-man at the St. John's General Hospital. That is one Company.

I do not want to harrow the Premier's feelings by referring to the Birch Plant, but it is a wrong way of answering the situation by taunting the Opposition with "Are you happy that sixty-five Newfoundlanders are out of jobs?" That is not answering the question. If this was a good proposition it should not have gotten into this temporary slump. It should have been established to weather any slump. It was not located in a place where it could not help being a success. Although people in that business—people who should know—(I will not name names)—advised that the location foredoomed it to failure. In the position in which it was located, all the raw material, everything, would have to come to St. John's by rail and boat and then trucked to Donovans. It need not have run into the trouble if it was properly sited. But, no, it was put next door to Chester Dawe: so that when the time comes, if Chester Dawe wanted to, he could knock down the fence and put his fence right around it.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Does the honourable gentleman realize the seriousness of what he has just said?

MR. HIGGINS: I am entitled to state my own opinion. I suppose.

MR. SMALLWOOD: In public? It is a pretty violent statement.

MR. HIGGINS: If my utterances were half as violent as some I have heard in this House—it is a case of the pot calling the kettle "black." In commenting with reference to the Birch Plant, we have got the position that as far back as the end of January the local papers were carrying notices that the Premier had told a man named Andrew Cooper, a Union Representative from Toronto, that the plant had already cost three million dollars, that it was losing money every day and every hour of the day. I do not know if that was one of the misquotations which the local press carried; but if that is a correct statement, then I say the time has come to give us an explanation of what happened there.

Now, there is one good thing I do say for the Government, they have taken a new interest in fisheries.

MR. SMALLWOOD: "New?"

MR. HIGGINS: I use the word "new" advisedly. For a change, we will be dealing with people known to us, we will be dealing with fellow Newfoundlanders, that is, of course, unless the Government decides that the revival of fisheries can only be accomplished by outside talent such as Mr. Planta or another crew of Ice-landers. That is not beyond the realm of possibility. Indeed, this Government has shown such proclivity for exotic schemes and strange sounding names, it is going to be interesting to see how they reconcile themselves to talking of such prosaic things as fisheries—an industry associated with good old English names. That the Premier can do it, I have no doubt. He has demonstrated his ability in going overboard on any scheme that appeals to him. I am quite sure this House will have a meal of tongues from the Premier when he elaborates his address on fisheries and what needs to be done. I wonder how the honourable member who told his constituents to "haul up their boats," will now be able to go back and suggest that they should put them back into the water? How can the member who made the statement that a million dollars invested in fisheries, is a million dollars down the drain—how is he going to be able to ask them to forget that? The Premier can accomplish a reversal of policy without loss of face. He has a peculiar genius in sounding as if he meant everything he said; but to lesser mortals that power is not given. It is going to be most interesting to hear the gentlemen on the Government side of the House—the former prophets of the doom of the fisheries—now renounce their former statements and adhere to the new party line.

When we think back on all the talk already poured out in this Chamber in the past few years on the creation of these great new industries—these industries which were going to free our people from the bondage of fish merchants; when we were told of the thousands of jobs which were going to be opened up; when we remember we were told they were going to the Mainland and the United States to coax back Newfoundlanders to fill the jobs which were going to be opened up—when we think of these things, and then look around us and find these industries doubtful and uncertain, then I say that before this House is a party to allowing the Government to continue with any policy involving major expenditures, we should have an accounting from that same Government of its stewardship. Let us know the position of these industries. Let us have the truth. Yes, before we are asked to consider fisheries, or any other development scheme (and I use the word scheme advisedly)—in view of the history of the new industries, let us find out the real position in this country—let us find out what propositions can be a success and if there are any, in the light of recent history which do not show any prospects of paying their way, let us stop fooling ourselves and wipe them off. If the Government has made mistakes, surely they are not so overwhelming that they cannot admit them. Until we do come to a real and honest appraisal of the situation as it exists today, we can do nothing. It is all very well for the Premier to say they are going to be a success; this House and the people are entitled to know if they can be a success. I would not sacrifice a million dollars on his opinion alone.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is why he remains in Opposition.

MR. HIGGINS: That may well be. Some day the people will find out and the Premier may be speaking from a different place. While the Government persists in wrapping this cloak of secrecy around the industries, it can only expect rumour and suspicion abroad. I heard the Premier say (I cannot say I heard him say it in this House)—that St. John's is nothing but a "rumour factory." That may be true. The very things which give rise to rumour are the things the Government is doing—lack of information, evasive answers, putting off replies because they "are not in the public interest." The truth may be a whole lot better than the rumours would have them believe. If the Government wants to hold the respect of the people, it must make a full and free disclosure of the whole story.

We were told by the Premier that he would be prepared to put another million dollars into the Birch Factory because he was convinced it was going to be a success. Now, just how good is the Premier at estimating the success of any given project? Turn back to two years ago—March 31st, 1952—in this very Assembly the Honourable the Premier delivered a speech in which he outlines the history and the future of his Government's industrialization scheme; a speech in which, it would appear, is clearly represented the course which the Government had charted for itself. That speech was printed in booklet form and circulated, not only in Newfoundland, but far beyond the boundaries of Newfoundland. That speech was entitled "Newfoundland Is On The March."

Now, on the day that this debate opened, my colleague from St. John's West referred to some of these first-edition Speeches from the Throne of earlier years—Speeches which he felt might some day be collectors' items. Certainly this speech deserves to rank with these, because, Mr. Speaker, it comes from the same source and it displays the same prediction of boundless prosperity, with never a suggestion of misgiving or the possibility of failure.
If I may, I should like to refer to some of the statements made in that speech in which, firstly, the Premier referred to a three-pronged drive for economic development—exploring, measuring and mapping our natural resources.

"The second prong is quite unconventional, and was devised as a non-recurring expedient to challenge attention to Newfoundland and to produce convincing evidence for our own people that Newfoundland was truly launched upon the road of progress. It has served its purpose, and need not be repeated. I refer, of course, to our decision ourselves to build, out of public money, the three new plants of which we are now so proud; the birch veneer, plywood and flooring plant; the cement mill; and the gypsum plaster, plaster-board and plaster-lath mill.

—Before building these three factories at a total cost, with temporary working capital, of just over nine million dollars, we satisfied ourselves beyond all doubt (1) that we were getting them built at most economical, even phenomenally economical cost; and (2) that they had every good chance to be economically successful. As the Speech from the Throne announced, we are selling these three plants and recovering to the Treasury the money they cost us."

The Minister of Finance has not yet recovered any money. The Gypsum Plant, so we have been told, has not yet been sold. The Cement Plant? I do not know if you could call that a deal—a horse-trader might call it a sale. The Birch Plant—not only is it not sold, but it is in a depressed condition and not likely to be sold.

The Speech continues:

"As I have said, our decision to build these three plants ourselves, out of public money, was quite unconventional, and we realized that fact when we took the decision. We were well aware of the risk we ran of being regarded as a Socialist . . ." (I wonder if that is where my learned friend picked up that word). " . . . rather than a Liberal Government. It was a calculated risk, and we felt that we were handsomely justified for Newfoundland's sake in taking it."

Now comes the happy part:

"We shall not, however, repeat this formula—" That is a good thing to know. The Speech goes on:

"The third prong is our economic drive—" (picturesque phrase!). "I have described before as one of "fishing in troubled waters." By this of course I mean seeking in Europe for industrialists who might be induced to establish a branch of factories in Canada and in Newfoundland in particular."

"One thing I wish to make abundantly clear. We did not offer financial assistance to every firm that indicated its willingness to come to Newfoundland. We rejected far more than we accepted."

"We insisted that each firm should make careful market surveys, as well as careful surveys of costs of production in Newfoundland. And our formula required that the firm in question should take at least as great a chance as we did."

"We are confident that every European industry we have been instrumental in bringing to Newfoundland meets these conditions and will be successful."
And then he says:

"As of this moment agreements have been made with European firms for the establishment here of a leather-tannery, an oil-hardening plant, a leather-goods factory, an optical-goods factory, a machinery plant, a press-board factory leading to a furniture factory, a cotton textile mill and a fur-dressing and dying factory."

All of these, as of that moment, the Government was confident would be successful. But the oil-hardening plant failed to jell. The optical plant disappeared. The others, we do not know how they are doing.

And then further on in the same Speech he refers to helping local industries, mind you! The Speech said:

"I should not fail to mention the financial assistance we have given to Newfoundland companies to enlarge and expand their industries, or to establish new industries. For the most part these are firms engaged in our historic industry, the fisheries."

What did this Government do for local industries that needed help? What happened to the Newfoundland Clothing Company? What happened to the White Clothing Company? It got no help from this government. It folded up.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It did not need money. It was enormously wealthy.

MR. HIGGINS: I know the public has not been told why the local industries folded up and other gentlemen brought in, I can tell you that only this morning I was talking to a father of a family. He was telling me about outfitting his boys for the annual sports next month. A simple thing like flannel trousers used to be manufactured in the thousands here and can no longer be bought here. They have to be imported from Toronto or Montreal. I do not know why the Terra Nova Textiles do not make them. Maybe they are more interested in making cushions.

MR. CURTIS: Give them time.

MR. HIGGINS: Time? But the sports are being held next month.

MR. SMALLWOOD: They are only now erecting the building. Go out and see the building being built.

MR. HIGGINS: They do not like for us to talk about the industries. "It is nonsense; it is dribble," they say. They want to go fishing, but we are not ready to go fishing; there are a lot of things to be done before this craft is ready to go to sea.

To get back to that same Speech, and at the risk of being repetitious, I would refer to the phrases contained in that Speech with regard to employment. The Honourable the Premier says, "My estimate of the total number of new jobs to be created by these new industries and mines is something between 6,000 and 7,000. That would be full-time employment, and another 1,500 would get part-time employment. I have no doubt that such a volume of new employment would result in another 1,000 persons getting their living indirectly out of these industries. The total number of Newfoundlanders involved would thus run perhaps as high as 80,000. The annual wage bill should run to something around $10,000,000.

Thirty thousand people could be employed....

MR. SMALLWOOD: Be fair! I did not say "employed."
MR. HIGGINS: "Involved." The people were going to benefit directly or indirectly.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Not 30,000 employed.

MR. HIGGINS: Give them the benefit of the doubt—But, Mr. Speaker, there is no ten million dollars annual wage bill coming in. But then go on—These were the details the Honourable the Premier was dealing with, either established or very shortly to be established industries—Then he goes on later and talks about our hopes for Newfoundland and the first thing was to be the doubling in size of Grand Falls and Corner Brook. Well, I don't know that they have doubled as yet. Then—

MR. SMALLWOOD: A failure of the Government? Another mess?

MR. HIGGINS: Well, if they had the Government would have grabbed the credit for it. Mr. Speaker, these two are safely established and the Government can not do much but brag.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The Liberal Government put them there.

MR. HIGGINS: A Liberal Government. I wonder if the Liberals of these days would recognize their own sons—I wonder.

Then, Mr. Speaker, he goes on and says—"At the present time about a million gallons of white sulphite liquor is pouring out of our two paper mills every work-day of the week, and if and when these mills double in size the galloillage of sulphite liquor will likewise increase. It is not difficult to imagine a factory using this liquor for the manufacture of industrial alcohol and other base materials"—this is not old mills, this is new mills. It is a funny thing the basic ingredient applies to both (1) industrial alcohol and the other social. It goes on: "The fact that becomes brilliantly apparent is modern industrial chemistry is one of the wonders of the world. When I remind the House that at least 150 separate and different articles of merchandise are today manufactured from industrial alcohol, I foresee the day, not very far distant, when thousands of Newfoundlanders will find employment in factories manufacturing many useful and profitable articles from alcohol distilled from the thirty thousand million gallons of spent sulphite liquor now draining away from our two mills to the Atlantic Ocean."

And we were going to have an aluminum industry and a steel mill and finally more birch development. All these things, Mr. Speaker, only two years ago were envisaged.

MR. SMALLWOOD: They are still envisaged.

MR. HIGGINS: That, Mr. Speaker, is the type of enlightened prophet who is prepared to pledge another million in the birch mill because he thinks it might be a success.

Mr. Speaker, the last item in that speech was the reference to Newfoundland and Labrador Corporation, that economic arm of the Government that boasted Sir William Stephenson, Mr. C. A. Pippy and all the other eminent men—Mr. George Thomas who was fortunately acquired on the termination of his services at Buchans, and Sir William—Mr. Speaker, he did not last long. Poor Sir William came up, struck out, to a minor or major wherever he came from—Mr. Thomas departed—Mr.
Pippy, I don't know what happened to Mr. Pippy—and of course over and, above all that the Great Alfred. Alfred is gone now and I don't know who is left to run NALCO. Of course they got clear of Mr. Doyle, he seemed to get in trouble on his own grounds. He was no sooner jumbling around with NALCO than he was suspended from the stock market for reasons unnamed to us. It was certainly given widespread publicity in these same papers both foreign and local which nobody seems to read.

Now, in all these schemes, Mr. Speaker, the Government has sunk millions of dollars of the Newfoundland Taxpayer's money, not money earned by this Government but money the Government inherited from the Commission of Government. Mr. Speaker, this Government does not own this money, the Government is only trustees for the people of Newfoundland. If the Government has any real regard for its obligations to the people of this country they would be the first to agree it is time to give an accounting. It is not enough to say there may have been some mistakes and we will write off these losses to experience. Everyone of these industries was examined and reported on and recommended by Dr. Valdmanis whose qualifications were such that the one who ventured to question them brought down on his unhappy head the anger of the Premier.

Time brings many changes. If twelve months ago my colleague from St. John's East had referred discourteously to Dr. Valdmanis he would have been threatened with dire reprisals, would have been told just what a wretch he was. But yesterday he attacked Poor Alfred, and there was none so poor as to do him reverence. I don't know what happened to that statue, I don't know if the Gavlin Foundries are going to cast it—but Alfred is gone and the only ones sorry are the people of this country that they did not find out about him earlier.

Mr. Speaker, I know this discussion is boring—I know the Government does not want to talk about it—the Government is not interested in talking about past mistakes—the Government wants to go fishing. But, Mr. Speaker, before we put out to sea with such a harum-scarum crew as are running this ship, I think we will have to make sure it is safe to go out in deep water—let the Government tell all the story. Their great Liberal Guardian, Bradley, the man who by implication was mentioned so reverently today, was frequently so fond of saying; the people shall know the truth and the truth shall set them free. Then let the people know.

MR. JANES: I join, Mr. Speaker, with other speakers in this debate in congratulating the mover and seconder of the motion. I also join with other speakers in welcoming the honourable member for St. John's West. I might say though, Sir, that any great hopes which I had, and I had great hopes because I was informed that the coming of our new member for St. John's West was going to make quite a lot of difference in this House, and I sat here the first few days rather shivering, wondering what was going to happen next. Then he made a speech and all my great hopes were dispelled. Sir, his reason for coming here, if I am to infer from his speech was that he had lost his job sometime ago in the District Court. How many people in Newfoundland knew that the honourable member had a job in the district court I don't know, there are certainly none in the District of Fogo.

Now, Mr. Speaker, we have heard a lot about "hash," and it has been a great rehash of everything that has been said here by the Opposition for the past four or five years. But they have missed one point: As any good housewife in Newfoundland will tell you, hash is a good meal for Monday's dinner provided it has a little bit of pepper and salt. But the Opposition, Mr. Speaker, gave us hash without either pepper or salt. We have had this thing rehashed up by the genial Mr. Higgins when he sat on the opposite side of the House and had us in a trance here at times when we could see him dash over Carters' Hill and at the point of a lance demolish the slums down there. Then the fiery major who packed up his bags and moved out of this House never to return any more and after a few days in Montreal he was back again, after having a holiday I presume. All this we have seen for four years and in 1954 after five years of it we come back and sit here and at least for the first four or five days we have it again, and I suppose we must endure it a little bit longer. It adds nothing to the information the people of Newfoundland want nothing whatever, to help the people of Newfoundland to earn higher wages, nothing whatever, not too many people are too impressed.

The honourable member for St. John's West also raised a few points with which I would like to deal. He speaks of the roads on the Avalon Peninsula. Now, I happen to have the honour to represent the District of Fogo here in this House. While I have every sympathy for the people of the Avalon Peninsula for the condition in which they find their roads, I hope to live here for a little while. I know too that half of the people of Newfoundland happen to live on the Avalon Peninsula, but the other half of the people of Newfoundland, Mr. Speaker, happen to live off the Avalon Peninsula. But the great difference is that all of the roads in Newfoundland are on the Avalon Peninsula, all of them, they have always been here. But the other half of the people who have not lived on the Avalon Peninsula have had to sit by and watch the Avalon and see the road system of Avalon being built up while they have had nothing—they have had nothing. If we have half the people here surely the most the people might expect is half the roads. Instead of that we have it all here. There are not very many more places on Avalon that we can build roads. I don't say but those roads can be improved. But surely in the name of common sense, before we start to do very much with the road system on Avalon, we should think about the other sections of this province which have been crying out for roads for years and years and will still have to wait for them for many years.

He speaks of the Icelandic Boats, Mr. Speaker. Of course that is so old I don't know where it came from, I actually don't know where it came from. He talked about the herring, Mr. Speaker, and about the fishermen in Newfoundland—they are great fellows, Mr. Speaker, and have a habit of pulling a fellow's leg once in a while and enjoying it. The scheme of the Icelandic Boats was one programme in which the Government was involved, Mr. Speaker, in which I had real faith. And there are many times now when I am convinced that probably had the boats been held on to longer, had more experimenting been done, we would have had many hundreds of herring fishermen in Newfoundland, possibly even this year, getting ready for a good fishery. Somebody must spend an awful lot, many more millions than the half a million spent on the Icelandic Boats before we have a herring fishery in Newfoundland, somebody has to spend it.

As for the fisherman in Placentia Bay telling the honourable member for St. John's West that there was plenty of herring in Placentia Bay but they did not know how to get them; he was pulling the honourable member's leg—take it from me—because if the fishermen knew the herring were in Placentia Bay—there are twenty thousand people in Placentia Bay looking for these herring—if that fisherman had that information and that had been passed along to the honourable member, then that knowledge is of supreme importance and I am not talking about a fisherman going out in Merasheen and getting two tubs of herring—then it is the duty, Sir, of the honourable member for St. John's West to tell this House where these herring are.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, to a point of order, I did not say I knew where they were. I said the fisherman from Ship Harbour went out and caught herring alongside the Icelandic Boats who did not know where to get them. I did not say where they were.

MR. JAMES: I am repeating what the honourable member said—-a fisherman told him where they were—if he told where they were I presume he caught them. If he caught them then he should tell us how he caught them. Surely he gave the honourable member that information.

MR. BROWNE: Perhaps you might like to give him a half million dollars to tell you like you did for the Icelanders.

MR. JAMES: The Government spent a half million trying to find out. They may have to spend a million and probably five million before they find out. If the honourable gentleman had an alternative it is his duty to tell the people of Newfoundland.

MR. BROWNE: Ask the Minister of Fisheries.

MR. JAMES: You are the man who started on the Icelandic Boats and dug it up from the—

MR. SPEAKER: I must deplore the use of the word "You" or "You," it tends to create argument from one side of the House to the other.

MR. JAMES: Then, Mr. Speaker, he slipped in the silly question, "Do the people of Newfoundland any longer have any faith or belief in the present administration?" Where has the honourable member been since 1949? I can recall at least four elections here in Newfoundland, and if the last Federal Election here in Newfoundland means anything to anybody—if the members of the Opposition have any power to see what happened, any perception at all, it can be interpreted only as the people expressing a greater faith in the Honourable Premier of this Province today and the Liberal Party of this Province than ever they had before, and that is merely twelve months ago. Our people, Sir, like doers. That is something which the Opposition has failed to see for the past four years. The people of Newfoundland like people who do things. This administration in its four years in office has continued to do things, to do the things the people believe should be done. Now, they can criticize all they like, but unless they produce an alternative, unless the Opposition produces an alternative, they can talk until they are blind and they will not make one little impression on the people of this Province of Newfoundland. They can continue to criticize, and the criticism which has emanated from the other side of this House has not impressed me, it has impressed nobody. If the industrial programme were wrong, if it were crazy, did they have an alternative to it? They did not. If they did they kept it very quietly to themselves and certainly did not tell the people of Newfoundland what that alternative was.

Then, Mr. Speaker, he ended his speech by trying to convince us that the alternative to our secondary industries was not to build these industries but to build primary industries to concentrate on the fisheries and on agriculture as against concentrating on secondary industries. That argument, Sir, of the primary industry against the secondary industries is as old as economics, it has been the cry of the economists for the past two hundred years and the honourable member can enjoy himself for the next hundred years without getting very far with it.

As a result of Confederation, Mr. Speaker, the peasant complex which has plagued the people of this Province for generations is fast disappearing and whether we like it or whether we don't we are on the march, Newfoundland is on the march. We are not prepared to go out and haul in a few quintals of fish and say, on this we must live. We are no longer prepared to go out and put down a bucket of potatoes and say, this is the way. That is finished. We got to have a little more than a few quintals of fish, more than a bucket of potatoes in the fall.

Mr. Speaker, we have had ever since this House opened and long before this House opened the amazing spectacle of the Opposition turning to this House, turning to the Province of Newfoundland and saying that this Government, this Liberal Government—look at what they have done—they have spent twenty, thirty, forty million dollars in these industries. Then it suddenly dawned on the one member to take the accounts and do a simple sum in addition, and lo and behold, he could only find eighteen millions, and all of that had been property accounted for by the Auditor General's Department, except five thousand which had been loaned to the Atlantic Optical Company. Then we had a round of Sennewald again.

I wonder, Mr. Speaker, do the Opposition think that sensible people in Newfoundland are taking them seriously?

Now, Sir, there is only one other little point which I would like to touch upon in referring to the arguments the Opposition has used. The Honourable Leader of the Opposition and others from time to time in this House and out of this House have been referring in words which I don't like to European Communities living here in St. John's. Now, Sir, this city of St. John's is not very cosmopolitan.

MR. HOLLETT: May I rise to a point of order, Mr. Speaker. The Honourable Leader of the Opposition never referred to such communities here in St. John's never.

MR. JANES: The Honourable Leader of the Opposition, Sir, referred. to the German Industries here yesterday in this House. I call them the European Community as they are not all Germans. St. John's Sir, is not a very cosmopolitan city and has the reputation of being old and friendly. It has been our tradition for years to extend hospitality to strangers who might come within our gates.

MR. HOLLETT: We are doing it all right.

MR. JANES: But never in our history that I know of have we shown vindictiveness and hatred of the stranger. Nor, Sir, am I impressed by an ex-serviceman who stands up and says "Look at my medals" and that sort of thing. I also was out there fighting these fellows a few years ago, but it does not impress me one little bit. The fact that they were Germans and we were fighting them a few years ago was not the fault of the Honourable Leader of the Opposition nor was it my fault nor their fault, as he very well knows. It was the fault of the political and economic world in which we live and have been caught up in and can't escape it. They cannot escape it any more than we can. I could not escape it any more than they could escape it. I sat in the trenches and fox holes as they sat and held on there. I said my prayers and hoped to God I would be alive a minute afterwards.

MR. HOLLETT: Watch your medals!

MR. JANES: They don't go on—like yours.

MR. SPEAKER: Order. No personalities.

MR. JANES: Well I have no hatred for them, Sir, nor have they for me. I say we are all part of the political and economic system we are caught up in and we can't escape it. The honourable member could not escape it nor could I escape it. If the same thing happened tomorrow we could not escape, none of us in this world. If we are to have peace, or if there is any hope for peace then it is time we recognized that these things will happen as they have happened in the past and could very well happen again. The man from the street the little boys who are called into the army or air force or navy, the civilian who has no control over the circumstances. If we have an European Community, Mr. Speaker, whether they came from Italy, France or Germany if they are here in our midst surely God we have the decency to know they are strangers in our midst and this old city of St. John's with all its traditions of hospitality can at least bear with them; if we don't like them we don't have to tell them we hate them.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I hope that never in this House will this topic be brought up again because I think it is wrong. I don't believe it belongs to the spirit of this House nor to the spirit of St. John's.

Now, Sir, the speech itself refers to two commissions, a commission on forestry and a commission on agriculture—two Royal Commissions. I hope, Sir, that out of these commissions we will have—out of this forestry commission that there will develop out of its findings a sound policy of forestry such that we will be able to exploit our forests not only for ourselves but for the generations which are to come after us. I would like to say too, Sir, that there is a wealth of knowledge amongst our trappers and amongst our woodsmen which probably has not much scientific background in itself, but which I believe, if all brought together, especially the information with regard to our fur-bearing animals, their habits and that sort of thing—our trappers have a wealth of information which would take investigators a long time to obtain. I think that this commission should make full use of all the knowledge which over the years has been accumulated by our woodsmen and trappers.

As far as agriculture is concerned, Sir, I hope too that we are not too far from the day when our chief activity is not going to be picking stones off the rocky soil in an attempt to turn rocky soil into good arable ground. We have had a lot of that in Newfoundland, a lot which has not been much use. It has probably stood us in good stead in times past. But these times have changed and economic conditions are becoming such that little patches of rocky soil could stand us in good stead again. I am not beyond thinking that to be true. But as far as agriculture is concerned, I believe we have some good arable land in Newfoundland, in certain sections of Newfoundland, but we have to get beyond the thought, Sir, that the horse and plow can compete with mechanized industry such as we have on the Mainland of Canada. No doubt if we are to have an agricultural industry in Newfoundland which is to produce food for our industrial centres that industry must be mechanized. I think also, Sir, that in agriculture there is a need for our farmers to get together in co-operative marketing. There is a case in the agricultural areas for farmers to get together for the co-operative use of capital equipment—those things can be done, I think—it is only needed to provide leadership. Probably in the Royal Commission on Agriculture's Report we shall have some sort of programme of that sort mapped out for us to follow.

The most important point in the Speech, as far as I am concerned, is contained in the last paragraph but one. It concerns the fisheries. I was the fellow who said "Haul up your boats!" and I meant it. I meant it just as much when I say today "Launch your boats. It is going to be profitable to launch them!" Yes, I told them to haul up their boats; that it was more profitable to go to Seven Islands to work than to try and catch a quintal of fish.

We are approaching the time when, I believe, the new fisheries development programme is going to get into full swing. That programme will be appreciated by all the people, particularly the fishermen of Newfoundland. We have hundreds of communities in Newfoundland in the most awful position as far as fisheries are concerned. Certain things are needed—the industry must be centralized; there must be introduced into the industry the same divisions of labour which we have in all modern industry. The fishery means the catching of fish in the first place; secondly it means processing it and thirdly the marketing of that fish.

All down through the years, ever since I was a boy and ever since, I have seen the fishermen go out in June, fish until the voyage was over; then go hand-lining; then bring in their fish and try to make it. They end up with the fish made at the end of September, then they sit and wait at home for a month or two—until Christmas and afterwards—waiting for some buyer to come along the Atlantic Ocean to buy his few quintals of fish which are rotting in the stage. That Looking back today, when I first came to this House, I was most impatient—I was most impatient with the Premier; I was impatient with the Minister of Fisheries; and most of the time I was pretty fed up. Now, I see they were right. It was right for the fisheries of Newfoundland that this fisheries programme which has been launched, should not be rushed into. It needed careful planning. The lives of 20,000 or more were at stake; their livelihood was at stake; the future of hundreds of communities was at stake. Never before, I suppose, in the whole history of Newfoundland was the welfare of so many people tied up as is tied up in the fisheries development programme which is now coming into being.

The fisheries are still the great hope of Newfoundland. And when I say to them to launch their boats again, I do not mean that 20,000 fishermen are to be sent into the Atlantic Ocean in motor-boats to fish.

If I may detain the House a little longer, I would like to refer to the district which I have the honour to represent. The requirements of Fogo District are no different than the requirements of other districts on the North East Coast. We require roads, hospitals, health services, fish plants and better boats, so does every other district on the North East Coast. Insofar as Fogo is concerned, I would remind the members of the Opposition that they should go down there and see what is going on. It is strange to have the Opposition members sitting here criticising the industrialization programme which affects all of Newfoundland, yet most of them never get off the Avalon Peninsula as far as Newfoundland is concerned.

MR. BROWNE: How does he know how far we get off the Avalon Peninsula?

MR. JANES: I know where everyone of them go. I am always on the go myself.

MR. HIGGINS: That is our private lives.

MR. JANES: I never met one of the honourable members in my travels around Newfoundland. I have not seen them or heard of them either on motorboats, steamers, the railway, C.N.R. or anywhere else; and I do a lot of travelling. Yet, they come here and they talk about fish, above all things in the world. Returning to my own district—I say it would be nice if they would come down to Fogo and see what is going on. We have more cars on Fogo Island per mile of road than they have on the Avalon Peninsula.

MR. HIGGINS: How many cars?

MR. JANES: We have more cars per mile of road. We want roads. We want them badly. We want roads up the Strait Shore. It is my hope that before the season is ended, our roads to Musgrave Harbour will be completed, and I will have the privilege of going down with the Minister of Public Works and with the Premier to see the road open.

For the information of the gentleman on the other side, it was the last Tory Government in Newfoundland who started the road on the Strait Shore. They started it in an effort to win an election. They went down there—it was not necessary to build the road; God had built it; but they took up blackberry earth and shaped up a road. When the election was over, the project disappeared. That was thirty odd years ago and it was never touched again until this administration came into office in 1949. Since that time, they built a road from Valleyfield to Musgrave Harbour. We had to wait all that time before Confederation, up to the coming of the Liberal administration, before we got that road around the Strait Shore to Cape Freels. We hope to see the Government build a road from Gander there. It seems rather tragic with three thousand people in that area, to have no road to Gander when they are within 30 miles of it; and Gander is the crossroads of the world. We point at Gander and say "It is the Crossroads of the World" yet the only road these people have over there is up the Gander River and when they cannot use the Gander River, they use aeroplanes.

Our need for health services are similar. We have a small Cottage Hospital on Fogo Island and it is doing a fine job, but it is not large enough; we have not the bed space. But we have the assurance that this Government will give early attention to the necessity of improving the Hospital.

As far as fisheries are concerned. I have probably said enough. I want the people whom I represent to know—the people of Fogo to know that while the Honourable the Leader of the Opposition was browsing around in the Office of the Registrar, trying to find out who are the Directors of some of these industries which are here, I have been kicking the door of the office of the Minister of Fisheries and the door of the office of the Premier, trying to get something done for fisheries.

MR. HOLLETT: And you got nothing.

MR. JANES: I believe in 1954 we will see three projects in Fogo—one in Change Islands, one in Joe Batt's Arm and one in Seldom. And I am not going to stop kicking at the door of the Minister of Fisheries until I have a programme going for every community in Fogo District which is worthy of development. I want to serve notice on the fish firms of Fogo—some of them have been there for 200 years in one shape or another—one going out; one coming in—that unless they are prepared to put their shoulder to the wheel, either with Government assistance or without (I am not particularly interested), we are going to have fisheries development. If they are not going to do it, I am the boy who is going to do it.

MR. HOLLETT: Elections or no elections?

MR. JANES: Yes, elections or no elections. When I move out of this House, I want to see that during these years I have been here as a member for Fogo that there has been fisheries development in the district of Fogo in the form of plants, in the form of boats, and in catching, processing and marketing. I shall not be content until that has happened. I want to see a road from Gander to Carmanville constructed. I would like to see the road to Musgrave Harbour completed. Some of these things may not be done, but I want to leave the district a little better than when I came here to represent it.

Let us, on this eve of the Anniversary of Confederation, let us put the praise where it belongs; because if any man worked for the people of Newfoundland, that man is the Leader of the present Administration, and the people of Newfoundland know it only too well.

MR. FOGWILL: I move the adjournment of the debate.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I would like to move on to No. 2.

MR. CURTIS: I move the second reading of this Bill—"An Act to Amend the Interpretation Act, Chapter 1 of the Revised Statutes."

As this House will know, the Interpretation Act is an important Act inasmuch as it defines the manner in which all the Acts and all the chapters of the Consolidated Statutes are to be construed and interpreted.

The Amendments proposed are not numerous. They are in all, five or six, but they are to bring our Interpretation Act in conformity with the Interpretation Acts of the other Provinces, so that when the courts are asked to construe them, the construction by the courts for one Province will be of assistance to those in the other Provinces.

There is a Committee on the uniformity of Legislation, and we are represented on that Committee. My Deputy or the Director of Prosecutions or somebody from the Department attends the sessions.

We are trying to make all our Legislation conform, more or less, certainly from the point of view of verbiage, with the other Provinces.

In Section 2 of this Amendment, "repeal" is made to include revoke or cancel. As it stands, you repeal an Act, revoke an Order in Council, cancel a Regulation. Now "repeal" covers these.

Another Amendment deals with the time a Regulation comes into force. Section 3 of the proposed Amendment provides that when a Regulation comes into effect, as for instance if it was to come into effect on tomorrow the first day of April, it will come into effect as from midnight tonight and will have effect all day tomorrow. Likewise, if it expires today, March 31st, it will continue until midnight tonight. It defines when it comes into force and when it ceases.

The next clause, is a clause which amends by adding to the power of a Commission or a body before it is formally put into operation.

The House will remember that a couple of years ago we set up a Workmen's Compensation Board. Before it operated, the Board has to get its groundings and consequently the Board was appointed some months before it actually came into operation. This is an amendment to that clause. Until the Act comes into operation, the Board or other authority will have this power. It is similar to clauses in other Acts.

Section 5 is a clarity of existing law. Her Majesty is not bound in any enactment unless so stated in the Act.

Section 6 makes reference to Section 60 regarding the changing of the wording in the first section.

Section 24 provides that when you cite an Act, that citation includes reference to the Act and any amending statutes.

Section 8 defines "Her Majesty" and section 9 makes reference to the effect of the repeal of an Act on regulations made under that Act, and it is provided in such cases where a new Act is passed in substitution for one amended, the rules and regulations not inconsistent with the new Act shall remain in force.

There are the amendments and I move that it be read a second time.

MR. BROWNE: One of the reasons why I asked earlier that some explanation be given in order to deal with the second reading, was that it is very difficult for honourable members to follow the explanations. The Attorney General has given us a detailed explanation which seems perfectly in order, as far as I am concerned. I presume it is the intention to refer it to Committee tomorrow.

MR. HOLLETT: Just one section —Section 5—I would like to have time to refer to Section 13 of the original Act. There seems to be a principle involved.

"No provision in any Act passed after the 11th day of May, 1951, is binding on Her Majesty or affects Her Majesty or Her Majesty's rights or prerogatives in any manner unless it is expressly stated therein that Her Majesty is bound thereby."

I recollect certain Acts passed since 1951 where that was apparently forgotten or neglected, left out. We passed a good many Acts in relation to new industries, as I recollect it. It may be wrong, but I believe there were one or two where Her Majesty is not mentioned. I would like to go through these Acts. I take it we will have time. If there are any Acts since 1951 to which this regulation applies, which releases these people without obligation, I think we ought to go into the principle of the Bill more thoroughly. We have to live up to contracts. I do not know if the Attorney General would make it clear to me.

MR. CURTIS: I may say the ef­ flect of the Clause is already there.
It re-defines the position. I am not quite sure we are in order in discussing details at this stage. We should do it in Committee. Perhaps, on that account, I will not break the Rules of the House, but will discuss it when in Committee.

There is nothing revolutionary in the Section. It is only a re-statement of the present Law, which is that Her Majesty is only bound by legislation if it is so stated in the Act or she becomes so by necessary implication.
This just re-writes that section to meet present practice. That is a matter we can go into in Committee.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker,
I move that all remaining Orders of the Day do stand deferred.

MR. SPEAKER: There are no remaining orders.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker,
there being no remaining orders I rise to move the adjournment of the House until tomorrow. In doing so I should like to say two things:

In the first place it is the purpose of the Government to continue the practice of the past five years in this House of giving the Opposition all the time, in giving the House including the Opposition all the time they may want for the discussion of or any business that the Government brings before the House. If at any time the Opposition are not ready to proceed with discussion of any legislation at any stage, second reading especially, when the principle of the Bill is proposed to be adopted, then they have only to say so and any Minister on this side will gladly defer discussion, defer debate until the Opposition are ready. Now, we have been doing
The next thing I have to say is that I have received news within the past few minutes of the death of a great and prominent and quite notable Canadian Statesman in the person of the late Premier of Prince Edward Island, Senator Walter Jones. Senator Jones has visited Newfoundland more than once, notably at the invitation of the Liberal Party at its convention in the C.I.B. Armoury. He has been for quite a number of years now a close personal friend of my own. When I was in Ottawa a week or so ago with other members of the Government, on my last night in Ottawa, Senator Jones came into my room and we talked until midnight. I hope that long talk had no part in this early death. We discussed farming and agriculture generally. He was over seventy years of age, I believe, and one of the really great stock breeders of the whole world. He held until his death the world's record in cows of a certain breed or type, I forget exactly, and I believe at one point he sold a bull for $40,000. That is a higher price than any members opposite have been able to sell any bull here or anywhere else. He was unquestionably a very great agriculturist, and I think that Canada has lost in him a great Canadian.

I move that the House at its rising do adjourn until tomorrow, Thursday, at 3:00 of the clock.

The House then adjourned accordingly.
ly where the question affected individual members of the Legislature is taboo. The editorial says "Are" but we know "is" is the correct grammar.

The paper has fallen on evil days. I fear when illiteracy appears in the editorial. I noticed a very reputable and honourable person in the person of Mr. Jefferies who fell ill recently. I fear, if I may judge from this issue of the paper, the editor is still ill, and someone illiterate is taking his place. It is regrettable, Mr. Speaker, that a leading and honourable paper, especially the old "Telegram" should now be edited by an illiterate from the standpoint of public taste and literature in Newfoundland. That is serious enough but not nearly as serious as the fact that the Ruling of the Speaker of this House is misrepresented by a newspaper and by this misrepresentation brought into ridicule and contempt.

Now, Sir, the members on each side of the House may lambast each other, and I hope as long as I am a member of the Chamber they do so, with some sense of integrity, some sense of responsibility perhaps, but that they will continue to enliven the proceedings, that they will challenge and awaken public interest in matters by debating them with spirit. But when it comes to Mr. Speaker we all of us here on both sides of the House and without any difference of degree or quality, on both sides of the House, agree in honouring Mr. Speaker, in honouring the Chair, in honouring the authority of the Chair, in honouring the authority of Mr. Speaker, and above all in honouring the impartiality and the integrity of Mr. Speaker—we do that but the "Evening Telegram" does not. The honourable Leader of the Opposition and I agree in honouring the Chair and in honouring Mr. Speaker and in honouring his ruling. Nobody disagrees in this House with his ruling. The way was open to us to challenge it but none challenged it. We all accepted your honour's ruling but the "Evening Telegram" apparently does not because it referred in contemptuous terms to your honour's ruling. I am not going to move a vote of censure on the "Evening Telegram." I think that would be unfair to take advantage of a newspaper caught in a moment of weakness through bad editing and the unfortunate illiteracy having command for the moment of the editorial column. To attack the paper at a weak point, I think, would be unfair. If Mr. Jefferies were there I think he would be the last man in Newfoundland who would commit a great newspaper to such an unfortunate blunder.

Answers to Questions

Question No. 28—Mr. Hefferton: Not yet ready.

Question No. 29:

HON. F. W. ROWE (Minister of Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I have the answers to this question prepared, but I think I owe it to the House to add a word of explanation here and there to the answers. If my honourable friend wondered how we came to have these answers prepared so quickly, the answer lies in the fact that our department is now almost ready to publish its annual report, and much of the information required in those questions is already prepared for our annual report. However, I shall be placing the copies on the table in a moment. However, I should like to say in connection with these answers that the general policy of the Commission of Government with respect to leased areas as mineral areas was to assume one hundred per cent responsibility for the cost of any survey or drilling work that the government itself might do on those areas. That was the general policy. However, the present government has, I believe, since 1949, since it came into power, modified that policy but even so it still has not relinquished, nor for that matter has any government I know of relinquished its responsibility for carrying on the geological surveys and diamond drilling for general or specific purposes on these areas. No government in any country that I know of for that matter by virtue of having leased an area has then disclaimed any responsibility for the geological survey—But the present government has modified the policy of the Commission of Government by applying a general rule by requiring that the lessee would pay fifty per cent of the cost, and that principle has been adhered to rigidly, half and half.

In connection with one of the questions which the honourable member asked, the question being the list of the different surveys on the Labrador and in Newfoundland with the number of persons in each survey together with the number of Newfoundlanders employed in each survey—I have the answers here. But the variation arises from the fact—I think I am entitled to give the honourable gentleman who asked the question this information—for the most part a survey party involves technical men, and we have—and when I say we I mean our department—scoured this province looking for technical men but they are difficult to find. In consequence we had to go outside and bring in a comparatively large number of men. For example: you will find on the Hamilton River Survey there were seven, of whom only three were Newfoundlanders. The reason is that they were the only three we could obtain at the time. In this connection perhaps I should say this, Mr. Speaker, we have been greatly worried in our department, as I am sure the government has, generally, over the fact of skilled personnel, and I am sure the House will be glad to know that we have been able to make arrangement with the Memorial University, whereby the University makes use of our provincial men, noted geologists, to give a number of geological courses at the University.

MR. HOLLETT: May I ask this question? Is this in answer to my question? I did not ask for an apology. It was just a straight question, Mr. Speaker.

MR. SPEAKER: However, while the honourable minister may not make the answer an occasion for a speech, he is permitted to make an explanation of his answer for the purpose of clarification.

DR. ROWE: Thank you, Mr. Speaker! I have just finished these elaborations. I would say, however, that as a result of this arrangement between our department and the Memorial University we hope that the shortage of skilled personnel will gradually be eliminated in Newfoundland. This year, for example, a number of Newfoundlanders will be interested in geology at the Memorial, and at the completion of their year they will be engaged by one or more of the various surveys if they are seeking summer employment. The procedure followed in employing Newfoundlanders is to give priority to those who are studying mining engineering, and next to those who are studying engineering. Since there are never enough students of engineering or mining engineers, to make up the necessary complement on these survey parties. I think that covers my elaborations on these answers.

Answers tabled.

Question No. 30: Mr. Hefferton, this answer is in course of preparation, Mr. Speaker.

(o) No advances made.

(3) and (4). I will give that information a little later. I am asking all of them for the latest figures and when I have them all I will be glad to give them. I may indeed not be able to give the answers to these two particular questions until I come to participate personally in the address in reply. Indeed I hope in that speech to answer many questions put on the order paper and to some questions just asked in passing by honourable members of the opposition.

(5) I am afraid my answer to this question must continue to be that the answer to this question would much more properly be addressed to that private liability company. On the Atlantic Gypsum Ltd. I will table the answers as soon as the company holds its annual meeting and the report of the accounts is audited by the auditors and is laid before the board of directors and released to the government. I will very quickly there-

(3) Total amount of Import Duties, Excise Taxes, etc., paid to the Federal Government by the Board of Liquor Control from April 1st, 1953, to February 27th, 1954, amounted to $1,401,357.16. This does not include duties paid at Distilleries in Canada on goods shipped Excise paid.

Answers to questions asked by Mr. M. Hollett on March 29th., 1954:

(1) In connection with the block provision of three hundred thousand dollars for adjustment of salaries in the Department of Health Estimates, state exactly how this amount was apportioned.

Salary adjustments were made on the approximate basis of a ten per cent increase. When the Estimates for 1954-55 are printed and released shortly, this information will appear in detail.

(2) State the number of Orderlies at the General Hospital; what are the hours of work and what salaries are paid to said Orderlies? What is the number of Orderlies whose homes are elsewhere than in St. John's?

The number of Orderlies presently employed at the General Hospital is 24. They work 8 hours daily for 5½ days weekly less mealtime. Salaries paid are on the scale $2000-100-2100 per annum. 7 of these Orderlies live outside St. John's.

(3) How many student nurses are presently in training at the various Hospitals throughout Newfoundland. State number at each Hospital and what exactly are the terms of their service with regard to salary and allowances? What are the hours of work each day and night?

There are 105 Student Nurses in the General Hospital School of Nursing, of which 8 are affiliating at the Grace Hospital, 4 at the Fever Hospital, 4 at the St. John's Sanatorium and 4 at the Hospital for Mental and Nervous Diseases. These Students receive a salary of $660 per annum, of which $360 per annum is deducted for full board and lodgings, including laundry services. In addition, free medical care and hospitalization is given. Student Nurses are on duty 9 hours daily or nightly, six days or nights weekly, but this period for the Students on day duty includes two hours classroom study. Those on night duty also spend two hours daily in the classroom for lectures which are scheduled for the late afternoon. It is understood that Newfoundland Student Nurses are the highest paid in Canada. There are other Schools of Nursing in hospitals not operated by Government.

(4) Give the names of all Internes at each of the Hospitals in Newfoundland.

Regarding Internes, we have no records of the staff of hospitals in Newfoundland other than those operated by Government. The only Internes in Government hospitals are those employed at the General Hospital, as follows:

Dr. D. S. Lyon, Dr. G. M. Ogilvie, Dr. Augustus Rowe, Dr. Lothar Sennewald, Dr. R. Sinclair, Dr. A. Taylor, Dr. E. John Scales.

(5) How many Ward Aides are employed at the General Hospital? What wages or salaries are paid, and what are the hours of work?

There are 51 Ward Aides employed at the General Hospital and their salary is at the rate of $1160 per annum, from which $360 per annum is deducted for full board and lodgings, or $100 per annum for one meal daily. The normal working week would consist of 5½ eight hour days, less meal time, but because of the serious shortage of Ward Aides and the absolute necessity of caring for the patients, there has been no alternative but to ask these employees to work long and tedious hours until such time as sufficient Ward Aides can be secured. The period of greatest demand has been during February and March, when some staff worked as much as 66 hours weekly, but, the situation is expected to improve gradually.

(6) I have to say in regard to (a), (c), (d), (e), (f), (g), (h), (i), (j), (k), (m) and (n) the answer is nil. With regard to (b) and (l) and (o) the answer is contained in the answer to No. 10 (1) tabled here today.

(7) I am not ready yet with this answer.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, before we leave that question—I take it the figures which were given with regard to Newfoundland Hardwoods and Atlantic Gypsum and the North Star Cement—it has not been tabled—if the answers had been tabled I need not ask a supplementary question.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I have it here—tabled—these questions or answers are in direct reply to the questions tabled by the honourable gentleman. I am not privileged to word the honourable gentleman's questions, I am not privileged to answer them. It is direct answer to the honourable gentleman's questions, I assure him of that.

Question No. 23:

(a) Answer 13.

(b) $20,000 for one, $14,674 for one; two of them cost $14,500 each, one cost $12,500, one cost 12,000, six cost $10,000, one cost $4,875.

(c) They have a further contract to make five pictures: three at $10,000 and one at $14,000 and one at $20,000.

We aim at making an average of about ten or twelve pictures a year running at a cost to the Treasury of something like fifty thousand to a hundred thousand dollars a year. I may say that those pictures, in addition, to being shown in many many hundreds of places right across Canada are shown in something between four and five hundred places in Newfoundland.

(d) $200,000.
(e) Nil.
(f) 65, that is fifty permanently and fifteen temporary or part time, with an annual wage bill of $120,000.

Question No. 24:

MR. POWER: I think I referred that to the Department of Economic Development.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That has not come back to my department since it was submitted by the Minister of Finance. When it comes, we will put it through the usual process, and as soon as this is done, I will be glad to table the answer. I have not even read it.

MR. SPEAKER: Question No. 25, No. 26, No. 27—addressed to the Honourable the Minister of Fisheries.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I have to apologize for the absence of the Honourable the Minister of Fisheries. At my request he is absent, holding most important negotiations with Fish Industrialists with a view to furthering our programme and policy of developing fisheries. He may be here before we rise, if so, if he has the answers prepared, he will gladly table them.

MR. SPENCER: I have the answer to Question No. 8 and the answer to Question No. 15—Order Paper March 30th.

Question No. 15, asked by Mr. Higgins:

(a) The names (b) the nationalities and (c) the salaries of all engineers, architects, surveyors and draughtsmen employed by the Department of Public Works.

I shall not take the time of the House to read these names but shall make one or two brief comments. There are altogether 31 engineers and/or draughtsmen. Of the total of 31, nine are Europeans. I shall particularly refrain from trying to name these gentlemen; I might run into the same difficulties as the Leader of the Opposition in trying to pronounce them.

MR. HOLLETT: How do you know I ran into difficulty?

MR. SPENCER: You announced it yourself. In connection with the 31 engineers, I have stated that nine are Europeans. Our only regret in the department is that due to large demands being made upon it, we have been unable, with all the effort made in the last three or four years, to obtain even more men of the calibre we have employed. I regret very much indeed that we have been unable to get twenty or more of these men from Europe. We have only been able to get nine.
The following information is supplied by the Honourable Minister of Public Works in reply to Question No. 15 (Mr. Higgins)—Order Paper of March 30th, 1954:

Adjourned Debate on Address in Reply.

MR. FOGWILL: Before saying anything else in respect to the Speech from the Throne, I wish to join with my colleagues in expressions of loyalty to Her Majesty.

I wish to offer congratulations to the mover and seconder who moved that a Committee be appointed to draft the Address in Reply on opening day.

Now, before continuing, I would like to say something in regard to something that may have been said in respect to the debating ability of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition. I do not care, personally, what any member on the opposite side of the House may say in respect to me, but I would like to take this opportunity of saying something about the first Leader of the Opposition since we became a Province of Canada. The first Leader, Mr. John G. Higgins (he was our first Leader after we became a Province of Canada)—I may say—I will say—he is a debater of no mean ability. He took part in every debate in this Chamber while he was here, on every occasion which demanded him to take part. Mr. Higgins was at all times honest, forthright and to the point. Sometimes his remarks were witty and when Mr. Higgins and the Premier crossed swords, it was my opinion that the Premier came off second best.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Always!

MR. FOGWILL: He was not dropped from the leadership of the Conservative Party, but he declined to become a Member because of personal reasons. If anyone in this House cares to take the time to look up the 1949 Hansard of the Proceedings, he will find that the debating ability of Mr. Higgins is unquestioned. I have no doubt at all that if Mr. J. G. Higgins cares, at any future time, to become a candidate, he will be welcomed as a member. I think his presence here will be an asset to this Chamber.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Hear! Hear!

MR. FOGWILL: I think we need this man. I am glad and happy to be associated with the present Leader of the Opposition, with the member for St. John's West, the member for St. John's East and also the member for Bell Island. I hope I will have the opportunity of being associated with them for many years to come, whether in this House or out of this House, because I believe, regardless of what may be said by the members opposite, I believe the members I spoke of—the two on my right and the two on my left—I believe they are needed in this Chamber.

Some may say that yesterday was the anniversary of Confederation of Newfoundland with Canada; some may say it is today. It does not matter whether it is yesterday or today. I do not intend to go into details as to how Confederation was brought about, except to say that one of the main features of how it was brought about was because of the promises held out to Newfoundland people of Family Allowances, Old Age Pensions and Unemployment Insurance. These benefits are benefits which go out to all Provinces. We got the benefits when we became a Province, but of course we pay for them. We pay for all of it. We pay for every cent through Federal and Provincial taxation.

Confederation was brought about also by promises of full employment, reduced living costs, industrial expansion and lower taxation.

And so we became a Province of Canada. We have been a Province for five years. Where do we find ourselves today? We find ourselves, with the exception of social services, in practically the same position we found ourselves in, in 1949. In fact, the cost of living has increased. It has gone up. It is higher now than it has ever been before perhaps. Taxes have gone up. Income taxes have increased. It has been the record of the Government of this Province that they have increased taxation year by year. That has been part of their program or policy ever since they came into office. In the first session of the House, they put on a Social Security Assessment which I would call a General Sales Tax of the Province, now bringing in a revenue of some six million dollars. Anyway, we were promised no new taxation, but that taxation would be lower. In that respect alone, the Government has failed the people of this Province, just as they failed the people of this Province in many other things.

Insofar as Unemployment is concerned, the workers pay for it, along with his employer. There is an assessment on the employer and one on the worker himself. Both these assessments are passed on to the consumer. You get nothing unless you pay for it.

We were promised industrial development. We were told in no uncertain terms that risk capital of Canada and of the United States were only willing and ready to put money into this Province to develop our natural resources. That did not happen. Up to the present time, with the exception of the development on Labrador, which took place long before we became a Province of Canada, we have had no risk capital coming into this Province to help us develop our natural resources.

I want to read to the House something in respect of our being a Province of Canada—words of the Premier himself which he uttered to this Chamber in 1952:

"From the moment that Newfoundland became a Province of Canada a great and far-reaching question presented itself to us and pressed inexorably for an early answer. It was a question that could not be dodged, the answer to which could not be postponed. To any person of ordinary perception this question overshadowed all else in his contemplation of union with Canada and his assessment of that union's effect upon Newfoundland. Was Newfoundland to go ahead, or behind? Was her population to grow, or decline? Would the end of, say, the first ten years of union find Newfoundland stronger, more populous, more truly prosperous?"

We are entering upon the sixth year of Confederation. Five years have gone past. I bring this to the attention of the House, because it seems to me that the Premier himself, who was one of those responsible for bringing about Confederation with Canada, expressed doubt when he uttered words as to whether it would bring lasting benefits upon this Island. I will not say any more about Confederation, but it has not brought to this Province the things the people thought it would bring to them. It has not brought full employment. It has not brought a solution to our perennial problem the fisheries. It has not brought about the development of any of our natural resources, with the exception of the jumble which the Government has made in spending so much of the people's money in new industries under the Economic Development program. In 1949 the then Minister of Finance, the Honourable Mr. Quinton said:

"However, the Government is keenly aware of the many and intricate problems which will undoubtedly confront salt fish exporters in the future and, in conjunction with the Newfoundland Associated Fish Exporters Limited, the Newfoundland Fisheries Board and the Department of Fisheries, Ottawa, these problems are being carefully studied in an effort to arrive at a satisfactory solution."

That was said in 1949 in November, and the Government is responsible for this utterance. They knew in 1949 that the fisheries of this country needed some aid, some assistance and an early solution to the problem.

They were promised that before 1949. That is one of the reasons why we became a Province; because the people concerned thought they were told to believe that the solution to the fisheries problem would be brought about through Confederation—if not then it would be brought about by the Liberal Government.

In 1949 also we find this was said in the Budget Speech:

"We believe that great changes must come in the production side of our fisheries. Over half our people are directly dependent upon the fisheries, and overall improvement in our Newfoundland economy is unthinkable without far-reaching development in the fisheries.

That was said five years ago and it has taken this Government five years to come to the point. They are lax in their duty to the people of this country. I think it is time they got down to trying to solve the problems of the Newfoundland fisheries.

In 1950 this was said in the Budget Speech:

"I am happy to say that the Government of Newfoundland agrees wholeheartedly with the Government of Canada in the opinion that our Newfoundland fisheries must undergo, in certain respects, some sweeping changes. These changes will not take place overnight, and they will not take place without the expenditure of considerable sums of money. There will always be a sale for some salt codfish, but we must aim at reducing the overall quantity of codfish to be marketed in Europe in that form. We must aim at reducing our present degree of dependence upon the codfisheries, by turning our attention increasingly to other fisheries which Providence has bountifully placed within our reach. We must aim at breaking the age-old dependence of our inshore fishermen upon small, open boats, and turn to more modern boats, more dependable types of engines, and newer types of fishing gear. We must aim at the establishment of many new fishing plants to handle our various types of fish by freezing, by reduction to meal and oil, and by other and even newer processes.

"Since we united with Canada, the business side of our fisheries—inspection, and the like—is the care of the Government of Canada, through the Newfoundland Fisheries Board and Nafel. This fact leaves the Government of Newfoundland free to devote its attention, so far as our fisheries are concerned, to the immediate questions of methods of production—such as types of boats, engines and gear—and methods of handling and processing our fish. Even in this the Government of Canada, with a generous realization of our problems, is willing to assist in many practical ways; and between the two Governments, with the willing and eager co-operation of the fishermen and the trade, some notable strides should be made in the next few years in these new directions which I have roughly outlined. Speaking for the Government of Newfoundland, I can say quite frankly that we are somewhat impatient in the matter, but I hasten to add that it is far from being our intention to rush headlong into innovation and change.
We are giving careful and thorough study to the whole question, and each move we make will form a necessary part of a general pattern of action being worked out."

That was in 1950.

In 1951, they have this to say; and I quote from the Budget Speech of that day:

"Nor have we been content, in the past year or two, just to talk about economic development. On the contrary, it is the simple truth to say that more has been accomplished in the past two years than in any similar period throughout the whole history of Newfoundland. In the fishing industry we have guaranteed bank loans to every fishing firm that was able to meet our conditions and was anxious to expand and enlarge its modern facilities. We have refused no firm that was willing to expand and was able to meet our terms, and this policy we shall continue to practise.

"We have lately undertaken to arrange financing that should result in two large new fish plants being established, one at Placentia and one at Grand Bank. We have been assisting to secure the establishment of another large new plant at Gaul-tois. All of these are on the South-West coasts. We have urged the owners of the plants at St. Anthony and Bonavista to double their present capacity, and the owners of the plant at Englee to reopen and considerably to enlarge."

Now, Mr. Speaker, I want to quote something from the Budget Speech of 1953. It says here:

"A very large proportion of our people still get their living, such as it is, from the fisheries; so it would be idle to suppose that Newfoundland can be enduringly prosperous if the fishermen do not thrive. This Government, who owe their very existence so much to the warm-hearted support of the fishermen, would be false to their destiny if they failed to devote a very large part of their energies to a great program of developing the fisheries. This the Government have seen clearly from the beginning."

The Government did see that from the beginning—then why did they not go out and embark on some kind of a fisheries program, starting from 1949? They did neglect the fisheries.
It is a well-known fact. It is a well-known fact that fisheries have been neglected by the Government since they came into office. Suddenly we find them going out on a fisheries program. They say they are going to spend millions this year on expansion of the fisheries. Why did not the Government lay down a program in 1949 and start from there? Because of the inexperience of the various members of the Government, not only the back benchers, but of the Ministers concerned. Perhaps, Mr. Speaker, they did do their best, but it is no use, Mr. Speaker, for them to hide the fact that their inexperience did not allow them to embark upon the fishery programme, so what did they do? They embarked upon a program of industrial expansion of a different nature. They put thousands of the Newfoundland Surplus into an Industrial program which is entirely foreign to us. Some of it may pay off and some may not pay off, but Mr. Speaker, I think that also it is possible that the Government this year may be able to do something and lay down some program to bring about a permanent solution to the fisheries program, but it is very difficult for me to understand how they can do it at this late time. Because Mr. Speaker, we have had a declining market in this past five or six years in our fisheries to an extent that, in fact, it seems to me, Mr. Speaker, some of the members on the other side of the House advised the fishermen to haul up their boats. Sir, we have had a program of seiners, draggers, trawlers and the rest this last few years, plus the Labrador schooners converted to long-lining at a cost of $110,000.

MR. SMALLWOOD: But we have done nothing.

MR. FOGWILL: Something but not enough. Mr. Speaker, I am not going to talk about the Icelandic boats. The Government admitted their mistake.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Why not give us a little more—do!

MR. MURRAY: Tell us about the man from Tors Cove.

MR. FOGWILL: Mr. Speaker, I will say this. As far as I am concerned, the Government's programme since they came into office has just been a question of expediency from day to day and from month to month, and you will find in the press startling announcements which have been made from time to time. In the first instance, Sir, if we remember, we had Rockefeller, I.B.E.C., Seigheim, Icelandic Boats—a half million dollars gone down the drain. Where does it leave us?

It is time, Sir, the Government did get hold of itself and begin to do something, for what I call one of the main industries of this Island, the fisheries. So many of our people are dependent upon the fishery for their livelihood. It is no use for the Government, Mr. Speaker, to blame the failures of the fishery upon NAFEL. It is no good for the Government to tell me, nor, this Island of Newfoundland that NAFEL should have its teeth kicked in—we still have NAFEL, we still have it here. It is a selling organization, Mr. Speaker set up long before this Government set up office. This Government accepted the fact they were here as a selling organization, and a couple of years ago they agreed they should still continue to sell Newfoundland fish, and regardless of the fact that only a short time ago it was said, and the Premier was the man who was supposed to have said it, that NAFEL should have its teeth kicked in, and while NAFEL existed, and if it is not abolished the fishermen will starve. Why say these things, Mr. Speaker? We still have NAFEL. If the Premier and the Government think NAFEL should go, why don't you put them out, if they are useless to the fishery why not dispense with them?
No, Mr. Speaker, they don't dispense with NAFEL, they continue to work with NAFEL and so does the Federal Government continue to work with NAFEL. If they don't want NAFEL dispensed with; it is useless putting headlines in the press so as to becloud some other issue which may be tormenting the Government at the time. That is what is happening in regard to the fisheries, the Government don't know what to do and they never have. We are supposed to have fishermen on the other side of this Honourable House. We may have some men over there who worked at fish, I never have. They have some little experience in catching a fish over the side of a boat, but they have no experience, Mr. Speaker, in the marketing of our salt cod, none whatsoever. And it is time they started to learn something about the fishery. They have been telling us people here so long now what they know about fish, they come from fishing settlements, their fathers and uncles and aunts and nephews and nieces were fishermen, everyone belonging to them. It is time they stopped talking about all their relations who were fishermen and begin to talk sense.

Mr. Speaker, I will say this much; if the Government does bring in such a programme to help and assist the fisheries of this Island we are only too ready to go along and agree with anything that would be sensible, something that would help to bring along a permanent solution to the fishery problem. I am going to finish with fisheries now, Mr. Speaker and speak about agriculture.

That is another point, Mr. Speaker, which the Government has been attacking. They have done very little, Mr. Speaker, this last five years in regard to agriculture.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Name another government that ever did!

MR. FOGWILL: I think, Mr. Speaker, that it is time the present Government should do something about it. Agriculture in Newfoundland was always faced with the problems of selling its products in competition with those coming in from the mainland. After we became a Province of Canada, Mr. Speaker, our farmers were faced with stiffer competition, that is a well known fact. Although perhaps the Government did not realize it, or were not prepared to face that fact for the first two or three years of union with Canada, I believe they have come to the point now, Mr. Speaker, where they have to face that a considerable portion of our population do earn their living from agriculture. Mr. Speaker, there is room for considerable improvement in agricultural activities of those who work at that particular work. It may be of interest, Sir, to the House if I quoted some figures in respect to the amount of meats and vegetables imported into this Island prior to Confederation. We did import, Mr. Speaker, something in the vicinity of twenty million pounds a year of meats, fresh, salt and meat products.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It is possibly double that now.

MR. FOGWILL: It could possibly be. In the way of vegetables; cabbage, onions, potatoes in 1944-45, 2,851,000 lbs; milk products we imported eight and a half million pounds. Yes, Mr. Speaker, it has gone up since then.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It is three or four times that now.
MR. FOGWILL: Well, if it has gone up three or four times you will see our farmers must have a very difficult time trying to compete with stuff coming in from the Mainland.

I have not very much more to say, Sir, I am not going to say anything about our forests because I don't know much about them. But in closing, Mr. Speaker, I am going to make some remarks upon one of the deficiencies of the Government responsible for bringing so much poor relief to this Province, and that is the Department of Liquor Control. My honourable friend from St. John's West did say in his speech a few days ago that when the Bill was brought in here, "An Act to Control the Distribution of Alcoholic Liquors," it was introduced as a Temperance Act. That is quite true. I remember that quite clearly, it was introduced as a temperance measure. Since that time, Mr. Speaker, including this year that it was introduced, the Government sold twenty-seven million dollars worth of alcoholic liquor including beer. Twenty-seven million dollars, Mr. Speaker, including beer sold through the Board of Liquor Control. It was the hope, I think, of many people in this land when this temperance act was brought in, it would reduce the consumption of alcoholic liquors. It did not do so, and of the twenty-seven million dollars worth of liquors and beer the Government sold in the last five years they realized a profit, Mr. Speaker, of fourteen million dollars. I got these figures from the Auditor General's Report. Fourteen million dollars, Mr. Speaker, representing profits from the sale of liquor which was controlled by a temperance measure. What did that amount to, Sir? In just a couple of years ago, I think it was the year after this temperance measure was brought in, the Government sold eight hundred thousand dollars worth of alcoholic liquor plus several million bottles of beer. But in this past three years, Mr. Speaker, the average sale of bottles of liquor has amounted to one million for each year, one million bottles of liquor for each year and ten million bottles of beer. That is quite a lot of revenue, Mr. Speaker.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It is the smallest consumption in all Canada.

MR. FOGWILL: It does not matter whether it is the smallest consumption this side of Timbucktoo, or anywhere else. I am speaking of this having been brought in as a temperance act and it was not. I said on that occasion it was in my opinion a revenue act, and it has been proven since, Mr. Speaker, that it is a revenue act because it brought in additional revenue to the Province.

Now, Mr. Speaker I will close, and in doing so I will say this: Newfoundland's economy is not of a very robust nature, we are deficient in power, we have no coal, we have no oil and we have a very limited supply of water power. Any country which has a deficiency in power, Mr. Speaker, is going to find it very difficult in industrial expansion, such as the Government has endeavoured to bring about in the past two or three years. I think we should endeavour to bring about a great expansion of our natural resources and our greatest natural resource is that of our fishery and our mines and of our forests. This is where the future of Newfoundland will lie. Whether we get a good living from it or frugal that is where our future lies on our own natural resources. Providing, Mr. Speaker, they are carried on in a right and proper manner, we possibly may be able to survive and maintain a decent standard of living as a Province of Canada. But it is useless, Mr. Speaker, for anybody to go into rhapsodies about industrial expansion by way of heavy industry the way the Government has in the past few years, because we are lacking, Mr. Speaker, in many of the raw materials used to bring about such industries.

So, I will close by saying I do hope if the Government brings in a programme here in regard to some permanent solution to our fishery problems, I believe it will find the Opposition very sympathetic to it and that we will support it. Thank you very much Mr. Speaker.

MR. J. R. COURAGE: Mr. Speaker, in rising to take part in the debate on the address in reply I shall confine myself to the Speech from the Throne. Like all members of this House I associate myself with the expression of loyalty to Her Majesty the Queen whose coronation took place since we last met here. The coronation is a dedication, it is an ancient ceremony of very religious significance. But we must remember that Her Gracious Majesty, the Queen, was a dedicated woman long before her accession to the Throne. We hope, Mr. Speaker, that her reign over us will be long and glorious.

I should like also to congratulate and welcome to this House the Honourable the junior member for St. John's West. I took the trouble to find out who was the senior and who was the junior member, and I found out that the Honourable Leader of the Opposition is the senior by some five years. I think, Sir, that the Honourable member will add much to this House, and that we will profit by his wide parliamentary experience.

There were not very many points made by the Opposition to which I can reply. They did go back over the industrial programme and try to show that it has been a failure. No doubt the picture of the industrial programme will be presented to the country by the Premier when we are discussing the budget speech.

All the speakers of the Opposition right up to the last speaker did prove to me that a person must be very careful what he says, because they did go back and quote word for word many speeches made by the Premier in this House, and with the persistence of a nagging woman they tried to prove that all is ruin as far as these industries are concerned. I cannot agree with that Mr. Speaker, and I am certain that the Premier will refute these arguments at the proper time.

Now, I cannot let today pass without some reference to Confederation. It was mentioned yesterday by the Premier and for once the Opposition departed from their usual practice of deriding Confederation, and those who brought it about. Perhaps it was because last year I told them I always liked to hear them do that. I am one of those who in some small way supported Confederation. I am Mr. Speaker, proud I was a Confederate many years before the National Convention came into being. I grew up in Nova Scotia from the time I was four until I was nine, and I was not back in this Province very long, though only nine years old, before in my own opinion I began to see that Confederation could bring many blessings to this Province. Before the days of family allowances I own that I was a Confederate, and I was one of the very first to congratulate the man who is now Premier, this could not have been any later than 1947, on the stand he was taking in the National Convention, and offered to help in whatever small way I could. I believe, Sir, that Confederation is the beginning of a good way of living for the people of Newfoundland. It has not been proven as yet. It has only been in being for five years, and this Government has only been here five years. I believe that the fallacy of all the arguments that have been put forward by my honourable friends on the opposite side of the House is this, that they are expecting too much too soon. They have not given the Government credit for things which the Governments has done.

MR. HOLLETT: Yes we have.

MR. COURAGE: They have pointed to the money spent on the industrial programme. But that was only eighteen millions out of forty million that has been spent. They have mentioned nothing about new roads, about the new schools, the bridges, about hospitals and the many increased medical services, about doctors and hospital boats on the South Coast, the raises in teacher's salaries. I could go on for a long time and show that only about one-third of the surplus was spent on the industrial programme, and that we cannot write off this eighteen million dollars as a dead loss, not yet anyway. I would ask them to reserve their judgment and possess their soul in patience and wait. You know, after all, what was there sacred about those forty million dollars? What would the opposition have done with them? Would they have put them in the bank, or put it in a chest and sat on it—would the people of Fogo who wanted a hospital, the people of Fortune Bay who wanted roads, would the other people who were crying out for increased services have thanked the Opposition if they had said: "We have the money but we are sitting on the chest"? No. They would have been forced, Mr. Speaker, to spend the money in the same way this Government had to spend the money.

MR. BROWNE: Not in the same way.

MR. COURAGE: I don't know whether you would have spent it wiser or as wisely as the Government. The Opposition, Mr. Speaker, certainly could not have given more thought to the welfare of this country than has been given by this present Government—I say that in all sincerity. And if they could have spent it a different way, why don't they say so? Why do they persist in walking backwards across the stage of history? I say walking backwards because according to all the speeches made here from the Opposition, they have been looking backwards. It is time, Mr. Speaker, we turn around and look forward into the future.

MR. HOLLETT: To what?

MR. COURAGE: The fishery has been mentioned, and we have been told nothing has been done about the fisheries. That is not so. Let us look at the record: Quite a number of things have been done to encourage the fisheries. As much has been done in the past five years to encourage the development of the fisheries as has ever been done before by any government in ten years. The Federation of Fishermen was set up under Government sponsorship—that was one step forward. Fish plants have sprung up under Government sponsorship in different parts of the country. I am very happy to be able to report that one of the fish plants built was at Gaultois, and that, Mr. Speaker, was a good thing for the fishing economy of Hermitage Bay. There are also many other fish plants. I can think of two on the South Coast that are now in being. There are some sixteen Danish Seiners operating at the present moment on the south coast. I might say that I agree with my friend from Fogo when he says more money will have to be spent on the herring fishery because at the present time we are taking a very small number of herring from the sea. Up until this week I was very sad as day after day I listened to the radio, and letter after letter came in to me from Fortune Bay, and they all had the same cry—No herring! No herring! This week the report showed that they are catching herring everywhere in Fortune Bay. People are catching and packing the herring and they are busy. But, Mr. Speaker, before these herring came into Fortune Bay there might have been a way, if we had known as much as they know in British Columbia, whereby we could have known when they would come in, where they come from, and where the main body of the herring were. Because it is my belief that we never see the main body of herring—that there is a main body of herring somewhere off Newfoundland but never comes to the shore. I would recommend to the Government that a great deal of money be spent on the development of this herring fishery, in finding out the facts.

It has been asked—why did not the Government go ahead sooner with its programme for fishery development?

The Government, as the Opposition very well knows, and the country very well knows, was waiting for the Walsh Report. The Walsh Report is one of the most significant documents ever produced in the history of Newfoundland. I believe this is the first time in this session that reference has been made to it. This book, Mr. Speaker, I would recommend to the Opposition for study. This book is to be the guide book of the fishery development programme. I submit that the Government could not rush blindly ahead until it knew where it was going, and there are many things in this book to be followed in working out the development programme. I believe, Mr. Speaker, that there is a future for the fisheries in Newfoundland, and particularly in the future of the fisheries of the South Coast. One thing we lack in this country at the present time is leadership.

MR. HOLLETT: Oh no!

MR. COURAGE: I am speaking of leadership for those who have the money and the initiative to start fishing. That is the kind of leadership I am speaking of. I am not speaking of political leadership now. There is a great future, Mr. Speaker, for young, educated people today to take up the fisheries as a vocation. I know that even now with what fish plants we have, there is a great demand for managers, for top personnel in fish plants. And I would advise young people leaving school with their grade XI, or leaving Memorial University to get in on the fisheries development programme, to get into a fish plant to start working at a filleting machine or to start working right at the beginning of the processing of fish, to study very carefully with an aim to becoming managers of fish plants themselves. I believe that they can be of great service to their country by doing this, and certainly the monetary rewards paid to top personnel in fish plants are very attractive.

Now, it is quite easy for Honourable members on the other side of the House to make little of what the Government has done and is doing. After all, we would be surprised if they did not do that. It is much easier to tear down than to build up. Let us have more constructive criticism. It is not enough to say the Government should have done this or it should not have done this. What would the Opposition have done?

I am glad to know that the Opposition is behind the fisheries development programme. I am delighted to know that. I look forward to constructive criticism on their part. We must remember we are all Newfoundlanders. We are not here to bark at one another across the House, but as Legislators, trying to do what we think best for the Province and the people.

There are many things I could speak about. There is need for roads in this country. Development of roads must go hand in hand with our economy. Yesterday I presented a Petition from the people of Bay D'Espoir asking for a road connecting with the Trans-Canada Highway. I understand there is a road of sorts connecting it, some eighty miles distant. There are other roads I shall ask for. On the South Coast we need roads, and roads can be built. I believe fisheries development is going to depend largely on what can be done on the South Coast. They are near the Grand Banks there. There are good harbours there, they are ice-free; there are good fishermen and good fishing all the year around. They are fishing at this moment. When other people have the misfortune to be ice-bound, the people on the South Coast have good fishing. It would not occur to them to do anything else. I am very glad to see that the Government is embarking upon this well-planned program of fisheries development.

Later on I shall have more to say in the Budget Speech debate regarding this development programme, especially as it affects the district which I have the honour to represent.

At the present time I would end my brief speech by saying I have confidence in Newfoundland and in its people; that we must turn around—no more looking over our shoulders at the past; we must go forward strong and firm in our faith and in this way we will let the other Provinces know that Newfoundland is on the march.

MR. HEFFERTON: Mr. Speaker, in the few moments I propose to give to this debate, I aim to follow the example set by the member for Hermitage and confine my remarks to matters contained in the Speech from the Throne or to matters which may be incidental in illustrating some points I might endeavour to make.

To me it seems that the members of the Opposition who have thus far spoken have singularly failed in two particulars in dealing with this debate. First, they have criticized the Speech from the Throne for what they claim it does not contain. In other words, they have put forward the inference or statement that the Speech from the Throne is a defence of everything done. To the best of my knowledge and to the best of my reading, that has not been the practice of the Speech from the Throne at any time in the past.

Secondly, they have endeavoured to criticize the Speech from the Throne for what it does contain, and in doing so they have failed to note the significance of the four basic points which are outlined therein.

There are four basic things mentioned in the Speech from the Throne. They refer specifically to agriculture, forestry, fishery and the revision of the Terms of Union. Very scant reference has been made by any speaker on the other side to any of these four important basic factors in our economy.

We do not live in the past. Past experiences are of some use to us inasmuch as we might endeavour to learn from mistakes in order that we may chart a course for the future. Listening to the remarks of the honourable members of the Opposition, we must assume one of two things. Either they have been guilty of ignoring the significance of the things set down in the Speech from the Throne; or they failed to grasp their significance to the people of this Province.

Reference has been made to various events of the past five years. It might help if we went back to September, 1949 when the devaluation of the pound took place, we were confronted with something which had recurred frequently in the past and all at once, overnight, we found the basic industries on which our people depended were in short demand, and we were unable to market our products. In other words, because of the fact that we had all our eggs in one basket, we were unable to find subsistence on which to exist.

Happily world conditions changed quickly, and because of war conditions there was a rapid trend in their improvement in early 1950. Since that time, of course, we have gone through a period of comparative prosperity, but the lesson to be learned was one that impinges itself upon our consciences and we felt, rightly or wrongly, that it was up to the Government to try and diversify the products of our economy, in order that we might increase the opportunities of holding on to our subsistence in such an event. That was the reason why we embarked upon an energetic and enthusiastic search for products we had, in order that we might even up the various products which we thought we might be able to export. There was another reason, however, why we engaged upon this research and it has already been referred to. The minute the depression struck us in 1929, it was necessary to focus the attention of the people upon the potentialities before us in our Island home. As a Government, we were mainly concerned in trying to bring about changes in the economy which might entice more people to remain at home rather than emigrate, and thereby make poorer the economy of our Island. During the past five years we have embarked upon various enterprises by enticing people to come in and make use as much as possible of some of the materials which are to be found in our Island home.

We have a strange paradox in the arguments of the junior member for St. John’s East when he criticizes the Government for building the Cement Plant which exported hundreds of thousands of tons of our materials and also decreasing importations from abroad; and at the same time criticizes the Government because they failed to establish an oil-hardening plant in Harbour Grace. If there is one thing remarkable about the speeches of the Opposition, it is the consistency of their inconsistencies.

Having tried to do what we could, during the past four or five years, to broaden the basis of our economy, we at no time during that period neglected the basic factors on which we previously existed and which are now important to our livelihood.

The criticism has been made that we neglected agriculture during our five years of office. In 1949-50 we were confronted, shortly after our coming to Office, with the situation that large importations of potatoes were coming from Prince Edward Island. Immediately the Government took steps to have rigid inspection and grading, so that the local farmer was able not only to raise his crops, but to get clear of them. It is on the record that we were fairly successful at the time. There were various complaints reached us, showing, that the steps taken by us were taken cognizance of by those who had been selling us goods.

It is not my purpose to deal with any matter which relates to the department of Mines and Resources, but I would like to say, without infringing too much on the field of the Minister of that particular department, that it is common knowledge that during the past four or five years we have encouraged the raising of sheep, the clearing of land and a number of things in connection with farming.

Speaking of the department of which I happen to be in charge, our yearly requisitions of meats (to which the member for St. John's East referred), they amount to approximately 500,000 pounds a year in St. John's alone. The bulk of that is supplied by local farmers. Our requisitions on eggs alone, annually, for the Government institutions of St. John's, is somewhere between eighty and one hundred thousand dozen. Most of these are supplied by local poultrymen. Wherever possible, the Government's policy is to buy from local producers, not only the primary products but the manufactured products as well.

In spite of that, we are only too conscious of the fact that there are a number of things—difference in soil, for instance—of which we are ignorant. Hence the royal commission to go into these questions and give us the necessary means to formulate a policy, whereby agriculture will become more and more a basic factor in our livelihood.

Secondly, Mr. Speaker, the speech from the Throne refers to a commission on forestry. Every member of this House is conscious of the important part that forestry and forestry products play in our economy. We are aware that in all our industries, in dollars and cents, forestry products are the greatest contributors. Apart from the six hundred thousand tons of paper exported annually from our shores and which contributes so largely to our export trade, we have hundreds of thousands of cords of wood cut and consumed as fuel; hundreds of thousands of cords of lumber used for various purposes in fishery development—fishermen's flakes, fishermen's houses, and including boat building. On the other hand, we realize that the two paper companies have large areas of our forests, the control of which is lost to the Crown in perpetuity, yet we also know there are many areas in this Province which are being denuded of the trees and wood which played so important a part in the livelihood of the people living in the area.

But, so great is the increase in the consumption of paper, people are now studying and experimenting with various kinds of substitutes in order that they may find something that will ease the complete usage of pulp in paper at the present time. But consumption is so rapid we need not fear that paper made of wood shall not be wanted. Because of the important part it plays in our economy, it was desirable to have a forestry commission to go into the situation and see if we are making the most of our resources and for the purpose of conservation, research, the expanding of forestry policy in holding on in perpetuity to an industry which we have, without any diminution.

Thirdly, we come to the fisheries. Again, one of the arguments advanced repeatedly by the Opposition at various times is the allegation that this government ever since 1949, has done very little for the fisheries. There was a very good reason in 1949 why we did not take all the money out of the kitty and put it into a fishery development programme. As long as I can recall either from personal experience or from reading, we have had problems in the fishing industry. Those problems have changed during the years. In 1914, 1915 and 1916, when I was fishing, we considered $6.00 a quintal for No. 1 merchantable shore fish to be a good price. We considered $1.00 per hogshead for salt to be as much as we should pay. Today, fishermen are paid $12. At least that is what they should get—twice what it was forty years ago; and they have to pay six times as much for a hogshead of salt. It would be an easy matter indeed to say that the cost of production is too high; the final returns to the fishermen too low. It would be equally simple to say "Let us subsidize the fishery." I have no intention of debating protection versus free trade. I would call to the attention of the House that subsidies create within themselves, very often, the germs of further taxation. We have only to look at the huge surpluses piled up in the United States and in Canada to some extent, during the past two years and note the loss which has been incurred on some of these surpluses, resulting in a decrease in trade operations; in some instances resulting in a curtailed flow of trade; in order to realize what danger there may lie in subsidizing even primary products.

To argue, on the other hand, as the Opposition has done, that nothing has been done for the fisheries during the past four or five years, is to state something which is definitely untrue, because right from the very beginning, most of the members on this side of the House whose representation is being made from fishery constituencies, were conscious of the fact always that something will have to be done for the fisheries. Not only would it benefit the constituents, but would determine largely the fortunes of themselves, if the time should come when they wanted re-election to this House.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, a word; I did not quite understand the honourable member, but what I understood him to say was that the Opposition are guilty of untruth, or some remark that he made to that effect. If that is correct I would like the honourable gentleman to retract his statement.

MR. HEFFERTON: If I said the wrong thing I take it back. Apart from the various things that have been done during the years under survey, we have to bear in mind that right from the very beginning we felt that it might be a good thing to draw off some of the people dependent solely on the salt codfish industry and bring them into other branches of the fishery. Therefore, during this period, sir, the government has been responsible for lending and making grants and helping and assisting certain firms engaged in the fish processing business of somewhere between seven and ten million dollars altogether. In addition, during that same period the government has done quite a bit of experimental fishing in different areas, in different places in order to ascertain the best time of year that might be required by the fishermen in order to make their living more productive and in various kinds of boats. Yes, the experiment with the herring fishery was carried on and like my colleague the honourable member for Fogo, I am not quite convinced that the herring fishery might not become far more important than it is at the present time. I am not going to give the whole history of the various attempts made during the years to try and help the fishermen but only a few months ago when the returns to the fishermen were based on a very low price per quintal, the government was instrumental in giving to the fishermen upwards of one million dollars in fishery payments in order to bolster up prices they received in marketing their product. I am not suggesting for a moment, I am not arguing or contending we have done all we might have done for fisheries. But I do say that before venturing in, it was necessary for us to accumulate more information on the problems with us for centuries. One of the earliest steps was to set up a commission which after nearly two years gave us a report which has not yet been implemented in full, but which, because of the effort put forward by this government we now have the government of Newfoundland and the government of Canada collaborating to some extent at least in trying to bring in a better system that will yield more to the producers in the various stages of the fishing industry, whether that be in actual securing and catching, whether it be in the processing or the culling or finally in the marketing, the whole thing has been under review for a considerable time, and only now within the last few months have we been in a position to formulate a policy, which in our opinion will resound to the benefit and prosperity of the people whom we represent in this House, Mr. Speaker, that in many ways is the most significant of all that is contained in the Speech from the Throne. Those of us who have been in this House since 1949 will recall that annually at this time there was pronounced on the floor of this House dire cries against the terms of union, how badly they have been bungled, how inefficient they are, and calls were repeatedly made for some attempt at revision. They were aware, as we all were, that written into the Terms of Union there was a proviso that within a certain number of years after union these terms would be open for at least consideration. More than half the time has gone, and before the presentation of our case we felt, and I think rightly and properly, that we should start to prepare our case, and get a very fair idea of the things which happened to us since union with Canada, and thus give us a basis which we did not have in 1949 for trying to compare some of our services with those similar provinces on the Mainland. We are in a better position to assess the taxable capacity of our people. Incidentally, Mr. Speaker, the senior member for St. John’s East referred to the social assessment, complained bitterly that we had placed a social assessment on our people and as a consequence the cost of living had gone up, not entirely because of the assessment but that it had been a considerable factor. Had we remained free or as we were prior to 1949 expenses would have gone up, but the income would not have been there to meet them, consequently we would have had to seek for more than a three per cent social security assessment. As I was saying, sir, half the time has gone, and some months ago we felt that it was necessary for us as a government to appoint a representative body in order to try and assess the position of Newfoundland since that union, to try and ascertain how far we have come up the hill during this period; to make comparisons with social services and public services in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, for example, and see whether the terms granted us in 1949 were adequate to us during the years until the terms will come up for revision. I say that during the last four or five years the members of the Opposition have continuously remarked on the fact that the terms of union were inadequate, and yet they ignore entirely that item in the speech from the Throne which says that we are aiming to remedy, if a remedy is found to be desirable and necessary, that which their predecessors year by year and session by session have been clamoring for.

MR. BROWNE: I don’t think it is fair to say we ignored it entirely. I did make a reference to it while I was speaking—as a matter of fact, Mr. Speaker, every year in the House of Commons I have asked that consideration be given to that question.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That was the House of Commons—The honourable member as a Member of the House of Assembly merely mentioned it.

MR. HEFFERTON: I still think, Mr. Speaker, I was perfectly correct in my criticism—they laboured over quite a number of things, particularly happenings of the past, but they passed over almost completely any reference to what may be the most significant thing in the Speech from the Throne.

Mr. Speaker, it is very easy at any time to stand and criticise the sins of commission because as a rule they are open and can be inspected. But it is not so easy to make amends for the sins of omission except where there are glaring instances; where we felt that people have for some reason or other best known to themselves ignored in whole or in part the things which are a vital concern of the constituents who put them in office. I feel that the decision taken some months ago by the government to set up a Royal Commission in order to prepare for and present a case for the terms of union revision—that, I contend, Sir, is one of the important things that this speech contains—it shows that this government as a whole is conscious of the part which that presentation and that possible revision may have on the future economy and upon the prosperity of our island home.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of the debate until tomorrow.

On motion the debate on the Speech from the Throne was adjourned until tomorrow.

MR. DROVER: Mr. Speaker, with the indulgence of the House I should like to give notice of a question.

MR. SPEAKER: It is a Rule of the House that no question may be asked once the Orders of the Day have been entered upon, therefore, it has to be by leave of the House. Does the House give leave?

MR. SPEAKER: Since leave has been granted, the honourable member may give notice of his question.

MR. DROVER: To ask the Honourable the Minister of Health to lay on the table of the House the following information:

A table showing the total amount of money given or advanced to the International Grenfell Association in each year from 1949 to 1953 inclusive.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, before the honourable Minister goes into second reading I would like to rise on a question of privilege. Yesterday I raised the question that this might be a money bill, and stated that if so it should be proceeded with in a different fashion. Now, I feel that the Minister in charge of this Bill realizes that if it is a money Bill the correct procedure has not been followed and that very often there is difficulty in deciding whether a Bill is a money Bill or not. So, I have been giving consideration to the question—in my opinion I believe that is a money Bill and should be proceeded with in the usual way in which money Bills are dealt with.

Our own rules are not very detailed with regard to money bills. Therefore, it has been necessary to have recourse to the rules that guide the House of Commons at Ottawa and in Great Britain. I think it will be admitted there are sufficient authorities on this subject. Our own rules seem to be confined to Standing Order No. 46—"If any motion be made in the House for public aid or charge upon the people, the consideration and debate thereof may not be presently entered upon, but shall be adjourned till such further day as the House thinks fit to appoint, and then it shall be referred to a Committee of the Whole House, before any resolution or vote of the House do pass thereupon." Now, this is a Bill dealing with the Newfoundland Corporation Income Tax Act. It is an amending act, and I believe introduces some new provisions. It may be a surprise to some members to know that we have an Income Tax Act on our statute books. We have this particular Corporation Income Tax Act, 1949, and is collected I believe in cooperation with the Federal Government. Now, having examined the provisions of this section there seems to me to be very little doubt that certain of its provisions at any rate involve new charges upon those corporations concerned. That being so, it is a money Bill, and the Minister should have, or the Minister of Finance at least, should have brought in resolutions which should have been referred to committee in the same way as a supply Bill, or any other ways and means Bill. I have the same argument to advance in regard to another Bill of which notice was given to be read here this afternoon. I would like you, Sir, to give ruling upon these questions. I agree with the manner in which the Attorney General yesterday seemed to depreciate my raising this suddenly, but I feel it is important for us to know whether we are going about the matter in the right way. It is an ancient privilege of the representatives of the people that no charges can be made upon them, no taxation can be laid upon them nor upon the public revenue, except by resolution brought in in the first place in committee. So, Sir, I spent a good deal of time in going through various provisions and comparing them with the present Act, and I find that there are at least two new provisions which involve new taxation upon our people. I will just refer to one briefly which refers to rebates. At the present time if a corporation is overcharged, and if, by a decision of the judge of the Supreme Court it is finally determined, that tax payable is less than the amount assessed and collected, then there has been an overpayment for the taxation year. As the law stands at the present time the interest which the Government must pay on the amount they have received in overpayment is 2%. By this Bill the amount is increased to 6%. I know it seems only a small point, nevertheless it is a tax upon the people. Therefore, I suggest it should be proceeded with by way of resolutions. I think it will be admitted an Income Tax Act as in any case of such a nature it is almost sure to be one page 171—I don't know if Mr. Speaker has that set out very much more fully which should be raised by resolutions. Now, Sir, in “Beauchesne 2nd. edition, in “Beauchesne, 3rd edition—this is the 2nd edition. Section 576 is where a money Bill is defined.

It seems to me this Bill could certainly come within that definition.

Now, there are some reservations made and these are set out very fully in “May,” page 737, but as I read them through I could not see anything to correspond to the provisions in the Act here. In Beauchesne 3rd edition the details for each day during the progress from the resolutions stage up to the third reading are set out, but I would ask your ruling upon that question, Sir.

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Speaker, before you give the ruling, I do think there are one or two points in connection with the point brought out by my learned friend, which I would like to refer for the consideration of Mr. Speaker. Of course, this question of money Bills is most interesting, but it is much less important now than it was when we had a legislative council. My honourable friend, of course, has just come from a place where they have a legislative council, and Beauchesne, of course, contemplates a parliament which has two houses. Now, we are not in that position. It will be remembered that up to 1911 when the Parliament Act was passed in Great Britain, and up to 1951, I think, it was when we passed our legislation act, (which by the way I had the pleasure of drafting) up to these days a money Bill was important they were brought into a House by way of resolutions, when they created a tax on the people, and when they provided for the expenditure of public money. But their powers decreased greatly in 1911 in Great Britain and in 1951 here, because on those dates money Bills became second reading Bills, and consequently, I think the situation now is largely technical. I doubt very much if it would be wise for us as a House to adopt a motion to go beyond our own rules, which only provide that a Bill is a money Bill, when it makes calls on the exchequer or creates taxation on the people. Now, this is a simple act, Mr. Speaker, which does not create any new taxation. It is really almost in the nature of rules and regulations to be followed in the parent act. Although it does, as my learned friend has said, increase the rate of interest payable by a collecting organization to people who have overpaid that money, it is not payable by us. That money is payable by the Federal Government because it is the Federal Government which collects the tax, and the Federal Government who has to pay it back. There is no charge whatsoever on the exchequer of Newfoundland. So that I don't see the relevancy, which is the only one my learned friend raised, this payment of 6% instead of 2% which is not in any way a charge on our exchequer. It is not; it is a charge on the Federal Government paid by the Federal Government. So that, Mr. Speaker, my learned friend has not shown that it is a money Bill. Although technically your honour may feel that your honour has to hold that it is a money Bill, I may feel that Your Honour has to hold that it is a money Bill, I suggest Your Honour do so only after very careful consideration.

MR. SPEAKER: I have given the matter some thought myself, although perhaps not so much study last night as the honourable member who has raised the point. I find that Beauchesne, page 163 quite clearly states that all Bills providing for payment of salaries or any expenditure whatsoever out of public funds must be considered as resolutions. Further, in the same paragraph—whenever the main object of a Bill is payment of public money it must directly originate in Committee of the Whole. Further in the same paragraph I find quotations from a Parliamentary Act passed in the British House in 1911—A Money Bill means a Public Bill which within the opinion of the Speaker of the House of Commons contains provisions dealing with all or any of the following situations, the imposition, repeal, revision, alteration or regulations of taxation. I do not see how this Bill proposes to do any of the above. With reference to "May": Page 703 gives tests used to determine when the expenditure involves a charge—there are, I see, pages of this relating to matters required—the question is: does this Bill contemplate any new and distinct exemptions payable to the exchequer? Does it contemplate any expenditure out of the exchequer? It does slightly, I suppose in that interest increase, but I am rather inclined to think the amount if any to come from the Exchequer of the Province of Newfoundland would be infinitesimal if anything at all. Machinery is already set up here to impose that expenditure, and I hardly see, although I appreciate the opinion offered by the honourable member, how I could rule that this is for that purpose a Money Bill, and I do so rule.

MR. CURTIS: That being, Mr. Speaker, your ruling, in view of the lateness of the hour, it is impossible that I now move the second reading. I therefore move that the second reading and all further Orders of the Day be deferred.
On motion this Order deferred.

On motion remaining Orders of the Day do stand deferred.

On motion the House at its rising adjourned until tomorrow, Friday, at 3:00 of the clock.

FRIDAY, April 2nd, 1954.

The House met at 3:00 of the clock in the afternoon, pursuant to adjournment.

Presenting Petitions

MR. BUTTON: I have here a Petition from the people of Green's Harbour asking that the road be repaired and extended. The road is in a horrible state and said road is essential to the community. This road also leads to blueberry grounds, which is a very important industry. On behalf of the people of Green's Harbour I ask that this Petition be laid on the Table of the House and referred to the Department concerned. The Petition is signed by 115 voters and I may say that I support it wholeheartedly.

I have another Petition from White­way asking that electric lights be given them in the near future. It is signed by forty residents. In connection with this Petition re the lights, it is a matter I will take up later in the session. I ask that it be laid on the Table of the House and referred to the Department concerned.

Moved and seconded that these two Petitions be received and referred to the Departments concerned.

Carried.

HON. L. R. CURTIS (Attorney General): I beg leave to table a Petition on behalf of the residents of Birchy Bay, Boyd's Cove and Port Albert asking to have the highway from Lewisporte to Loon Bay continued on as far as these settlements. The Petition points out the need for the road and they say that during the winter months it is almost impossible to get patients to the hospital at Twillingate and due to the absence of a road, they very often have to depend on Mercy Flights.

They also point out that a lot of the men are working at Bishop's Falls and Botwood and some are engaged at work at Gander. There are no passenger boats. If a road were built, the men could get home, attend to their gardens, sell their crops to Lewisporte and through Lewisporte to the rest of the Island.

Thousands of people pass through these places, Mr. Speaker, I have given much thought to the matter during the past four years. I feel that if such a road were finished, we could do without the services of the coastal boats in that neighbourhood. I have been often naive enough to hope we might make a dicker with the C.N.R., whereby in exchange for a contribution towards finishing the road, we would release them of the services of the boats. I do not know if that is possible, but I have not given up hope of the possibility.

I would ask that this Petition be received and be referred to the Department to which it relates.

Presenting Reports of Standing and Select Committees

None.

HON. W. J. KEOUGH (Minister of Fisheries and Co-operatives): I table the Third Annual Report of the Fisheries Development Loan Board as required by legislation under which these Boards function.

HON. DR. H. L. POTTLE (Minister of Public Welfare): I table Regulations made under the Mothers' Allowance Act, gazetted July 14, 1953.

Giving Notice of Questions

MR. BROWNE: To ask the Honourable the Minister of Economic Development to lay on the table of the House the following information:

How much was spent by the Director of Tourist Development for travelling expenses during the past fiscal year. Give dates of trip, destination and cost of each trip.

Answers to Questions

No. 34.

MR. CURTIS: The answer is being prepared.

No. 35.

HON. E. S. SPENCER (Minister of Public Works): The answer is being prepared.

No. 36.

HON. G. J. POWER (Minister of Finance): The answer is being prepared.

No. 37.

HON. J. R. SMALLWOOD (Prime Minister): The question is in three sections. In reply to the first, the answer is “none.” There has been none, so none can be tabled.

The reply to (2) is the same—the same answer. Number (3) the answer is, under (a) none; under (b) none.

My meaning there is, some of the industries had, when the interest payments became due, paid the interest; not all of them, but some had; all who were liable to pay, had paid; none were in arrears. Then the Government made a decision to make the period two years from the commencement of construction, during which time no interest would be paid. At the expiration of that time, they would pay interest. Those who had paid interest in the meanwhile, would be paid back what they had paid into the Treasury.

We found that what we were doing was collecting payments out of the funds we had advanced them. We were collecting interest out of the dollars we had loaned them. It was impractical; so we exempted them from interest payments on loans for a period of two years, commencing from the date on which construction began. If you assume it would take a year to get the plants constructed, they would have an additional year to get the plant going, get operations started, get some sales made and some cash back by way of returns for sales. Then they would begin to make payments. If my honourable friend insists on having the names under (b) those who did pay and who were paid back, we would be glad to give it.

MR. BROWNE: I would like to have it.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The fourth part of the question—“How much money was spent on advertising, etc.” I would refer that to the Department of Municipal Affairs and Supply under which stationery and advertising, come.

MR. BROWNE: In connection with (2), does my honourable friend mean that there was no correspondence concerning that matter with Mr. Chester Dawe or the Newfoundland Hardwoods?
MR. SMALLWOOD: There has been no correspondence. The negotiations were oral in nearly all instances. I would not swear there was not a letter saying "may we meet you?" But there was no discussion by written correspondence.

No. 38.

MR. POWER: The answer is being prepared.

No. 39.

MR. POWER: I think that should, more properly, be addressed to the Honourable Minister of Fisheries.

MR. KEOUGH: The answer is being prepared on my part.

No. 40.

MR. SMALLWOOD: This question is under four headings. The answer to (a) is $110,000.00. (b) He has paid back $105,000.00 in cash, which has gone back to the Treasury. Another amount by cheque which will cover the complete amount of the loan—(the difference between the amount of the loan and the amount paid back) was paid by cheque which is not yet cashed. (c) Yes, he has abandoned the scheme. Why? Because it has developed, it would be an impractical project, which I strongly suspected from the beginning, as the House is well aware. (d) (2) Financially? I do not know that he has any relationship whatever with the Government, beyond the fact that that uncashed cheque is in the possession of the Department of Economic Development. When that is cashed, it will put an end to all further financial relationships between Dr. Sennewald and the Government.

(1) Contractually? I do not know if there is any, unless it be between him and the Department of Health under which he is serving in the General Hospital in order to qualify to be a registered Medical Practitioner on the rolls of Newfoundland and Canada to be able to practise his profession. I do not know if there is a contract or whether it is a case of straightforward employment for a year.

The Minister of Health nods his head, so it is just for a year. I believe he is under no contractual relationship to the Government.

No. 41.

MR. POWER: I referred that to the Minister of Public Works.

No. 42.

MR. SPENCER: I have some information in connection with that question and I propose to give it to the House orally.

I. The answer is, it is being operated by Mr. Joseph Hampton. There are no specific arrangements with the Department with the exception that in the early stages of completing the Trans-Canada Highway up both sides of the Exploits River, I was approached by the people in the area asking that we endeavour to have a ferry of some kind placed on the River while we were waiting for steel, (which was the drawback at that time) to begin construction of the bridge.

Following that request, I happened to meet this gentleman named Hampton from Bishop's Falls. I suggested to him that there was need of a suitable ferry; asked him if he would be interested, and if so we would be glad to co-operate with him. I asked him to look into the matter. He did look into the matter and found at Botwood (I recommended that) there was a scow that I had been associated with the building of, in the early days of the Newfoundland bases and which belonged to the Imperial Oil. They agreed to loan us the scow temporarily. That was done until the Imperial Oil decided they would sell that piece of equipment; and so they did and sent a bill to me in the Department of Public Works, which I forwarded to Mr. Hampton and he paid. The scow in question was 96 tons. The owner set himself to work and put in shape this floating stage or ferry. It is operated on the Exploits River and has been enlarged from the original arrangement to take three vehicles. The matter is a private one, owned by Hampton and operated by him.

(2) The answer is "No, there has been no money paid."

(3) The answer is "No, there has been no moneys paid the Government."

(4) Inasmuch as it is a private venture, the question should be directed to the operator.

(5) That is obviously answered in (2) and (3).

HON. P. S. FORSEY (Minister of Health): Answer to question No. 43: Total payments to International Grenfell Association from Provincial and Federal Health Grants over the period 1949 to 1953 inclusive, $830,819.77.

(b), (c), (d), and (e): These questions should be referred to the Honourable the Premier.

MR. SMALLWOOD: (b) Mr. Thompson is not Chairman of the Commission. He is not even a member of the Commission.

(c) That is answered in the answer to (b).

(d) The members are: Hon. P. J. Lewis, Q.C.; Mr. P. Gruchy; Senator Pratt; A. B. Perlín and Gerald S. Doyle, O.B.E. They receive no salaries or recompense for their services in any shape or form.

I may say that we almost insisted that they receive payment and most of them, nearly all, were just as adamant that they should not receive recompense. I may say that the Government felt very strongly that the Chairman of the Commission, upon whom the burden, to a large extent falls perhaps more than it does upon the shoulders of the other members of the Commission, ought to be paid. We may ask the House to change the law; not that he has asked for it. We have asked him to devote virtually all of his time to this important piece of work for Newfoundland. To do this he has had to abandon his own work as a practising Barrister and Solicitor in Newfoundland. But, more of that, if and when we ask the House to deal with the matter.

And the final part—(e) “Who is the Secretary—” The Secretary is Mr. Douglas Hunt, LL.B., who receives a salary of $6,000.00 a year.

MR. SPEAKER: Any answers to other questions?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I have the answer to Question No. 21—Tabled—

Question (2): What is the exact amount of money which has thus far been placed at the disposal of this Loan Board, for said purposes by the Government?
Answer: $500,017.00.

Question (3): How much money has been loaned by the Co-operative Loan Board since its formation? Give names of individuals or societies to whom money has been loaned in each case, the amount of the Loan, as well as the date of same.

Answer: The Co-operative Loan Board has loaned $28,000 since its formation. Loans were made to the Corner Brook Consumers' Co-operative Society Ltd. and the Hodge's Cove Consumers' Co-operative Society Ltd., in the respective amounts of $25,000 and $3,000.

The loan to the Corner Brook Consumers' Co-operative Society Ltd. was made in 1951 while the loan to Hodge's Cove Consumers' Co-operative Ltd., was made in September, 1953.

Question (4): How much money has thus far been placed at the disposal of this Board, and what is the present status financially of each society to whom money was loaned relative to its association with the Loan Board?
Answer: $100,000 was placed at the disposal of the Co-operative Loan Board.

The financial position of a society is the business of the society and the Government is not free to divulge such information.

Question (5): How much money was loaned by each of these Loan Boards since March 31st, 1953?
Answer:
Co-operative Loan Board ... $28,000.00
Fisheries Loan Board ..... 278,368.69

Question 25 (a) (Mr. Hollett): Give the names of the recently appointed Fishery Development Authority.
Answer: Information will be made available when the Bill (An Act to Establish the Newfoundland Fisheries Development Authority) is introduced to the Legislature.

Question (b): State the amount of Salaries being paid to (a) the Chairman, (b) the Members of the said Authority or Committee, and state what if any contract has been entered into with these individuals by the Government. Table copies of said contract or agreement.
Answer: Same as (a).

Question (3): State in detail the exact duties of this Fishery Development Authority and state under what section of the Consolidated Statutes said Fishery Authority is set up.
Answer: Same as (a) and (b).

Question (4): Give the Dimensions of the 23 ft. boat recently purchased in Europe by said Authority. From whom was this boat purchased, at what price and on whose recommendation?
Answer: Length 22' 6", width 7' 6", depth 3' 3"; Hundested Motorfabrik Denmark; 3,010 f.o.b.; the boat was purchased on the recommendation of the officers of the Vessel Construction and Inspection Division of the Department of Fisheries and Co-operatives.

Question (5): Table an account showing the following particulars of (a) the Charlotte I (b) the Matthew; (1) the original purchase or building cost, (2) the cost of machinery as installed in said boats, (3) the running expenses during the period said boats were in possession of the Government, (4) the total earnings of said boats and (5) the amounts received on the sale of each boat. Table complete account of each of these boats as it exists at the Department of Fisheries.
Answer (a): (1), (2), and (5)—The Charlotte I cost $22,000 inclusive of machinery installed and was sold by tender in 1951-52 for $7,500 to Mr. Clyde Hollett of Burin and Halifax.

(a): (3) and (4)—The Charlotte I was not operated by the Government and the expenses and information on the earnings are the private property of the firms which operated the vessel under bare hull charter.

(a) and (b): (3) and (4)—It is not in the public interest that details sought be made public as such information could be construed as the actual cost of such vessels in full scale commercial fishing operations which would convey an entirely erroneous impression of the practicability of commercial operations with such vessels and methods of fishing. The Matthew II was constructed and equipped as a new type of vessel for multiple fishing operations—the first of its kind in Canada—and to be used for the purpose of experimental fishing, the training of prospective owners and crew members of such vessels. The Government's action in building and operating the Matthew II for Danish seining, introduced for the first time in Newfoundland waters... resulted, in the discovery of an abundant fishing species not prosecuted in Fortune Bay and other areas on the south coast of Newfoundland. The success of the Matthew II in proving the operations of Danish seining for red fish, flounder and gray sole as a practical commercial undertaking has resulted in a number of vessels being built or converted and equipped for Danish seining. Several vessels have been built along lines of the Matthew II and others are at present under construction. The Matthew II was chartered to Messrs. Hollett and Sons and Company Limited of Burin for commercial fishing in 1952. Experimental fishing is acknowledged to be a function of the Government of Canada carried out through the Department of Fisheries and the Fisheries Research Board. In 1953 the Matthew II was chartered to the Government of Canada for experimental fishing.

Having performed the function for which the vessel was built, viz: to establish and prove the operations of a modern vessel equipped for multiple fishing in Newfoundland waters, the Government have decided to offer the Matthew II for sale by tender for commercial fishing. The responsibility of the Government of Newfoundland in respect of the demonstration of commercial fishing with new types of gear and equipment is a matter of policy which is being developed at the present time and will be carried out in future under the direction of the Fisheries Development Authority.

Question (6): On whose authority was each of these boats built or purchased and on whose recommendation? On whose recommendation were they ordered sold?

Answer: The Charlotte I was purchased on the authority of the Government of Newfoundland. The vessel was offered for sale by tender by the decision of the Government on my recommendation. The Matthew II was built by authority of the Government on my recommendation and is to be offered for sale by tender.

MR. SPENCER: Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present to the House the answer to Question No. 19 on the Order Paper of March 30th.

1. Question: The total amount spent on the Trans-Canada Highway in Newfoundland (a) Since April 1st, 1949; (b) In each fiscal year since 1949, how much of this amount was expended (1) by the Federal Government, (2) by the Provincial Government?

Answer: (a) 7,247,830.

2. Question: Give (a) the total number of men employed last year on the Trans-Canada Highway in Newfoundland and (b) the total moneys spent in wages.

Answer: All work on Trans-Canada Highway is carried out under contracts. Payments to contractors are made on the basis of units of work performed. Records are not kept in the department of the number of men employed by the contractors or the moneys paid in wages.

3. Question: Give the total mileage of new road construction on the Trans-Canada Highway in Newfoundland (a) since April 1st, 1949; (b) in each fiscal year since April 1st, 1949.
Answer: (a) 120 miles of road have been rough graded.
(b) 1949-50 .................. 4.5 miles
1950-51 .................. 49.2 miles
1951-52 .................. 29.1 miles
1952-53 .................. 12.4 miles
1953-54 .................. 24.8 miles

4. Question: How many miles of road remain to be constructed, and the number of bridges together with approximate of costs apart from paving?
Answer: 480 miles. As the final route of Trans-Canada Highway has not yet been decided, it is impossible to give the exact number of bridges, but the approximate number is 40. Approximate cost, including bridges, $33,000,000.00 apart from paving.

5. Question: How many miles of secondary roads were constructed during the past fiscal year and where located? Give the cost and the names of the contractors or builders.
Answer: 90.5 miles at the following locations:
Cape Island to North Cape.

Lumsden—Musgrave Harbour.
Kings Point to Indian Brook.
Rock Harbour Spanish Room.
Meadows—Trishtown.
Cook’s Brook—Frenchmans Cove.
Phillips Head—Port au Bay.
Bobbys Cove—Paradise.

Road to Wharf at Seldom.

Halls Bay to Roberts Arm.
Cannings Cove—Musgravetown.
Port au Mal—Lewis Brook.
Queens Cove—Southport.
Bay L’Argent—St. Bernards.
Wild Bight—Little Bay.

Most of these roads were constructed by Departmental forces. The others were done by J. Goodyear & Sons, Ltd., Western Construction Co., Ltd., and W. J. Lundrigan, Ltd.

6. Question: How much money was spent on repairs to secondary roads during the past fiscal year?
Answer: $2,100,000.

Mr. Speaker, I want to point out that the first amount under (b) 1—in the question is the amount contributed by the Federal Government towards the expenditure on the Trans-Canada Highway and (b) 2—is the amount spent by the Provincial Government.

No. 2: The answer there may be somewhat disappointing for my honourable friend who has requested the information—All work on the Trans-Canada Highway is carried out by contract and, of course, we do not know the number of men employed. All we know is the contract price that we pay to the contractors. Incidentally, I might add that that as a rule is paid on a unit basis. My honourable friend the member for St. John’s West will understand what I mean when I say that is so much per cubic yard as he has had some engineering training. In fact the House may have some slight interest in knowing the honourable member and I worked together for a while in the engineering business, we are still pals, but not in engineering nor in politics, as the Honourable Premier has reminded me. So that prices then paid to contractors are on a unit basis, so much per cubic yard.

No. 5: This particular question will be of interest generally to people around the Island and I am grateful to the honourable member for asking it so that the public may know. As a rule the department responsible for this work does not exactly go out flag waving and telling people to look at what we have done here and look at what we have done there, so that I am glad to have the opportunity to give the public a report of the work accomplished during the period about which the question is asked.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, before you call the Orders of the Day, I wonder if you would bear with me a moment while I draw to Your Honour's attention and through Your Honour this House's attention to an editorial comment in tonight's edition of the "Evening Telegram" on the matter about which I spoke at the opening of the House yesterday, I would have done so at the opening of the present sitting had I had a copy of the "Evening Telegram" at that moment.

The House will remember that I drew attention yesterday to an editorial appearing in yesterday's edition of the "Evening Telegram" which seemed to me constituted an attack upon Mr. Speaker. The House will be aware that the remarks I made arose out of a discussion in this House before strangers were admitted; the House will be aware that I spoke as Leader of the House and that I spoke for all members of the House on both sides, and that I particularly said so in my remarks at the opening of the public part of the sitting of yesterday. My remarks were directed solely to one paragraph of the editorial in question, and that was the paragraph dealing with Mr. Speaker's ruling, not dealing with members of the Government, not dealing with anything other than Mr. Speaker's ruling—it was a paragraph which was completely in error, it was a misstatement. Now, I don't think it was a lie, I don't think it was meant to deceive, but it had to deceive anyone who did not know the difference, nevertheless, it was an unintentional deception, it was not intentionally done, or I don't think it was—I am quite certain it was not. Nevertheless, to one who did not know the difference it was deceiving because what it said was that Your Honour's ruling was given to prevent all probing—now, obviously it was given for no such purpose. In tonight's edition of the same newspaper, again editorially, it refers to the whole matter in the following words:

Impartiality of the Chair

The Evening Telegram sincerely hopes that no one other than Premier Smallwood read into yesterday's editorial entitled "Liberal Liquor Law" a meaning which certainly was not intended. This paper never has challenged a ruling of the Chair, and never proposes to do so. The editorial in question was directed at Government policy and the dabblings of Liberal Party members in various phases of the liquor business. It mentioned Mr. Speaker's ruling without commenting on it in any way. Even to say that we agree with the Speaker's ruling would be improper, since to agree would imply the possibility of disagreement. The ruling stands, it was made at great length and covered many important points of procedure concerning the asking of questions, and the banning of questions about members' dabblings in the liquor trade was just one of those points. One of the effects of that ruling was to suppress, at least for the time being, information that might have been useful to the Opposition. Surely to point out that fact, in the course of general criticism of the Government's liquor policy, is not to accuse the Speaker of being partisan, or of yielding to Government pressure for censorship?

Now, Mr. Speaker, I have these two comments: First—"The Telegram" sincerely hopes—in answer to that I think all members of this House read into the editorial exactly what I read into it, and indeed it was Your Honour whom I was defending, and indeed Your Honour first drew the attention of the House to the editorial in question, and I stood here as a representative of the House, as Leader of the People's House and not as Leader of the Liberal Party, I stood here as the defender of Mr. Speaker, and I acted, therefore, as spokesman of the whole House on both sides, and I specifically said so. I was not the only one who read the meaning into yesterday's Telegram Editorial. Now, the second sentence is this: "Referring to this editorial in question it mentioned Mr. Speaker's ruling without commenting on it in any way." It is agreed, that is true, the Evening Telegram in its editorial did not comment on Mr. Speaker's ruling. It did much worse, it misrepresented Mr. Speaker's ruling because here is what it said, and this is what I quoted bad grammar and all: "However, Mr. Speaker, has ruled that any probing about the ownership of taverns, licensed clubs and liquor agencies where the question effected individual members of the legislature are taboo." That is the paragraph to which I took exception on behalf of this House, and on behalf of His Honour the Speaker. The paragraph did worse than comment on Mr. Speaker's ruling, it misrepresented Mr. Speaker's ruling, and that is to bring Mr. Speaker's ruling into the worst kind of contempt. Far better if it had been an honest disagreement with Mr. Speaker's ruling than to do what the paper did—misrepresent, misstate it. Therefore, all who read that editorial and who did not know the difference believes that Mr. Speaker must be an autocrat, a tyrant who wishes to practise press censorship, and censorship of the Opposition as well.

Now, Mr. Speaker, again I shall not introduce a motion of censure of the paper in question. Whether the paper in question is believed or not is beside the point. Censor by the People's House for a newspaper is not to be lightly disregarded or lightly dismissed, but I shall not do it because I still believe that although the editorials of yesterday and today must have been written by two entirely different persons, one illiterate and the other literate, both, I believe, misinformed and both subject to honest misinterpretation, therefore, I shall not move this House condemn them.

MR. HOLLETT (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, to that point of privilege—

MR. SPEAKER: I think the Honourable Leader of the Opposition may be heard.

MR. HOLLETT: We, of the Opposition, Mr. Speaker, agree entirely that the Speaker's ruling, as far as we are concerned at any rate, we dare not question it. As a matter of fact here is a case in point where we refuse to be inveigled into questioning your ruling, Sir, and never shall we question your rulings as long as Your Honour has the privilege and the honour to sit in that Chair. But the point which I wish to make, apart from that which is the most important point, is that I fear we cannot go along with the Leader of the Government on all the remarks which he has made relative to the editorial in question. I, for one, do not agree with him, Sir, that the editorial in the "Evening Telegram" of yesterday in any way misrepresented the ruling of Your Honour, the Speaker, and in that connection, therefore, we cannot agree with the Leader of the House. We would be the first, along with the Honourable the Premier, to resent any such interference with Your Honour's ruling be it the "Telegram," the "News" or "Sunday Herald" or any other paper or any radio station. We must have law, we must have authority. We, like little children, from day to day must obey the Chair—even though the Speaker may rule on something we do not all personally agree with, we have to abide by it. But, Sir, I must stand here on this side of the House and say I do not agree with the Leader of the Government when he makes the remarks he has made relative to the editorial in question. I don't want to go into any argument now, but I think I would convey to you ample reasons to show why I and the Opposition do not agree with all the remarks of the Honourable the Premier.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I don't understand, Sir, why the honourable gentleman did not say so yesterday when I represented myself as speaking for the whole House and when I said what I did. He agreed yesterday by silence, but does not agree today.

MR. HOLLETT: In reply to that, Mr. Speaker, if I may, we were not given an opportunity to reply to that yesterday. The only thing that we did agree that he said was that both the Opposition and the Government agreed that the Speaker's ruling should not be questioned by the press—we agreed with that entirely.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I think yesterday the honourable gentleman had exactly the same opportunity to comment as he has today. The fact that he sat silent when I said I spoke for the whole House, I think, indicates that as of yesterday I spoke for the whole House, but that as of today, from what he has said, I do not speak for the Opposition in that matter.

MR. SPEAKER: I see no useful purpose in prolonging this slightly out of order debate. I consider the incident to be closed—proceed with the Orders of the Day.

Adjourned Debate on the Address in Reply:

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, in rising to make a few remarks on the address in reply to the Speech from the Throne, I wish to join with the other speakers on this side of the House in congratulating, or at least join with their congratulations on the able manner in which the honourable members moved and seconded the motion. Certainly we agree with them in the expression of loyalty to Her Majesty the Queen. We of the Opposition, Sir, represent the Newfoundland people as does the Government, and I can say for ourselves and for the Government that loyalty is treasured. Newfoundlanders, wherever they may be, are loyal to the Crown as something which is always and ever present with them.

I would like, Sir, to join with the Honourable the Premier in some of the remarks which he made yesterday on the sudden decease of Senator Jones of Prince Edward Island, a former Premier of that Province. Certainly we agree with the Honourable the Premier in expressing to his relatives our condolence and also to the people of Prince Edward Island and of Canada as a whole. We are reminded, Sir, by the sudden demise of the honourable Senator that we are all mortal, even though we may perhaps, like the Premier himself, be sometime or other elevated to the august seat of Senator. We ought, therefore, to be reminded that when we do get to the Senate, whether it be six months from now or a year from now, that even there the hand of fate may reach out and take a grab at us.

Now, Mr. Speaker, the Speech from the Throne—to be honest, Sir, when I received it the other day, and took it home, and went through it, I searched from "A" to "Z," from one end to the other to find out just what might be the policy of the Government, just what we might have to debate in this address in reply. To be honest, Sir, there was very little that I could find there—but lo and behold! in the morning when we received our morning paper I discovered what the speech was all about. The editorial in the "Daily News" has this to say: "From time immemorial it has been the custom of the members of the Opposition in speaking to the debate on the Address to refer to the Speech from the Throne as being much more notable for what it does not contain than for what is actually in it.

"The criticism has become trite from excessive use but many a thing that is trite is also true. And, of course, it is true in this case for a very good reason. The Speech from the Throne is principally designed to provide a formal basis for a general policy debate and does not necessarily represent a detailed prospectus of policy and legislation for the session it opens.

"There is in the Speech read at the opening of the present session the assurance that much expected legislation, some of it of great length and complexity, will be brought down for passage at the present session. This will include the revised Election Act and the first Redistribution Bill since 1928.

"The Election Act will require a great deal of patient study in Committee of the Whole and it is a pity that there is not machinery for the submission of legislation of the kind to an all-party committee of the House for detailed examination before it is the subject of debate. The 1913 Act is cumbersome and creaks with antiquity. The new Act will provide for much more efficient counting of votes but must make sure that no safeguard necessary to the protection of the voter and the parliamentary election system is omitted.

"A major piece of legislation will be concerned with the creation of the Fishery Development Authority and this will provide an opportunity for a comprehensive survey of fishery policy. It is a pity in this connection that the same wide range of first hand knowledge of every phase of the fishing industry that was once represented in legislature is not to be found today. In former times when fish was of paramount importance, exporters, suppliers, skippers and producers were usually included in the membership of the House. But it may be expected that all members will endeavour to saturate themselves with information on all aspects of the modern fishery in preparation for this important debate.

"No reference to the industrial development policy of the past few years or to the activities of Nalco and Brinco are contained in the Speech although they will naturally be the subject of exhaustive exploration by the Opposition. It is here and in the sphere of finance that the Conservatives will undoubtedly see their best opportunity to carry on a frontal assault upon the Government.

"The question of road policy has not been mentioned in the Speech but it has long been hinted that a major expansion of the local road system was under consideration and that the Government was preparing to raise a substantial loan for local road and highway construction.

"These and other matters to come before the House promise to make this one of the most interesting and significant sessions since Confederation."

That same Editor has told us, time and again, how inept we are and how inexperienced we are. And, I am sure that a man of his years (and I am not making caustic criticism)—would be a good judge as to whether we are inexperienced or whether we are not.

However, having found out that that was a basis of general policy, I decided I would try to get a few remarks together relative to that. I could not find very much in the Speech. I did see that the fisheries programme was recommended; that there was to be a Commission on Agriculture and a Commission on Forestry, also a Commission to prepare Newfoundland's case in the review of the Terms of Union. Then I began to remember that all that had been done months ago; Orders in Council have been passed and they are paying salaries on these accounts in a good many instances.

Now, the "Advertiser" from Grand Falls read something into the Speech —"Provincial Legislature Opens"—"Loan Bill"—"Rural Electrification"—"Among the items of business is the new Provincial Loan." That is correct, I take it. I cannot find it. These are things which, apparently, the "Advertiser" in Grand Falls knows all about. We have not been told; and study it as I may, I can find nothing. I am surprised the Leader of the Government did not refer to them. "Redistribution Bill," and it goes on to tell all about that. Evidently these two papers have been contacted by the Government and have been told what their intentions are. It looks to me that the Editors of both these papers are in close contact with the "Powers that be" on the opposite side of the House.

Paragraph 2 of the Speech from the Throne states: "In conformity with my Government's policy of encouraging the development of the natural resources of the Province, and in keeping with my Speech to you of about a year ago, my Government have procured the appointment of a Royal Commission on Agriculture."
"In conformity with my Government's policy—" I do not know what time the policy was mooted. I might find it in the records.

"Distinguished men have accepted appointment to this Commission and several specialists in particular aspects of agriculture have been brought to Newfoundland to assist the Commissioners. Members and officials of the Commission on Agriculture have travelled widely throughout Newfoundland and have devoted themselves industriously to the task of investigating all the problems of agriculture in this Province. My Ministers look forward eagerly to the receipt of the report and recommendations of the Commission, for they hope that these recommendations will form the basis of a firm and practical policy for the more rapid upbuilding of agriculture in all its branches."

Then the next paragraph "The Royal Commission on Forestry has more recently been appointed, and again my Ministers have been fortunate in securing the services of men who are noted for their experience and ability in this field. My Ministers hope that from the report and recommendations of the Royal Commission on Forestry there will emerge a clear and practical forestry policy—"

Then we come on "My Ministers fervently hope that their belief that agriculture could support many times the present number will be well borne out by the report and recommendations of the Commission. Agriculture, forestry and fisheries (to which I shall refer at greater length in a moment) together support the great majority of our population. While I believe that all will welcome other industries, and other sources of income for our people, I believe also that there will be general agreement that the long-run prosperity of Newfoundland depends mainly upon the continued expansion of her fisheries, forest industries and agriculture."

That decision, although it comes rather late in the, shall I say, surplus era, is welcome in the Speech from the Throne. But, I would remind the House that I have seen it in practically every Speech from the Throne since 1949.

I would say we might very well call this "the Hope Speech." There have been various publications—"Newfoundland Is On The March," and so on—why not put this in as "The Hope Speech?" And, I hope it is not the last Speech of the present administration; although there are rumours very persistent, which I will not hope about at the moment.

HON. M. P. MURRAY (Minister of Provincial Affairs): What a hope!

MR. HOLLETT: Something I have said has tickled the palates of the members on the opposite side?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, your fond hope that this Government will soon be handing over to them. That is amusing.

MR. HOLLETT : I should say so; but not if you remember that the Premier told me the other day that I would not be long in Opposition. He surely must have meant that I would be on the other side of the House and he would be in the Senate.

MR. SMALLWOOD: On no side of the House.

MR. HOLLETT: Surely you would not turn a man out?

MR. SMALLWOOD: The people will.
MR. SPEAKER: I must break up this private conversation, interesting as it might be. I fail to see how it could amuse the constituents of Newfoundland.

MR. HOLLETT: I will give the Government something to laugh about.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That will be a change.

MR. HOLLETT: I apologize if I break the Rules of the House; but I am quick on the trigger.

Before I go on, I want to refer to—(you have to have a line of thought, marking posts along the way)—I was going to say that this Government came into power in 1949. They slipped in accidentally again in 1951.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Some accident!

MR. HOLLETT: They were, you will remember, heirs to a fortune. They had no National Debt. The previous Government had some one hundred and seven million dollars National Debt. They had no Post Office or Telegraph Offices, no Customs, no Railway, the Hotel was taken off their hands. They had no Gander Airport, no Defence, no services for the protection and encouragement of fisheries; no lighthouse, no fog alarms, buoys or beacons. They had none of that. What did they have? They had forty-six million dollars dry cash—cash which they could spend; up to two-thirds of it. They had the Federal Government pouring twenty million dollars a year into the Treasury. Heirs to a fortune! None of the huge expenses of previous Governments; a till full of cash, and the Federal Government pouring in the money, without any effort on the part of the Government to collect it from the people.

In years gone by it had to be collected from people who were impoverished by taxation placed upon them, not only by Liberal Governments but by Tory Governments as well. They had to do these things. But here you had a bunch of men—twenty-eight or thirty—with not one worry; a rich country, in my opinion. But, I would like to quote you from "Wayfarer" of February 16th, 1953—a year ago. I say, if you get men of that standard believing these things, then God help our country. "If the Commission of Government had possessed—"

MR. COURAGE: I rise to a point of order. I do not wish to embarrass the Leader of the Opposition, but this is the third time he has referred to newspapers by reading extracts. He is now about to give the opinions of "Wayfarer" and we may all be forced to debate the opinion of "Wayfarer." The House is not concerned with the opinion of "Wayfarer" or anyone else concerned.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Except when a newspaper deals with the proceedings of this House.

MR. SPEAKER: The honourable member may speak to the Point of Order.

MR. SMALLWOOD: A newspaper may be quoted in this House, very properly, when in its columns it deals with proceedings of the House. Then it is proper.

MR. SPEAKER: Does the honourable member wish to speak by way of explanation?

MR. HOLLETT: If I am able to table the newspaper, it is all right. But I am reminded that no later than yesterday afternoon the Honourable the Premier quoted from a newspaper.
MR. BROWNE: May I remind the honourable member who raised the point of order, the right to quote from newspapers is contained in Pages 39 and 40 of the Rules of Procedure.

There are several exceptions which I think would be proper to quote:

"Quoting from Newspapers, Documents, etc.

It is out of order to read extracts in a debate if they:

(a) Refer to other debates during the same session or to any question not before the House.

(b) Reflect upon any proceedings or any determination of the House.

(c) Contain unparliamentary words, as no language can be heard in quotation if it would be disorderly if spoken.

(d) Refer to, comment on, or deny anything said by a member.

(e) Contain treasonable or seditious words or use the Queen's name irreverently.

(f) Refer to matters pending a judicial decision.

(g) Reflect upon the conduct of persons in authority.

(h) Contain personal allusions derogatory to members.

A member may read extracts from books, etc. provided in so doing he does not infringe upon any point of order."

It would seem therefore, that unless he offends against some of these provisions, he is in order in quoting from a newspaper.

MR. SPEAKER: The Point of Order is rather a fine one. While in ordinary debate no person can be heard in the House other than elected members thereof; this is not a debate in the ordinary strict Parliamentary sense. As the honourable member has just read from the Rules, great latitude is allowed in the Speech in Reply.

All I can say is that the honourable member may quote extracts from newspapers or books, as long as he does not infringe upon the Rules. He can only be guided by his good taste, He must, as I say, be guided by his sense of taste—is the matter apropos to the occasion?

The honourable member may continue.

MR. HOLLETT: I shall try not to hurt the feelings of the members on the other side too much. I suggest they hear them first before they begin to fear whether their feelings are to be hurt.

I was speaking of the richness, the prosperity and the happy position this Government found itself in in 1949 following Confederation. If I may go over that, I may refresh the memories on the opposite side: Instead of a National Debt of one hundred and seven millions, they had no Post Offices, Customs, Railway, Gander Airport, no Defence, no Hotel, no lighthouses, fog alarms, etc. They had Education, (and of course that is enough) they had Health and Welfare, Public Works and one or two incidentals—and forty-six million dollars in cash.

I was about to say, if esteemed and honourable people outside get opinions such as have been expressed here, it is my duty to correct them.
“If the Commission of Government had possessed a very small part of the vision and drive of Joe Smallwood—” I suppose that is unparliamentary. “Newfoundland would have been a wealthy country in 1949 when the last surviving members of the Commission either folded their tents and slunk silently back to their English refuges or accepted the new offices which Confederation had bestowed upon them.”

MR. SPEAKER: For the honourable member’s guidance, no words may be heard in quotation which would be improper for the honourable member to say in the course of his speech.

MR. HOLLETT: These are complimentary remarks to the Premier.

These men were honourable men; they were honest, responsible men. We have one of them on the opposite side of the House, whose honesty and integrity cannot be impugned by anybody inside or outside the House. They did no such thing as is intimated in this article. None of these members slunk away.

The point I wanted to make there was that there was some doubt in the minds of people outside the House, particularly in the mind of the man who wrote it, that Newfoundland was not prosperous; that it was poverty-stricken in 1949; no money in the till; no anything, according to this fellow. He says if the Government which got out of here in 1949 had had half the drive, things would have been hunky-dory for this little country of ours.

I want to refer, if I may, to what I shall call “the Great Expectations of 1949.” If we are to speak to this, we must first set the background, dig up the soil and prepare for what may come later on, and I suspect great things will. On Page 49 of the Hansard of 1949—to give some idea of what the intentions of that administration were when they came into power—Honourable the Premier was speaking on the Act respecting Economic Development: “—we are faced with the basic problem of all, the doctrine of development of the natural resources of this Province—”

Quoting again from the Speech from the Throne:

“. . . to yield the basic conditions of a higher standard of living for our people. Newfoundland in the next few years is going either to find herself trying ever more and more to subsist on family allowances, old age pensions, pensions for the blind, unemployment insurance and these other benefits, or else she is going to stand on her own feet, and by development of her own resources create a standard of living out of which the Province and the Government of the Province can develop still further extensions of the social security pattern already introduced. We are going to be either a glorified poorhouse, or else a self-supporting Province, independent and proud, with every reason for our pride, willing and able to look the rest of Canada square in the face.” I hope we will always be able to do that.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Whose quotation is that?

MR. HOLLETT: Surely the Premier recognizes such a momentous statement. That statement has been repeated year after year from 1949.
MR. SMALLWOOD: I want everyone to know who said it.

MR. HOLLETT: We on the Opposition side do not attach all the blame or all the praise for what has happened since 1949 to any individual member. The Government must take the responsibility. I put it to every member of Cabinet and every member of the Government, and I would include back benchers; they share equal responsibility with the Premier for anything that happened, for good or ill.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Did the honourable member say “good” as well?

MR. HOLLETT: Yes, we will give you the praise.

MR. SMALLWOOD: This is going to be good.

MR. HOLLETT: On page 51 of the same Hansard, the Premier goes on "... if within two years of Union, Newfoundland should institute an economic survey of the Province, which includes Labrador, for the purpose of determining what new industries could be established, and what existing industries extended, then, Newfoundland having initiated such a survey, the Government of Canada will back it with its resources of men and machines, with its technicians, its various survey departments, and other resources of that type, and these are amongst the best in the world. And further, that the Government of Canada, will make a special effort, and I think these are the exact words, “special effort,” to bring up to the level existing throughout the other Provinces the knowledge of the natural resources of Newfoundland that such a survey would produce. Now, I am in hopes that that survey will involve an expenditure by the Government of Canada of many millions of dollars. Nothing will satisfy Newfoundland less than a thorough-going combing or scouring of the Island and of Labrador in a search for natural resources, and the measuring of them and the photographing and blue-printing of them, so that Newfoundland will be put in a position, a position incidentally, in which she has never yet been, after all our four and a half centuries, put in the position of being able to go to potential investors, capitalists, bankers, investment houses, promoters, with actual detailed blue-printed data of the actual natural resources which we desire to develop and into the development of which we desire positively many millions of dollars to come from the Mainland of Canada."

He goes on to speak of a Report supposed to be submitted by a Dr. Boyle.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That Report has been tabled.

MR. HOLLETT: That must have been before my time. I am only a youngster here.

It goes on: "Some of us in Newfoundland have great faith in the possibility of developing a tourist traffic in Newfoundland. So far as I know, no Government in the past in Newfoundland has had very much faith in the possibilities of a tourist trade. Here in this chamber when we were members of the National Convention, we were confronted, and quite angered, by the resignation en masse of the whole Tourist Board. We feel that there are genuine possibilities in that, for I know, Mr. Speaker, I know how possible it is for gentlemen in an Opposition to seize on that, poke fun at it, ridicule it, and hold it up for a laugh, and say to the fishermen, "Here’s your wonderful Government, there’s what they are doing for your fisheries"—I know what I could do if I were in an Opposition when the Government began to talk about tourists."

And so, I trust, if we start to poke fun, he will remember he is the author of that particular procedure.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Try your hand at poking fun.

MR. SPEAKER: Order!

MR. HOLLETT: We will start.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Go ahead, it is getting dull.

MR. HOLLETT: That same speech continues:

"Then again, we have a big programme of hydro-electric development. We are in hopes of bringing here to manage that, a man who is perhaps, in North America, today the greatest authority of all, Dr. Thomas Hogg . . ."

He goes on to describe him and his work in Manitoba. So far as I know, that man has not landed in this country. If he did, he left before he got well acquainted with the Province.

Later he refers to a great Economist who he says he is going to bring in here. Whether that was Valdmanis or whether it was someone else prior to him, I have not been able to find out. I have an idea that the Premier at that time had heard of the wonders of Dr. Valdmanis; about whom I shall have a few remarks to make in a moment or two.

It was all mapped out. On page 449 of the same Hansard, the Honourable the Premier says:

"Mr. Chairman," (The House, apparently, was in Committee), "we have been in our thinking in the Cabinet deadly afraid that the months and years would pass by, and that in the absence of a plan, in the absence of a blueprint, the money in the two-thirds portion of the surplus would be going for this and that and the other; that in a year or two or three the legislature here and the public outside might wake up to discover that six, eight, ten, twenty millions of it had gone without having made any basic change, any fundamental change, in the Province’s overall economy. And so, to avoid that very danger, our thinking is running along the line of budgeting for the two-thirds of the surplus which are under the Terms of Union to be devoted to development purposes; that is to say, to take the whole of it, divide it up in certain proportions for certain purposes. Let us say for the sake of argument that the total is twenty-five million dollars; two-thirds of the whole would amount to twenty-five million dollars available for developmental purposes."

The Honourable the Premier then goes on to allocate twenty-five millions which at that time he believed was part that could be spent for development—"... of the twenty-five millions we have earmarked so much for schools, for improvement in existing schools, so much for hospitals, so much in all for construction and extension of hospitals and then again so much for fishery development and so much for agricultural development and so much for development along other lines. That twenty-five millions was to be earmarked and set aside to be spent year by year so much in each of these five sections, seven or eight years. In other words we were going to have twenty-five million dollars and not spend it all in the first years and find it all gone. In other words, the money then in the treasury, twenty-five or thirty million dollars was to be spent for economic development already blue-printed, drawn up, so much for hospitals, so much for fisheries, so much for roads, so much for other things, so much each year for five or eight years."

Well, Sir, if we look back over the past five years we see that the honourable the Premier and his Government had reason—You will notice he said there that they were frightfully afraid they would do a certain thing, and certainly they went right ahead and did that very same thing. I am reminded here—I don't know whether I will be allowed to quote this or not Sir, but the Premier is such an interesting man that it is the duty of the Leader of the Opposition to find out just what manner of man we have and what he was thinking many, many years ago, I came across an interesting letter written by the Honourable the Premier in 1925, in June 29, 1925. It was in reply—I am sure the Premier himself will be interested in hearing that and it will carry him back many years. He has now reached the age where retirement is in the back of his mind.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The Honourable the Premier asks the honourable member if he hopes that it is the only hope he has left that I retire.

MR. HOLLETT: It is a hope—That was in 1925, Sir, and he was replying to some man who had advocated the bringing into this country skilled men from England, Ireland and Europe anyway. The Honourable the Premier, Mr. Speaker, was at that time in Grand Falls where the letter was dated, and he signed himself as J. R. Smallwood, President, Newfoundland Federation of Labour. "And this man had the audacity to write to the paper and advocate bringing people in from outside the country," he said. I left the letter at home where I keep it in a secure place with all such documents to be handed down to posterity. The Honourable the Premier ended up "I maintain that Newfoundland is for Newfoundlanders and Newfoundlanders are for Newfoundland." Follow up that thought, Sir.

What happened since 1949? Newfoundlanders to teach us how to fish; Seigheim to teach us how to farm on Labrador and grow cabbages down there. I think a member who is not here in the House at the present time said that, IBEC (Rockefellers) to make an economic survey which the Government did not publish, why I do not know—Not in the interest of the country—

MR. SMALLWOOD: I will gladly tell the honourable member right now.

MR. HOLLETT: I don't know whether we want it now. We wanted it two or three years ago and could not get it. The Industrial Basic Economy Corporation was a corporation noted for the thoroughness of their inquiries into the resources of a country, and they were noted for the excellent reports which they made on surveys in other countries prior to coming to Newfoundland. Anyway they made a report and they studied the natural resources of this country, or so they said—They made a report and the Government, Sir, refused to table it although they were requested to do so by the then Opposition on many, many occasions. I know, of course, the reason why the Government did not publish it. Then there was Dr. Valdmanis (“Newfoundland for Newfoundlanders”), Sir William Stephenson and I need not go into all the names, I have them here about twenty, twenty-five or thirty of them
—Newfoundland for Newfoundlanders.
—Every one of the foreigners, Sir, cost the country on the average of a million dollars. Max Braun Wogan—I thought that would make the Honourable the Premier chuckle. It is something to chuckle about.—Here is this man—
Somebody raised the point yesterday, Sir, about my remarks about foreigners and Europeans, and he hoped the European Question would never be raised in the House again. But I am telling the honourable member, who is not here today, it is going to be raised. Not that we have anything against them, Latvians, Germans, Slovaks, whoever they are they are human beings and we have a certain respect for human beings, Sir, in the Opposition at least we have some.

MR. SMALLWOOD: You recognize them?

MR. HOLLETT: I recognize them.
But we shall raise this question of Europeans. The Government, Sir, hates for us to raise the matter, it is a very sore point. How some of the honourable gentlemen on the other side can sit here and hear these things talked about amazes me. No wonder the honourable gentleman a day or two age got up and said he hoped it would never be mentioned again. I checked up last night to see exactly how much money went into these names—$19,450,000. If ever I want to find out anything about these Lat­ vians and Germans I shall go to the firm here which probably knows more about them than anybody else—I made some remark about that before and I don’t intend to do it at this moment, but I want the House, Sir, to remember that in 1925 the Honourable the Premier’s slogan was “Newfoundland for Newfoundlanders and Newfoundlanders for Newfoundland.” I maintain today, Sir, it is Newfoundland for Foreigners and Foreigners take over Newfoundland, they got the surplus of twenty-five millions. Why the Honourable the Premier should have changed his tune I know not.

Now, Sir, after all that, in this the fifth year of Confederation—that reminds me there is a move on by the Liberal Party to try and tell us that we went into Confederation on March 31. We did no such thing, Sir, up to 12:00 o’clock in the night, March, 31, 1949 we were a Dominion, but the next minute, I grant you, we were into Confederation. The Honourable the Premier, I believe, on two occa­sions said we went in on March 31, why, of course, is obvious. But we went in on April 1, Sir, there is no question about that. Now, Sir, in these five years of union we can, after all the talk about natural resources, about the inquiries which were to be set up, we now are told in this document which should be framed and hung over there—no not on that side but hung here where the honourable gentlemen whose faces are portrayed could look at five years after Confederation, we have here an organization set up to study agriculture and another for forestry and a fishery authority of three men which I am going to comment on, Sir, in a moment. I don’t know whether I am going to be allowed to say very much as I believe there is some legislation coming up in relation to it. I believe these three men are to be given fabulous salaries.
In conformity with this Government’s policy to encourage the natural resources of this country, after five years, Sir, here we are with not a cent to bless ourselves, not a copper to bless ourselves, and since November 11, 1952, had to borrow two and a half million dollars from the Bank of Montreal and from the Fisheries Loan Board and the Co-operative Loan Board to carry on after we, five years ago, having forty-six million dollars. We are in the hole now up to our necks. I know we got some money coming in from Canada—"God Bless Us! We are in Confederation now;" and you might make a note of that, Sir.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I have known it all along.

MR. HOLLETT: I fought, Sir, against Confederation, I fought it hard, and I still think I was right. I think we should have gone into Confederation on an agreement brought about between two Governments, the Government of Newfoundland and the Government of Canada. If they had arrived at an agreement where we would have gone into Confederation in that manner there would have been no need of asking for a Royal Commission which the Premier has set up to study Newfoundland's case.

With regard to the fisheries there is a slight error, I think. The Honourable the Premier is very impartial I should say—does not like mistakes, does not like to be misquoted—here it says: "In the view of my Ministers the most important business to be laid before you in this session is the Bill to authorize the creation of a fisheries authority. Almost one half of our people are more or less directly dependent upon the fisheries for their livelihood." I doubt that very much at the moment. According to figures released by the General Secretary of the Fishermen's Association there are ten thousand. Give them five in family, making only fifty thousand people and this country has about three hundred and forty or three hundred and sixty thousand people. Then it goes on—"Due to a number of causes the fisheries are languishing—" Why is our fishery languishing? I think everybody in this House is well aware of why it is languishing. We have not yet developed our fresh fish industry to the point where we can count on the markets, and the salt fishery markets to which we have to send out salt fish, there they are living under a different setup, have a different economy of different values for their money and the exchange is against us. They cannot, therefore, pay us the prices which our people need in order to live in this country today where the cost of living has gone skyward.

I have something now, Sir, to say which is rather unpleasant. I don't like saying unpleasant things as a rule, I have to reply to too many of them and therefore know what it feels like to have unpleasant things said. But one of the reasons, Sir, I maintain, why our fisheries are languishing is because of, shall I call it, an inept Department of Fisheries. I say that with all due respect to the Minister of Fisheries for whom I have great respect. But as for the Department of Fisheries, in my opinion, the Department of Fisheries have fallen down in their job on nearly everything they touched since 1949. If they had not a hand-out to give fishermen they had no plan. They brought in an expert from the Mainland and paid him $15,000, I believe, a year and made him Deputy Minister of Fisheries. I don't wish to say anything to hurt even the Deputy Minister of Fisheries, but I referred to that gentleman last year, and I thought in deference to the civil service of this country, Sir, that the man would probably have returned to his native home. Instead of that, Sir, I find the gentleman still the big-wig in the Fisheries Department. Something is wrong, Sir, with this Fisheries Department. I have only to refer to a question which I directed to the Department of Fisheries some days ago. We have been told, Sir, that we are inexperienced, and that we are not very hot on this side of the House, and on account of that, Sir, I would say, if we directed a question to any honourable member in charge of a department on the Government side of the House, if we did make any error in directing that question or any slight mistake, I should think the Honourable Minister in charge would be honourable enough to direct us properly and not answer, Sir, with such a manner as these particular questions were answered. This is one of the questions: "Give a detailed account of (a), (b) and (c) relative to the full utilization of known Fishery resources?" And the answer given: "Opportunity for reply will arise during consideration of the 1954-55 Estimates and to No. 3 the answer: "Question improperly directed." I submit that is an answer which is absolutely ridiculous on the face of it.

MR. SPEAKER: I must remind the honourable member here there is no debate on Answers to Questions. Certainly it must follow there can be no debate otherwise the rule is null and void—this is merely for the Honourable Minister's guidance.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Would my honourable friend allow me to ask him a question on that point?

MR. HOLLETT: Oh yes, Sir.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Would my honourable friend seriously expect the Minister of Fisheries merely by way of answering a question, to give the information that question asked for? Would he seriously expect the Government's fishery policy to be described merely in answer to a parliamentary question—would he seriously expect that? Or would he not expect it in the budget speech or when the estimates are brought in here or when the Bill is brought forward? Would he seriously expect it in this form?

MR. HOLLETT: We remember a Fishery Development Committee set up two years ago which made certain recommendations a year ago now. The question is on the recommendations of that committee, is there anything wrong with that, Mr. Speaker? The report of that committee came into the House here last year, and I have merely asked the question as to what steps were taken to implement the recommendations. Now, I am asked by the Premier—would you really expect? No, I would not expect to get an answer from them, that is true. I said the department was inept and not carrying out the recommendations which I think they should do—and I say this with all due respect to the Minister who cannot be expected to pay attention to every little detail or every big detail. But he has fifteen thousand a year men; fishery engineers, boat builders and everything there. I see no reason why I should not get a decent or a better reply to that question which I asked—"Opportunity for reply will arise during consideration of the 1954-55 Estimates." We want the information now, Sir, so that we will be able to properly debate it when the estimates come up.

I asked—on the North East Coast what, if any, steps have been taken towards the salt cod fishing industry—This is the answer: "Steps have been taken towards centralization." I asked what steps? And the answer given was: "Steps have been taken." If any negotiations thus far have been taking place in the establishment of small meal plants as recommended in the Committee's report? The answer: "Investigations have been under way for some time to ascertain the practicability of small fish meal operations but not exclusively for the North East Coast." Has the Provincial or the Federal Governments taken any steps to implement the recommendations in the memorandum dated November 20th, 1952 by the Walsh Committee relative to (a), (b) and (c)—Give details of any such implementations. The answer: "Yes, by the Government of Newfoundland!"

Who is Newfoundland's representative on the Fisheries Research Board of Canada? The answer given: "Question improperly directed." Why is it improperly directed? The Chairman of the Committee recommended that Fishery Research Board of Canada—at least we have somebody on the Research Board of Canada, and when I ask who he is I am told the question is improperly directed. Why? I don't know.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Is that not obvious?

MR. HOLLETT: No, not to me.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Would the honourable gentleman like to know?

MR. HOLLETT: No.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Of course not—he does not want to know.

MR. HOLLETT: There is no standing committee on fishery matters that could give some information on that. But I do remember on reading over the Report of the Walsh Committee that a standing joint committee be set up in which there would be members of the Federal and Provincial Governments, and they would meet every once in a while to advise the authority carrying out the recommendations of the Walsh Report. Now, I am told, after a whole twelve months, there is no standing joint committee. In other words this Government is not working in coherence with the Federal Government. That is pretty obvious—you have only to look at recent events. On the basis of answers I have received to these questions, I must say I have not too much faith in the work which will be done by this particular scheme.

I am reminded of another editorial in the "Evening Telegram" relative to the fisheries—"English Fish to Canadian Market—Two thousand tons—Shipped to Toronto from England”—There is some comment on that, but I won’t go into it now.

I raised the matter last year, Sir, and I say it is distasteful for me to touch on it again. This has to do with fishery administration, it has to do with honesty and fair dealings of civil servants. I was in the civil service myself for a period of twenty-five years. I have some idea of civil service, and do believe generally it is a body demanding respect—they have to work under considerable difficulties and bring down on themselves the opprobrium of the general public and powers that be and everybody else generally. The civil service is a body who command the greatest respect—I referred last year, Sir, and refer now again to it, because to me it is something this Government will have to do something about in the civil service, and I refer to that man now Deputy Minister of Fisheries, and I refer to him in conjunction with certain loans which have been granted by the Government for fishery purposes on which loans it would have been expected that the recommendation or otherwise of this Fishery Department secretary would have been sought, and I suspect why this is so, because in answer to some inquiries I found last year, Sir, and repeat now, that four firms to whom this Government had granted loans of some considerable amounts, hundreds of thousands of dollars, totalling over two million dollars, these very firms, Sir, during the negotiations for some of these loans, either prior to or just after, loaned to this secretary amounts in the sum of $1,750.00; $2,865.00; and $2,625.00. I do not wish to comment any more on that, but I do think the Government ought to take cognizance of that, out of respect for the civil servants of Newfoundland and the civil servants of Canada. I think something should be done; they should be told “we expect you to be strictly above-board in all your dealings with the public,” if you are to get the right men in your Government, in the civil service of the country. Otherwise the whole structure of Government in Newfoundland goes by the board, it falls. If the civil servants are not protected, if their honesty is not protected, then, Sir, I pity the Ministers who have to carry on Government under them.

Now, with regard to NAFEL. You all heard of that. Page 13 of the Terms of Union—(a document which some of the gentlemen on the other side of the House were foremost in drawing up)—"Any of the Fisheries Laws may be repealed or altered at any time within the period of five years from the date of Union by the Parliament of Canada with the consent of the Lieutenant-Governor in Council of the Province of Newfoundland and all orders, rules and regulations made under the authority of any Fisheries Laws may be revoked or altered by the body or person that made them ...”

We have heard much comment about NAFEL ever since Union. They were going to be fired out; going to get their teeth kicked in; going to be banished, practically, from this country. Why were they not banished? Why was not their prerogative seized, lifted, taken away from them? There was the authority—Section 22 of the Terms of Union. I must only come to the conclusion that the Government, even though kicking in the teeth of NAFEL, even though calling them all sorts of things, the Government was only too happy to associate with them.
in dealing with the fisheries. The Government had no intention of destroying or getting rid of NAFEL. If they wanted to get rid of them, they would have done it or they could get the Federal Government to do it. You let them do as they please, let them go on and do the things for which you blamed them and called them all sorts of things.

Considerable talk has been made with regard to long-liners. I do not wish to say anything detrimental to any efforts for the long-liners or Danish seiners. I will tell you a little story to indicate to you how great was the lack of supervision over the efforts which were made. I was in a certain district, towards the latter part of the fishing season, about two years ago or one and a half years ago, probably. As a matter of fact, it was during the time when the honourable member for Ferryland District was seeking election at the hands of the people in that area—September, 1952—near the end of the fishing season. While waiting to go into a political meeting, I met a man, or he met me; and I asked him what he was doing. "Long-lining," he said. I said "Where? He told me. I asked him if he was making a living for himself and his crew. "Oh yes, definitely," he said. He was soon going to give it up; the weather was bad. He was quite happy. I thought I had better make some inquiries. I did and I found that up to that time they had landed twenty quintals of fish—maybe one or two quintals over and above. I found also that the Captain and crew were receiving salaries from the Department of Fisheries. That was not giving it a fair trial. I blame it not on the fishermen, nor do I blame the bad fishing on the long-liners.

MR. MURRAY: Would you know the name of the boat and the crew? I never heard of it.

MR. HOLLETT: The honourable member must be like what the member for Fogo said of us "you do not travel." Of course the roads are bad and the honourable gentleman is not able to get up there. I do not wish to name the men. I do not blame them; I am laying the blame at the door of the Fisheries Department. Of course, the Honourable Minister of Fisheries cannot be expected to look into everything, every detail. But something will have to be done. For a Captain and two or three men to go on board a boat, get paid salaries, and for the season land twenty odd quintals of fish, it is poor inducement to the men living in that area where they are operating.

MR. SMALLWOOD: May I say that there never was such a case in this Government's experience. There is no long-liner with a crew consisting of a Captain and two or three men. Not a long-liner.

MR. HOLLETT: It may be a Danish seiner.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Why not table a question?

MR. HOLLETT: It probably would not be answered. However, it was a vessel on which there was a skipper and two or three men and they were paid salaries by the Government.

MR. SMALLWOOD: By this Government?

MR. HOLLETT: I have the floor.

MR. SPEAKER: The honourable member was interrupted. A member has the floor only when he is addressing the Chair.
MR. HOLLETT: I am sure that applies to the Leader of the Government equally as well.

MR. SPEAKER: I said the honourable member has the floor.

MR. HOLLETT: I object to interruptions of that kind. I told that, with the belief that it is true. If I was misinformed by the fishermen or my informants, then of course there is a remedy; but the remedy is certainly not jumping to one's feet and denying it.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The honourable gentleman has to take my word. He is forced to.

MR. BROWNE: It is not your Department.

MR. SMALLWOOD: When the Leader of the Government speaks for the Government; he speaks for it.

MR. SPEAKER: The honourable members must ask permission to make comments.

MR. HOLLETT: As a matter of fact there is a question to be answered. I am quite sure I asked the question, asking the Honourable Minister to give details which would include that.

But whether the vessel was a boat, a long-liner or a Danish seiner—

MR. MURRAY: I think it was the Flying Dutchman.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It is a figment of the imagination.

MR. HOLLETT: I might point out that the man to whom I referred did not reside in the honourable member for Ferryland's District, so he need not be unduly worried. But the facts are true.

Not only do I lay the blame at the door of the Department of Fisheries, I lay blame for all the fisheries fiasco at the door of the Government, the Ministry. In my opinion, very little of a constructive nature has been done for the fisheries since it took office in 1949. We have been told all sorts of things. Even the fishermen from Iceland were going to tell our fishermen how to fish. The idea of bringing in Icelanders to teach our fellows how to fish!

I come now to the setting up of this fisheries authority. Here we had the Honourable the Chief Justice, Sir Albert Walsh, head of a Committee of Investigation; after two years they brought in a Report. That Report contained certain recommendations. One of these was that a Joint Development Committee be set up and taking part in it would be the Provincial Government, the Federal Government and private enterprise. What did the Government do? They jumped the gun and set up a local authority, a local fisheries authority. Then we suddenly heard over the radio and read in the newspapers that this fisheries authority had been set up and which would save the country; they would advise the Government; they would implement the plans laid down in the Walsh Report. It was rumoured that salaries of $25,000 a year for ten years and a pension of $5,000 were to be paid. How true that is I do not know; but that story was rife in Newfoundland and the Government has not taken steps to deny it. The Government did not take us into their confidence with regard to it.

You all heard of Mr. Sinclair. As a matter of fact, it is difficult to know just exactly where Newfoundland stands with regard to the fisheries. As you know, Sir, a short time ago a Government release was issued by the two Governments—the Government of Canada and the Government of Newfoundland. That release told us that from now on, the marketing end of the fisheries would be taken over by the Minister of Trade and Commerce. This great Mr. Howe—the man who opened up the Machinery Plant; the man who was going to supply it with all sorts of orders; put it on its feet; 5,000 men were to be employed there—this man now has absolute control (or his Department has) over the marketing of our fish, in conjunction with NAFEL. I had better not say too much, because conversations are under way in Ottawa at the present time between Mr. Howe, Mr. Sinclair and the fish merchants of the trade and the fish merchants who make up NAFEL. Why somebody from the Fisheries Department is not there, I do not know. Surely Mr. Planta should be there. Surely the fishermen's representative, Mr. Lane, should be there. I wonder if the Premier could tell us why they are not there? Is it that there is a feeling in Ottawa that they should not be there? I wonder if they were told they should not come? That is a question which the Government can answer. It is strange to me that the fishermen of this country are not represented at these talks at Ottawa. It is strange that Mr. Lane, the General Secretary of the Fishermen's organization, was not even invited to come up. Our own Department of Fisheries was not allowed, apparently, to send up Mr. Planta.

I know that when I am talking about Fisheries it is a subject which is worrying everybody. It would worry me if I was in the Premier's and the Minister of Fisheries' place. I know it has been a problem all down through the years. I do not believe that Mr. Howe or Mr. Sinclair or the Premier or Mr. Keough or anybody else, on his own, can settle it or bring about a solution. The biggest solution has to come from the fishermen themselves or probably from their organization. I know the member from St. John's West here is a great believer in the Co-operative movement, and he would suggest probably, that that was the only cure. We have had some experience in Co-operative movements; and I say now, if the Co-operative movement is going to be carried out for the fisheries in the same manner as it was in other cases, then for goodness sake do not touch it. I do recognize the fact that when the Government started the Co-operative movement, they went about it in the wrong way. They started Co-operatives by giving grants; which was absolutely fatal.

MR. SMALLWOOD: We did not start the Co-operative movement, the Commission of Government did. One Government started, the other gave grants.

MR. HOLLETT: You gave them loans. What about the sordid story of Lourdes? Do you want me to go into that? They were not "grants" they were "Loans." The Premier thinks that by pushing in his spear he is going to knock us out.

I am afraid that for the next few years the Federal Government will have to grant a floor price to the fishermen, otherwise we shall have no fishermen.

Now, I do not think that our Government can very well congratulate themselves on their efforts in the fisheries. We have here a fresh fish industry that in scientific and technological development is second to none on the North American Continent.

MR. SMALLWOOD: We have what?

MR. HOLLETT: I said that we have here a fresh fish industry, in scientific and technological development, second to none on the North American Continent. If that meets with the approval of the Premier, he could let it pass. Therefore, we should expect that the men engaged in the fresh frozen fish industry would be receiving sufficient wages on which to survive. I have here some price quotations for fresh fish taken from a Department of External Trade magazine, a magazine put out by themselves. As I look at this, I can only come to the conclusion that our Government have fallen down on their jobs again. Let me quote: “Prices received by fishermen as of January 15, 1954:

Inshore Cod:
- North Sydney: 3½c.
- Halifax: 4½c.
- St. John’s, Nfld: 2½c.

Did our Government know that was going on? Did the Government know that Halifax and North Sydney were getting so much more? It was their duty to find out why our fishermen were not getting more.

Offshore Cod:
- North Sydney: 3½c.
- Halifax: 3¼c.
- St. John’s, Nfld: 2¼c.
- Ramea: 2¼c.

Halibut:
- North Sydney, 28c. lb.—top price.

Chicken Halibut:
- St. John’s Nfld, 15c. lb.

Our fishermen had to put up with 15c. while North Sydney and Halifax got as high as 28c., and chicken halibut in Ramea was 10c. They will tell you that transportation was more; they are nearer the trade. So they are, but not to that extent.

Haddock:
- Halifax: 5½c.
- St. John’s: 3 c.
- Ramea: 3 c.

Haddock (large):
- Halifax: 6½c.
- Yarmouth: 6½c.
- Sydney: 6 c.
- St. John’s: 2½c.
- Ramea: 2½c.

How can they live, if they are not given a chance? The Government is doing nothing. All they said is “we are going to kick NAFEL’s teeth in.” I have heard the saying that it is no use knocking on wood; neither is it any use kicking in teeth. Oh yes, they gave the fishermen $1.50 last Fall, without any investigation they paid out the $1.50. They forced the Federal Government to do it. And there is one thing for which I congratulate the Premier. He expected, and rightly so, that the Federal Government would come across with a floor price, or some implementation of the fishery price. He went to Ottawa. They told him to go home. I will say this for the Premier; and I hope he will remember it, he came home; he dipped down—not into the chest—that was empty. He may have had to go to the bank; but anyway he paid the $1.50. The Federal Government got so ashamed of themselves, they said: “We will pay you back one cent a pound, but do not do it any more. We are going to hand it over to Mr. Howe.” He forced the Federal Government to come across.
MR. SMALLWOOD: May I say that the honourable gentleman is completely wrong. I do not deserve his congratulations. Before the Government paid the $1.50, I telephoned the Government at Ottawa, from St. John's. What we did was done with their knowledge beforehand, with the understanding that if they made a deficiency payment, it would come back to the Treasury of Newfoundland. So, the credit for that is not really mine.

MR. HOLLETT: The modesty of the Premier is unexcelled at times. If I erred, the blame is the Premier's. He never told the public that before. He let the people think it was all his doing. I was naive enough to give him credit for it.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Does the honourable gentleman not realize that in highly delicate matters of this sort, one has to do what one does and keep one's mouth shut? Because of the situation in the markets, the Government of Canada could not, under any conditions, be involved in suspicion that they were subsidizing fish, some of which might enter the United States.

The honourable gentleman can have all the fun he likes here now, but one must do what one does and keep one's mouth shut in delicate matters of this sort.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, I repeat that people of this country, the fishermen of this country, were under the false impression that the Honourable the Premier was wholly and completely responsible for this advance of $1.50 a quintal. I still say, Sir, as much as I am opposed to the Premier on various other policies, I say now, I give him the credit, if he had not done what he did do there would not have been one five cents come across from the Federal Government for our fishery. We had to force it out of them, Sir, and whoever gets over there in the next hundred years will have to force everything out of them. It is the history of Nova Scotia and of Prince Edward Island, and perhaps it is good for them that they have to fight. But they are not going to hand it to us, don't worry.

Yes, Sir, this development authority I was speaking about, the authority which has been set up—I believe they have been named, but as there is some legislation to come in relative to that I will keep my remarks, Sir, for that occasion.

Now we hear, and we heard last year, the Government was ready to develop water powers, minerals and soil. They are also ready to develop the fishery—ready to develop the fishery, forests and agriculture and they have not one read cent to do it with, which means they must be going to try and look for a loan—I see no other way out of that.

Then also, I am quite sure the Honourable the Premier would like to know, Sir, that on February 18, 1954, cod fillets sold in Toronto for 33c. a pound. Our fishermen got 2½c. a pound. So I take it these fishermen in England are in for a grand time when they get that order to send a lot of their fish to Toronto. I put it to the Government, if the people of Toronto have to pay 33c. a pound, surely our fishermen here out of St. John's, Ramea, Burin and other places should expect more than 2½c. and I assume, Sir, the Government will be glad to assist them.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The people there are lucky. We pay more than that here in St. John's,
MR. HOLLETT: I was going to speak about that. The Honourable Premier has reminded us of that when he came back from Jamaica. That was the time he was going to kick the teeth out of NAFEL, and he quoted the prices the people had to pay for salt fish. At that very time, Sir, I believe, our people here were paying about two cents less than they were in Kingston. Here is the place to start on that, not start a row in Jamaica, not come back and tell NAFEL what to do.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Does not the honourable gentleman want to kick their teeth in too?

MR. HOLLETT: I don't know why he has not kicked their teeth in long ago. He has the authority, I quoted it a moment ago. He could have changed the legislation relative to NAFEL and made it impossible for a half dozen men to put in ten thousand dollars and be the exporting authority for all the fish caught in Newfoundland. Everybody knows that is wrong, the Premier knows it is wrong, the Government knew it was wrong five years ago, but they have done nothing about it except threaten to kick in their teeth.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Supposing that is all we could do. The honourable gentleman just read the paragraph but does not understand, the honourable gentleman never does understand anything legal or a constitutional document, he never has yet.

MR. SPEAKER: Order—it seems to me the discussion is wandering somewhat afield. I suggest the honourable member hold the floor and address the Chair.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, I could have raised a point of order there—I think the remarks the Honourable Premier made were unworthy of the Leader of the Government, even of the Opposition, us ignoramuses—I don't think it is right of the Government to say so.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I did not say so, except in respect to legal documents and constitutional—

MR. SPEAKER: Order—must again interrupt—please proceed.

MR. HOLLETT: Interruptions are all right but put me off the track a little—I will get back after a while. Last year they appointed a commission and from that on they were going to prosecute or shall I say implement agriculture with energy and resolution. I well remember the words "Energy and resolution." What is wrong with our division of agriculture anyway? Why the need for a Royal Commission? Why do we have to pay these three or four men and their departments thousands of dollars to find out just what can be done for agriculture? Have we not got a division of agriculture in the Department of Mines and Resources? I don't pretend to lay the same blame to the Department of Mines and Resources as to the Department of Fisheries, I am not sufficiently well acquainted with that department. But I do think in this country of ours we ought to be able, Sir, as a Government and a Department to handle our little agriculture, and big, shall I say, agricultural problems without having to set up a Royal Commission. We have had nothing but commissions all down through the years since 1949. I say, what is wrong with our agricultural division? What is wrong with our forestry division, and where are our forests? That reminds me, Sir, and I think that will bring me to the next thing to talk about—where are our forests? It is my impression that the AND Company and Bowaters control and have the right to cut every stick on their concessions. Of the remain ing eighty-five thousand square miles NALCO and BRINCO have the lot. I take it NALCO—

HON. DR. F. W. ROWE (Minister of Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, may I rise to a point of order? Will the honourable gentleman give me an opportunity to correct that errorneous statement? BRINCO nor NALCO doesn't control the rest of the timber resources of the Province.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Nothing like it.

MR. HOLLETT: I say, Sir, NAL­ CO and BRINCO, in certain instances at any rate, have control over certain forest lands—they have the right to make concessions on these properties to other bodies. They can grant concessions to the AND Company if they want to, over all their timber areas. Is not that correct?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes.

MR. HOLLETT: And BRINCO can do the same. Therefore, I am not very far afield when I say BRIN­ CO and NALCO control the forest destinies of eighty-five thousand square miles.

DR. ROWE: No.

MR. HOLLETT: I may not be exactly correct, but pretty nearly. We were told the other day that NALCO granted concessions for minerals.

MR. SMALLWOOD: We are now talking about timber.

MR. HOLLETT: We have little forest left, Sir, we have a little—we have some birch stands, I believe, how limited they are I don’t know, but I do know there is something wrong with the methods of awarding contacts to cut birch on crown lands. I do know that last fall there was some interference with regard to the granting of licenses to cut birch with the result, the end result, that very little birch was cut until too late in the year to get very much in to the birch plant. Whether that is one of the reasons why the birch plant is closed down is something I could not say. I don’t mean closed down but it has laid off some of its employees, no work being apparently the trouble.
But I do say NALCO and BRINCO, Sir, have control of at least—they can do quite a lot with a lot of the forests we have. For instance, if they see a territory say two hundred thousand or rather two thousand square miles of forest land, will the Honourable Minister deny that NALCO has the right or BRINCO has the right to grant a concession to cut timber on that, will he deny it?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Timber where?

MR. HOLLETT: On the area which they have been granted under the Act.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Obviously.

MR. HOLLETT: That is exactly what I have been saying—that is what I mean—I hope you understand that now.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, now.

MR. HOLLETT: Which brings me, Sir, to NALCO—because you cannot say NALCO without thinking of that man, Valdmanis. Yes here is something, a question that I was referring to which has to do with minerals—I won’t quote that sub-concession by NALCO to Canadian Javelin and American Zinc, and Newmont Corporation of Canada. These were three concessions granted by NALCO—and I believe they have been re-leased—so that everybody can know all about them—the American Zinc—the completion of the formal agreement is approved but I find the document is not signed. I give 745 square miles of Newfoundland—Canadian Javelin—I am not sure about that—

MR. SMALLWOOD: Are these timber or mineral?

MR. HOLLETT: These are mineral, I hope. Newmont Mining Corporation of Canada—they got their option and have dropped their option, perhaps they found nothing but timber on it.

MR. SMALLWOOD: They had no rights to look for timber.

MR. HOLLETT: I would like to read now, if I may, some extracts from NALCO's last year's report, just to refresh the memory of members of the Government. I am sure they will know very little about it.

"The Government of Newfoundland in late 1949, approved a plan which, with modifications and after several compromises, was embodied in Newfoundland and Labrador Corporation Limited. Established by an Act of the Legislature of Newfoundland (June 22, 1951), the Corporation represented a rather unique marriage, for a certain period of exploration and adaptation, between Government and private capital, with the Government of Newfoundland controlling 90% of voting power, and 10% private capital being conceded some specific rights on major issues.

"Through the Corporation, the Government of Newfoundland attempted:

1. To attract interest of strong financial groups.

2. To provide a means towards the rapid exploration of Newfoundland's natural resources.

9. To assure the Government of Newfoundland of a higher-than-usual return from the proceeds of the exploration of Newfoundland's resources (mining tax plus extra dividend): (a) by making a $900,000 contribution toward the risk capital of the Corporation, and (b) by taking over leadership during the first year of operations.

"An ambitious attempt to charge the Corporation also with the task of general manager of economics of Newfoundland (the Government's "economic arm") failed and was aborted.

"During the mining season of 1952, inspired by Sir William Stephenson, the following mining companies showed an active interest in the mineral-rich areas of the Corporation."

He stayed with us months, I believe, and gave us all this inspiration.

"Mr. Lyttleton B. P. Gould introduced American Zinc, Lead and Smelting Co. and Freeport Sulphur Co., and Mr. Claude S. Richardson made the contacts with some other firms.

"In addition, the following companies made brief surveys of the area controlled by our Corporation: The John Fox Interests (Oil), Kennecott Copper Corp., Oliver Iron Mining Company, Texas Gulf Sulphur Co., Powell Duffryn Technical Services Ltd."
"These contacts are proving very valuable, and, indeed, we expect some kind of association of interests with quite a number of them.

"We have signed a contract (sub-concession) with Newmont Mining Corp., and have reached agreements with American Zinc, Lead and Smelting Co., and the John Fox Interests."

Sir, I need not go on—they go on to tell about earlier accomplishments. Then they go on to recommend the new status of the Corporation. They are going to take control away from the Government up to a point and get private people to invest and run the corporation on a business-like basis. To that end they came across this Javelin Corporation of Canada, and they let them down. In that connection, Sir, I would like to offer the House the opinion of what I believe to be the "Bible" of Canadian Mining, that is how it is described anyway—I refer to the Northern Miner, which has the interest of mining and mineral resources of Canada at heart. This is what they have to say: (This is in reference to Newfoundland's venture into private enterprise and is dated March 18th, 1954):

NEWFOUNDLAND'S VENTURE INTO PRIVATE ENTERPRISE

Premier Joseph Smallwood's efforts to cut the people of Newfoundland in on some of the mining "gravy" seems to have run aground in shoal water. The result is not altogether unexpected. The doughty Premier's intentions were undoubtedly of the best but his methods of execution were entirely unsound from any practical viewpoint.

We are thinking of the Nalco fiasco which has now been dumped back in the lap of the Government after a pathetic trial in the field of public promotion. Its sponsor on that ill-starred voyage was a company which at that time was barely known to the mining public and which shortly thereafter for reasons never fully explained, was removed from trading on the Canadian Stock Exchange. No public accounting has yet been made of the relations between the two companies and up to the present the people have merely been told that control of Nalco has been returned to the Government.

Nalco, formally known as Newfoundland and Labrador Corporation, was launched with great fanfare back in 1951 as one of Mr. Smallwood's ambitious projects to revive Newfoundland's economy. Its corporation bill described it as expedient for the development of the natural resources and the improvement of the standard of living of the people of the province." And, behind the move was the feeling that in the past Newfoundland had profligately dispensed its resources with a lavish hand to various outside interests who reaped huge profits with the risk of little capital. Nalco was handed a big slice of the unclaimed portion of the province, the idea being that blocks would be turned over to private companies with an interest being retained by Nalco so that the people of the province would thus share in any dividends that resulted. But there was not much incentive for private capital to assume all the risk and give the province a free ride. The proposal languished under its own dead weight and last year a change of policy was adopted with the province taking a back seat. That, also, it would appear, did not work.

Between Nalco, Brinco and various other concession holders there is not a square inch of Newfoundland left where the private individual can carry out exploration. A table published in these columns two weeks ago showed that of all the provinces, Newfoundland was the only one in which not a single claim was staked last year. We think that is a great pity for it is generally recognized that the province has a promising mineral potential. Actually, its great producing mines have been a great source of wealth to the province, providing steady jobs for large numbers of people and pumping sizable amounts of money into the provincial economy for the purchase of equipment and supplies. That is the most satisfactory and satisfying type of reward that the people of Newfoundland can hope to get through the development of their natural resources. Much better, we think than to saddle the investors with free-riding shareholders which serve to stifle development and delay the finding of mines which await only the intelligent employment of risk capital.

This, Sir, is the opinion of a paper which is recognized by the Canadian Mining Interests as the "Bible" of Canadian Mining.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is pure nonsense, they publish anything they are paid to publish. If you pay them "God in Heaven" knows what they will publish there—the most venial paper in Canada, the "Northern Miner" a venial rag.

MR. HOLLETT: Like the Telegram?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, not like the "Telegram." The "Telegram" is not venial.

MR. HOLLETT: I maintain, Sir, whatever you call the paper, it is a just and honest appraisal.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It is utterly false and untrue—False factually.

MR. HOLLETT: I maintain NALCO and BRINCO have absolute authority over these large areas, and that will stifle the production of any resources in that huge area.

MR. SMALLWOOD: My honourable friend's predecessors said the same thing about the AND Company and the original company at Corner Brook. They were the great octopus.

MR. HOLLETT: I am not responsible for what my predecessors said.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It is the "Tory Attitude."

MR. HOLLETT: The "Tory Attitude."

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is it—Well said.

MR. HOLLETT: Again I repeat, Sir, talk about Newfoundland all you like; kick the teeth of NAFEL all you like, I think the Government better start to kick the teeth in NALCO and BRINCO—There you have a bunch of companies, and I refer to one or two of them, and the AND Company in our own country and Bowaters, they with a dozen others or more.

MR. SMALLWOOD: They are both in BRINCO.

MR. HOLLETT: They control the forest interest of sixty thousand square miles, and BRINCO if it so desires tomorrow may grant to the AND Company a concession or to Bowaters a concession or to anybody else a concession on the Labrador to hold and develop certain wooded areas. They can also withhold that concession from that area. They can withhold the concessions from the AND Company. Just the same, I say they are the NAFEL of mining and of forest development and any other development including hydro-electric power in that huge area of eighty thousand square miles. The ordinary prospector, the man who always finds mines, not companies like these, but the ordinary Jack who goes out as a prospector, goes out and finds mines. Not one of these companies discovered mines in this country, it was done by private individuals who went out with whatever they used and located certain minerals and went to a company, and the company went to the Government, etc. But there you cannot go in where BRINCO and NALCO have concessions and discover minerals and have somebody to produce. You have to go back to NALCO and say: "I have found some iron ore, what do you do about it?" NALCO can then do what it likes or do nothing about it. Of course, I know that I cannot do anything about it but I want the public to know and the Government to know just what they have done. They have stifled the development in this area, Sir, and I tell you, Sir, these companies they have on these corporations, BRINCO and NALCO, they will stifle the development of any industry when it is going to interfere with industries which they have already established. They have absolute control, a monopoly. I have heard the Honourable the Premier go into hysterics over the great concessions which were given out by the Governments of the past. They should be hung up to the lamp post. Everything should be done to these Governments because they gave five or six thousand square miles to the AND Company or ten thousand square miles to Bowaters, etc. They should have been tarred and feathered, Sir. Yet here, Sir, the Government, I say, gave away too, so do as they pleased with, eighty thousand square miles of Newfoundland territory, and as this respectable paper, the "Northern Miner," looked up to by the mining interests of Canada as a bible of mining, says, there is not one inch of territory into which a man can go and locate a mine without getting in touch with these people.

DR. ROWE: I say it is not true, the statement is wrong.

MR. HOLLETT: I have been told I am a liar.

DR. ROWE: I say the statement is not true.

MR. HOLLETT: He has no right to say it. He has to abide by the rules of this House as much as I have. Nobody can shout across the House and call me a liar.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Nobody did that.

MR. SPEAKER: No, the Honourable Minister did not do that. He said that is not true. It is not unparliamentary to say a thing is untrue. If the honourable member intended any other interpretation it would certainly infringe—

MR. HOLLETT: I hope he will correct the statement, and give me the truth if that is not the truth. We are told somewhere "The truth will set you free." I do repeat there is not one square inch of territory in the eighty five thousand square miles controlled by NALCO and BRINCO where the Honourable Minister nor myself as an individual can go in and stake out a claim and go to any company he pleases to develop. We have to go to NALCO and have to go to BRINCO—Mr. Speaker, I went to the Department of Mines and Resources. And I can tell the honourable member now where there is the biggest deposit of Fluorspar, I suppose, in the world, and I went and found out where it was. It was in NALCO's area, so I said, you better find it yourselves.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is patriotic.

MR. HOLLETT: Would it be patriotic to give it to NALCO? I maintain that the time is when the money the Government has put into this Corporation will be spent, and I would like to know where they are to get any more. Are they going to get it from this company taken off the stock market in Canada. I say, Sir, this Government will not profit five cents from any concessions which they granted. A few of our Newfoundlanders may get a day's work here and there, or a year's work or may even get continuous work, but the Government will get no revenue whatsoever, from NALCO, and none surely from BRINCO, because you have a lot smarter men in BRINCO than you have in NALCO. You have men in BRINCO who are shortly going to ask you for further concessions with regard to your Act, and I advise the Government they had better watch out for it.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The honourable gentleman will eat these words.

MR. HOLLETT: Nothing will give me greater pleasure. I see the Honourable the Premier waxing fat on words we have made him eat—words which he has said since 1949. In 1925 it was "Newfoundland for Newfoundlanders and Newfoundlanders for Newfoundland." He has waxed fat, Sir.

Well, Mr. Speaker, if I may adjourn the debate until tomorrow—

MR. SMALLWOOD: I second the motion, Mr. Speaker, not with a view to following the honourable member, but with a view to making a motion that the debate be adjourned.

On motion debate adjourned until tomorrow.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I move that all remaining Orders of the Day do stand deferred, Mr. Speaker, and that the House at rising do adjourn until tomorrow, Monday, at 3:00 of the clock.

House adjourned until tomorrow, Monday, April 5, 1954 at 3:00 of the clock.

MONDAY, April 5, 1954.

The House met at three of the clock in the afternoon pursuant to adjournment.

HON. J. R. SMALLWOOD (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I have to get a correction made, and I see there are no press reporters present. For that reason I will wait until the reporters are present, and with the indulgence of the House make the statement, as it is a matter of grave importance.

Presenting Petitions

HON. S. J. HEFFERTON (Minister of Municipal Affairs and Supply): I beg leave Sir, to present a petition from the residents of Burgoyne's Cove and Clifton, Trinity Bay North, praying that the road may be completed from Waterville, a short distance below Monroe to their particular district, a matter of four or five miles. Unfortunately the road construction in that particular locality would require the use of machinery and hence there has been some delay in giving heed to petitions of the residents during the past two or three years. This petition is signed by 190 people and has the support not only of the residents of Burgoyne’s Cove and Clifton but also of Little Harbour some few miles up the bay, also the residents of Ireland’s Eye. I heartily support this petition, Mr. Speaker, and beg leave to have it laid on the Table of the House and have it referred to the department concerned.

I beg leave also, Mr. Speaker, to introduce a petition from the residents of Kerley’s Harbour, and Bonaventure praying that the road may be extended from New Bonaventure to Kerley’s Harbour. In this connection I have also been approached by the residents of British Harbour saying that some three years ago they did make an effort to try and extend the road a distance of four miles in order to connect up Bonaventure with Little Harbour and British Harbour, but there is a difference of opinion amongst the residents and the difficulty of the terrain made it difficult for us to decide what route was to be taken, and consequently after some work was done the matter was held up. This petition has recently been supported by the medical doctor of the place who has pointed out to me the advantage of extending the road to avoid the hazards of sea travel along that particular part of the coast.

I heartily support this petition also, Mr. Speaker, and beg leave to have it laid on the Table of the House so that it may be referred to the department concerned.

Presenting Reports of Standing and Select Committees

HON. S. J. HEFFERTON (Minister of Municipal Affairs and Supply): Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to table a copy of the pension plans which were originally put in effect by the Town Council of Corner Brook East and also the Town Council of Deer Lake. I table these, as called for under the provisions of Local Government Act.

HON. C. H. BALLAM (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to lay on the table of the House report on the matters transacted by the Minister of Labour during 1953, under provision of the Act, also all reports of the Minimum Wage Board established under the Minimum Wage Act, 1950.

HON. J. R. SMALLWOOD (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, before you call the questions I would like to have the indulgence of the House for a few moments only, to draw attention to the very serious misquotation that appeared in one of the papers on Saturday. It reads as follows:

"The Premier said he did not deserve congratulations and reveals that the whole deal had been worked out with Ottawa in advance. Mr. Hollett wanted to know why he had not said so at the time. The Premier replied that the Government of Canada could not let it be known it was subsidizing fish, some of which might go to the U.S. Market."

Now, Mr. Speaker, that is not only a misquotation of what I said, but in the form in which it appears could be a vitally damaging statement to Newfoundland and Canada as a whole. It is obvious, I take it, the statement affects U.S. Trade, appearing locally, would be clipped by the U.S. Consul and forwarded to Washington. I take it that it would be the duty of the American Authorities in St. John's to clip this account of a statement, reported to be a statement by the Premier in the Legislature, and send it to the State Department in Washington. Furthermore, I can well imagine this very statement allegedly made by me, and appearing in the press might be sent to U.S. Fishing Interests and the U.S. Fishing Lobbyists who for years have been endeavouring to have the quota of fish at a low rate of duty reduced and the general tariff on the fish from Canada increased. It would well be, if allowed to stand on the record, a very damaging piece of information in the hands of those interests in the United States who are endeavouring, and have for years been endeavouring to put more and much greater restrictions on the importation of Canadian Fish into the United States.

Now, I think everybody in this House knows that I said no such thing as that. If the House is in any doubt of it we could ask to have Hansard produced by the reporter. It must be very clearly understood that I did not say anything of that nature nor anything approximating it, and that what appeared is as completely a misrepresentation of what I had said as it would be possible to imagine.

Now what I said is this: What I am quoted as saying let me repeat—

"Mr. Hollett wanted to know why he had not said so at the time." Here is where the inaccuracy began. "The Premier implied that the Government of Canada could not let be known" (had to hide the fact) "it was subsidizing fish, some of which might go to U.S. Markets." What I actually said was this: "I had telephoned to Ottawa and ascertained whether or not in the event of the Government of Canada making a deficiency payment, they would agree that the deficiency payment would come to the Newfoundland Government if the Newfoundland Government made an advance payment to the fishermen. I made that, I think, amply clear in my remarks here, and I don't see how anybody could have misunderstood, I frankly confess I don't know how any person with ears hearing what I said could translate it into what appears here in the "Daily News."

Now, I ask the press gallery, in a matter of vital importance, not to me personally, it does not matter a tinker's damn to me personally but it matters a great deal to Newfoundland, it matters a great deal to the fishermen of Newfoundland, to the fisheries of Newfoundland, and it matters to the fisheries of Canada as a whole—so for the sake of the fishery and the fishermen of Canada and Newfoundland as a whole I do ask the press to make it thoroughly clear that this has been a complete misstatement of what I said. Now, if anyone is in any doubt, because I fear that in some quarters I have a very, very low reputation, a very bad reputation in some quarters, there is a chance of suspicion that I am not capable, that it is not in me ever to speak the truth. If I say it is a fine day they probably say it is a foul day with bad weather. I know that suspicion exists in some quarters. Now, if there is in any quarter any doubt of what I have just said is true, then the solution is easy—ask Hansard to be produced and get the exact words I said—

MR. M. HOLLETT (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, until the Honourable the Premier made that last statement I had no intention of rising at all. But since he has made that statement I would like to have the Hansard produced so that we would all be quite clear, even the Premier himself as to what words were used at the time.

MR. SPEAKER: Mr. Clerk will take note of that request and present it on tomorrow.

Giving Notice of Motions and Questions

Question No. 32:

MR. SMALLWOOD: I have the answer to Question No. 32: The Directors of Atlantic Gypsum Ltd. are, Hon. L. R. Curtis, Hon. E. S. Spencer, Hon. C. H. Ballam, Ernest Leja, Hon. J. R. Smallwood.

2. The Managing Director of the plant is Ernest Leja.

3. 183 persons, and in shipping season that goes to 350. $600,000 a year being paid in salaries and wages.

4. The cost to date to the Treasury of this plant $2,825,113.

5. Newfoundlanders 165 and others 18 making the total of 183, not the total of 350 in which he is still 18 non-Newfoundlanders. I have not the amount of wages paid to each classification, but will have them in a day or two and will table them then.

In reply to (6) and (7) I regret to say that the only part of that question I noticed to this moment when I read it aloud—I thought it referred to an Auditor's Report. That is not yet available but as it refers to a period of which I should think the audit is available, if so, I will certainly table it. With regard to the second part the report is not yet available and I will present it in the House as soon as it is available to me. With regard to the next section I am afraid it is not in the public interest to say anything whatsoever, and I do not propose to do so. I think my Honourable friend will agree, if we are negotiating the sale of the plant the least said the better.

Question No. 30: Answer tabled by Mr. Hefferton.

Question (30) MR. HOLLETT—to ask the Honourable the Minister of Municipal Affairs and Supply to table the following information:

1. A statement showing the number of machines, bulldozers, graders, tractors, etc., purchased during the fiscal year ending March 31st, 1954. From whom were they purchased and what prices were paid for same?

2. List the number of motor vehicles of all kinds purchased during the same period. For which Departments were they purchased and from what firms and at what prices? Give type of vehicle.

3. What used vehicles and road building machinery were sold during the period. To whom were they sold and at what prices?

Question No. 28:

MR. HEFFERTON: I can give the answer to that question in part. Tenders are called normally for all institutions in Town, contracts are awarded on the basis of prices consistent with quality and the lowest tender receives the contract. The West Coast San. after some inquiries made at the time when the institution was about to open, on the basis of prices that were given, arrangements were made with a local firm to supply the hospital with day by day requirements. The Gander Hospital and the cottage hospitals and nursing stations, day by day requirements are met by arrangements made locally. But when there are furniture requisitions, surgical supplies etc., these invariably go to the Department of Health and come to the Department of Supply for tender.

The second part of the question is under preparation. I might say, Mr. Speaker, that one part of that particular question, the matter of drugs and dressings is so involved it is going to take considerable time trying to get it before the House closes.

Question No. 27:

HON. W. J. KEOUGH (Minister of Fisheries & Co-operatives): The answer is being prepared.

Orders of the Day

Adjourned debate on the Address in Reply:

MR. HOLLETT: I shall try to get through as quickly as possible. It comes down to the fact that some of us have to be long-winded to cover some points which are of special interest to us all.

I believe when I left off, I had come to the important issue of NALCO—
You will note that it says encouragement and assistance to industries suited to the needs of Newfoundland.

"(c) Guidance of small industries, and encouragement of expansion in groups inadequately represented."

If we cast back over the period, to what extent did the Economic Development guide the small industries in this country? We must remember that quite a number of small industries in this country have disappeared entirely, and as it was the duty of the Economic Development Department to look into and guide them, it is also the duty of the Department to tell us just why these industries are defunct and to show us wherein the Department failed in its duty. Many small industries have disappeared and there is no explanation from the Department whose duty it was to see that they were properly guided and assisted.

"(d) The promotion and utilization of the resources of Newfoundland."

What resources did we have? Certainly we had the fish, all sorts of fish. I do not need to ask what has been done. I do admit that the Department and the Government did assist some merchants to acquire draggers and I do know they spent some $214,000, I believe, in assisting fishermen with smaller boats and so on. I shall come to that later. There seems to be some discrepancy in the way the Development Board granted these loans. Out of $214,000 I find $88,000 went to one of the Northern Districts and I believe the Minister will be quite familiar with that particular district.

The duties of the Economic Development Department are well defined and there should have been no mistake as to what their duties were.

If we go over to sections 9 and 10 we find:

"The Lieutenant Governor in Council may make regulations to give effect to and carry out the objects of this Act, and may prescribe penalties upon summary conviction for violation of any such regulation by way of imprisonment for a term not exceeding three months or a fine not exceeding two hundred dollars or both such fine and imprisonment, and in default of such fine additional imprisonment for a term not exceeding two months.

"Regulations made under this Act shall forthwith after approval by the Lieutenant Governor in Council be published in the Newfoundland Gazette and laid before the Legislature within fifteen days after they are made, if the Legislature is then sitting, and, if not, then within fifteen days after the commencement of the next ensuing session thereof."

We have seen no Regulations. They have never been tabled. Since I came here, I have never seen Regulations with regard to the duties by the Department of Economic Development. In my opinion the Minister did not get to read this properly. I do not believe he got further than Section 4. I will read the whole section.

"4. (1) The Lieutenant Governor in Council may appoint an officer, who shall be called the Deputy Minister of Economic Development, who shall be the deputy head of the Department and who shall hold office during pleasure."
“(2) Such officers, clerks and employees as are necessary for the proper conduct of the business of the Department may be appointed or employed in accordance with the provisions of the Civil Service Act, but the Minister may, with the approval of the Lieutenant Governor in Council, temporarily employ such technical or other assistants as he deems necessary and, with such approval, fix the remuneration of and prescribe such expenses as may be incurred by such assistants in carrying out their official duties.”

That is as far as the Government and the Minister got in relation to this particular Act. They did not get any further than that. When the Minister saw he had the authority to appoint somebody else; he brought in Valdmanis, made him Director and said “go to it; the sky is the limit. Bring in the industries wherever you can get them.” And that is what Valdmanis did. He was given unlimited power by this House. He was installed as Director General at a salary of $25,000 a year.

There is also something in accordance with the rules in connection with Civil Servants which apparently never applied to Valdmanis. He was given the job as Director General, and the Minister promptly forgot about him as soon as they appointed him. He promptly forgot about Valdmanis, who had come in here from the mainland of Canada, where he touched down on his way from Central Europe—Latvia. He spent a while in some Town or in Ottawa, getting $100 a month in a small job with one of the Departments. He was pounced on by the Minister of Economic Development, brought here and promptly forgotten, but told to go straight ahead. Valdmanis was a lonely man, I take it, amongst a bunch of foreigners, so he decided “here is a chance; I have a job; I will bring in some of my friends.” He brought in his friends from all over the world and he advised this Government to spread some twenty million dollars amongst them.

One other thing the Director did (and I take it the department is somewhat responsible), was to set up this NALCO.

One thing I forgot to mention when speaking of Valdmanis—I do not know whether the Honourable Minister of Economic Development knew it at the time—but it is a fact that during the period Alfred Valdmanis was Director of Economic Development here, he was also a Director of a large Fish Company in New York—the Douay Export Company of New York. It is also a known fact to anybody who takes the trouble to find out, that this Douay Export Company had an interest in a fish plant in New Brunswick, very close to St. Andrews in New Brunswick. It can be proven that this Director made certain large investments in this fish plant in New Brunswick. It can be proven that not only Alfred Valdmanis but other people in this country invested largely in this particular fish plant in New Brunswick. I do not know whether the Government knew anything about that or whether it did not. It does seem rather a strange thing when we here in Newfoundland were trying to develop our fisheries, trying to set up plants, establish plants in order to give fishermen a chance to live, the Director of Economic Development and other people took large sums of money and invested it in fish plants in New Brunswick. I say it in passing. I shall probably have to refer to it later in more and in fuller detail.
Another thing the Doctor did—he had a large hand, I take it, in setting up the Newfoundland-Labrador Corporation Ltd. It is interesting to look at that particular Act and the peculiar manner in which it starts out:

"An Act to Incorporate The Newfoundland and Labrador Corporation Limited."

WHEREAS it is expedient for the promotion of the industrial and economic development of the Province of Newfoundland and for the development of its natural resources and the improvement of the standard of living of the people of the Province that a corporation be formed with the powers and be granted the concessions and rights hereinafter described and set forth."

That Act set up the Newfoundland-Labrador Corporation and Hon. the Premier, Hon. the Attorney General and Dr. Alfred Valdmanis were Directors; as also were C. A. Pippy, E. A. Bowring, H. M. S. Lewin, Claude Richardson, Lyttleton B. P. Gould, George M. MacKintosh and Harold S. Griffin.

Later on, Sir William Stephenson was a Director. He was with this Company about two months and then disappeared. We told the public last year about the manner of his going and the facts are well known to everybody.

Mr. Bowring has resigned, as has also Mr. Lewin. And now the great Valdmanis also has taken his suitcase and travelled off with his loot. I call it nothing else but loot. This man came in here and was given $25,000 a year for a number of years and then he was made Chairman of NALCO and given $30,000 a year.

For what? I have yet to see for what and I hope that the Government will be in a position sooner or later to explain to us why they increased his salary from $25,000 to $30,000.

This Act was amended in order that they might deprivatize this Company. They brought in Sir William Stephenson. He was put in charge of NALCO. He said "we are going to sell the Gypsum Plant, the Cement Plant, and the Birch Plant. Raise ten million dollars and we will give you these three plants." NALCO could not raise ten million dollars. We still have the three plants—we have two anyway. We had to go back to the financial world and borrow money as a government. Sir William Stephenson got out after that.

I was referring to the Amendment. NALCO has the right to grant concessions to whom it pleases. Over 25,000 square miles of territory they have absolute control of practically all mineral rights, all wood rights, all timber rights and all water rights. I believe, since 1950 they have had the sole control of this huge territory and during that period they granted three concessions, one to the American Zinc of Tennessee; one to the Canadian Javelin (these are the people who took the "private" out of the Corporation; they deprivatized it. They were supposed to raise a lot of money. We know what happened to Javelin. They succeeded in getting 2800 square miles. The are to be given a Mining Lease any time between now and 1959 over a mileage of 50 square miles). Another to the Newmont Mining Corporation of Canada. I am getting sick of it. We heard so much about Newmont; going to do this and that. What have they done? Anyway, this rings down the curtain—they dropped their option on December 31, 1958.
We have these three sub-concessions which unfortunately have come to nought.

Nine hundred thousand dollars, good hard cash, has gone into NALCO, and to date not one cent has come back. Nine hundred thousand dollars gone out on a gamble; given to Valdmanis to go out and spread his wings.

I was going to say something about BRINCO—that may look a little more respectable largely because it has on its directorate large Companies such as A.N.D. Company, Bowaters and Rothschilds. BRINCO has a concession to ten thousand miles in Newfoundland and fifty thousand miles on Labrador. They have been given absolute control over sixty thousand square miles—85,000 between BRINCO and NALCO, and if you were a Prospector and discovered a mine in that territory—or anything that looked like a mine—you would be naive if you came to the Department of Mines and Resources and said to Mr. Rowe "I have a mine; I want to file a claim." He would have to tell you—our own Minister would have to tell you—"I have nothing to do with it; you have to go and see NALCO or you have to go and see BRINCO." I defy anybody on the opposite side to refute that. We have a country, but we have not got it. We do not own it.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Point of order. Unless he is raising new points, is it in order for an honourable gentleman, in the wide latitude given in the Address in Reply, to go over legislation passed in former sessions—legislation which has been thoroughly ventilated and adopted by the House? If he chooses to take every piece of legislation, is he at liberty to review it all; give the pros and cons on it; give his views on it; is that in order? Or is he doing it just to bring his colleagues up to date?

MR. SPEAKER: I was about to remind the honourable member of a pitfall. Members may refer to past Acts, but they may not criticize past Acts. So far, and I have been listening carefully, I have not heard him commit a breach of that. He must be careful when commenting on legislation not to criticize it, and so long as he does not infringe on that, I cannot rule him out of order.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I have not noticed particularly a note of adulation or praise of the legislation up to now and if it is not condemning it, it sounds suspiciously like it.

MR. HOLLETT: Do I have to start praising the legislation? I have here an Act with regard to Dr. Arthur Seigheim. But I am not going to say anything more.

MR. SPEAKER: It would be equally out of order to praise it, as much as it would be to condemn it.

MR. HOLLETT: I can neither praise nor condemn an Act.

MR. SPEAKER: It does not prevent the honourable member from criticizing the policy of the Government emanating from an Act.

MR. HOLLETT: The hand out to Braun-Wogan—everybody knows him, the man who went to Gander and put the mythical gun to the head of Dr. Sennewald and said: "Look you come to St. John's and say what we tell you"—that is the man who got a million dollars for the rubber plant and is in on two or three others as well. The Canadian Machinery Company cost the country two and a half million dollars. If my memory serves me right the Public Accounts say there is an extra $25,000, I believe—why I don't know? Then there is the cotton mill—if you want a pocket handkerchief made it is a good spot to get it, but you won't get anything else—you might get a pair of overalls—that has taken the place of the reputable firm, and casting no reflection on United Cotton Mills, but a reputable firm which was formerly here in Newfoundland—but Valdmanis, Sir, is responsible for all that—Dr. Alfred Valdmanis who got $25,000 to $30,000 a year here for three or four years and while he was the agent for the Government, the Government was responsible, the Government cannot escape responsibility—I am laying the blame on Valdmanis but do so with a purpose—the Government has to take the responsibility for paying out twenty million dollars which with all other incidentals brings it nearly up to thirty millions, which has caused a little heartache or pain.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, is that remark in order? That sounds suspiciously close to an allegation of graft. If the honourable gentleman wishes to suggest graft, embezzlement, thieving, robbery, I wish he would do so, so that we could deal with it, instead of hinting and using innuendo.

MR. SPEAKER: That remark was certainly coming very close to and could lend itself to misinterpretation. Consequently I don't think the honourable gentleman should make ambiguous remarks like that.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, I take it, it is something similar to the remarks of the Premier on the last sitting day that the paper misrepresented him—when any of us, Mr. Speaker, open our mouths to say any-ample. But when we look at the information which has been handed to us so far we find that was not in any way ample for this Government, who claims that it is the only Government that we have had, that did anything for certain branches of our industries such as the fishery etc. I want to draw, Sir, to your attention the Orders in Council which were passed relative to financial matters during the past year. As we know, each department is allocated so much and each department has that so much, divided up into little lots for this, and big lots for that. During the course of the year it is reasonable to expect some department might run short and others have a little too much etc. But, Sir, I never did think that it was possible for any one Government to require over and above the estimates passed at the beginning of the year, to underestimate an amount of $3,168,000. For instance they had to get an Order in Council for $50,000 for a commission of inquiry into agriculture. Was not that taken care of last year in the estimates? I am quite sure we had something about a commission of inquiry into agriculture last year. Still the Government had to get fifty thousand dollars to pay some of the cost on that. They had to get an Order in Council, to find an amount I take it, of $125,000 to lend the Co-operative Housing. They had to get an Order in Council for $20,900 as the cost of printing and illustrating a booklet descriptive of the progress of the province since the date of union with Canada. We have not been told, but they had to spend $20,900 over and above what was allocated to this department on this booklet showing the progress of the province since union with Canada.

The honourable member for White Bay, a few days ago asked a question relative to the amount of money granted to the Grenfell Association this year. I believe in the estimate last year there was an amount for this year—in any case they had to have an Order in Council to give them another $178,000. They had to get an Order in Council for $150,000 to defray the cost of administration of fishery development authority. That is something we have to go into later, and I don't intend to take up too much time of the House at the present time on it other than to say that this $150,000 goes towards the paying of the fabulous salaries, on a par with Valdmanis—that is to help defray some of the salaries, I take it.

Then we had $46,000 to cover cost of motion pictures required for the use of the Government. Now are we, as a Government, going into the motion picture business, and if we are who are the stars? Who are the Roy Rogeres—who are they? Incidentally, Mr. Speaker, I saw a picture of somebody in the "Evening Telegram" recently resembling very strongly "Roy Rogers" with a gun. That was $46,000 Sir which went for motion picture shows for the Government. Possibly the Government members amuse themselves in their spare time when not travelling, or perhaps they take them along when travelling all over the world, Pakistan, New York, London and Brussels and God knows where they are going to go—Jamaica—I suppose it is possible they did take along those motion picticture shows to remind themselves they were Newfoundlanders at any rate.

MR. SPEAKER: I must interrupt the honourable member for a moment. Officers are supposed to remove from the building any person who makes any comment by way of laughter or other comment—the disturbance came from the upper gallery—

MR. HOLLETT: We know we should not laugh, Sir.

MR. SMALLWOOD: To a point of order, Mr. Speaker: The honourable member is offering a satirical comment on Your Honour's Ruling.

MR. SPEAKER: The honourable member knows full well that only elected members to this House may speak or make any comment whatsoever; also that Mr. Speaker has the right to clear the galleries of visitors—as that would work a hardship on certain innocent members of the public. I ask the Sergeant-at-Arms to send an Officer to the gallery. I don't want the honourable member who is speaking interrupted.

MR. HOLLETT: I find here next, Sir, $25,000 for a wardens' building for the prison camp in Salmonier; $100,000 advanced to the Newfoundland Knitting Mills, Limited (that is by way of squaring up a loan of $387,000 for the Newfoundland Knitting Mills, Limited). Some of these things are very interesting, Mr. Speaker. There is $900,000 there to cover expenditures required to be made in the event of payment made for salt cod for 1953 production. I can quite see the necessity for an Order in Council for such a purpose as assistance to the fishery. I do not criticize that at all. But I do question whether this Government of this small province, or an other province for that matter, has the right without calling the House together to vote amounts totalling $8,168,000 without the House's approval. I doubt, Sir, very much whether that is proper and correct. If I were to read section 3 of the Revenue and Audit Act I believe I would find that each Minister must give the reason why he makes a request for an Order in Council and it must be proven before the Lieutenant Governor in Council that dire hardship will result to our people if such a grant is not forthcoming. Where was the dire hardship in the matter of motion pictures? Where was the dire hardship with regard to various other things I have mentioned here. There may have been dire hardship in this particular case, therefore I am not casting any reflection on that if it took five millions, if the fishery were in such condition as this would indicate. The honourable the Premier told us some facts about that and has, according to the honourable Premier been misquoted on that—we shall hear more about that later, therefore I am not saying anything about it at the moment.

That was on Nov. 26, 1953, Sir. And I notice (that may be a resolution or may not) that a million and a half dollars had to be borrowed from the Bank of Montreal. Later on, February 1954, $225,000 were borrowed from Fisheries Development Loan Fund, and $45,000 from the Industrial Loan Fund and $35,000 from the Co-operative Loan Fund, and another $750,000 from the Bank of Montreal on which we had to pay 3½%. So that we had to borrow from the bank and from the loan boards $2,550,000 over and above the amount of revenue which was collected for the eleven months of over thirty millions. That, Sir, in my opinion is unheard of in the history of this province, the amount of borrowing. Does the honourable the Premier wish to make any comment?

MR. SMALLWOOD: The Honourable Leader of the Opposition has left the Premier speechless for once, speechless as he has anyone else who has any brains or knowledge.

MR. HOLLETT: I do hope, Mr. Speaker, there are several persons in this House with some brains and knowledge who will understand the purport of what I said and the purport of the Honourable Premier's words.

Altogether, then Sir, $3,168,000 had to be voted to the Government by orders in council. In my opinion, Sir, to take care of a good bit of overspending by the Government, a good bit of travelling which need not have been done. I venture to bet the travelling expenditure of the Government for the last twelve months is close to or in the vicinity of four hundred thousand dollars— we voted them over three hundred thousand dollars or even ten per cent of the vote for current account.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Ten per cent?

MR. HOLLETT: One per cent—I beg your pardon. I have the floor. If you want me to sit down Mr. Speaker, I shall do so.

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, no.

MR. HOLLETT: When I look back over the financial record, Sir, of the Government for the past five years, and particularly over the past three years, I wonder why our credit is good, I wonder why we have any money at all. I am warning the people of this country now that if this present Government is allowed to proceed in the manner of financial waste that they have been carrying on then I am quite sure, Sir, this country will not be in the position that she should be following Confederation. How are we going to have the money for roads and bridges and everything else? Incidentally, Sir, I come to roads now.

Last year on roads, I believe, we were supposed to spend some five million dollars approximately. I quite realize that roads of this country, Mr. Speaker, are in a deplorable condition in every part of the country particularly at this time of the year. The very nature of the roads must indicate that they are not going to be in good condition—but I have only to go up in my honourable friend's district here in St. Johns' West to see the deplorable state of the roads up there, not fit to walk over not to talk about taking a vehicle over. I wonder how much was spent in the last year on Blackhead Road, the Petty Harbour Road and how much on St. Phillip's Road. I remember last year, Mr. Speaker, the honourable Minister of Public Works informed me there was a vote of sixty thousand dollars to be spent in St. John's, or something similar to that amount. And the Honourable Minister informed me that he would get in touch with me before they spent any of that money on any of our roads in St. John's West. I have to say, Sir, since that time the Honourable Minister has never even bothered to phone me about it. I did phone him once or twice to try and get a few dollars for here and there in the district. Now, as to how that money has been spent I am not questioning, but I do say a little more co-operation between the Honourable Minister and the representatives of the district would be appreciated, I should think, by every member in this House. It is all very well to shake your head and look and smile askant—

MR. SPENCER: I rise to a point of order, Mr. Speaker: The Honourable Leader of the Opposition obviously refers to me—I shook my head—I made the statement to him that sixty thousand was voted for St. John's West last year—I was hoping he would have recollected that the correct amount we hoped to spend in St. John's East and West last year was placed at forty thousand dollars for each district. I hoped when the honourable member made the statement of sixty thousand which is only an increase of sixty per cent—well I can easily understand anybody not understanding his figures. The honourable member referred to somebody shaking his head. I merely tried to help him. If he wishes for any information regarding the district he is entitled to it and will get it and always has gotten it since I have been the Head of the department.

MR. SPEAKER: I am sorry to interrupt you—there was no point of order.

MR. SPENCER: I merely make the statement, Mr. Speaker. If you want to disagree with it.

MR. SPEAKER: Order—there will be no further interruptions. Honourable member please proceed.

MR. HOLLETT: The matter is much worse, Sir, since the exact amount was given by the honourable member—forty thousand dollars for St. John's West and East, out of five million dollars—forty thousand dollars to be spent in St. John's West and East out of a grant of five million dollars. Then you get somebody going up to Corner Brook and endeavouring to turn the people against St. John's District on account of roads, and coming back to Grand Falls and doing the same thing there. These things, Sir, don't seem to me to be quite fair. I thought I was being very generous putting the amount at sixty thousand dollars for St. John's West, but now I am told it was forty thousand for St. John's West, and for St. John's East where the population is very considerable and there are a lot of people and a lot of vehicles, a lot of people paying revenue in that area—yet the Honourable Minister has made the admission now that forty thousand dollars was the full amount voted, and I hope, Sir, that gets across the country so that the people in Corner Brook and the people in Fogo will know the amount voted for St. John's East and West. I do hope my honourable friend the member for Fogo has not told the people of that district that St. John's East and West got it all. That is another thing, forty thousand would be all right in Fogo and the honourable member says they would be glad to get forty thousand, and we would be glad to get forty thousand in St. John's West. But we don't know what we got, nobody knows, Sir, if it goes on local roads, which I say did not get anything. Incidentally Sir, we are not so fortunate as they are in some parts of the country where I am told on very excellent authority there is a big road repairing job going on, i.e., on Roches Line near Brigus. There is a major road construction job there being carried on, and I believe there are six trucks presently working there dumping crushed stone along the muddy road between the Conception Bay Highway and Brigus Junction. Now, we know that Roches Line is a sort of sport area where there are a lot of ponds and supposedly some trout out there. I have been out there several times but never managed to get any trout. But I take it this road, fifteen miles of it, is being repaired so that people will be able to go out and catch a few trout when the season opens up. But when I think, Sir, of the deplorable state of the roads from St. John's to St. Philips and out to Blackhead and Cape Spear and from St. John's to Petty Harbour. Where I travelled recently, Sir, and I did not see any trucks thus when I think of the condition of these roads and then think of a major repair job being carried out on Roches Line I am inclined to ask if there is another new industry out there.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The answer to that would be yes, there is.

MR. HOLLETT: Would the Honourable the Premier inform me what it is?

MR. SMALLWOOD: At the right time, and very gladly and very proudly.

MR. HOLLETT: I ask, Sir, is this the reason why this major job is being done with six trucks pulling crushed stone for the muddy road? Yet we can't get five cents in St. John's East nor West, and here we have the member for Fogo crying out as to why they can't get some money up there. How can you get it when we spend it on Roches Line before the frost is out of the ground—dumping crushed stone—and we are told now that a new industry is to be started out there.

MR. SMALLWOOD: No such thing—that a new industry has started.

MR. HOLLETT: It is started out there, Sir. I do hope it will be a success. I do hope any people who have a share in that industry will reap rich rewards, then we will know that the money spent on this particular piece of road will have paid off. Forty thousand dollars in St. John's East and West!

I was going to say something about education, but I think I need only refer to the report, which I think I have here, the annual report of the Department of Education. I think it has two or three pages describing it very well, and I won't detain the House any longer than to read one or two extracts from the pages of this report just issued for last year, Sir. The Problem of Teachers Shortage—"It has already been pointed out in previous reports and in public addresses that our school population increased at the rate of five thousand pupils each year and this trend will continue." I don't know how, Sir, it will continue but it says there that it will. "The fact that Newfoundland is undergoing a major social and economic transition, cannot help but affect the teacher supply problem." A major social and economic trend. I agree with the social but cannot see the economic transition yet. Here is something, Sir, of interest which we all take to heart: "The following figures gleaned from statistics in the report are of interest." Total number of pupil teachers at present time. 2,585—teachers with one or more years of professional training 1,136. Less than half, Sir, of the people who were teaching our children across Newfoundland. Teachers with less than one year total more than half. Think of these figures five years after entering Confederation, Sir, five years after the sunshine of prosperity was to blast out all poverty in this our Island home — teachers with less than one year of professional training number 1,402 out of a total of 2,500, and classed in that are 384 without any professional training whatsoever. I know, Sir, that the educational authorities are undoubtedly doing a good job. Everybody of course realizes the wide stretch of coast around this country and how difficult it is to get teachers to go to these out of the way places — I know that the educational authorities are undoubtedly doing a good job. Everybody realizes, of course, the wide stretch of this country around the coastline, and how difficult it is to get teachers to go to these out of the way places. I hope the Economic Development plan laid down by Dr. Valdmanis will eventually bring some of them into larger centres.

Public Health and Welfare: They had fourteen million dollars spent on that. We are told it is not enough. I am quite sure it probably is not quite enough. We can see as the years go along that we are going to need more for that. I think we know — we have to know — that we have to cut down on wasteful expenditure. We have to cut out the huge travelling expenses; this $300,000 or $400,000 for travelling, in this small Province. Never a day goes by but some Minister or some member of some Department goes to Ottawa or goes to New York or Ontario or Europe or Halifax or somewhere.

DR. POTTLE: That is $300,000 or $400,000 travelling expenses of the Government as a whole.

MR. HOLLETT: I asked how much was spent by each Minister. $400,000 spent by the Civil Service as a whole is much too much —

MR. SMALLWOOD: How do you know?

MR. HOLLETT: I am entitled to my opinion.

MR. SMALLWOOD: How does it compare with the travelling expenses of the Commission of Government?

MR. HOLLETT: The Commission of Government had to look after Post Offices, Customs, Railway, etc.

MR. SMALLWOOD: We have eighty or ninety Welfare Officers, alone, travelling incessantly. What do you suppose that cost?

MR. HOLLETT: I am telling the Government that they are extravagant. While we have a Government which carries on such extravagance, then we cannot have money for Public Health and Welfare and for hospitals. The member from White Bay asked about the Grenfell Association the other day, he was told they had paid $830,000 to the Grenfell Association. That is good; but the honourable member for White Bay is trying to get a hospital in the district. The Government will give them $100,000 but they must put up $100,000 themselves. However, you could not expect anybody in White Bay to collect $100,000. Yet the Government paid $200,000 to house Sennevald. $200,000 would put a hospital in White Bay. I hope the Government will give every bit of help it can to the people of White Bay. It is on that long stretch of coast — White Bay to Cape St. John— Cape Norman up to Bonne Bay, where there are hundreds and thousands of people and who are many miles from hospitals. That part of the coast has been neglected by the Government.

I was going to say something about tourism. Since I mentioned the $200, 000 building (which was the Aerated Water Building)—it reminds me of Mr. Vardy. He is trying to give good service in his job. But I noticed something some time ago about the leasing of salmon rivers. I do hope and trust that the Government will not see fit to lease any of our salmon rivers or fishing rivers to anyone outside or inside the country. God knows we have not too many places to go to enjoy ourselves. Rivers are limited, compared to the population and sporting activities. Once we start renting rivers, it will not be long before they will all be in the hands of private owners, particularly as the Government might get hard up for cash. I hope that they will take into consideration before they allow Mr. Vardy to persuade them to rent rivers. I could say more about that, and I shall say more later.

I come now to fisheries. We come to a tough problem. I admit that the Government—any government; be it the Government of Nova Scotia, or the Government of New Brunswick, the Government of British Columbia or the Government of Newfoundland, you have one of the toughest problems on your hands. I am not going to be too critical.

MR. SPEAKER: There is too much use of the personal pronoun. I would suggest the honourable member refer to the policy of the Government.

MR. HOLLETT: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker. Now with regard to the Mental Hospital—I have other things to say, but at the present time I would just mention the wages paid student nurses. These students are getting $60 a year—that in itself would be bad enough; but listen! “of which $360.00 is deducted for board and lodging, including laundry.” We expect these young girls to spend three years—even in the Mental Hospital where conditions are not too pleasant—to work long hours, hard work, for $800, clear of board and lodging. I do not think that is good enough. On the other hand, I am reminded that they say that it is understood that that is equal to the highest paid in Canada. God help us if that is all the student nurses get in Canada. It is about time the whole of Canada got busy. We know the nursing profession is one of the most important, most glorious, most sacrificial services which any individual can perform. They have to spend three years in training for a palty $300. Three hundred dollars today is not worth twenty-five, years ago. I do hope the Minister will bring in Estimates and ask for more money, even if we have to make an Order in Council and get it later on.

Regarding Fisheries, I have here an answer to a question with regard to the loans made by the Fisheries Loan Board. I find, as I have already pointed out, that $273,000 was loaned out by the Fisheries Loan Board. Of that amount, I find that $165,602 went to Bonavista Bay, most of it was in Bonavista North. I find that $11,000 went to Placentia Bay, believe it or not. It is a good bay, good fishing and good fishermen, but they got only $11,000. That Loan Board was granted $500,000 to loan to fishermen. I understand it was so difficult to get a loan, you would die of starvation if you had to depend on the loan, before you got it. Only $273,000 was paid out over the last three years. Then we find the Government had to go and borrow money from the Loan Board, money which should have been loaned to fishermen two or three years ago, still there lying idle. The fishermen were not able to get access to it. One man in Fortune Bay got $26,700 and a man in Trepassey got $710. I mention that in passing. The Fisheries Loan Board, although it undoubtedly helped some people, they have not justified their existence to the extent we had hoped. Why, is anybody's guess. I am not going to make any comments with regard to that now.

I come now to the most important thing in fisheries that I have seen in a long time, that is the matter of the Walsh Report. I have here, and I want to read it, if I may, a synopsis of the recommendations of that Committee which worked two years on the oldest headache of Newfoundland, and which brought in a voluminous Report. These are notes I have taken down from the Report of the Committee, and I would like to read them to the House, if I may, Mr. Speaker.

MR. SPEAKER: As far as I can judge the honourable member may read them. They are not comments on Speeches made in the House.

MR. HOLLETT: "A brief synopsis of the Programme of Development envisaged and indeed recommended by the Newfoundland Fisheries Survey include the following:

The programme, they say should be based upon the utilization of all available resources capable of Economic exploitation and sustained yield. First then they recommend a period of intensified exploration in new fishing methods of fishing. They suggested at least one large Dragger equipped for deep water fishing. They suggested the exploration of waters off shore for some sixty miles by one small dragger, and other suitable vessel, equipped for multiple purpose fishing, Danish seining and variable depth trawling. This was to begin early in 1953.

They recommended two craft equipped with ship-to-shore radio for locating and reporting mackerel, caplin and herring. They wanted a search made for Halibut grounds by long-liners and seiners.

The Committee recommended an intensification of biological and technological Research in certain areas, and suggested four suitable vessels to explore the bays and estuaries—two on the Northeast coast in summer and all four on the Southeast coast in winter. An additional vessel for the Labrador.

They recommended immediate conservation measures for salmon, and research upon cod populations to establish relationship between inshore and off-shore populations.

They recommended an aquarium (I do not know why) and a museum for fishery displays. The Technological research would include:

(a) continuous study of salt fish and methods of processing (a Pilot Plant);
(b) experiments in packaging herring, and smoked fish products;
(c) experiments in canning fish, and in processing pet foods and fish meals;
(d) as also the possibilities with dog fish and sharks.

CATCHING: Long-liners, Danish Seiners, and multi-purpose boats recommended. Bounties recommended. And also the training of fishermen in the use of gear and engines, etc., and vocational classes at the Memorial University.

They suggest the building of Dry Docks and Repair Shops and ample spare parts for engines, etc., at selected centres, as also servicing and supply depots.

CURING: Until suitable mechanical dryers are available, they say "stick to sun drying." The Committee state they will say nothing to halt the exodus of the men from the fisheries (salt), unless immediate and effective steps can be taken to assure to the fishermen a standard of living, regarded as normal for rural areas. Child and female labour must be eliminated, they say.

For the South West Coast the solution is, more filleting plants; plus minor centralization in small settlements or areas.

For the North East Coast, the answer is Centralization of the Salt Fish industry at suitable places in large areas of production in the inshore fishery and near grounds on which long-lining can be carried out. Adequate stores would be placed at some winter shipping port. All by-products possible to be manufactured. They recommend an immediate survey of Development areas, where all facilities may be made available, such as better housing, electricity, good roads, good schools and water and sewerage. Also hospital and nursing facilities, and good agricultural land.

The programme is a long term one, and the first step is a Survey, followed by the erection of experimental plants. Minor centralization of curing operations is to be encouraged in small settlements or areas, along cooperative lines. The Memorial University is to be tied to the whole Programme.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Point of order. Is it in order to go into a long quotation, which, to this moment, we do not know what it is?

MR. HOLLETT: I told you.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The Honourable member has not yet told us what he is quoting from. He said something about a summary or synopsis, but whose, has not been said. He is reading from a long document. Is that in order? It is getting to be very monotonous.

MR. SPEAKER: The rule of strict relevancy does not apply to this debate. So far as I can see, the report or comment which the honourable member is reading is not out of order.

MR. SMALLWOOD: When we do not know what it is; and he does not tell us. He asked if it would be in order if he read a few words; you said, as far as you could judge, it was in order. For seven or eight minutes he has been quoting from a document. He has not told us what it is. He refers to recommendations in the Report of the Walsh Committee. Is it a summary? Whose summary? Who is the author of the summary?

MR. SPEAKER: I cannot rule the honourable member out of order.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Should you have to assume whose summary it is? Are we not entitled to know whose summary it is so we may the better know whether it is an accurate one?
He is quoting from an anonymous document. We do not know who wrote it. We are entitled to know, before the honourable gentleman is allowed to read it.

MR. HOLLETT: May I say a word? I said at the beginning that I had here a synopsis of the recommendations made in the Walsh Report. These are recommendations of Sir Albert Walsh and his Committee. I have taken them out word for word.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The point at issue is this—whether he is giving in his own words a summary of the Walsh Report, or whether he is giving it in the words of somebody else.

MR. HOLLETT: It is none of your business.

MR. SPEAKER: Order.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It is our business. Furthermore, we demand to know, we demand to know whether this document is in his own words or whether he is picking out sentences and merely reading them aloud.

MR. SPEAKER: The honourable member, at the beginning, asked the Chair if he could read a synopsis of the Recommendations made by Sir A. Walsh and his Committee, and I received it. I had prepared these recommendations; I had taken them word for word from the Report. If the Premier doubts their accuracy, and I can see he does, then he is not familiar with the Report, otherwise he would recognize that it is word for word from the Report.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I accept the honourable gentleman's explanation. It is his own summary. Now we know.

MR. HOLLETT: It is my own summary of the recommendations of the Walsh Report. I can read and I can write. I took them down, word for word, briefly, because I did not want to bore the House. I am going to take the time the honourable the Speaker will give me and I am not going to be bullied as long as I keep within the rules.

MR. SPEAKER: The question of boredom does not enter into it. The Chair has to listen to all the speeches. Continue your speech.

MR. HOLLETT: To continue with my own synopsis of the recommendations of the Chief Justice, Chairman of the Fisheries Development Board: The Memorial University is to be tied in to the whole programme.

Increased production of heavy salted codfish is to be examined. Four salt depots are to be set up. A Housing scheme for fishermen is to be a part of the plan. They recommend division of the responsibility for implementation of the scheme as follows: Federal—Exploration, Demonstration and Scientific Research as also Biological Research.

Provincial: Training in Navigation and Diesel Engines.

Fishermen: Servicing Depots.

Private Enterprise: Docks and other shore facilities. Building large plants, small curing stations, servicing large establishments.
Small curing stations should be the responsibility of the fishermen they say. Education is for the Provincial Government and the University.

Financing the programme is largely for the two Governments and private enterprise. The Committee recommended that if private enterprise can make an investment of 51% in the capital of a Company, then the Governments should advance the balance. But if private enterprise refuses or is unable to bear this share, then Governments go fifty-fifty.

They recommend a Standing Joint Committee to be set up at once with a full-time executive Secretary. The Committee to have two joint Chairmen representing the two Governments. The function of the Committee is to advise the Governments, who will jointly bear the cost."

That is the end of the Summary I made of the Walsh Report and for which accuracy I can vouch. As I pointed out, if anybody does not recognize it, I am not at all the least bit surprised. It is quite a lengthy document. The scheme can be carried out; it can be implemented, but it is going to take a long time to do so. And while they are going about that, we have at least ten thousand fishermen, if not more, and something else will have to be done for the fishermen in order to keep them in the fishery. It is no use to launch boats and catch fish, when the dollar is not worth 50c. of the value it was a few years back. The Government will have to spend large sums by way of implementation if they expect the fishermen to remain in the fishing boats.

Fishing is one of the most honourable occupations a man can go at; like the farmer who tills the soil, the fisherman goes out on the mighty deep and he puts out his net and fishing gear and comes in day by day or week by week, hoping to keep from starving both his wife and children. The fishery has fallen on hard times. The fisherman looks to somebody for help and hope. They have looked in vain to this Government for five years.

DR. POTTLE: More "hope."

MR. HOLLETT: Your Department will have to pour out help if this scheme is not implemented. Unfortunately this scheme has not come into production to any great extent. I say therefore, Sir, and I repeat again; we cannot afford to waste money on motion film by the Government, there are private individuals who are supposed to do that. I am afraid, Sir, that you can scarcely call the Government that we have today a responsible government, you can scarcely call them a government at all because every department practically has a commission or committee set up to look after things; all sorts of commissions ever since 1949—we have been setting up commissions of all kinds and the heads of the departments have been gallavanting all across the world and leaving the business of their departments and of the country in the hands of commissions. We had a fish price commission, cost of living commission, forestry commission, agricultural commission, fisheries development committee and then this very, very special one they set up, of experts, to go into the terms of union and to make recommendations to the Government. Everything is being done by commissions. Then they have boards, development boards, fishery loan boards, boards of inquiry, boards of this and boards of that, and the Government, Sir, are not paying very much attention to the duties which they as a Government should carry out, they get somebody else to do the work. You take this implementation of the terms, this committee which has been set up of high-class high-sounding names, but is not that the Government’s job to prepare their own brief to put before the Royal Commission? Have they not brains enough over on that side of the House to prepare that claim properly? Is there any reason why they have to get men along Water Street to prepare a brief? Then they in turn go and hire a high-salaried man somewhere across Canada to do the work. In the first place we should not have to implement the terms, they should have been properly drawn up in the first instance but were not. Now the Government is starting to drag a red herring across the track of the terms, and they are going to get some men, and I have great respect for these men. They are good men, the whole lot of them on that committee including the chairman to have one onus of insufficient terms laid at their door, which I fear certain members on the opposite side of the House will do if the Canadian Government does not come across, as it should, when the recommendations of these gentlemen are presented to the Royal Commission. I have great respect for every one of the men on this particular Committee.

Now, Sir, I come to the final thing I shall speak on in this present speech on the address in reply. I come now to something on which perhaps I am not the best one to speak, the alcoholic liquor question. This question, Sir, is one which we in this country have to take very seriously, and not only in this country but in all countries because, as I look across the world today, and as I look across forty years, I find that this evil of intoxicating liquor is one of the most devastating evils of democracy. It is doing more to destroy the democracies which we knew and which we have read of in times past than any other that I know of. Why this is so I don’t know because they have had alcoholic liquor down through the ages right from perhaps three thousand years ago. Every country has had alcoholic liquor as far as I know. But I don’t think there is anybody in this House, Sir, who won’t agree with me when I say that the impact of alcoholic liquors and the sale of alcoholic liquors upon the modes and morals of our people today is much greater and is having dire results across this province and right across the Dominion of Canada as well as the whole North American Continent. It is something therefore, which we, in this little province and in this House should approach with a certain amount of coolness and coolheadedness. I will say right here, Sir, that I have no desire whatsoever to make politics out of this. I know the proposition which the Government was up against when they proposed it. There, I think was a place where they might very well have set up a commission to make some inquiries, a commission who knew something about the proper way for us to draw up legislation with regard to alcoholic liquors. They did not do that at all, and now, as I have said, I may make some harsh remarks, Sir, and I do so and want it publicly known that I don’t want any politics made out of this. We should not make politics out of this evil which, Sir, is bringing degradation and disgrace to so many of the people of this province. I know of the evil of this alcoholic liquor problem, I don’t suppose there is anybody any better able to speak on the matter than I am myself, with regards to the evils of alcoholic liquor. So, if I do get hot, Mr. Speaker, I trust that you, Sir, and the members on the opposite side will overlook it. It is difficult to know just exactly where to start. But there is one thing I have to say, Sir, and I will say that quite early—I do not think that any member of this House should in any way be dabbling with the liquor situation. I want to quote, Sir, section 11, I believe, of the Alcoholic Liquor Act. If I am a little slow in finding it, Sir, I trust that you will overlook it. I am going to quote that, Sir, supposing I am going to hang up the House for the next hour. I have to find it because it is important—The Alcoholic Liquors Act. Page 1156 of the Statutes. I want to quote this just to show how the Government of the day has made this liquor act. It was made before this Government came into power, and they have administered it since they came in—but how much weight have they put into the idea of not having anybody mixed up in the sale of it who has anything to do with the Government—"No member or employee of the Board of Liquor Control shall directly or indirectly, individually or as a member of a partnership or corporation have any interest whatsoever in dealing in or in the manufacture of alcoholic liquor or in any enterprise or industry in which alcoholic liquor is required, or receive any commission or profit whatsoever from or have any interest whatsoever in the purchases or sales made by the Board or by the persons authorized by this Act to purchase or sell alcoholic liquor."

Now, Sir, if it is so important that members of the Board and their employees have nothing to do with the sale or purchase or with the profits that come therefrom of alcoholic liquors, how much more important, Sir, is it that the legislators, the Government, the members of which each of them has to frame the rules and regulations which are made for the sale and purchase of alcoholic liquors, or how much more important is it that no member of this House would have anything to do in any way in any shape or form with the sale and purchase or what-not of alcoholic liquors? I think, Sir, that the hands of every person in this House should be washed clean of alcoholic liquors as to the sale and as to the profit therefrom. I say that with all due respect to any member on the opposite side who may have shares in this business.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, to a point of order: I heard my honourable friend say: it was therefore all the more important that the Government, that no member of the Government should have anything to do with the sale of liquor, is he suggesting that any member of the Government has, or that he has any reason to think that he has—would he make a charge?

MR. HOLLETT: I don't think, Mr. Speaker, that could be a point of order.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I am sorry—but then perhaps my honourable friend would answer that question.

MR. HOLLETT: I don't have to.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I know. But perhaps my honourable friend would.

MR. HOLLETT: I will come to that later. Now that the honourable premier has mentioned that—I did not intend to use this thing at all. But Mr. Speaker will remember that sub-section five or section five of Question No. 5 a few days ago reads: List all taverns, hotels and clubs licensed in Newfoundland with names and addresses —

MR. SPEAKER: The honourable member is not allowed to refer to that. Surely he remembers a ruling from this Chair which ruled the entire question out of order. He cannot refer to that question.

MR. HOLLETT: Very well, Mr. Speaker, if I cannot refer to it I must if necessity refer to a list which was presented to this House on the request of the Opposition last year, a list of licensed establishments 1953. I also have here, Sir, a similar list for 1952. These have been tabled in the House and are documents which I may refer to. I know that at that time there was given us the name of every licensee, of every tavern and every club in Newfoundland, and their address is here. Whether it was a tavern, hotel, club or a vendor it was all listed as was also the fee which each licensee paid for his license to sell alcoholic liquor is there set down as is also the registered owner of every tavern-keeper, club-keeper and every other sort of building which sold alcoholic liquors. That, Sir, was listed last year and was tabled here in reply to a question. Also in the previous year the same thing was done. I find, Sir, that in 1952 there were seventy-two taverns and clubs all across the country, but today there probably are many more than that. So that we can see how it has spread.

A good many of us, sir, were born in places in this country where there were no clubs, no taverns, where it was almost impossible to get a drink if you wanted it. Now that in itself was wrong, I admit, but when I see the tremendous increase of places set up for the sale of alcoholic beverages in this country I am alarmed for what it may do for us. I am of the opinion that a good many Newfoundlanders — I won't say this — You will remember, sir, and we all remember, I hope, and I hope the honourable member for Labrador, there seems to be a law that no alcoholic liquors, though he seems to be grinning.

DR. ROWE: To a point of order. Mr. Speaker: Is an honourable member in this House allowed to smile or grin. I would like a ruling on that, Mr. Speaker.

MR. SPEAKER: When an honourable member rises to a point of order the speaking member will be seated. What is the point of order?

DR. ROWE: The point of order, sir, is this: Is not an honourable member of this House allowed to smile or grin or grimace without having the intervention of the House and the attention of any visitors here drawn to the fact? Or, to put it another way, is that to be considered as a reflection. I happened not to be referring to anything the honourable member was saying.

MR. SPEAKER: I remember quite clearly the context of the honourable members' speech and his use of the word "grinning", therefore the point is in order. The honourable member has no right to make gratuitous reference to any other member who might be smiling, "grinning" or in any other way contorting his face. Resume your speech.

MR. HOLLETT: If I have no right to refer to it I shall not do it. If I get many more interruptions I shall have to go into the next day.

MR. SPEAKER: The honourable member created that point himself.

MR. HOLLETT: I must say in this particular instance I agree, that perhaps I have.

MR. SPEAKER: I do think the House is wasting time on a matter of the utmost triviality. In fact it is beginning to appear to the Chair as utterly ridiculous. Will the honourable member continue his speech?

MR. HOLLETT: The waste of time, if I may comment, Mr. Speaker, originated on the other side of the House.

Yes, we have the names of all the taverns and we have reason to believe certain members in this House have interests in these taverns and clubs. We have not only reason to believe, sir, but we know it to be a fact, and I bring it to the House's attention that it is not correct, it is not right, that any member of this House should have any monetary interest in the sale of alcoholic liquor, causing so much devastation to the lives of our children and parents, if you like, or the whole of the country. It is not correct that members in this House should have any interest in it whatsoever.

MR. SMALLWOOD: If the honourable gentleman will allow me, I ask the honourable gentleman again to state—apart from the fact that most of us on this side of the House are members of the well known political club known as the "Laurier" Club—I ask the honourable member again, will he say that he thinks that members of the government, not members of the House of Assembly, but members of the House of Assembly who are also members of the government are shareholders in liquor establishments other than the "Laurier" Club, which happens as everyone knows, to have a license. Will the honourable member say that—man fashion—because I have no interest, never did and never will, and I am the Head of the Government. Stop skimming it, going around the edge of it.

MR. HOLLETT: I don't know why the honourable the premier should make a speech or demand that members of the opposite side should be named. I know the names, and I may be tempted to do so. Perhaps the honourable leader of the House thinks that by challenging me I may refuse to do it. If I do it, Mr. Speaker, I will tell something which will cause too much discomfort to too many people. I have the names of all the clubs here and of others that were here last year. And there is no reason why I should not read the lot of them. I could, there is no reason why I should not read the lot of them. I could read some which would probably make some of the members on the opposite side wonder if perhaps they did not have some little monetary interest in these. I am only going to refer to one particular one recently opened, Sir, in our own district, I refer to the Old Mill Properties. Now, Sir, opened a short time ago over and above the request of seven or eight hundred people, I am given to understand, who petitioned through the clergymen in St. John's West, the Board of Liquor Control of the government, because when you petition the Board of Liquor Control it comes under a department of the government; petition them, Sir, not to allow any Club, tavern or place for selling alcoholic liquor to be opened there. I submit, Sir, there is something in this Act, which would indicate that when a sufficient number of electors in any area petitioned not to have this thing opened then it is not supposed to be opened. Some eight hundred people, Sir, I understand, asked that this be not opened. Here we are on page 1199, section 124. (1) If a petition is presented to the Lieutenant-Governor in Council signed by not less than one-third of the electors resident in any settlement or in any area containing two or more settlements in one electoral district (hereinafter in this section called an “area”) requesting that a vote be taken in the area praying that alcoholic liquor be permitted to be sold or be prohibited from being sold in any store or premises licensed under this Act in the area the following provisions shall have effect:

(a) The Lieutenant-Governor in Council may, after first being satisfied that the persons whose names are signed to the petition or a sufficient number of them are electors, by proclamation order a plebiscite to be held in the area;

If the majority of the valid votes cast in any plebiscite is against the sale of alcoholic liquor in that area, the Board shall

(I) close any store conducted in the area;
(II) cancel licenses for the sale of alcoholic liquor at premises in the area; and
(III) not issue licenses for the sale of alcoholic liquor in respect of premises situated in the area.

It goes on to point out what shall be done by the Lieutenant-Governor in Council. Then the Government was completely lacking in its duty when it refused to listen to the petition of some seven or eight hundred voters in St. John’s West. When my colleague here, Mr. Browne—

MR. SPEAKER: Order. That makes four times this afternoon that honourable members have referred to surnames of members. There is no “Mr. Browne” in this House.

MR. HOLLETT: I beg your pardon, sir, the honourable member for St. John’s West. I think I was referred to as Mr. Hollett.

MR. SPEAKER: Exactly. And the honourable member referred to a member on the other side by his surname.

MR. HOLLETT: I think I stated that in my opinion the government and the department concerned did not do their duty when they did not take the proper cognizance of the petition which had been presented to them, and which I understand, was presented to them long before the license to sell alcoholic liquor was granted. Mr. Speaker, the Honourable Premier can challenge me all he likes but I am setting this up, Sir, as a principle, that we ought all to observe, that no man who comes here to this House to assist in making laws and rules and regulations for anything, particularly alcoholic liquor has any right whatsoever to dabble in profits therefrom.

MR. SMALLWOOD: To a point of order, Mr. Speaker. Has not Your Honour already ruled on that point, when Your Honour said it was not the business of the House how a member of the House makes his living and invests his money? Now the honourable leader of the Opposition is promulgating an entirely different view from Your Honour's, who ruled on it.

MR. SPEAKER: I must say, a good deal of this continued oblique reference seems to be an attempt to bring the Chair into contempt and to embarrass it. I thought I made it clear, with my limited knowledge of Her Majesty's English, that I am not concerned with who sells alcoholic liquors or who drinks them. I have not the slightest interest in it. But, as I will not permit a question in the House to list who is selling groceries or who is peddling safety-pins, neither will I allow improper questions as to who is doing this or that with alcoholic liquors. The main reason is that this information is accessible to any member of the public on the payment of twenty-five cents at the office of the Registrar of Companies. Further if any honourable member has reason to think some law of the Province has been broken by an honourable member and an infringement of the Act created thereby, this is not the place to charge it. The courts of the land are set up and have ample authority to deal with it. This is not a court. No honourable member may be impeached nor brought into contempt nor charged with actions in this House other than for actions with which the courts are not competent to deal.

I cannot permit remarks to be made containing innuendo nor improper information to be ferreted out in a circuitous manner. The honourable member is within his rights to denounce the sale of alcoholic liquors but not to make the suggestion that any member of the House is breaking the law of the land. We are not concerned with who sells liquor or who drinks it, any more than we are with who sells or eats onions. We are only concerned with principles. The honourable member may deplore what he believes to be breaches of this Act or any Act, but must not impute or insinuate that any member of this House is so infringing the Law of the Province.

The honourable member may resume his speech.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, I do deplore that any member of this House whether on the Government side or on the Opposition side is making a profit out of the sale of men's and women's souls in this country. I do deplore it if they are doing it, and if there is any member in this House, Mr. Speaker, who is doing it, he knows it.

MR. SMALLWOOD: To a point of order. The honourable gentleman is now quite boldly defying Your Honour.

MR. SPEAKER: I was about to call attention to that myself. There again is the innuendo to which I just referred—"If any honourable member of this House is doing that." The fact is it is not innuendo but insinuation. One must read from that—that honourable members are. Therefore the remark is not in order. The honourable member might just as well say "if certain members are committing petty larceny" with the inference that he has information to the effect that some honourable members are doing such things. You will refrain from any innuendo. So continue the speech.

MR. HOLLETT: In that case Mr. Speaker, I have said sufficient. I have said sufficient. I do deplore the fact that the petition presented by more than a third of the electors in an area as described in the Act was ignored by this Government. The prayer of that petition was that no alcoholic liquors be sold in that particular area. That petition was presented long before the permit to sell was granted. The Act lays down that where a petition of that nature is presented then the Lieutenant Governor in Council shall do this and that to procure the decision of the voters in that particular area. That was not done, Sir, and I deplore it very much, and I want to know why. I think I am entitled, Sir, to ask that in this House. Why?

I take it the people who presented that petition are regular authorized voters, they have rights, and their demand was: "Don't you put a beer parlor or club, as the case might be, in that area and give them a license." The law will back them up, Sir, but the law has been flouted. On behalf of the voters who put me here, I am entitled to raise the point, surely I am entitled, Sir, to give a few more facts that may be incidental, I hope, than I have given this afternoon.

I reserve the right to prove my case and I shall keep on; and I would admonish every man in this House, whether on the Government side or on this side; if you are coming here to make rules or laws about alcoholic liquor, you better wash your hands of it.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

MR. DROVER: First of all, I wish to join with other honourable members of this House in their expressions of loyalty to Her Majesty the Queen; and I wish also to congratulate the mover and seconder of the motion that a Committee be appointed to draft the Address in Reply.

I think it is a pleasure to see the junior member for St. John's West as a member of this House and I believe his stay here will be an asset to democratic form of government.

I am not going to keep this House very long. I think we have listened to quite a few speeches and everybody is getting tired. There are a few things I would like to mention in connection with the Speech from the Throne. One, fisheries; (2) forests.

I believe the Report brought into this House of the findings of Sir Albert Walsh and his Committee, was the finest piece of investigation conducted since our Government took office in 1949.

The people in the district which I represent are mostly fishermen. As a matter of fact, we have more fishermen in White Bay than in any other district in the Province. Apart from logging, that is their only means of livelihood. Some people will criticize the Government and say we have been too long in the development of the fisheries. I do not think that is so. I do not think any Government could jump into the development of the industry without first giving it careful thought and consideration.

In 1949 we asked that in LaScie a cold storage plant be built in order to give the people there continuous fishing up until late in the year and also to bring the people together in centralization. It was turned down and I was disappointed. But today we find that, after careful planning, we are to have a modern fish plant in that area and I believe it will be the means of bringing hundreds of families from isolated places and will improve their lot.
St. Anthony is an area which this Government has helped considerably, and I believe if a few roads were extended in the North and South to St. Anthony, it would save a lot of trouble because fishermen would be able to supply the plants at St. Anthony and it would bring these people together. I hope this Government will take that into consideration when they make plans for development in that area.

There is a stretch of territory in White Bay to which very little attention has been given since this Government took office; not that they would not do it or cannot do it—they will do it, but it takes time. It consists of 220 miles of coastline and the people are scattered in sixty settlements. The land there is suitable for agriculture. They have forests, it is true; but it is mostly taken up by private companies and it is impossible to build roads. The only hope is for the Government to develop it and bring the people together; then I believe the problem of central White Bay will be solved.

Speaking of forests, I would like to bring to the attention of the House the three mile limit of White Bay. The Government is aware that there is very little, if any, of the three mile limit left in White Bay. Past Governments or former Governments have either given it away, sold it or leased it to individuals or Companies. The last remaining stretch was leased in 1958—a year ago—it was given to Bowater's or leased to Bowater's by the International Grenfell Association. If I understand it correctly (and I would like the Ministers concerned to take notice) I believe the stretch of territory which went over to Bowater's a year ago was done surreptitiously. I am blaming the Government just as much as myself. I presented a Petition to the department concerned and asked that it be taken over. The original Petition was underhandedly done and eventually a Petition will come to the House and ask that the land come back to the people. It is the little saw mill owners who are hardest hit. The same thing applies on the South and Southeast part of the Bay.

The ticklish problem of White Bay is Health—hospital facilities. It is true we have one of the finest hospitals in Newfoundland at St. Anthony, on the Northern tip of the great Northern Peninsula. They have a fine staff and Doctors, and they have to care for not only White Bay, but also St. Barbe and Labrador as well. It is true that within the past four or five years some $830,000 was granted by this Government and the Federal Government towards the Grenfell Association. Some people will say that White Bay is receiving quite a sum of money. That is not so. That $830,000 must go for the care of St. Barbe and also Labrador, and I believe that they have a couple more Nursing Stations in the Quebec Province which is also operated by the Grenfell Mission. South of Harbour Deep for about 150 miles, there is one Doctor, and a Doctor stationed at Baie Verte. Apart from that there is not a Nurse or Doctor from LaScie near Cape St. John to Englee and Roddickton. I believe this House will realize the predicament in which the people find themselves. We have not too many roads; communication is by sea, and it is difficult especially during winter time for people to get their sick to St. Anthony hospital. Corner Brook, too, is out of the way and Twillingate is impossible. I do not know how to get around it to get better medical services for White Bay. I know the Government cannot do everything. I realize they have not got the money and the cost would be enormous. One thing I would like to ask is this: Those who do not know the district of White Bay, I would like for them to get a map and compare the Northern Peninsula, including St. Barbe; compare that with the Burin Peninsula. Our coastline is from Fortune Bay to Port aux Basques. On the Burin Peninsula what do we find? There is a hospital at Burin. The Americans are building one at St. Lawrence. (We cannot blame the people of White Bay if we had no wreck). They also have a couple of Nursing Stations. It is only a little strip of land. They have more people, it is true and they have roads. Up to a point, they have transportation by boat summer and winter alike. They have two or three hospital boats on that coast.

I am not asking for medical services for the district I represent for myself; I do not want praise or honour. The people of that district are doing their part and I hope the Government will realize that. I ask for very little and I believe this Government will reconsider their stand with regard to the people of the Northern Newfoundland and perhaps give us a Nursing Station or Cottage Hospital sooner than we expect.

There is one thing I want the Leader of the Opposition to know and that is that I am not affiliated with any of the beer taverns and neither do I derive any income from them.

Speaking of Industrial Development, I will say what I said in this House when I sat here as an Independent Member three years ago—it is better to try and fail than not to try at all. Supposing some of the industries will fail, it is far better for us to prove to the country that economically it is impossible to make it pay. If we went back without trying, they would only shout out "you did not try the programme." Therefore, I believe there is much credit due the Government for their effort in trying to make our Province better and economically sound; and I believe the Honourable the Premier deserves the backing and support of all the members of this party.

DR. POTTLE: I move the adjournment of the debate.

MR. SPEAKER: No. 10 "An Act Further to Amend the Exploits Valley (Closing Hours) Shop Act."

Read first time. Moved and seconded that it be read a second time tomorrow.

Carried.

11. "An Act to Amend the Local Area Planning Act."

Read first time. Moved and seconded that it be read a second time tomorrow.

Carried.

HON. L. R. CURTIS (Attorney General): I beg to move the second reading of this Bill. As I explained to the House when this matter was last before us, this is a Bill which provides for the imposition of a tax on Corporations. It is a tax which this Government does not collect, but rather it is a tax, the collection of which has been dedicated to Ottawa under the Tax Rental Agreement. Consequently, we are not particularly interested as Legislators in the details because the effect of the amendment is simply to facilitate those who pay the tax, by making our tax similar in all respects with the Federal Tax, so the taxpayer will have to file only one Return based on particulars which are identical with particulars with which he has to file other returns.

This really is an Amendment just to make our Income Tax Act agree in all respects with the Federal Tax Act and so facilitate the taxpayer in filling out Returns for the Assessor. The Bill consists of seven sections and they are not very important, but I will run through them for the sake of those members of the House who may be particularly interested. We are all interested in a way, but a few members are actually taxpayers under this category.

"Amounts received by the Corporation in the year as premiums paid by a Corporation on the redemption before April 30, 1953 of any of its shares."

If shares have become devalued by reason of the fact that the dividend is reduced, the Company need not pay income tax on that amount. Suppose the amount is $10, and $11 is paid; that extra dollar represented the premium accrued. When the dollar is collected, it is repayment of $11. It is not income. It is an advantage in favour of the taxpayer.

Amendment to Clause 3 is a minor one.

The words on the 7th line "officer or director becomes eligible to retire or retires from the employment or office, an amount paid by the corporation in the year or within sixty days from the end of the year pursuant thereto as the lump sum in respect of an employee, officer or director who so became eligible to retire or retired in the year (except to the extent that it is deductible under paragraph (f))." The original Law read without these words. The effect of this Amendment is to provide for the circumstances where the employer is required by contract to make provision for superannuation on the date the employee became eligible to retire.

Clause 4. A new section 18A is added.

"Where, by virtue of an assignment or other transfer of a bond, debenture or similar security (other than an income bond or an income debenture), the transferee has become entitled to interest in respect of a period commencing before the time of transfer and ending after that time that is not payable after the time of transfer, an amount equal to that proportion of the interest that the number of days in the portion of the period that preceded the day of transfer is of the number of days in the whole period."

I think in explaining Clause 2, I got mixed up with Clause 4. I am not particularly well versed in the Income Tax Act.

Clause 4 is very clear and is in favour of the taxpayer.

Clause 5. "Where, by a decision of the Minister of Finance under Section 40 or by a decision of a judge of the Supreme Court it is finally determined that the tax payable by a corporation for a taxation year under this Act is less than the amount assessed by the assessment under Section 32 to which the objection was made or from which the appeal was taken and the decision makes it appear that there has been an overpayment for the taxation year, the interest payable under subsection (3) on that overpayment shall be computed at 6 per centum instead of at 2 per centum."

That is instead of the 2% as formerly.

Section 6, sub-section (5) is added. This section is applicable to 1952 taxation year.

Section 7. Sub-section (1) of Section 58 is repealed and another substituted therefor.

These are unimportant amendments, but they bring it into conformity with the Federal legislation.

I have pleasure in moving that it be read a second time.

MR. BROWNE: I have only one observation to make. I think the members will agree that these amendments are not easy to follow. The member has to get the Act and the other amendments, and they are numerous, in connection with income tax—there have been scores of amendments brought in; it is a highly technical subject.

I noticed recently that the Board of Trade are proposing to the government that a Committee be appointed having thereon representatives from those affected by legislation, especially trade and commerce. It is a pity there is not a Committee from Trade and Commerce to which representations might suitably and profitably be made. In other places they have a Committee which deals with law amendments and I think it would be advisable if we would consider having a Committee of that kind to deal with matters like this. We ought to have a Committee to consider Bills of this kind so that those outside who are affected might make proper representation.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I have only this to say, in reply to my honourable friend: that while we may not see the necessity to set up a permanent Committee of the type he suggests, I see no reason in the world in any given issue, why a select Committee of the House would not be set up to deal with that one issue. We have done that. We have done it since Confederation. We have done it on a number of occasions. I know it was done in connection with some private Bills; and there might have been public Bills too. Certainly there is nothing to prevent the setting up of a Committee. I do not know if it is important enough; it is only to enable the government of Canada to do certain things.

At any time in the future when legislation comes up that is of special interest to the public, it could be set up.

MR. HOLLETT: What would happen if we did not pass the Bill? I think we are forced to pass it.

MR. HIGGINS: I think that is beyond the realm of possibility.

MR. SPEAKER: The question will be answered, no doubt, in Committee of the Whole.

Moved and seconded that the Bill be read a second time. Carried.

Committee of the Whole tomorrow.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I move that the standing orders be deferred. Carried.
MR. SMALLWOOD: I move that the House at its rising do adjourn until tomorrow, Tuesday, at three of the clock. Carried.

MR. KEOUGH: Tabled reply to Question No. 26 on the Order Paper of March 31st., asked by the honourable member for St. John’s West (Mr. Hollett).

Question (1): Total number of Newfoundland long-liners and Danish seiners operating in Newfoundland waters during the year 1953.

Answer: Question incorrectly directed.

Question (2): The total number of men employed fishing on these boats.

Answer: Same as (1).

Question (3): The total quantity of fish caught by these vessels and the total landed value of same.

Answer: Same as (1) and (2).

Question (4): How many such vessels were operated under Government sponsorship? Give names of skippers of said vessels, the number of the crew and the ports from which each such vessel operated, together with total quantities of fish caught by each boat and value of fish caught by each boat. Give also the total expenditure by the Government or any of its Departments upon each such boat, together with amounts spent in wages for each boat’s skipper and crew, during the calendar year 1953. Give tonnage of each such boat.

Answer: The question improperly asked.

The Government have facilitated the construction, conversion and equipping of a number of vessels for long-lining and Danish seining operations through the Fisheries Loan Board and under the policy of demonstrating in commercial practice the use of new types of fishing gear, equipment and navigation instruments and fish detecting apparatus and to afford an opportunity for Newfoundland skippers and crew members gaining experience in the use of the gear and equipment in commercial practice. This is public knowledge as is the activity of the Government of Canada in respect of long-lining operations carried out during the past two years. It is not in the public interest that the details sought in Question 4 pertaining to demonstration and training be made public. Such information could be construed as the actual cost of such vessels in full scale commercial fishing operations which would convey an entirely wrong impression in respect of the practicability of commercial operations with such vessels and methods of fishing.

Question (5): Is it the intention of the Government to continue with its experimental fishing from such boats in future?

Answer: The Government of Newfoundland is not operating any vessels in experimental fishing.

Question (As amended by Mr. Speaker): What is the correct tonnage of such fishing boats, the correct crew number; and what is the approximate cost of construction of such a boat, and total cost including engines when boat is ready for sea?

Answer: There is no such thing as a correct tonnage of a vessel for use in long-lining or Danish seining, the tonnage and number of crew and the cost of construction and engine and equipment depend upon a wide range of technical and practical considerations and, most important is the acceptance by fishermen-skippers of a vessel which they believe will best serve their needs and in which they have confidence.

MR. SPEAKER: Before taking up the Orders of the Day, yesterday, Honourable the Premier complained that a statement of his made in this House had been misquoted or misrepresented in the Press. Whereupon, a transcription of the Hansard containing those remarks was asked for and ordered for today. Is it the wish of the House to hear the transcription?

Read by Mr. Clerk:

"(Quote) Friday, April 2, 1954.

MR. HOLLETT: How can they live, if they are not given a chance? The Government is doing nothing. All they said is “We are going to kick NAFEL’s teeth in.” I have heard the song that “it is no use knocking on wood,” neither is it any use kicking in teeth. Oh yes, they gave the fishermen $1.50 last Fall; without any investigation, they paid out the $1.50. They forced the Federal Government to do it. And there is one thing for which I congratulate the Premier. He expected, and rightly so, that the Federal Government would come across with a floor price or some implementation of the fishery price. He went to Ottawa. They told him to go home. I will say this for the Premier; and I hope he will remember it: He came home, he dipped down—not into the chest—that was empty. He may have had to go to the bank; but anyway he paid the $1.50. And the Federal Government got so ashamed of themselves, they said “we will pay you back one cent a pound—but, do not do it any more. And we are going to see that you do not do it any more. We are going to hand it over to Mr. Howe.” He forced the Federal Government to come across.

MR. SMALLWOOD: May I say that the honourable gentleman is completely wrong? I do not deserve his congratulations. Before the Government paid the $1.50. I telephoned the Government at Ottawa, from St. John's. What we did was done with their knowledge beforehand; with the understanding that if they made a deficiency payment, it would come back to the Treasury of Newfoundland. So, the credit for that is not really mine.

MR. HOLLETT: The modesty of the Premier is unexcelled at times. If I erred, the blame is the Premier's. He never told the public that before. He let the people think it was all his doing. I was naive enough to give him credit for it.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Does the honourable gentleman not realize that in highly delicate matters of this sort, one has to do what one does and keep one's mouth shut? Because of the situation in the markets, the Government of Canada could not, under any conditions, be involved in suspicion that they were subsidizing fish, some of which might enter the United States.

The honourable gentleman can have all the fun he likes here now; but one must do what one does and keep one's mouth shut in delicate matters of this sort.

(Unquote)."

MR. SMALLWOOD: I have only one comment to offer on that—and that is that it supports completely the complaint I made yesterday.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the day—Adjourned Debate on the Address in Reply.

Orders of the Day

DR. POTTLE: In rising to take part in this debate, my first duty is to offer, along with other honourable members, my congratulations to the mover and seconder of the Motion. They have performed their duties with dignity and earnestness.

I reaffirm my loyalty to Her Majesty, the Queen, and wish Her continued health and happiness and a prosperous reign.

Furthermore, I should like to extend my compliments and welcome, along with other honourable members, to the entry into this House of the honourable and learned member for St. John's West. While in his first speech, in my humble opinion, he did not live up to the expectations we had of this honourable gentleman, nevertheless, I feel quite sure that in his coming, the House has acquired a member who will be attentive to his duty, and the Leader of the Opposition, a most solicitous solicitor.

Since this House closed, we have been very glad to know that the Prime Minister of Canada has made a remarkable journey around the world, not, I might say, as a Politician but rather as a Canadian Statesman and, in fact, a World Statesman. Having visited some of the places which he himself has visited, I, in my humble way, am gratified that he has been able to represent Canada in these parts of the world. Canada, as the present Governor-General has pointed out, is one of the few nations of the earth which can emphasize her nationality without intimidating or giving offence to other nations; and I am quite sure that the Prime Minister's visits in those foreign parts will help in some way—some substantial way—to align Canada with all the forces of the world which are concerned with peace—that peace which although at present is elusive—which will inherit the earth, if not to­ row, then the day after tomorrow.

We cannot debate this motion before the House without making some reference to Canada and its help and influence on this land of ours because of the fact that Union with Canada has changed the course of our history.
I was therefore sorry when a few evenings ago I listened to a speaker over a radio station speak on "Five Years of Confederation in Newfoundland." This gentleman took occasion to make his speech from beginning to end a Political address, in which he made it quite plain that he was against Confederation even more now than he had been from the beginning.
Those who argue thus and believe we should have gone our own way were not altogether aware, as indeed not one per cent were aware at that time in Newfoundland, how near we were to the brink of collapse in 1949 even with forty million dollars in the till.

At the time of Confederation there were nearly eight thousand families on relief; the figures from the Unemployment Assistance, which was a measure extended to Newfoundland in 1949 as soon as we became a Province, the number of people applying for Unemployment Assistance was 42,000. The number who actually claimed receipt of this assistance was 28,000 and the cost in that year 1949-50 to the Canadian Treasury was $3,212,000; along with the four million dollars which we as a Government spent as a gallant gesture in 1949 for relief. I say now, Sir, that if it were not for the Social Services which were applied to Newfoundland in 1949 immediately after Confederation, we might have been prostrated today or close to prostration, five years after Confederation. And yet this honourable gentleman as he continued the doleful dirge and unloaded concentrated bilge upon the air waves, intimated we could have taken family allowances in our stride—eleven and a half million dollars last year—fifty­ three millions paid out since Confederation—we could have taken that in our stride, said Mr. J. G. Higgins, Q.C. We could have taken the Old Age Security in our stride, costing many millions more. I refer again to this Unemployment Assistance because most of the people who qualiied for Unemployment Assistance would have had to get relief if they had not received that assistance—the vast portion of those would today be receiving relief, that viper that can suck the blood from any economy and not the last of which would be the economy of Newfoundland. And so on this dyspeptic gentleman continued until he had discharged the acidic content of his system on an unsuspecting people. I repeat that if it were not for the advantages of Confederation we receive now, a very serious situation would presently exist as far as the position of our economy and the destiny of this land is concerned.

Now, the non-legal member for St.
John's East takes up the stand and by-passes the speech by being critical of Confederation in general and of the railway. It is rather ironical that the member of the Opposition should have kept up complaining about that, because if there is one public service, one facility which seems to justify Confederation, it is the railway. It in itself is almost sufficient justification for our being a Province of Canada. Go up to the Railway Station and take a look around you at eleven o'clock in the morning or four o'clock in the evening on any week-day and see the numbers of cars which are parked there. They are the cars of the working classes—thank God for that. Nobody will deny them what is their proper due; but the situation might have been mighty different but for Confederation. The Gander; the marine works; the social services—the most civilizing influence tending to a much more equitable distribution of income than was ever distributed before. We must not, however, find ourselves leaning upon Canada as upon a crutch. As I see it, there is a failure on the part of the Opposition to distinguish between the factors within Newfoundland's control and those without, and it is only the first we should be criticized for. The fact that we are a Province of Canada involves us in Canada.

I come now, Sir, to raise certain specific points, in answer to other specific points raised earlier by the Opposition. I refer in the first place to the "Ghost Speech" by the honourable and learned member for St. John's West. This Honourable House will recall the tragedy of "Hamlet" wherein the skulls are kicked about, and Hamlet picks up one he recognizes and says: "Alas! Poor Yorick. I knew him, Horatio." Then in symbolic fashion, Mr. Speaker, the learned member for St. John's West holds these skulls symbolically above us all: Alas! Poor Icelandic Trawlers; Alas! Poor railway of the narrow gauge; Alas! Poor Judges and their salaries; Alas! Poor Fishermen's Federation, that child of my brain which like Lycidas died ere his prime; Alas! Poor Socialistic Premier—this thing has a remarkable degree of life in it. We are still handling skulls, Sir, Alas! Poor Sennewald, the eyeglasses still intact; Alas! Poor Industries; Alas! Poor cost of living; Alas! Poor freight rates; Alas! Poor Government—the numbskull.

And having judged, stamped and catalogued all the sundry skulls, flings them all in our direction and, his "Ghost Speech" nearly over, he has only one thing to say, but, Sir, this other thing that the learned gentleman has to say, in my view, condemns the whole speech because, having criticized the Government of producing all these skulls, he then goes on to say: "Now we have produced the fisheries report, and their whole programme of fishery development is now brought before us," he says; "as a red herring." To me, Sir, and I want to make it clear, it is my feeling that this was a mischievous and irresponsible statement. For the fishery plan as outlined in the report and as indicated in the Speech from the Throne, for it to have been a red herring is to visualize that away back in 1951, over three years ago, the Government of Newfoundland and the Government of Canada conspired to concoct something which, one of these days, when it was most convenient to us—

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order: The honourable member is imputing motives to me never expressed. I don't think he is entitled to figure out in that fashion what I said, and I think it was plain to the honourable member. I said "We are now told we are going to concentrate on the fisheries, fish, fish, fish, that is the reason why it was a red herring, to cover all the misdeeds of the past."

MR. SPEAKER: I think the honourable member might agree an inference may be drawn, but I must say it ought not to be inferred here that the considered remarks of the member who spoke first in the debate were "mischievous."

MR. SPEAKER: I do not think the honourable member should have drawn that inference.

DR. POTTLE: "To me it seemed," I said, Sir.

MR. SPEAKER: I do not think the honourable member should have drawn that inference.

DR. POTTLE: Thank you, Sir.

The fact is, Mr. Speaker, that a plan which now, if it comes into being, in the fisheries development report and which was fore-shadowed in the Speech from the Throne, was developed long, long ago, and we could not have done any more than we had done on this particular point while the committee's report was in the making, else it would have prejudiced all the findings of the committee before the committee had time to work. So, Sir, it seemed to me that the "Big Gun" of the Opposition, while it might have sounded like good firing from their side, backfired as far as we are concerned, and I would say, backfired as far as the feelings and attitude of the fishermen of Newfoundland are concerned.

Now, I come to the honourable member for St. John's East, the honourable and learned member—He likewise took an abject look at the fisheries and with forensic inexactitude he says: "They are not prepared to launch out into the deep." What the honourable and learned member means, I have not the faintest idea. If this is not launching out into the deep, Sir, I do not know what is. There was probably never a plan possessed of such magnitude worked out so systematically as this plan for the fisheries of Newfoundland. Yet he says we are not prepared to launch out into the deep. Now, I can quite understand why the members on the opposite side would not launch out into the deep, because they might, any one of them, become seasick in Murray's Pond or Quidi Vidi Lake. There is not any one of them perhaps who could distinguish a sinker from a sunker. Yet, the member for St. John's East says the Government are now taking a new interest in the fisheries. We have been in the fisheries and in it pretty deep since 1949. Since then over twenty Newfoundland firms have been assisted in one way or another to carry on the fishing industry. In actual cash loans for buying vessels we have committed out of the Treasury seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars, and for actual cash guarantees for buying vessels one and three-quarter million dollars; for actual cash loans for the construction of fish plants nearly two million dollars, and actual guarantees for the construction of fish plants.
again nearly two million dollars; a grand total of approximately six and one half million dollars for fisheries, for Newfoundland firms to carry on the fisheries since 1949. In addition, as my honourable colleague representing Trinity North reminded us, this is all in addition to cash assistance to the fishermen, all in addition to the marine works on an increasing scale, which though carried out by the Government of Canada in the main has been initiated by the Province of Newfoundland. Yet the Leader of the Opposition says very little has been done by this Government for the fisheries of Newfoundland.

This House will know, Sir, that for years now the fishermen of the North East Coast have been the subject of concern. I have pleaded that the Bay de Verde Area be included in any consideration of the rehabilitation of the North East Coast. I am delighted to know, Sir, that the Bay de Verde Area has, in fact, been included in the overall Fisheries Development Committee’s Report and planning, and that it will share in the major developments that will take place as a result of the implementation of that plan, and that, if things go as we expect and hope they will, the work concerning the development of the fisheries, in keeping with that report, will go ahead in Bay de Verde Area this summer.

In that area of Bay de Verde itself, there are 172 families, and 150 of these are directly getting their livelihood from the fisheries. It is easy to make comparisons, but I doubt whether there is anything in all Can­ da quite so typical—there is certainly nothing in Newfoundland quite so typical of the fishing industry—as there is inside the breakwater of Bay de Verde. These Bay de Verde people, along with other fishermen of Newfoundland, are amongst the backbone of this little Island, and they are amongst the people of whom we like to think when we say “God Guard Thee Newfoundland.” I hope that the people of Bay de Verde will support in every way the carrying into effect of any scheme that might be initiated there on behalf of the fisheries. I shall say this, Sir: Although this Government foreshadows the expenditure of many, many millions of dollars, and although the Government of Canada foreshadows the expenditure of many millions more, yet, great and worthy as these plans are, fundamentally necessary as these plans are for the people and for our fishing people, yet they can be frustrated, they can be hampered, they can be soured if our people do not give all these plans all the support they can. That support will be necessary in many, many ways, very practical ways, some of them physical, economic and social ways. It may be a matter of removing their fences, or some interference with property, the matter of building up local organizations through which the Government can function and develop any organization and plan. There is the matter of moving from one place to another in order to enable these large-scale plans to come into effect.
All these are very human considerations and all within the power of the people. None of these, no matter how fundamental they are, Sir, none of these is so important or should bulk so large as but what they ought to be made possible in order that this massive venture might have some real, ultimate hope of success.

I come now, Sir, to the non-legal member for St. John’s East: he has discussed the industries at some length, to which remarks I know the Premier will reply. I have only one comment to make—

MR. M. M. HOLLETT (Leader of the Opposition): To a point of order, Mr. Speaker: May I interrupt the honourable gentleman to ask in what way the honourable member is a non-legal member of this House?

DR. POTTLE: I meant that as a technical phrase. I could not say unlearned, and I could not say illiterate, nor could I say the honourable and junior member which possibly is no more complimentary.

He referred to one other industry—I suppose he would call it a major industry, the liquor business. He did so last year and I then made a statement which did not get an appropriate headline. I too was in a way misquoted, but I said then: "In administering the Liquor Act, as in all other such matters, the Government tries to keep in touch with public opinion," I said this last year and I am repeating it now. So far the Government has reason to believe that by and large its liquor policy is upheld by the people. At least we know of no concerted opinion against the liquor policy. This Government, like any other Government, will keep its ears close to the ground, it will not willingly for very long run contrary to the great body of public opinion, and for reasons which the Opposition will appreciate. I only reaffirm what I said then, Sir: If the people want the liquor policy changed, as any other Government policy, they largely have the remedy in their own hands, whether permanent or better is another matter. But when the great majority of the people make clear to this Government, through the recognized channels, that they want a different liquor policy the Government will, as it is bound to do, take due notice of their wishes. The Government cannot be expected to lead the public in this matter but is more likely to follow the public in a matter of this kind.

Now, Sir, I wish to make one or two comments with regard to the speech of the Honourable Leader of the Opposition. The first point is that in all he said there was an underlying theme. It was a theme if not of dislikes of at least a really critical look at, those people whom he calls foreigners. As far as I know, the people whom he dubs as foreigners are as law-abiding and industrious as many of our people, probably most of our people. I think they have not added any disgrace since they came here, at least that is not the experience of the people of Carbonear. I don't think it is the experience of our school children. I think they have given us a far better lesson in this matter of integrating with our friends from across the water than the people of the Opposition. I have no brief for these people as against other people, I know that they are amongst the most industrious and law-abiding citizens of all Canada, and who knows, we may need them one of these days against our enemies. I hope that event never arises. The scars of my honourable friend's war experience are still burning deeply, and when he comes to discussing the industries and introducing the names of these German people he does not even give them the courtesy of pronouncing their names properly as I know he can.

MR. HOLLETT: I try it.

DR. POTTLE: The Honourable Leader of the Opposition knows as well as I do, Sir, that these people speak a language which is the language of Goethe and Beethoven, or Kant and Einstein, names to be reckoned with. He knows too that German literature and German thoughts are amongst the most precious of the Western World. He knows, for example, that the passage I am about to quote contains one of the crucial passages in "Faust" Part I.

"Werd'ich zum Augenblicke sagen
'Verweile doch, du bist so schön'
Dann magst du mich in Fesseln schlagen
Dann will ich gern zu Grunde gehen.

 Dann mag die Totenglocke schallen,
 Dann bist du dienes Dienstes frei, Die Uhr mag stehen, die Zeiger fallen,
 Es sei die Zeit fur mich vorbei."

Now, that is the language of Faust I have quoted, the language of these people who came amongst us, whose conscious thoughts, compare with Shakespeare's, yet they are "foreigners" who have come to take over Newfoundland.

Let me say to the Honourable Leader of the Opposition, through the Chair, Sir, that we have assisted Newfoundland industries too, on land and on sea, and not all of these have succeeded, but we have taken the intelligent gamble just the same. That is the first point I take. And they are unduly critical and unsympathetic toward people who have come to share destiny with us. I do say they are not reaching their greatest heights when condemning the "hope" speeches of this Government. I am sure, Sir, that he must appreciate that the foundation of the life which we live these days is as much hope as anything else, not only solid achievement but the faith that enables us to go on when we don't see clearly all the way ahead. When Lincoln spoke of democratic governments—"Government of the people by the people for the people" he was not speaking of an achievement that was either then or at any time since fully realized. He was speaking of a hope. Because it is a hope we should not spurn it for that reason alone. Is it not a hope that has inspired democratic life everywhere and has created institutions such as this House? I could cite from the sayings of a real Conservative leader to show how liberal he is—Churchill, who as far back as 1908 made a statement to the workers of Aberdeen which reflects his sound sense of social security of Britain which is one of the solid structures of civilized man today, which will not be changed fundamentally whatever Government there comes into power—it is part and parcel of the people; and Churchill away back in the dark days of 1908—when I say "dark" I mean by way of not having so much understanding about social security as we have today—in 1908 he was saying to the workers of Aberdeen—"Where there is no hope, believe me, there will be no thrift."

Mr. Speaker, how will you confront the fishermen of Bay de Verde without hope? I had some occasion to go over to the North shore of Conception Bay in 1949. I thought I knew that district well. I was born there, and of very ordinary people. I have known what it is to have my breakfast come out to me in a boat on an endless rope, because we were not able to get ashore. I have known something of the hard, comfortless existence of many fishermen, and yet I was not prepared for what I saw in 1949. I made it my business to see our older people par-particularly because they seemed to be the most desolate. I am sure the people of Lower Island Cove and Job's Cove and Daniel's Cove and Red Head Cove and all the other places around about would not mind, if they were here this afternoon listening to what I am saying; they can remember what even five years ago happened. Hope—If I had any hope, Sir, when I went down in that district I would not have gone at all, I would have had no justification unless I had gone with hope. When I turned over Saddle Hill I thought about my predecessors since 1855 going over Saddle Hill to represent Carbonear and Bay de Verde, and I wondered what hope in the world they had. I was well aware it was not anything I had of myself to give, but being part of Canada there was something now to hope for. I can see these old veterans, people with their short stubby, salty beards under the blankets shivering, the blankets shivering over them as they thought—"We must not take this $30 or $40 a month because if we do we will lose our picket fence, we will lose the trap out there in the barn loft." My wife and I went down there together because I thought she could get nearer and see things more clearly than I could. I can see now an old lady in Job's Cove looking over the fence weeping, not any tears of drama or of just sheer made-up drama, but the real thing, Sir—"I have owned this little cabbage garden you see here and my father and his before him for generations. Do you tell me I am going to have to give it up just for getting $30 a month?" They had been inured to despair for generations, Sir. That was the lot they knew and that is all they knew. And for anybody to come and say "Somebody cares—it is going to be different"—They looked in our faces and said, some with tears and some with a hard face, depending on their dispositions, "This is not for us." How could we face the people of Job's Cove without hope? Look at them now—All their problems are not solved by any means, but what has happened for them and for their children since 1949 is something the like of which has not happened on this side of the water in our age.

I think of the old gentleman in Grate's Cove looking at me one day in the meadow as he came ashore from the fishing boat, mowing his hay in the spare time between one haul and another and saying to me: "Sir, there is more to social security than dollars and cents," and took off his cap when he said it. But yet, Sir, the Honourable Leader of the Opposition criticized us for expressing hope. I don't want to be unduly critical, I want to see the business of this House done as capably and as businesslike, and at the same time as realistically, as any man, I believe, and yet I cannot forbear saying that the speeches of the Opposition Leaders since I have known them have not been messages of hope but of hopelessness, and I have sat in this House as consistently, I believe, Sir, as most members. The present Leader of the Opposition says, "All you say or the most you do over there is express hope." He says that to this Government when this Government can be marked not only by hope but by solid achievement based on its hope. This Government which is accused of expressing only hopes has spent more on teachers' salaries, more on school buildings and maintaining them, on public works, has done more for hospitals, has done incomparably more for social service generally, set up labour relations with labour people through Newfoundland such as have never been set up before, and in addition has done more for the fisheries, believe it or not, than any other Government in the same length of time and even not comparing the same length of time. These are solid achievements, I say, Sir, which are written into the history of this land, and ought not, I say, to be derided because we have expressed some hope.

I feel first of all it is proper to extend at the very beginning my compliments, my thanks to the Leader of the Opposition and to his colleague from St. John's West for making complimentary references to the Public Welfare in Newfoundland. I should like, just for a minute, to do some stocktaking ourselves, now, after five years of Confederation. I referred just now to what has been done for the older people; but I come back to them because they have been amongst the most neglected of our race. When we came into being in 1949, the Old Age Pension was then on the books (and you had to be 75 to qualify at all)—you then received $18.00 per quarter—or $6.00 a month. Two people, 75 and over, received $30.00 a quarter or $10.00 a month. During the days of Commission of Government, it had been less than that.

MR. BROWNE: You were one of the Commission.

DR. POTTLER: A widow could get her husband's allowance on his death, but she would have to be sixty-five to get it.

Now, I think Newfoundland knows fairly generally—certainly at first-hand, what has happened in the field of Public Welfare since 1949, and because I have had some little part to play in it, I shall be as modest as I can and associate myself mainly with my staff and the people in the field who ultimately are the people who make any Welfare system a success. And to them I wish to pay my tribute now as I have paid it before.

For the first time in the history of Newfoundland, all our people in need, wherever they are, are being given substantial assistance and that, in itself, is a remarkable achievement. But more than that, they have been enabled to get their assistance according to need and that assistance is the same for all persons everywhere in the same circumstances. That is to say, for a Public Welfare system to be successful, it needs to pass three tests:

It must cover the ground—everybody in need. People from Cartwright to Cappahayden, from King's Cove to Lark Harbour—all people coming within the test receive assistance and the assistance is equitable, it varies according to need and only according to need. And, it is consistent— it is the same for all persons everywhere in the same circumstances.

To be able to say that that is being done for the first time, not on any political grounds, on no other grounds but on sheer basis of need—that is remarkable.

During the past year I have had to represent Newfoundland at conferences called by the Government of Canada to consider the possibility of bringing a Disability Allowance to permanently disabled people over 21. We are now caring for these people in a kind of way, through Dependents' Allowances Act, and there are only three systems in Canada who are providing a comprehensive coverage for permanently disabled people. The allowance is not as much as we should like them to be—they are part and parcel of the whole Social Security system of Newfoundland. It is possible that legislation may be introduced into the House of Commons at this session to enable the Provinces to enter into an agreement ultimately with the Federal Government regarding them. I understand the Regulations which will be based on that legislation will be framed sometime this session, probably in June. We advised Parliament that our policy would be that we will look at the proposals as they come forward in the Legislature, see if we shall benefit financially if we enter into it or if we shall be better off with some welfare from our own people or if we shall get better service under contract with the Government than we are getting now—financial grants and welfare grants—and we can say now the Government is closely watching how this scheme might work out for Newfoundland and take the best steps accordingly. At the present time we have about an expenditure in benefits of five and a half million dollars. I think it is fair to say that that 5½ million dollars is being distributed at the same time more equitably, more comprehensively, more consistently, all three together, than any other 5½ million dollars spent in Newfoundland. It is all very well to talk in terms of billions of dollars, we can bandy the figures about as much as we like, there is more to it than dollars and cents. The success depends not only on the records kept, the amount in dollars expended, the number of staff you have in the field; it depends on the quality of service—whether we are in fact meeting the public in a friendly and understanding way. The people who do that by and large, along with our administrative men at headquarters, are our Welfare Officers in the field. I think now there is a high degree of morale among these Officers; but unless we give attention to human things first and not our own self-aggrandisement; not our own wishes, but the needs of the people, that happy situation will not last indefinitely. What we must say to any Public Welfare is that we put people first, not any other thing, but people; for welfare is always public welfare; and the State, in all these matters, can only do so much; it has to do so much because of the faulty beginnings of days ago or years ago when one could not meet the demands. They are not consistent. Something has to cover it across the board. And only the State can do that. That does not mean that the traditional springs of welfare should dry up. The Government provides the minimum—sometimes a bare minimum—but that should not prevent all social organizations of a charitable or social kind from going on doing all they have been doing and they may be expected to do more.

I think we have developed a system of public welfare in Newfoundland. I know it developed suddenly and probably the system meets the needs of all our people. It is being looked at carefully and sympathetically by the other Provinces of Canada and in areas far afield. I am glad to say the emphasis we have been giving to welfare, first, is self-help; and this will be the theme of the National Conference and International Conference on Public Welfare in June at Toronto.

But, there is one worm in the rosy apple. On the outside the fruit looks very attractive, but even half a million dollars in Unemployment Insurance, better Veterans' Allowances, Old Age Security, Family Allowances, all that would cost tens of millions of dollars. On the outside the apple looks rosy and most assuring, but there might be a worm at the heart of the apple, if we do not watch out. At any time the whole fabric could be wrecked if we had large-scale unemployment and consequent able-bodied relief, that viper that can suck the very life-blood out of any system of social welfare in Newfoundland. We have had two competent surveys of Public Welfare within the last few years and both have pointed out the vulnerability of Newfoundland in this matter of unemployment, because you see in Newfoundland we have a Law on our Statute Books which obligates us to meet their problem of relief of unemployed wherever and whenever it arises. In the other Provinces of Canada they can push it on to the Municipalities. We cannot push it on to the Municipalities in Newfoundland. We are unique; so when it comes to the question of the Royal Commission on the Terms of Union facing up to the Newfoundland needs, I hope we shall give every attention to the vulnerability of Newfoundland to unemployment. Back in 1949 the Federal Government thought it should accept in principle this responsibility and a separate scheme to turn our Provincial Budgets and our Municipal Budgets over to the Federal Government. After that year, with the full amount of prosperity, the Province did not need the Federal Government to back up the span, they revised the scheme. With us there is always the risk that if large-scale unemployment should come upon us, then Newfoundland will be the most sorely affected, and among these will be the fishermen who are among the most vulnerable of the lot.

The Leader of the Opposition asked for figures on relief and other matters. Today he has his full answer. He has the figures in abstract form. If he takes these figures and goes to the census figures and compares the three poorest districts with the three best districts, he will find a disparity of 30 or 40 between the two. That is to say, in the three districts I can mention, there were thirty or forty times as many on relief as in the best districts. The best districts are those where there are industries—continuous industries. The poorest districts are mostly always wholly fishing districts. That is the picture from year to year. How can we make these poorer districts more comparable to the others? Some will say "give unemployment insurance to the fishermen."

On March 16th last, Mr. Carter in the House of Commons asked the Minister of Labour whether the Government of Canada was considering unemployment insurance for the fishermen of Newfoundland and the answer was "yes we are." Unemployment Insurance for fishermen, even if it could be worked out; even if some plan was devised to bring these self-employed within the unemployment insurance scheme, even then the unemployment insurance would be a palliative. For there can be no treatment for a malignant disease such as the fishery business has in Newfoundland except by some such radical remedy as is here proposed and this question of the fisheries having a malignant disease is no figure of speech. Earlier in the session this afternoon I had certain figures distributed to the House and at leisure honourable members will be able to analyse these tables which have been prepared by my able Deputy in the Department, Mr. Ralph Andrews.

Table 1, which gives the information on the population of 65-69 age group as a percentage of the total population of each Province based on estimated population of the Province as at June 1st, 1952. This Table tells you what proportion there are in Newfoundland and other Provinces of people 65-69 as compared to the whole population. Apart from Quebec, there are less in the 65-69 group in Newfoundland than anywhere else in Canada. What happened? In that case, many in the 65-69 group are not here; they are not under the sod; they left long ago. Those who did stay, many of them were cut down by the ravages of disease, malnutrition and exposure. They are with us not in the flesh. But Newfoundland is down below the other Provinces except Quebec.

MR. HOLLETT: What about New Brunswick?

DR. POTTLE: It runs close. Newfoundland is the poorest.

Table 2. Percentage of Population 65-69 years of age receiving assistance. It tells us how many people out of 100 are getting assistance here. In Newfoundland 56 out of 100 are getting old age assistance. That is not a crime, but it means their income is way down as compared with Saskatchewan and those other socialized Provinces of Canada where the recipients are 14½%—Newfoundland is four times worse off than these and practically five times worse off than Ontario.

Table 3. Tells us the number of people (male) in Newfoundland and elsewhere permanently unable to work expressed as a percentage of all. Newfoundland tops the list. This table says that 5 out of every 100 male people in Newfoundland, 14 years of age and over are unable to work. Newfoundland tops the list.

Table 4. Gives some information with regard to the women adults unable to work. Again Newfoundland is worst off.

MR. BROWNE: Could I ask a question on that? In this country they are not allowed to work until they are 17. Is there not a rule where they must have passed their 16th year? Therefore your figures are not accurate on the last two tables.

DR. POTTLE: True some Provinces have the 18 age law and others the 16; but this gives us the “Permanently” unable to work—it has to do with incapacity.

MR. HOLLETT: May I ask a question? Could the honourable gentleman tell us if he has arrived at a conclusion as to why we have so many permanently disabled persons?

DR. POTTLE: These tables were prepared recently without our having had the time to go behind the scenes to find reasons. We are giving them to you as straight out of the census. We presume the same question would apply in getting them in Manitoba as in getting them in Newfoundland.

The Leader of the Opposition has raised a very good question. Tables 1 to 4, they represent to us part of what I shall call now “the unfinished business of public welfare in Newfoundland.”

MR. HOLLETT: After five years of Confederation?

DR. POTTLE: “Unfinished business of Public Welfare in Newfoundland.” The unfinished business represents a long agenda, but I shall content myself with describing the details of two or more towns in Newfoundland.

I think of one town which has always had a great struggle to survive and has been impaired by many setbacks in its long history. Today it is beset with labour troubles and any major industry presently there or that may be established there, may possibly be threatened because of these labour dislocations and unrests. The very grave danger from the point of view of Public Health—the very grave danger is that the demands of labour may become so pressing that although labour may now, today or tomorrow, achieve its ends and get higher wages, yet it may do so at the expense of starving the children of the next generation.

I am not taking sides, because there may be other factors in the situation which I have not covered. I am singling out one, in such a situation as this, there is a clarion demand for statesmanship among labour leaders to see to it that the welfare of the Newfoundland people is properly safeguarded. That is what I call part of the unfinished business of Public Welfare.

I think of another town—this one is one of the wealthiest and one of the largest. Last year the wage bill from the over-riding, the Central Company, the big company was $9,000,000.00. This year it will go beyond nine million dollars. But some of the living conditions in that town, especially for our young people are frightful. This town, I say, is one of the most prosperous in Newfoundland, so prosperous that although it contains eight or nine thousand people there are presently three families only on relief, yet the housing conditions are amongst the very worst in Canada. So far for sixty years—in fact I have not known the company to raise one finger to draw attention to those conditions. So far I have not known the company to involve itself in any public way in the social conditions which surround that company's operations in that prosperous town. So far the hundreds of miners have had to climb or crawl along on their bellies to scratch out rock from under the water. We have produced untold wealth, Sir, for Newfoundland in that area, and the living conditions of some of the people there are unspeakably appalling.

But I am glad to say there are more signs of improvement in these conditions there today than there have ever been in my rememberance, both from the company where I believe there are signs for the better, and from the people themselves as we have seen indicated lately. Things are on the move, and I believe we have seen the worst for that prosperous town.

My remarks in this respect, Sir, are designed to involve industry generally as having a moral responsibility for people; that people are not merely something out of which wealth must be squeezed, and then when they become 45 and have asthma, throw them out.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Socialism—Careful that is not liked over there—

DR. POTTE: I am involving industry, Sir, industry as having a moral responsibility for the people, and that is part of the unfinished business of Public Welfare.

So we go on—I met five or six welfare officers a few weeks ago. I asked them, because they belong to certain areas which are to some extent contiguous and their districts in some cases join one another, "How about your unemployment situation?" I was told: "We have not any in the whole area, no unemployment, no great amount of relief." And yet, if I say that social conditions are appalling in any place, there are no words to describe the social conditions in parts of one or more of these districts—I can’t find a word to describe it.

One of the welfare officers told me that, although there is no unemployment around his community nor in most of his district, ninety-five per cent of the children in a section of his district should not be living with their parents, but, I say: ‘Should be decontaminated by being taken away from the bad example of their elders.’ That may sound like ‘Plato’s Republic’ but there it is.

Right in Newfoundland today social conditions, I say, are unspeakably bad: wives are exchanged like common chattels—and it does not happen all on one side of the track either, it is not just an indisposition of some poor people, one of their luxuries.

I shall say something, Sir, which is bound to be misunderstood. Where there is most prosperity in Newfoundland there is most social disorganization. Now when that is said, that is not to say that prosperity is a bad thing. But it does mean to say that prosperity abounds (and I am speaking Public Welfare now, Sir) where prosperity abounds there is, to that extent, a greater need for us to be on our guard that, when we think of money, when we are getting and spending, we do not at the same time lay waste our powers. The advent and habits of prosperity ought not to dull us to the fact, dull our perceptions to the fact that people, people above all, are important, and that we cannot go on singing the national ode as if it were just some wonderful dream—it means people. We have more here than just pine-clad hills. We have people—and when we speak of people as being our ultimate resources we are speaking of something which is more than poetry.

Now, Sir, as a member of this House, I think it is an abiding responsibility, not only for this Government, but for the House as a whole, the Opposition and all of us together, to see to it that in our debates we put first things first, and that in an issue of this kind, of putting people first, we cannot afford to dissipate our resources by bickering nor by drawing attention to “Red Herrings.” This is the real thing, Sir—the People of Newfoundland! That is the unfinished business of Public Welfare. It seems to me that in all out getting and spending we should put our people, our fundamental resources, where they properly belong, in the forefront. It is a responsibility, I think, Sir, for both the Government and the Opposition, all of us together, to see to it, in collaboration with every agency of good-will, as far as Newfoundland is concerned, that; "While we accumulate wealth men shall not decay.”

MR. BUTTON: Mr. Speaker, in rising to make a few comments in connection with the Address in Reply to the Speech from the Throne delivered by His Honour the Lieutenant Governor on the 24th instant, I wish to join with all honourable members of this House in extending my congratulations to the mover and the seconder of the Address in Reply.

I may say, Sir, that there is not much left for me to stress in the Speech from the Throne as all the honourable members on this side who have spoken have outlined the benefits that can be derived from the very important address. Yes, in the Speech from the Throne we have four main objects, which I feel, Sir, are very important and essential to this country of ours. As we look forward, Sir, we will find in that address, which was delivered by His Honour the Lieutenant Governor, there are four very important factors whereas the Opposition on the opposite side stated that there is not very much to it. Yet when we realize, taking first the No. 1 point—A Royal Commission on Forestry. This I feel, Sir, is very important to this country. No. 2, Sir, the appointment of a Royal Commission to revise the Terms of Union, which was considered by the Opposition as a not very important factor, and No. 3 the new Election Act which will be brought forth in this House in this coming term of ours together with the Redistribution Bill will be a big factor, I feel sure, to all of us who are here, and No. 4 the creation of a fishery development authority which to my mind is probably the greatest of all. That alone, I feel, is sufficient to keep this House in session for months alone in a general debate. Yet the honourable members on the opposite side of the House in delivering all their speeches claimed that the Speech from the Throne is null and void.

Mr. Speaker, I cannot understand how the honourable gentlemen on the opposite side can take that attitude. I know that the honourable members probably have more learning than I have, they have great minds. But I think their minds are very small when they say that there is nothing in this speech.

MR. HOLLETT: How can they be great and small at the same time?

MR. SMALLWOOD: However, it is true.

MR. BUTTON: Mr. Speaker, all I have heard is "There is nothing in this speech to comment on." Mr. Speaker, all I have heard so far is Dr. Valdmanis, Sennewald, Seigheim and the beer taverns. That, Mr. Speaker, seems to be their theme.

But, Mr. Speaker, why did they bring up Dr. Valdmanis?

MR. HOLLETT: Yes, why?

MR. BUTTON: And the beer taverns etc.?

MR. HOLLETT: Why?

MR. BUTTON: They referred to the past—in the Commission of Government days—they were angels and we are demons, although it is true, as the Honourable the Premier has said, we brought peace and comfort to the people of Newfoundland, which they regret. Mr. Speaker, I can understand that they feel sore over it. They feel sore because they are not on this side of the House. They feel sore that they are not running our country. That is why, I feel confident, they say the Speech from the Throne is null and void.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, may I rise to a point of order: That is the second time that has been repeated. I do not remember anybody on the Opposition side saying it is null and void. If he is going to quote I suggest he quote correctly.

MR. SPEAKER: It is not a point of order, but possibly could be a misquotation.

MR. HOLLETT: It is a misquotation then, Sir.

MR. BUTTON: Well, Mr. Speaker, null and void as I understand it—from the Leader of the Opposition's speech it is not worth anything, which in other words means it is null and void. As I have already said: I do see these four great factors, not factories. We have factories in Newfoundland, Mr. Speaker, which the Honourable Leader of the Opposition will in future be proud of. As time goes on he will get up in this House and say: I regret that I have condemned them.

Mr. Speaker, in respect to the Fisheries Development Committee, I sincerely trust that (however I am not criticizing the Government by any means) whoever is in charge of the committee whether it is Federal or Provincial that they will in the near future, Sir, give considerable thought to the District of Trinity South which I represent, because we have quite a number of fishermen in that district at the present time. As I see it the situation is now very serious especially when so many plans have already been announced over the radio and in the press as to other districts especially on the North East Coast and on the South West Coast. I understand, Sir, that the fishermen on the North East Coast and on the South West Coast require all the fishing plants they can get. I believe it is essential in order that these good people can earn a living for themselves and for their families. Yet, Sir, in my speech last year I mentioned the "Walsh Report" because I read it from the very first day it was brought down in this House, and I am doubtful many members in this House have read it, as I have, from cover to cover, but I read it, and I was in great hopes that the "Walsh Report" would mean a lot to my district. But unfortunately, as at the present time, it does not mean anything. Yet it means a lot to the North East Coast, which I feel, Sir, is something worth while. Yet I hope that before many months have passed that it will mean a lot to the District of Trinity South. But, Sir, to date it is very disappointing to me—The honourable member for Fogo said he was disappointed in the whole fishery project last year but this year he was proud of it. Yet a few years ago in this very House he told the fishermen to pull up their boats. Since the "Walsh Report" has been brought down he has assumed a different attitude.

The "Walsh Report" is going to benefit the people in his area and I hope, as he has already said, that before many months have gone that I may have the same attitude towards my district. The reason I say that, Sir, is that a few years ago the Federal Department put a small fish drying plant in my district, at Winter­ton; or an experimental plant to see if it was economical or not—But as to the present time I cannot say because I have no report on what has happened. But when the Federal Department put this fish drying plant there I was hoping that it would be of some great benefit to the people of Winterton, New Perlican and Hant's Harbour and all up and down the shore. But according to the present circumstances I am in doubt. Yet I feel that if it is economical, the Federal Government will increase this plant and it will be of much benefit to the people concerned.

Last year, Sir, in this House I asked for electricity for the people of Heart's Desire, Whiteway and Hant's Harbour. But today, Sir, it is the same old story, no lights. On Friday, April 2, I again presented a petition from the people of Whiteway asking for electricity. I don't know what that will bring. I sincerely hope it will mean lights. I feel, Sir, that the people have been dealt with unkindly especially the residents of Whiteway, Heart's Desire. Hant's Harbour where they were promised in 1949 by the President of United Towns Electric Company that they would have the lights. I cannot understand it especially when the President of the said company guaranteed me and three others. But, Sir, if the company, as I understand it, is broke at the present time, then maybe they were broke in 1949. It was the duty of the President at that time to come forward and say we cannot give you the lights in Whiteway, Heart's Desire, Hant's Harbour and Lead Cove because financially we cannot do it. But instead of that they telephoned me and said: we will give you the lights. That, to my mind, was nothing only a bluff, and Sir, this I cannot take. But as my honourable friend the Minister for Provincial Affairs brought forth the same question here in a Petition asking for the same thing I can't quite understand the situation. The answer was delivered here in this House by the Honourable the Premier to affect us all. But, Sir, if that was really the case I would suggest, Sir, that the Government, this Government would take over this said company the same as is done in other Provinces of Canada and give the people —

HON. M. P. MURRAY (Minister of Provincial Affairs): That would be socialism.

MR. BUTTON: Socialism or not, I think that it would be only right that the Government should nationalize the company and see that the people, especially where they were promised the lights in 1949, would be given electricity. Sir, in Heart's Desire all that is needed is a transformer. The poles are running through the place! If poles were running through St. John's and a transformer were needed I am afraid there would be more to it than what is happening in Trinity Bay, because the people there are very quiet, and that is why they have no lights.

As for Petitions, to my mind, Sir, it is useless to present any Petitions not only to this Government but to any Government.

MR. HOLLETT: Hear, hear!

MR. BUTTON: Because they are not regarded, as I see it. I presented a Petition in 1949, 1950, 1951, 1952, 1953 and 1954 yet the people in Heart's Desire, Whiteway, Hant's Harbour, and Lead Cove are still without lights. Why should the people of Trinity South in this day and age have candle light while the people in other places in Newfoundland are receiving the benefits of electricity. At Whiteway, Sir, we need one-tenth of a mile (1/10) yet the President of this Company cannot give us electricity. If the United Towns in the first place had stated we cannot give you the lights because we are financially broke, the people in the district which I represent would not mind. But to make a statement and say that before 1952 the lights will be connected from Heart's Desire to Old Perlican—Sir, that is something that they cannot do. I am going to ask this Government of which I am a representative, I am going to ask the cabinet to take it into consideration, and to make a special effort for me, the same as they have promised the Honourable Minister for Provincial Affairs in his area. Because I feel that our people in the area that I represent are just as important as the people in Ferryland.

MR. MURRAY: That is the boy.
MR. BUTTON: Again, Sir, last year I asked for some consideration to be given to the people of Winterton, New Perlican and Heart's Content in order that they might come under a hospital scheme the same as practically all the other settlements of the community of Newfoundland, that Petition was null and void. Well I can understand that. I have found out since that due to some reason beyond control, other settlements in the country needed hospitals, isolated places whose need was greater than that of the District of Trinity South. Yet I feel that the people have been neglected somewhat as compared to some other districts in the Island, but I will not mention these districts now. Yet I am going to ask the Honourable Minister of Health this year, as I asked him last year, to include in his estimates, in order to bring it before the Cabinet, that the people of Winterton, New Perlican and Heart's Content be given consideration this year, and that a wing be built on the Old Perlican Hospital. By building this wing on the Old Perlican Hospital and with additional doctors, we could eliminate and solve the problem for the whole district concerned.

Sir, we have a great Liberal District in Trinity South and I feel that this Government cannot do too much for them, because they are behind the Premier 100%. He knows that. And I know if there was an election today, it would be useless for a Tory member to go over in Trinity South.

MR. HOLLETT: Thanks! We will not waste the money.

MR. BUTTON: It would be useless for them to spend their money. Coming back again to the fisheries— we have at the present time, in the District, a small plant which is operated by the Atlantic Fisheries at Dildo. This plant is doing a remarkable job. It is a great thing for the people, but it is too small and I am going to ask now in this Honourable House if it is not possible for this Government in co-operation with the Federal Government, to have this plant extended to a fish filleting plant in order to take the fish from the people in that particular area? At the present time this plant, as I mentioned a minute ago, is doing a good job; it is buying up potheads, salmon, squid and everything possible, even berries. It is doing a remarkable job. They also take mackerel and herring. But the plant is too small and I make a special appeal to the Government to try and have this plant enlarged, the same as they have in mind for the North East Coast and South West Coast, because it will eliminate a lot of unemployment.

I see here something of which I am very proud—according to this statement received from the Honourable Minister of Public Welfare, in the District of Trinity South in January 1949, we have only thirty-five able-bodied families receiving relief. I would like to see "0" there instead of "35 families" and this would happen if we had this plant at Dildo enlarged to an extent which will take all the fish from Lead Cove right up to Dildo. It would not take very much. We have no other plants there. Our greatest industry was destroyed a few years ago when the Commission Government removed the railway; when the A.N.D. Company took up the tracks from Heart's Content and removed their shipping plant to St. John's to relieve the unemployment situation in here. Trinity South really lost its little industry, and since that time we had the other small industry which I have already quoted—this plant at Dildo operated by the Atlantic Fisheries.

Getting back to the Atlantic Fisheries, there is a lot to be said. They do take the fat and the meat of the whales, but on the seashore from Chapel Arm to Dildo, there is one thing that might be brought before the Health Authorities in the future, and which I trust can be avoided by my stating this today—and that is the rotting of the carcasses and the bones on the beach. I understand the Honourable the Premier tried to interest some whaling interest to start a Meal Plant there, but due to the small amount of carcasses and bones and so on, it was not economical. But, Sir, I feel that something should be done, even if the Federal Government sent a bulldozer over there at this particular time in the Fall, to cover up the bones and the guts of these potheads because it is a terrible stink, which is not pleasant to the people who live in that area. But I would much rather see some kind of a plant to utilize these carcasses from time to time.

Now, Sir, as I have already stated, I do not plan to take up too much time because all the previous speakers have outlined the Speech from the Throne. They have really given the Opposition something to dwell on for the rest of the Session.

MR. HOLLETT: You have given us nothing to think about but the stink.

MR. BUTTON: They have given them something to think over until the House opens again. The Opposition speeches said there was nothing in the Speech from the Throne, yet there is a lot. As I have already said, there are four great things.

We have this Government behind us which will prove to the people whom I represent, in the near future, they will have something to confirm their faith in this great Liberal Government and I feel, as I close, that the Honourable the Premier will never let down these our people.

MR. CLYDE BROWN: In rising briefly to speak to the debate before the House, first, I would like to congratulate the mover and seconder of the Motion to draft the Address in Reply to the Speech from the Throne. These gentlemen acquitted themselves very ably and discharged their duties well.

I would also like to congratulate the honourable, the recent member for St. John's West who having spent some five years as a member in the House of Commons at Ottawa, has decided to represent his constituency in this Provincial Legislature. I feel, Sir, that the presence of the honourable gentleman will add strength and experience to the provincial party he represents.

I also endorse, Mr. Speaker, the sentiments expressed in the Speech from the Throne in respect to Her Gracious Majesty, the Queen, and trust that her present tour of Britain's far-flung Empire will not prove to be too strenuous and exhausting.

Now, Mr. Speaker, there are a number of items set forth in the Speech from the Throne to which I do not propose to make reference. However, the most important item is that of fisheries. During the present Session, Mr. Speaker, it is my understanding that the Government proposes the introduction of legislation designed for the purpose of modernizing the fisheries of Newfoundland. This will be an undertaking of gigantic proportions. The work and energy required to complete this enormous task will involve the complete and absolute attention of all who participate in the modernizing scheme.

As a representative of one of the largest fishing districts in Newfoundland and as one who was born and bred in the midst of a great generation of fishermen, believe me, I know whereof I speak when I say that if we are to revitalize and inject new blood into the fishery, we must first ask ourselves—do we properly understand and can we appreciate the problems which confront the industry as it operates today? And, furthermore, are we sufficiently familiar with the difficult assignment to which we will shortly commit ourselves? We must not only be prepared but must be ready to solve any unforeseen problems that may crop up here and there.

Mr. Speaker, as the son of one who has always been an advocate of a better deal for the fishermen of Newfoundland, I feel sure that this legislation will be of the highest importance and I think we should give the question very serious consideration.

There was a day, Mr. Speaker, when the income derived from this great industry was such as to place it at the top of the list as a source of livelihood for the men whose lot it was to depend upon it. Today the industry remains but a shadow of its former greatness. The motive to catch fish has all but disappeared and the incentive to follow the industry has vanished. I, like my friend and colleague the honourable member for Fogo District, was very much concerned over the status of the fishing industry, especially the marketing of salt codfish; but I am now convinced that the Government, in its wisdom, decided that until such time as the desired information could be gathered and completed to draw up a well-developed programme, the Government was aware that a period of at least four years would be required before all would be in readiness and the machinery set in motion for this very important move; and upon their decision depends the success or the failure of the fishing industry in Newfoundland. I am looking forward with a great deal of enthusiasm to the forthcoming legislation with respect to the modernizing programme. I feel sure that the fishermen throughout the Province will know us by our actions with respect to fisheries development.

Many Governments of the past have grappled with the fishery problem. They set about to do something about it with sincerity, wisdom and understanding, but I believe that the Government of today has far more information on which to work and a better comprehension of the problems involved than was ever made available to their predecessors.

As I look back over the years, I am inclined to think that the Premier and his Cabinet were so mindful of the tremendous task involved in fisheries modernization that they explored and examined every possible angle involved before proceeding with any constructive policy designed to change or modernize our fishery methods.

Mr. Speaker, I am keenly interested in seeing that everything possible is done for our fishermen and their families, for without them, Newfoundland would not be Newfoundland. The fishing industry was once referred to as the backbone of Newfoundland’s economy, but its importance today is greatly minimized to the extent that it now represents less than 25% of Newfoundland’s total exports. In spite of this, however, the fishery today is still, socially, the most important industry of Newfoundland and the distribution of population in the main, depends upon it. I am happy and proud, Mr. Speaker, to be associated with any legislation that will, in my opinion, benefit the fishing industry and in the years to come, I hope to be able to recall the year 1954 as a year in which the fisheries assumed a new role in the economy of Newfoundland.

It is also encouraging to note that a Royal Commission has been appointed for the purpose of investigating agricultural problems in this Province. I personally feel that this particular branch of our natural wealth has wide and varied possibilities. Agriculture in Newfoundland today is going on on a very limited scale. Although we grow sufficient ordinary vegetables to take care of our personal needs—(and I see no reason whatever why we should have to import such easy-to-grow vegetables as potatoes and turnips)—however, it could be argued that because of our diversified economy of fishing and farming and owing to its geographical position, bordering as it does one of the great agricultural areas of the Dominion, Prince Edward Island will prove to be our keenest competitor. I think the Province would be self-sufficient in agricultural produce, enhanced by the many successful farms operated on the West Coast of Newfoundland particularly, and on the Avalon Peninsula as well. I see a future for agricultural produce. I trust that it will develop into a great industry in the future.

One other subject, not mentioned in the Speech from the Throne, but it is something on which I would like to dwell for a moment—it is that of roads. The Province has, I think, somewhere in the vicinity of 2,500 miles of motorable roads, of which less than 200 miles are paved. The honourable and recently-elected member for St. John’s West, in the course of his opening speech to this House, deplored the condition of roads in certain sections of his district. I was very interested in what the honourable gentleman had to say, because the roads in my district today are in a far worse state than they will ever be in the district of St. John’s West. But I was interested particularly when he compared the state of our Newfoundland roads with the boulevards of the Maritime Provinces. It is indeed unfortunate that we are not blessed with this type of road, but I can assure the honourable gentleman that the fault does not lie at the feet of this Government. The Department of Public Works has done and is still doing a very remarkable job with respect to road-building and road-maintenance. For that reason alone, I would like to have the figures showing the number of roads constructed in Newfoundland since Confederation, and the total amount spent; and I do think the figures will be amazing. Again, Sir, I say it is regrettable that we do not possess sufficient roads to take care of our industrial and business requirements, but I think the whole House agrees, Mr. Speaker, that the Honourable Minister of Public Works and his able staff are to be highly commended on the great work that they have done in their efforts to remove the people of Newfoundland from isolation. Last year, I believe, an amount in excess of five million dollars was spent on road construction in Newfoundland. This year we hope a similar, if not greater sum will be voted by this House for that purpose. The country itself, Mr. Speaker, cannot possibly enjoy a successful, flourishing tourist trade, nor can the wheels of industry properly function without the benefit of more and better roads. I am therefore hoping, Sir, that sufficient money can be made available in future years to provide a system of paved highways and ordinary road links that will compare favourably with anything our neighbouring Province has to offer.

As I said at the outset, Mr. Speaker, there are a number of things mentioned in the Speech from the Throne that I do not propose to go into now. I presume my honourable friends will cover them quite fully after I have resumed my seat, or at another date. But I consider a Commission on Forestry to be something long overdue, and certainly a step in the right direction. I believe, Mr. Speaker, that our forests need all the protection that we can afford them. The study to be conducted of our forest development will prove of extreme value as a source of knowledge to enable future forest developments.

In closing, Sir, I will say this: The Honourable Leader of the Opposition has labelled the Speech from the Throne as a "Hope Speech," I trust the honourable gentleman will forgive me if I add just three simple letters to this word "Hope" thus proclaiming His Honour's Most Gracious Speech from the Throne to be one of the most hopeful and encouraging messages ever to be delivered to this House.

MR. CANNING: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of the debate on the Speech in Reply.

Committee of the Whole:

A Bill "An Act to Amend the Interpretations Act."

Deferred.

Second Reading:

A Bill "An Act to Amend the Undeveloped Mineral Areas Act."

HON. DR. F. W. ROWE (Minister of Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I rise to move second reading of this amendment to the Undeveloped Mineral Areas Act. The changes which we recommend here are purely nominal. The Undeveloped Mineral Act, when it was brought into force here in 1952 for some reason the names of the companies were not then given correctly in all cases. I am at some loss to know why this occurred. Apparently some clerk made an error along the way, somebody who was supposed to change it and did not. However, the changes are very simple. In the original Act we have "Falconbridge Limited," which should have been "Falconbridge Nickel Mines, Limited." The next one is listed as Newfoundland Labrador Mining Exploration Company, Limited whereas it should have been Newfoundland Mining and Exploration Company, Limited. The third one should have been Newfoundland Fluorspar Limited and the last one should have been Industrial Company, Limited.

These changes are very nominal, and I move the second reading.
On motion Bill was read a second time, ordered referred to a Committee of the Whole on tomorrow.

First Readings:

A Bill "An Act to Amend the Crown Lands (Mines and Quarries) Act."
On motion read a first time, ordered read a second time on tomorrow.

A Bill "An Act to Amend the Solemnization of Marriages Act."
On motion read a first time, ordered read a second time on tomorrow.

A Bill "An Act to Amend the Public Libraries Act."
On motion read a first time, ordered read a second time on tomorrow.

Committee of the Whole:

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, committee on two Bills at the same time?

MR. SPEAKER: Yes.

MR. MURRAY: We are streamlined.

MR. BROWNE: Is that in order, Mr. Speaker?

MR. SPEAKER: Yes.

MR. BROWNE: I suggest, with deference, that is a very unusual situation. That is not correct procedure. We should deal with one Act at a time. If you take two at a time, you can take the whole lot.

MR. SPEAKER: Yes, any number of Bills. I can assure the honourable member that is quite in order, by parliamentary procedure and certainly by practice of this House.

MR. BROWNE: It is a new custom since 1949.

MR. SPEAKER: The Chair cannot enter into a petty debate on the matter. The motion is "I do now leave the Chair."

Committee of the Whole:

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, the first thing I would like to say is this: I made a request the other day to see if we could get a copy of the Revised Statutes for the Opposition Room. I understand that request was passed on to the Office of the Attorney General but so far we have not received a copy. I don't think it is fair to the Opposition members to be sending to the Library. I wonder if the Attorney General will make a note of that and have a copy sent to us?

MR. CURTIS: I will. In the meantime, I have two copies of the Interpretation Act here, if the honourable member would like to have them. Unfortunately we do not give them out. They are distributed through Supply, and it takes a little time. There was a copy down there, I think.

MR. HOLLETT: It is not down there now.

MR. CURTIS: You each have one at home?

MR. CURTIS: You each have one at home?

"An Act to Amend the Interpretations Act:"

MR. BROWNE: When the Attorney General told us the other day there was a committee on the uniformity of legislation, Mr. Chairman, I looked up two of the Interpretation Acts, Ontario and Alberta, but I don't see anything corresponding to any of these provisions and I am wondering why. They are necessary, I assume.

MR. HOLLETT: It seems to me a rather strange procedure to say an Act of this Legislature has been deemed to have been repealed. I am thinking of a good many Acts, for instance, the Seigheim Act—that might be one which the Government has in mind, but I would like to be sure that the Seigheim Act is repealed. How are the general public to know when it has just expired, how is the world going to know. To all intents and purposes it is still an Act, and may still be implemented by Dr. Seigheim. It is not sufficient for us to say here that Act has lapsed or expired. Before the clause is carried, I would like to have some explanation on that point.

MR. CURTIS: I am not able to answer completely, Mr. Chairman, without having the Seigheim Act in front of me. But if the Seigheim Act gave Dr. Seigheim the right within a certain period to ask for a lease, and if, within that period he did not ask for a lease then obviously the Act would just lapse as the time is up and no action has been taken, and therefore, there is nothing now can be done under it. So then the Act would be held to have lapsed. It is the same with a number of old Acts that have been passed in this House from time to time, hundreds of Acts which gave companies certain rights. They just passed into disuse that is all. They just ceased to exist.

MR. HOLLETT: They were not repealed by the House?

MR. CURTIS: No. We don't repeal Acts like that. We only repeal Acts if there were a direct grant in an Act, but not if there is only power to give a grant because the power is limited to a certain time. If in a certain time the power has not been exercised it cannot subsequently be exercised. Therefore, there is really no need to repeal it. I think my honourable friends will find that there are hundreds of Acts on our books which have just fallen into disuse.

MR. HOLLETT: Who is to be the judge of that, Mr. Chairman?

MR. SMALLWOOD: The courts.

MR. HOLLETT: Why not say so here. As a member of the Opposition how am I going to know when that Act has been repealed? Who is to say so? All it says here is "when it lapsed or expires." What does that mean?

MR. SMALLWOOD: The honourable member during the period during which he has been a member of this House has demonstrated to the House and to the committees, his possession of a number of qualities, but not numbered amongst them is the quality of understanding legislation. Now that he has a new colleague sitting at his immediate right who is a lawyer and who takes an interest in affairs in this House, I suggest that the honourable gentleman be seen and not heard in these matters, and that he leave it to his colleague on his immediate right, because the honourable gentleman has not yet, in my hearing in committee, ever attempted to deal with any piece of legislation without hopelessly and rather ludicrously misunderstanding it. So I do suggest, seriously, leave it to his colleague on his immediate right, and he will be well guided if he does so.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, for the benefit of the Honourable the Premier I will not leave anything to any honourable member of the Opposition. I will tell the Honourable the Premier it would be a lot better for this country if he had been seen and not heard—I think it would have been much better, Sir. I am asking a simple question but the Honourable the Attorney General says he is not properly able to explain it.

MR. SMALLWOOD: There—my honourable friend does not even understand what is said here, not alone an Act.

MR. HOLLETT: If the Honourable the Premier would be seen and not heard I would get on much faster. If the honourable gentleman’s idea is to get up on every occasion I get to my feet and ridicule me, I will find myself in the position of offering similar ridicule—fighting the devil with his own tools, and I am quite capable of doing so. Any time the Honourable the Premier wants to get up and ridicule me I shall reply, Sir. I am asking here a question—who is to say—for instance will the Honourable the Attorney General tell me whether the NALCO Act is repealed? Have they carried out everything they have been asked or ordered or agreed to do. I say, no. BRINCO has not done any such thing either. As for many other companies, who is to say when the Act is to be repealed? Is it the Attorney General, the Premier or somebody? I would like to have some proper explanation, and I am not staying here to take ridicule from any member on the opposite side of the House without answering it.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I am astonished at the indignation at the perfectly natural suggestion that the honourable gentleman’s learned friend on his right should be left to guide him on these matters of law. I think my honourable friend is smarting privately over something—merely because I mentioned his honourable colleague on his right hand who is a learned gentleman and a lawyer.

MR. HOLLETT: I rise to a point of order, Mr. Chairman. We are discussing this particular section and I refuse to let the Honourable the Premier interfere with my remarks.

Clauses 2, 3, 4 carried.

MR. HIGGINS: Mr. Chairman, might I ask the Attorney General—the original sections are entirely the same as the amendment?

MR. CURTIS: No. I will read the original section—“No provision in any Act passed after the 11th day of May, 1952 affects the Right of Her Majesty”—nevertheless it is explicitly stated in the Act that Her Majesty is bound by the Act.

MR. HIGGINS: Yes.

MR. CURTIS: It is just a little more amplified.

MR. BROWNE: But, Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the Attorney General, where does that come from. There is no provision in the Ontario Act.

MR. CURTIS: I might say in reply; it is quite likely that Ontario has not yet enacted these recommendations of the Committee on Uniformity of Legislation. You must remember this committee held a meeting this winter, and they met last summer in Quebec and they had a further meeting this spring. In fact, Mr. Puddister went and visited them in January. This committee is meeting all the time and making recommendations to the various provinces. All the pro-provinces are members of the committee. Our Legislature happens to be open first. In any event even if Ontario or any other province were adopting these changes, they would not appear in the written records yet. In that case we are perhaps in some cases before them and in other cases are passing legislation at the same time.

MR. BROWNE: Could the Honourable the Attorney General tell us what is the implication there?

MR. CURTIS: I might say my understanding of the amendment is that Her Majesty in the past was only bound if the Act said so or an Act was so constituted as to imply that She was bound. Now since 1951 She is not bound unless the Act specifically says so. In other words we are incorporating into the Act now the effect of the judicial interpretation of the original decision. Common law prescribes that even if the Act says so and so, if it could be necessarily implied She was bound, but now we are specifically stating.

MR. BROWNE: Could you in popular language give an illustration of the effect of this change?

MR. CURTIS: The only thing I can think of on the spur of the moment is the Statute of Limitations.

MR. BROWNE: But how would it affect, say, the Department of Public Works? Does that envisage the Crown taking land under the Local Government Act and things like that?

MR. CURTIS: I would think the Government would not be bound by any statutory limitations.

MR. BROWNE: If the Government goes in and expropriates land in any particular area, is the right of the citizen protected there or does this exempt the Government from liability?

MR. CURTIS: Definitely not, Mr. Chairman, there is no suggestion that this Act will in any way exempt the Crown from any liability. It just means that unless the legislation in existence expressly says Her Majesty is bound by the legislation, Her Majesty is not bound. I don't know anything further than that. We could let that clause stand if you wish.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Clause 5 stand.

Clause 6 carried.

Clause 7 read.

"Section 24 of the said Act is repealed and the following substituted therefor:

"24. A citation of or reference to an Act of Newfoundland or to a regulation made thereunder or of any other province or territory of Canada or of Canada shall be deemed to be a citation of or reference to the Act or regulation as amended whether the amendment was made before or after the passing of the Act or regulation in which the citation or reference is made."

MR. BROWNE: There is considerable enlargement of the original section. What is new in it is the reference to any other province of Canada. Now, is there some reason why we introduce references to the Acts of other provinces. I can't conceive why we should be bringing into our legislation references to Acts in other provinces. The original section is very short, but now we are dealing with other provinces and the Canadian Regulations which go very, very much further.
MR. CURTIS: The real object of this section, Mr. Chairman, was really to apply rather to Acts of the Federal Government than to Acts of any of the provinces. But it was worded to include provinces in case there should be any such Acts. Now, the position is this, Sir, under the Criminal Code, for instance dealing with drunken driving, we in our Highway Act provide that the license of a person found guilty of Section 285 (40) but in the meantime the Parliament of Canada changes the Act and adds a fourth sub-section to No. 285, and subsequently our Act where it referred to No. 285 only applied to No. 285 as it was worded at that time. The effect of this section is to have it apply to No. 285 as amended. In other words, if the Parliament of Canada added section (4) it came within the scope of our Act.

MR. BROWNE: That is very good, but what about bringing in other provinces?

MR. CURTIS: It is purely a matter of conformity. I frankly don't see any objection to doing it. I don't see any harm in doing it. I move the committee rise, otherwise we will have to sit here all night.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole have considered the matter to them referred, have made some progress and asks leave to sit again.

Report received. Committee ordered sit again on tomorrow.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I move that all remaining orders of the day do stand deferred, and that the House at its rising do adjourn until tomorrow, Wednesday, at 3:00 of the clock.

The House then adjourned accordingly.

WEDNESDAY, April 7, 1954.

The House met at three of the clock in the afternoon, pursuant to adjournment.

Presenting Petitions

HON. H. L. POTTLE (Minister of Public Welfare): I beg leave to present a Petition from the town of Carbonear, generally, and in particular from that part of the town which is known as Adelaide Street, from 951 residents of that area which petition is also endorsed by the Town Council of Carbonear. The petition begs for an extension of the pavement of Water Street West from the main highway, a distance of some 1,800 ft. more or less to bring the paved surface to the crossroads which is the end of Adelaide Street. It was thought at such time as the road is being paved or surfaced that this work might be done at the same time.

Due to the fact that Carbonear is a prosperous and growing town, and its citizens believe they are entitled to these facilities, I endorse the petition, and ask leave to have it placed on the Table of the House and referred to the department to which it relates.

Petition received, to be referred to the department concerned.

MR. B. MORGAN: Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present a petition signed by 153 residents of Green Bay to the Honourable House of Assembly, Legislative convened: We the undersigned inhabitants of Green Bay hereby respectfully request the House to grant us a law that no horse outside the settlement be allowed to enter on Pilley's Island to run at large. We have on the island now thirty horses of our own and it is more than we can do to keep them out of gardens. There is a lot of damage done by horses landed from other settlements, no one knowing who the owners are or who should look after them. This had been going on for years. It is very dangerous for our children.

I support this petition which is signed by 153 residents of Pilley's Island, Mr. Speaker, and ask that it be laid on the Table of the House and referred to the department concerned.

Petition received.

MR. G. JANES: I beg leave, Sir, to present a petition from the Gander Bay area signed by 1,346 people from the Mainland Section of Fogo District requesting the Government to construct a road from Gander to Carmanville and so connect Gander Bay and that section of the area from Horsewood to South Side of Carmanville with Gander. Now, Sir, we are only thirty-five miles from the cross-roads of the world at Gander, and our people are living in the same isolation down there in Gander Bay and Carmanville where there are something over three thousand people, as the Indians who fished on the Gander. They were undoubtedly a little more fleet-footed than our people today and were able to get from the interior a bit quicker. But, by having a road connection in this district with Gander, we would have railway and road connections with the rest of the Province of Newfoundland. We have insufficient people down there to employ a doctor, and we have found it very difficult to employ a doctor over the years, and we have been using Twillingate Hospital. But, Sir, to come from Carmanville across Gander Bay and across the Dildo Run to New World Island in the middle of February is not a very good treatment for anybody especially sick people. The result is that we have been trying to use the Gander Hospital in the last few years, and have been moving our people out by plane. While that is better probably, than going across the Dildo Run to Twillingate it is not satisfactory, and we hoped that when a road came through to Gander we would have the use of the Gander Hospital. We also, have, Sir, some five thousand people living on Fogo Island. In order to get to the railroad and highway, people must go all the way to Lewisporte whereas, if we had the road from Gander to Carmanville we would then be able to use that road, and so would be within two hours reach of the railroad. It would also be useful, Sir, in disposing of some of our fishery products. It would also be useful for people going to Gander, the cross-roads of the world which is less than one hour's run from the great scenic beauty of that section of Notre Dame Bay.

I support this petition, Sir, and respectfully request it be passed to the department concerned, and hope we will have immediate action on it in the near future.

HON. E. S. SPENCER (Minister of Public Works): Mr. Speaker, in rising to support the petition so ably presented by my honourable colleague the honourable member for Fogo District, I would like to say that I am in complete accord with the prayer of the petition. But that is a very small matter. My primary reason for rising to support the petition is that included in the programme outlined in the Government's policy for road connection from the main highway through the island to the outlying districts is a proposal to extend a road from Gander Airport to the North Side of Bonavista Bay and on to the Strait Shore.

More than a year ago the department caused a survey to be made from Gander extending out towards Lumsden or just the North Side of Cape Freels on the North Side of Bonavista Bay, and with a proposed spur running north to Carmanville, the community to which my friend and colleague referred, and from which this petition comes; and the other branch of which is to extend to the South to Wesleyville. I am not sure if the direction "South" is the correct one there. In any event to Wesley­ ville a prosperous community on the north side of Bonavista Bay.

I can merely say to my colleague that I am not in a position of course, to commit the Government as to when that road may be constructed.
But I think it should be encouraging for people of that district to know that in addition to the progress made on the north side of Bonavista Bay up to the present time, there are definite plans in an effort to include the Strait Shore between Cape Freels and Carmanville, and on the North Side of the Bay at Wesleyville. I support the petition.

On motion petition received, laid on the Table of the House to be referred to the department concerned.

HON. C. H. BALLAM (Minister of Labour): Tabled Report of Workmen's Compensation Board.

Notice of Motion

MR. W. J. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if I may ask the Honourable Minister of Economic Development is there a report to be submitted from that department, or has it already been submitted?

HON. J. R. SMALLWOOD (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the Department of Economic Development makes no report. It is not required to do so, and it does not do so any more than does any of the departments of Government. The only departments
I know of at the moment that make reports are the Department of Education, the Department of Mines and Resources and the Department of Health, and Public Welfare—four Departments, I believe—

MR. BROWNE: Then is there any report to be expected from the Division of Tourist Development on the work it is doing?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I am speaking now from memory—I don't recall any annual report by the director of tourist development. I don't recall any Act requiring one—I only speak from memory on that.

Notice of Question

Mr. Browne gives notice of questions on tomorrow.

Mr. Hollett gives notice of questions on tomorrow.

(50) MR. BROWNE—To ask the Honourable the Minister of Public Works to lay on the Table of the House the following information:

(a) Copies of all advertisements for tenders for road construction during the past fiscal year.

(b) Copies of all tenders received.

(c) The name of the successful bidder in each case.
(d) The amount paid for the work in each case.

(e) What changes, if any, were made in the specifications after the tenders were received.

Re: Second Paragraph. This question should be referred to the Honourable Attorney General.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, I don't know if the honourable the Attorney General has given consideration to it yet, if not would he be in a position to answer now?

HON. L. R. CURTIS (Attorney General): Mr. Speaker, answers relayed to my office might be referred to any one of five officials. I will make inquiries.

Question No. 47:

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I have a note here from the Treasury Department saying the answer to that question was included in the answer to Question No. 10 asked by the Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

MR. SPENCER: Question No. 41, Order Paper of April 2, was referred to my Department. I believe the House will be generally aware that the building has been passed over, as it were, by the Department of Public Works to the management of the Board of Regents of the Memorial University. Hence we in Public Works do not administer its affairs at all with the exception of supplying the charring and cleaning services, and the engineering and heating and plumbing services. Hence we are not in a position to give the information requested here. But I think my answer gives generally the reply to Section 3 of that question. It is a matter for the Board of Regents of the University to reply, as I am not in a position to have the information.

MR. HOLLETT: By way of a supplementary request, may I ask the Honourable Minister to what Honourable Minister we may submit the question. It has been directed to the Honourable Minister of Finance who turned it over to the Minister of Public Works, and neither is competent to answer the question. I would like to ask somebody on the Government side to inform us as to whom we should direct the question.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I think, if to any Minister of the Crown, it would be to the Honourable Minister of Education.
Question No. 5: Answers to Sections, 1, 2, and 3 tabled by Mr. Power.

Question No. 28: Answer tabled by Mr. Hefferton—one part of the question is still under consideration, that is the section dealing with drugs.

Question (28) 1. Were tenders called for the purchase of provisions since March 31st, 1953, for the following institutions: General Hospital, Fever Hospital; St. John’s Sanatorium; West Coast Sanatorium; The Hospital for Mental and Nervous Diseases; Gander Hospital; Botwood Hospital; Cottage Hospitals and Nursing Stations? If so were the lowest tenders only accepted, and if not, why not?

2. What firms or individuals supplied the following items to the institutions named in question 1 and what were the prices paid in each instance—Eggs, Ham, Bacon, Beef, Pork, Bread, Butter, Fish (Salt and Fresh or Frozen) and Fowl? Also Drugs and Dressings?

Answer (28) 1: Monthly tenders are called for the purchase of all supplies for Government institutions in St. John’s and lowest tenders, consistent with quality and delivery accepted. Preference however is given wherever possible to local products. The West Coast Sanatorium is supplied through an arrangement with Messrs. Goodyear & House, Corner Brook. Gander Hospital gets its daily supplies through arrangement with the Department of Transport Stores. Cottage Hospitals and Nursing Stations procure their supplies locally, but as far as possible distribute their purchasing among the local merchants, sometimes on a monthly basis.

Answer 2: The attached list shows the Institutions, prices and contractors for supplies that were let on a yearly contract during 1953-54.

Orders of the Day

Adjourned debate on the Address in Reply to the Speech from the Throne.

MR. P. J. CANNING: My first duty as a loyal British subject is to join with other members in an expression of loyalty to Her Majesty the Queen. Secondly, I wish to congratulate the mover and seconder of the Motion made on opening day, that a Committee be appointed to draft an Address in Reply to the Speech from the Throne.

For the next few moments I am going to take up the time of the House by stating some hard, cold facts, most of which are concerned with my own district. I shall be as brief as possible to enable the House to get on with what I consider the most important business that has ever come before the House since the Liberal Government took office in 1949. I repeat that—I say that I shall be as brief as possible to let the House get on with what I consider is the most important business ever to come before this House since the Liberal Government took office in 1949.

In the Speech from the Throne is contained proposed legislation which will mean life or death to this Province. I shall take the items according to their importance to my district; or perhaps I should say, to the Province as a whole: (1) Fisheries, (2) Mining, (3) Agriculture, (4) Forests. On the by-products of these industries, depends the whole future of this Province of ours.

Before dealing with the industries, I feel it my duty to say that during the past five years my aim has been to hold the confidence placed in me by the people of my district and placed in me by the Liberal Party in 1949.

I realize our responsibilities as members of this Honourable House, on both sides—on both the Government side and on the Opposition side. I realize that some four hundred thousand citizens have placed in our hands the destiny of the Province; and still more important, thousands of citizens—people yet unborn—for whom we are responsible, to make this land of ours a better place to live in.

It has been our experience to witness the results of fascism and communism and at the same time we realize that members of our great democracies helped to bring about that chaos by indifference, and the injustice of greedy politicians who placed personal gains and their own desires before the welfare of mankind as a whole. I have noticed, in my own time, the greed of Capitalists who have kept the working class under their heel; I have seen them neglecting their duties and depriving them of their rights.

I did not go to Placentia West without having a sense of responsibility and a realization of my duties to the people in that little section of the world; the people who looked up to me to represent them in the Government of this little island. I made some promises to these people and one was to put the welfare of the district before any personal desire or gain. I promised the people I would be honest and just; to be loyal to the Liberal Party as long as the Liberal Party was loyal to the people. I promised them that I would at all times try and make life better for the people. I leave it to the House—the Government and the Opposition—to judge if I have lived up to the promises which I have stated. In order to do this, I shall first give a little picture in brief of the district as I found it in 1949.

My district extends from Fox Cove near Burin down the West coastline of Placentia Bay, down the East side to Come by Chance including the Islands within the Bay. The total population of my district is 9,700; or, to be accurate, in 1949; 9,669 people. The number of settlements is approximately 50, including Marystown and the other settlements. There is an average of 28 or 30 families per settlement. Of course, some of them have as many as 70.

I will not go into details of the conditions existing in the district in 1949. I am aware that the members in this House, on both sides, are familiar with the standards of living in those isolated outports. Firstly, the total earnings of the fishermen of my district in 1949 was $5200 a man and I think I am conservative when I say it was that much. Imagine in this twentieth century, if we stop to think of it for a few moments, add up our grocery bill. Add up the taxes and what not. Many of these families had 5, 6, 7, 8 and perhaps 10 in family and the average earned in my district was $200 per fisherman. It sounds a little fantastic when you consider these men living on that for 365 days; with five or eight children; all bills to meet. But it is a fact and if anybody in this House now, on one side or the other doubts it, I shall be glad to table figures at any time of the total quintals of fish caught; the average from Cape Race to the tip of the Peninsula and I shall prove the average wage of the fisherman was far below $200.

This is how I found the district when I went there. The total population between 6,000 and 7,000 people; 1,700 or 1,800 families. 97% had no sewerage or water system; 99% had no electricity; 99.5% had no heating except the kitchen stove. As far as medical services are concerned, and these are most essential; in my district in 1949 we had one Doctor and two part-time Nurses. We had neither Nursing Station. There was one Doctor at Marystown when I began my campaign in 1949. If I fell sick at Marystown I had a Doctor; the next place I could get medical attention was at Woody Island in the bottom of the district, in a straight line, it would be fifty miles; if you were zigzagging in the coves, it would be from 100 to 120 miles.

The next item is Schools—Education. When I went to the district, I found several schools overcrowded; school rooms were without adequate lighting or ventilation; in some cases I found the schools were old, had been there for years and they were leaky.

As far as the local roads were concerned, I would say without fear of contradiction, that 75% of the settlements had dangerous foot paths. In some places where the two sides of the harbour were separated by water, they were without bridges; people had to go to Church and children had to go to school by crossing over in dories and other boats.

Next, I shall take the highways and secondary roads. From Marystown to Terrenceville the highway was under construction for two years. The situation in 1949 in my district was, there were two settlements connected with the Cabot Highway; one was Terrenceville and the other was Come by Chance. One section of the road, from Marystown West, up to Hurin, you could drive over it, provided you did not have heart trouble or high blood pressure. I remember, during the campaign, going to Fox Cove—I was in the Navy in World War II and there were times when I was pretty well scared, scared stiff; but I think I can safely say I was never more scared during World War II than I was when I drove to Fox Cove in 1949 to look for votes to get to this House of Assembly. I remember going around one turn in a truck or pick-up, and I looked out through the glass and saw the sea lashing up on the shore three hundred feet below. At that moment I was more scared than I ever was in World War II.

This is in general or in brief the situation in my district in 1949. I have not gone into detail. If I did, it would take me a long time; probably another hour; if I was to go into detail as it existed.

One thing I have to mention is the plight of the aged, the widows, the children of large families and the sick. I feel sure that whatever our political philosophy may be, whatever we think of Confederation, the Liberal Party, the Government or the backbenchers; I think that everybody in Newfoundland must surely realize the blessings and happiness that our social service have brought to our people, especially those who could not help themselves.

If I were to tell of some cases I met in 1949—cases of old people finished work, some cases living with in-laws; if I were to explain their feelings; their position; how poor they were; how miserable they were; and if I were to compare it with today and what happened to them, I think all of us would laud, would praise Confederation.

We remember that the Honourable Minister of Welfare told us in his speech that the improvements in the railway alone would justify Confederation. I agree with him, but I would say now emphatically, and I do not think anybody here will put up an argument against it, that Old Age Pensions alone would justify Confederation. Before 1949, we can realize how those old people felt. How unhappy they felt. How unhappy the atmosphere of the home was. I know some cases where old people have been separated from their families; old men or old women separated from their daughter or son, perhaps within the district or some part of the Province or even on the mainland; they were separated for years and during the past five years the average man has managed to get along on the Pension and perhaps save enough to take a trip and unite with his son and daughter again. I know of several cases where the coming of Confederation enabled them to be united again.

Now I shall describe briefly the changes that have taken place in my district in the short history of the Liberal Administration. I have lived in my district since coming into this party and I have done everything I possibly could in the interest of the people. First—Medical Services: In 1949 we had one Doctor and two part-time Nurses. In 1954, today, we have four Nurses, plus one vacancy (temporary); three nursing stations and two Doctors, one of whom is on the "Lady Anderson" which visits every part of the district once a month. Every case of TB which came to my attention, I did my best to get them hospitalized, in spite of the fact that we have a shortage of beds at the hospital. Again, Sir, I say I do not think—and I emphatically state—there has not been one emergency case in my district which has not gotten immediate attention either from the department or from me. I used to bring them to hospital by boat myself. I do not think there was one case in the last five years which has not been attended to.

With regard to schools; as I said previously, I found several schools with inadequate lighting, overcrowded and in some cases old and leaky. The following, Sir, are the list of new schools and school rooms that have been built in the last five years. At Creston two new schools; Barhaven a new school, Beau Bois a new school, St. Ann’s a new school, Tacks Beach one room extension, Swift Current two room extension, North Harbour a new school, Garden Cove a new school, Monkstown one room extension. In all, Sir, possibly these have cost about thirty-five thousand dollars. So that is thirty-five thousand of our forty million which has not gone down the drain.

Next, Sir, I shall compare the local roads, secondary roads and highways: I stated, Sir, at the beginning that when I toured the district in 1949 I found 75% of the settlements without roads, or with just paths, in some cases dangerous paths. In at least three or four places I found the two sides of the harbour divided by water and children crossing to school by dory. Today, Sir, I can state, Sir, the highway to Marystown is completed and there were three places in my district which were connected with the Cabot Highway. Today, Sir, in 1954 this is the situation: The road to the Burin Peninsula was completed in 1950 at a cost to the Government of over half a million dollars. That is another half million we have spent for the benefit of the people. In my district, Sir, we have had the following branch roads connecting the settlements to the main highway, in other words, we have let some of these isolated people out into the world, about 2,000 people.

MR. HOLLETT: May I be permitted to ask the honourable member. What time the road to the Burin Peninsula was started, what Government started it?

MR. CANNING: The Commission of Government started it—and I remember, Sir, during the National Convention a certain gentleman from Burin, or belonging to Burin, could not understand why we were asking for the road, and he said he had lived in Burin and he could get out by water and they did not want the road. I said the road was finished in 1950.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Who was the man?

MR. CANNING: Mr. Malcolm Hollett of Burin.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, I am so happy to help out the honourable member.

MR. SMALLWOOD: You opened your mouth and walked into it that time.

MR. SPEAKER: Order.

MR. CANNING: I could not understand it. During the National Convention, Mr. Speaker, I was attending the Memorial University. By the way, I came back from overseas and finished my high school under my colleague here and then went to the Memorial. I did not have much time to follow speeches although every now and then I tuned in. I remember particularly the night after the honourable member had spoken, and stated he could not understand why the people of the Burin Peninsula wanted the highroad. When he was up there he always got out by sea—he is a Tory and the sea was good enough for him. He did not want to run down to the city by car in a few hours.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That was within a couple of days of when he said they were too lazy to work.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, I am tempted to rise to a point of order.

MR. SPEAKER: Order.

MR. HOLLETT: Who has the floor?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I know who had it in the National Convention that day.

MR. CANNING: I wonder where I was?

MR. SPEAKER: The Chair thinks the honourable member is quite capable of making his own speech in this debate. Will other honourable members please listen. Please resume your speech.

MR. CANNING: It is human nature, Mr. Speaker—I was dealing with branch roads. After I got to North Harbour, I don't know whether I mentioned it or not. Anyway, since 1950, Mr. Speaker, we have had the following branch roads from settlements which were, before our time, isolated: North Harbour, Garden Cove, Boat Harbour, Bakers Cove, Baine Harbour, Rushoon.

MR. HOLLETT: Is the honourable member addressing his remarks to the Chair or to the Leader of the Government? Mr. Speaker, I rise to a point of order: I think it is the duty of a speaker to address the Chair not to any member on the opposite side.

MR. CANNING: Mr. Speaker, I am addressing the Chair. I have not addressed the honourable Premier—he is taking a list.

MR. SPEAKER: If while the honourable member is speaking some other member wishes to be sure of his exact words, I think of no precedence that can prevent his taking it down, nor of any way I can accelerate or retard the speed of the speech of any honourable member. I will ask honourable members to kindly remember the honourable member for Placentia West has the floor. He is speaking in this debate and it seems to the Chair he is quite capable of handling any interruptions from the other side. Will you deny the honourable member the right to speak in this debate? The honourable member will resume his speech.

MR. CANNING: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I believe I understand the attitude of the honourable member across the House when we talk of the highway there, because he was not in favour of it during the National Convention. He could not understand how the people could not carry on by boat in these places. I guess he is a bit sorry now that they arrive by car. In those places I have mentioned there are several cars now and trucks. I wish I had time to go into it and tell the number that are there—I wonder where was I?

MR. HOLLETT: Is the honourable gentleman quoting from a speech which may or may not have occurred during the National Convention? If so I demand a transcript of that speech! I think I am entitled to that.
MR. SPEAKER: There is no point of order.

MR. CANNING: The following settlements have been connected to the main highway: North Harbour, Garden Cove, Boat Harbour, Parkers Cove, Baine Harbour, Rushoon, Jean de Bay, Moorings Cove, Rock Harbour, and Spanish Room. By the way the road to Rock Harbour which is some four miles from the highway is not yet completed. There is about a three-quarter mile strip to be completed which I hope to see finished this year. The total cost of these roads, Mr. Speaker, not counting the maintenance in the last five years is $180,000 out of that forty million dollars which has gone down the drain. What is more important, Mr. Speaker, there are roughly two thousand people relieved of their isolation. I say here that these other settlements, with the exception of Baine Harbour and North Harbour did not even have the coastal boat call in with mail and freight.

I am sure, therefore, the House will realize or appreciate what it means to those people who have been shut-ins, cut-off from hospitals and highroads, mail and freight. I assure you, Sir, they certainly appreciate the fact that these roads have been built. It gives me great pleasure that I have had some part in building these roads. I went to the Minister once and said; I want the branch road built to Garden Cove. He asked me, how many people are there? I told him there were about thirteen families. Then he asked, how far it was. I told him it was about two miles. "Twenty-eight thousand dollars for thirteen families," he said. I put the argument up to him that across the water there was an island called Sound Island, and I felt that if this road was built that the people from Sound Island would move over to Garden Cove. However, there was nothing in Garden Cove to justify moving at the time except the fact that they could be connected to the highway. We had rings around anyway. Finally I persuaded him that if this road were built these people would move and we would have one problem off our hands. So at last he came across, and the road was built. Since then, Mr. Speaker, approximately fourteen or fifteen families from Sound Island have moved, and Sound Island is no more. It is one problem off our hands. Nobody is living there. And I contend it was the one sum that was justified out of the exchequer that I have had in my district. The honourable Premier may not agree with me.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I do agree.

MR. CANNING: One time during the year, Mr. Speaker, the Premier spoke at some meeting, and wondered why in the world they had moved from Sound Island over to Garden Cove. I believe he said they should not have moved there. Anyway, that was one time, Mr. Speaker, I did not agree with the Premier because first of all the people of Sound Island lived on an island, and it was costing the C.N.R. something to have a boat go there. They had a post office there, schools there and a phone there. But when they moved into Garden Cove the boat did not have to call there any more, one phone did the two places, and we built a new school there—I believe I mentioned it earlier. Anyway, Mr. Speaker, these people could have moved to some other place near the railway or a hospital or something.

Yes, Mr. Speaker, apart from the highroads in general and the branch roads we have had during the past five years, connecting places within the district, we have many good roads, Clattice Harbour, St. Lawrence, to St. Leonard's and the road from St. Lawrence to St. Anne's all in one section, which is now under construction. I believe that the road from Clattice Harbour-St. Leonards is at least usable. To the House, Mr. Speaker, this may seem a small thing, to have a couple of settlements joined. But to the people of these lonely settlements it means a lot to have a connection with mails and being able to meet with one another. It is nice for a place where they have thirty families this afternoon, for the people to be able to walk over the road to another settlement where another thirty-five or forty families live, to shop in each place etc. Since I am still on roads, Mr. Speaker, I may remind the House that during the last four years we have spent in my district alone some $120,000 on maintenance and improvements, widening roads etc. The Department of Public Works, under Local Roads Division, have never yet during the past five years, not in one instance, refused a grant that has been requested by an organized local roads committee. I have no record of one instance where they have refused a grant provided, of course, it was within reason. Today, I may say, the local roads in my district are in pretty good shape, and I think the people feel pretty happy over the results.

Mr. Speaker, I know I could spend much more time in relating improvements in my district, probably some things of perhaps even more importance. But I feel, Sir that my district is only typical of what is happening elsewhere in the Province. In the last five years what has happened in my district is really typical of what is happening to Newfoundland, and is something the people hoped for, waited for and asked for, and which we have given to them. Of course the Opposition never gives us credit for what we have done. But we on this side of the House, Mr. Speaker, have the satisfaction of knowing that the people appreciate it.

I said previously that I spend most of my time in my district, and I passed through my colleague's district here, Fortune Bay, through Trinity Bay and Conception Bay going back and forth to St. John's. I know the feeling of the people, and how much they appreciate what we have done for them. I feel, Sir, that should we go before them tomorrow in an election we would have a landslide as we had in 1949 and 1951. I feel, Mr. Speaker, as long as we carry on and improve conditions and look after the people as we have looked after them they will be solidly behind us.

Now, Mr. Speaker, at the beginning I gave the context of the Speech from the Throne in order of importance to my district and the province as a whole. I shall not, Sir, go into farming, agriculture or mines to any extent because my district is a fishing district, but I should like now, Sir, to come to the fisheries: I will be as brief as I possibly can.

First of all we will talk fish, something the Leader of the Opposition complained about at the opening of this session when he said it was "Fish," "Fish," "Fish," nothing but "Fish." He thought very hard of the fact that this Government should take up fish. Yet he comes from Placentia Bay—and he is worried because we start talking fish.

MR. HOLLETT: Who said so?
MR. CANNING: I say, Mr. Speaker, he was worried because we started talking about fish. As a matter of fact, Mr. Speaker, the other day when the honourable member was making his speech he spent more time, a lot more time, talking about the roads in St. John's, and spent only a few minutes talking about fish, eleven minutes.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I counted and thought it was ten.

MR. CANNING: He spent eleven minutes talking about fish—a great defender of the people. Mr. Speaker, the people in Placentia West are not worried much about the roads in St. John's West, they want to hear fish and more of it.

Well, Mr. Speaker, fish has been one of the main foods since man inhabited the earth. I remember in one of the lessons of the Bible in the time of Our Lord, during a sermon Our Lord was giving, some boy turned up with a few fish. And, Mr. Speaker, I feel that fish will be one of the principal foods while man exists, providing, of course, some lunatic does not contaminate our waters with hydrogen or atomic bombs. Secondly, Mr. Speaker, Newfoundland is geographically placed in the midst of the greatest fishing grounds in the world. There is no argument against that. We know that we are definitely in the midst of the greatest fishing grounds in the world. We have had, and still have, some of the finest seamen, again I say, in the world, and the finest fishermen. I think our glorious history of the past shows our seamen and fishermen cannot be equalled anywhere else in the world. For the past four hundred years they have braved the storms of the Atlantic, fogs, storms and ice to gain a living. For them it has been a rugged life with few joys and unfortunately much sorrow. But Sir, what has happened in the last fifty years is that we have lagged behind the changing times. We have not kept pace with the modernizing of boats, equipment and processing, procuring or even marketing the products of the sea. So, Sir, in 1949 this Government was faced with, I think I could say, Sir, the greatest problem ever to face any province of the Dominion from an industrial and economic standpoint. Our first problem, Sir, was that we had very little knowledge of our fishing grounds, of the species of fish or the amount of fish which swam in our waters. Secondly, Sir, as times advanced things had gotten ahead of us and this Government nor the fishermen did not know the type of boats or equipment most suitable for securing catches of inshore and offshore fisheries. There was one thing we did not know. Now, Sir, there is a statement I am going to make, Sir, which would be or might be detrimental to the marketing of our fish in the next two years, and I would ask the press and gallery to note that—and I am going to ask the press, Sir, should they comment on anything I have said that they confine themselves to saying that I said we should modernize our fisheries. On anything I say I shall ask the Premier when I am finished to give his opinion if he would ask the press not to make too much of it.

There is one thing we did know, and the Department of Fisheries knew, that our fishermen needed training in the know-how of using modern machinery and other equipment essential today to keep up with the pace and hold the markets, to gain new ones and to make our fishing industry lucrative and economically sound. Now, Sir, I am going to give an example: First of all, Sir, this Government advanced loans to fresh fish plants—in my district they advanced loans to fresh fish plants, and I am going to compare, Sir, the old method with the modern method and in comparing this, I am going to ask the Press not to comment on it; as it may injure our markets.

At Burin there is a modern fish plant. Draggers come in and land fish, everything is very attractive, very clean. Down the Bay, some twenty miles, we have something quite opposite. We have people fishing, using the same methods, same boats, same equipment as was used. I would say, one hundred and fifty years ago; with the exception of the engine to take them to the grounds a little faster. This is the picture of the old methods: A man with a motor boat and dory, goes out today; goes to the cove and gets his bait; gets his lines; goes out and catches his codfish. At ten o'clock he has his fish caught; he comes in; goes to his dinner. Fish is left under the boiling sun. He comes back at one o'clock, takes the fish out of the boat and throws it upon the wharf with a pitchfork. It is there at least half an hour before it goes into the shed. It is split; not washed. Sometimes they may throw some water on it and a bit of salt; sometimes it is salted in the stage. Sometimes it is there in the shed for six weeks; then it is washed, put on the flake and made—sun dried. I believe the average number of days to make fish in Newfoundland is less than four per month. And, Mr. Speaker, that fish is made, and they hope to sell it for food product. In that very stage where the fish is stored, there is also gasoline stored. If we had carried on this way, I would say that within a very few years there would be no market for that fishery, as I have outlined.

In 1949 the Department of Fisheries was faced with this problem. What were they going to do? Were we going to advance loans to carry on this way or were we going to start at rock-bottom and try and modernize our fishery.

The other day the Leader of the Opposition was speaking of the loans advanced to fishermen. I believe he said the figure was $16,000 in Placentia Bay. Now, Mr. Speaker, that $16,000 should not have been loaned at all. I believe that is one mistake this Government made. Previous to that, I believe the senior member for St. John's West was speaking of loans—at the time, I happened to be absent from the House for a few moments—but I gathered he said they had gotten one million dollars in Placentia Bay. If this Government had put one million dollars in Placentia Bay, I would not be here today.

MR. HOLLETT: How much did Fishery Products get?

MR. CANNING: What Fishery Products got was spent to improve the fishery and put it on modern lines.

MR. HOLLETT: How much?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Over two million.

MR. CANNING: Burin, today, is a different place than when my honourable friend left it. Burin ten years ago was a miserable place to go into; but go there today and you will see the results of the million dollars or whatever it was, was loaned to Fishery Products. This Party started at rock-bottom. They gave loans to Fishery Products, they gave loans to other fish plants, they started surveys, and so on. I will give you an example of the results of this experiment. This Government introduced Danish Seiners and long liners for the first time in this country. Last year, Mr. Speaker, there was a man from my district who was a Captain or Skipper of one Danish Seiner in Fortune Bay. The average wage made in 1949 was $200; last year a man from Marystown was in charge of one of those Danish Seiners and for ten months fishing in Fortune Bay his wages were over $5,000; his crew members shared $4,200. That is quite a difference in the wages earned by something this Government recommended, compared with the old way.

The Department also set up a Commission to study the fisheries. On that Committee were well qualified men and they produced their recommendations in their Report. In my opinion, therein lies the salvation of the fishery of Newfoundland. To be brief, the Report recommends centralization and modernization of the fisheries. In my district, today, I realize centralization is very important. In three or four places there are 72 children not in school. There are no teachers. The places are small. The teachers will not go there. The only solution is to draw the people from the smaller places. I hope the time is not too far off when perhaps the Provincial Government and the Federal Government will give some grant or some help towards moving these people. Today we are now on the move to modernize the fisheries and I hope things will move faster. Newfoundland is on the march! Referring to my district, I feel certain that the Port of Marystown has great possibilities as a fishing centre and as a shipping centre. There, Sir, we have everything required for fish plants or a fishing port, docks, or anything else pertaining to the sea. It is an ideal area for settlers. I see also in that district the possibility or probability of cattle raising and crop farming.

I feel too that this Party will leave no stone unturned in the possibility of making Mortier Bay a National Port.

In conclusion, I renew my pledge to make my district one of the most prosperous places in the Western World.

HON. W. J. KEOUGH (Minister of Fisheries and Co-operatives): Mr. Speaker, in rising to address myself to the Motion before the House, I wish, first of all, to associate myself with the sentiments of loyalty that have been expressed by those who have spoken before me and arising out of the note in the Speech from the Throne regarding the crowning of the new monarch as Queen and Head of the British Empire. In this Island the tradition of loyalty to the British Crown is as long as the length of our days in this Island. Not more than several stones' throw from this place, down on the King's Beach, our forefathers landed during the reign of the first Elizabeth; and of all British subjects, none have been more loyal than those who came to live in this land. If there is another England in the Western World, this is it. As far as we are concerned, two and two make four and first of all with us is loyalty to the British Crown and the Queen, and of all the shouts of "God Save The Queen" none were more sincere than those which echoed from our coves and bays and harbours. That man more than any other fashioned England's finest hour and expressed the hope that this second Elizabethan age will be full of great accomplishments for England and mankind. I am quite certain that it is the wish of all of us that history will so record it.

The Speech from the Throne lays emphasis upon the appointment of the Royal Commission on Agriculture and the hope that its recommendations will form the basis for a full and practical policy for the more rapid up-build of agriculture in all its branches. It so happens that the appointment of that Commission has special significance for the district I have to represent in this House. On the land at Robinsons, Crabbes and Codroy River live many of my constituents—sober, industrious, good people, as good as you will find anywhere in this Province—or, for that matter, anywhere in this earth. I can tell you this—none of them is going to starve to death this winter—they are much too provident for that. I know additional services and technique could be made available to them, and will be made available to them according to their needs; but I crave the indulgence of the House now and state I have their great need is for rural electrification. Today, West of St. George’s and until you arrive at Port aux Basques, the only lights that shine in the night are those of kerosene lamps; the only form of power is that which is derived from the individual’s diesel. In the twentieth century half of the Western World is assisted by the ready availability of electric power at the push of a switch. If farmers cannot be so assisted, they must lose out in the battle of competitive prices and so pass from the Newfoundland scene. So I would note in passing for the attention of those who should take note, that rural electrification for the district of St. George’s, including the Codroy Valley is absolutely essential to the farmers of that area. As far as they are concerned “let there be light; or the end of their way of life.”

Before I address myself to the subject of the fisheries arising out of the note taken of it on the Speech from the Throne; there are one or two matters which were raised by the Leader of the Opposition, I would like to refer to rather briefly. I was alarmed to a certain extent when I learned from the Leader of the Opposition that I presided over an inept Department, because the Leader of the Opposition is such an authority on fishery matters, particularly fishery administration that much attention should be given his opinion! So I hasten to assure him that I attach as much significance to his opinion as I am sure does the general public of Newfoundland, and I am sure that is the significance it merits. In listening to the honourable gentleman, I came to the conclusion that one of the reasons—perhaps the principal reason—why he came to that conclusion that my Department was inept was because he had received what he considered to be an inadequate reply to questions he had addressed to me. I was sorry to have him come to that conclusion for on the very day that the honourable gentleman charged my department was inept, I had supplied him with more information than he had asked for. If I may refer to that matter—the honourable Leader of the Opposition asked me for certain information concerning the “Matt.” The obvious reply I should have made was that my department had no information about the “Matt,” other than the ship of that name is historically alleged to have sailed from the Port of Bristol in 1497 under command of a person called “John Cabot.” However, after long and careful consideration of the honourable gentleman's question, I came to the conclusion that the information he wanted was about the Matthew 2, and so I gave him the information he was entitled to about the Matthew 2, although I strongly suspect it was the information he thought he was asking for. I would like to suggest to the Leader of the Opposition that if he would frame his questions more precisely, he would get more precise information. When a question is slapped over hell's half acre, it is difficult to deal with it. In any case, I have to say this; I will answer questions exactly which call for statements of fact. As for questions regarding policy, I will not answer them. It would be improper for me to do so and where policy has been decided, it will be made known when the Government sees fit. Above all, I will not answer any questions that ask what the Government of Canada has done or intends to do about this or that. For me to undertake to do so would be a piece of gross impertinence, and all such questions are improperly directed.
However, since I am anxious to be as helpful as I can, I am going to suggest to the honourable gentleman a method whereby he can get all the information he wants about the exact intentions of the Government of Canada. If he will direct his questions to the Leader of his Party at the national level, I am quite certain Mr. Drew will be only too happy to ask those questions in the House of Commons. In other words, I would suggest to the Leader of the Opposition, since I will not do it, he could "let George do it."

I was intrigued by the idea of the Leader of the Opposition that this Government brought about fundamental changes in Nafel during the past five years. I have been wondering ever since, by what course of imagination he adduced that. He appears to have derived that from the Terms of Union. To begin with, he will find no mention of Nafel.

MR. HOLLETT: That is exactly what I said.

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, it is not.

MR. SPEAKER: Order.

MR. KEOUGH: It did not lie with the Government of Newfoundland. The Government of Newfoundland could not have insisted in its own right upon a change in Nafel.
Nafel is a private corporation. True it has sat astride the salt cod fish trade of Newfoundland for the last five years because it enjoyed an exclusive right to export salt cod fish, conferred upon it by the Newfoundland Fisheries Board, which in turn owed its existence to the continuance of the fishery laws as they were at the date of union. But the Government of Newfoundland in its own right has no grounds for insisting on a change in that arrangement. The initiative to bring about a change does not lie with us. It is not correct to say that the Government of Newfoundland could have put an end to Nafel, or bring about changes in Nafel in the last five years in its own right, as it could not. But I agree, from the point of view of the Opposition, it is good politics to say that. The honourable Leader of the Opposition was perturbed over the fact that no standing joint committee had been appointed arising out of the recommendations of the Newfoundland Fisheries Development Committee. It is a matter of public knowledge that that committee made such a recommendation. But it does not follow that because the committee made such a recommendation that, without question, the recommendation had to be accepted by both Governments. In fact an alternative arrangement was determined upon. As far as the Province of Newfoundland was concerned it meant our setting up a fishery development authority. If the Honourable Leader of the Opposition does not know what the Government of Canada determined upon, then I am quite certain that the Honourable Mr. Drew will be only too pleased to find out for him.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Sinclair.

MR. KROUH: It could be, I must admit to one point of agreement with the Honourable Leader of the Opposition. I share his concern over the disparity in prices received for fresh fish by fishermen fishing locally and those fishing at Mainland points. But the Honourable Leader of the Opposition knows as well as I do that the prices paid for fresh fish are such as are determined by private fish companies. And because this Government may have loaned money to some of these companies for fishery purposes, that fact does not impose the obligation to compel these companies to pay higher prices than do private fish companies. And because this Government may have loaned money to such companies by subscribing to its shares. Nevertheless blame must attach to this Government because higher prices were not paid for fresh fish, indeed it is one of the arguments offered in support of the ineptitude of my department, for which I take it, that is something presumably I should have done something about. The only conclusion to be drawn is that the Leader of the Opposition thinks that this Government should have compelled private fish companies to pay higher prices than they did pay. That, mind you, is an interesting thought put forward by the Leader of the Tory Party which has been the historic guardian of the rights of private companies to go their unfettered way. I must say that the idea is most unorthodox, but because it is unorthodox it is not necessary it be denied on that account. Actually I would like to hear further from him on the matter another day. But after he has had an opportunity to consult with his party I would like to know whether it is the considered opinion of the Tory Party in Newfoundland that it thinks the Liberal Government should compel private fishing companies to pay higher prices for fresh fish. Of course any responsible government in considering such a move would have to be moved by considerations rather than those of practicality. Frankly I know of no government in the Western World which has as yet legislated itself into the position where it is responsible for the prices paid to fishermen, or any other kind of man. So that I can say in this case we are in good company even if some of it is Tory Company.

Finally we had another instance from the Leader of the Opposition: It seemed that in the course of his travels he came upon a skipper of a long liner who had but twenty quintals before the season ended, but who nevertheless felt he was doing all right because the Government paid him and his crew. So that the conclusion was drawn that there was a general lack of supervision in the long lining experimental programme. Now first let me say that I have been unable to unearth the record of my department having financed any such venture as the Leader of the Opposition indicated. His long liner would appear to be the myth that the honourable and learned member for Ferryland immediately suggested that it was. The only long liner training program that can be called such, and it would be generous to call it such, was undertaken by this Government two years ago and only for a few months. Actually there is no need for specialized training of Newfoundland fishermen in long lining. Most Newfoundland fishermen are already familiar with long lining techniques in the operation of their ordinary trawl gear. Further it must be noted that the development of long lining was not inaugurated by this Government. It grew out of the experimental fishing undertaken out of Bonavista Bay by the Government of Canada, and facilitated by the payment of a subsidy by the Department of Fisheries of Canada. For our part we have cautioned—as the honourable gentleman will recall, two years ago I openly resisted in this House a suggestion by a former member of the Government of Canada—a suggestion to speed up the long lining building programme—but, as I have said, we have cautioned fishermen against going too rapidly into long lining. Some fishermen have heeded our advice but others who have not heeded it have found they have bitten off more than they sought, but others, guided by us, have done all right in long lining. At the moment we are watching the operation of every long liner made available under loan and subsidy plan, and we are making assistance available to fishermen by way of training in navigation and operation of diesel engines and the new kinds of fishing gear. We go beyond that even. We have taken occasion to place fishermen in the berths on other ships where they could get some training in long lining before they took over their own vessels. Generally we have cautioned fishermen against getting too hastily into long lining where they are not certain of themselves nor of their ability to pay out their vessels, but where they have shown aptitude we have encouraged them with good results. The same is true of Danish Seining.

I could go on taking issue with some other matters raised by the Honourable Leader of the Opposition, but to what useful purpose? I will concede that he has proven to my satisfaction, and I imagine to the satisfaction of the House that he is a master of the fine art of nonsensical reasoning. When he adds two and two the answer is likely to be 3.99 or 4.11 or Nath should have his stomach kicked. So that we on this side of the House if we are to keep pace with all the nonsensical reasoning of which the honourable gentleman is capable we might well go on to Christmas and then make only a beginning. So for my part I am going to dispose of the Leader of the Opposition for the moment at any rate with this quotation. I would suggest it as required reading for the honourable gentleman whenever again he contemplates a further performance in this House. It is a quotation from a favourite classic of mine—"Alice in Wonderland"—with a change of one word. It goes this way: "You are old Father Malcolm," the young man said, "and your hair is becoming white, and why you consistently stand on your head do you think at your age that is right?"

Mr. Speaker, addressing myself seriously to the matter of the fisheries, in accordance with note taken of it in the Speech from the Throne, I think I should begin by saying that I think the time has come when I should have a word of my own about the report of the Newfoundland Fisheries Development Committee. One year ago on April 15, I tabled that report in this Chamber without comment. In the meantime there has been some comment though superficial, not understanding what it was all about, not seeing the implications of the recommendations, and not finding it spelled out in the report in a formula whereby the income of fishermen could be raised to ten thousand dollars a year, forthwith the superficial have brushed it aside. Some others have read the document. Their views have been more balanced. Some losing sight of the objects set before the committee have taken it as setting forth something it was not supposed to do. Thus I have seen the committee criticized for not attempting to resolve our marketing difficulties. The reason why the committee did not is obvious, to put it in the language of the nursery—“Nobody asked me, Sir, she said.” It is just as well judging the work of any committee to do so in the light of the terms of reference. The terms of reference of the Newfoundland Fisheries Development Committee were these: 1. To examine into fishery resources available to the Province of Newfoundland with a view to the full utilization of known resources and the discovery and development of others. 2. To examine into the economics of existing methods of fishing and other methods which may be applicable. 3. Examine into the existing methods of processing and other methods which may be applicable.

These undertakings were for the purpose of recommending increased exploitation of fishery resources through methods of fishing and processing based upon sound, scientific, economic and social considerations and the purpose of recommending a programme capable of implementation by both Federal and Provincial Governments and those engaged in the fishing industry, and outlining the respective responsibility of each, and their agreed share in carrying out a programme. It will be seen from these terms of reference why this committee did not particularly concern itself with what we should do to sell more quintals of salt cod in Brazil. The committee concerned itself with the problems of marketing only to the extent it bore on the problem which was confined within the terms of reference. The committee defined the problems of the Newfoundland fishery in these terms. The traditional equilibrium of the resources of the industry including the population dependent or involved in the market has broken down as a result of pressure from several directions. The objects of a development programme should be to establish a new equilibrium on the basis of a new, modernized fishing industry utilizing the resources to the best advantage and meeting market requirements to the full extent providing the fishing population with a living conforming to national standards.

The committee then did the next obvious thing and studied the fishery resources available to Newfoundland, including in that phase of its work:

(1) Naming certain species probably incapable of much greater exploitation.

(2) On which information was inadequate to determine whether increased exploitation is possible or economically feasible.
(3) Species capable of expanded exploitation.

Convinced that the decision is to the effect, an expansion and development of the fisheries must be based on the expandibility or otherwise of the outlets for the sale of its products, the committee next reviewed the facts. It then turned to a discussion of the methods and facilities necessary for the most efficient utilization of our resources to meet market requirements. The committee then recommended a programme of development.

The committee's report is a formidable document. The only way to appreciate its significance is to read it with discernment. I am convinced that not too many have taken that trouble. All in all it is a remarkable synthesis of the best things that have been done by our fishing industry across the years, with some new things contributed by the committee. I am convinced that its implementation in the spirit, taking it for granted that the letter will have to be drawn as changing circumstances warrant, will go a long way towards the committee bringing about and realizing its object of providing our fishermen with a livelihood conforming to the national standard. The report points to something that is all too often lost sight of in this Province, i.e. that the price of fish is not everything. It is stated that an increase in fishing income to make an appreciable difference in family living can hardly be brought about by a rise in the price that fishermen obtain for their product, because the scope for price rising, although it may be primarily based on market conditions, is too limited. What is required is that increased production per man, which means in turn an adequate marketing structure to sell the increased production; it means better fishing instruments in the fishermen's hands in the way of improved boats and fishing gear, and it means fishing out of centralized ports, and landing at processing plants capable of handling the increased yield. So that then the key-note and the dominant note of the committee's report is centralization.

The committee recommends centralization of three types. First of all major area developments are recommended here. The development of fishing ports wherein there would be provided all the conveniences of a modern community, out of which fishermen would fish with modern fishing instruments on prolific grounds near such ports, and make their landings to plants therein geared to process their total catch into such products as the varying demands of the market require. It is suggested the areas where such major developments can take place are limited.

There is also recommended by the committee secondary community developments. The committee recognized that there are in this Province some well established ports which are unsuited for modernization along the lines suggested for major development, but where, nevertheless, the fish come in to eat the rocks, and where a considerable number of fishermen live and are going to continue to live long after you and I are dead, development programme or no development programme. The committee suggests for such places medium sized plants to be owned in common by fishermen and operated by an organization of those willing to abandon their own premises and centralize their operation in the new plants. Finally the committee recommends regional centralization by way of small community developments. The committee recognized that there were many smaller settlements unsuited for large scale development, yet nevertheless likely to retain their fishing population for some time to come. In time it is hoped these will be attracted to areas of larger development. But they are going to cling to their coves next year and the year after and maybe for the next decade. It is suggested that fishermen in such places should be encouraged to centralize their curing on a co-operative basis and acquire premises and equipment as the scale of their enterprise permits. This last is a policy of Mohammed going to the mountain instead of a policy of root, dig, or die. Such a policy no government in Newfoundland with its roots in the people could in justice and charity contemplate.

There are many other recommendations and suggestions in the committee's report, but they all are auxiliary to or in support of achieving the three major ones of concentration just quoted. In the year since this report was tabled in this House the Governments of Canada and Newfoundland have agreed upon certain steps to be taken to provide for the report's implementation. In order not to anticipate a debate which is pending in this Chamber I prefer to leave any discussion of these agreed projects up until such time as the bill to incorporate the fisheries development authority is before us. There is this, however that can be said at this time. It is common knowledge the fisheries development programme for the total rehabilitation of our fishing industry, boiled down to its essentials, is a programme for the production of an increased and increasing volume of fish of higher quality. If a New Jerusalem in fishery is based upon a greater production per man, all of which means that unless the fishery development programme is underpinned by an adequate marketing system, then it must fail. There is no need for me to add that the marketing system in salt cod that we have had to put up with during the first five years of union was not adequate although that marketing system demonstrated an increasing incapacity to market successfully a production yield that has been diminishing all the years of its existence. Before I have anything further to say about the inadequate marketing structure let me give a special reason why such a structure is necessary. The reason has to do with the pace at which a programme of fishery development can be implemented. There are some eight hundred fishing communities in Newfoundland, but five hundred of them are concentrated on the North East Coast, the area pointed out by the fisheries development committee as the crux of the salt fish problem. Development must necessarily be limited by two things at least, the money and the qualified personnel available. So this year the Government of Canada and the Government of Newfoundland, will undertake development by expansion of their present operations and the building of new plants in a few other places. But by the most optimistic estimate there can be during the next ten years, say, two large scale centralized developments in each year or, it may be twenty in fourteen years. There may be a hundred communities, subsidiary communities to these larger places where development should take place within the next ten or fifteen years. That makes one hundred and twenty places in all.

But what of the people who live in the other places? It is true that in a number of these smaller places no permanent fishery development can be justified. It is hoped that the people living in these places will in time be attracted to the centres of concentration. I have no doubt that many of them will move in after these communities have been made ready for them. But in the next year and year after and for fifteen years many of those who fish to live, are going to have to live in anticipation of change. The only thing that we can do is to make some minor assistance available to them, but the principal thing we must rely on to tide them over the transition years is the benefits that they may derive from an adequate marketing structure. Now I have my own ideas about what should go into the making of an adequate marketing structure, and I am going to keep them to myself for the time being, at any rate. But there is much that can be said, and it is common knowledge for the modern council of marketing and that is that marketing should begin at the point of operation and follow through to the point of ultimate consumption. Translated into terms of salt codfish, which is our principal concern, the marketing of salt codfish should begin when the fish comes off the boat and should follow the product through until it reaches the table of the person who eats it.

Now there is encouragement for the future in the decision taken at Ottawa recently—that is, the responsibility at government level for the marketing of salt codfish, would be that of the Minister of Trade and Commerce. That decision means, that the marketing of our salt codfish becomes a problem for the Hon. C. D. Howe which he has to cope with. Now, it is no small matter even for a man of Mr. Howe's dimensions to have to shoulder the responsibility for the success of Newfoundland's fisheries, the development of the trade and the general welfare of the thousands of our people who are dependent upon salt cod. However, Mr. Howe is not a man to be turned aside by the mere magnitude of a problem. Long before now he has mastered multiple difficulties in marketing in Canada—pulp and paper; minerals; live stock products, etc. Mr. Howe is without doubt the most able man in trade matters in Canada, and possibly in North America, and there are few people who could match his prowess in his own field in any country in the world. I have no doubt that Mr. Howe will do a thoroughly top-level job that must be done and will give our fisheries development programme an adequate marketing system. So I feel that we can with assurance proceed to implement this programme which is geared to greater production per man and inevitably greater total production. As far as the coming season is concerned, I would say that there is no reason why every fisherman everywhere in the Province should not make up his mind to take every last cod out of the water he can take out and make it into a good product. For the coming season, I repeat, I would say there is absolutely no reason in the world why every fisherman everywhere in the Province should not make up his mind to take every last cod out of the water he can take out and make it into a good product. Even if it means our production goes to a million quintals, what of it? One million quintals of salt cod would only be a drop in the bucket in the total production of Canada and the Honourable Minister of Trade and Commerce will be able to take our million quin­tals of cod.

MR. HOLLETT: And throw it away.

MR. KEOUGH: There has always been a sense of impending doom and dire consequences in our fisheries, that year after year will bring its own particular crisis. At long last we are starting upon a broad programme of improvement that will bring new life to the industry and it is our hope that our fishermen may enter into their inheritance of the good and abundant life.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I move the adjournment of the debate.

Item No. 5: Moved and seconded that it be read a second time.

MR. HOLLETT: Section 14 (1) "The Minister may attach to any certificate of greater hardship issued by him under Section 13 a condition that the person in whose favour the certificate is issued shall not sell, lease or otherwise dispose of the dwelling in respect of which the certificate is issued or any part of such dwelling within a period of one year from the date of the issue of the certificate."

I take it that, that takes care of cases where the landlord has difficulty in moving the tenant, but finds when he comes before the Rent Restrictions Board that the Board rules this greater hardship decision and awards the landlord the dwelling for himself and orders the tenant to get out. And that section debars the landlord from disposing of the property for a period of a year even after the tenant is moved. I know this will be discussed in Committee of the Whole, but if that is the intention, it seems rather odd, that having gotten rid of the troublesome tenant, he should not be allowed to sell for a period of one year.

MR. CURTIS: Even though he gets possession under false pretenses?

MR. HOLLETT: That is another matter. Here is a case of an ordinary citizen. We take John Jones, an honest landlord—he has had a tenant there for years, unable to get him out. Finally, the Rent Restrictions Board decided he should get possession of his property. It seems unfair, if their judgment is correct that greater hardship would be borne by the landlord if not given his property—if the Board is correct; then this Bill says this man has property which he cannot dispose of for a whole year. I may be wrong, but I raise that point now.

MR. CURTIS: I do not wish to enter into the debate, but I think section 13 envisages the landlord getting the tenant out because his own need is greater than that of the tenant. In giving him a certificate of greater hardship, they would be doing it on the basis of his family's condition. The object of this legislation is to be able to say "yes," you can have your house; you are getting it because of your own need; and you have to live in the house a whole year; not to use it as an excuse to get a tenant out and let somebody else go in it." I am presuming the tenant is satisfactory, paying his rent and keeping the property in good condition. It is not a case of getting rid of an undesirable tenant. We have found that there have been conditions where this has been abused; where landlords have gotten the property on the pretext of using it themselves and then let it to someone else.
MR. J. HIGGINS: Speaking from memory—perhaps the Minister of Supply can confirm this—Section 14 (1) has been in effect for the past several months, if not for the past year. Section (2) I have seen certificates issued to which that condition has been attached.

MR. CURTIS: It may not have been legal.

MR. HIGGINS: It has been attached to every certificate issued for some months past.

MR. HEFFERTON: There is not much I can add to the explanation given by the Honourable the Attorney General. There is something in what the member for St. John's East said. A certificate of greater hardship is given a person if he is able to prove to the Rent Control Board that he, as owner, is under greater hardship by not having possession of his house. After the case has been heard and decided upon, a certificate is given whereby the owner can gain possession. To do that there is one condition—during one year the property shall not be rented; it shall be used by the person who gets possession. In the original Act it says the house itself; consequently we have instances during the last year where the owner has gone in and used one or two rooms and sub-let the other part of the house and this Amendment is designed to overcome that.

I move that the Bill be read a second time and be referred to a Committee of the Whole House tomorrow.

Carried.

HON. F. W. ROWE (Minister of Mines and Resources): There is just one change to be made which requires this Amendment—6th—"on" to be substituted for "for." The reason for this is obvious. If we think of a licensed area as a checker board, each square representing 40 acres. A strict interpretation of the original would require the license holder to put in 25 days work on every square of the checker board and this might lead to a ridiculous situation. While this does not lessen the financial obligation of the licensee, it does permit him to use time and money in a common sense way.

Carried.

13. Second reading of Bill "An Act to Amend the Solemnization of Marriage Act."

HON. M. MURRAY (Minister of Provincial Affairs): This amendment is designed to permit the issue of a temporary license by Preachers and Teachers of religion.

Moved and seconded that it be read second time and referred to Committee of the Whole House tomorrow.

Carried.

HON. THE ATTORNEY GENERAL asked leave to introduce a Bill "An Act Respecting the Supreme Court of Canada and the Exchequer Court of Canada."

Read a first time.

HON. THE ATTORNEY GENERAL asked leave to introduce a Bill "An Act Respecting the Evidence Act."

Read a first time.

HON. THE ATTORNEY GENERAL asked leave to introduce a Bill "An Act Respecting the Prevention of Fire."

Read a first time.

Item No. 7: "An Act Further to Amend the Education Act."

HON. J. R. CHALKER (Minister of Education): It has been considered desirable to have Legislation which would enable the Lieutenant Governor in Council to prescribe the amounts of scholarships. I recommend second reading.

MR. HOLLETT: I would like, if possible, to move that it be adjourned.

Carried.

MR. SMALLWOOD: There was part of a question I asked to be deferred. It had regard to Newfoundlanders and Non-Newfoundlanders: what wages did they get at Brigus-from April 1st. to December 31st. $873,623.12 was paid of which there was paid to Non-Newfoundlanders $67,204.38. The Non-Newfoundlanders in question are of course General Manager, Technical staff in the Mill.

I move the House at its rising do stand adjourned until Thursday, April 8th at 5 o'clock.

Moved and seconded that the remaining orders be deferred, and the House stand adjourned until tomorrow, Thursday, at 3 p.m.

Carried.

THURSDAY, April 8, 1954.

The House met at three of the clock in the afternoon, pursuant to adjournment.

Answers to Questions

Question No. 50:
HON. E. S. SPENCER (Minister of Public Works): The answer to that question is being prepared.

Question No. 51:
HON. G. POWER (Minister of Finance): My Department has directed that question to the Department of Fisheries.

Question No. 52:
Stand.

Question No. 53:
HON. J. R. SMALLWOOD (Prime Minister): That is in the course of preparation.

Question No. 49:
MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I said here yesterday when this was called that on the previous night I had been in the office of the Treasury and had asked the comptroller of the Treasury, Mr. Marshall, to prepare the answer to that question, and he informed me he would do so immediately. I informed the House then that as soon as I received the vouchers and invoices I would table them. When I got back to the Office yesterday, after the House closed, I found the answer to the question.

MR. BROWNE: Would the Premier tell me whether it has been the practice to destroy vouchers and substitute microfilms?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I have not the foggiest idea. If the honourable gentleman will table a question, I will gladly find out. I have an idea that for several years past, the Department has been microfilming documents including vouchers, bills and cancelled cheques and all things of that sort; but whether they have made a practice of destroying cancelled cheques or such documents when they are microfilmed, I have not the foggiest idea. If he likes to give notice of a question, I would be glad to answer it.

I have one or two answers. I table a report of the NALCO Corporation. They had their annual meeting this morning, the Report was submitted and adopted by the directors and shareholders and I have pleasure in tabling it.

Secondly, the Balance Sheet of the Corporation tabled and adopted by the directors and shareholders and I have pleasure in tabling a copy of it as well.

Finally the Report of the Corporation of NALCO. I think that clears up the question about Newfoundland-Labrador Corporation. I forget which honourable gentleman asked the question. I believe it was the Leader of the Opposition.
HON. W. J. KEOUGH (Minister of Fisheries and Co-operatives): I beg leave to table reply to No. 27, March 31. And question No. 39 on the Order Paper of April 2.

Question No. 27:

Question: Table a detailed statement showing all Capital Account expenditure made under Subhead 1422 since April 1st, 1953, to date, this statement to include the names of all individuals, firms and companies to whom moneys were paid and the amount paid to each, together with an explanation with some detail as to whom these expenditures were made.

Answer: The following amounts were paid under Subhead 1422 for the period April 1, 1953-54, to the persons or firms indicated:

MR. SPEAKER : Adjourned debate on the Address in Reply.

MR. SMALLWOOD : It is, I think, something with which every informed member of the House and the public will agree, if I say that the greatness of the British system of Government—that the people in the nation or state or province where that system remains are confronted with at least two different policies or programmes to choose between. These policies or programmes are, of course, advocated by the two political parties, if there are more than two political parties, there are more programmes or philosophies—one for each party. And so when you have two political parties, you have or you should have, two different programmes or philosophies between which the people can make their choice. The parties, of course, seize upon every chance to explain their policy or programme or philosophy and to advocate it and to ask the people to put them in power, in office, so that they can carry out their policy. Now, each party not only advocates its own policy, but condemns the other party's policy and argues against it, and tries to show that its own policy is better for the country, the State or the Province. That is the policy or programme or philosophy of the other party or parties; and the people choose the party with the policy and the men they think will do most for the country, State or Province. That, I say, is the greatness of the British system of government—that the people shall have a choice of political parties advocating different programmes or philosophies. Now, I have listened carefully to hear from the Leader of the Opposition in this debate some hint, some suggestion, some inkling of what his Party stands for; of what he would do if he had the Government. Now, we in this party have a policy on Fisheries Development. What policy have they? We have a policy in this party on Mineral Development. What policy have they? I have listened in vain, I think this House has listened in vain; I think Newfoundland has listened in vain for the slightest sign or hint of what the Opposition stands for. I have heard them condemn our policies right, left and centre. They are against the Government. Of that there is no doubt whatsoever. They have made that very clear. They do not like us and they do not like our policy. But what do they stand for themselves? What do they advocate? What would they do if they had the administration of the government? They would like to have our jobs. They would like to have the government. But up to this very minute, they have given the people not the slightest idea of what they stand for. All that they have told the people is what they stand against. They stand against the present Government.

Now, I suggest to you, Mr. Speaker, that in constitutional usage, and in common sense, it is the Opposition's duty to make its policies known—if it has policies. What is the Opposition's policy on the development of fisheries? What is the Opposition's policy on the development of our agriculture? What is the Opposition's policy on the development of mines? What is the Opposition's policy on the development of Water Power? What is the Opposition's policy on the development of Industrial Plants or establishments? What is the Opposition's policy on the development of Education? What is the Opposition's policy on the development of Public Health? What is the Opposition's policy on Public Housing? What is the Opposition's policy on the development of Municipal or other local government? What is the Opposition's policy on the Liquor problem? What is the Opposition's policy on Provincial taxation? They have not told us. They have not told the people. They have given us no hint whatsoever of their policy in these matters. They have not told this House. They have not told the people. Even in the last General Election they failed to tell us. They have no Manifesto or declaration of policy.

Now, they must be careful not to drive us to the conclusion that they are just a little gang of disgruntled fellows who are "again the Government." They do not sound like a political party. Really they should try and grow up. They must try and reach political adolescence, if not full manhood. Up to now, since Confederation, the people have had no choices—there have not been two political programmes or policies to choose between—there have been only one—the Liberal. The Tories tell us they are against the Liberal Programme; but they do not tell anybody what their own programme is.

I remember when the Referendum Campaign was on, the same people, the same Tories kept telling us that they were not against Confederation with Canada, but only against the way it was being done. Now, today, they tell us they are not against Economic Development, but only against the way it is being done. They are not against the development of minerals, or forests, or fisheries; but only against the way this Government is doing it. And all this time, never as much as a hint of what they would do or how they would do it. Now, how long, Mr. Speaker, is it practically possible for a little group of men to stay in this House with no policy of their own beyond that of criticizing the elected Government of this Province and criticizing everything we do, everything we say, everything we advocate. How long will they get away with that, politically speaking, in this Province? Are they a Political Party? Who is their Leader? We know who their Leader was yesterday. That is about as far as we can go. They have had a long succession of leaders in the last five years.
Now, during those last five years the Opposition have been criticizing the Liberal Government. If you can believe the Opposition, this Government has done nothing right, nothing good, nothing. If you believe them, this Government has accomplished nothing that is any good for the people. This Government has had no successes but only a long and dismal succession of failures. That is their story. If the Opposition are right then the only progress this Government has made is progress towards disaster and ruin. On that side of the House have been five years of endless criticism, of picking holes in the Government, and of complete failure to put forward any constructive ideas or proposals of their own. Mr. Speaker, the Opposition Party now has five members with seats in this House. In addition to these five one of their elected members passed to his eternal reward, two others retired from this House and one dropped out to contest a federal seat. That means the Tory Party has had nine different members elected to this House since Confederation. Nine members elected in the two general elections and two by-elections. All the Tories elected to this House since Confederation have been anti-confederates without exception, all nine of them. When you remember that without a single exception they have all uttered their sneers against Confederation you may be justified in concluding that the only policy they have, the only thing they have in common beyond being men, beyond being Newfound­landers, beyond being Christians and all these ordinary things that all humanity has in common, the only thing they have in common is that they all fought against Confederation, that they are all still against Confederation, that they all will be forever against Confederation. That is all they have in common. That is what makes them a political party.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, may I ask the Premier how he knows that?

MR. SMALLWOOD: In exactly the same way as everyone in the House and everybody in Newfoundland knows it, and the same way as the honourable gentlemen know it themselves. They can't hide the bitterness. It seeps out even when they don't want it to. They can't hide it.

Mr. Speaker, I have been somewhat amused to see the birth and growth of two pieces of mythology in those past five years. Now I am old enough to remember the myth that was believed by Sir Ralph Williams just after he retired as Governor of Newfoundland. I believe that just before he left Newfoundland, as a small boy was honorary ADC to that Governor for a day when he visited the CLB of which I was a member at that time. The myth that grew up about Sir Ralph Williams was that he had said on going through the Narrows on his way back to England, having served his term as Governor, that the Newfoundlanders are dirtier than the Boers. The Boers and we had been fighting just a few years before, so around that time the word "Boer" meant about the same thing as "Russian," "Rebs," or "Communists" means today. It was pure myth—pure myth. Now there are two new myths concerning the present Government. One is that we have used our big majority in this House to crush and throttle the little Opposition, sitting on them, gagging them, slagging them and silencing them. That is one myth. There is not a single bit of truth in this story, not a scrap of justification for it. If we have beaten them we have beaten them in fair debate on the hustings and on the floors of this House. If we are better than they it is because we are better debaters, we know more, we are better informed, we work harder, and if we are the majority it is because we deserve to be the majority.

We did not get our majority by coup d'etat, by violence. For the past five years we on this side of this House have gone far out of our way to give the Opposition every conceivable opportunity in this House, when they were not ready to proceed with a debate we postponed the debate; when a debate had started and they were not ready to carry on we fell in line. For five years we have virtually let them call the tune in these matters. It is common knowledge, everybody knows that inside this House. The thanks we get is to have this myth grow up of the brutal Government throttling and sitting on and stifling and choking almost of the gallant little band of the opposition.

The other myth is that we have refused information to the Opposition. Not that we have refused it once or twice but frequently, consistently, not information that should not be tabled, but information that we had in our custody. That is the second myth.

Now, Mr. Speaker, from the time this Government came into power up until yesterday and including yesterday the Opposition have asked in this House 1,567 questions, including those on yesterday's order paper and from the first day this House opened after Confederation. They could have asked more if they had wanted to. That of course, is understood, but that they do not ask twice as many is their business not ours. But the number they did ask was 1,567, and we have refused to answer less than twenty of them. Less than twenty out of 1,567. This Government, this high-handed, this tyrannical Government, this Government that flouts democracy, this Government that has defied this gallant little band of patriots who are defending the people from this band of dictators—my honourable friend should do some night work. Is that an unusual proportion of refusals, is it many? But why did we refuse to answer even these few questions? We had good reasons, good parliamentary reasons, reasons that were good in equity. Well about one-third of these questions we refused to answer were questions that never should have been addressed to us at all in the first place but should have been addressed to the Government of Canada, and we are not the Government of Canada. About another third of these questions we refused to answer were questions that asked us to give certain records that we felt we could not give, one of these was the IBEC Report, which however we offered to allow the Opposition to have privately. We were not willing to make the report public, and the Opposition knows why. They know why just as well as I do, but they have never told it. Well I give them credit for that, for not telling the reason why we could not and would not table the IBEC Report. Now, I can give the reason. There is no danger in giving it: Up until some months back this Government was actively canvassing the possibilities of getting built another paper mill in this province. One of the principal motives we had when we brought Mr. Nelson Rockefeller's organization in here was to have a survey made on the practical possibility, the financial practicability of a third paper mill for this province. The report, as those members of the Opposition who have read it know was adverse to the possibility, to the practicability of a third paper mill at this time or around this time but not forever. I said it was not in the public interest to publish this document. Now, when I said that I took the responsibility for it, I had no choice, I had to take the responsibility for that statement. I took that responsibility. The responsibility I took was that we refused information to the Opposition and through the Opposition to the people. We refused it, and I took the responsibility of doing that in the interest of the people of Newfoundland to whom I was refusing the information. There must come times, obviously—is there anything more obvious than the fact that there must come times when a Government, if it has any regard at all for the public interest, in the interest of the public must refuse information when the revelation of it would injure the public interest? So that a Government on occasions must take the responsibility to refuse to give the information. I say, about a third of the questions we refused to answer were questions that asked us to table that kind of information, the tabling of which would have resulted in definite damage to the public interest. Should we release it when we knew that to do so would damage the public interest, just because the Opposition wanted it? Should we?

Now, the remaining third were questions that asked us to release information about the private business of companies for no better reason than that we had loaned some public money to them. It appears to be the belief of the Opposition that once the Government lends money to a private company then the Opposition has the right to ask and to expect that we will answer questions bearing on the private affairs of such a private company. Extraordinary as it is there appears to be that belief. I doubt that it exists in the mind of the latest member of that party. He has, after all, just come from Ottawa where he spent four or five years in that great parliament. He must have learned something. No doubt he is busily passing on what he has learned to his new colleagues, who doubtlessly are delighted to be taught by him and be guided by him normally. They desire, it appears, to be led less by the honourable gentleman who sits to the immediate left of that honourable gentleman to whom I have just referred. I doubt if he holds to the view that because a government has lent funds to a private company to enable them to expand that they have a right then to all kinds of private information which would be openly tabled in the House. I doubt that he shares that view.

Now, this Government has lent many millions of dollars, public money, to business concerns in Newfoundland. The Commission of Government before us lent other millions also to companies in Newfoundland. Public moneys have been lent to Andrews Labrador Fisheries, Olsens Whaling and Sealing, Bonavista Fish Meals and Oils, Northeastern Fisheries, Arctic Fisheries, Northlantic Fisheries, Bonavista Cold Storage, Hollett & Sons, Gaultois Fisheries, Fishery Products Limited, Dunphy Limited, and at least twenty other companies. There are about fifty private companies in Newfoundland at this moment to whom public moneys have been lent from the Treasury by this Government to enable them to expand their operations, to enable them greatly to expand their operations.
Just because public moneys have been lent to those companies the Opposition demands any information they may happen to want about these companies, their balance sheets, what their raw materials cost—for instance, I think my honourable friend the recently elected member for St. John's West gave notice today of a question to be asked on tomorrow concerning some private company, what this cost and what that cost, and what were their expenses in this and what were their expenses in that. Does he seriously expect me to answer that question?

MR. BROWNE: Are we dealing with questions now, Mr. Speaker, or is this the Speech from the Throne?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I did not expect my honourable and learned friend to answer me at the moment as it was rather a rhetorical question not demanding an answer.

Are we supposed to table in this House those companies' cost of production, their profits and all the other secret and confidential private details of their affairs merely because we have lent them public moneys? Is that the policy, the philosophy of the Tory Party, the party of private enterprise, as we see it in this Province? I say no. We have refused to table this information about private companies, and shall continue to refuse it. We are right to refuse it and the Opposition are wrong to ask for it—we are right and they are wrong. Now, that is our job. That is the way we feel about it. All the members of this Government and our sponsors on this side of the House feel that way about it. We take that responsibility although nobody else may like it. The test will come when the next election is held. We are prepared to stand or fall on that.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, may I draw the Premier's attention to the fact that he is a director of the Newfoundland Hardwoods Limited and Premier of this country.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is so, and has no connection whatever, not the slightest—I am also a man five feet four, weight 145, but what has that got to do with it?

MR. BROWNE: I am not interested in your weight.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It has just as much bearing.

MR. BROWNE: How much money have you got in the Newfoundland Hardwoods Limited?

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is a fair question that has been asked and answered. If you want to know private details—but the answer to that question is that we have nothing, never had a cent. If my honourable friend is asking about the building and machinery on the land, a piece of physical property, we own it all there, that is the public of Newfoundland owns it all. But it has been leased for fifteen years to a private company in which I represent the Government, but I own no shares, not one. I am merely there as a representative of the Treasury. That is all. I am not part of the company. I don't own a share in it. It is a purely private company.

Mr. Speaker, we as a Government are most anxious for individual fishermen, for private fishermen companies, for groups of fishermen or for groups of private fishing companies to come to us to ask for loans to enable them to establish or expand projects for fishery development. And when money is lent them we shall continue to refuse to disclose the private and confidential details of their business on the floor or the table of this House.

One final word about the Opposition's questions: Members of the Opposition are expected to know how to word their own questions. It is not the Government's fault if questions are wrongly worded. Surely we are not expected to teach the Opposition how to perform their duties.

Now the Honourable Leader of the Opposition in his speech of four or more than four hours and taking part of each of two days in this House dealt with a very considerable variety of subjects of which this one was somewhat typical; He said that this Government, during the financial year just past, the financial year that came to an end at midnight on the 31st of March, a few days ago, in that twelve months that this Government had borrowed an amount of over two million dollars. Some of this, as he pointed out, was borrowed from the bank and some was borrowed from the Fisheries Loan Board, our own Fisheries Loan Board, and some from other sources, totalling something over two million dollars. Now, I am speaking figuratively when I say the Leader of the Opposition said that with his eyes round with astonishment, and I detected a note of genuine shock in his voice.

Well, Mr. Speaker, if this stuff is meant to impress yokels, well and good, it was good enough for that, otherwise it was pretty poor stuff. Now, if I had been a newspaper reporter representing a newspaper or a radio station when my honourable friend drew attention to that couple of million dollars this Government borrowed in this past financial year, if my instructions were specifically to report everything that was said in the afternoon, for my paper next day or my radio station that night, I would obey such specific instructions, but not if I had freedom of selectivity of reporting in this House. A quarter of a century ago or longer than I like to think of when my honourable friend the present newly elected member for St. John's West occupied a seat in this House, I happened to be a reporter myself, and knowing at least a little about public affairs my reaction when the honourable gentleman talked about that would have been: "Good Heavens! what is next? What is he going to talk about next? Does he think we are ignorant? Does he think we are fools?"

Now, on the other hand, if he had said, well that is smart, that is clever stuff, that is going to impress the yokel, that reference to a couple of millions borrowed during the year and, I would either conclude he did not know what he was talking about himself or that he now was just trying to fool the yokel. Because you see, Mr. Speaker, I find it a little difficult to believe that the honourable gentleman does not know that every year since this Government has been in power without exception, whether we had a surplus running between five or six million dollars by the time the year was over, even in such a year we borrowed one, two or three million dollars during the year, every year since we have been in power. Every year the Commission of Government were in power they did the same thing. Every year the Government of the United States or of the United Kingdom have done the same thing, and will continue to do the same thing. Every year the Government of Canada has been in power, for at least a century, or at least a half century, they have done and will continue to do the same thing. It is a perfectly normal thing, a perfectly normal thing, a perfectly conservative, perfectly natural thing, perfectly traditional thing to do. It is not worth mentioning. Why? I will tell you why: This House of Assembly passes and passed last year that certain basic taxation shall be imposed on the people and the Government says, all right, if that is the law we will try to collect the taxes. In the course of the year they run to some many millions of dollars. This House of Assembly also orders that during the year coming so much money shall be spent. The Government says, okay we will spend it. So that we have two jobs for the twelve months, (1) to spend the money that the House has authorized us to spend; and (2) to collect the Taxes that this House authorizes us to collect. But, does the Honourable the Leader of the Opposition seriously think that the Government takes in the same amount of revenue which it spends? Or that it takes in as much as it spends? He knows it is not so. Why? Because over half the revenue of this Government comes from Ottawa (it has gone as high as 65%); and that comes into us in four amounts—every quarter, a quarter comes in and it comes in in arrears not in advance. So that we always spend, every year, inevitably we will have spent more than we have taken in that year. It is coming in a little later. We have our Payroll coming in every fortnight—3,400 civil servants. The Government does not go to them and say “We know we owe you wages; but you have to wait. The revenue is slow coming in.” We give them their cheques. Same thing with the School Teachers. Same thing with the Tradesmen’s Accounts. How much do we buy? Several million dollars worth from every shop in St. John’s; from every factory. We say, “Ship to the General Hospital; the Mental Hospital; the Sanatorium; the Cottage Hospitals; send in your bill and you get your money.” We do not say to the businessmen or the factory owners or jobbers “sorry, but the money is slow coming in; you have to wait a couple of weeks until the revenue comes in.”

My honourable friend thought I spoke figuratively when I said we were short of cash. They thought we were broke, on the verge of bankruptcy. He spoke as if he were trying to get that inference through. What does the Government do? What would anybody do? It makes temporary borrowing from various sources—loans or treasury notes or an overdraft. When drawing to their attention that the Government of Newfoundland does this, does he imagine the yokels might be surprised and even imagine that the end is close at hand? Of course I do not suggest that the Leader of the Opposition dwelt on this simple and ordinary matter in an effort to create the impression of insolvency on the part of the Government. I do not suggest anything of the sort. But I am curious to know just why he did it. One thing he has done is he has forced me to explain things that did not need to be explained. He forced me to do that. That may be smart, deep and subtle. I am not subtle. I do not understand politics. He has some deep, diabolical plot. I am stupid. It passes over my head. I can imagine the consternation down in the bottom of White Bay when it is broadcast that the Leader of the Opposition said, “The Government borrowed two million dollars this past year.” I can imagine the Leader of the Opposition saying "Ha, ha, that is good for another dozen votes for you."

Now, Mr. Speaker, this Government felt very proud and I certainly felt very proud that in the British Newfoundland Corporation we had brought great and famous corporations and banks of Great Britain together. We had brought them together. They had not been brought together until we brought them together in the new Company known as the British Newfoundland Corporation; a new Company formed at our suggestion in Great Britain—twenty of the greatest and mightiest of all the great Corporations of the United Kingdom—the mother country—at our instigation—twenty of these vast concerns banded themselves together to form the new entity—BRINCO—brought together for the purpose of making a great effort to survey and explore the natural resources of this Province—we felt proud of that—I personally was deeply proud of that—we had felt that this was one of our great accomplishments as a Government since Confederation—one of our greatest accomplishments—but the Leader of the Opposition has managed to make "BRINCO" sound like a dirty word, spoken in toilets—a word scrawled by small boys in coloured chalk on the back fence—a dirty word—BRINCO. "Bunko" one of the honourable gentlemen called it. That is shrewd politics—that is clever. That is smart. The Leader of the Opposition manages somehow to make this great BRINCO project sound like a piece of shameful treachery to Newfoundland. Twenty of the mightiest and most reputable concerns of the Mother Country accepted my challenge to explore any riches they might find and the Leader of the Opposition makes it sound like a pack of vultures descending upon us. I succeeded in interesting Sir Winston Churchill himself in this plan to band together some of Britain's industrial and financial giants and giving them the task of the vast exploring programme in this Province—the Attorney General was with me when Mr. Churchill described it as "a great Imperial concept" and which one of the Leader's colleagues calls "bunko." The Leader of the Opposition himself makes it sound like a dirty word. "You pay your money and you take your choice."

MR. M. M. HOLLETT (Leader of the Opposition): Might I interrupt?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Sure. Put your foot in further. I am glad.

MR. HOLLETT: Would the honourable gentleman tell us how I make it sound like a dirty word or how I make them sound like a pack of vultures? Personally, I have never seen a vulture.

MR. SMALLWOOD: He never knows when to leave well enough alone. His colleague from St. John's West is shivering at his leader's naiveté and lack of subtlety. The Chairman of the Board of the Bank of Montreal, the Chairman of the Board of Directors is the President of BRINCO. The great A.N.D. Co. and the great firm of Bowaters and the old House of Bowrings have joined together with the House of Rothschilds and they have revived the century-old practice of daily setting the price of gold. Did you read where that was restored a week ago? BRINCO! Dirty word! The Prudential Insurance Companies, the English Electric Company and a dozen other firms whose names are known around the world—these have joined together to give parts of Newfoundland and Labrador the greatest scouring for natural resources that we have ever witnessed in Newfoundland. This does not cost the Newfoundland Treasury one single cent. In addition to the taxes which the Treasury will get from any development that takes place, we shall also get a share of the profits on such development. There is not another Province in Canada that can say that. That is a new pattern established by this simple, stupid Government. We have set a new pattern for all the other Provinces of Canada.

Mr. Speaker, I do not intend to occupy the whole of the day. I should like to speak a while and continue my remarks tomorrow, so that we can get through some of the business on the Order Paper today; but I do want to deal with a point made by the Leader of the Opposition and my honourable friend will notice the great courtesy I showed him in referring to the points or alleged points which he made. I can do no greater courtesy to him than that. Virtually all my remarks dealt with his momentous speech. One neophite writer, who incidentally describes himself as a veteran parliamentary reporter with 1½ years experience—the same veteran reporter described the speech of the Leader of the Opposition—I do not remember the exact terms, but the impression I got was that a milestone had been established in this House—a great new record, or something close to it. That was funny to me who sat here and heard men speak for five days—I heard one man speak for six hours—but this literary giant, the great journalistic effort, a towering effort of a great orator. The Opposition members all spoke in this debate—one spoke on the Amend-number, let me hasten to tell him that we loaned some six million dollars to these thirteen concerns. I have made extensive notes on this. I have seven or eight copies which I will distribute afterwards. I shall not attempt to give the House an outline of what has been accomplished from the time we took office—I shall not deal with any part beyond the year 1953. I will take just one year. In 1953, these thirteen plants to whom we loaned the six million dollars, employed ashore 3,178 people—some all the year; the rest throughout the fishing season. These 3,178 workers were paid in wages—$3,579,666.00 — 3½ million dollars. These thirteen plants, in addition to that, bought fish from 439 dragger fishermen; to whom they paid $1,253,738.00 or ¼ million dollars. All of this, as I said, was over and above the large quantities of blueberries, salmon, lobster and smelt which a number of these plants bought. In addition to those thirteen plants to whom we made loans or financial guarantees, other new fish plants will be brought into production this year or early next year—one or two will not get into production. These plants will be located at Grand Bank, Long Harbour, Trepassey, Holyrood, Bay de Verde, Greenspond, Change Islands, Joe Batts Arm and Twillingate. These loans will amount to well over a million dollars and these new plants are expected to employ 750 more plant workers who will receive at least another million dollars a year. These new plants will serve 1,200 inshore fishermen who will receive at least a million dollars a year. That is not all. This year, under the Fisheries Development Programme, there will be constructed new fish plants at Quirpon, LaScie, Seldom Come By, Valleyfield and Merasheen. These plants will employ 200 plant workers who will receive another $200,000 a year in wages. These new plants being devoted to salt fish products, will serve another 1,900 inshore fishermen who will receive ¼ million dollars for their fish. Recapitulating, that means 4,128 inshore workers were employed.

Here, the Government in casual debate mentions Government plans in effect and about to go into effect which will have the effect of giving employment to 4,128 workers, but there will be no great headlines on that. So we grow. So Newfoundland advances. Modern streamlined fishing plants—4,128 workers receiving in wages annually $4,775,666, and the inshore fishermen serving in these plants—6,000 in number, receiving for their fish at least $3,624,000; and dragger fishermen—500—receiving for their fish $1,436,000. Total people 10,128; total dollars $9,837,000.00. Is there any need to say that it has required, and will require, far more than our loans and financial guarantees to produce these very encouraging results? It is really the toil of the fishermen both inshore and deep sea and that of the shore workers—that has made these results possible. It is their toil and the progress and drive of the progressive fish firms that borrowed the money from us. Our loans and financial guarantees have been the lubricant, the cement, the generator that made the toil and skill bear fruit. But let it not be forgotten that in these past five years, quite apart from the vast amount of basic work we have done by way of experimental fishing, by way of exploratory fishing, by way of research and investigations, over and above all that—and that has run into many hundreds of thousands of dollars—over and above all that, but with very little being said, and little by the Opposition and that to condemn, quite above and apart from all that, this Government have laid out six millions and are about to lay out five millions more, all you might say within the first five years, producing or helping to produce the results I have named, yet this Government has done nothing for the fisheries.

Mr. Speaker, if we had a great brass plaque the height of Your Honour’s Chair, that beautiful chair that was presented to this House by one of our sister provinces in that great family of provinces, the great Province of Ontario, were placed on one of these walls and on it were carved the names of the fishing places in Newfoundland in which fishery development has taken place thanks to the support of this Government, it would make a role of honour: Quirpon, St. Anthony, Englee, LaScie, Nippers Harbour, Twillingate, Change Islands, Joe Batts Arm, Seldom Come By, Greenspond, Badgers Quay, Valleyfield, Bonavista, Dildo, Bay de Verde, Bay Roberts, Fermeuse, Trepasscy, Long Harbour, Merasheen, Burin, Grand Bank, Gaulois, Ramea, Fortune. No, I don’t think I can claim that until they get their draggers out, but for what we lent them then we can claim a little credit from Fortune.

I notice in the Chamber at this moment a gentleman who has just arrived from New York. That gentleman has been kind enough, that gentleman has instigated and launched it, but is kind enough to say he received his inspiration from his association with me. I disown that, I don’t deserve the credit. I will take the credit due me, every last ounce of it, but not the credit not due me.

Mr. Speaker, I must now turn away for a moment from the Honourable Leader of the Opposition and give a little attention to his new, can I say, supporter, dare I say, follower, I will compromise and say, colleague, because I frankly don’t know who is leader and who is follower, who follows and who leads. But that will straighten itself out, I have no doubt. My honourable friends opposite will sometime make up their minds as to who is leader and who is follower, The only thing is, I think, they will probably have to compromise in that matter and decide who is leader—I don’t think any of them is willing to be leader—

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the Premier would show a little discretion. This is highly provocative and highly unnecessary and it seems to be for the purpose of amusing the spectators.

MR. SMALLWOOD: My honourable friend is speaking of provocative remarks. Were I not a man of monumental patience some of the remarks emanating from the other side during this debate would be regarded as somewhat tending in the direction of provocation. I know actually my honourable and learned friend is purring inside at these references to the leadership of the party—well I will say no more—he loves it really—now we looked forward eagerly to his speech in this House. It seemed to most of us that he certainly missed the chance to be big and magnanimous. It seemed that he had waited a full five years for the chance to make that speech so that he could tell Smallwood what he thought of him, and all the cold hash of Confederation he raked over and over. With the opportunity to be big he talked about the Icelandic Boats. We had hoped that he would be constructive and forward looking, and he rehearsed the IBEC Report and other dull topics that had been worn threadbare by the Opposition for the past five years.

He told the House that I had appointed some of my friends to be members of the Board of Liquor Control. That is the way he put it: "The Premier appointed some of his friends to be members of the Board of Liquor Control." And he went on to make out this was just a waste of money. What was the good of it? What was wrong with the way the old Board of Liquor Control was run under the Commission of Government? Does not the honourable gentleman know the answer to that question? He was on the Bench and he ought to have known, he had lots of opportunity to know. Let me remind him, if he does not remember, let me refresh his memory as to what was wrong with it, with the way things were run under the old board and under the Commission of Government: Here is what was wrong—you did not have a place in the City of St. John's, not one, with no exception to that statement, where any civilized, decent, self-respecting human could go in for a bottle of beer or a glass of whisky or whatever he liked to drink, not one. The places you had were the worst dives, not of St. John's, not of Newfoundland, no not of Canada, but the worst dives of North America. They were the worst dives where the most dishonorable characters only went. And if a decent man wanted to have a drink disrepute might attach to him if he went in or were seen going in. He had to sneak in through the back door and out the same way. Wretched, dishonorable dives—everybody knows that. Am I inventing that? It is as well to say I invented dives. There they were, filthy, unfit for habitation, for human use. That is what we had under the system my honourable friend seems to admire so much. He does not appear to remember that because he asked what was wrong with the way the Board was run under the Commission of Government. That is what was wrong. We have cleaned up that mess, and today—oh I am not going to say it is perfect—far from it, we have our inspectors—

MR. BROWNE: You made another mess.

MR. SMALLWOOD: No. We have our inspectors, and they go about. If they catch them, but they don't always catch them, but when they do they close them up. There is no favouritism whatsoever shown. I hope in so far as my words may now reach the public of Newfoundland that the public will understand this: I would ask nothing better than that any member of the public would complain instantly to any member of the Government especially to me, drawing attention to any breach of the rules we have in force. We have these inspectors and these places today are decent, respectable, civilized, clean. Now of course there are two ways to look at this thing.

You can bring to it this approach: You can say, there is nothing unlawful about drinking beer, you don't break the law when you drink beer unless it is below certain averages. It is lawful to drink beer. The Legislature of Newfoundland has not passed any legislation making it unlawful to drink beer unless it is below a certain average. The Parliament of Canada has not enacted any legislation making it unlawful to drink beer. So that it is lawful, and if it is lawful to drink beer, and if it is lawful to make it, and if it is lawful to sell it, if these things are lawful and not unlawful, then surely it is common sense, just plain common sense to have the Government insist in its regulations on having the beer made under decent, clean conditions, of having been sold under decent, clean conditions, surely that is common sense.

Now, the other way to look at it is this—incidentally there is a third thing I might have said; that is, it is common sense for the Government to make all it can out of the sale of it—now the other way to look at it is this, to make it unlawful to make beer, to pass laws against it—thou shalt not make beer. To make laws against the sale of it—thou shalt not sell beer. To make laws against the consumption of it. Thou shalt not consume beer. We can do one or the other. We can make it lawful or unlawful. What we have done is to make it lawful, perfectly lawful. Now, I know that there is a certain school of thought which goes a little foggy, a little woolly, a little lacking in perspective, a little out of focus like a snapshot taken by a camera not in the right focus, foggy, a type of thinking that will say to you: "Well I know it is lawful, it is a pity, I know." But when you ask, "would you make it unlawful?" would answer: "Well no, you could not very well make it unlawful because if you made it a law you must not make, sell or consume liquor that law would be broken, it would be disregarded, so I suppose you cannot make it unlawful." But they hate to see it made lawful and somehow they see it dis-reputable, like to think the places where it is sold are dives, hate to see it become respectable. There is that viewpoint—I hate to see it become respectable—there are people who have that reaction. Now, that is not logical. They won't say, make it unlawful, have prohibition and at the expense of the Treasury enforce that law. Let us appoint half the people to watch the other half and more from another country to watch the half watching the first half—let us enforce that though the Heavens fall—outright and absolute prohibition. Very few people take that stand. So that the only other stand you can take is to make it lawful, and having made it lawful regulate it.

As I see it there are two possibilities, two policies for the liquor question—make it unlawful, do away with it, prohibition. In other words it is not allowed to be made, not allowed to be sold, not allowed to be consumed. The other policy is to throw it wide open, let anyone who wants to make it, when he wants to make it, where he wants to make it with no restrictions on him, no regulations on him. Let anyone who wants to sell it, where he wants to, when he wants to and at any price he wants to, under any conditions that please him, and let anyone who likes drink it, any age, any sex, under any conditions. Throw the whole thing wide open. That is the other solution. The Opposition has not told us which of these they favour. Do they favour shutting right down on it, having prohibition? They don't tell us. Do they favour throwing it wide open, the sky the limit? They don't tell us. Those are the two possibilities, either accept or reject them.

But our policy in this Government is to reject both these two extremes for there is one in the middle—allow it to be sold, allow it to be made, allow it to be consumed, but under regulated conditions, and we will make the regulations. We have done so. We are proud of that policy. When my honourable and learned friend exclaimed with horror, I asked myself, did he really express genuine indignation and shock? In my honourable friend's comments he referred to Mr. Al Vardy as having taken part in the last Federal General Election, and my honourable friend nods and agrees I was right in inferring that my honourable and learned friend did so with indignation and shock.

MR. BROWNE: An official of the House of Assembly.

MR. SMALLWOOD: At the moment he referred to Mr. Vardy, my honourable friend nods and agrees my inference was right when he say he was shocked and indignant by the fact that Mr. Vardy took part in the Federal Election. Well, I can understand the honourable gentleman's shock, I can understand his indignation, whether I agree or not I can understand his shock and indignation. Perhaps my honourable and learned friend will now a little more readily understand the shock that I felt and others with me felt when we saw a man step down off the Bench in the Courts of Justice, when we saw a man here in St. John's step down off the Bench in a Court of Justice, lay his gown temporarily aside in a great political campaign that was going on at the time, and actively and personally and aggressively campaign on that occasion. Perhaps now my honourable friend may appreciate, may have some little understanding of the shock some of us felt when that civil servant, a judge on the bench, stepped down off the bench, not having resigned, but still holding his position, with his gown flapping between his knees as he engaged aggressively and energetically in a campaign. Perhaps now, in his experience of last fall, he may appreciate just a little the shock of what we felt when we saw that judge do that very thing, and saw that judge describe Confederation as Communism, and said to many—

MR. BROWNE: To a point of order, Mr. Speaker. The honourable member is stating something that is not true. The only aggressive thing that I can be credited with having done in that campaign was—

MR. SPEAKER: The honourable gentleman is not now stating a point of order but debating with me.

MR. BROWNE: No, Mr. Speaker. I am telling you that what is said now is untrue. I did not compare that campaign with Communist.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, the honourable gentleman at least, I will be conservative (with a small "c")—on at least one hundred occasions the honourable gentleman said that Confederation was nothing but Communism; that it meant Communism would be taught in all our schools.

MR. BROWNE: The honourable gentleman is telling a deliberate falsehood when he says that. I never used that expression, not once.

MR. SPEAKER: Order. I was going to say these are allegations of facts and cannot be proven. The remarks may be true or untrue—will the honourable member please proceed.
MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, I must ask that the Premier withdraw that statement.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I will not. I will have a commission and prove my statement.

MR. BROWNE: The honourable gentleman gets up here and makes a slanderous speech about me—am I entitled to have him withdraw it? I say I never made such statements.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I say I can prove it—if the honourable gentleman wants a select committee to investigate it we can have that and bring the witnesses, who on oath will say he did.

MR. BROWNE: I don't care. You can bring all the witnesses in the world and they can't prove that I said it—I never said it.

MR. SPEAKER: Order—as I pointed out previously on another occasion; this is not a court to hear evidence for or against words which may or may not have been said. It is alleged that a certain honourable member said a certain thing, and the honourable member denies he said it. This House cannot entertain a charge, and can't very well hear evidence on the matter. If the honourable members are not inclined to give way on either side—

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, I ask for a ruling on a point of order. I have denied the allegation, and it is up to my honourable friend, who is so fond of tradition, to withdraw it. I have often heard him say that when a member denies something it must be accepted.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I fear my honourable friend is right. When he challenges me to uphold the rules and traditions of the House I must do so. I regret we have not the Committee to hammer it out.

MR. BROWNE: Hammer it out somewhere else. I am prepared any time.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Now, Mr. Speaker, I will refer to another incident: In the course of the campaign we had a very decent young man Gerald Healey who went on the radio for us, and advocated Confederation. He broadcast on VOCM one night a speech in favour of Confederation.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, to a point of order again: Is my honourable friend entitled to go over the whole Confederation campaign. He knows the position he is in. We have all finished speaking and can't answer, yet he brings up this long story about Confederation?

MR. SPEAKER: It is admitted the story of Confederation is again being brought up. However, I cannot deny the honourable members on my left the same privileges granted to honourable members on my right. I have not ruled Confederation out of order for any of the previous speakers.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, I have seen Your Honour listen with great patience.

MR. SPEAKER: If I may say so, with feelings other than pleasure.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Certainly with very great patience, Sir, you listened by the hour and by the day to speeches from that side of the House reviewing the whole Confederation issue; in great detail by my honourable friend now objecting to my mentioning one or two incidents from it. So Gerald Healey delivered a political speech in which he advocated Confederation. Now, Gerald Healey at that time was working in Argentia on the American Base. He came to St. John's and recorded his speech for the night and went back again so he would not miss work on the following morning. His speech was broadcast on VOCM. You can imagine, Sir, or can you, the fright of the mother of Gerald Healey as there came a knock at her door—

MR. BROWNE: Now, Mr. Speaker (the honourable gentleman may laugh) I rise to a point of order: What my honourable friend is going to say now is hearsay. It is not public knowledge.

MR. SMALLWOOD: May be you know?

MR. BROWNE: No, I don't know. But it is something not of his own knowledge, something that has come to him—is it in order, Mr. Speaker, for him to relate stories of this kind?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I can say; I was not the one who knocked. Any knowledge I had of it came from the lady in question, the mother of Gerald Healey. But I was not there.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, somebody has told him the story which he gives now as being correct, is he entitled to do that? I don't see how it concerns the business of this House.

MR. SPEAKER: Order. I have been asked to rule on what is almost a hypothetical case. I do not know what the honourable the member is about to say. I can only gather that some honourable members are of the opinion it will be objectionable, that it is hearsay. I can only say I can't make a firm ruling on something which has not yet happened.

MR. SMALLWOOD: After I tell it Your Honour will be able to rule on whether I could say it or not.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, I don't know if this is debatable, But in order to facilitate the debate I would refer you to Page 99 of Beauchesne. "It is doubly disorderly for any member in speaking to digress from the question before the House and to attack any other member."

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, on that point of order: Who says I am going to say anything derogatory, against any member. To say he was anti-confederate and took an active part in the campaign, is that derogatory?

MR. HIGGINS: No.

MR. SMALLWOOD: My honourable friend who is a good anti-confederate would never admit it was derogatory, so that I am not making an attack.

MR. SPEAKER: I think the honourable member who quoted from "Beauchesne" might go on further to where it says: "Provided that a member shall say nothing personally opprobrious to another member." But who, including Dr. Beauchesne, is to decide if a thing which has not been said, or is about to be said, can be personally opprobrious? Now I might say further—

MR. SMALLWOOD: I only got as far as a knock on the door.

MR. SPEAKER: I have another comment to make—I will try to be fair to both sides—in order to do that I would like to say—I tried to anticipate before the honourable member began to speak, and with that in view I had Hansard prepared in part of the speech of the honourable mem-
MR. SMALLWOOD: I will make a determined effort not to say anything to hurt the feelings of the Opposition. Merely accusing him of being an anti-confederate who campaigned energetically against Confederation will not hurt his feelings in the least.

MR. BROWNE: The honourable gentleman remarked that I campaigned “energetically” against Confederation. I deny that I campaigned energetically.

MR. SMALLWOOD: We might look up the dictionary, look up the word “energetically.” There was an energetic knock at Mrs. Healey’s door. Mrs. Healey went to the door and you can imagine her fright to see a Judge on the Bench. He did not have his gown on, but she recognized him as a Judge on the Bench. He came in and said “Is it not terrible about poor Gerald?” He said “I suppose it is too late to do anything. I suppose he is gone.”

MR. BROWNE: Let me tell the honourable gentleman that I never used words like that. I would not be able to speak like that.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I am quoting the words, not the tone.

MR. BROWNE: He can quote my words, but not my tone.

MR. SPEAKER: If the honourable member who objected says he did not use those words, then the House must take his word.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Speaking of tone, I remember the night—was it the same night? If it was not that night, it was the day he resigned from the Bench. He spoke at a political meeting in the C.L.B. Armoury and his Speech was broadcast on the radio and I listened in to it. Now, when we recall the circumstances leading up to that speech in the C.L.B. Armoury, we can, of course, make allowances for the fact that a gentleman who has just resigned his seat on the Bench under the impression—the mistaken impression—he was entirely mistaken as he ever was or ever will be—I had no more intention of removing the honourable gentleman or causing it as I had of flying—however, it is immaterial.

MR. BROWNE: It is very material.

MR. SMALLWOOD: He was under the impression that I had virtually pulled him off the Bench.

MR. BROWNE: You said so.

MR. SMALLWOOD: After the campaign started. Under that impression, my honourable friend delivered a Speech. It was quite a speech.

MR. BROWNE: You did not hear it all.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It must have been very good, because what I heard suggested nothing so much as someone in the Old Testament commanding Providence to hurl one of His thunderbolts at that man Smallwood. I could picture him with his hand up commanding that a thunderbolt be thrown at this animal, this beast...
Smallwood. The honourable member, the Minister of Finance, has particular reason to remember that. He remembers an encounter he had with him on the highroad in his District. The Minister of Provincial Affairs has an acute and vivid recollection of the same occasion. Talking of partisanship, talking of Civil Servants, established Civil Servants, high-ranking Civil Servants—

MR. BROWNE: I was not an established Civil Servant. I was not a pensionable Civil Servant.

MR. SMALLWOOD: He was an established Civil Servant. If he had remained on the Bench, he would have been pensionable, in accordance with the Pensions Act.

MR. BROWNE: I was not an established Civil Servant. I was President of the Civil Service Association because I was not recognized as a Civil Servant. I might say this: I was fifteen years working for the Government. I organized the Civil Service. I was the only person who never got one cent increase in salary while on the Bench.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I thank you for reminding me you were President of the Civil Service Association. Not only were you on the Bench; not only were you a Civil Servant; but you were President of the Association of Civil Servants. Talking of taking an aggressive part! A man who just went to his waist in politics; a man who took action against the Government of Newfoundland and the Governor of Newfoundland!

MR. BROWNE: Did I have the right to take action in the Civil Courts of Newfoundland?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No. A judge has no business in partisanship of that type. Let me quote the opinion of Viscount Simon, perhaps the greatest Lawyer of the last quarter century: Now if I may be permitted to quote that in other word, a Judge on the Bench, flings his gown to one side and wades to his waist in politics. He comes down off the Bench and he wonders why we lost faith in him. How could any Confederate go before him and look for justice? How could he?

MR. BROWNE: I wish the Premier would not get completely out of his mind. Surely he cannot accuse me of injustice.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The gentleman showed undying hatred for Confederation. A man who leaves the Bench and sue the Government in the Supreme Court—

MR. BROWNE: It is a serious accusation.

MR. SPEAKER: The honourable member has no right to say that no one could expect justice from the honourable gentleman.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I said no Confederate could expect justice.

MR. SPEAKER: The expression is unparliamentary. It must not be used.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Remember this; when I say, "So help me God, I believe in Confederation," I do sincerely believe in it. And the honourable gentleman had just as much right to disbelieve sincerely in it; but as a Judge, he did not have as much right to argue against it and campaign against it.

MR. BROWNE: I did not campaign against it. Can he produce evidence to show I campaigned against it?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I cannot produce it at the moment. I will withdraw that, to be in conformity with parliamentary procedure. I have, in any case said enough to show that my honourable friend—even if he did nothing; if the only occasion on which he expressed himself was the one on which he sued the Governor and the Government—if that was the only occasion, it was an example of partisanship which was shocking when it came from a Judge on the Bench.

MR. BROWNE: I wonder if he would return to the question of Mr. Vardy's campaigning.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I believe I interrupted the gentleman on the other side; the effect of which is usually to prolong the Speech of the man who is speaking and sometimes arouses hard feelings in the House. Perhaps there is nothing wrong with that—with hard feelings being aroused. I do not want a “hang-er-down” session, but I do hope we see things livened up. It was one of the secret hopes that the member for St. John's West would liven things up by his cultured and cool way of livening up things and would teach his colleagues to do likewise, and I know they must be grateful for having him with them, knowing all the rules, knowing the way they do things in Ottawa—how delighted and grateful they must be, especially the Leader. The Leader was beginning to feel secure, and I wonder if he feels that this new member with greater knowledge and background would constitute a danger to his leadership? Let me assure my friend that he has very little to fear from his colleague. I predict, unless, I miss my guess, that the honourable and learned gentleman, having tasted the greatness of the House of Commons, will never be content until he returns there. As a matter of fact, I, having read every word he uttered in the House of Commons—

MR. BROWNE: You heard most of them.

MR. SMALLWOOD: From that I would say, the honourable and learned gentleman must have been an exceedingly unhappy man because at heart he is a Liberal. At heart he believes in the Co-operative movement just as much as the Minister for Co-operatives. He believes in Public Housing just as much as any of us. He believes in Public Welfare. He believes in Public Relations just as much as the Minister of Labour. He believes in all these things, yet due to the unfortunate circumstances of his having been an anti-Confederate, he prefers to nurse this anti-Confederate hatred. He prefers his hatred of Confederation to anything else. He is a man of fine intellect. He is a student. He is a worker.

MR. BROWNE: You say so many contradictory things, it is hard to believe you.

MR. SMALLWOOD: My learned friend has never begun to understand me. The only thing he sees in me is a couple of horns of a demon. I am afraid to turn around, he will see the tail. He thinks if I am not the devil, then I am one of the devil's imps. What else could I have been to advocate Confederation, which he regards as sin personified, sin incarnate?

MR. BROWNE: Where does he get the impression I regard it as “sin incarnate; sin personified”?
MR. SMALLWOOD: I am charmed and delighted to know he has had a change of heart and so it goes once again to prove that “While the light holds out to burn; the vilest sinner may return.”

HON. L. R. CURTIS (Attorney General): Yesterday, Mr. Speaker, we were on the second reading of item No. 10—A Bill, “An Act Further to Amend the Education Act.”

MR. SPEAKER: The adjournment of the debate on second reading of Bill, “An Act Further to Amend the Education Act” was requested by the Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, I have no great objection to the principle involved here except in so far as it is the intention of the Act to remove from the Act the names which were given to the various scholarships which were known before some of the honourable members were born. You will note, Sir, in Section 28 of the said Act is given amounts paid by the Minister of Education out of moneys voted for the Department of Education. Those scholarships, Senior Jubilee, University Scholarships and the King George V, and such others as may from time to time be payable. Now, these are paid out by the Minister, and now in the amended section these names are taken out of the Act. I am only looking at it from a historical point of view. After twenty or twenty-five years, people will have forgotten these scholarships first established to make historic events. The Senior Jubilee, we know, was set up many years ago, and that would also apply to many of the others. Now, you are taking these names from out of the Act. I think it is quite possible to carry out the same principle and still leave these historic names in there.

There is another point. The authority to pay the money is taken out of the hands of the Minister and given to the Lieutenant Governor in Council. The same thing applies where it is stated, “The Minister can no longer make regulations.” Now, that puts the regulations in the hands of the Lieutenant Governor in Council, I don’t know why that is done. Probably the Minister when he gets up to reply will be able to answer that. But my main objection to the Bill is the fact that we are dropping out these names. My honourable friend here, with all his reputation he has found in recent times, was himself the winner of the Jubilee Scholarship.

MR. SMALLWOOD: You too?

MR. HOLLETT: No, I was not, unfortunately. Perhaps I would have gone further if I had been. I might not be here then, at any rate I did not win it. But, Mr. Speaker, the point I am getting at is this—I do believe the honourable minister could possibly arrange to leave these names there in the Act, and not have them taken out, for the sake of posterity, if nothing else for the record.

HON. J. R. CHALKER (Minister of Education): Mr. Speaker, if no other honourable gentleman wishes to speak to the principle I will close the debate.

Mr. Speaker, this legislation is found necessary by the Government in as much as there has been so many changes in scholarships in the last five years, in as much as amounts awarded. And as the amounts awarded have to be legislated for in this House we thought it advisable to have that legislation changed so that the amounts and the scholarships themselves can be awarded by the Lieutenant Governor in Council. The reasons for the change are, Sir, that the real concern of the department is that the cost of living, or the cost of board and everything else which could be maintained ten years ago for two hundred dollars now require $350 or $400. This year the Senior Jubilee University Scholarship has been increased from one thousand to fifteen hundred dollars. That has been done on the request of people receiving it. We have had some scholarship winners turn down the scholarships because the amounts awarded were not sufficient for them to come in here to St. John's to attend the University. Now, that may go up again, and probably may happen in September when the House is closed, and I may probably have to go to the Cabinet and ask for that to be upped.

MR. BROWNE: Is there any intention of making any change in the number of scholarships?

MR. CHALKER: None whatsoever.

Bill read a second time, ordered referred to Committee of the Whole on tomorrow.

Second reading of Bill, "An Act Further to Amend the Mothers' Allowance Act."

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, that is the Bill which I referred to the other day when I said this seemed to be the sort of Bill which should be introduced by way of regulations as it involves a further charge upon the revenue. The Bill, as I have read it, increases the age from 16 years to 17 years and from 17 years to 20 years in certain cases, and will certainly involve an increased expenditure.

MR. SPEAKER: The honourable member did give notice of his intention to make that objection to the second reading of this Bill. He has, however advanced no argument to show his reason for suggesting that the Bill ought not to be considered other than on resolutions.

MR. BROWNE: No, Mr. Speaker, I am raising I suppose a question of privilege of the House to consider a Bill of this kind first of all in the resolution stage in committee, and recommend it to the Chair afterwards. Also there is supposed to be a request from the Crown for such expenditure. I think these are well-known principles which have been carried out.

MR. SPEAKER: To answer the question properly would require some time. Let me, as briefly as I can, state the position for the benefit of certain other honourable members who might have doubts about it.

Over the past thirty years it has been the custom in the House of Commons of Canada to rule out of order all motions which purport to give the Government orders or authority to do a thing which could not be done without the expenditure of money. That practice has grown directly out of Section 54 of the British North American Act which clearly lays down what it shall be legal for the House of Commons to do with regard to public funds. But on the other hand the Canadian Journals also make it clear that, as stated in “Beauchesne” Paragraph 449, "a Bill which does not involve a direct expenditure but merely confers upon the Government, a power for the exercise of which money will have to be voted at some future date by the Parliament is not a money Bill." That seems to me exactly to describe this Bill, for here the parent Act empowers the Government of Newfoundland to do a certain thing through one of its departments which obviously cannot be done without the expenditure of money, and the money necessary for the implementation of the parent Act is voted by this House on resolutions brought in from His Honour the Lieutenant Governor. This Bill we have before us now merely seeks to enlarge the scope of the parent Act, and it is impossible to say if the passing of this Bill will cause a greater expenditure of money under the parent Act or a lesser amount. Therefore, we do not know if we are going to spend more money or less money. Even if the Minister could tell us the exact amount to be spent we still would not be justified in considering it a money Bill.

"Beauchesne" paragraph 450 says: "A Bill which is designed to furnish machinery for the spending of certain sums of public money to be voted subsequently may be introduced in the House without the recommendation of the Crown and without a resolution being first considered in Committee."

I could go on and show the difference between the House of Commons of Canada and a provincial legislature, but I shall only refer honourable members to Section 91 and 92 of the British North America Act which clearly defines the legislative powers of both "parliaments." (I use the word loosely there).

There is one other thing I must mention. That is under Term 14 of the Terms of Union of Newfoundland with Canada, the constitution of Newfoundland as touching the Legislative Assembly of Newfoundland is not changed only in so far as the Legislative Council is concerned. Apropos of that, this House may re-establish the Legislative Council or establish a new one. Therefore since the constitution of Newfoundland touching this House is still in existence, the customs, rules and usages of the old Newfoundland Parliament, for it sat as a Dominion Parliament prior to Confederation, are also still in existence. That must be taken into account when reading Standing Order No. 1 of our rules which state: "The powers of a full fledged Parliament are not applicable in toto to a Legislative Assembly, neither are the customs and usages of the Parliament of Newfoundland easily applied in their entirety to this Provincial House." But we may carry on such of these customs, usages and rules of the Newfoundland Parliament as we see fit. A Committee sat on these rules and regulations in 1949 and we did agree that we may draw our procedure from the three sources, and that we may set up rules of our own. I could name the members of the original committee, one sits on my right at the moment, another was the then Leader of the Opposition, Mr. John Gilbert Higgins, K.C. We felt that these rules, customs and usages might quite properly be employed in this House.
The report was discussed at the table in Committee of the Whole and adopted by the House. Therefore the rules, customs and usages of the Parliament of Newfoundland may, must and is to be used here. I may quote precedents—and hope I am not tiring the House. In May, 1925, two Bills were brought in here, read a first time, read a second time and referred to Committee of the Whole and passed without any resolutions, although they demanded an expenditure of public money. Two Bills were brought in in July, 1925. The honourable member then sat in the House but cannot, of course, be expected to remember the incident now. There are many such precedents.

MR. BROWNE: Perhaps if you gave me the name of the Bills.

MR. SPEAKER: Yes. "An Act Respecting Certain Retirement Allowances in which sums exceeding $20,000 were noted to be spent on retirement allowances for certain people."

Another was "An Old Age Pensions Act" whereby the pensions of a male pensioner, after his death, would be paid to his widow. These moneys come from the public purse, but the Bills were not brought in on resolutions.

Therefore I rule such Bills as these, and mind you I rule because the House has given me authority to do so, are not properly regarded as money Bills and need not be brought in on resolutions.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I can only say "A Daniel come to Judgment."

MR. SPEAKER: I have tried to make this question clear because there are many new members here since the time of that Committee.

MR. CURTIS: I would like to say, Mr. Speaker, I am not questioning your ruling. But I have here the 1924 Journal of the Assembly which refers to the first entry of my honourable friend into this House. That journal seemingly abounds with cases where Bills of that nature were introduced without such a committee. For instance on page 28 here on July 10, the Minister of Justice asked leave to introduce a Bill to Amend the War Pensions Act. If you follow it through you will see that on the next day this Bill was introduced, read a first time etc., and so went right through all stages. There are several other Bills, Mr. Speaker, in this very journal of the year when my honourable and learned friend came into this House.

MR. BROWNE: That would depend upon the provisions of the Bill. It could be the War Pensions Act—the Minister for Dominion Affairs might have introduced a Bill by way of resolutions first to amend the War Pensions Act.

MR. SPEAKER: For the purpose of clarification, honourable members must bear in mind the difference between a Parliament and a Legislative Assembly. I might give one other illustration. In 1936, motion was made in Ottawa to pay pensions to people over a certain given age, and was disallowed because it involved expenditure of public moneys.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Introduced but not by the Government.

MR. SPEAKER: Yes, not by the Government. The reason why it was ruled out without resolutions is because Parliament just cannot do that. But we hold here we can introduce such Bills as this without resolutions because you cannot have any money to spend until the Minister of Finance brings in the resolutions for the Crown, and we are following well-established custom in that.

Does the honourable minister wish to move the second reading of this Bill?

DR. POTTLE: I move the second reading be deferred, Mr. Speaker.

On motion second reading deferred.

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Speaker, I move all remaining orders be deferred.

Carried.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, in moving the adjournment of the House until tomorrow, Friday, at 3:00 of the clock, I should like to say for the information of my honourable friends on the Opposition, that we are hoping tomorrow when we adjourn, to adjourn for Holy Week, and to re-assemble on Tuesday, April 20th, i.e. all next week and Easter Monday, and meet here on Tuesday, April 20th. That will give us all on next week and the following Monday away from the House. I hope that will be satisfactory.

On motion the House at its rising adjourned until tomorrow, Friday, April 9, at 3:00 of the clock.

FRIDAY, April 9, 1954.

The House met at three of the clock in the afternoon, pursuant to adjournment.

Presenting Reports of Standing and Select Committees

HON. C. H. BALLAM (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, a few days ago I tabled a report in which I mentioned there was an error. I now have the correct copies and ask leave to table them.

Notice of Question

(55) MR. FOGWILL—To ask the Honourable the Premier to lay on the Table of the House the following information:

What is the number of trips made by the Premier since April 1st, 1952?

When were these trips made and how long did they last? Give the names of the places visited, the purpose for which each such trip was undertaken, and the cost of each trip.

(56) MR. HOLLETT—To ask the Honourable the Minister of Supply to lay on the Table of the House the following information:

1. In connection with the supply of eggs to the several institutions account for the difference in prices charged by Wilsils Ltd. of 63 cents and by the Two Way Stores of 70 cents.

2. With regard to the accepted tender price of Chalker & Co. for 80 cents per pound for boiled ham supplied to the General Hospital and the Sanatorium, why was this price later raised to $1.01 per pound? Why was the accepted offer of 64 cents per pound for raw ham raised by Chalker & Co. to 81 cents, and why was the price of bacon raised from 53 cents up to 75 cents? Were further tenders called for before allowing these increases?

3. What arrangement has been set up by the Department with Messrs. Goodyear and House with regard to the supply of commodities listed in Question 28, to the West Coast Sanatorium? What prices were charged for these commodities?
4. Explain the cause for a difference in price of 8 cents per gallon for milk supplied to the Home for Aged and Infirm and the Mental Hospital.

(57) MR. BROWNE—To ask the Honourable the Minister of Economic Development to lay on the table of the House the following information:

1. How many paid officials are or have been employed by Nalco during the past fiscal year? Give their names, dates of employment and the salaries they receive or received at the yearly rate. Where is the Head Office of Nalco at the present time?

2. What officials supervised the value of plant and machinery imported for the equipment of the new industrial premises whose construction was undertaken by the Government? Give the cost of construction and the value of machinery and equipment for each plant.

Answers to Questions

Question No. 54:

HON. J. R. SMALLWOOD (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the answer to No. 1 is, yes. The answer to No. 2 is, no. The answer to No. 3 is that the question would be much more properly directed to the company concerned. The answer to No. 4 is, no. The answer to No. 5 is that the directors are Mr. Chester Dawe, and R. C. B. Mercer, apart from the Government. The answer to No. 6 is, no. The answer to No. 7 is that that is a question which would much more properly be directed to the company concerned.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if I could ask the Premier a supplementary question? I believe he is the present representative of the Government on the board of directors. If so, is he not in a position to say what salary is paid to the managing director?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Of course I am in a position to say anything with regard to any of the private business of the company insofar as knowing the facts is concerned. But I do not choose to do so for the reason that I stated in my remarks here yesterday as to the private details of the business concerns of a private company.

MR. BROWNE: May I ask one more question? Does the Premier think that a company is a private company that receives from the Government over two million dollars to run its affairs?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes. If it received over two hundred million dollars it might still be a private company. Why not direct the question to them?

MR. BROWNE: How much did the others put into it?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I am not giving any private information about a private company, for the reasons which I have explained at some length in this House.

Question No. 50—Answer stand.
Question No. 51:

HON. G. J. POWER (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to table the answer to that question.

Obligations fulfilled. The interest free advance includes an amount of $741,263.28 which was the balance remaining payable to the City of St. John's of an interest free advance made by the City to the Corporation. The Province has acquired from the City the Corporation's indebtedness on this account.

Obligations fulfilled.

This Assoc., at the beginning of 1953, owed $4,774.00 in interest. Besides paying interest of $5,500 due on 1953 account, arrears of interest were reduced to $1,000. Principal repayments due in 1953 were not made.

Payments in 1953 exceeded yearly capital obligations by $261.00. At this rate the Assoc. will meet its obligations.

Capital repayment in 1953 less than obligation by $625. It is fully expected that larger capital repayments, in later years when annual interest charges are lower, will enable the Assoc. to discharge its obligations within the loan term period.

Orders of the Day

Adjourned Debate on the Address in Reply:

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, if you go back a hundred years or so in the history of this Island you will find a tremendous difference of things, particularly in the social and economic conditions of the people. Now, I say a hundred years or so for the purpose I have in mind at the moment. It would be difficult to pick on an exact number of years or to pick on an exact year in our history, therefore, as it is desirable for the purpose of this argument to be a little arbitrary I would pick the year 1825, which is actually a bit more than one hundred years or one and a quarter centuries ago. Around that year, with some leeway now before and after the year in question, if you travelled to every settlement in Trinity Bay it would number very small. There were only ten or twelve places in all of Trinity Bay; Grate's Cove, Old Perlcan, Hant's Harbour, Winterton, Heart's Content, New Harbour, Old Bonaventure, Trinity, Catalina, Elliston—ten, or call it twelve because I have probably left out one or two places. There were then only ten or twelve places in all of Trinity Bay around one hundred years ago. If you move around the Cape, going north into Bonavista Bay, the great Bonavista Bay, you will find that around that time the settlements of Bonavista itself, King's Cove, Keels, Salvage, Greenspond and Wesleyville, six settlements, or call it eight, because no doubt I have forgotten the names of one or two. Then in that vast Notre Dame Bay you would have found Fogo, Change Islands, Twillingate, Exploits, Nipper's Harbour, Indian Burying Place, six or call it eight settlements in that vast bay known as Notre Dame Bay, i.e. all the way from Cape Freels to Cape St. John. Then as you moved around Cape St. John, going north you ran into a stretch of coast which was rather more numerously populated, at least from the standpoint of the number of settlements. You would have found LaScie and Pacquet, Conche and St. Julians, St. Anthony, ten or twelve settlements, or I think it would probably be more realistic to call it fourteen because the French Shore was frequented quite considerably by the French fishing interests. Now taking the outside figures: Trinity Bay 12; Bonavista Bay 8; Notre Dame Bay 8; White Bay 12, you get a grand total of 40 settlements on the North East Coast leaving out Conception Bay, the St. John's Shore and the Southern Shore to Ferryland. There were from Baccalieu Tickle to the Straits of Belle Isle, there were forty places a hundred odd years ago. So it was also two hundred years ago and three hundred years ago and four hundred years ago. For over three hundred years the number of places where people lived on the North East Coast was practically static, scarcely changed. Now, if you went back to the very beginning of our history you would find that the people first came to the headlands, the great headlands that separated the bays, the Baccalieu Tickle Headland, the Cape Bonavista Headland etc. You could, without much difficulty, trace the movements of the people from those settlements on the headlands northward and southward of them. Now, I do not desire to draw that too tightly because what I have not said is not one hundred per cent accurate because in addition to settlements going on headlands they also settled in places such as Heart's Content and up the bay and they settled at Old Perlican and Hants Harbour and New Harbour around the same time that they settled at Carbonear and Harbour Grace in Conception Bay. But speaking generally, I think, it is fair to say that they settled first on the headlands and they got as near as they could get to the salt water, as near as they could to the occupation that brought them to Newfoundland, fishing for cod. Then as men settled and married and had children, and they had large families in those days, twelve, fourteen, eighteen and twenty children per family, some of whom survived and a good many of them died under the conditions of those times.

Then the fishing grounds began to be a bit crowded, and the foreshore, the landwash, the places from which they operated and on which they landed their fish, putting it away, dressing it, drying it, became overcrowded, also on the land the tendency was for overcrowding to occur, so that there was a tremendous force at work to drive people away to that empty cove up the shore a mile or two or five or eight, where a man could take the whole of the foreshore if he wanted to occupy it, an entire cove all to himself. So people spread out further and further and they over spread the shores of all these bays. It began roughly a hundred years ago. For three hundred years there was virtually no change. Then, early in the last century, a great new movement, a great new internal migration of our population began to take place. I think it was propelled and impelled to a very large extent by the sudden new growth of the seal hunt which is a thing of relatively recent origin in Newfoundland. It, of course, was caused by a combination of factors all working suddenly together for the first time to produce that result. The result was that where a hundred odd years ago there were forty places where people lived from Baccalieu Tickle to the Straits of Belle Isle, that vast coast, today there are five hundred places, all in about a century. I have been in virtually every one personally. I have been in literally dozens of places in Trinity Bay, Bonavista Bay, Notre Dame Bay and White Bay. I talked either with the first man that ever set foot there to live or his son or his grandson. I have done that in literally dozens of settlements along our North East Coast. I remember for example a place called Bellville (I am just speaking now of one out of many Bellvilles) I remember the whole population of Bellville joining in to help me determine exactly what year it was in which the settlement was founded. The whole population turned to and helped me. We got aboard a boat and rowed across the harbour to the oldest house in the place, occupied by two old brothers, one over eighty and the other well over seventy. I went into the kitchen. The whole population went in with me, as was the custom. Every man's house was open to everyone in the harbour. We sat down for an hour on the chairs and on the floor, because there were too many people to seat. Then we worked out how old the settlement was.

"How old are you, sir?"
"Eighty-three on my next birthday."
"When will that be?"
"Such a date."
"Were you born here?"
"Yes, right here on this point."
"In this house?"
"No, sir, this house was built when I was ten years old.

"Where is the house you were born in?"

"It was torn down."

"Who built the house you were born in?"

"My father built it."

"When did he build it?"

"As soon as he landed here."

"Where did he come from?"

He told me it was some arm or another, I just forget where he said.

"Were you the first child?"

"I was the first child."

"Did he bring his wife here with him?"

"No. He came here and went off a year after to get his wife and brought her back."

"And you were born here?"

"Yes."

"About two years then after he first came here?"

"Yes."

"You were born 83 years ago. So that makes it 85 years since he first came here?"

"Yes."

That is ten years ago, which makes it ninety-five years ago. So that Bellville is roughly 95 years old. I have traced the history of dozens of such places in the same way. It is a strange fact that you can go into four hundred places on the North East Coast and find now living the first settler or his son or grandson, in over four hundred of our five hundred settlements along that French Coast.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I hope the House can visualize, a good many here have enough knowledge of that coast to be able to visualize three long, sleepy centuries with virtually nothing happening, sleepy settlements where people lived simple and primitive lives and nothing much ever happened. Then for a variety of reasons, all of a sudden, in twenty or thirty years, four hundred and more brand new settlements sprang up throughout these Bays, where these people previously had nothing to do on earth beyond catching codfish, eating, sleeping, going to Church when and if there was a Church; going to school, if, as and when there was a school. An extremely simple and primitive life—a terribly easy way to live, because the demands the people made of life were extremely simple in those days.

I knew a fisherman—Bill Hicks—in the Town of Bonavista. I knew him well. I was often in his home. He was in my home. He never wore a collar in his life, just a blue guernsey. The day he got married in the Methodist Church in Bonavista, his chums made up a trick—they were going to put a collar on Bill and that was that. They put the collar on him—he was sweating under the collar—it was like putting handcuffs on him. But when he got to the door, he ripped off the collar and so he was married that way. For most of his life he wore canvas pants made of sail cloth, a canvas jacket and a blue guernsey. Any Newfoundlander who has not heard Bill Hicks' "Marshes of Bonavista" has not lived. God rest his soul! He was a great man.

Up to the outbreak of the first world war, the people of these five hundred places, and I might say, some hundreds of other places in Newfoundland as well—but, I am addressing myself for the moment to the North East Coast; the people in these five hundred places, up to the outbreak of the first world war, lived on hard tack, laggies, codfish and herring, which was good eating; still is good eating, and molasses—I am old enough to remember the great reform brought into Newfoundland by Sir E. Morris when he took the duty off sugar and for the first time in Newfoundland history, fishermen began to put sugar in their tea. Even now, you find old fishermen who do not like sugar—he prefers "lassie" tea to sugar. The food was very simple, very crude and very primitive. I would think that there was lots of it, for the most part, except in a time when there was some catastrophe of nature, such as the year when the North East Coast was frozen in up to the middle of the summer; such as the year when some terrible failure in fisheries stripped them of the meagre food they were used to; when some disaster of nature made it impossible to get food down there.

MR. JACKMAN: Are we the only ones who went through these hard times? I think that applied to Canada and the United States as well.

MR. SMALLWOOD: He thinks I am attacking Newfoundland. I am merely describing how our ancestors lived.

MR. JACKMAN: You are going a nice way about it.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I can give blood-curdling details as well, but it is not my purpose to defame Newfoundland or Newfoundlanders.

The clothing they wore was extremely simple and quite cheap. Throughout their entire lives, a man, as a rule, had one suit of clothes. He saved up to get that and get married in. He wore it a bit sparingly, going to Church or to Mass on Sunday. He was buried in it and when the various fraternal societies sprang up in 1860 and 1870, he would wear it on the Annual Parade. One suit of clothes throughout his entire life! I am old enough to remember these suits. They were something like the modern zoot suits at the ankles. Down to the outbreak of the first world war, life amongst the fishermen was exceedingly simple and somewhat primitive. Their occupation was exclusively the catching of salt cod; some worked in the woods, some for the A.N. D., a few in Corner Brook; some in Bell Island, taking iron ore out of the ground. Occasionally men went in the woods and cut saw logs. Except for these things, up to the outbreak of the first world war, the main occupation was the catching of cod. They lived simply. If they earned very little, they needed very little. They were fairly happy; reasonably content; the world had passed them by. They were in the backwoods of North America. There was no radio. They never saw a newspaper. A vast number could not read one, if they saw one. Life was exceedingly simple; things were quite cheap. A man wanted but little here below. That was Newfoundland — that was the North East Coast up to the outbreak of the first world war. Now what has happened since then? Part of the Newfoundland Revolution to which I have alluded many times in this House. My honourable and learned friend from St. John's West need not start shivering, I am not alluding to turmoil or friction; I am referring to a sociological and economic revolution, dating from the time of the outbreak of the first world war. From that day, the history of Newfoundland—especially the history of that Coast is a history of increasing discontent with what they had.

MR. BROWNE: You left out Pilley's Island and Beck's Cove and the building of the railway.
MR. SMALLWOOD: I developed that theme in the National Convention, in which Green Bay mines and the building of the railway played a part. That is quite true.

Now, if you were able to live on thirty quintals of codfish a year; the price you got for thirty quintals; the way you lived and the way you were satisfied to live up to the outbreak of the first world war, there has not been a moment since when you were willing to live on the proceeds of thirty quintals of codfish—there has not been a moment since then. The time has gone when a man in Newfoundland can rear a family, give their families the things they demand, in this day and age when there are so many nice things to buy—dresses, silk stockings, shoes, lovely hats, radios, and so on. No longer can it be said "Man wants but little here below." Now, he wants many things. And so the proceeds of thirty quintals of fish will no longer support a family along the North East Coast as it did in the old days now almost beyond recall. So, I suggest to the House that what confronts this House and this Government now is this: either something shall be done, something will be done, to enable people to live according to the standard that they have now been educated or propagandized to want, or they will inevitably and inexorably reverse the process that went on for four hundred years, ending with the outbreak of the first world war. I do not believe it. I cannot believe it. They are going to have decent living or they are going to get out. We are going to lose them. Newfoundland is going to lose them. That is the situation.

Now, another thing, going alongside with this development—here in the City of St. John's the vast majority of four thousand Federal Civil Servants live and work; the vast majority of the 3,400 Provincial Civil Servants live and work; the vast majority of the 4,000 railway men live and work—over half of them—2,000 roughly—

MR. FOGWILL: 3,500.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Here in St. John's are 3,000 Shop and Office workers and with them, teamsters, packers and labourers associated, not only with serving the public who live in St. John's, in a retail way, but serving tens of thousands outside, in a wholesale way. Bell Island, a couple of gunshots away has vast industrial activity, with a population there now, I believe, of between eleven and twelve thousand people. And thanks to my honourable friend here, they earn about ten million dollars a year—over $800,000 a month.

Again you have a Town that did not exist ten or fifteen years ago, with a population of 6,000 souls—all well paid, relatively speaking, some of them exceptionally well paid at Gander.

At Grand Falls you have a Town equivalent of two such towns as the Grand Falls of twenty-five years ago. Grand Falls of today is nearly twice as big as it was then.
At Buchans you have a Town of four thousand or so souls, with the Company employing one thousand people.

When I spoke of Grand Falls, I included all other Towns lying around it—Botwood, Windsor, Bishop’s Falls, Norris Arm, Lewisporte, Millertown and Badger.

At Corner Brook which includes many places, you have a vast industrial empire with relatively highly paid people.

Then at Stephenville you have an entirely new Town that has sprung up since the war began, with a population of four or five thousand people.

At Argentia you have a great new Town there.

Now, Mr. Speaker, here is what you have, side by side, going on almost simultaneously, hand in hand; this vast North East Coast, the home of the greater part of our basic industry, the codfishery, going steadily down grade; and on the other hand the upsurging and the birth of entirely new areas of hard cash market. And with what result? With this result: That the great firms of Water Street—some of them great and historic—the great firms of Water Street have been devoting the greater part of their energy, time and enthusiasm—by far the greater part of it, not to carrying on the great fisheries of Newfoundland, not to improving these fisheries, but rather to catering to these great new cash markets that have been brought into existence. Now, nobody can blame them for that. I am not blaming or praising them. I am trying merely to describe what I have seen. Nobody would be silly enough to blame the merchants for going after cash trade; if they do not do it, somebody else will.

The refrigerators, washing machines, the radios and other conveniences are all symbols of the new prosperity of Newfoundland. But you have only so much energy; you have only so much ability; you have only so much time and if the greater part of that is used up in this competitive business of selling waffle irons and tinned goods, you have no time for anything else. If I were a Water Street merchant and I were buying tinned goods—tinned beans, spaghetti, meat balls and other canned goods produced by firms in Canada—Ontario, Quebec, Nova Scotia and elsewhere—I would know this; that I would get a much better price in buying these goods if I could buy a railway carload at a time than if I were buying only a few cases. I would get a better price and would therefore make more profit. Everyone in the world knows that. By the same token, if I could buy half a dozen carloads, each tin would be one-eighth or one-quarter cent less. I would get every tin so much cheaper if I could buy six carloads. If I could buy one hundred and fifty carloads a year of tinned beans and all the other things that come in by the trainload and shipload, I would get it cheaper and make more profit. All right. So what do I do if I were a Water Street merchant? I would advertise in the Telegram and Daily News; I would advertise on C.B.N., C.J.O.N. and V.O.C.M. and all radio stations and I would engage a smart salesman and I would go out and grab my share of this cash trade in St. John’s, Argentia, Gander, Grand Falls, Buchans, Humber Area, Grand Bank, Fortune, Burin, St. Lawrence, Bell Island and wherever there is a bit of hard cash. I would be out grabbing my share. Then having got all I could get out of it, I would say; “Now what about these fishermen. God knows they... have not much but they have got something. If between them all, they would take say two hundred car loads for the year between the whole lot of them, and I can get twenty or forty carloads of tin beans and the rest to sell to the fishermen, then I will get my two hundred carloads for the year between the lot of them, and I can get twenty or forty carloads of tin beans and the rest to sell to the fishermen, then I will get two hundred carloads for the year or whatever it is, if I buy for the year I will get all my goods a shade cheaper, and I will make that much more profit on all the goods, not only what I sell to the fishermen but also what I sell to the big cash market."

That is all the fishermen have come to mean to me if I am a typical, average Water Street Merchant. They have only come to mean shading the price of a tin of beans so I can make a bit more on every tin of beans I market in Argentia, Stephenville, Gander, Grand Falls and Buchans and all the other commercial markets.

Now, then I ask, how low has Newfoundland fallen. Now again I am not blaming, I am merely describing what has happened and is happening. Because I think if we are going to do anything about the fishery matters, and I hope by now the House recognizes that since I have stood on my feet it is fishery I have been talking.

MR. M. M. HOLLETT (Leader of the Opposition): Tin beans, was it not.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I am tempted to use once again my honourable friend the Leader of the Opposition the observation—I can explain a thing to you but only the Almighty God can give you the brains to understand it when I do explain it—

Now, Mr. Speaker, I would be the last in this House, I think, to depreciate the importance and value of industrialism. To me there is something very attractive and appealing, just as attractive and appealing as it is unattractive, I believe, to my honourable friend from St. John's West, the newly elected member, although he is a civil engineer, I believe that his ideal is not shining industrialism at all. I believe his ideal is a more pastoral type of economy. God knows I am with him in some things. As Shelly said: I too realize the great stabilizing forces in an economy of a staple agriculture, a sound, a healthy and wholesome fishery. Not a small and slummy economy transplanted into the fisheries, but a solid, wholesome fishery and a wholesome agriculture. Oh yes, especially a live-stock agriculture. I know what that can do for the economy of any land. I know too that the land is the mother of all wealth, and I include the sea. At the same time I confess to you frankly that when I go to Grand Falls and to Corner Brook and see there many men who began life in the fishing boat, and there are many in those towns who did that, and fished for eight, ten, twelve or fifteen years before ever they saw the sky over Corner Brook or Grand Falls. And when I see them today living in their splendid homes, beautifully and tastefully and comfortably furnished, and their children going to beautiful schools and with their beautiful clothes. They are even now building a beautiful cathedral. They have all kinds of athletics and sports, I like that too. I like it, I must confess. But Newfoundland will cease to be Newfoundland if our fisheries perish, and will cease to be Newfoundland even if our fisheries change so that they are conducted by large companies employing proletarians, less and less workers having nothing but the wages they carry home on Saturday night.
MR. HOLLETT: Hear! Hear!

MR. SMALLWOOD: So I say that for Newfoundland's sake this great North East Coast must be saved. Now I hope no one will be so cheap—my honourable friends in this House from other districts, other parts of the Island other than the North East Coast, for instance my honourable friend from Fortune Bay, I am sure he does not misunderstand nor my honourable friend from Burgeo and LaPoile when I am not including all the rest of Newfoundland. I am dealing at this particular moment with the North East Coast, because the North East Coast is the fishery. If you start at Cape Race, to include that great fishing district of Ferryland and really take in all the North and East Coast of this Island, then what you have done is to take in the overwhelming bulk of the fishery of this Province, because from Port aux Basques to Cape Norman, the entire western side of the triangle there is hardly enough fish produced to—I don't exactly fear they will be hurt on that coast when I say they are not big producers, or they have ceased to be. The whole district of St. Barbe represented by His Honour the Speaker, most of the people of St. Barbe to get a meal of fish would have to travel fifty miles in that great district which was once a great fishing area but which is no longer.

No, it is on the North East Coast that the great heart of the problem is, and if it disappears or even if it goes the way I suggested, just the haunts of great capitalistic companies or combinations of companies, it will be bad. Now, Sir, there is the dilemma: The North East Coast is going down, that is number one. You cannot change the weather. You cannot establish on that North East Coast the great fish plants that you can put in places such as Ferry Paw, Trepassey, Burin, Marystown, Grand Bank, Fortune, Gaultois, etc., because they could not operate more than so many months a year and would have to be closed about four or five months a year, and that would make them extremely uneconomical—you cannot do it. Yet, if we think for one moment that men are going to go out in trap skiffs for the rest of the time and just carry on the codfishery by means of codtraps, by means of trawls or by means of hand lines or by means of jiggers, then we are crazy if we think that. That is another horn of the dilemma—how many horns can there be on a dilemma. On this North East Coast there are an awful lot of horns, the place bristles with them. So you can't get the great industrial fish plants on the North East Coast, no economically, they won't pay. Yet you cannot go on with your old fashioned cod fishing, that also does not pay. You cannot live on thirty quinlals today. You could do it fifty years ago, with one suit of clothes in a lifetime, a pair of long boots, probably "Smallwood's Boots" for half a lifetime, two pairs of them in a lifetime, and the hardest and roughest kind of food. You might then live on thirty quinlals of fish. I believe they did reasonably well for hundreds of years, but not now. It will start another kind of revolution, the one with barricades and that kind of thing, if we try to force our people to live on thirty quinlals of fish a year—they can't do it—they won't do it. That is another horn of the dilemma. So what are you going to do about it?

Incidentally, to bring a little politics into it, I would remind the House that the Opposition never said a word as to what they would do about it.
They don't seem to have the foggiest notion. They have no policy. That is okay, we have a policy, and we are going to carry it out and begin to carry it out in this session.

MR. HOLLETT: It is about time you had a policy.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Well, Mr. Speaker, I got off a bit of politics there. So my honourable friend, the Leader of the Opposition, is trying to get off a little, and he did, but a little bit cheap. Don't forget we have only been in office five years, and the fishery has been here nearly five hundred. The fisheries have been going almost one century for every year we have been in office. We did not create the problem, but we are trying to fix it.

MR. HOLLETT: But will you?

MR. SMALLWOOD: My honourable friend the Minister of Public Welfare remarked that if the Honourable Leader of the Opposition got as far as Windsor Lake or Quidi Vidi he would be so seasick he would not want to talk fish or hear of fish.

HON. M. P. MURRAY (Minister of Provincial Affairs): Or Murray's Pond. We would like to see him there.

MR. HOLLETT: I think I spent more time on the sea than the Honourable Minister of Public Welfare.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes — more time at sea—my honourable friend, in fact, is still at sea.

MR. SPEAKER: Will the honourable member continue his speech.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, Mr. Speaker. These disconcerting interruptions I get from the other side put me off the track. I have such a shallow mind, you see, I can't retain anything; easily put off the track.

MR. HOLLETT: Narrow gauge.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Narrow gauge?

MR. SPEAKER: May I suggest you bear in mind the suggestion from the Chair.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, Mr. Speaker. Now, later in this session the Government will ask the House, all members in the House to support us, to back us, to vote for us in a big effort we propose to make, a very expensive effort. We are going to ask the House to authorize us to borrow some money to spend on that great effort, because we desire to spend millions of dollars on it, and we desire to spend more millions next year and we desire to spend more millions the year after on the fisheries. How? By carrying out the great fisheries programme that has been devised by Sir Albert Walsh and the four or five or six other members of the Fisheries Development Committee, who sat for two full years delving deeply into the problems and coming up at last with a series of practical proposals and suggestions. Now, that was last year, and that was no sooner done than the Parliament of Canada dissolved and a general election was called and held. Then just around that time, either before or after we had this dispute over the price of fish last year. It was not until the election was over and things settled down that it became practical for the two Governments to get together to hammer out the actual details of the question of an agreement between them; to what extent could they agree in detail, in practice, and what should be the functions of the Government of Newfoundland and what the functions of the Government of Canada, who would do what, who would pay for which? These details have been worked out and the two Governments now, I am happy to say, are seeing eye to eye. Now I will admit this very frankly, if the Government of Canada would say, whatever the bill is send it to us, just go ahead and whatever it costs just go ahead and do it and just send us the bill. That would be pleasant. If we did not have to vote any money in this House for fishery development, if this Government had not to rack its brains to find money in many, many millions to do it, but if Ottawa agreed to pay all that, it would be pleasant. That would be nice. I suppose it would. I am not sure. I think perhaps it is good exercise for us Newfoundlanders to grapple with our own problems and solve them if not entirely then largely and mostly by our own efforts. I don't know but that it is the better thing for us to do. I don't think that we became a Province of Canada just to lean on the rest of Canada. I don't believe it of proud Newfoundlanders, proud as Lucifer, the proudest people of all Canada bar none. God in Heaven, I sometimes wonder what we have to be proud of. But we are proud, we are sinfully proud, we Newfoundlanders. We think we are the “Cat's Pajamas.” There is nothing in North America our equal, we little handful of people. We think we have more guts and more brains and more courage and more skill than any other people in this continent. I don't think we have. I think we can hold our own. But we are very proud. I think we are too proud to join up with nine other provinces and say; now you have us, you dirty brutes, now you got us, thanks to a few traitors and Judas Iscariots and Quisslings like Smallwood. You got us, now support us for the rest of your natural life. I don't think we Newfoundlanders are willing to do that. I don't think that is the feeling of the Newfoundland people. We must do our part, and Canada must do hers. Between us it will take a hundred million dollars—as our American friends would say— if I am not passe' by now—I must admit as I grow older I get out of touch with the latest slang, but as I believe our American friends would say: “That is not hay.” That is a lot of money, a hundred million dollars.

This year we are going to start. And I can tell you now, Mr. Speaker, that next year when this House meets, a year from now, the Opposition will be able to denounce us because we are going to make a lot of mistakes. I can tell the House now that we are going to make a lot of mistakes. You see, Mr. Speaker, the members of this Government were not born with a hundred or a couple of hundred years of experience in running a country, and we are still only young, with five years of practical experience, and in the launching out of a vast fishery development programme we have had precisely no experience at all, none, because it has never been done before in Newfoundland.

MR. HOLLETT: The Minister of Public Welfare has a lot.

MR. SMALLWOOD: In the launching of a great, new fishery development programme, I say, no one in Newfoundland has had any experience in doing that. In the session two years from now my honourable friends in the Opposition will be able to point their finger at us again and again. They will be able to point to some pretty bad mistakes because we will make them in our second year and in our third year and up to the nineteenth year we have yet to go before there is a Tory Government elected in Newfoundland. For the remaining nineteen years of this Liberal Government, in each one of these years we will make mistakes. With all the experience in making mistakes I will leave it to the House to decide the kind of mistakes my honourable friends will make in their first year in power twenty years from now.

MR. HOLLETT: It is no laughing matter, these mistakes.

MR. SMALLWOOD: But we will make them. So that, Mr. Speaker, this is the fateful year that we are going to launch in to the deep for fishery development.

There are one or two other points, then I think I will finish. I am sorry the honourable member for St. John's, who is not a lawyer, has gone out. He talked about these new industries, these new industrial plants. He said that CMIC was gone. That reminds me, about a year ago, the present Leader of the Opposition, I don't remember if he was the Leader then, frankly I cannot keep track of the Leaders—

MR. BROWNE: Where has the other gone?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I don't know.

MR. BROWNE: You got him a job.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, there is one working now for the Government, and doing a good job, I must say, as Minister of Self-Defence. Excuse me, it is Director of Civil Defence. He is doing an excellent job, I may say, whatever he does he does thoroughly anyway. I can say that for him anyway. I cannot deny it.

But my honourable friend who has just come back into the Chamber took a very dim view, and his present Leader, nominally, the one sitting on his immediate right, not on his remote right, that Leader said last year about the —

MR. HOLLETT: To a point of order, Mr. Speaker: Whilst I am not greatly perturbed over the remarks made by the Honourable the Premier as to the leadership of this party, I do think whoever is sitting in this Chair should get the recognition which he deserves, and I would like to see that done.

MR. SPEAKER: I think the Honourable the Premier should not have said that.

MR. SMALLWOOD: As a matter of fact, Mr. Speaker, we have a sweep-stake running on this side of the House as to who will be the next leader. Anyway that Leader took a very dim view last year of the textile plant, and he thought it a most significant fact that there beside it was a graveyard. Now I am sure he will be happy to hear that plant is flourishing, and instead of being appropriately near a graveyard, actually the plant has really done exceedingly well. That remark may have been made by another leader, it was one of the leaders of the party anyway.

Nine of the new plants are actually in operation now at the moment, three of them at capacity, and six of them at part capacity but now in actual operation. Five of them have not yet begun production—that is fourteen in all. Now these fourteen new plants in this year, 1954, will employ full time, 2,100 workers and part time 750 additional workers. These workers will receive this year in wages over four and a quarter million dollars. It will be consider­ably more under both headings next year. There will be more workers next year than this year and they will receive more in pay next year than this year. Now, Mr. Speaker, the sum laid out is approximatley twenty million dollars. I ask the House to do a little table in arithmetic. I wonder if we could clear up the point which is the senior and which the junior member for St. John's East?

MR. HIGGINS: It was never agreed, Mr. Speaker.

MR. SMALLWOOD: They are both so young it is hard to say which is the junior and which the senior. Perhaps, Mr. Speaker, for the record we could clear up that point.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, on that particular point: As far as I can find out, I believe the senior member of any district is the member with the greater number of votes in any general election. As far as I can find out, I think that is a rule which was made by Mr. Speaker.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I doubt, Mr. Speaker, you or any speaker could give a ruling on that immediate question as to which of these two gentle­ment is senior and which junior. However, as I said, about twenty million dollars has been laid out on all these plants. In this year with nine of them in operation, three at capacity and six part capacity and five of them not yet in production, they employ twenty one hundred workers full time and six hundred and fifty part time, who will receive in wages this year over four and a quarter million dollars. I ask the House whether it is good business for Newfoundland to spend twenty million dollars of its own hard earned money to create these plants. Let us say that next year, 1955, the total in wages paid is five millions. But why put it at five millions and not ten millions or seven millions or six millions, but five millions as an average, typical wage bill annually from these plants. Let us say that—I am trying to be conserva­tive (with a small "c")—the Government lends out twenty million dollars. It does not give it away but lends the money at interest. At the present time we are trying to collect back neither the principal nor the interest. We have loaned twenty million dol­lars. That has created fourteen new industrial plants. Let us assume that these three thousand workers are to be given employment the year around at five million dollars in wages a year. The question I have to ask is this: Was that a good thing for the Gov­ernment to do? If the Government had its time all over again, and had not laid out a dollar of that twenty millions, would the Government be right to do what it did on that basis—on the basis of fourteen plants? On the assumption of employing 3,000 people, getting five million dollars, would the Government be right in taking that decision—the decision we did, in fact, take? I will go a step further—suppose we have twenty millions cash in the till (we have only a little more than half that—we have eleven millions in the till at the moment)—suppose we had twenty millions lying loose and free and not needed, would it be good business to use it to create another fourteen plants that would employ another three thousand people, receiving five million a year? Would that be good business? Or further, if we have forty millions and could produce twenty-eight new plants employing six thousand people, receiving wages of ten million dollars a year, would the Government be wise to do it? I think the House ought to consider that. We were not a pack of jackasses, nincompoops and fools in spending twenty millions to create the fourteen plants we have created.

MR. HOLLETT: I wonder if my honourable friend would indicate the plants where these people are employed?

MR. SMALLWOOD: The Cement Mill and the Gypsum Mill on the West Coast; the United Cotton Mills, the Atlantic Hardboards, the Terra Nova Textiles, here in St. John’s—that is five. The Newfoundland Hardwoods, the CMIC, Hanning Electric, the Rubber Plant, the Wool Mill at Brigus, the Carbonar Tanneries; the Glove Factory; the Shoe and Leather Goods Plant. Of these plants, three are working at full capacity.

MR. HOLLETT: How many employees?

MR. SMALLWOOD: My honourable friend is wasting his time as usual. He will not get me to do what I have refused many times to do. I am not that simple.

MR. HOLLETT: Almost.

MR. SMALLWOOD: My honourable friend is optimistic.

MR. SPEAKER: Order! The Chair is still here.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I want to say a word about liquor. By the way, I do hope that the point I made yesterday is thought about by somebody. I have a fairly considerable library. If I never collected money, I collected some books. I managed to amass quite a number of books. I have a library that deals with the history of Parliament; deals with parliamentary procedure; deals with parliamentary rules, proceedings and practice, generally. On that topic, all these books—Todd, May, etc.,—dozens of them all agree on one thing—all of them; I made the point here yesterday; no one took the slightest notice of it; they all agreed that it is as much the duty, the plain duty of the Opposition (and “duty” is a strong word), to tell the people what they stand for, what their philosophy is, what their programme is, as it is the duty of the Government to govern. In fact it is more the duty of the Opposition to inform the people what is their policy, orally and in writing, than it is the Government’s duty to do it.

MR. HOLLETT: Would the Hon. the Premier indicate the sections where it says that is the policy?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, I will not. You have read them. It is more the Opposition’s duty by speeches and writings to tell the people what their policies are than it is for the Government to do it. The Opposition cannot act; they can only talk and by the nature of things, there is all the greater obligation on them to tell the people by word of mouth and by writing what they stand for; and they have failed utterly to do it. They have failed—the Tory party has failed lamentably to make known to even their own clan, what they stand for. I say this as a brief, preliminary reference, a brief introduction to the liquor problem. In the matter of the liquor question, the Opposition have been content merely to ask questions which they hope will be embarrassing to the members of the House who sit on this side. That is their contribution to this social problem of liquor—as politicians, as members of this House, merely to try and embarrass members on this side—not a suggestion, not an idea, not a proposal—nothing. It could not be much less than nothing. I cannot say they have no policy—how do I know whether or not they have a policy. I am not a member of their party; I am not admitted to their caucuses. If I ask them they will not tell me. If they have a policy, they are keeping it a deadly secret from me and from the people of Newfoundland, and from this House. It is the most precisely-guarded secret in this Island today—jealously guarded. I am told that you can protect people from uranium by putting it in a depth of mountain that had lead walls a foot thick so that rays could not get out. I imagine they have their policy guarded in such a box as that. It is like one of these boxes where another box fits exactly inside; inside of that there is another box; inside that another one smaller than a match box; out of that comes one smaller than a thimble and out of that comes one as big as a pea. Similarly, out of such a one comes the Tory policy.

MR. BROWNE: It might be as strong as uranium and just as effective.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It will never be effective if it is not told. Are they saving it up to spring on the people three nights before Polling Day? Maybe it cannot be released—like Gordon Higgins' policy. He had a piece of Tory policy. He saved it up. It cost $1,000 by the way. He saved up Sennewald as a part of Tory propaganda for the last night—the last night anyone was permitted to broadcast. He saved him up for the last minute; but the only thing was, I was to follow him on the air. We had tossed for it weeks before and it so happened I won the toss. According to that, I had the last moment on the air.

MR. BROWNE: I would like to hear you give some quotations from that night.

MR. HOLLETT: I thought you gave it extemporaneously.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I have the ability to write fast and think fast.

MR. HOLLETT: You thought fast that night.

MR. SMALLWOOD: While Mr. Higgins was lambasting me, I was there in the studio with my pencil—my trusty pencil; like a nice trusty sword—getting notes, so that I could reply. Then the announcer said "You heard Mr. Higgins speak for the—what is the name of the party? Progressive Party." He then announced it was the Canadian Broadcasting Station at St. John's and then he said "We now introduce the speaker for the Liberal Party." And this was Joe—an antidote to Mr. Higgins. Is it not funny, a party calling itself "Progressive" offering itself to the people and saying, "Elect us to be the Government. We have no manifesto; we have no programme; we have no policy. Just elect us."

MR. HOLLETT: We ask them to elect us for the Opposition. When we want to be the Government, we will be the Government.

MR. FOGWILL: Clean up your own mess first.

MR. SPEAKER: It seems a pity to break up this interesting private conversation. Would the Premier go on with his speech?
MR. SMALLWOOD: I deprecate these interruptions.

MR. SPEAKER: The Chair deprecates them from either side.

MR. SMALLWOOD: As the Press points out, Newfoundland has the lowest rate of alcoholism in all Canada. I think this is worth knowing. Newfoundland has, of all Canada, the lowest alcoholism rate. In British Columbia they have the highest. This table was prepared by the Alcoholism Research Board of the Government of Ontario. British Columbia, per one hundred thousand of the population has 2,532 alcoholics; Quebec has 1,813; Ontario 1,687; Nova Scotia 1,298; New Brunswick 1,278; Manitoba 1,173; Saskatchewan 1,167; Alberta 918; Prince Edward Island 675 and Newfoundland 501. That is not a bad tribute to this Government’s liquor policy, that we have, of all Canada, by far the lowest rate of alcoholism—that we have one-fifth of the Province of British Columbia—they have 2,500; we have 500. Take the consumption of beer—the people of the United Kingdom consume 18 gallons of beer a year—that is, each person of the whole population of Great Britain; in the United States, 14 gallons a year; in Canada (all Canada, including Newfoundland), 13 1/2 gallons—1/2 gallon less than the United States; Newfoundland 4 1/2 gallons. That is not too bad a tribute to this Government’s record or policy.

Take all kinds of beverages, beer, wine and hard liquor, in Nova Scotia (just across the Gulf) the people consumed, last year, an average of $36.27 worth.

MR. BROWNE: May I remind the honourable member that Nova Scotia has a big tourist industry, and a lot of that would be consumed by tourists.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is not quite so. That is definitely not the case; I will come to that. I have the broken-down figures of every province of Canada. I can tell my honourable friend this—there is an organization in Canada consisting of the Chairman of each Province’s Board of Liquor Control, and I can tell my honourable friend the daily, weekly consumption of liquor is known—it is known by days, weeks, months. If the tourist trade in Nova Scotia made any appreciable difference in the consumption, then, obviously, in the tourist season the jump would be seen and the drop after that. But that is not so. What makes the difference is the number of outlets. Wherever you go in Nova Scotia you see a government liquor store—48 of them. We have five. Last year in Nova Scotia, the average person of the population—men, women and children—the average was $36.27 worth of liquor of all kinds; Alberta $48.41; Saskatchewan $38.90; Newfoundland $18.50—the lowest in all Canada. As a matter of fact, the people of Newfoundland are very moderate drinkers compared with any other Province of Canada or with the United States, or with the United Kingdom. Our people are very moderate drinkers. They are not heavy drinkers.

The other point is this: Is the trend up? Yes! Why is it up? More liquor will be consumed in 1954 than in 1953. There was more consumed in 1953 than in 1952.

MR. BROWNE: How much?

MR. SMALLWOOD: The amount is not startling. The increase is slowing down, but it is still an increase.
The reason is obvious. People consume more beer for the same reason they buy more shoes, silk stockings, motor cars and new houses. They have more money, more prosperity. (The Deputy Speaker reminds me there are fewer extracts of essence to get drunk on).

MR. HIGGINS: Who has the figures on essences?

MR. SMALLWOOD: They are licensed and when you license an activity, you are apt to know the size.

MR. HIGGINS: Are they definitely going down?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes. Another thing that might interest the House is that the consumption of hard liquor relative to the consumption of beer and wine is going down.

MR. HIGGINS: Is not the consumption of wine up?

MR. SMALLWOOD: The consumption of hard liquor relative to beer and wine is going down. I know what my honourable friend would allude to should he ask if the consumption of wine is going up.

MR. HIGGINS: Pinky?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I was coming to pinky in a moment.

MR. SPEAKER: May I interrupt the honourable member? I want to give directions to the officers on duty to remove from the building the next stranger, that is persons in the gallery who laugh aloud. The members of the press are here to make comments on speeches with their pencils.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I have been told, Mr. Speaker, that some people buy wine for the purpose of mixing it with some other drink.

MR. HIGGINS: Aftershave, some of them.

MR. SMALLWOOD: But principally they mix it with beer or liquor.

MR. HIGGINS: Beer, as a rule. That will bring out the real pinky, beer and wine. It has to be a particular brand to produce the best brand of pinky—Old Niagara Port and beer.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Well, Mr. Speaker, that does not sound to me like a very attractive drink. I have heard it said by connoisseurs in these matters that beer and wine don't mix. Drink beer before a meal, during the meal drink wine and follow the wine with champagne, but never beer after wine.

MR. SPEAKER: Let us not get on to recipes for various kinds of cocktails. If the honourable member has a preference he might pass it on to the honourable members on this side when the House closes.

HON. E. S. SPENCER (Minister of Public Works): I would like to know the effect myself.

MR. SPEAKER: The answer will not be given.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Now, Mr. Speaker, I have just one point more of a special character, and then one other point of a general character, then I am through.
I notice that some private companies here in Newfoundland, even private companies that the Government has not assisted financially, are now beginning to bring foreigners into this Province. I am not referring to companies that this Government has been instrumental in bringing into Newfoundland or assisting to come to Newfoundland, nor am I referring even to companies in Newfoundland which have been helped by us in a financial way. But I am referring to old companies here in Newfoundland who are beginning to bring foreigners in here to this Province. I am wondering why the Honourable Leader of the Opposition has not registered any objections in this House to that fact. I know there are several persons here now working in the Newfoundland fisheries from the Faroe Islands, without any complaint whatsoever from the Opposition. There has been no question asked here about these foreigners. I notice there is a man here from Denmark, a couple of Germans as well as an Estonian. There are several Norwegians engaged also in the Newfoundland fishing industry—yet there is not a word of objection voiced by the Opposition, no question directed at us about the matter. I notice also that a number of our more up-to-date fish plants have brought in German machinery, with German Technicians to operate that machinery and to train Newfoundlanders in its operation. I notice that Bowaters, by far the biggest company in Newfoundland, has brought in a number of Europeans, technicians, scientists, and chemists to work for them, without a single word of objection from any of the honourable gentlemen opposite, even my honourable friend, the Leader of the Opposition.

What is happening to him? Is the spirit going out of him? Is he losing his grip? I was quite startled the other day to read that the great President of the United States, President Eisenhower, is of German extraction. But don't let us bring that fact out in the open. We know there are no people of German origin or German decent in the United States. We only find them here. Yet President Eisenhower's family Bible came into prominence lately, and horror of horrors, his Family Bible was printed in German. Yet there was not a word of protest from the Honourable Leader of the Opposition, no questions tabled for us, not a protest. The Honourable Leader of the Opposition must truly be wondering what the world is coming to—the President of the United States!

Now, Mr. Speaker, I have lived in the United States, parts of it at least. I have noticed a number of things about it. But there was one thing in particular I noticed. You don't have to go to the United States for that either, here in St. John's the same thing applies. Listen to the radio broadcasts of ball games in which Americans from Fort Pepperrell take part, or read about it in the newspapers. If the Honourable Leader of the Opposition does that I am quite sure he will end up with the suspicion that these people here on the American Bases have names that sound suspiciously Germanic, and I am wondering what he is going to do about it. Is he going to let the Yanks get away with that? Let them get away with bringing Germans in here, into our very midst, and God in Heaven knows what other strange people, with strange-sounding names, foreigners? My honourable friend, the Leader of the Opposition, spoke the other day... about the people who worked in the Gypsum Plant at Corner Brook, and attempted, not as successfully as he could have done so, to reel off the names of some of these people because they sounded strange. That is nothing! He should read the names of some of these people, the American ball players, right here at Fort Pepperrell. My honourable friend, his new follower, who spent four years in the House of Commons will recall members of the House of Commons, in the very heart of the nation, with strange-sounding names, members coming from the west.

MR. HOLLETT: What has that got to do with the liquor question?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I have passed on from the liquor question. My honourable friend may be preoccupied with this question of liquor to an extent that I have never been.

MR. HOLLETT: No.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I have never been.

Mr. Speaker, would it be good for Newfoundland, if assuming there was the work for them, if we could bring five thousand Danes in here, five thousand Dutch, five thousand Swedes, five thousand Norwegians, five thousand Germans, five thousand Swiss, five thousand Belgians, five thousand Spaniards, five thousand Portuguese—would that be good for Newfoundland? It was good for the United States. It was good for Ontario. It was good for the Prairie Provinces of Canada. Would it be good for Newfoundland? Would it be good to bring these national strains in that we have not got. We are the English, Irish and Scotch race. There is nothing wrong with that. But I have never yet heard it suggested that all the assets of humanity were confined to the English, Irish and Scotch. And if it is suggested here in this House it will be an entirely new anthropological theory. Those racial strains with the characteristics and attributes of those people brought in here, their children mixing with our children, where you don't have racial prejudices, and grow up with them as friends. I say economically speaking if we could absorb, if we could find employment for them if they would make a living here, to bring in these new qualities to add to the solid sense, experience and character we have already, if we could enliven it by adding them it would be a great thing for Newfoundland, a magnificent thing. I find it very difficult to believe that my honourable friend the Leader of the Opposition, who is a Master of Arts from Oxford University, a Rhodes Scholar, and therefore a learned man, a scholarly man, I find it difficult to believe that he could have so lost his old love of learning that he must have had at one time, that he could have separated himself so far from the great traditions of culture and learning as to believe, as to be sincere when he sneers at the Germans and Latvians who have come into this Province—I find it difficult to believe. Therefore I am driven to an inescapable conclusion that when he makes these references he makes them out of a sincere belief that they are right, but in the hope that they will arouse a responsive cord in the breasts of the yokels, to whom I referred yesterday.

MR. HOLLETT: If the honourable gentleman will permit me? He has quoted me as sneering at Germans. I have never done such a thing. I have only sneered at a Government who has brought them in at a million dollars apiece. So I would like to have that corrected, Mr. Speaker.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Well, the correction would be a valid one if it were true. There is just no truth in it.

MR. SPEAKER: The Chair cannot be asked to decide what tone of voice constitutes a sneer.

MR. HOLLETT: I will admit this—I am politician enough to admit if my honourable friend could make that stick—

MR. SMALLWOOD: We brought in twenty Germans and gave a million each to them—twenty millions. Now the surplus is all gone. We gave it to twenty Germans. If we could make that stick. I am politician enough to know it would mean some votes. But where would I be in the meantime—deaf, dumb and speechless—does he think he alone can talk to the people of Newfoundland? Now I admit it is smart. It would be smart if there were no answer, if that is all they would hear. We had a big surplus and gave it all away to twenty Germans, a million dollars each, that is the kind of Premier you have. If that is all they would hear, over and over, dinned in their ears often enough, they could win some votes with it. I know that is true. But that is not the case. To begin with it is not true, and propaganda today is all the more effective when it is true. It is highly dangerous when it is not true, it can have the kick of a mule, but it can turn around and kick in the face of the man who has uttered it, it can knock him out. There is nothing so bad as propaganda that misfires—it is always safe to be truthful.

MR. HOLLETT: Fourteen companies got twenty million dollars.

MR. SMALLWOOD: They were not all Germans to begin with. If my honourable friend implies that he will never extricate himself.

Now, Mr. Speaker, there are many things about which I could talk, there are many things I could say. The fact is that this Government has been in office for five years and these five years have been the most revolutionary in all the history of Newfoundland. The only time in little more than half a century in North America that one part of North America joined another part was when we became a Province of Canada. That was the first great continental change in this continent for fifty years or more.

MR. BROWNE: Alaska.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I said fifty years.

MR. BROWNE: When was Alaska purchased?

MR. SMALLWOOD: That was a change of boundaries. Just the same some of my honourable friends would say that was a purchase too. That was the first time in half a century that any boundaries in North America changed. That is something to think about. We became a Province of Canada, and a country does not cease to be a country and become part of another country without great dislocation, not only a dislocation of spirit and mind and heart but a dislocation physically, economically, statistically, commercially, industrially. We have, as a Government, tided Newfoundland over these five years, and I hope that we have done a good job.

MR. BROWNE: You had upward of fifty millions.
MR. SMALLWOOD: No, we had not fifty millions. We had nothing like fifty millions. But we had four times fifty millions if my honourable friend wants to take the five years and add up all the revenue we have had together with the grants from Ottawa, the pre-union surplus together with the surpluses we have earned ourselves would be more than four times fifty millions. But if he is thinking only of the actual surplus we inherited—I say we have tided Newfoundland over very well in those tumultuous years for a little place like Newfoundland. We are quite small. We must not get illusions of grandeur. We talk about resources and untapped wealth and all that and we might quite easily give ourselves illusions. We were a small country and a small handful of people so that these years were tumultuous and difficult. In the first three years the members of this Cabinet worked night and day. Never did any Cabinet, I suppose, in the history of the world, certainly in this half of the world, work so hard or for such long hours. My honourable friend, the Attorney General, has had more experience than any ten lawyers in North America in the drafting of new legislation of one country into that of another and with the integration of each country into that of the other, Canada into Newfoundland and Newfoundland into Canada: the integration of the very fabric, constitutionally speaking, of Canada into the very fabric of our life in Newfoundland, gigantic work, which we did in these last five years. Along with the slavery, hard, monotonous, drab slavery we did, on top of that, we had to spare the energy and mind and heart for our idealism, in bringing in our idealistic legislation, and at the same time had to spare some of our enthusiasm to launch our great drive for economic development. I claim that it is evident we have committed very few blunders. I have been the first to name our great blunder which was a little bit of an anticlimax for my honourable friends. I am really sorry about that. My honourable friend, the newly elected member, when he talked of the Icelandic Boats the other day really was terribly out of date. I am the one who accused this Government of making a horrible blunder. On the radio, I think, I said: "If I had been the Opposition I would make the Government's life too miserable to live." So that several years later when my honourable friend returns here from Ottawa and rakes up the Icelandic Boats here he is horribly out of date.

MR. BROWNE: Is the matter finished up yet?

MR. SMALLWOOD: I see it is a sort of serial—to be continued. Well the Opposition ought to think up something more original, and something more applicable than that, twenty millions to twenty Germans would be something they could do a little more with than the Icelandic Boats.

Now in the five years—just think of the Alderdice Government. They were not there quite four years. Think of the Monroe Government a little less than four years. The Squires Government before that, and go right back to Bond and try to think of a Government in office for four years that made so few mistakes as this Government, try to think of one. It would be a little difficult. And I know the history of the Governments of Newfoundland from 1900 on almost like the palm of my own hand. I have just been going through two tons of documents affecting two Governments, sometimes up until two and three o'clock in the morning with all their secret and confidential documents. We have not done too badly, if I do say it myself. We have not committed very many mistakes, and we have accomplished a lot. We are still fresh. We are not tired. We have not grown weary. We are full of ambition, full of life and energy and enthusiasm to tackle the biggest job of all, the reorganization of our fisheries here in Newfoundland. While it is true I would like a somewhat bigger Opposition, because it is a little pathetic to have six hours talk only from all the members of the Opposition put together, that is a little pathetic, that is hardly good enough.

MR. BROWNE: You have almost equalled that yourself.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Exactly. I would like to see a better Opposition. By better I mean only stronger, as they are all excellent gentlemen, all nice gentlemen, all of them without exception, with Rhodes Scholars, one lawyer, one labour leader.

MR. BROWNE: I wonder—if the honourable gentleman would not be so personal in his remarks.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Can't I pay a compliment.

MR. BROWNE: I know that is nice, but is it not a waste of the time of the House.

MR. SPEAKER: I have been waiting for such an objection. Certainly the Chair cannot stop an honourable gentleman from paying a compliment. On the other hand compliments are personal, and the objection taken by the honourable member is in order. He can object if he pleases.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, Mr. Speaker, thank you. So I say in conclusion that the five years have made us better than we were five years ago. We are better equipped now to go on to build Newfoundland nearer to our heart's desire.

HON. DR. F. W. ROWE (Minister of Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of the debate.

HON. L. R. CURTIS (Attorney General): I move, Mr. Speaker, that the House at its rising do adjourn until tomorrow, Tuesday, April 20th, at 3:00 o'clock.

MR. SPEAKER: Moved and seconded this House at its rising do adjourn until tomorrow, Tuesday, April 20th, at 3:00 o'clock.

The House then adjourned accordingly.

TUESDAY, April 20, 1954.

The House met at three of the clock in the afternoon, pursuant to adjournment.

HON. J. R. SMALLWOOD (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I am very proud and very happy to announce that the British Newfoundland Corporation generally known as BRINCO, have decided to conduct a great survey, commencing this year, of the watershed of the Hamilton River and the Grand Falls on the Labrador.

The company at a meeting of its directors recently approved an expenditure from its funds of up to one million dollars in 1954, this current calendar year for the purpose of commencing what is to be an absolutely thorough survey of the hydro-electric potentialities of that great watershed. BRINCO has entered into contract with a Montreal Engineering Company and also an engineering company of the Province of Quebec under which those two great hydro-engineering concerns will carry out the survey commencing this year, on behalf of BRINCO, of course.

Aircraft will be employed in the work as well as approximately two hundred persons in the present year. The survey has already begun, and the company are quite pleased to learn from the initial work already performed in 1954 that it may not take anything like as long to complete the work as they thought at first it would require.

Now, Mr. Speaker, at the Grand Falls alone, on the Hamilton River, various estimates have been made, running as high as four million horse power of hydro-electricity, that can be developed from the Hamilton watershed and up to ten million horse power from the whole of the Hamilton River watershed if connected with another watershed lying immediately beside it. That is more hydro-electricity than is presently developed throughout the length and breadth of Canada. That would be a great development that would dwarf Niagara Falls, that would dwarf the great Kittiman, this could be a development that is the largest in the world, the largest single hydro-electric development in the world.

Certainly, Sir, the fact that BRINCO has voted out of its funds an amount of upwards of one million dollars to be spent in this present year on that survey indicates the deadly seriousness with which BRINCO are taking this huge and expensive job.

I won't say any more at this time about it. I will certainly say nothing to indicate any possible use to which the power in question might be put. That is something which must await another occasion. But it seems to me that the decision of BRINCO to make this great survey is one of the biggest pieces of news that ever came to Newfoundland.

HON. DR. H. L. POTTLE (Minister of Public Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I rise to a point of privilege:

On Tuesday the 6th, instant on the debate on the Speech from the Throne, I addressed the House, and in the latter part of my remarks I elaborated on what I called "The Unfinished Business of Public Welfare." Throughout these remarks I was anxious to convey to the House a point of view I have been pressing within the House and outside for years, namely, that welfare is always in some measure public welfare. I had just finished saying that although government had to take such a large responsibility for welfare, I still hoped the springs of voluntary charity would not thereby dry up. And to illustrate further, I gave instances by which I intended to draw labour, management and indeed the whole community into a total partnership with government for improving the public welfare. If I recall correctly the mood of the House at the time I was speaking, I believe I can assume now that the House understood that such was my principal purpose.

In the course of these remarks I said, among other things, that there were indescribably serious social conditions prevailing in Newfoundland affecting the welfare of families and their children.
At this stage I should like to quote an excerpt from that section of my address. I was speaking on industry and I concluded that section of my remarks by saying: "My remarks in this respect, Sir, are designed to involve industry generally as having a moral responsibility for people, that people are not merely something out of which wealth must be squeezed and then when they become 45 and have asthma, throw them out."

Mr. Smallwood here said; "Socialism—careful that is not liked over there."

Then I continued: "I am involving industry, Sir industry as having a moral responsibility for the people, and that is part of the unfinished business of Public Welfare."

"So we go on—I met five or six welfare officers a few weeks ago. I asked them, because they belong to certain areas which are to some extent contiguous and their districts in some cases join one another, "How about your unemployment situation?" I was told: "We have not any in the whole area, no unemployment, no great amount of relief." And yet, if I say that social conditions are appalling in any place, there are no words to describe the social conditions in parts of one or more of these district—I can't find a word to describe it.

One of the welfare officers told me that, although there is no unemployment around his community nor in most of his district, ninety-five per cent of the children in a section of his district should not be living with their parents, but I say; should be decontaminated by being taken away from the bad example of their elders. That may sound like "Plato's Republic" but there it is.

Right in Newfoundland today social conditions, I say, are unspeakably bad; wives are exchanged like common chartels—and it does not happen all on one side of the track either; it is not just an indisposition of some poor people, one of their luxuries.

I shall say something, Sir, which is bound to be misunderstood: Where there is most prosperity in Newfoundland there is most social disorganization. Now then that is said, that is not to say that prosperity is a bad thing. But it does mean to say that where prosperity abounds (and I am speaking Public Welfare now, Sir) where prosperity abounds there is, to that extent, a greater need for us to be on our guard that, when we think of money, when we are getting and spending, we do not at the same time lay waste our powers. The advent and habits of prosperity ought not to dull us to the fact, dull our perceptions to the fact that people, people above all, are important, and that we cannot go on singing the national ode as if it were just some wonderful dream—it means people. We have more here than just pine-clad hills—we have people—and when we speak of people as being our ultimate resources we are speaking of something which is more than poetry.

Now, Sir, as a member of this House, I think it is an abiding responsibility, not only for this Government, but for the House as a whole, the Opposition and all of us together, to see to it that in our debates we put first things first, and that in an issue of this kind, of putting people first, we cannot afford to dissipate our resources by bickering nor by drawing attention to "Red Herring." This is a real thing, Sir—The People of Newfoundland! That is the unfinished business of Public Welfare. It seems to me that in all our getting and spending we should put our people, our fundamental resources, where they properly belong, in the forefront. It is a responsibility, I think, Sir, for both the Government and the Opposition, all of us together, to see to it, in collaboration with every agency of goodwill, as far as Newfoundland is concerned, that: “While we accumulate wealth men shall not decay.”

Now, Sir, that was the concluding section of my address, and it will be seen, Mr. Speaker, that I did not mention any place by name or give any such indication as to what part or parts of the province I had in mind. I said it was an area of no unemployment. But at the time there were numerous areas, large and small, where there was no unemployment.

For the larger purpose I had in mind it was neither necessary nor certainly desirable to single out any community or district.

However, the “Evening Telegram” reporting this part of my address the following day, while admitting I did not mention any place by name nor give any such indication as to what part or parts of the province I had in mind, stated nevertheless that the community I had in mind was Stephenville. To quote from the “Evening Telegram” of April 7: “And there was one area where there was no unemployment, said Dr. Pottle. (Again he did not name the centre, but he referred to Stephenville). Here in spite of prosperity, the Welfare Officer reported that 95 per cent of the children should not be allowed to live with their parents—they should be “decontaminated.” Here, he declared, wives were exchanged like chattels.”

The same paper in reporting my earlier remarks on labour and on management saw fit to guess at the names of the places I was supposed to have in mind, and then continued its guessing when it came to reporting my remarks on social conditions.

I met the “Evening Telegram” reporter outside the chamber shortly after my address, and we had only a very brief conversation. As I recall, he mentioned some place or places I might have had in mind when making my references to labour, management and social conditions. I gave no indication whatever about the place or places I had in mind as far as my address was concerned. Because I did not deny that his guesses were right it should not have been taken as any form of admission that his guesses were right. For if I had denied I would then have been maneuvered into a guessing game, and by elimination the correct community or area would be finally pinned down.

Once Stephenville was singled out in print the damage was done, and whether I denied that it was the place I had in mind the next day in the House or at any time thereafter, a serious reflection had been cast on that community, which as we might have expected, has caused the residents great embarrassment and deeply disturbed feelings.

“Why,” the Evening Telegram asked in its edition of Thursday the 15th, did I “wait so long before denying that Stephenville was the place I had in mind?” It was not for me to prejudice any charge that might be brought against it; and a serious charge may arise from the Telegram’s own reporting: “He did not name the centre, but he referred to Stephenville.” That is to say, the reporter added something of his own in his report of my speech. Why the Telegram should have been so anxious to fix my reference to bad social conditions upon Stephenville I am at a loss to understand. And even when that paper published my denial about Stephenville on Thursday past it was still asking—"If it is not Stephenville, where is the place?"

I can only ask the House to imagine what it must be like for anyone three hundred miles away from this House to take up a newspaper and be confronted with capital italic and bold face headlines featuring out of context that his community has been indicated by a Minister of the Crown as morally unregenerate and socially outcast.

May I digress one moment to say that there were several errors in the reporting of my address in the Evening Telegram, some of commission, others of omission. One of the omissions referring to the company, I considered serious. My critical comments were reported, but the paper failed to report my saying, in so many words, that I had reason to believe the company was now seeking to help improve conditions and that in that community on the whole there were hopeful signs of increasing social responsibility. But the paper failed to report my saying so in so many words, and I quote:

"But I am glad to say there are more signs of improvement in these conditions there today than there have ever been in my remembrance, both from the company where I believe there are signs for the better, and from the people themselves as we have seen indicated lately. Things are on the move, and I believe we have seen the worst for that prosperous town."

I was, in fact, most anxious to have those positive items recorded.

I believed them, and I do so even more now, that my remarks could have been lifted to such a level in the public press that they would have done a great public service outside the narrow confines of this House. As it is, I believe my remarks have stirred the public conscious. And it is a great pity they were soured and perverted to cause in some quarters grievous human anxiety.

On Wednesday the 14th, I sent to the Evening Telegram a copy of a telegraphed protest from Reverend Father Bromley on behalf of the Community of Stephenville and a copy of my reply. The full text of the two telegrams: This message came from Rev. Fr. P. J. Bromley of Stephenville:

"Whole community of Stephenville indignant your remarks as published in the Evening Telegram seventh inst. Charges of such a base nature are fantastic and will do irreparable harm to a good people. Steps are being taken to deal with the matter."

This afternoon I replied in the following words:

"I can quite appreciate your anxiety and the anxiety of the people of Stephenville over the Evening Telegram's report on the seventh of my remarks in the House on the sixth. The Telegram quite erroneously attributed certain of my remarks as applying to Stephenville. At no time in the course of my ninety minute address did I mention Stephenville or in any way imply that I was referring to Stephenville. In actual fact I was not referring to Stephenville and did not have Stephenville in mind at any time at this point in my speech and the welfare officer I quoted was certainly not one from Stephenville. As I have known Stephenville over the years I have always thought of it as a respectable God-fearing community. The welfare problems that Stephenville has had to meet within recent years are similar to those of other rapidly growing communities similarly situated and I can assure you and the people of Stephenville that your welfare officers' reports have always been fair and sympathetic. I can further say that we have been thinking of ways and means of improving our welfare services in your area and shall continue to do so. I am communicating a copy of this message to the Evening Telegram which in its issue today wrongly and without any justification whatever persists in construing my statement as referring to Stephenville. I regret exceedingly that my remarks are being so construed and I am considering making a statement to the House on Tuesday to this effect. Will you please convey immediately to the people of Stephenville on my behalf the contents of this message.

Yours truly,
HERBERT L. POTTLE, Minister.

These two telegrams, Sir, were published in the "Evening Telegram" on the following day, Thursday the 15th.

On the same day, Thursday the 15th, I gave the following statement on the radio stations.

"Please give full publicity to following statement: On Wednesday past I sent a signed statement to the Evening Telegram in which I said that I was definitely not referring to Stephenville in my recent speech in the House of Assembly. My denial was published in the Telegram the next day, Thursday the 15th.

"However, in spite of the fact that a written denial had come from me and was made public by press and radio; in spite of the fact that a telegraphed request had come from Stephenville to the Telegram for that paper to retract its statement; in spite of the fact that on Thursday the 15th the Telegram was still asking "If it is not Stephenville, where is the place?—in spite of all these facts the Evening Telegram in today's issue, Saturday the 17th, again publishes its earlier article where it positively identifies Stephenville as the place to which my remarks were applied, and fails to take any notice whatever of my emphatic denial.

"I know that a serious state of affairs has been created at Stephenville, and in view of the unwillingness of the Evening Telegram to retract its statement about Stephenville I feel I must in fairness to the people of that community and myself consider what further steps should now be taken to remedy this situation."

HERBERT L. POTTLE,
Minister of Public Welfare.
April 17th, 1954.

Now, Sir, in spite of the fact that my denial was made public; in spite of the fact that a request had come to the Evening Telegram from the community of Stephenville for that paper to retract its statement about Stephenville; in spite of the fact that the Evening Telegram was asking on the 15th, "If it is not Stephenville, where is the place?"—nevertheless on the 17th, the Evening Telegram had reprinted its earlier article of the 14th, in which it positively identified Stephenville as the community to which my remarks pointed. But the paper did not reprint my emphatic denial. That is a weekend paper, Mr. Speaker, and has an unusually large circulation.

I had a statement broadcast that evening pointing out these facts and saying that in view of the serious state of affairs existing at Stephenville and because of the unwillingness of the "Evening Telegram" to make any retraction whatever, I was obliged, in fairness to the people of that community and myself, to consider what further steps should now be taken to remedy this situation.

Mr. Speaker, there are at least four aspects of this issue that I wish to draw to the attention of the House.

In the first place, Sir, serious reflections have been cast upon one of our Newfoundland communities and named in the public press, and it has been thus unnecessarily disturbed and embarrassed.

Secondly; I can say, that the public welfare services in that area, as a result, have received a most serious setback.

Thirdly; The Evening Telegram's report has brought no little inconvenience and embarrassment both to the elected representative of the District concerned and to myself.

Fourthly; this matter is one which involves the privilege of the press in this House, of which the House should, I believe, take due notice.

I therefore move, Mr. Speaker, that the House Committee on Privileges be asked to investigate this matter and report in due course to the House. I table the papers from which I have quoted.

HON. W. J. KEOUGH (Minister of Fisheries and Co-operatives): Mr. Speaker, I rise to second the motion proposed by the Honourable Minister of Public Welfare.

The House will understand that I have a particular interest in the matter that the Minister has called to the attention of the House. Stephenville is located in the district which I represent here, and so it must be through me that the views of the people of Stephenville are heard in this House. Because of the report of the proceedings of this House on April 6th, as reported in the "Evening Telegram" on April 7th, the good reputation of the citizens of Stephenville has been besmirched, to my mind with malice. Consequently I cannot do less, Mr. Speaker, than demand on behalf of the people of Stephenville the full measure of satisfaction that this House may be able to order. The breach of privilege of this House of which the Honourable Minister of Public Welfare complains, and in which I support him, involves the putting of words into the mouth of a Minister of the Crown which he did not say. The consequence of that action is that the character of the people of Stephenville has been called into question, indeed called into decided disrepute.

Let us look once again at what the Evening Telegram said that the Minister of Public Welfare said: I quote, Sir, from the issue of the Evening Telegram, April 7, reporting the proceedings of the House on April 6 and in particular the remarks of the Honourable Minister of Public Welfare. The Evening Telegram says (quote):

"And there was one area where there was no unemployment, said Dr.
Pottle (again he did not name the centre but he referred to Stephenville). Here in spite of prosperity, the welfare officer reported that 95% of the children should not be allowed to live with their parents, they should be decontaminated. Here, he declared wives are exchanged like chattels."

It can be proven from the report, Mr. Speaker, Hansard can be produced to prove it, and the Minister of Public Welfare in any case just produced the record to prove he at no time during the course of his remarks mentioned Stephenville.

I have to add that I sat in this House during the course of the Minister’s remarks, and at no time did it appear to me that he meant Stephenville, nor that his remarks were directed at Stephenville. Let me go further and say that, had it appeared to me that his remarks were directed at Stephenville I should certainly have taken him to task for it when I spoke the following day, although I would have been decidedly out of order in doing so because it is beyond the competence of any member of the House to impute motives or inferences from the remarks of another. Although, Mr. Speaker, it is beyond the prerogative the Evening Telegram has taken it unto itself.

I will quote again from its report of April 6th: “Again I do not know the centre but he referred to Stephenville.” I submit, Mr. Speaker, no member of this House could make that remark and have it stand on the record, yet that is just exactly what the “Evening Telegram” presumed to do. Now, as it appears to me, Mr. Speaker, this is not just a case of a reporter having gotten out of line and possibly getting his paper in trouble.

The “Evening Telegram” subsequently and in its editorial of April 10th obviously accepted the report of its reporter at its full face value and commented accordingly. Not only that but on two subsequent occasions the Evening Telegram persisted in its position in an article appearing on page 3 of the April 14th issue of the Evening Telegram in which it stated: “The inference was plain to Dr. Pottle’s listeners, that he referred to Stephenville Area though he did not say so in so many words.”

Again in the issue of the “Evening Telegram,” April 17th, although in the meantime the Honourable Minister of Public Welfare had issued a categorical denial that he had meant Stephenville, the “Evening Telegram” had this to say: “The inference was plain to Dr. Pottle’s listeners that he referred to Stephenville Area though he did not say so in so many words.”

MR. M. M. HOLLETT (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, may I rise to a point of order: I believe it is the purpose of the motion to have this referred to the attention of the Committee on Privileges. I suggest that the recommendations presently being made would tend to prejudice a committee in its deliberations. May I ask further if there has been any Committee on Privileges appointed thus far in this session?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, in answer to that point, I do not think it is a good point of order. The member who spoke first has the right to state his reasons, and the honourable gentleman speaking has exactly the same right, and that is the right he exercises, and he is not out of order in so doing. As to whether or not there is a committee—
MR. SPEAKER: The Honourable Minister has a point of privilege himself which just happens to coincide with the one just raised by the Honourable Minister of Public Welfare. A Committee of Privileges—yes, it was appointed on opening of this present parliament, to last for the life of the parliament. The names of the members of that Committee are on the notice board in the hall. The honourable member may continue his complaint.

MR. KEOUGH: Mr. Speaker, referring to this item which appears in the issue of April 16th, the weekend edition of the "Evening Telegram," I was quite prepared at first sight to give the "Evening Telegram" the benefit of the doubt, and to think that perhaps whoever was responsible for the news-of-the-week page happened to pull this particular item that referred to Stephenville out of the stack published previously during the week, and that it just happened to get in there through an oversight. But that is not so, Mr. Speaker. In the April 14th issue of the "Evening Telegram" the first paragraph reads: "The first repercussions from Welfare Minister, Dr. H. L. Pottle's speech in the Legislature on "Unfinished Business" was heard in the Capital today."

In the end-of-the-week edition published April 17th the first paragraph read: "The first repercussions from Welfare Minister Dr. H. L. Pottle's speech in the Legislature on "Unfinished Business" was heard in the Capital Wednesday." So that a word was changed in the end-of-the-week edition to bring the matter up to date. Therefore, I say, notwithstanding the fact that the Minister of Public Welfare had in the meantime made a categorical denial of the statement that he had meant Stephenville, the "Evening Telegram" persisted, and did so with premeditation, in its stand.

Now, let us look at the charge that has been made, as far as I am concerned, by the "Evening Telegram." In accepting the inferences of its reporter and repeating them the "Evening Telegram" charged that 95% of the children of Stephenville should not be permitted to live with their parents but should be taken from them and decontaminated. By accepting the inferences of its reporter, and persisting in them the "Evening Telegram" charged that in Stephenville wives were exchanged like chattels. That means, Mr. Speaker, that the "Evening Telegram" has charged that a great number of the population of Stephenville are living in adultery, and their children should be taken from them. That, Sir, I class as a deliberate, infamous, dispicable and monstrous lie. There is this I should add, in fairness and justice to the proprietors of the "Evening Telegram" thoroughly reputable members of the community across the years who have conducted the operations of a newspaper with skill, and their journal is highly respected in this province by all classes. It is indeed regrettable that in this instance the columns of that journal should have fallen into the hands of an irresponsible who, in my opinion, was guided by motives of political malice.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, let me say that I know the people of Stephenville probably better than any other member of this House, and certainly know them better than any members of the press gallery who may suddenly have taken it upon themselves to play God. I can vouch to this House and this province for the people of Stephenville as law-abiding, hard-working and God-fearing. It may well be true that during the last dozen years there has been an influx into the community of Stephenville of certain undesirables, just as there may have been an influx of such undesirables to St. John's and Gander and Grand Falls and any other place in the Island where ready employment is offered for remuneration. So Stephenville is no worse off or more unfortunate in that respect than these other large centres I have named. In any other case I know the people of Stephenville at first hand. I know many of them by their first names, and I can vouch to this House and to this province for them as people who are very concerned with the Christian concept, very much concerned to live a Christian life. Therefore, on their behalf I repudiate the charge leveled against them, and on their behalf I demand the full measure of satisfaction that this House may be able to order.

HON. E. S. SPENCER (Minister of Public Works): Mr. Speaker, I rise for the purpose of supporting the motion made by the Honourable Minister of Public Welfare, and to speak very briefly to this topic which has been dealt with by two of my colleagues. I shall not at all attempt to go into the details of the specific references and quotations which have appeared from time to time to cause pain and embarrassment to a fine people in any section of Newfoundland. These details and specific references have been dealt with sufficiently by my colleagues, and I merely rise to say that I do regret, deeply regret, that a great journal which I have had the privilege to review, as many another citizen of my age has for upwards of forty years, and which has from time to time built up a reputation for its fair minded, faithful, honest and good writing. I recall, in making that comment, a comment made by the Honourable the Premier in this House very recently wherein he said it was regrettable indeed that the editor of that paper was unfortunately ill and unable to fulfill his normal daily task. I recall the Premier said on that occasion that he felt, had that gentleman been at his desk, no such ridiculous statement would have appeared in its editorial column.

Mr. Speaker, the proprietors of that journal, as my honourable colleague, the Minister of Fisheries and Cooperatives has said, are a very reputable people. They are personally known to me, and I question too, as a great many others present in this House, and I again express my regret that the names of these people must be brought into disrepute by the present methods of reporting in Her Majesty's House of Assembly in this province. I have been reminded that these things may have been caused due to the inexperience on the part of reporters. I am well aware that there are several youthful reporters here, but all, as far as I know, young men and young women of great integrity and good education. Whether or not they have had the necessary experience to report correctly and to decide as to what should be said and what should not be said is not within my province to say. I do not propose to say. Nevertheless it remains that this unfortunate incident has occurred, and words, as my honourable colleague has pointed out, have been imputed to the Honourable Minister of Public Welfare which he at no time allowed to pass his lips.
Then it has been made clear that it is the duty of this House to the public of Newfoundland and to the people of Stephenville in particular, and possibly other communities that inferences have been made regarding—to see that as far as this House is concerned these imputed references are perfectly clarified. To that end, Mr. Speaker, I am satisfied to leave the matter entirely to the Committee, which will in due time and in accordance with this motion take care of it. I cannot but help being reminded of one or two quotations that I recently got hold of in reading with regard to writers and I give them, if I may be permitted, for what they are worth. To either youthful, inexperienced or other writers, as the case may be, I say, I do not impute any motives to them other than the motive of good reporting which is their duty to do. Whether they do so or not is not for me to say. I do not sit in judgment. But I do contend and know that there are many, many cases of reporting which, even in my own department, could very readily be picked up and be referred to me as head of the department. These are things we do not allow to bother us very much. But when it comes to a reporter causing great pain and anxiety to people of this province, as a Minister of the Crown, Mr. Speaker, I feel it is my duty to rise in support of the idea of doing away with such a possibility. Let us try to get honest and faithful reporting. I now quote for the benefit of the House generally one or two little quotations I recently picked up by two great writers. Emerson says as follows: "Talent alone cannot make a writer, there must be a man behind the book." And No. 2: A quotation by a great writer, who said: "Bad writers are those who try to express their own feeble ideas in the language of good ones." I give one other quotation before I close, Mr. Speaker: It is in the words of the great Thomas Paine, one of the greatest men who fought on behalf of labour in the great North American Continent who said: "A man may write himself out of a reputation when nobody else can do it."

Mr. Speaker, I support the motion.

HON. F. W. ROWE (Minister of Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I rise to add my support to the motion made by the Honourable Minister of Public Welfare. In doing so, I would make just three comments. First of all I think I should in justice to my colleague making the motion say that he, as far as I know, had no idea that I intended to support his motion. I say that because, as this House knows, I worked with and under the direction of that honourable gentleman for some three years. It is in part because I did work for three years and under him had a hand in setting up the welfare organization in Newfoundland that I support his motion. I know something of the contribution that gentleman has made to Public Welfare, not only in Newfoundland, but all across Canada. As a matter of fact I don't think this has been said before; when the Honourable Minister of Public Welfare of this Province speaks on welfare matters all Canada listens. In fact, insofar as social welfare is concerned the whole world listens. I know something of the contribution, the self-sacrifice and labour of that gentleman to the cause of Public Welfare. I also know something of the West Coast. I have lived on the West Coast for many years. As the House probably knows I brought my wife with me from the West Coast.
I have a very deep personal interest, but I would like to say that this is a matter which transcends mere personal interest. It is a very important matter involving the whole integrity not only of this House but of a great community in this province.

I listened to the honourable gentleman speak, every word. When he finished I did not have the faintest idea as to whether he had any specific locality in mind. No. 2: I did not know whether he referred to my own district of Labrador or the District of Ferryland. I too have in my own district very serious welfare problems in certain communities. I had no idea whether the Honourable Minister meant my district or any other. In fact I was left with the impression that the honourable gentleman was trying to get across a principle not as a reference to some specific little spot in Newfoundland, but a great principle of unfinished welfare in Newfoundland.

I have great pleasure, sir, in adding my support to that motion.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the Opposition, I rise to support the motion of the Honourable Minister of Welfare. The mere fact of any journal or newspaper having misquoted a Minister of the Crown seems to me demands an apology or some other remedy. That apparently has not been undertaken by the paper in question.

I do deplore the fact that the Honourable Minister, after five years of intense social effort in this, the Tenth Province, should have found it necessary or obligatory upon himself to make the statement which he did make in this House in reference to this one of the Ten Provinces of Canada. It is unfortunate, I say, that any man in this House, much more so any Minister, should be able to rise in his place to state that wives were exchanged like chattels and 95% of the children should be taken from the custody of their parents. It is something we all ought to take very seriously to heart. Not only must the Committee on Privilege go into the matter of a statement by a daily paper, but I think the House should go into the matter of the statement made by the Honourable Minister, and if it is correct, then we as a Province ought to be jolly well ashamed of ourselves.

I rise to support the motion, sir, but I would like to point out in the matter of the Committee, as I read it, standing order 88, "A committee of five to be named by the mover shall be appointed on motion of the Leader or other member of the Government as early as possible in each session whose duty it shall be to prepare a list of members to compose the following standing committees of the House."

Amongst these is a committee on Privileges and Elections. So I submit, sir, that the committee has still to be appointed, although I may be wrong on that perhaps.

MR. SPEAKER: Before putting the motion to the House, it remains for me to say whether in my opinion a prima facia case exists or not. In doing so I feel I ought to point out to honourable members one or two things regarding the principle involved here especially as it is the question of the privilege of freedom of speech without which there could be no parliamentary assembly anywhere.
At the beginning of every parliament since 1541 the properly appointed Speaker of that parliament presented a petition in which the ancient rights and privileges are requested. That has been done in this House, and has been done for the Legislative Assembly. The petition is always granted. In an Act of Henry VIII the privileges of freedom of speech and the protection of members in their speeches in the House was granted statutory recognition. Again after the revolution of 1688 statutory recognition was given and the privilege of freedom of speech, one may say, clearly defined in the Bill of Rights. That has not been changed, and any person who violates the privilege of the freedom of speech does so at his own peril.

In the words of "May," and before I quote him let me point out that this principle of freedom of speech is not something merely for Ministers of the Crown nor for this side of the House nor that side of the House but it is for the parliament itself, the whole body of members, because the Bill of Rights said that the freedom of speech on debates or proceedings in parliament ought not to be impeached or questioned in any court or place outside of parliament. Only the House itself has the right and that is laid down in the same section —only the House has the right to take to task or punish a member for unparliamentary words and speeches in the House. As Sir Erskine May says then: Subject then to the rules of debate a member may state whatever he thinks fit in debate however offensive it may be to the feelings of character of individuals, and he is protected by his privilege from any occasion for libel as well as from any other queries or molestation. You cannot, however, accept May’s word without reference to ancient speeches and ancient acts in parliament which may thus be said to be unquestionable and free. But this freedom from external interferences does not involve unrefrained license of speech within the walls of the House.

Since 1771, I believe, newspapers have been reporting and commenting upon speeches made in both Houses. Strictly speaking it is still illegal to report speeches. However, since that time all Houses of Parliament have realized the necessity and the value of having their speeches reported for the information of the general public. But, and this is a very important "but" the House will have to consider this, especially the committee to whom the motion is referred: False reporting and misrepresentation of speeches made in the House are breaches of privilege, and they have often been dealt with severely and sometimes moderately. Publishing scandalous misrepresentations (I am quoting) of what has been said in debate, publishing gross or willful misrepresentations of particular members’ speeches; these are two instances of breach of privilege of the freedom of speech. So when the evidence is produced here today and goes to the Committee, and when the Committee makes its report, both the Committee and the House must examine it without fear or favour in the one hand and without any vindictiveness on the other. The paper in question must be given a fair show, produce its own written word and the Hansard of the House must be made available to the Committee so that the spoken words of the Minister in question may be compared therewith. The Committee will report to the House, and the House will decide itself, not I, but the House.

On the strength of what has been said here today I must declare a prime facie case does exist. Now the motion is that the complaint of the Honourable Minister of Welfare and of the Minister of Fisheries and Co-operatives too referred to a Committee on Privileges.

Motion carried.

There is the point brought up now by the Honourable Leader of the Opposition: It is my recollection, subject to correction, that at the beginning of this Legislative Assembly, the committees were appointed for this Parliament. However, if the House wishes to appoint a Committee of Privileges and elects to do so now it would be quite agreeable to Mr. Speaker. I might say, the present committee as it stands consists of the Honourable the Attorney General, the Honourable Member for Harbour Main-Bell Island, the Honourable Member for St. John’s East, and the Honourable Member for Green Bay, and the Honourable Member for Placentia West. What is the will of the House?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, so that there may be no doubt whatsoever, and just in case there is some technical obstacle, I move that the Committee on Privileges the members of which Your Honour just gave be confirmed and reappointed or reelect for this present session.

MR. HOLLETT: I will second that, Mr. Speaker.

Motion carried.

Presenting Reports of Standing and Select Committees

DR. POTTLE: Mr. Speaker, I have a statement to present relating to Northern Labrador in which this Province as a whole will be especially interested. This will concern not least of all the member for Labrador who has worked in the past very considerably in making possible the reports to the House that I wish to make now. The first relates to the steamship service to Northern Labrador:

Following negotiations between the Newfoundland Government and the Government of Canada, it has been decided that the Canadian National Railways will in future operate the Northern Labrador Steamship service as an extension of its Newfoundland Coastal Steamship services.

The Northern Labrador Steamship service has been operated by the Government of Newfoundland since 1942, when it accepted responsibility for the administration of the depots on Northern Labrador formerly under the management of the Hudson’s Bay Company.

This service which was originally introduced for the benefit of Labrador fishermen (floaters) in the area north of Hopedale also served the trading depots at Davis Inlet, Nain, Nutak and Hebron. The costs of operating the passenger and transportation service in that area have been borne until now entirely by the Government of Newfoundland.

It is hoped that the new arrangement will result in an improved service to the northern outposts of the province. The details of the arrangement will be worked out shortly.
The second statement I wish to make refers likewise to Northern Labrador, and in this instance too relates to rehabilitation of the people of that area:

NORTHERN LABRADOR

During recent months the Government of Newfoundland has been interceding with the Government of Canada in the interests of the long-term rehabilitation of the Eskimos and Indians of Northern Labrador.

It has been considered by both Governments that the most single effective means toward this end would be to begin by improving the general health services in that area.

Agreement has now been reached on a number of proposals. These are as follows:

1. The Government of Canada will assume 66⅔ per cent of agreed capital expenditures on Eskimo account and 100 per cent of agreed capital expenditures on Indian account in the fields of welfare, health and education, the aggregate cost to the Government of Canada not to exceed $200,000.

2. The Government of Canada further undertakes to conduct a ten-year general health programme in Northern Labrador. This programme will include not only a vigorous anti-tuberculosis campaign, but also full Federal responsibility for the transportation, rehabilitation and treatment of Indians and Eskimos during the ten-year period, regardless of the nature of the illness. It is estimated that the cost to the Government of Canada for such a programme over the next ten years will lie in the neighbourhood of $1,500,000.

3. The Government of Newfoundland will resume its responsibility for the payment of relief to Indians and Eskimos which had been refunded by the Government of Canada to Newfoundland since 1949.

The Government of Newfoundland feels that this plan when carried into effect will represent a programme of basic rehabilitation for the Eskimo and Indian populations of Northern Labrador. The plan came into effect on April 1st, 1954.

I believe, Sir, there are sufficient copies for the House and for the press.

Giving Notice of Questions

MR. BROWNE—To ask the Honourable the Minister of Fisheries and Co-operatives to lay on the Table of the House the following information:

1. What experiments were made in each year since 1949 with various types of fishing vessels, owned or leased by the Newfoundland Government or jointly with the Federal Government?

2. Give the cost of purchase or hire of each boat with the value of the returns if any.

3. How many long liners have been used and what was the cost of each and what was the value of the returns of each?

MR. FOGWILL—To ask the Honourable the Minister of Public Works to lay on the table of the House the following information:

What is the extent of the work presently being carried out on the Mount Pearl Road, how much grading and resurfacing is being done, what is the estimated cost. Is the work being done by the Department of Public Works or by contract, if by contract, who is the contractor?

Answers to Questions

Answer to Question No. 56 tabled by Mr. Hefferton.

Question No. 56:

1. In connection with the supply of eggs to the several institutions account for the difference in prices charged by Wilsils Ltd. of 63c. and by the Two Way Stores of 70c.

2. With regard to the accepted tender price of Chalker & Co. for 80c. per pound for Boiled Ham supplied to the General Hospital and the Sanatorium, why was this price later raised to $1.01 per pound? Why was the accepted offer of 64c. per pound for Raw Ham raised by Chalker & Co. to 81c. and why was the price for Bacon raised from 53c. up to 75c.?

3. What arrangement has been set up by the Department with Messrs. Goodyear and House with regard to the supply of commodities listed in Question (29), to the West Coast Sanatorium? What prices were charged for these commodities.

4. Explain the cause for a difference in price of 8c. per gallon for milk supplied to the Home for Aged and Infirm and the Mental Hospital.

Answer No. 56:

1. The price of 63c. per dozen is price quoted in case lot deliveries—the price of 70c. per dozen is due to delivery in dozen lots to small institutions.

2. All tenders include a clause allowing price changes subject to market fluctuations. Contracts are for a twelve month period and adjustments in contracts are made only after Departmental survey of current quotations.

3. Where possible, supplies—e.g. eggs—are bought locally; otherwise goods bought on monthly requisition at competitive prices and subject to the normal fluctuations of market conditions.

4. We were unable to obtain all our requirements at $1.20 per gallon and were therefore obliged to buy elsewhere at the higher figure.

Orders of the Day

Adjourned debate on the Address in Reply to the Speech from the Throne:

DR. ROWE: Mr. Speaker, first of all I should like to congratulate the mover and seconder of the Address in Reply. At the same time I would like to say that, in my opinion, all the speeches made in the House this year have been of an extremely high order. That I think particularly applies to those made by private members. I should like not to congratulate only the mover and seconder but in particular the other private members who have spoken in this debate.

In my remarks this afternoon, which I must of necessity make somewhat brief, I shall confine myself to two major approaches in the debate. I am sure the House will bear with me for a few moments if I make some references to the district of Labrador.

I make no apology for referring to this district because it is the one that this House and the people generally know the least about. It is at the same time by far the largest, larger in fact by two and a half times that of the whole island of Newfoundland. Some of us have not yet gotten used to the idea that it is anything but a territory. I still see it referred to as Newfoundland's Northern Territory as though it were some colonial possession. It is of course nothing of the kind, but is an integral part of the province where the people, four out of five of whom are white people like ourselves, and the other fifth is made up of Esquimaux and Indians who all have the same rights, Mr. Speaker, you and I enjoy here.

It is to me a very gratifying coincidence that the Honourable Minister of Public Welfare who is interested not only on behalf of his department but has been Chairman of a Committee set up by the Executive Government to consider Northern Labrador, it is a gratifying coincidence to me that he is able to make a double announcement today, which I fear with the commotion which was going on in the galleries when he made it, may not have been fully apparent to all of us here. This Government has been working for four or five years on such an arrangement with the Federal Government whereby that Government would assume what we have always considered to be the proper responsibility in the administration of Northern Labrador affairs where the majority of the people are Esquimaux and Indians. Not only will this arrangement which the Honourable Minister has spoken about relieve this province of the expenditure of what would appear must be several millions of dollars, but it marks the beginning of an intensified campaign to rehabilitate the whole of that area.

Also because of the taking over of the responsibility for transportation in Northern Labrador, a responsibility which in my view should have been taken over by the C.N.R. at the time of Union, but which in some way did not occur, but because the Federal Government now, through the C.N.R., have taken over that responsibility it will make possible a far better transportation system for the whole of Labrador including the Straits of Belle Isle, that great coast running from Battle Harbour right on north and the great inland sea of Lake Melville, two hundred miles from Goose in the heart of Canada, and in addition that great stretch from Cape Harrison north, usually referred to as "Northern Labrador." Of that system, I have reason to believe, within the next day or two the management of the C.N.R. here will be making a detailed announcement on the ways envisaged for this new C.N.R. Transportation Programme. Indeed the C.N.R. has in some measure taken me into their confidence knowing I was to make a statement here today, and I have some knowledge as to what their arrangements may contain. I understand that for the first time certain communities on the Labrador will have a regular steamship service. I don't know if that is fully appreciated by all of us. If we were to think of some fairly large settlement on the South Coast of Newfoundland which never in history had a steamship call can you imagine what it would mean for them to know for the first time in their lives that they were to have a regular steamship service? Let me cite just one example, Mr. Speaker; the most thickly populated part of Labrador is the upper end of Lake Melville, the area of Goose Airport, the great military airforce base of Goose and the very large and growing community of Happy Valley and North West River. Until two years ago the people of North West River, since Goose Airport came into being, is the largest settlement in Labrador, and, Sir, I don't mind saying it is, in the opinion of everybody who ever visited it, probably the most civilized community of the whole Province of Newfoundland. That large and continually growing community of North West River until two years ago never had any steamship service of any kind. Last year I am glad to say, as a result of representation made in Ottawa by me and also here, North West River did receive a one-way steamship service. But because it was only one-way it meant that if any resident of Happy Valley, Goose Airport or North West River or any smaller community in that area wished to come south on Labrador, say Battle Harbour or Cartwright, or south to Newfoundland as many of them did during the summer season, he had to get aboard the Kyle at North West River after perhaps going twenty-five miles in a very rough sea from Happy Valley and go out the great expanse of Lake Melville and go between two and three hundred miles to the north in order to come south. That will be eliminated in the new service, I understand. There is at St. Mary's River a hospital. George's Cove, Port Hope Simpson, Postville (a new settlement), and Goose Airport, will now be regular posts of call as a result of this new transportation system. That is only one part of the arrangement.

The problem of Labrador, Mr. Speaker, is the problem of Newfoundland many times magnified. It is no different, in essence from the problem of Newfoundland, the only difference is it is many times magnified. On Labrador, for example we have (I heard some gentleman speak here and refer to, and I believe he represented one of the largest districts in the Island of Newfoundland and he referred to something like fifty communities in his district) we have a very large number of communities on Labrador. We have, according to the last census one hundred and eight communities ranging from a few families to great centres like Goose Airport. One hundred and eight communities stretched over a coastline from L'Anse au Clair at the border of Quebec and the Province of Newfoundland right on to the Straits of Belle Isle to Cape Chidley, a coastline, Mr. Speaker, whose length is not yet known by any living person. That will give us some idea of the tremendous problem when I make that statement that the length of the coastline is unknown. It is true, for two hundred years our people have been familiar with the headlands everywhere from the Straits right on north to Cape Chidley, but there are indentations in Labrador which have never been chartered up to this time. Just one example will serve to show what I mean. Nain, the headquarters of the Moravian Missions on the Labrador, is a highly civilized community with boarding schools and now, I believe, a hospital or at least a nursing station. But the nearest living person to Nain is sixty miles away either way north or south. L'Anse au Clair which I try to visit every summer and Nain which I try to visit every summer are further apart, Mr. Speaker, than St. John's and Halifax. Why do I refer to that now? For this reason. While I regard it as a very great honour to represent a district so vast as Labrador, I don't know this, but I am told it is the largest provincial constituency in all Canada, I don't know but it certainly must be one of the largest. I regard it as a great honour to represent that and to be able to say that I represent in our provincial parliament a great district, but my conscience will not allow me to say that any one person can represent that vast area and all these scattered communities in this House of Assembly. I don't know what will happen in this new Redistribution Bill in the future. But I certainly feel that the time has come when we have to recognize not only the population of Labrador but the vast potentialities of that area. I feel that one matter which we as a Government have to give some consideration to in the near future on Labrador is a roads programme. I hope the Honourable Minister of Public Works will not mind my referring to this, when I say I have recommended to him this year, to his department this year that if at all possible two major pieces of construction be commenced immediately, one is the linking up in the Straits of Belle Isle of the fifteen settlements lying from L'Anse au Clair to Red Bay a distance of only thirty-five miles. There are fifteen settlements in that area yet for weeks at a time even in the summer, as I know personally, for days and sometimes weeks, particularly in the fall and in the spring the times in the year when the Arctic ice is moving the people of Red Bay are further away from their nearest neighbour than we ourselves are from Gander Airport. There are no roads of any kind, apart from the little that has been done in the past three or four years. I am hoping it will be found possible to make a beginning on a highway to link up these fifteen settlements. The other thing I have recommended to the Department is that we should endeavour to link up North West River, the most important settlement in central Labrador, with Goose Airport which is only about twenty miles away; actually there the only need is for about fourteen miles of road.

Popular knowledge of Labrador is based for the most part on what our fathers and forefathers brought back from their contact with the headlands, the outside coast. But there are two worlds in Labrador, as I have learned personally, one of which we know very little about. One is the world of the headlands, the outside coastline, bleak, barren, forbidding at times, beautiful nevertheless; nothing seems to grow, nothing seems to live but seabirds; the places which our forefathers frequented in the Labrador fishery. The other world is the great inland bays, the inlets, an entirely different world, different climatically, different vegetation, and entirely different potentialities. The two hottest days (I don't intend to spend too much time on this, Mr. Speaker) the two hottest days I ever spent in my life were at two places in Labrador, about five hundred miles apart. One is St. Mary's River and the other at Goose Airport in July. These were the two hottest days I ever spent. We have to revamp our entire thinking about Labrador. Here the other day, a few weeks ago, we had evidence of what is being done not in southern Labrador but in one of the more northerly parts, Kiglapait Bay where one man, the Pentecostal Missionary there grew his year's supply of potatoes, a milestone in the history of Labrador. It is the first time a man grew his potatoes and with the encouragement of my department this year, I understand every one in the community intends to follow suit. I saw grass near Kiglapait Bay which is roughly two hundred miles north of Goose Airport, I saw grass there standing up shoulder high. We sent some sheep down there, un-Fortunately the ram died on the way. However, the sheep have thrived and we are now sending more down.

I want to make reference also, Sir, to something, and this may sound strange, something in Labrador which has been underestimated, in my opinion is the timber reserves of Labrador. I believe the timber reserves of Labrador, in spite of all that is said about them, have been underestimated. I am not going into detail, but I will say this, Sir, I have never had any money unfortunately at any time in my life to invest in anything apart from my home and a bit of life insurance and I never expect to have very much. But if I did have any money to invest, Mr. Speaker, if I were looking for ways and means of investing money, I would certainly invest it in the timber potentialities of Labrador.

MR. HOLLETT: You would have to see BRINCO first.

DR. ROWE: I am coming to that, Mr. Speaker, and I think the honourable gentleman who just made that interjection is going to appreciate what I have to say on it—I will come to that in a moment.

Last year we were able to encourage two very small operations in Alexis Bay and in St. Michael's Bay in Labrador, and there were small local operations done, not under the supervision of but in connection with the operation of the two great paper companies, not by the paper companies, mind you, but they undertook to sponsor them. These two operations while they met with much difficulty and have been carried on with inadequate equipment have nevertheless shown us beyond any doubt whatsoever that such operations in Southern Labrador are an economic feasibility. As this House will recall, we made an agreement with a company for the Sandwich Bay area. That company has until the end of this year, I believe it is, at least until late this year, in order to pick up its option. The company did not pick up its option last fall, however, I think I understand the circumstances. I think I owe it to the House to say why: Last fall along with other things the bottom fell out of the pulpwood markets so much so, I understand from Bowaters, it was a drug on the market to the extent that they could buy it in the Mainland of Canada and land it in the mill in Corner Brook cheaper than they could produce it anywhere in Newfoundland. Because of that situation the company with whom we had the Sandwich Bay agreement decided to hold off a few months to see what would happen. That is quite natural. A lot of people in the United States and elsewhere thought we were on the verge of a serious recession. I think opinions on that are beginning to change very quickly. I had word the other day from the Sandwich Bay Company that they hoped to be going into Labrador as soon as the Labrador navigation opens. That is as far as I can go on that.

I would like to say this: in Southern Labrador, now mind you, Mr. Speaker, I am not referring to the great timber resources of Lake Melville, but those in there we have heard of at the time of the Seigheim agreement and which we have heard about since in connection with BRINCO and NALCO, in Southern Labrador we have Green River flowing out into the Straits, we have St. Louis Bay River, a great river where incidentally we landed the moose last year, we have the Alexis River, the Gilbert River, the Hawke River going north and we then have the great rivers flowing into Sandwich Bay, the Eagle River, the second but one largest river in all Labrador and the Paradise and North River and the Back Bay River. Any one of these rivers, Mr. Speaker, in my opinion, and I hope the House will appreciate I don't say that without having given the matter some thought, having been in a position to get some information on it, in my opinion any one of these rivers, not all put together but any one is capable of supporting a large economic pulpwood and lumbering organization. That has nothing to do with Lake Melville nor the Hamilton River itself and its great watersheds, the Naskaupi River and the Grand River emptying out into North West River, so vast, Mr. Speaker, that when I crossed it by canoe last year I thought it almost incredible that we should have such a tremendous body of water, that is internally, that is the Hamilton River. I shall have a little further to say on that in a moment.

Our potentialities in timber down there are the greatest in fir and spruce in North America today, and I would say with the exception of Russia today the greatest in the world. Our reserves, unsubscribed, unused reserves of timber in Labrador are with the exception of those in Russia the greatest fir and spruce stands in the world today.

There must be further mineral development in Labrador. It is against the law of averages, the law of common sense to think that only in that one hundred and twelve thousand square miles that the only workable deposit is that great iron deposit that we have heard so much about in the last few years, especially in the last year or two. That is against the law of common sense. Labrador potentially is far richer than the Island of Newfoundland where already we have four or five mines, far richer than this island; I am told it is so geologically formed beyond any shadow of a doubt, by the law of averages, there must be in the course of time dozens of new mines coming into being. It is the purpose of this Government to bring these potentialities to reality.

I would like to make one further reference to an illusion that has existed regarding Labrador, and I have come across it a great deal when talking with potential investors when they are asked why don't they invest in Labrador. Well, it has a very short navigation season down there—Another old-wives tale—I don't know why this idea came into existence, but people in the southern areas say that Newfoundland is somewhere near the North Pole so we in Newfoundland think of Labrador as being away up there in the far north. But the fact that our forefathers went down there and usually got down there around the end of June and came home in September—we think the navigation season on Labrador was three months at the most. The actual fact of the matter is, Mr. Speaker, that for the whole southern half of Labrador, including Lake Melville there is practically no difference between the navigation season for that whole southern half and the navigation season for the north and northeast and east coast of Newfoundland. I think the quicker we get that into our heads the better for Labrador, because far too many of us in Newfoundland still feel—I speak with some heat on this matter, I have spoken to a lot of people in the last few years, and stated that it was feasible to have a steamship go to Lake Melville in November. They told me it was out of the question, you cannot send a steamer to Cartwright in November; yet the air force sends down steamships in December last year and this year will continue to do so.

Before I leave this matter of Labrador I would like to make one passing reference to something which very few people, for obvious reasons, know very little about and that is the extreme activity that there has been in Labrador in recent years in the operations of the bases. I am not revealing any military classified information when I say this: all I say is that no one here perhaps knows just how much has been going on down there. I mention it now to show that no matter what action is taken by this Government, no matter what interest is taken by the people of Newfoundland, the fact is Labrador is now willy-nilly in the world. I saw a reference the other day, a statement in "Time", I believe, to the effect that this year a statement was made in the House of Commons, if I may refer to it, I believe by the Honourable Minister of National Defense to the effect that it was proposed to establish what is called the McGill Fence right across Canada slightly to the north, I believe, his words were, of what is now the uninhabited part of Canada. That will obviously, Mr. Speaker, affect Labrador. In fact I know it will affect Labrador. Goose Airport has affected Labrador just as the other great bases we have heard something about affected Labrador; amongst other things it has caused a tremendous increase in the population down there. There are now settlements on the Labrador that two years ago did not exist, large settlements.

One final word about Labrador before I summarize what I have to say on this point: It is that the world does not know enough about what the religious leaders have done down in that great area. I had this brought home to me very vividly this past year when I went down on Labrador, not this past year but the year before, when I was very gratified to see the great work which is being done amongst the Indians of Davis Inlet by Father Sears, a French Canadian Priest of the Roman Catholic Church, a member of the Oblate Order. His work there, of course, is fairly well known, as he has been down there many years. Then I went to North West River and saw an Indian settlement there on the other side and saw the difference between them and the Indians at Davis Inlet, and I could not help wishing that it would be found possible to have some religious leader go there too. I am very glad to say that the Bishop who is concerned with Labrador, Bishop Scheffer of Quebec, last fall sent at some sacrifice, I am sure, one of his priests this time a Belgian priest, Father Pearson, and when I went back the difference, Mr. Speaker, you could not believe.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Did no one object to him?

DR. ROWE: No, I did not hear one protest from one single resident of that community of North West River about the fact that he was a Belgian. There were no objections. When I went back after an absence, and the priest had been there only about a month, I was amazed at the transformation which had taken place. It was, believe me, absolutely incredible, what had happened under the leader ship of that one man. I say the world does not know enough about what these religious leaders are doing, so I want to put my own appreciation on record. I am just coming to a point Mr. Speaker, of which my honourable colleague reminded me: First of all I would like to make reference to the Church of England Missions on Labrador, the one at Flower's Cove embracing the Straits of Belle Isle and the one at Battle Harbour taking in central Labrador going north and the one at Cartwright which takes in Sandwich Bay. Then there is the United Church Missions of which the best known is the one at North West River under Dr. Burry, and another one at Red Bay in the Straits of Belle Isle. Then there is the Pentecostal Mission at Port Hope Simpson and Happy Valley, particularly the one under Pastor Gillett, in my opinion one of the pioneer pastors of this province. I have already paid tribute to the Apostolic Bishop for Labrador. The Roman Catholic population now comes under the Right Rev. Bishop Scheffer domiciled at Blanc Sablon which is actually right by our border. He is able to give a service which probably would be impossible if the population came under one of the other Roman Catholic centres in the Island of Newfoundland. Finally, I would like to say a word about the Moravian Missions operating amongst the Esquimaux, often misunderstood, often amidst great difficulties, for it was I believe, 1779 they first went down there, and the first missionaries who went down there were killed by the Esquimaux, but that did not scare them anymore than it scared the Jesuit Missionaries of Quebec. Lastly I should make this reference to the work of the International Grenfell Association. I have heard the rumour, Mr. Speaker, within the near future, and I have no official knowledge of this, I have heard it rumored that within the near future the Superintendent of the Grenfell Association, Dr. Curtis, plans to retire. If that is so, and I am sure the time must be approaching when he must retire—it will be remembered that Dr. Curtis succeeded Dr. Grenfell himself as the Superintendent—when he retires this Province will be losing one of the greatest supporters in it. We down here, living in a vacuum half the time, have no idea, I had no idea until two years ago of the contributions that this great man, that great friend of kings and princes, a friend of President Roosevelt, and associate of some of the world's greatest men, we have no idea of the contribution of that man, the stature of that man, one of the greatest men, I would say, ever to work in this Province and in this country, and his contribution and the contribution of the International Grenfell Association to Labrador is something which we should have on record.

So for Labrador let me enumerate: It has the greatest reserve of spruce and fir in North America and one of the greatest in the world, with the greatest untapped source of hydro-electric power in North America, the Hamilton River, with its fabulously rich mineral belt, and without any doubt whatever still more fabulously rich unknown mineral wealth; with one of the best summer climates in North America; with tourist attractions infinitely greater than anything we have here in Newfoundland. I have always been one of the greatest exponents of the tourist attractions of this Island of ours, yet I say infinitely greater attractions than anything... we have here: with a hard-working, brave and courageous people, people who have survived centuries of neglect and I might say of injustice. The true story has not been told yet and perhaps it never will be of all the injustices suffered by our people on the Labrador, at the hands of what? Of the British Government? No, at the hands of Newfoundland. With all of these things I will end my remarks on Labrador by saying that, in my opinion, the future of that great area is brighter by far than that of any comparable area in the whole world.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I would like to come back to a more mundane, political aspect—I don’t use the word political in a derogatory respect but as an aspect of this debate. First of all I would like to congratulate the honourable member for St. John’s who has taken a seat in this House. Because of what I have to say later I want now before I begin to pay my respects to that honourable gentleman and I have sufficient good reason for doing so, sir. He was one of the few men, when I was a young man starting out, who took any interest in my personal welfare. I dare say this has probably slipped his memory but I recall on the occasion of my graduation from the Memorial College when I gave the valedictory, and it was just another valedictory, but the honourable gentleman who was then a judge sought me out. He had never seen me before, yet he sought me out, inquired about my prospects and even offered, and did in fact go further in endeavouring to secure some employment for me. I did not have to take advantage of his generosity, but I have always remembered it. For that reason, I say, I was rather happy when it had become known that the honourable gentleman was to sit in this House.

I am aware too of the contributions that he has made throughout the years to the co-operative movement, to the public library, and to the welfare of the civil service. For all of these things I was looking forward, and still do I might say, to the fact that this gentleman, although on the opposite side, would still be in the House and would make some contribution to it.

Having said that, sir, I will now say this: What I have heard from the honourable gentleman so far has been a great disappointment to me. I expected that after his experience in the House of Commons and after the rich experiences he has had in various public matters throughout the years he would have been able to bring some fresh approach in attacking this side of the House. I regret to say that this did not materialize. I know that although he might be highly critical of some of the things we have done, he might, after being absent for four years or so, show some recognition perhaps of some of the improvements this Government has brought about. Apart from a casual reference, a passing reference to the Public Welfare programme, I don’t think he had anything good to say about this Government’s programme in any way whatsoever, in the course of his maiden speech here. As to his references to the Premier, I understand perhaps his feelings of resentment—he has suffered some very heavy defeats, as have most of the honourable gentlemen on the other side, at the hands of the Premier, but I did expect him to show some appreciation, make some passing reference to the energy, courage and imagination which the Leader of the Government has shown during the past five years, whether he agrees or disagrees with his programme (and I don't suppose anybody on the other side agrees one hundred per cent with all the Premier advocated) I did expect this gentleman who had come to us from Ottawa and experienced in public matters would show some appreciation of the fact that the Premier displayed tremendous imagination, tremendous grasp of what is wrong with this Province and our needs, and that he has shown at least some humanitarianism in his dealings with the people of this Province. But when the honourable gentleman was finished I felt as if there was not even a "C," a passing grade for the Premier or any member on this side of the House, a passing "C" for effort. I hope it will not be said of the honourable gentleman, as it was said in the history of the Bourbons of France that they had "Learned nothing and forgotten nothing," in this case after four years—having learned nothing and forgotten nothing. Let me be a little more specific on that matter: The honourable gentleman referred to politics in the civil service. I must confess, and don't want to elaborate, the last person in the world I had expected to bring the matter up was the honourable gentleman who did so. I sometimes have felt a little sympathy for the opponents of the Premier when he was gone aboard them in debate. The Premier is recognized, I think, by most of us as being a very great debater, perhaps the greatest Newfoundland has known, but I must confess that the other day, if I may refer to it, when the Premier, to use a vulgarism, had the honourable gentleman over the barrel, I did not feel any great sympathy; he had asked for it, in my opinion. I want to make this general comment about politics and the civil service. It is this: I have studied the political history of Newfoundland, have given it a sizable amount of study, reading and research, looking up old records available, reading, I think, every record of this House since 1833 I could lay my hand on in any public or private library anywhere, and I will say this: It is my considered opinion that there is less politics in the civil service today than ever before in our history. There was a time, Mr. Speaker, when with every change of government every person in the civil service who was known to have any political connection with the party going out of power was automatically kicked out. In fact a great many of those who had no affiliation were kicked out to make way for friends of the incoming government. There is a certain amount of that, I suppose, in every government in the world under the democratic system, every government trying to look after some of its friends. But I will say there is less politics in the civil service in Newfoundland today than at any time in our history. I mention this because I know that it actually happened in our past that the sons and daughters of politicians lost their jobs, when absolutely innocent, lost their jobs because of the political connections of their father. That could not happen today. I don't know whether the honourable gentleman who spoke—

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, my honourable friend said he was asking a question—We are not complaining about people losing their jobs but people who were strong supporters on the side of the Government being promoted and given better jobs.

DR. ROWE: Mr. Speaker, is that a point of order?
MR. SPEAKER: I understood what the honourable gentleman said but did not understand it was a point of order.

DR. ROWE: I don't know if the honourable gentleman has any child, son or daughter, in the civil service today or connected with any government services, but I can say that I know his son or daughter would not lose a job today because their father happened to be on the other side.

MR. BROWNE: I doubt that.

DR. ROWE: I don't doubt it.

The honourable gentleman made some reference here directly concerning my department, i.e., the supply of birch, the birch mills and the supply of birch which he said was so small—I am paraphrasing again now and am subject to correction—at least I understood him to say that the supply of birch had seriously interfered with the operations of the mills, and he went on to say he understood that there had been some political interference—I am rather vague on this, Mr. Speaker—but there had been some political interference with the procurement of birch.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order—I did not say that nor anything like that at all.

DR. ROWE: Mr. Speaker, I will say, someone on the opposite side of the House said or I understood, there had been some political interference with the procurement of birch for the birch mill—birch mills—established with the help of the Government. I must confess I heard that with surprise, because this year I have had the honour to serve as one of Her Majesty's Ministers, in the Department of Mines and Resources, and a number of things naturally have given me great concern, and I have lost a lot of time and sleep on some of these problems that concern us. The future of the mining industry is one of the problems which comes to my mind now, the difficulty of farmers marketing their produce is another one, and the supply of agricultural livestock happens to be another. To my mind I have spent a lot of time with my staff in the department on these problems, but the one problem I have spent most time on in my two years was endeavouring to assist in every possible way in the procurement, the production of birch for that birch mill in there. Now, I have no idea what the honourable gentleman was referring to. I believe he mentioned Green Bay or somewhere in Notre Dame Bay or some part of the north east coast, I checked with the honourable member here who represents Green Bay to see whether he had any inkling as to what the honourable gentleman was getting at. He was as much in the dark as I. I have gone into our records, checked with our officials in every way, and gone over all the bills, and I state now, Sir, that the honourable gentleman was misinformed. I state categorically that never at any time in the past two years has there been any political interference with the production of birch in this Province. I ask him to give us details in this House or outside, I don't care which, and I will answer—there has been no political interference with the production of birch. I have lost too much time and sleep trying to work out with the paper companies and other people for the production of birch to take that. I ask him to give us information at any place or any time, and I say now, while he did make the statement in good faith he was misinformed, the information reaching him was false.

Mr. Speaker, it has been suggested to me that we have a five minutes recess.

DR. ROWE: Mr. Speaker, I believe that at the time that you moved a recess I was speaking of the supply of birch and of the complaint of some political interference with it. I was under the impression the remark was made by the recently elected member for St. John's West but I understand since it was made by the Honourable Leader of the Opposition. I do want to say this in connection with that: Whoever made it should be guided by the advice perhaps which the honourable and newly elected member for St. John's West tried to give to the Premier the other day, i.e., no one should be guided by hearsay—objections too have been made to hearsay being admitted here. It seems like a case of the pot calling the kettle black. It appears that the Honourable Leader of the Opposition was going on hearsay when he made that statement and consequently he has not given us any evidence to prove the validity of what he was told.

Now I should like to go on with some comments on some of the statements made by the honourable junior member, I presume for St. John's West. I was intrigued by one almost incidental, nevertheless, I think significant statement emanating from that honourable gentleman. As I recall it in his remarks, he stated that the Premier was a socialist, and he followed that up, as a result of prodding from this side of the House, that socialism was bad or evil. I am not quite sure what the word was. At any rate it was a word, I think, with that commutation. There is one person in this House at least, the Leader of the Government who is well able, better I am sure than anybody else in this House to defend himself, so that I don't refer to this because of the implied accusation against the Premier, but because I feel there are principles involved there.

I, Mr. Speaker, am not, I hope, a socialist any more than I am a fascist or a communist. I would not be able to say if anybody asked me, I don't know if any honourable member in this House could say that he or anyone of us belongs to any "ism" other than that we pride ourselves, I suppose, as far as it is possible to be Christians with all that that implies. I do feel that when words are banged around like "Socialism" and "Communism" that there is an important principle involved and a potential danger as well. I am not going to talk about the socialists of the world or people who call themselves socialists. There are some great socialists of our time like Bevan and Sir Stafford Cripps who gave their lives in the defence of our way of life though they called themselves socialists. The highly respected former Prime Minister of Great Britain, Mr. Clement Attlee calls himself a socialist, as do some of our friends in other provinces of Canada. I happen to know personally the Premier of Saskatchewan, and have talked and had discussions with him. I would not like to tell him that socialism is an evil thing. I certainly think he would react rather violently if he were told that. Why I refer to it now is this: I think, particularly in view of what is happening outside our shores and more particularly in view of what is happening in the United States of America, and I am not going into detail, I feel that in view of what is happening elsewhere, and the possible implications on our way of life here, it is very dangerous for us to be bandying words of that kind. I think there are too many issues involving the survival of our way of life, and which can involve our very physical survival on this planet: I think it is wrong for us to be placing such labels. Sir, it is a dangerous practice to start and can boomerang sometimes in most unexpected ways. We know that is the practice of totalitarian groups both communist and fascist who are none the less active today, Mr. Speaker, than they were ten years ago, don't let us forget that. I would oppose communism with every bone and muscle in my body. But let us not forget in doing that that the fascists are not less active today than when your kith and kin and mine and of all of us here were out fighting for their lives, and they are not all confined to Europe. I feel that the time is too serious for us to be labeling and adopting tactics of communism and fascism; whenever somebody disagrees with us to label him and his cause.

I am wondering—this is purely a rhetorical question—I wonder if the honourable gentlemen who have made use of that have ever considered where the presumption ranks in the catalogue of human failings.

Now, I want to refer to the fisheries. What I have to say, Sir, will not, I hope be a bare repetition of what has already been said here in the House. I will not presume any specialized knowledge of the fisheries. All I have is somewhat shall I say a sense of what is meant by the fisheries. That is inevitable, Mr. Speaker, because, and I hope the House will pardon the personal angle—when the population of Newfoundland was six thousand fishermen, and only six thousand fishermen, one of the six thousand was my ancestor. When the 31 remaining men from the men in Newfoundland defended Carbonear Island, one was my ancestor. I say that with a definite reason in mind. I never saw until I was fourteen or fifteen a quintal of fish salted or fresh fish or anything else. Nevertheless if any man in the Province is a product of the fisheries I am one of them because for three hundred years my ancestors here have lived and died by the fishery, and I mean that literally.

I am asking again a rhetorical question—are we to assume from what our friends on the other side of the House have said that there was once a golden age in the history of the fisheries in Newfoundland? Are we to assume that? After I heard one of the speeches the other day dealing with the fisheries and by inference blaming the Government for everything that happened in the fishery, I went home and read up several of the old Newfoundland Histories, including Prowse, to refresh my mind and I found that between 1815 and 1925 one-third of the people in Newfoundland, all of whom at that time were fishermen, apart from those connected with it, were living on public charity, one out of every three, men, women and children, and incidentally most of it came from England and from the Mainland of Canada. That was the period 1816 to 1925—no golden age there—then again in 1860—and I have reason to be deeply, personally interested in this period of the 1860's as it was the period in which my father was born. That is why I am personally interested in it and know something about it first hand. In 1860 one-third of the revenue, every dollar and cent, or I think it was called £s.d. in these days, but one-third of the total revenue collected by the Government went to provide relief. And when you consider that the relief at that day was corn meal and molasses you have some idea of the state of destitution of our fishermen. That was not for one year but over a period of nine or ten years. Now I know, and I am fully aware, that at the time and in fact at any time a very small minority of our people enjoyed a comparatively good income from the fisheries either directly or indirectly. I know that a small proportion, maybe one or two per cent had what we may call a gracious way of life. I can think of names, some of the names I know personally, some with whom my own people were associated. Thinking of our own bay—we had the Strongs of Little Bay Islands, wonderful people, one of whom married a former Premier of this Island. I mention these as illustrations—not in any blameworthy manner whatever—the Manuels of Exploits Bay—my father told me that Josiah Manuel personally owned 21 Labrador schooners. The Manuels of Exploits enjoyed their gracious way of living—the Ashbournes of Twillingate and Fogo, Winsors of Bonavista North; Ryans and Templemans of Bonavista, the Rourkes and Moores of Carbonear and other Conception Bay towns. Then on the South Coast, chiefly because of the nature of the fishery down there we had still more of these great families enjoying a prosperous way of life, a gracious way of life, the Warehams, Buffetts, Tibbos, Forseys and the Footes, and over on the Corner Brook part, the Baggs of Curling and there were others too up and down that coast. These were fine people. They were a necessary part of our way of life. The bank fisheries could not be carried on as it was without them—and there were also the Holletts—I apologize, Mr. Speaker, I left out one well known family, the Holletts of Burin from which the Honourable Leader of the Opposition is directly descended. These were in their time and in their day great people, great families who made their contributions and nobody blames them because they had at their disposal money and capital that enabled them to send their children to college and to enable them to enjoy amenities in their homes, anymore than anyone blames any businessman today. For that reason I don't refer to them in any derogatory or blameworthy way. Many of us are related by blood and by marriage to these very families, but here is my point: They constituted only one per cent and in some cases less than that. What was the dismal tale for the other 99% of the people in the fishery? It was poverty and destitution spread over the years. At no time did they have any security. I will tell this House this, Mr. Speaker, my father for thirty-five years prosecuted the Labrador fishery and for three years during this period his earnings were absolutely nothing, through no fault of his own it was a blank in 1910, 1911 and 1912, but his family had to live. I say this now, Sir, that he left it in utter disgust in 1912, and I never regretted the fact that he did. Perhaps if he had left it earlier the three children he buried during his years in the fishery would still be alive. That is true of hundreds of families, people became disgusted. Our fishermen were living in destitution with no security, people died, suffered from malnutrition. The reason why for years and years that we had the highest T.B. rate in the world is a sheer physical reason and was not all ignorance and the reason why our infant mortality was on a par with the jungles of Africa for years. I say now there never was a golden age in the fisheries. At no time did our fishermen ever have security. But if I knew nothing about it and listened merely to the Opposition telling us what we have done and what we have not done and who were to blame for things I would assume that the fisheries had a golden age, the millennium in 1949, at which time the decline started.

Mr. Speaker, I spent three years on the West Coast in the 1930's in a fishing settlement. People there had for the most part forsaken the fisheries and had gone to the lumber woods. I spent two years on the South Coast. In Grand Bank fifteen years ago most of the people had forsaken the bank fishery then. I spent several years in Wesleyville and most of the people had forsaken the Labrador fishery in 1930, and not when this Government was in power. My point is that the fishery for years and years has been declining. Just as soon as anything offering greater security or greater remuneration came along our people left the fishery.

I enumerate another statement, far from chastising this Government for neglecting the fishery this Government over a five year period has done more for the fishery of Newfoundland than any other government for any five year period in history. Had it not been for the help this Government gave the fishing industry, the fresh fish industry, and in one way or another the salt fish industry today both would be gone. There would be no fresh fish nor salt fish industry worth talking about in Newfoundland today. The steps taken by this Government kept the fishery going.

The Honourable the Leader of the Opposition made some reference in his speech to the Royal Commissions which we are setting up. Now simultaneously in his criticisms of these Royal Commissions he referred to the Ministers galavanting around the world—that is the exact expression I heard—galavanting around—and I noticed in the report carried in the "Daily News" that is given in quotations as well—"Galavanting around the world" is in quotations. The Honourable Leader of the Opposition said—there are too many commissions. He thought these two, fishery and agriculture and the one on forestry would have been unnecessary if the divisions concerned had done their work properly and were doing their work properly. Now, there seems to be some confusion in the honourable gentleman's mind at this point, at that time—in the first place all but one are in connection with my Department of Mines and Resources. We have a Royal Commission on Forestry and a Royal Commission on Agriculture and one also, a commission, not a Royal Commission but a commission of inquiry in connection with wild life conducted by the world's greatest authority on wild life. So that as to the reference to Ministers galavanting around the world I don't see the connection. Frankly if anyone is to be blamed for neglect it is myself, the Minister of Mines and Resources. It is certainly not the Minister of Public Welfare as he is certainly not responsible for agriculture, it is certainly not the Premier who has been to spend two weeks on a holiday in Jamaica at his own expense.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Please repeat that—own expense—

DR. ROWE: He happened to spend two weeks at Jamaica at his own expense this year which fact, by the way, served as a target for every Tory who could taken pen in hand and write a nasty letter to the press on it. Why on earth they can sit down and watch with equanimity when any businessman, every contractor, every lawyer takes a month or six weeks or two months off, as they do, and go to Jamaica, then when the Premier of Newfoundland who occupies the highest position possible for the people in Newfoundland, takes two weeks off he becomes a target for ridicule and insinuating remarks not only outside but in this House too, Sir.

If anybody is to blame for any neglect necessitating these Royal Commissions it is the Minister of Mines and Resources. Unfortunately the honourable gentleman got a little confused at this point. The Minister of Mines and Resources not through any lack of desire, has done, since he has been in the Government, no galavanting around the world, he has been tied down by other things and should have done a good deal more travelling in the interest of the public affairs than he has been able to do. I want to make that clear, as I am the person concerned. I have not had in three years, Mr. Speaker, one week away from my work—not in three years—

Now, the second point is this: The inference to be drawn from what the Honourable Leader of the Opposition said is that there has been some neglect, some lack of effort in these two divisions, forestry and agriculture. I repudiate that, Sir, I repudiate that inference with all the emphasis at my command. I am familiar, Mr. Speaker, with a great many divisions of government. I have had three years in Public Welfare, I think there are seven divisions there. I have worked with education and know something of the divisions in that department, and in my own now. I know how hard these men work, in the past two years how many nights and nights the Director of Agriculture spent working on agricultural problems as did others in the division. There is no division in the whole Government of Newfoundland that worked harder than those divisions in the past two years. I cannot speak for before that as I was not there, but I do know what happened since that. It is precisely because these divisions are on their feet and because other responsible departments are on their feet and because we have taken the responsibilities imposed on us by the Government and the people so seriously that we have the Royal Commission and not because of any neglect. I was astounded, Mr. Speaker, when he said; "Why do we need a Royal Commission? Why can't the division concerned look after it?" I was utterly astounded. The implication is that when the British Government set up a Royal Commission on Education during the last war it was because the Department of Education had neglected its work; when Ontario set up a Royal Commission on Forestry the department concerned had neglected its work. We have been setting up Royal Commissions for precisely and exactly the same reason as every government in the civilized world, because there are big jobs to be done beyond the scope and comprehension of the ordinary departments of government. How on earth, Mr. Speaker, could we ever hope to have a man like General Kennedy, one of the foremost men in the forestry field in the whole world, a man who is able to command a salary of a hundred thousand dollars a year if he said so—how on earth could we ever hope to have him or attach people like that to our Division of Forestry—it is out of the question. Not only that but any division of the government is set up to carry on a routine work, and not to tackle some of the major questions that from time to time come up, problems such as the state of the fisheries or the state of our forest reserves, etc. I am reminded by the Honourable the Premier that we have as head of the Agricultural Commission a man who has for years been the right-hand man of the greatest Minister of Agriculture that Canada has ever had, Mr. Gardiner, who is recognized as such all over the world, and his right-hand man, Dean Shaw, is now here as head of our Agricultural Commission. I say, if they had been purely and completely political gestures—and I take the responsibility as the Minister recommending them to the Government—if they had been merely political gestures how can you explain the fact that we waited for six months for the right personnel. In the case of the Forestry Commission that matter had been agreed on by the Government at the last session of the House and mentioned in the Speech from the Throne last year, but the appointments were not made until two months ago or so. It took all that time to find the personnel. I was determined as was the Premier and the whole Government that if we were to have the commission it would be composed of the very best men procurable on the face of the earth. There has been no neglect on the part of the Division of Agriculture nor the Division of Forestry nor any Minister who was galavanting around. I take the responsibility if anything is wrong up there in that department.

Now, I am leading up to something else, Sir, and it is this: If I had time I would like to say something about the importance of agriculture to our people. Mr. Speaker, there are fifteen hundred full-time farmers in Newfoundland. I would like that fact to sink in—fifteen hundred people live by growing crops—there are seven or eight thousand people in Newfoundland deriving a substantial, I might say a major part of their income from farming. Speaking of agriculture there are so many things we want to know which no minister and no person can know. We spend one hundred thousand dollars clearing land because farmers wanted the land cleared. Now frankly and honestly I recommended it to the Government and the Government agreed, and in fact recommended the policy to the Minister of Agriculture in Canada, Mr. Gardiner, personally and he agreed to contribute forty thousand dollars to that cause. But I don't know if that is what is needed in agriculture. It might be a lot better to forget clearing land and take that hundred thousand dollars each year and buy sheep or pigs. I don't know and these are things that require men who are experts in the field, men who have spent their lifetime specializing in administrative matters pertaining to agriculture.

Now, there is just one other point which is this: I have been concerned in those past two years with two problems of what I may call local concern, one the saw mill industry. We have thirteen hundred saw mills in Newfoundland. Should we have two hundred or twenty-five hundred? A lot of these thirteen hundred are closing down because of local conditions, with so many men out of employment and so many families on relief—that has happened this year, and that is one concern. These closed down, mind you, not because of any insufficiency of lumber but because there happened to be none in their area while five miles away there may be or it may be a case of going twenty miles.

The other concern is the problem of so many thousand people in Newfoundland depending on the timber for firewood. So many thousands have cut out all the available firewood in their area and so many thousands now are cutting out any available timber reserves. We have a great problem there. But the real reason I think—it is in the back of my mind but I have never stated this publicly at all to any person, and I have only discussed it privately with one person, and that is the obvious one: It is this: It is my profound conviction that a third paper mill is feasible on this Island of Newfoundland, and I believe—I cannot anticipate the Royal Commission, Sir—but I believe it is not only feasible but practical. Part of it is based on faith and part of it is based on good sound common sense. I believe the report of the Royal Commission will reveal here that there is every reason to look forward to the establishment of a third paper mill on the Island of Newfoundland. If that ever comes it would justify the creation of fifty Royal Commissions on Forestry.

Now, a word about the liquor problem, Mr. Speaker. I am fed up—I am concerned about the liquor problem in Newfoundland—but I am fed up to the gills—I am concerned partly because I was brought up, it is just as well to be frank, in a Methodist environment, or then Methodist. I am concerned with the liquor problem in Newfoundland, as I believe is every honourable member on both sides of the House, but I cannot say that I like the sneers brought to bear on this problem. This problem deserves more than sneers and jeers and insinuations and innuendo. If people are breaking the law, then let us make use of the courts. That is what they are there for. Surely we can bring something a little more valuable to bear on this matter than sneers and taunts. This is a problem that concerns the whole world and nobody is satisfied with it. I never saw anybody on the outside nor in the House, Government or otherwise who is satisfied. Even if it meant consumption of more beer there has been progress. I say people have been dissuaded from drinking mentholated spirits. I saw my father in his little store in Lewisporte refuse the sale of boot polish and Florida Water. I think it was called, to people then in the "horrors" from liquor. God knows I don't want to see anybody lose his soul, as is the inference, from trafficking in souls of men—I don't want to see that. I have also seen people die in agony from drinking wood alcohol or some drink they have manufactured. If it comes to a choice between selling six, seven or eight million bottles of beer or of making moonshine and drinking all sorts of dirt and filth and killing themselves in the process I would take the beer. If the Opposition knows the answer to the liquor problem they should give it to us and offer more than innuendoes and sneers. They should give the answer to us and give it to the world. Humanity is waiting for the answer not just the people of Newfoundland. I say now these sneers and taunts are admissions of either weakness or irresponsibility.

On the matter of films, Mr. Speaker, I have just one thing to say. We have been taunted, that is what it amounts to, about the film making industry carried on under auspices of the Government. Our department made a film last year through Atlantic Films. I only regret we could not have made more. I wish we had a film of wild life. We never had one on the fauna and wild life of Newfoundland. We had one or two dealing with moose, incidentally and caribou but have never had one made on wild life. We have thirteen distinct species here in Newfoundland, and we should have a film on them. Speaking on that I was intrigued the other day to see in cold print that last year the Department of Mines and the technical services in Nova Scotia had nine films made on mining alone—it looks as if the Government is not alone.

I wish I could say a word about travelling, Sir. Every Minister and I perhaps more than anyone have often looked at the amount of money we are spending on travelling, and have often been concerned, not so much that I supposed it was a waste but rather inevitable, but wondering if some of the money might not be applied in other ways. I had been highly critical at the time as to the justifications for spending in travelling of money which could have been applied somewhere else. Now, on that I want to say this. Last year there was a conference, and every year there is a conference of the Mines Ministers. I did not go as I had other commitments, but there was a meeting of the Mines Ministers, also a meeting of prospectors of Canada attended by all the Ministers of Mines across Canada. I have regretted that ever since. Had I been there I am sure I would have been able to disabuse their minds of some of the erroneous ideas some of the prospectors across Canada hold and some directed to us by the Honourable Leader of the Opposition a few days ago. Now, on this point I would say that at the Mines Ministers conference, British Columbia had two persons from the Government, Alberta had seven, Saskatchewan had six, Manitoba three, Ontario thirteen, Nova Scotia five, New Brunswick four, Quebec seven and Newfoundland had none. Now, I take the blame for that, and it is wrong. Another point; this past winter there was a meeting in the Maritimes, a salmon conference dealing with the Atlantic salmon fishery. Again I was too busy and the department concerned at the time was too busy to go to the conference. I have regretted it ever since. The four Atlantic Provinces concerned made recommendations to the Federal Government regarding the salmon fishery which if implemented would have virtually destroyed the salmon fishery on the West Coast of Newfoundland. I am sorry we were not there and should have been there. What I am leading up to Sir, is this: It is impossible for us to know when a conference is called concerning public welfare in Regina or Winnipeg, it is impossible for us to know beforehand whether anything will take place there which will effect the destinies of the people of Newfoundland. That is not far fetched, Sir. I went to represent Newfoundland at Regina and the result of that conference and partly as a result of my participation there, expressing the views of the Minister and the Government, representations are being made to the Federal Government which will, if effective, affect the destinies of Newfoundland for centuries to come.

Mr. Speaker, I have not utilized all my time nor have I dealt with all my points. I am wondering if it would be in order for me to move the adjournment of this debate?

MR. SPEAKER: Yes it would, but the honourable member has just two minutes more.

DR. ROWE: Thank you Sir, I will utilize them with one point which deals with prospectors. In 1948 there was not one Mainland prospector in Newfoundland and in 1949 there was none nor in 1950, 1951 nor 1952. Now, we have given out concessions to BRINCO and NALCO and we are told that all the prospectors in Canada are up there weeping and deploring the fact that they are unable to come down and prospect. We should have held out one hundred and fifty thousand square miles until some prospector in Ontario hitches up his breeches, gets on his burrow or whatever he has to saunter down to Newfoundland to look at the minerals. Mr. Speaker, I regret to say I have no time to deal with other things I have here. But I will say this one thing here, Sir—

MR. SMALLWOOD: I think, Mr. Speaker, the House would be agreeable if the honourable gentleman went on another five or six minutes.

MR. SPEAKER: By unanimous consent?

MR. HOLLETT: Yes.

DR. ROWE: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Regarding BRINCO and NALCO let me say that NALCO, I understand, has a timber concession in Labrador near the new railway or the part of it which is being built in our territory, that is in Newfoundland Labrador. BRINCO has a concession down in Lake Melville. But the greater part of the timber concessions of Labrador are held by the Crown and by nobody else—held by the Government of Newfoundland! I want to repeat, Sir, the greater part of the timber resources of the Labrador are held by the Government of Newfoundland! Furthermore neither NALCO nor BRINCO has any right whatsoever of any kind to one single tree on the Island of Newfoundland—not one tree in the Island of Newfoundland—let us not forget that. I can only assume, Mr. Speaker, the honourable gentleman concerned had not read the BRINCO Agreement.

In our time there has been much great development in our history, our long, varied and sometimes dismal and always checkered history. We have had many milestones, some of them as we look back, particularly when we look at these paintings on the wall—think of the establishment of the first courts of law which, incidentally, preceded these gentlemen; think of the efforts of the Carsons and Morrises in bringing about Representative and later Responsible Government in Newfoundland, one of the great milestones in our four hundred years of history. Think of the building of the railway, another great milestone and the settlement of the French Shore question achieved partly by Sir Robert Bond, another great milestone in our history, and there are others. But I will say this, Mr. Speaker, in my opinion the greatest achievement of the present Leader of the Government—let us remember he has already two major achievements to his credit to rank with anything any of these men have done—one is the restoration of Responsible Government in Newfoundland and the other is bringing about the Union of Newfoundland with Canada, but in my opinion history will record his greatest achievement, greatest feat of imagination and daring as the fact that he was able to go to the Old Country and talk to those who now after hundreds of years of history must be case-hardened people, and inspire and enthuse the Prime Minister of Great Britain as well as the heads of the greatest banking firms in the world, and as a result bring about the creation of the British and Newfoundland Corporation. Let us not forget the million dollars to be invested and what will be more than a million dollars on the Grand Falls on the Labrador and other millions just as well because the Premier brought them here, and it was largely his own creation—I know that.

Mr. Speaker, our Tory friends I believe both inside and outside the House would do well to take a piece of advice I gave last year outside the House. The time has come when they have to get a policy. I say in all sincerity they have not had a policy either here nor on the national level. I said this on the network last year—until such time as they formulate a policy they will never form a government in Ottawa and the same thing applies here. Until such time as the Tories begin getting a policy of their own they will never be re-elected, I can assure them of that. Criticizing some of the new industries will never cause the people of my constituency of the Labrador to vote against the present Leader of the Government—they will have to get their own policy.

Our Tory friends have never admitted we were ever any better off because of Confederation. No. Everything that has happened here would have happened—old age pensions we could have had without Confederation. They have never admitted at any time that the Premier made any contribution to the welfare of the Province in any way whatever. They have damned the new industries on every occasion, time and place possible and always ended up by saying—Of course I hope these new industries succeed—in my opinion they have never been able to overcome the bitterness and detestation they have had—I don’t want to impute motives, Sir, these are my opinions; I think they are obsessed by their detestation of the Leader of the Government and have suffered so many defeats at his hand that I think their view is distorted. No matter what it is if it anyway relates to the Premier and his policy they are against it. An argument, Sir, presupposes a minimum of logic, and if that is so, I charge the Opposition with not having offered one single argument in this debate. I charge they have failed utterly to discharge their primary obligation to the people of Newfoundland. I recommended before to our honourable friends on the other side that they would read again the trial of John Bunyan’s book, the trial where the jury comes in and says; I see nothing, I know nothing, I hear nothing good. It may be paraphrased—I want no good—the Opposition have not offered one scrap of praise for any action of the Government and because of their purely negative approach have refrained from offering a constructive policy of their own. They have failed to discharge their duties as an Opposition, and in consequence, until such time as they change their tactics, they will be an opposition.

MR. JACKMAN: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of the debate.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I move all remaining Orders of the Day do stand deferred.
On motion the House then adjourned.

WEDNESDAY, April 21, 1954

The House met at three of the clock in the afternoon, pursuant to adjournment.

Presenting Petitions

MR. BUTTON: Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present a petition from the people of Sunnyside and Chance Cove that the road be reconditioned and that a quarter of a mile of new road be built which will eliminate a lot of hardship, hazards and dangers out there going around a certain pinnacle called Adam's Bend. Sir, this road, the people here are asking for is essential. For a number of years both the Commission of Government and since our own present Government, nothing has been done for this road out there, and I have often wondered about it, Sir. While we were in session I made a visit out to Sunnyside, and I began to wonder if we have a Department of Public Works at all because the road is not fit for any person to call a road.

I have already stated one time before about the cow paths, now I am beginning to think that—

MR. SPEAKER: The honourable member is out of order. He may not make criticism of a Government department when presenting a petition.

MR. BUTTON: Thank you, Sir. Well, Mr. Speaker, I contend that the road in question is necessary for these people, and I am going to ask the department concerned to really consider this road, as these people out there really need some kind of assistance at this time from this Government who is in power.

Sir, I beg leave to lay this petition on the Table of the House and have it referred to the department concerned.

Petition tabled.

HON. C. H. BALLAM (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to lay on the Table of the House a petition from the residents of Georgetown in the District of Humbermouth. The petitioners numbering something over a hundred are petitioning that Georgetown would be connected with the new road which would be something less than a half mile but would serve the purpose of that town greatly insofar that at present they have to come out via Petries to the old main road which means a distance of three or four extra miles whereas a quarter of a mile would link up their community with this main road which also goes through to Corner Brook, and will in the course of time, link with the Trans Canada Highway. The road at present linking Georgetown is a narrow road and one which would require a lot of money and a lot of work to widen it because of the nature of the soil there. It is built on the side of a hill with rock on one side and quite an embankment on the other.

Personally I give this petition my full support as I think the people are very deserving of this. The community of Georgetown is quite a good size community and one of the oldest residential sections of the upper reaches of Petries Valley near Petries Crossing. I ask on behalf of the petitioners, Mr. Speaker, that this petition be laid on the Table of the House and that it be referred to the department concerned. I give it my utmost support.

Notice of Question

MR. M. M. HOLLETT (Leader of the Opposition): To ask the Honourable the Minister of Finance to lay on the Table of the House the following information:

1. On what date did the Board of Liquor Control purchase the five hundred barrels of Jamaica rum listed in the answer to Question 5? Who is the local agent of J. Wray & Nephew Ltd.?

2. What was the total amount of duties paid by the Board of Liquor Control on account of all alcoholic liquors purchased between April 1st, 1953 and February 28th, 1954?

MR. BROWNE: To ask the Honourable the Minister of Finance to lay on the table of the House the following information:

Give the names, addresses and dates of appointment of all agents of the Board of Liquor Control and/or of the manufacturers of beer who have been given authority to sell beer by the case. How much beer has been sold by each such agent during the past fiscal year, giving the value in each case, and the rate and amount of commission paid to each agent.

Answers to Questions

Question No. 58—Stand.

Question No. 59—Being prepared.

Question No. 55.

HON. J. R. SMALLWOOD (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I have no answers to questions today. I ask that all questions addressed to me and not answered be allowed to stand.

Question No. 47—Answer tabled by Mr. Keough.

Answer, Question No. 47 asked by Mr. Browne:

The original vouchers relating to the period prior to 1 April, 1951, are no longer available; they have been micro-filmed and after such processing have been destroyed.

Vouchers relating to the period commencing 1 April, 1951, have been microfilmed but not yet destroyed pending cross-check of micro films.

In the circumstances, it is suggested that the Honourable Member attend, having given notice of intention, at the Department of Finance where facilities to view will be made available to him.

Question No. 52—Answer tabled by Mr. Keough.

Answer to Question No. 52 asked by Mr. Hollett:

Question—What amount of money was realized on the sale of each of the four Icelandic vessels owned by Richard Limited?

Answer — The “Come-by-Chance,” “Pushthrough” and “Hugginn II” were sold for the amount of $29,000. The “Grotta” was sold for $25,000.

Question—Which of the Vessels was sold on terms, what were the terms of the sale and how much money has thus far been received by Government on this particular sale? To whom was the ship sold?
Answer—The "Grotta" was sold to Mr. Alexander Duffett of Clarenville. The conditions of sale were a down payment of $5,000 upon the execution of the Bill of Sale and the balance is payable in annual installments each in the amount of $5,000, together with interest at 4½% per annum on the balance outstanding. The "Grotta" was sold by Richard Limited and moneys received therefor were received by, and deposited to the credit of, that Company.

Question—Give an itemized statement showing the disposition of moneys received by the sale of these ships. To whom were the moneys paid out and on what accounts.

Answer—The receipts from the sale of these ships were received by and deposited to the credit of Richard Limited. The disclosure of the manner in which that Company disposed of these moneys other than these disclosed in the Audited Financial Statements of the Company is a personal matter between that Company and the firms and individuals to whom it was paid for goods or services rendered in the normal course of business.

Question—Does the Government hold a Mortgage on the vessel sold on terms and for what amount.

Answer—Richard Limited has transferred to Government the Mortgage held in respect of the "Grotta" in the amount of $20,000.

Orders of the Day

Adjourned debate on the Address in Reply to the Speech from the Throne.

MR. JACKMAN: Mr. Speaker, first of all I would like to follow the usual custom of this House and extend congratulations to the mover and seconder of the debate. With regard to the mover, while he is not here in this chair, I would like to say that knowing him as I do, not only as a personal friend but as an old campaigner in the past, realizing he is a very clever lawyer and a successful lawyer, I want to congratulate him again on the manner in which he used his legal ability to avoid and confuse certain matters which were contained in the Speech from the Throne. I wish particularly to congratulate the seconder of the motion because, I imagine, he is a man something like myself, one from the toiling masses, an ordinary worker. I would particularly like to congratulate him on the warning that he gave this Government, when I come to it, where the fishermen of this country are neglected, fishermen who are the backbone of this country—when they are neglected the Government won't last long.

I would particularly like also at this time, on this very auspicious occasion to offer my sincere loyalty, personally and on behalf of my constituents to our most Gracious Majesty on today, which I believe is her birthday. May Her reign be long and prosperous and happy, and may God bless Her.

I would also like to express my welcome to the benches of the Opposition, our latest addition, a very worthy gentleman, a gentleman well known in this country. I am delighted to be associated with him. I am certain he will add strength to our position and that he will add dignity to the House.

With regard to the Speech from the Throne, there are only two items in it, or one item I should say, which I would like to deal with this afternoon, and the other one which is left out
I will deal with that also. However, Sir, before we begin to discuss these matters I would like to refer to a remark made by our worthy Premier, that is, insofar as we on this side are concerned we are anti and bitter anti-confederates. I want to say personally and on behalf of those I represent that we are not bitter, anti-confederates, but I will say this, we are Newfoundlanders. We are not against Canada. We like Canada. Personally I have a good reason to like Canadians as I represent an organization on Bell Island which while it is chartered by the United Steel Workers of America at the same time it is affiliated with one of the largest organizations in the whole of Canada, that is the Canadian Federation of Labour. I have occasion at least twice a year to visit the Mainland and associate with these men, working men like myself, and I certainly want to say here now that I never met better people in my life, and they appreciate me too. When I say I will shake your hand as a Canadian, as a brother worker, as a brother member you will have to recognize me as a Newfoundlander. There is nothing wrong with that, Mr. Speaker.

Again the Premier said: Look over at them, five bitter anti-confederates. That again I repudiate. I repudiate it for this reason that while there are only five of us here there are seventy-five thousand outside, that was proven in the first referendum. Now, I will add another fifty thousand to that number, good well-meaning Newfoundlanders who are disillusioned over the agreement that was made with Canada. So that when you look across at us don’t think we are just five nincompoops over here. Don’t think because we come here to debate we look upon this Chamber as a debating chamber much less a place where you can have a burlesque show, Mr. Speaker, you have had that in the past, and I pitied you at times, but I think that is over. We are here, I imagine, at least I am here, and I think we are all here with the same purpose to legislate justice on behalf of the people of this country.

At the risk of being called an anti-confederate, at the risk of hearing something from the other side about how this is the “Old Hash” I will have to refer back, Sir, in order to make my point clear I will have to refer back to the convention days, I will have to refer back to 1933, or I could go back to 1914. I don’t want to go back to 1914 when I lost the only brother I had in this world, that is one who could associate with me—I have another but he is wearing a round collar and I can’t associate with him. For example he can’t go into a beer tavern and have a good drink of beer as I heard the Honourable Minister say yesterday. He can’t do that because he wears a round collar, but my other brother, yes, he could, but his guts—pardon me for using the expression—were blown completely out of him on July 1, 1914 in the Battle of Hamel. I believe there are some veterans here now who were with him then. So I refer back, though I say I don’t want to, to 1914, to 1918, but, no it hurts my feelings. I will go back to 1932, I will go back to the time when not only Newfoundland, not only Canada but the great United States of America itself went broke or practically broke, with eight thousand bank failures. We were caught in that financial malestrom, I would call it. We were up against it. We could not pay the interest on what we owed. I will say right now, Mr. Speaker, we should not have had to pay it because it was the war debt that crippled us and not our own debt. We were not even allowed to declare moratorium not alone default. We were sold out. Three hundred thousand Newfoundlanders were sacrificed to the golden calf, and you know what the golden calf is, the modern god of idolatry. One out of every three people in Newfoundland were put on a dole existence of six cents a day. Why? Because we were not allowed to declare a moratorium and not allowed to default. I know people in this country who were taken before court—I know a widow in particular, and this might be one for the Minister of Public Welfare, who applied for her six cents a day dole but because she still had a pig left and when the authorities found out that she had a pig, she was taken to court and soaked, and the pig was sold and she had to pay the fine. Now, Mr. Speaker, I don’t want to dwell on this situation because after all none of us want to resurrect unpleasant memories. I am only bringing it up in order to show just exactly how this little country was treated. And while we were on six cents a day dole but because she still had a pig left and when the authorities found out that she had a pig, she was taken to court and soaked, and the pig was sold and she had to pay the fine. In 1939 Herr Hitler got busy, not Herr Valdmans but Herr Hitler got busy and he said, I will conquer the world. Again if my information is correct or if I can believe what I read from the military experts of the whole world, he would have succeeded if it were not for the bridgehead which was established right here in Newfoundland. There is not any doubt whatsoever about it, there is no man can question it. Professor McKay, a man who was freely quoted in the convention, in his book which I have here, but won’t worry you with reading it, said that Newfoundland was a nonentity until the last war started, then the great United States and the great Dominion alongside us all of a sudden got interested in Newfoundland. So they started bases. But in the meantime Newfoundland could

MR. JACKMAN: Mr. Speaker, I say the very people who did create a blood-bath and did it twice, the very people who at that time received money from England, the same people who loaned it to the Russians—if you want my thoughts on that I will give them: Lord Beaverbrook—take a note of it anybody who wishes—these very people at that time were receiving money while we Newfoundland people had to live on flour and molasses and wear flour sacks for clothing. I know people who could not go to church because they did not have clothing. I know of others who went in turn, one had to go to one service and come back, take the clothes off and let the other go. Now, Mr. Speaker, as I said a moment ago that sort of stuff is not nice to dwell on. None of us wish to hear it, but nevertheless it must be brought out. The time has come when we must talk plain, and I will say that time is right at hand.

In 1939 Herr Hitler got busy, not Herr Valdmans but Herr Hitler got busy and he said, I will conquer the world. Again if my information is correct or if I can believe what I read from the military experts of the whole world, he would have succeeded if it were not for the bridgehead which was established right here in Newfoundland. There is not any doubt whatsoever about it, there is no man can question it. Professor McKay, a man who was freely quoted in the convention, in his book which I have here, but won’t worry you with reading it, said that Newfoundland was a nonentity until the last war started, then the great United States and the great Dominion alongside us all of a sudden got interested in Newfoundland. So they started bases. But in the meantime Newfoundland could not say a word in her own defence, Newfoundland was not free, Newfoundland was under what I would call a Beneficial Dictatorship. They would not let us starve, they would give us a few cents a day—so she could not speak, but in 1946—personally I wrote a letter to the paper on this—they set up a National Convention. I have that paper home on file. I said in that letter, which was written to the Daily News, that this convention is nothing more than a total hoard of confusion set up on Hitler lines to confuse us all, and that is exactly what happened. I heard the late and great, and I might say I am a disciple of his, and I don't care who knows it—I heard the late Sir Stafford Cripps quoted here yesterday. A great man, a great leader, a great lawyer, a great citizen, Sir Stafford Cripps, sat in the House of Commons when the Newfoundland Bill was first up for discussion and said, if this goes through it will be the first step in the crash of the British Empire.

HON. M. P. MURRAY (Minister of Provincial Affairs): It is a funny place for a disciple of Cripps to be—in the Tory Party.

MR. JACKMAN: Beverley Baxter said as well, it is one of the blackest chapters—that Bill would have never gone through in the House of Commons in England only for one rider attached to it. That Bill definitely and squarely stated, once Newfoundland was self-supporting, and upon the request of the Newfoundland people.

MR. JACKMAN: Is that all you have to say?

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is enough.

MR. JACKMAN: Very well. Probably it is enough. I have here a letter from one of the first commissioners who came out to Newfoundland—are you going out? I have to refer to you and don't want to do it behind your back.

MR. SPEAKER: May I remind the honourable member; if he wishes to address a remark to another gentleman he must do it through the Chair. For example: "May I ask the honourable gentleman not to leave?"—don't speak directly to any honourable member.

MR. JACKMAN: I am sorry, Sir. "An Unholy Deal" Sir Thomas Lodge—to the Editor of the Manchester Guardian in England: "No Englishman can feel happy about the way in which the constitutional problems of Newfoundland had been handled by this Government ... There is not a shadow of doubt in my mind, when we went out in 1934 to try a new experiment in administration, the Government in London had expressly committed itself to restore political independance as soon as the Island was once more self-supporting."

MR. SMALLWOOD: He is wrong.

MR. JACKMAN: I won't read it all. I don't want to take the time. I will just read his closing paragraph: "I have no doubt whatsoever that at some stage an unholy deal had been made between London and Ottawa..."
under which London undertook to do something like using their best endeavours to secure the entry of Newfoundland into Confederation. The deal was doubtlessly never embodied in any formal document and its existence could always be denied, but the fact remains two members of the present commission openly advocated entry, and would hardly have expressed such views on a matter of the free decision of the islanders without being certain of the approval of the Secretary of State."

DR. POTTLE: Mr. Speaker, I may say it is a matter of record the statement I made as one of the commissioners to whom the honourable member just made reference. The statement had no such approval, and sought no such approval from the home office at the time.

MR. JACKMAN: I think Mr. Lodge said there was nothing there to prove it, but nevertheless it was done—and you went on the air—the Premier got up the other day and lambasted the latest addition to the Opposition, and said he went out campaigning as a judge. I don't know if he did or not. But I say, if he did, he was justified. I will go further and say he was going out for justice sake and a just cause. If the Honourable Minister of Public Welfare who was a commissioner at the time had a right to go out why should not a judge. If we are going to have equal privileges let us have them.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is good logic.

MR. JACKMAN: I will go a little further—if you don't mind, Mr. Speaker, I am going to quote something here—is it in order?

MR. SPEAKER: I presume so.

MR. JACKMAN: I will give you what an Englishman thinks of Newfoundland:

"The Newfoundlanders fled across the sea,
And all they cried, let our land be free.
You lavish freedom on the Black Guiana
But we the white subjects of the Crown Must still be bossed and bullied by that four
And told that we should not exist at all . . ."

MR. MURRAY: Who wrote that?

MR. JACKMAN: You are a lawyer and I am only a common workman, but I don't worry about you. Mr. Speaker, as I said before I had to bring this matter up, and for this reason; we have in this Throne Speech a reference to a revision of the Terms of Union. I want to say in this respect, and I will try to be modest, but I want to say in that respect that the people of Newfoundland can thank—there are three of us left here, our worthy and solid Leader, the Leader of the Opposition—I would go to Hell and back for him—the worthy member for St. John's East, not the legal member, you won't have any trouble distinguishing him as he is a working man just like myself; and myself. We are the only three left of the dictators in this House, twenty-nine of us who said; "No." "These terms are not satisfactory, they are not nearly satisfactory." I know at least three Cabinet Ministers who at that particular time on these first terms advocating Confederation fought like Hades with us to get it across. Yet we said—No—and because we said no, and because sixty-nine thousand more followed us the people in Ottawa began to realize that we were not all White Indians in Newfoundland, and they revised the terms, and they brought these terms up by sixteen or twenty-four million dollars. One man on that delegation, Ches Crosbie, at that time even said he would not sign these terms as they meant financial suicide for Newfoundland. I will prove it to you, Mr. Speaker, or at least I hope to do so to you and to this House before I sit down, that Ches Crosbie's words were right.

Now, let the people realize this: If it were not for three of us who are left on this side of the House, if it were not for us, they would not even have the terms they got now, which are so far short. If things were as rosy as they were painted, why at this time should we have to get a commission and have them take a year to prepare a case? I would say this, Mr. Speaker, and I am going to give credit to the Premier. I tell you frankly, and I believe I say it also on behalf of a number of my supporters, I have the deepest respect and the highest regard for him. I am going to call him "Joe" he calls me "Nish"—but I will say this, these terms were hasty, and we could have taken our time. Nevertheless we went into it, and now things are not so good. However, this is the position. I am not speaking for the party now, I am speaking as an individual when I say; our position could be improved if we had the determination and the energy to do so. I have not the least doubt but that the whole nasty, unholy deal which was put over on us could be re-opened. If it can't be I would say that the Atlantic Charter is a mere screen of hypocrisy and all the talk about the United Nations and the rights of small nations is the light of hypocrisy. I would even go further and at the risk of being called a "Red"—

MR. MURRAY: You are not, you are being called a "Tory."

MR. JACKMAN: I am a better "Liberal" than you are. I am one of the best "Liberals" in this country.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Hear, hear!

MR. JACKMAN: Don't anticipate anything. I am one of the best Liberals but I am a Newfoundland Liberal.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Anti-Confederate?

MR. JACKMAN: There is my father over there. He was a Liberal, as was Sir Robert Bond. In this country the Jackman name always followed him. His right-hand man was my uncle, his Minister of Finance. He lost his business, he lost everything following a good Liberal Leader, and he died happy, and I am sure when he went to Heaven, St. Peter welcomed him with "Well done thou good and faithful servant," Good Liberals. Good Newfoundland Liberals.

MR. SMALLWOOD: If you will allow me—All the "Liberals" who were Anti-Confederates had to go "Tory."

MR. FOGWILL: Don't talk nonsense.

MR. SPEAKER: Order. If the honourable member wishes to make a remark he may do so on his feet. I would suggest that the honourable member who is speaking not allow himself to be drawn into any side arguments.

MR. HOLLETT: I submit he was forced into it, Mr. Speaker.

MR. JACKMAN: Now, Mr. Speaker, with respect to Confederation I would think that the majority of our people, and I would say the majority of our people are very intelligent. They may not be educated but they are logical and realistic. I imagine at the present time they will accept this condition, and in that respect I will go along with them. I am only expressing a personal opinion here.

In that respect I would like to make a little further reference to this grand little country of ours, and it is a country as far as I am concerned, a country not a province. This grand old country, Britain's Oldest Colony, the foundation of the British Empire, and as far as I am concerned, still Britain's Youngest Dominion, although we were robbed of it. What does she mean today? What does she mean to the free nations of the world? What does she mean to the greatest nation on earth, the United States of America. She is the greatest insofar as money is concerned, don't get me wrong. Insofar as character is concerned, really down, deep, virtue and spirit, it is still the Old Country.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Hear, hear!

MR. JACKMAN: Don't take me wrong on that. Personally I am very proud in my heart that on my father's side I am an Englishman, and on my mother's side I am Irish.

MR. HOLLETT: A bad mixture.

MR. JACKMAN: I don't know if there is any Scotch in me, Mr. Speaker. Of course, I do have once in a while some Scotch in me. I can tell you that when you get that combination it is hard to beat. With regard to our little country, and with regard to the present serious situation in this world, I find that last year NATO spent sixty billion dollars, that is sixty thousand million dollars. They gave the French money, they gave the Spaniards money, they gave them all money, but what did they give us? I don't want to say it but I could say it, but here it is again: Newfoundland is the key to North Atlantic Defence, the key to the whole situation—Sixty billion dollars spent last year on NATO. Let us take a look to our good friend to the South, to America, and I say they are good friends of ours. What did the Americans do last year? America's household cat and dog population has reached an all time high, forty and one third millions. Our great American friends to the south of us, and I don't begrudge them that, spent a million and a half dollars last year alone in feeding their dogs and cats.

MR. MURRAY: I hope they gave them fish.

MR. JACKMAN: They don't get the fish to give them anymore, Sir, unfortunately. I still hear a voice in my ear, the fishermen down north saying: "No fish unless you guarantee me a price." I don't blame them, and God love them, and God help them! But what I am trying to say is that the Americans last year spent a million and a half dollars on their cats and their dogs.

Now to bring up fish: I will say this again: If the Honourable R. B. Job's proposition had been accepted in this House the man down in Bonavista today would not be shouting for a price for fish. I don't want to go back to the Bond Treaty, but I will say this: We as the bastion, we as the people who were defending the whole North American Continent, what did we receive? The cats and dogs of America received a million and a half dollars a year. Eisenhower said the other day that NATO is an entity of a united people for a free world. I will ask any fisherman to come in here today and say he is free, and yet we can support the dogs and cats, and if the war started tomorrow the first to get the blast would be ourselves, the first crack. If it ever happens we are the ones who are going to receive it. Now, what do we get? We get nothing. Only last fall our teachers had their pay cut down in order to subsidize the poor fishermen—

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is not so.

MR. JACKMAN: As far as I can understand that is how it was.

MR. SMALLWOOD: No.

MR. JACKMAN: Very well, probably I am wrong.

MR. SMALLWOOD: They were not cut—but they were not increased.

MR. JACKMAN: They did not get their increase because of the fact you had to subsidize the fishermen.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Not subsidize—we had to advance them.

MR. JACKMAN: That is good enough, Sir. We will take that as a fact—the teachers did not get their increase voted for them because of that situation.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It was not voted.

MR. JACKMAN: I don’t know if it were voted or not. You intended to give it to them.

MR. SMALLWOOD: If the money were available.

MR. JACKMAN: The money would be available—but the fishermen did not get a price for their fish.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is exactly right.

MR. JACKMAN: That is robbing Peter to pay Paul.

Mr. Speaker, I may say I find it difficult to say a word against any man on that side of the House. I know some of them personally, in fact that man who continues to interrupt me, we were fellow boarders at one time, and slept in the same dormitory. I know another good man over there, I won’t mention his name, and I am going to give him a belated thank you for what he did for us in our recent dispute, that is the Honourable Minister of Labour. We requested from the Honourable Minister of Labour the facilities of his Conciliation Board to settle a dispute between ourselves and our employers on Bell Island. He did that. On behalf of our organization and myself as well I would say a belated thank you, Sir, but it is genuine just the same. I am very happy to say that matter was resolved in a very dignified manner.

But the position regarding our country at the present time, as I see it, is very serious, and I am not looking at it through the eyes of these twenty-three millionaires we heard so much about during the convention, nor am I looking at it through the eyes of a lawyer or any sort of professional man. I am looking at it through the eyes of a workman. I have a very definite stake myself in this country. I am responsible for the bringing up a family of seven children, and I want to see these children well fed, well clothed, well housed, and at the same time I don’t want to see them well fed and well clothed and well sheltered unless the little children living next door are well fed, well clothed and well sheltered. So that when I look over the horizon today, insofar as Newfoundland is concerned, I feel sorry about it, the picture is not by any means bright. I would almost say that the picture is dark, particularly. It is not very far off, Sir, when we had the day in our country when nineteen thousand men received unemployment assistance.

DR. POTTLE: Insurance.

MR. JACKMAN: When we have ten thousand, roughly, fishermen who are at the present time saying: For God's sake give us bread! And all they receive is a stone. When we see the cost of living higher than it was ever before confederation—well, we almost have to throw our hands up. That, Mr. Speaker, is actually the position in Newfoundland today, as I see it as a labour man. I maintain these are the facts that cannot be disputed, they cannot be denied. They are authentic because they are published by the Bureau of Statistics in Ottawa. I am not referring now to the ten thousand fishermen, that is a question I will admit, I don't know how many are left. At one time I think before confederation we had thirty thousand. I don't know how many are left. At one time I think before confederation we had thirty thousand. I don't know if we have ten thousand left. But insofar as the nineteen thousand are concerned, yes, Sir, that is what we have today unemployed. Our school teachers and a lot of our civil servants—-it is almost as well in some cases they were not employed. They would get more in unemployment insurance in some cases than they get in salary.

So, after five years of confederation, and don't forget I am not against confederation—

MR. SMALLWOOD: No?

MR. JACKMAN: No. I said I was against the terms of confederation. But after five years this is what we got. Now here is the worst of the whole situation: In 1949 following confederation we had an election in Newfoundland. The Liberal party at that time practically cleaned the whole works. I don't know how we got in here, you know. However, I think there were five of us. The Premier asked the other day where all the leaders were. Well I was talking to one of them yesterday. I can assure you, Mr. Speaker, he is hale and hearty, his wishes are for our people and our country. I believe he goes down on his knees every night and prays for it. I believe he is all right.

MR. SMALLWOOD: He is not anti-confederate?

MR. JACKMAN: He is John G. Higgins, if you want his name. As to the last Leader of the Opposition, I thought he was gone. I did not know what happened to him. But just a short while ago I happened to be listening to CJON one night and I heard the gallant gentleman was appointed to civil defence, as director in Newfoundland. The day before that I was reading my paper and I saw where Malenkov was putting out peace feelers. And I said to myself: "How in the world could that happen?" But he must have heard about the gallant gentleman, and he shivered and shook and sued for peace.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is easy to say when he is not here.
MR. JACKMAN: I would say it anyhow, and I am not finished with regard to that gallant gentleman. I will tell you frankly, as far as I am concerned, he has been consigned to a political grave of oblivion, unwept, unhonoured and unsung. Let him alone!

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mind he does not go over to Bell Island as a candidate—it would be interesting.

MR. JACKMAN: I know what happened the last time.

Now, Mr. Speaker, as I was saying. In 1949 we had an election in this country, and the Liberal party almost made a clean sweep. Yes, Sir—he comes now, he was outside there—almost made a clean sweep but there was some remnants of democracy left anyhow, four or five of us. Again in 1951 they thought they should go before the country again. I want to say something before I forget it, and now that the Premier is in his seat, he is the gentleman who did say, a few days ago that if the Liberal party went before the country today it would be a landslide. He did not qualify that statement, and I don't exactly know what he meant by it. But I will qualify it insofar as I can see it, it would be a landslide, Sir, it would be an avalanche, an avalanche of votes against the Liberal party that would burst it for the next twenty-five years.

MR. SMALLWOOD: A "Tory" avalanche, what a miracle.

MR. JACKMAN: A miracle, no. Mr. Speaker. The Honourable Minister of Mines and Resources closed his address yesterday—I would almost call it a treatise. I think he was told three or four times he should sit down, but got a minute or two extra. But he closed this way: "You got no policies Tories." No policy? I can tell you right now, Mr. Speaker, there is no question whatsoever about it, we have got a policy, and if the Liberals want to test it, dissolve this Parliament and spring another election, and you will see.

MR. MURRAY: Let us hear about it.

MR. JACKMAN: Not here, my friend—You are a lawyer.

MR. MURRAY: Keep it secret.

MR. JACKMAN: Yes, Mr. Speaker, we have a policy, and I hope to Heaven that our policy will produce slightly more results anyway, if not much more than your present Liberal policy. Here is the Liberal policy, and this is the snap election of 1951—Help for those who cannot work—jobs for those who can. That is the policy. Before I go on to that I would just like to mention in passing, just in case I should forget, the Honourable Minister of Natural Resources yesterday had this to say: I am convinced that a third paper mill is feasible in Newfoundland, and I believe that the report of the Royal Commission on Forestry will include the establishment of a third mill in their recommendations to the Government. Last week the Premier said in his statement, his speech, giving as his reason for not tabling the IBEC Report, that the IBEC Report did state that a third mill in Newfoundland was not feasible. Policy—Liberal Government Policy—The Minister of Mines and Resources says it is feasible, and the Premier says, through the IBEC Report which cost the taxpayers of this country two hundred thousand dollars, it is not feasible—who are we going to believe? I don't know, frankly. Are we going to believe the Minister of Mines and Resources or are we going to believe Rockefeller, the man with a hundred million dollars. The Government is very good on pulling tricks, pulled another one yesterday, the Hamilton Inlet, a million bucks. Well I hope that something will come out of it in order to help our people and give them a chance to live.

Mr. Speaker, here are the issues of this last general election. This is a point I made at the beginning of my remarks, when I said there were two points I would deal with—I would deal first of all with the terms—Well that will be left to a Conservative Government to get good terms—Now I will deal with the part which has been left out. The part that brought on a snap election in 1951. Here are the issues in this general election, and these are not my words:

In industry: "I have made arrangements with many European companies, good reliable companies to start new industries in Newfoundland. These new industries will employ about fifteen thousand Newfoundlanders at good wages running into about thirty million dollars a year." I don’t know if you would call that good wages, Mr. Speaker, but we don’t call it that. That is not an average of $35 a week. Those are only scab wages. "As a result of these new industries about five thousand other people will get other jobs at about ten million dollars in wages a year. That will mean twenty thousand new jobs, and bring forty million dollars a year in wages." That was the issue in this general election. There was no other issue worth talking about—Twenty thousand jobs in new industries, not mentioning Dr. Valdmanis who is gone. I think though the Herr Doctor left, and I heard a Doctor here the other day do everything but goose step. Twenty thousand jobs—Yet today we have nineteen thousand receiving unemployment insurance, not employed, and ten thousand fishermen out of work, school teachers working for scab wages, half the civil servants working for scab wages. Here are the issues. If the Liberal party goes back to the people, we have a strong united party, we have a policy, a strong policy. I will support a policy, Mr. Speaker, in any Government. I am not concerned about Liberal or Tory or be it anything. I will support any party which will help the producers of this country. But as I see it the producers of this country have been let down terribly by this Government. I will challenge this Government—In 1951 this Government dissolved the House here and went before the people to receive a mandate for their policy—there is their policy—I will challenge this Government to dissolve this House again and go before the people and ask for the support of the people again. I doubt if they will do it.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Are you afraid that we will do it? Doubt it or are you afraid of it?

MR. JACKMAN: Not for the honourable gentleman’s sake but for his colleagues’ sake. He would welcome it, Mr. Speaker, but would his colleagues? I don’t see why you should be afraid, will you do it?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Wait and see.

MR. HOLLETT: Issue the challenge. Issue it again.

MR. JACKMAN: Mr. Speaker, I want to say one more thing before I conclude. I have been a subscriber to the "Financial Post" for over twenty years. In fact I subscribed to the "Financial Post" when I came back from the United States in 1931. I place great reliance in that Post. I might say it is a very educational paper, any man can learn a lot out of it. The editor is not always right but—I want to be charitable and won't say anything about him, but will just read it: "In 1949 only one Newfoundland family in ten owned a car, now the ratio is one in four. Electrical consumption has doubled, telephone subscribers are up by one third, freight volumes throughout and from the Island is almost doubled." Yes we know something about the freight rates.

MR. MURRAY: A sign of poor times, all that.

MR. JACKMAN: "Union has been good for Newfoundland." Sure it has been good and for the rest of Canada. "Geographically, historically, politically and commercially Newfoundland has always been . . ."

In other words, Sir, the Canadians are admitting now that Newfoundlanders are defending them. In conclusion, Sir, I will have to repeat myself—I am not an anti-Confederate. I have very good friends in Canada. In fact I like the Canadian people. There is not, after all, a great deal of difference between us, most of us—

MR. SMALLWOOD: Most of us are "Liberals anyway all across Canada."

MR. JACKMAN: I wonder.

MR. SMALLWOOD: From St. John's to Vancouver.

MR. JACKMAN: I don't want to indulge in a discussion of Canadian politics, but I can say this much, there is not much left of real Canadian politics, and I don't want to be drawn out on that. But I will go this far and say. The Union Nationale, Duplessis, what was it he said to you about Labrador? You do not own it.

I want to say in conclusion, Sir, I am a Newfoundland for a number of reasons. I am a Newfoundland first of all because I believe in Newfoundland, I believe in Newfoundlanders. I am a Newfoundlander secondly because we have a heritage that made our western civilization what it is. I am a Newfoundlander because I feel proud of the fact that it was our great little country that turned the tide of battle in the last war, won the battle of the Atlantic and saved the necks of the Englishman and the American and the Canadian. Last, but not least, I am a Newfoundland just because I am a Newfoundlander.

MR. MORGAN: Mr. Speaker, in rising to take part in this debate I should like first of all to congratulate the mover and seconder of the motion. Both these gentlemen did credit to themselves and to the districts which they represent.

On my own behalf and on behalf of the district which I represent I should also like to express my loyalty to the person of Her Majesty, and to wish that her reign may be prosperous and happy.

I should also like to welcome to this House the newly elected member for St. John's West. I am not too well acquainted with the honourable gentleman, but I have been in some ways associated with him through the co-operative movement and the Avalon Co-operative Council of which he was, I believe, honourary president for a number of years.
I was glad to hear a few nights ago on the radio that he still maintains his contact with the co-operative movement. I think he took part in the programme where the co-operative housing group were being interviewed by that gentleman. I do hope that his stay here will be a benefit to the House and enjoyable for himself.

Mr. Speaker, in going over the notes that I have made on the speeches from the opposition side of the House, I find very little on which to comment. Actually I am not quite sure what their purpose was in making these speeches. In the Liberal party we have an institution known as the party caucus. In that caucus members, particularly new members are brought up to date on what has happened over the years. They are also given some insight into what probably will come up in the future. I am inclined to think, Mr. Speaker, that there is no such organization across the floor, and that they have taken up the time of this House in bringing their new member up-to-date on what has happened in the past five years. I have heard of caretaker governments, and I thought at first of describing the present Opposition as a caretaker Opposition, but after hearing the speeches I am more inclined to refer to them as the "Undertaker Opposition," because they have been so anxious to bury the new industries, so anxious to bury everything that has been done by this Government in the past five years. As a matter of fact, although I may be uncharitable in saying so, it seems to me that they would be only too happy to bury the Premier.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, to a point of order. I think I will have to ask the honourable gentleman to retract these words—do I have the floor, Mr. Speaker, on a point of order? The statement made by the honourable member for Green Bay, that we are desirous of burying the Premier, in my opinion is not in good taste, and personally we object to such a statement. I would like to have him retract that statement, Mr. Speaker.

MR. MORGAN: Mr. Speaker, it was just an expression of opinion which may or may not be correct. If it is unparliamentary I will take it back.

MR. SPEAKER: It would be unparliamentary if the honourable gentleman meant it.

MR. MORGAN: During the past few days in this session, on this side of the House at any rate, we have been waiting for some indication of a policy on the part of the Opposition—they have been hinting that possibly there would be an election. I know that they have kept their policy a deep secret in the past up to within a few weeks of an election and combining the mention of an election with that policy. I have been wondering if in this session we would be treated to some of the secrets of their policy. But I have waited in vain. Not one word of their policy has been mentioned by the Opposition in this session, or indeed in any previous session since 1949. Although I am not absolutely correct in that, because I do recall, I think it was the first Leader of the Opposition, at the beginning of the discussion on economic development, proclaimed that it would be much better to keep the forty million dollar surplus on deposit so that it could be used for the payment of relief should a depression come.

Mr. Speaker, I have been more than disappointed in the speech of the Leader of the Opposition. I expected more from him than we have received to date. I should like to take this opportunity to warn the new member for St. John's West to examine anything which they say very, very carefully, or what the leader says very, very carefully. For instance, there is the story of the Flying Dutchman down in Ferryland District. I contacted the fresh fish people on Water Street a few days ago in connection with the prices of fresh fish and the difference in prices of fresh fish between Halifax and St. John's. Now, I may state one thing I think to be a fact. The Leader of the Opposition may state what he thinks to be a fact, but I was informed by one of the managers of one of the large firms on Water Street, the difference ran somewhere in the vicinity of one half to one and a half cents a pound rather than the five or six cents difference as quoted by the Honourable Leader of the Opposition. I think the most serious and the most fantastic thing the Honourable Leader of the Opposition mentioned was that there had been political interference in connection with the cutting of birch in the Springdale area. Nothing could be further from the truth. My conviction is that I could not have quite understood what the honourable gentleman said. Perhaps he said there was a lack of political interference—I think it was in the winter of 1950, the person who ran against me as a P.C. candidate in 1949 had a contract to cut birch. I don't know if that would have happened if the tables had been reversed—the allegation is, to say the least, fantastic.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I don't mind the Honourable Leader of the Opposition or any of the members of the Opposition being ignorant of things that are happening in the outports—all they know is what they hear from people, or what they read in the papers about these people. St. John's has the reputation of being one of the friendliest, indeed if not the friendliest city of North America and possibly in the world. I am sure that even if the Honourable Leader of the Opposition does represent them politically he does not represent their attitude toward strangers, which has always been warm and friendly.

Not only did the Honourable Leader of the Opposition cast reflections upon these people from abroad but even our Newfoundlanders came in for—

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, may I rise to a point of order. Mr. Speaker, will the honourable gentleman quote wherein I cast reflections upon these people from abroad. I don't remember doing so. Will he quote the reference which I made? I can't allow him to say that I cast reflections on these people from abroad.

MR. SPEAKER: I hardly think that is a point of order. The honourable member speaking is merely stating what he gathered from the Honourable Leader of the Opposition's speech, and he is not out of order in saying the honourable member did cast reflections.

MR. MORGAN: Mr. Speaker, I hardly know how the honourable gentleman got that impression of it. Anyhow the Honourable Leader of the Opposition is not too well inclined towards these foreigners, as he calls them, in Newfoundland. There are also some Swedes out there and some Dutchmen and some Frenchmen. There is one Swede as far as I know, there may be others.

MR. HOLLETT: One Swede is not Swedes.
MR. MORGAN: I was saying, Mr. Speaker, before I was interrupted, Newfoundlanders also got a dishonourable mention by the Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

MR. HOLLETT: Dishonourable mention?

MR. MORGAN: I mean the opposite of honourable. Mr. Chester Dawe, I think, was referred to in person. I also noticed there was no bouquet for the Premier, nor indeed for any of us on this side of the House.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, I have to have this thing clear. If I may rise to a point of order. The honourable gentleman's hearing may be is on the defective side. He said I spoke dishonourably of Newfoundlanders. If that is so I must have him retract that statement. I don't intend to have any man on that side, nor in this country say I spoke dishonourably of Newfoundlanders.

MR. SPEAKER: I think we will have to get Hansard to get exactly what the Honourable Leader of the Opposition did say.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, if I may address myself to that point of order, I have exactly the same recollection as my honourable friend from Green Bay.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, has he a right to address the Chair?

MR. SMALLWOOD: On this point of order I certainly have. What the Honourable Leader of the Opposition did say was that Mr. Chester Dawe had the birch plant built close beside his own business so that a little later he might remove the fence separating the two. If that is not imputing to Mr. Dawe the most dishonpeople are going around with other people's wives and children have to be decontaminated.

MR. SPEAKER: That has nothing to do with this point under consideration. Perhaps the honourable member would proceed with his speech, and perhaps he would withdraw that remark. I might say that when any honourable member rises to a point of order he should not drag into the debate anything outside of what we are discussing as a point of order.

MR. MORGAN: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Well if it will make the Honourable Leader of the Opposition feel any better I will be glad to take back that word, but I clearly recollect he did not speak in any glowing terms of the work of Mr. Chester Dawe, which he has put in on the birch plant.

MR. HOLLETT: Certainly not.

MR. MORGAN: No, certainly not.

MR. SMALLWOOD: He would not speak dishonourably of any Newfoundland—Oh no—not he.

MR. SPEAKER: Order. Honourable member please proceed.

MR. MORGAN: Mr. Speaker, it seems to me as if the Honourable Leader of the Opposition must have a grudge against the world, particularly against these people who happen to live in Newfoundland. Mr. Speaker, when this Government came into office one of the biggest problems which they had facing them was the lack of scientific data, arrived information whether it was on minerals, waterpower, forests, agriculture or anything else, as soon as they went to look for information, any definite information, they were up against a stone wall. Governments in the past were in the same position, but the difference between this Government and Governments of the past was that most of our previous Governments knew that they were in office for, I think it was three years only, and they made plans for the three or four year period. Consequently they had to rush into developing, developing this, that and something else, so that they would have something to show for their three or four years in office. This Government, with twenty-five years facing them, knew that they could take their time to really go into the problems, have these problems thoroughly investigated and the best possible solution offered, hence the Royal Commission. Part of that lack of knowledge has already been made up through the magnetometer surveys for minerals.

MR. BROWNE: The IBEC Report.

MR. MORGAN: Waterpower surveys and the IBEC Report, which was next on my list, which although unpublished I feel sure has been of some benefit to the Government. This work of surveying and measuring is still going on, as is evidenced in the Speech from the Throne where a Royal Commission on Forestry and on Agriculture are mentioned.

In the district which I have the honour to represent both these industries play a more or less important role, agriculture not so much although around Jackson's Cove and King's Point seventy or eighty per cent of the people make their living as full-time farmers. However, in general I would say some sixty per cent of the people in the district make their living either through small saw mill operations or through cutting pulp wood for Bowaters and the
A.N.D. Company. I know the area fairly well, having spent four years in the district as a co-operative field worker. I have worked over most parts of it where there were trails or roads, and I know that our forestry reserves down there are getting pretty low, particularly on the three mile limit. I also know that there are large tracts of timber in the hinterland that have not been touched for years, and that are in need of being cut. I am looking forward to the report of the Royal Commission on Forestry to give us some indication of what can be done, and what should be done in these areas. But the most important of the commissions and the report which affects a very large number of the people in my district is the Fisheries Development Committee’s report. Unfortunately, unlike the honourable member for Fogo (he is not here) I am sorry I cannot give a list of names of places where development will take place. Up to the present time three areas have been surveyed, that is, Fortune Harbour, Robert’s Arm and Nippers Harbour. I trust that some development will take place at Nippers Harbour during the coming season. As a matter of fact, if development does not take place there this season I may feel like trying to become a member of the Opposition and a contender for the leadership of that party, the eighth contender. I say this because we still have three members on the Opposition who have not been leaders as yet, and I am sure they would not give me the position prior to them.

The people on the north side of Green Bay are some of the best fishermen in Newfoundland. They fish from May, or as soon as the ice goes out in May, for salmon and for lobster and continue on into November and December and some years go on into January. They have a great variety of fish. Besides salmon and lobster which I have already mentioned they have turbot and halibut, herring, caplin and a particularly large run of codfish. I may say that all through the construction period on the bases I doubt if there were ten people who left the north side of Green Bay and gave up the fishery during that period to go on a construction job. They stayed home fishing and keeping their fishing gear in order. As I stated, they are amongst the best fishermen in Newfoundland. They also have been waiting patiently for this development programme and also for some development to take place. As a matter of fact there is a group presently in Nipper’s Harbour who are prepared not only to give up their fishing stages and their land but also willing to invest something like twenty-five thousand dollars in a plant or in some type of improvement for their fishery in Nipper’s Harbour, I feel sure that with people like that the Government will, as soon as it is feasible, do something for them. I know that we cannot get on the north side of Green Bay development such as is planned for LaScie, although the development at LaScie will be of some benefit to the Shoe Cove area, the eastern end of the north side of the bay. But under the primary development or immediate development programme there is room for great improvement in such places as Nipper’s Harbour, Indian Burying Place, etc. I feel sure, Mr. Speaker, that this Government working in connection with the fisheries of Newfoundland not only the salt cod but the fresh fish as well will go further and have a greater effect on the future of the industry than all that has been done for the fishery in the past.

Leaving the matter of fisheries I should like to turn to a subject that is dear to the heart of my honourable friend, the Honourable Minister of Public Works—I refer to roads:

Up to 1949 we had in the whole district of Green Bay something like fifteen to twenty miles of highroads. There were only two settlements in the districts connected to the railway, Point Leamington in the eastern section and South Brook in the centre. As you know, Mr. Speaker, most of the people, or a lot of the people live on islands which are quite near to the shore, near to the headlands. But a great many of these people could not get to the roads and their only means of transportation was small boats in the summer time and a dog team, or lately a snowmobile in the wintertime. Since this Government came into office we have made a beginning, and I might remind the Honourable Minister it is only a beginning, I hope, in the building of roads in Green Bay.

HON. E. S. SPENCER (Minister of Public Works): Now, more than double what you had before.

MR. MORGAN: Yes, I agree we have, since this Government came into office, exactly doubled. There was a road built from Springdale to King's Point. They have done some work towards Bay Verte—Jackson's Cove—King's Point—Point Leamington towards Leading Tickle—Cockles Cove to Fortune Harbour—Phillip's Head out towards Point au Bay. I must say the Department of Public Works has done fairly well, but I should like to point out that most of these roads which I have mentioned, only a beginning has been made on them. Some of them have been roughly built out, some of them have been bulldozed and graded for a few miles, but the beginning is made and I should like to urge upon the Government the importance of continuing with that programme.

Now very few people, I think, realize the number of people involved. For instance the road from South Brook to Robert's Arm would connect no less than five thousand people to the highroad. We had five thousand, I think, in the last census, or something like 4,988 people who at the present time are completely isolated but who will be able to make connection with the highroad just as soon as the connecting four or five miles of road is completed. I know, Mr. Speaker, what it means to the people and to the community in general. People sort of get a different attitude on life when the road is open. I happened to be in Springdale the Sunday the road was opened—or the road was opened on Thursday and I happened to be there on the following Sunday. I am sure that fifty per cent of the population had taken their cars out. They were used to running back and forth for four or five miles in the town. The road opened on Thursday and on Sunday everybody took advantage of it going out to Corner Brook, Grand Falls, Gander, Botwood, wherever they felt inclined to go. As I said, I know it does make a tremendous difference to the people. Now these roads which have been started, particularly this road to Robert's Arm, which I will say liberated five thousand people, was started last Fall and I hope the work will be continued this year.

Mr. Speaker, this Speech from the Throne portrays more activity in fish-terry matters, in forestry and in mining than has taken place in the history of Newfoundland. For that one thing alone it will go down in history as one of the greatest speeches that has been made in this House. If any additional endorsement of what the Government has done in the past five years is needed I think it appears in the "Evening Telegram" of April 3, in an item headed "Camp Change—Sunshine" for Province's Crippled." Mr. Herb Wyatt, President of the Sunshine Camp, stated that all in all they found it hard going getting really underprivileged children to aid. I think that is the greatest tribute that could be paid to this Government, that what is known as the "Sunshine Camp" had to change its sphere of operations. I think it now plans to look after some polio victims. They had to change from one operation to another because they just could not find enough underprivileged children in St. John's to operate their camp. Now if that is true of St. John's how much more true is it in the outports. I don't know what the St. John's people will say to me for saying this, I am a bayman myself, but St. John's had more poverty, absolute poverty than any part of the outport areas. The reason for this is quite logical. In the outports most people grew their own vegetables, caught their own fish, got their own firewood, some had sheep from which they could get wool for mittens, socks, sweaters etc. for the children. But in St. John's, or in any town, or any industrial town or city, when a person loses his job, a great many people don't own their own houses, and we get poverty in its worst form. When such a fine person as Mr. Wyatt makes a statement like that I am sure that we all feel very proud of it, and of the accomplishments of this Government.

Mr. Speaker, during the past five years the people of Newfoundland have taken a new lease on life. I spent six years travelling around this country from Port aux Basques around the north west coast, the east coast and back to Conception Bay and in Placentia Bay. I knew the conditions very well. I will say I knew them more than the average person who travelled Newfoundland, because working with the co-operative movement I really got to know the toiling masses, I really got to know their problems, to know their problems and their difficulties. I must say that when travelling around Newfoundland at the present time when I meet the same people the improvement amazes me, it is unbelievable. For instance I have seen children, who, as the member for Bell Island mentioned this afternoon, did not have enough clothes to wear, I have seen them having to stay home from school because of lack of clothing. Today in no part of Newfoundland would you ever find such poverty. As a matter of fact, I am again quoting from the "Evening Telegram" of April 3rd: "So called underprivileged children turned up at the Sunshine Camp last year wearing perms, dressed in fine clothing and having as much as five dollars in their pockets. Their underprivileged parents brought them to the camp and came back for them in taxis."

MR. SMALLWOOD: Good enough. It was worth fighting for was it not?

MR. MORGAN: Mr. Speaker, if for nothing else alone but for the social benefits we have obtained through Confederation with Canada and for the industrial development programme, and for the fishery development programme, which I feel sure we will get, this Government will go down as the greatest Government which Newfoundland ever had.

HON. L. R. CURTIS (Attorney General): Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of the debate.

MR. CURTIS: I move, Mr. Speaker, that the House now go into Com­mittee on sundry items Nos. 2-9, or as many of them as we could get through in forty minutes.

HON. DR. F. W. ROWE (Minister of Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I wonder if I could have the per­mission of the House to withdraw item No. 7. The reason for that re­quest is that we have another ad­ditional amendment, somewhat minor, to make to the Crown Lands Mines and Quarries Act, and the Department of the Attorney General felt, I think rightly, that rather than have two Bills it would be better to have the two amendments in the one Bill. So that, with the approval of the House, Sir, I would like to request to have that Bill withdrawn. You unde rstand that a new Bill will •be submitted incorporating the amendment which has already had second reading.

MR. SPEAKER: Does the House give leave?

Leave of the House given. Item
No. 7 withdrawn.

As to items No. 2 and 3, leave has already been granted for the Com­mittee to sit again. So that we have new items No. 4, 5, 6, 8, and 9. Motion is I do now leave the Chair.

Committee of the Whole on Sundry Bills:

MR. CHAIRMAN: I think at this stage, I might remind the Committee we were discussing Section 7 of the Bill "An Act to Amend the Interpre­tations Act." Section 7 had come up for some discussion but had not been passed, and Section 5 had been left to stand. So that we will now begin with Section No. 7, which has already been read and partly discussed.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, since the last sitting the Attorney General was kind enough to send over to me a copy of the report of the Com­mittee on all such legislation, and this contains representative clauses which they deem advisable for in­ser­tion into the Interpretations Act in the different provinces. I believe one of the sections is also one we have under Section 5. So far as that is concerned, therefore, I have no ob­jectives.

MR. CURTIS: Just to clarify, Mr.
Chairman, if any member would like to see the report of the proceedings of the 31st annual meeting of the Conference on Uniformity of Legisla­tion in Canada, held September 1st to 5th, 1953. Since my honourable friend referred to that matter in de­bate, I took the liberty yesterday to send it over to him to see for himself.
It will be remembered that earlier in the debate, my honourable and learn­ed friend suggested I could not find these amendments in any other pro­vincial Act. That is explainable be­cause the various houses are now meeting and at this moment, prob­ably, re-enacting the same Acts as we are enacting here today. This Com­mittee on Uniformity of Legislation which meets every year is a particu­larly valuable committee consisting of some of the outstanding lawyers of Canada. I might say I had the privi­lege of meeting some of them last year in Quebec. We are represented on the Committee by Mr. Puddester, Mr. Carter and Mr. Greene, all of the Attorney General's Department. These gentlemen don't always manage to get away. Last year actually we were not represented, but we have been represented at previous meetings, and we hope to be represented at the meeting to be held this year in Winnipeg. From the names appearing on the list of the commissioners any member will see this is an outstanding one, and for that reason I do not examine too closely the amendments they suggest, because they are an outstanding group, and I felt quite happy if the amendments in question had their endorsement they would undoubtedly be good ones. On the other hand if there is any particular point that honourable members would like to discuss I would be happy.

Clause 7, 8 carried; clause 9 read, carried.

Clause 5:

DR. POTTLLE: Mr. Chairman, could I ask the Honourable the Attorney General, if there is machinery to acquaint this House of any appeal or amendment to some Act in some other province, as indicated there.

MR. CURTIS: There is certainly no machinery to acquaint the House. Any lawyer or any court interpreting this would obviously have reverence to any amendment in effect.

MR. HOLLETT: In any province?

MR. CURTIS: I think so.

This is the date the Interpretation Act came into force, Mr. Speaker, so this amendment is retroactive to the date of the original legislation.

Clause 5 carried.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Motion is the Committee report having passed this Bill without amendment.

Carried.

Committee of the Whole on Bill "An Act to Amend the Undeveloped Mineral Areas Act."

Clause 1 carried, clause 2 read:

"2. Paragraph (b) of Section 13 of the Undeveloped Mineral Areas Act, chapter 185 of The Revised Statutes of Newfoundland, 1952, is amended by striking out subparagraphs (iii), (v), (ix) and (xi) and substituted therefor the following:

(iii) Falconbridge Nickel Mines Limited.
(v) Labrador Mining and Exploration Company Limited.
(ix) Newfoundland Fluorspar Ltd.
(xi) Independent Mining Corporation Limited."

MR. BROWNE: Before you put that, Mr. Chairman, I wonder if the Honourable Minister of Mines and Resources would tell us who this corporation is, and is it actively engaged in mining or prospecting at this time?

DR. ROWE: In answer to that question, Mr. Chairman, I don't believe this company is actually doing any work at this present time. I believe that sometime last year they suspended, but I don't think they have ruled out altogether the possibility of operating, but I think they did suspend operations in York Harbour, Bay of Islands. The honourable member for Humber would be more familiar with the case. It came into existence before this Government came into office.

MR. SMALLWOOD: They have spent several hundred thousand dollars, a couple of hundred thousand, and then the promoter of the company persuaded his directors to risk another hundred thousand which brought it to three hundred thousand. Before that was all spent he persuaded them to risk, I think, another fifty thousand. So that they spent in all a figure of approximately three hundred and fifty thousand dollars. Now, the Government helped them in this way; it gave them a sole, exclusive right to search for minerals immediately beside the area they already had. They acquired the area they already had by purchase from Harvey and Company, the original, or late owners. This was done so that they might test their theory that the additional ore body they needed, and which did not exist in their own area might be found immediately beside it. It was on a search of that area immediately beside theirs that they spent the large sum of money, but with no result, they did not increase their tonnage sufficiently to have a mine, so they dropped it.

MR. BRO'WNE: What mineral?

MR. SMALLWOOD: The York Harbour Mine was originally a copper mine. Unfortunately at the time it was first operated, worked as a mine, they discovered that the ore contained a very high proportion of a nuisance mineral for which there was no use at the time. This mineral is known as zinc. It is very rich in zinc, I think from eight to ten per cent. This was a nuisance at the time. But it was that high proportion of zinc which made it so attractive right now to go in again in the last few years and try to work up sufficient tonnage to justify a mine. It contained a very high proportion of zinc, which in fact actually caused them to quit mining. For the amount of copper it did not pay to have to separate the useless ore known as zinc.

Bill passed without amendment.

Committee of the Whole on Bill "An Act to Amend the Rent Restrictions Act."

Bill passed without amendment.

Committee of the Whole on Bill "An Act to Amend the Local Areas Planning Act."

MR. BROWNE: I wonder if we might know what Act that sub-section 2 is amending? I have not the original Bill here.

MR. CURTIS: Sub-section 2—Under the present new regulation made under sub-section 1, it may provide for the issuing of orders within the scope of that sub-section. What we have done is to take that out and put in that clause which provides for a penalty for breaches of the regulations.

Clause 3:

MR. BROWNE: Is there any special reason this elaborate and very stringent clause is being inserted here? Has anything arisen in the past to justify the enactment of this provision? I would also like to ask if the Minister would be good enough to inform me as to what sort of areas this applies to?

HON. S. J. HEFFERTON (Minister of Municipal Affairs and Supply): These are areas really not incorporated but for some reason or other, at the request of the people or the public at large, may have been incorporated into the rural area planning development.

MR. BROWNE: Is there any one in existence at this moment?
MR. HEFFERTON: Topsail Road; some part of the St. John's Municipal Department is definitely under the Department of Municipal Affairs. We have had a request from several other areas for the same thing. No penalty is provided under the section. During the last year or so we have had occasions where at different times people have asked for certain regulations, they come back to us and ask what happens if the regulations are not enforced. Consequently there is an amendment being put in.

MR. BROWNE: Is Topsail Road the only planning area at the present time that has been announced?

MR. HEFFERTON: As far as I know that is the only one active at the present time. Although on the West Coast there is an area to come in shortly, and in central Newfoundland there is an area which will probably be under the same, and on the North East Coast probably another.

MR. BROWNE: I think it is very good to make regulations along the highway like that, provided they are reasonable. It seems to me some of the regulations I have seen seem to be a little unreasonable. It says, within a mile of the highway, I believe, nothing shall be done without the permission of Public Works.

MR. SMALLWOOD: And it should be a mile—I can show why: Suppose a factory is built beside the highway, with a few hundred yards, or several factories, and it becomes desirable or even necessary to build a town for the workers whom they have employed in these factories. It follows that these people would like to live nearby the plant. The minute that situation arises it becomes very imperative to take control so that you won't have another slum. I can think of a case right now, Atlantic Hardboards Limited, and Newfoundland Hardwoods, two plants quite close to each other. If you had people building there within half a mile or a mile of these two plants, you would have immediately the problem of sanitation, the problem of water, the problem of fire hazards and forest fire hazards which in turn might destroy the factories and the homes that have been built. You would have all kinds of problems arising from an unco-ordinated and unregulated building scheme. So that it is desirable that the Minister have authority to step in where municipalities don't exist or where no form of local Government exists, and acting as a sort of mayor for that area prevent the springing up of what would be virtually another slum. I hope I am now speaking to the right Bill—yes I am told that I am. I think this is very sound and very sensible. I think of a beautiful highway leading from Corner Brook to Deer Lake, and going for some miles of its distance along the bank of the very beautiful, very majestic Humber River. I think what a tragedy it would be if that kind of thing happened along that road. Then again take the Trans-Canada Highway as it leaves Port aux Basques and comes eastward coming through that beautiful valley of Codroy, and all out through that district, then down through St. George's and Corner Brook again passing through magnificent scenery—take the new highway that has been begun from Bonne Bay down, and on which magnificent progress was made last year, and on which even more progress may be made this year—it would be criminal to allow slums to spring up along these highways.

DR. ROWE: I can add to what the Honourable the Premier has already said. An example we had of some negotiations with the Government of Canada in Happy Valley, a community of Newfoundland citizens in Air Force Territory held by the Government of Canada, and being very rigidly controlled, and the people are only squatters there. We had some negotiations and the Government of Canada felt it should transfer that area back to the Government of Newfoundland, the area that would include the Community of Happy Valley. If that were done, unless we had some means of stepping in there the thing would be wide open, and within two or three weeks, I should say, you would have hundreds of shacks going up all around there as soon as that area became open territory. So that apparently there should be some control until such time as the community itself can set up its own municipal body.

MR. BROWNE: I wonder if the Minister could tell us if that is the sort of thing this Act deals with?

MR. HEFFERTON: Yes, the point my honourable colleague has brought to the attention of the Committee is one of the reasons that brought that to the fore.

MR. BROWNE: I understand from the remarks of the Premier that the Topsail Road is designated as an area a mile outside the limits of St. John's.

MR. SMALLWOOD: From Cowan Avenue, I believe.

MR. BROWNE: The City of St. John's, I believe, has jurisdiction to a distance of one mile outside its boundary—you begin there?

MR. HEFFERTON: That is right.

MR. BROWNE: Is that the only area around St. John's controlled by this Act at the present time?

MR. HEFFERTON: There has been a request from the whole perimeter around St. John's to be placed under control in a similar manner but no decision has been made on it yet.

Bill passed without amendment.

MR. CURTIS: I move, Mr. Chairman, the Committee rise and report having passed these four Bills and ask leave to sit again.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole have considered the matter to them referred and have passed the Bills "An Act to Amend the Interpretation Act" without amendment. Report received. Ordered read a third time tomorrow.

A Bill "An Act to Amend the Local Areas Planning Act," passed without amendment. Report received. Ordered read a third time on tomorrow.

The Committee of the Whole have considered the matters to them referred and have made progress on the following Bills:

"An Act to Amend the Solemnization of Marriages Act."
"An Act Further to Amend the Education Act."

Report received—Ordered sit again on tomorrow.

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Speaker, I move that all remaining Orders of the Day do stand deferred.

I wonder, Mr. Speaker, if I might crave the indulgence of the House to give notice that I will on tomorrow ask leave to introduce a Bill, "An Act Further to Amend the Public Utilities Act."

DR. ROWE: Mr. Speaker, might I also crave the indulgence of the House to give notice that I will on tomorrow ask leave to introduce a Bill "An Act Relating to the Protection of Plants and to the Prevention of the Spread of Insects, Pests and Diseases Destructive to Vegetation," and "An Act Further to Amend the Wild Life Act."

HON. C. H. BALLAM (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, I beg to ask leave to introduce a Bill on tomorrow, "An Act to Amend the Apprenticeship Act," and a Bill "An Act Further to Amend the Workmen's Compensation Act."

MR. SPENCER: Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to ask on tomorrow to introduce a Bill "An Act Further to Amend the Motor Carriers Act."

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I move that the House at its rising do adjourn until tomorrow, Thursday, at 3:00 of the clock.

Mr. Speaker, before Your Honour adjourns the House, may I say for the benefit of the House that we don't propose to meet on St. George's Day which is, I believe on Friday. It is not customary in the early stages of a session to meet on Saturday. Therefore in rising tomorrow, Thursday, we would propose to rise until the Monday following. It is a little inconvenient to have only a short week, but St. George's Day is St. George's Day and it is the Queen's Birthday, I think, under our law.

Moved and seconded the House adjourned until tomorrow, Thursday at 3:00 of the clock.

The House then adjourned accordingly.

THURSDAY, April 22, 1954.

The House met at three of the clock in the afternoon, pursuant to adjournment.

Presenting Petitions

MR. S. DROVER: Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present a petition from the people of Westport, Pumbly Cove and Bear Cove requesting that the three mile limit be restored to the province. The petition reads in part: "We the undersigned consider that the rights of the people of White Bay are too much restricted as far as the three mile limit is concerned. During the past years timber bordering the coastal waters have been given away to private companies. We have often been told we are not to cut any of Bowater's timber, yet before that, any person living within the three miles limit would be permitted to cut for firewood and for building houses."

The petition, Sir, is signed by 244 persons in the area concerned. Not only in the area concerned but in other parts of White Bay, too, the people have been deprived of their rights on the three mile limit.
I have much pleasure in supporting this petition, and ask that it be tabled in the House and presented to the Department concerned.

MR. M. HOLLETT (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I wonder if I might speak to a point of privilege: I missed my opportunity in the first place, but would like to speak now with the consent of the House?

Permission granted.

MR. HOLLETT: I just want to draw attention of the House to the "Daily News," April 21, which states: "Opposition Leader Hollett added the support of his side of the House to the motion that the "Evening Telegram" should apologize for its quotations."

Now, we have no Hansard here, Sir, and I am quite sure these are not the words I used. I did say the "Telegram" should apologize if it misquoted any honourable member. I draw the attention of the House to that so that it might be corrected.

HON. J. R. SMALLWOOD (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, to that same point, I would like to say, my recollection agrees thoroughly with that of the Honourable Leader of the Opposition. In my recollection that is exactly what he said, what he has now repeated.

MR. HOLLETT: I thank the Honourable the Premier for supporting me.

MR. SPEAKER: Does the Honourable Leader of the Opposition wish any further action?

MR. HOLLETT: No.

Reports of Standing and Select Committees

HON. G. POWER (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to table the report of the Civil Servants' Commission of Newfoundland from July 1, 1953 to March 31, 1954.

MR. W. J. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, may I ask the Honourable Minister of Finance if that is to be printed or if he has copies here?

MR. POWER: I think there are sufficient copies to go around, at least there are sufficient copies for the members of the Opposition.

Notice of Questions

Notice of questions on tomorrow given by Mr. Browne.

(62) MR. BROWNE: To ask the Honourable the Minister of Labour to lay on the Table of the House the following information:

The names, positions and salaries of all employees of the Workmen's Compensation Board.

(63) MR. BROWNE: To ask the Honourable the Attorney General to lay on the Table of the House the following information:

The names, positions and salaries of all employees of the Public Utilities Commission.

Answers to Questions

Question No. 60: Being prepared.

Question No. 59: Stand.

Question No. 58: In course of preparation.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I have some questions the answers to which I have not received. I am sure honourable members who directed these questions to me will appreciate the fact that it is very rarely indeed that I prepare the answers handed to me. At this moment I have no answers, and will take the replies as soon as they are handed to me. I may say in that connection that the past fortnight or so has been for me personally a period of very unusual business, and until the answer is handed to me I frankly don't know there is such a question directed to me. I don't know whether I am on my head or on my heels, but I have been extremely busy in the past two weeks, and it is not with any disrespect to the House that I have failed to answer any one, two or three questions still on the order paper for me.

MR. POWER: I believe there are a couple of questions addressed to the Department of Finance which are outstanding. I believe the answers are ready, but I have not been to my office for the past two days.

MR. SPENCER: Mr. Speaker, I have the answer to Question No. 35 asked by the honourable member for St. John's West. I find that I had already, in fact, discussed this answer with the honourable gentleman who had asked the question, and he indicated to me there was a point there he would like to have answered. I promised I would endeavour to get it for him. Unfortunately that particular bit of the answer is not included in the written answer, so that I propose to give it verbally, which I think will serve the purpose.

The question is: What amount of money has been paid for architects by the Government since April 1, 1949? Give the amounts paid to each architect or firm of architects and state the work for which the amount or amounts were paid.

I shall not read the details of this but merely give the summary:

A. J. C. Paine
West Coast Sanatorium $90,949.84
Mental Hospital South Wing 78,473.08
Mental Hospital Nurse's Home 8,252.36
Memorial University 881.24

$178,556.52

In connection with that I think it would be only fair to inform the House that all of it except nine thousand was contracted expenditure prior to the advent of this administration.

Rennie & Horwood
Boys' Home, Whitbourne $5,330.00
Museum 1,000.00

$6,330.00

W. J. Ryan
Memorial University $50,000.00

We will I hope be able to report in due time having paid this firm a very much larger sum. My reason for saying that is that it is anticipated that the Memorial University, as presently visualized, will probably cost somewhere in the vicinity of five million dollars.

J. A. Hoskins
Colonial Building $1,300.00

Mental Hospital
New South Wings 28,679.94
Ellis Wing Extension 6,317.37
Nurses' Home 6,003.87
Central Laundry 1,228.20
Centre Block 197.22
Boiler House 77.73
Kennedy Wing 882.42

$44,586.75
Practically all of that was contracted for prior to our coming into office, and paid to Mr. Hoskins since 1949.

W. J. Roue
Placentia Ferry $3,500.00

Fetherstonhaugh, Dunford Bolton and Chadwick
Memorial University $5,463.82

This was for a set of plans in connection with the original idea held in connection with the extension to the present Memorial University. That was prior to the thought of building a new University.

Question No. 35 (2):

Question No. 35 (3):
Question: Were tenders called for the construction of the ferry boat to operate on Placentia Gut, or for the construction of terminals on each side? Give the names, if any, of those who tendered, with the amount of each tender. What is the estimated cost of this project, and how much has been expended to date thereon?

Answer: Tenders were invited by advertisement in the press. Three tenders were received for the construction of the Ferry Boat. Two of these were from Mainland firms. The contract was awarded to Newfoundland Shipyards Limited at Clarenville, it being decided to give preference to the local company.

Three tenders were received for construction of the terminals. One of these was withdrawn. Of the remaining two, the tender of Tidewater Construction Co., Ltd. was the lower and the contract was awarded to this firm in the sum of $223,755.

Speaking from memory—I have not the exact figures of these tenders—I believe that is the part my honourable friend is particularly interested in, and I can get the details for him. But speaking from memory, I believe the bid of the Newfoundland Shipyards Limited of Clarenville for the ferry boat which is to go on the Gut at Placentia was of the order of $115,000. That may vary a few cents one way or the other, I will get the actual figures.

MR. BROWNE: What were the other two?
MR. SPENCER: The other two were slightly less, as indicated, but preference was given to the local shipping yard. There was a slight difference, but I don't remember the exact figures, I believe it amounted to 8% or 10%. I repeat that the justification appeared to be on the basis that when we first entered union with Canada the Federal Government authorized the purchase in here for any work they undertook of a differential of some 15% in favour of the local suppliers, not necessarily merchants. That was to take care of the difference anticipated in freight rates and charges. They were allowed that difference so that if we bought a piece of machinery from a firm here in Newfoundland we would be entitled to pay them about 15% more than they would pay on the Mainland of Canada for it. On that basis, I believe, it was considered and the advantage given to the local firm, at an additional cost of less than the 15%. Three tenders were received for the construction etc.

Mr. Speaker, I hereby table these answers, and I believe there are sufficient copies for all members.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the minister would be gracious enough to give me the remainder of the information, the names of the companies who tendered in each case and the amount of their tender.

MR. SPENCER: I know of no reason why it cannot be provided.

Orders of the Day

Adjourned debate on the Address in Reply.

HON. L. R. CURTIS (Attorney General): Mr. Speaker, it is not my intention this afternoon to discuss at any great length the Address in Reply, but there are some remarks which I think should be made, and which I hope to be able to make, which may be of interest to the House and possibly to the country.

First of all, sir, I would like to join those who have preceded me in congratulating the mover and seconder of the motion. They have spoken, as we would have expected, with their usual skill, and they have been a credit to themselves and to the districts they represent.

I would also like to congratulate, Mr. Speaker, the many speakers who have spoken before me. The speeches this year have all been of a very high order, and some have been outstanding. I don't think I will discriminate lest I be asked to name the settlements from which the members came, who made the speeches referred to.

I would like also, Mr. Speaker, to associate myself with what previous speakers have said with respect to the visit of Her Majesty to other parts of her domain. We all wish our young Queen well. We have all followed with great interest her tour, rejoice with the rest of the empire that she is about to rejoin her family and that she will shortly be returning to her home.

I would also like, Mr. Speaker, to associate myself with the words of welcome which have been extended to our new member, the Honourable and Learned Member for St. John's West. I have known the honourable member for many, many years. In fact our names are quite close together, if not immediately adjoined on the roll of the Law Society. For the many years that he served this country on the bench of the central court I was also a member of the bar, and on many occasions I had the pleasure and the privilege of appearing before him. Indeed I might say, Mr. Speaker, quite sincerely that it was always a pleasure to appear before my honourable friend. I always felt personally very happy and that I would receive at his hands, and that my clients would receive fair treatment, which they invariably did. I went before the Central District Court and also the Magistrate's Court presided over by my honourable friend with perfect confidence, in fact, much more so on occasions that I did when I went before other courts not far from his. He attended to the matters that came before him, Mr. Speaker, with great care, and I for one can find no reason at any time to criticize any treatment received by my clients or by myself when I appeared before him. If we could only make the Honourable Member for St. John's here, a J.P. those of us on this side of the bench would feel quite at home because we would be then addressing a full bench. However, we have two of them now. I don't know if we could make another of them a J.P. The Minister for Provincial Affairs might do it for the Honourable Member for St. John's East.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Then we have the Honourable Member for Bell Island.

MR. CURTIS: I am very sorry, Mr. Speaker, that my honourable friend still has in his mind a grudge against me, is it? or is it against the Premier, or is it this party? over his resignation from the Bench in St. John's. For I assure you, Mr. Speaker, that the Honourable Member resigned from that position and was not removed. In fact I would go so far, Mr. Speaker, as to say that he would not have been removed.

MR. BROWNE: You are not sure about that, but you were going to do your best, remember.

MR. CURTIS: I do, Mr. Speaker, I assured the honourable member that as far as I was concerned, I always found him eminently fair, and as far as I was concerned I would do the utmost I could to see he remained there. But he had unfortunately, Mr. Speaker, involved himself in a debate which puts me in an awkward position, because he expected me and the party I was with to recommend him as one of the first district court judges.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order—May I point out that in the original terms of union in 1867 there was provision—

MR. SMALLWOOD: Is that a point of order, Mr. Speaker?

MR. BROWNE: This is a point of order because the honourable and learned member is not correct in what he is saying, and is not reporting me correctly.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, to a point of order, the honourable and learned gentleman is completely out of order, and I ask Mr. Speaker, to rule on it.

MR. BROWNE: Who is Mr. Speaker? Not the Premier.

MR. SPEAKER: What is the point of order?

MR. BROWNE: I may say, I moved an amendment to the Address in Reply, and that debate is finished. Yet speaker after speaker on the other side gets up and refers to it, when it should not be at all. Actually, Mr.
Speaker, this is the point of order—
I have been misquoted and the honourable and learned gentleman is not entitled to misquote me.

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Speaker, I have no desire to misquote.

MR. BROWNE: Allow me to state what I said: The point of order is this: You are making a statement which is not what I said. What I said was that the original terms of confederation, in all provinces as well as in Newfoundland, made provision for district judges of district courts to be paid from Ottawa.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Will Your Honour give a ruling? The honourable gentleman has been on his feet two minutes and has not yet stated a point of order. If he had asked the Honourable the Attorney General to yield and make the explanation he would be in order, but to rise to a point of order and then go ahead and contradict what he has said—

MR. SPEAKER: I think the honourable gentleman might confine himself to the complaint that he is misquoted, and not try at some length to fill in what he actually did say.

MR. BROWNE: I will make it as brief as possible. In 1867 there were provisions made.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, to a point of order.

MR. SPEAKER: The Honourable the Premier is out of order. The remarks, the honourable member was about to say refers to 1867, and he does claim that is what he said in his speech.

MR. BROWNE: Yes, the Honourable the Attorney General was saying that I requested him to try and have me included as one of the first district judges of the district court.

MR. CURTIS: Not requested; no, expected.

MR. BROWNE: I expected my honourable friend to carry out the Terms of Union which he did not do.

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Speaker, now I am going to rise to a point of order. The honourable member thinks because he made a motion to move an amendment on the Address in Reply that those of us who speak now cannot refer to a speech he made in this address. I don’t care what he moved. He spoke on the Address in Reply, and everything he said we can refer to now.

MR. BROWNE: I am not objecting to you doing that.
MR. CURTIS: The honourable member, Mr. Speaker, said to you that the matter, in the form of an amendment was disposed of, and that every speaker who referred to it since has been out of order. In other words he put a closure on us by making a foolish amendment, which this House threw out.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, here are the Terms of Union, and if the honourable member would like to read—

MR. SPEAKER: Is the honourable member on a point of order? It is up to the Honourable Attorney General if he cares to accept—

MR. CURTIS: All I want to say, Mr. Speaker is this—I had no intention, and the Premier and this party had no intention of recommending to the Federal Government as one of our first acts after we came into Confederation, the promotion of a man who had deliberately tried his utmost to defeat Confederation. Now then—

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, the Terms of Union were hardly signed, and what did my learned friend and his colleagues the Premier do—violated the Terms of Union before the ink was dry.

MR. CURTIS: Absolute nonsense.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, to a point of order—if the honourable and learned gentleman gets up and makes a speech without even a point of order, now I will make a little speech to a point of order.

MR. SPEAKER: To a point of order?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, at least as much as the honourable gentleman had, at least that much, and he occupied several minutes. My point of order is this: The honourable gentleman not only fought to defeat Confederation but then afterwards volunteered himself as a “Liberal” candidate for the coming election, the first general election. He came to the “Liberal” Headquarters and offered himself as a Liberal Candidate while still on the Bench, a Liberal Party Candidate under my leadership.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker—

MR. SPEAKER: Order.

MR. BROWNE: No, Mr. Speaker.

MR. SPEAKER: I will ask the Sergeant-at-Arms to—this has gone far enough. If the honourable gentleman interrupts again.

MR. BROWNE: You are sitting down.

MR. SPEAKER: I merely stood so that there would be some semblance of order in the House. I shall ask the Honourable House if they consider me competent to fill the Chair or not. If they think not I will leave the Chamber. I am not sitting here to join in debates. Now, will the Honourable the Attorney General continue.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, on a point of privilege.

MR. SPEAKER: I am giving a ruling. Will the honourable gentleman still be seated.

MR. BROWNE: Whatever your ruling is—I am on a point of privilege.

MR. SPEAKER: There is no point of privilege before the Chair at the moment. The Chair is trying to give a decision on what was alleged to be
MR. BROWNE: No, Mr. Speaker, I bow always to the authority of the Chair.

MR. SPEAKER: Then show it by obeying the order to resume your seat. You will have ample opportunity.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, when may I state my point of privilege?

MR. SPEAKER: What is the honourable member trying to do?

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, you ask me what I was trying to do. I am trying to contradict the most fantastic lie ever told by anybody, made by the Premier. That is what I am trying to do.

MR. SPEAKER: Will the honourable member please resume his seat? My patience is nearly exhausted. The Honourable the Attorney General will resume his speech. It is out of order to have interruptions during any honourable member's speech. But I am not going to rule every interruption out of order unless the speaking member objects. I have done that for both. If the honourable gentleman wishes to make a point of order let him make it, but not make another speech to bolster his argument already made. If the honourable member wishes to rise to a point of privilege he may do so. If the honourable gentleman wishes to correct something which the speaking member says, he must follow the formula by asking the permission of the member who has the floor. Now will the Honourable the Attorney General resume his speech.

MR. CURTIS: I shall not refer any more, Mr. Speaker, to the subject on which the honourable member is so warm as this one. There are much more important things to be discussed. However I do welcome him in the House.

When we came into office, Mr. Speaker, we found things in this country in a most unsatisfactory condition. We found that large areas of the country had been given away; large natural resources had been alienated, and we found that these national resources were just lying dormant. Amongst the natural resources that had been alienated were many, many water powers. Indeed it was only the other day when the Government was considering a question as to the development of certain water powers that we found that these water powers were not owned by the Government but they were owned by the Reid Newfoundland Company. We found that before we could develop these water powers we had to buy them back from the owners. These natural resources, Mr. Speaker, given by God to this country alienated by former governments and held, sat upon, thousands and thousands and thousands of dollars worth of power flowing into the sea every day. And when we tried to utilize these powers we were told we would have to buy them back. That is a situation that will have to be considered by this House sooner or later. We found that the Muskrat Falls on the Hamilton River had been given away, for what? For thirty dollars a year, forever. For the last fifty years somebody has been paying $30 a year and is holding these water powers, powerful, potential assets just running away, running to waste. And if we tried tomorrow to develop that water power we have to buy it back. That, I say, is one of the things this House will have to consider very shortly. We found that huge timber areas had been alienated, and were being held by speculators, not for development, Mr. Speaker, but to sell at a profit.

The Government asked the Legislature, Mr. Speaker, and the Legislature did give relief in this case by passing a Bill which brought back to the country such of these water powers as were not being operated, or such of these timber areas as would not be operated, in accordance with the terms of the licenses. They were to be returned within six months.

We found that there was a great, large industry at Corner Brook that had in its reserves about eighteen million cords of timber. These eighteen million cords of timber, Mr. Speaker, cost that company about eighteen million dollars, but who got that eighteen million dollars? Not the Government, Mr. Speaker, but private capitalists and gamblers who had gotten their timber limits from the government of the day.

We found that the A.N.D. Company had large timber limits which must have cost them an enormous amount of money. But that money too, Mr. Speaker, did not go to the Government of Newfoundland. We found that there was at Buchans a huge deposit of mineral which was bringing in millions and millions of dollars every year. True, Mr. Speaker, the Government did get some return from that mine because that mine was liable to income tax, but a huge portion of the proceeds from that mine were going to a private company.

MR. CURTIS: I have not got the figures. We found, Mr. Speaker, that there were how many prospectors here since 1949? We found that there were no prospectors over a huge area of Newfoundland. What did we do? What was the Government to do? The Premier had just brought Newfoundland into Confederation. The country had received an impetus such as it had never received before. This Government tried to follow up this great exhilaration, this great boost the country had received as a result of coming into Confederation, by giving it a little further push so as to keep things going, keep things moving by taking advantage of the momentum, and keeping her on the move. So, what did the Government do, under the capable leadership of the Premier? We started to industrialize the country. I don't know how many new industries, Mr. Speaker, were introduced. There are three entirely Government owned, and sixteen or seventeen, I think, were Government assisted. But the point I am trying to make, Mr. Speaker, is that these industries were started for one purpose only, and that purpose was to give employment to our people, to reduce the number of our population dependent on the fishery, to keep in Newfoundland many of our people who were leaving the country. That, Sir, was the purpose of our entering into this industrial programme. You have heard the figures quoted the other day by the Honourable the Premier as to the number of men already employed, and the amount of wages already being paid. These we hope, Mr. Speaker, represent purely the beginning, and we hope that these figures will increase annually.

Now, Mr. Speaker, the point I want to make is this: The people of this country must realize, and particularly the people employed in these industries, must realize that these industries were produced for their benefit, and for their benefit almost entirely. Local industries have an up-hill fight. We have been asked by the Opposition why there has been no talk about the new industries—why we have made no reference to the new industries. There was no reference, Mr. Speaker, purely because we want the new industries to settle down and to get established. Every new industry, Mr. Speaker, has to go through its growing pains. I think I can say with truth that it was many years before the Grand Falls Industry began to pay dividends. I know, Mr. Speaker, it was many years before Corner Brook paid dividends. And I know that before they did pay dividends they had to make a call upon the Government of Newfoundland to implement its guarantee. Whether the Government actually did implement its guarantee or whether the sale of the International made that unnecessary, I cannot say. But I do know that the company had to be reorganized and some huge block of its capital had to be written off so that the company could get a start. So that you see, Mr. Speaker, all new companies, all new industries have to go through their growing pains. Even those industries that are today at the very top of the ladder had to go through their reverses, and had to have their bad times. Therefore it must be expected that one or other of our new industries will have to go through the same period, and for that reason I want now, today, to draw the attention of the House to the handicaps under which these industries have to progress.

In the first place we are, as you know, Sir, at the extreme eastern point of Canada, consequently we have to pay the highest freight rates on our imports and exports. This means that the industries that have to export material have to pay the highest rates of import freight and those that are going to send their processed products in the Canadian market must pay high freight rates out.

This question of freight rates has been disturbing us for quite a long time, and the situation is even more disturbing today vis-a-vis the new industries than at any other time, because how they work it out I do not know any more than anybody else. Actually under the Terms of Confederation Newfoundland is supposed to benefit from an Act called “The Maritime Freight Act” which is supposed to give the Maritimes, and for that purpose Newfoundland is included, a 20% reduction on freight rates. That sounded all right. But what do we have today? Mr. Speaker, the freight rates from St. John’s to Toronto are $3.21 a hundred lbs., but freight rates on the same class goods from Toronto to St. John’s $2.72 by C.N.R., but they ship it by boat; but they ship it from Toronto by C.N.R. and we get a rate of $2.72 coming through with a rate of $3.21 going the other way, a difference of 59c. or 18% of every hundred lbs. Look at the effect of that on local industries. On third class freight the difference is not so great. It is $2.42 from here to Toronto, but from Toronto to St. John’s $2.14, a difference of 28c. or 13%. On fifth class goods, St. John’s to Toronto $1.59, Toronto to St. John’s $1.39 a difference of 20c. or 15%. That, Mr. Speaker, when Newfoundland is supposed to enjoy, with the rest of the Maritimes, a freight rate which carries with it a 20% preference. So, Mr. Speaker, it must be realized just why at the moment these new industries have to carry an extra burden, and I would now appeal to labour, to the people who are working, not to be too demanding in their charges against these companies. This Government will never see labour oppressed by capital—we will not have it. I want to make that clear. But we would ask labour to co-operate and not price these new industries right out of the market by making excessive demands. One case in point: In one of the new industries in the first year there was a loss by the industry which this Government will have to pay. In that year employees asked for an increase, and the Board of Arbitration set up an increase, with the result that in the second year there was a further deficit. Now, Mr. Speaker, that cannot go on. If labour is not going to co-operate with the Government in keeping and creating jobs for labour, well then we will have no alternative than to just close the door. But to make it perfectly clear let me repeat again: This Government will not see labour oppressed. But we do ask labour to assist us to keep these new industries going, and not to be too harsh, and not to be too demanding in their requests. Indeed, Mr. Speaker, the general manager of one of these organizations told me himself that he expected during the present twelve months to spend four months of that period, one-third of his time, negotiating with unions.

So, Mr. Speaker, we have these industries created, as I have said, to give employment. All I am asking is that those who have employment and those who get employment help us to keep that employment there, and not price themselves out of the market. So much for the new industries—they will be all right in time. One or two may have a hard time, one or two may actually have to be reorganized. If our new industries all succeeded, if they succeeded, one hundred per cent we would not be a Government, we would be a bunch of supermen, Mr. Speaker. One does not get one hundred per cent these days from any scheme.

Now, then what next did we do? We had a magnetometer survey of that belt of Newfoundland just south of Notre Dame Bay, and we were able to induce some large mainland mining firms to come in and take out prospecting licenses. Still there were large areas left, and it was then that my colleague the Premier developed the idea and organized the idea of NALCO. My dear Sir, you would think, Mr. Speaker, that NALCO was a name that should not be mentioned in this House. The Honourable Leader of the Opposition did at least speak half respectfully of BRINCO. He was impressed as were we all by the greatness of the men constituting BRINCO. But NALCO is still and will still be, Mr. Speaker, a corporation which will have a large part in the future of Newfoundland. I was with the Honourable the Premier when we went together to New York and discussed the origin of NALCO. We were fortunate in having met scores of the leading bankers and financiers of the United States, and I was with him when the deal was closed with Harriman and Ripley representing a group, which group was prepared, Mr. Speaker, to invest not ten per cent or one hundred thousand dollars in NALCO but 49% with the Government to keep the other 51% and controlling interest. That group, Mr.
Speaker, was very unhappy when it was thought advisable and agreed to by them, that in the interest of all the Newfoundland Government should retain 90% of NALCO and only allow outsiders to hold 10%. The only way we could win that point, Mr. Speaker, was by persuading them that 10% of a tax-free corporation was as good as 20% in a non-tax-free corporation. So, much against their will and grudgingly Harriman, Ripley and their associates were content with one hundred thousand dollars out of the one million dollars capital. Well, NALCO was capitalized, and during the first year negotiated at great length and did interest several large mining groups in the United States and on the mainland of Canada to take concessions. All these concessions were designed to give NALCO a cut-in on the profits. All these concessions gave NALCO 10% of the net profit, in addition to the mining tax, of course, which would be payable in any event to the Government of Newfoundland. And all these concessions provided that in the event of an operating company coming into the picture NALCO would be permitted to invest up to thirty per cent in the capital of any such company. That was the first year.

Then last year, Mr. Speaker, NALCO was approached by Javelin. Javelin wanted an area to prospect on the Labrador, 2,500 sq. miles. We discussed the matter at length, and it was ultimately agreed that, provided they invested two hundred and fifty thousand dollars in purchasing fifty thousand shares of NALCO, we would give them the concession. So, Mr. Speaker, they subscribed for and paid two hundred and fifty thousand dollars into the Treasury of NALCO for fifty thousand shares at $5 each.

These were the shares, Mr. Speaker, that matched equally the shares that the Newfoundland Government had bought for one dollar each. They undertook in addition to spend one million dollars over a three year period. They undertook further to reimburse NALCO any money they had already spent on that area during this period and up to the last day of December last. They also undertook to repay any money spent by NALCO over that period because it was not felt desirable at that time of the year to change over, to withdraw from the area the NALCO Crew and have another crew go in. So for the purpose of having continuous work it was arranged that the work should be continued under the auspices of NALCO.

Having gotten that far, Mr. Speaker, Javelin got a little more ambitious. They realized that there was a great future for NALCO and therefore they offered to buy a controlling interest in NALCO. After some thinking and talking and negotiating the Honourable Minister of Finance and I went to Montreal and at some length discussed the pros and cons of this request. We were slightly worried, Mr. Speaker, one million five hundred shares at $5 a share would have involved a payment to come into the Treasury of the Company of seven and a half million dollars, and seven and a half million dollars is not hay. But we knew that Javelin did not have seven and a half million dollars, but presumably that was their business, and they presumably knew how they could raise the money. However they did have two-thirds of a million dollars $666,000 to be exact which they paid into the Treasury of NALCO. On the basis of that very, very substantial payment it was agreed by the three Newfoundland representatives that we should at least give them an opportunity to carry out their plans. Well, we drafted an agreement—that is where the rest of them got off easy because I happened to be a lawyer and got into the work on the agreement, and we whipped into shape an agreement which I felt would satisfy myself, and which I was able to recommend to my colleagues. They agreed with it, and we did pass over to Javelin a million and a half shares roughly, partially paid shares, and we gave them temporary control of the directorate. But we had a clause in that agreement, the shares were to be cancelled, the directors were to resign, and the company would have—Javelin would have paid up shares on the basis of one share for every five dollars subscribed.

Ultimately, Mr. Speaker, we all know what happened—Javelin became delisted—not a terrible thing to happen to a company, but most unfortunate at that particular time. I understand some of the largest companies on the stock market have from time to time been delisted. Javelin was delisted, and in accordance with the agreement the partly paid shares were cancelled, and new shares were issued at five dollars each to represent the money they paid in. Javelin, we agreed, could continue to hold the concession, and they are still liable today for that concession. They have three years in which to apply for a mining license. During that three years they must expend the balance of one million dollars on prospecting. After that they can have a mining license for three years, which will bring it up to January 1, 1959. Then in 1959 they are entitled under certain sections to a mining license for 99 years, which in turn will provide that they must have a mine operating at that time. So you see, Mr. Speaker, the obligations undertaken by Javelin are very, very serious, are very heavy. They will have to spend at least seven hundred thousand dollars over the next three years, then they have to produce a mine. In order to produce a mine, Mr. Speaker, they of necessity will have to produce a railway because these big deposits which exist at Lake Wabush are almost fifty miles from the nearest point of the Labrador Railway. That line will have to be built. So, Mr. Speaker, I think you will find that Javelin will have to find about fifty million dollars to bring this mine into production. And when they do, Mr. Speaker, remember we are entitled to ten per cent of their net profits before taxation. We are also entitled, Mr. Speaker, to thirty per cent, or to be allowed to participate to the extent of 30% in the operating company. I emphasize the fact that this mine is a proven mine, I don't think there is any doubt whatsoever about this—this is one of the greatest deposits of iron ore known. In fact, I think it can be safely said that it is just as good if not indeed better, because of the fact it is nearer to Seven Islands than the other deposits which will be coming into production during the present summer—so I say, Mr. Speaker, if NALCO has done nothing else, and if NALCO does nothing else from now on, the money we have invested in NALCO is a tip-top investment. Frankly, if I had my way—the Newfoundland Government now owns nine hundred thousand shares out of one million, forty thousand shares, because Javelin owns about forty thousand shares, 39,000 to be exact—

MR. HOLLETT: I understood it was 160,000 paid.
MR. CURTIS: I will be glad to make the point clear on that: They paid in six hundred odd thousand dollars. But some of that amount went to repay NALCO what it had spent on that area, the balance being represented by shares—no, it is about 75,000 shares they have. We have nine hundred thousand shares and they have seventy-five thousand shares. If I had my way, Mr. Speaker, I would have the Government of Newfoundland subscribe sufficient capital to make a Crown Company still owned as to 90% by the Government of Newfoundland.

Why then, Mr. Speaker, did we abandon the 90%? Because we were given to understand by the Federal Government that they would be recommending to Parliament a change in the clauses of the Income Tax Act which provided that corporations 90% owned by the Government would be Crown Corporation and if we had 90% that company would nevertheless be liable for taxation. I am watching very closely to see if that is being implemented. If it is not being implemented the Newfoundland Government might very well be advised to match the present investment so as to bring it up to 90% investment which in turn would make it tax free and so much more valuable to the Government. Now so much for NALCO. NALCO has discovered, Mr. Speaker, many, many potential areas which will well justify further drilling, and further exploration. And when that exploration has proceeded further let us hope that a similar deal to the deal made with Javelin may be made in these other areas. I am not going to enumerate them here. The list was published the other day in the “Evening Telegram” and I think, perhaps, in the “Daily News” when they were tabled in the NALCO Report.

NALCO, Mr. Speaker, need not be mentioned in a whisper. It can be shouted from the house-tops, and I myself am proud to be associated with a company which has been so most unusually fortunate in having within such a short period discovered such potential areas which will, if luck holds out, in time become a very powerful factor in the history, in the economic history of Newfoundland.

NALCO last year spent, in addition to all other money, five hundred and thirty thousand dollars on exploration. This year NALCO will spend another four hundred and fifty thousand, and will still have in the till, Mr. Speaker, enough money to spend a similar amount next year.

My honourable friend, the Leader of the Opposition, may know a lone prospector who would like to go searching for minerals, and one whom he says has come across a vein of fluor spar. I can assure him, Mr. Speaker, if that lone prospector would get in touch with NALCO, if it is on NALCO’s Area, or BRINCO if it is on BRINCO’s Area, and either one would be glad to make it well worth his while. But when he goes so far as to suggest that NALCO is all wrong and that BRINCO is all wrong, because that lone prospector has had his style cramped, I am afraid we cannot agree with him.

As to BRINCO, Mr. Speaker, I was also fortunate in being with the Premier when in London we called on the Honourable the Prime Minister, Sir Winston Churchill, and the Premier sold him the idea of BRINCO. And I am glad as I said before, that the Honourable Leader of the Opposition realized that BRINCO has associated with it some wonderful names. However, I had the honour of being with the Premier that morning when he saw Sir Winston Churchill. It was the morning Anthony Eden was married. Mrs. Eden was Sir Winston's niece, and I think he came straight from the wedding to meet the Premier. The Premier put the proposition up to him, and I heard him myself say: "It is a great Imperial Concept." He used some other words which I will not quote, but he did repeat "It is a Great Imperial Concept." Mr. Speaker, we were hardly back at the hotel before we received a phone call from one of his most eminent colleagues, Lord Leathers, who Sir Winston had already briefed on the interview. Lord Leathers sent for us, and we had the pleasure of meeting him. This time we had a third colleague with us, the Honourable Minister of Finance. We met in the rooms near Downing Street which had been occupied by Sir Winston and his family during the war, very historic rooms. We there discussed with Lord Leathers the proposition. I was astonished, Mr. Speaker, to hear the detail with which Lord Leathers was able to discuss with us the conversation the Premier had had with Sir Winston. Sir Winston had apparently a wonderful memory as he had apparently told Lord Leathers almost everything we had said, and what he had said. From there on until we met in the famous House of Rothschild, where the matter was finalized—not actually, it was not finalized there, but was finalized during a subsequent trip of the Premier's. But BRINCO was then born, and it was a great privilege for this House a year ago to put through the BRINCO Act.

Now what has come out of the BRINCO Agreement?

We have two agreements, Mr. Speaker, we have the agreement with BRINCO and the agreement with NALCO. With NALCO we were a 90% owner, now perhaps that 90% is down to 80%, but we were a 90% owner of NALCO in the beginning. In BRINCO we are not an owner. We have no investment in BRINCO. But we have the same conditions in BRINCO as we have or as NALCO has in its concessions. We have a provision, Mr. Speaker, that we will receive 80% of the gross profits which is as near as we actually could make it to the 20% of the net income of BRINCO. Now that is a very satisfactory position. BRINCO last year spent three hundred thousand dollars exploring in Newfoundland. BRINCO this year will spend another three hundred thousand dollars exploring in Newfoundland. BRINCO as the Premier told us a few days ago, is going to spend a million dollars this year investigating the Hamilton River. I think it can be assumed, Mr. Speaker, that still more will be spent next year on the Hamilton River, and ultimately, many, many, millions will be spent developing that area. Because you could not imagine that any company would spend as high as a million dollars looking into the possibilities of a water power without having some idea in their mind as to the uses for it.

This is the organization, Mr. Speaker, that the honourable and learned member for St. John's East called "Bunko." If the expenditure of three hundred thousand dollars last year, and the expenditure of a million, three hundred thousand this year is bunko, then by all means, let us have more of it. I would be ashamed, to have it said against me, that in this House I voted against BRINCO or NALCO. The time will come when this country will be a happier country, a richer country, and a better country to live in because of BRINCO and because of NALCO. Do you realize that under the agreement with BRINCO we get a share of the profits on the mining developments, but in the case of the water power development we get fifty cents a horse power. But of course then in addition we get the normal mineral tax, which at the present time is 5%. So I see where these companies are real companies, these companies are companies of which we may well be proud, and I for one am proud to be associated with a Government that was influential in bringing into existence these two great companies.

All these programmes are simply a part of our programme for making Newfoundland a better place for Newfoundlanders to live. We want a prosperous Newfoundland, and in our minds this is the way to get it.

It has been a sore point with those of us representing the North Eastern Districts to feel that so far so little has been done for the fisheries, and I was quite relieved the other day to learn that in spite of the fact that we have not felt we were doing much for the fishery, we nevertheless had during the last five years assisted them to the extent of six and a half million dollars, or one million, three hundred thousand dollars a year.

MR. HOLLETT: The Northern Districts?

MR. CURTIS: In all the districts, not only the northern districts. Nobody is more sorry about that than I. Unfortunately we had to do one of two things; turn socialistic and organize fish plants ourselves or else we have got to get somebody to whom to give or lend the money. It is most unfortunate that we are dependent therefore upon those at the present time in the fishery for the extension of our fishing policy. But we are here. We are waiting and we now have the Walsh Report, and we all anticipate that from now on the fisheries of Newfoundland will get the consideration which they deserve.

Now, we also pride ourselves, Mr. Speaker, on the progress we have made in other avenues. Let us consider for just a few seconds hospitalization in Newfoundland: At St. John's in the General Hospital in 1949 they had 431 beds, today it is 463, an increase of 32. In the Mental Hospital in 1949 they had six hundred beds, today there are 730. In the Sanatorium in 1949 they had 865 beds, today they have 460 beds. The West Coast Sanatorium did not exist in 1949, but it was planned by the Commission of Government, therefore we will not claim any credit, but we did finish this institution which can now house 277 patients.

Cottage Hospitals: In 1949 these hospitals could look after 347 patients. Now they can look after 467 patients. My honourable friend, the Minister of Health tells me that this Government has had more lines of water and sewerage installed in the past five years than all the previous governments including the Commission of Government put together. So you see just that is the policy of the present Government.

As against that I would ask you to consider what is the policy of the Opposition? I think the Honourable Leader of the Opposition was very
Mr. Hollett: Mr. Speaker, may I correct the honourable gentleman—I did not say we had gone—I did say the policy of the 1951 election was to elect an opposition—

Mr. Curtis: Yes, in 1951 they had a policy. It was a deep, dark secret. I can almost see the gallant Major over there.

Mr. Hollett: You have him now. Ask him about it.

Mr. Curtis: If he knew your policy I dare say he would tell us. It would not take us long to hear it. It was a deep, dark secret. They went to the country in 1951 as an Opposition, to be elected as an Opposition. Well now what can their policy be? They have not told us this deep, dark secret, and I am not a reader of Sherlock Holmes, but I think the people would like to know just what the policy of the Opposition is. They are against—the industries—that cannot be their policy, that is a negative policy. They are against NALCO. That is not a policy, Sir. They are against NALCO but we got NALCO in spite of them. They are against BRINCO, called it BUNKO. Well what is their policy?

Mr. Hollett: Mr. Speaker, I must rise to a point of order. Nobody on this side of the House ever said we were against BRINCO.

Mr. Speaker: I don't think that is a point of order.

Mr. Smallwood: Voted against it.

Mr. Curtis: I understood, Mr. Speaker, they voted against BRINCO. Yes, they have suggested in the course of the past five years three items which as far as I can see must constitute three planks in their platform—two years ago: Reduce the price of mouth wipes. That might be a good policy, reducing the price of mouth wipes.

Mr. Hollett: At this point may I ask the honourable Minister a question—if the ten thousand dollars overcharge has been returned or repaid? The ten thousand dollars overcharge on the mouth wipes.

Mr. Curtis: Platform No. 2. (Mr. Speaker, I am judging from the debates). Allow that lone ranger, that lone prospector to go where he likes and prospect. Then there was one more point—Oh yes—the Central District Court—appoint the honourable member judge of the Central District Court. The Premier has suggested now that there was a fourth point which I missed—have all the roads leading out of St. John's paved.

Mr. Browne: Mr. Speaker, may I rise here to a point of order or to a point of correction. It was not said to pave all roads leading out of St. John's. May I point out to the honourable member that I pointed out there were very important roads leading out of St. John's which should have been paved, and at certain other places in the country.

Mr. Curtis: I stand corrected. Mr. Speaker, I was not here at the time and did not hear the honourable member. But I can quite imagine these four planks in the P.C. Platform would be awfully popular in my district, wonderfully popular. I might get in by acclamation again if they followed that policy. However, Mr. Speaker, that is the policy as far as we know it. We are still here waiting to find out what their policy is.

As to our own policy, it is no secret, we are doing the best we can to bring it into effect, and the results are being apparent in the living conditions of the people. That is our policy, let us wait with bated breath while they tell us the additional plans which they have.

Now, Sir, there are other things I might have discussed, but I think there will probably be other opportunities to do so, and I had no intention of speaking so long. I want to repeat what I have said: I am glad we have our honourable friend with us, and I trust he will co-operate with us in seeing that any legislation which we do put through is in the interest of the people. For I assure you, it is the people of Newfoundland only that we as a Government are interested in.

HON MYLES MURRAY (Minister of Provincial Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of the debate.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if copies of those Bills would be available to us over the week-end?

MR. SMALLWOOD: In fact I thought they were distributed. No they cannot be until they are read the first time.

MR. CURTIS: I will see if I can get them now.

Second Reading of Bill, "An Act to Amend the Mothers' Allowance Act."

HON H. L. POTTLÉ (Minister of Public Welfare): Mr. Speaker, this Bill has been observed to remedy certain deficiencies which have been observed in the course of administration of the Mothers' Allowances Act insofar as it is related to the Dependents' Allowances Act. In the administration of these two acts it will be obvious to the House that they cover in some respects many of the same cases of need. Our purpose in asking for these amounts, is to make the provisions of the Mothers' Allowances Act more nearly comparable to the provisions of the Dependents' Allowances Act. At the present time there is some gap in the provisions for dependent persons between the ages of seventeen and twenty-one. Typically the Mothers' Allowances Act provides for families where there are dependent children under seventeen and the Dependents' Allowances Act provided for the cases of needy people 21 years and over. But between the limits of 17 years and 21 years there are still certain gaps to be filled in, in respect of certain classes of children.

The first amendment is designed to extend the benefits with regard to that particular class. At the present time provision is made for children residing with their parents, with a mother, over the age of 17 but under 21 with mothers who have not adequate means to provide for such children without the assistance of an allowance. The amendment here proposes that the provision for such children be extended to include other classes, namely, where such children are incapacitated, or in need of financial assistance because of attendance at college or school, or for any other general category of need—that is to say in need of financial assistance for other reasons.

The second amendment is designed to accommodate another group by setting right the present provision of the Mothers' Allowances Act relating to an incapacitated husband. At the present time a dependent husband receives no more under the Mothers' Allowances Act than a child, i.e., $5.00 a month. That is to say: where there is a Mothers' Allowance going to the family because of the incapacity of the husband, rendering the family a widowed family, the incapacitated father counts only as a child even though it is on his account there is an allowance going in there at all. But under the Dependents' Allowances Act he may receive a basic $25 and sometime receive in addition an amount to the extent of $20, making it a total of $45. So that we have this anomaly: he receives on an incapacity allowance of $5 under this Act when he might receive up to $45. The proposed amendment is meant to deal with and provide assistance which may be needed under such particular cases as occur in cases of sundry diseases such as tuberculosis, heart condition, pernicious anemia, and other ailments requiring special treatment.
The third amendment is designed to do for the foster children exactly what I have suggested in the first amendment as applied to normal children living with their mothers, i.e., to give the benefits to foster children that apply to children living with their own families, as already indicated in my remarks on the proposed amendment to Section No. 1.

Mr. Speaker, I move the second reading of the Bill.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, I certainly do not rise to oppose the principle involved here. On the other hand I think we should like to have some information as to what the actual number of persons involved would be, and the possible cost per year, etc., which information possibly can be given in committee.

It is a great stride forward for this government or any government if they can do the things which the Honourable Minister of Public Welfare has envisaged. We do remember our own childhood, all of us. We do remember that none of us at seventeen even could receive anything from the government because of a lost parent, and certainly nobody in this House remembers when a child under 21 would be receiving an allowance simply because he wanted to go to school or college. I think most of us had to go in the fishing boat or in the woods or some place else, even if we had not any parents at all, at that age. So I say, if the present economy of this country, and the financial stability of this Government is such that it can do this, then certainly we on the Opposition side could hardly do anything other than endorse the motion on this particular amendment.

There are, however, certain things we would like to ask in the Committee of the Whole. It is something which I think the people ought to know, and we on the Opposition side can help to let the people know, that the children of widowed mothers may receive up to the age of 21, circumstances warranting it of course, an allowance to go to school or to college or what not. I think the people ought to be told that. With all due respect then from the Opposition we do congratulate the honourable minister for bringing in this particular thing, but as I say, I think the government, or the House rather should be told of its possible impact upon the revenue and expenditure. We have no objections whatsoever. There are certain things which could be said, of course, with regard to self-help, with regard to assistance and on the other hand there are dangers inherent therein, and I strongly suspect the honourable minister discovered some of them in the course of the last five years. There are a good many dangers inherent in certain allowances. But I have sufficient faith in the department under which this Act will be administered, to believe that they will administer it according to the strict, or not exactly strict interpretation, but with need behind it. If there is a reason why a child, who is a child of a widowed mother, should attend college or a university I am quite sure the minister and his associates will seek out that need, and certainly will not make it possible for all of our children until they are 21 years of age to receive an allowance under the guise of the University Training. I have faith enough, as I say, to believe that will not be abused.

We do not oppose in any way, and indeed support the amendment.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker this is the latest in a rather long line of Bills brought before this House of Assembly by this Liberal Government of a humanitarian character. I think it is simple truth that in the long history of Newfoundland all the governments combined, before the present one, failed to bring before the Legislature social and humanitarian legislation equal to what this government had done in merely five years of its tenure of office.

For that reason this government, who are introducing this Bill, using the good office of the Minister of Welfare to do the piloting, as this Bill is a government measure, this government, which will administer the Act through the Department of Welfare, are very proud that once again it has shown the heart of Liberalism to the people of Newfoundland. I am very proud of it.

Now I hasten to allay the fears of the Honourable Leader of the Opposition—

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, may I rise to a point of correction—I have expressed no fears.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The honourable member could correct me. I said I hastened to allay the fears, that I understood the honourable gentleman who leads the Opposition to have expressed that the economy of the country might not bear the expense involved in the legislation. I assure him that the wealth of this country is something about which the whole world wonders, and views with admiration, because it is one of the great wealthy countries of the earth. And if he has any fears, about which he has said nothing as to the ability of this province to support this legislation, let me without anticipating the budget that my honourable colleague, the Minister of Finance will one day bring down in this session, let me assure him that this government has found not even the slightest difficulty since it came into office in implementing the social welfare and humanitarian legislation it has been successful in getting this Legislature to adopt, and subsequently His Honour the Lieutenant Governor to sign. And we anticipate no difficulty whatsoever in implementing or financing the legislation which this government now has the honour to introduce and in which I personally have great pride and satisfaction in supporting, as I know every Minister of the Crown constituting this Administration also shares.

I want to make it thoroughly clear that the Honourable gentleman, the Minister of Public Welfare, were he even a greater humanitarian than he is, were he even a more exceptional authority across Canada and in the whole world of social welfare than he is, this Act would not pass this House unless this government, of which he is a member, had adopted it. This government it is who introduces it, and this government asks its supporters to pass this amendment to that Act in the name of humanity.

DR. POTTLE: Mr. Speaker, I just wish to make one comment or possibly two in concluding the debate. I do appreciate the generous and realistic approach which the Opposition has brought to bear upon this Bill, and I am human enough to respond warmly to their comments of competence within the department. I might, within the atmosphere of this House, say that we are quite aware of the point which the Honourable Leader of the Opposition made regarding how easy it is to undermine people's toughness and independence by an over-patronage. That has been our emphasis all along, to try and show amongst other things that we can only produce these benefits according as we earn the revenue.

Now I can say further, sir, that it has been in the mind of the government for some time, that instead of having these various forms of assistance, such as Mothers' Allowances and Dependents' Allowances and Sick Relief, we might look upon them all as basically the same need. We began the way we did with Mothers' Allowances and Dependents' Allowances and Sick Relief and we built up the system stone upon stone because that was the simplest way for us to start. Yet what we find is that when these different cases rise we find ourselves, or welfare officers going to the same homes where these Mothers' Allowances and Dependents' Allowances and Sick Relief are to be distributed. It does not make too much sense from the point of view of good welfare.

Our point of view is that some day, not too far away, we may be able to merge the thing into more comprehensive and tightly knit assistance payments, whereby when a social welfare worker goes to a home he will embrace the needs of the home as a whole. What we are hoping to do is, to try and wipe out as far as we can, the anomalies now existing in our present legislation as we see it.

Moved and seconded this Bill now read a second time, ordered referred to a Committee of the Whole House on tomorrow.

Committee of the Whole on Bill, "An Act to Amend the Solemnization of Marriages Act," and "An Act Further to Amend the Education Act."

The Solemnization of Marriages Act:

Clause 1, 2, 3, 4, 5 read and carried.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the Minister if he has in mind any person to whom these licenses are likely to be issued?

MR. MURRAY: The number, Mr. Chairman, is actually not very great. The reason behind the amendment is that a certain number of interpreters come into the Province and bring to the American Bases, teachers, etc. Under the Old Act licenses were given with no provision for revoking them. The present amendment merely gives a temporary license. Another reason why the Act is brought in is that people have left teaching and have gone to other occupations with unrevised licenses.

MR. BROWNE: The temporary license is for a given time.

MR. MURRAY: For a given time or a particular event, one or the other.

Moved the Committee report having passed this Bill without amendment.

Committee of the Whole on Bill, "An Act Further to Amend the Education Act."

Section 1, 2, 3, carried.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, I wonder if the honourable Minister has given any consideration to the point I raised with regard to the names of the Senior Jubilee and the Junior Jubilee etc.

HON. J. R. CHALKER (Minister of Education): Mr. Chairman, as you know the King George V Jubilee Scholarships are still in being, and they have been raised from $600 to $800 this year and from $200 to $400
MR. HOLLETT: If I may, Mr. Chairman, Section 28 set up, if I remember, these various scholarships. Now, you are repealing it, which means you are wiping them out completely. Now, the Lieutenant Governor in Council may establish scholarships. If you repeal that section you repeal this $1,000 Senior Jubilee Scholarship and the $500 Junior Jubilee Scholarship. Under this new section you also have the power to set up scholarships as may from time to time be approved by the Lieutenant Governor in Council. That is the authority you are giving yourselves now, but you are taking away the legislation which set up these various scholarships. I am wondering if you could amend it in some way whereby you could keep these names.

MR. CHALKER: The explanation is, Mr. Chairman, this is considered necessary because some scholarships provided by the Education Act 1927, are not now awarded or have been replaced. The Jubilee Collegiate Scholarship now replaced by the Grade X Electoral Scholarships—that is one of those you referred to, I think.

MR. HOLLETT: Yes, that is the one which you are appealing.

MR. CHAIRMAN: I must ask honourable members to address the Chair and not to use the word "you" in referring either to the Opposition or to the Government, as that could very easily develop into a conversation back and forth from one side to the other. I may say the Chair is not going to permit that.

MR. CHALKER: Mr. Chairman, there was no idea of dropping the names associated with the scholarships. The only reason we asked for the legislation is that the amounts vary from year to year, increased from one thousand in some cases to fifteen hundred. Instead of coming back and asking the House to give us this specific change each year, we are asking now that the Lieutenant Governor in Council have those powers. It is not our intention to change any of the names of the scholarships.

MR. HOLLETT: No, I don't believe that was the intention. I am just pointing it out—it is up to the Government of course.

MR. CHALKER: I presumed that the Department of Education would be adopting a certain nomenclature for these scholarships, and there is nothing in the world, as I see it, if section 2 of the parent Act is repealed, to prevent the Department of Education from retaining that old nomenclature for a certain number of scholarships, as it is certainly our desire to maintain some link with the past.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, I maintain the Department of Education has nothing to do with it. It is the Lieutenant Governor in Council. And it is this House which votes these scholarships—it is not the Department of Education—it is the Lieutenant Governor in Council who may set up such scholarships as are desirable, although it may consult the Department. I submit if you pass this section here now there will be no Senior Jubilee Scholarship and no Junior Jubilee Scholarship because they are set up by the section you are here repealing—however if you want to—
MR. BROWNE: I would like to ask the Honourable Minister of Education if there is to be any change with regard to the scholarships or the method of selection?

MR. CHALKER: At the present time no.

Moved the Committee rise and report having passed this Bill without amendment.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole have considered the matters to them referred and have passed the Bill, "An Act to Amend the Solemnization of Marriages Act" without amendment.

Report received—ordered read a third time on tomorrow.

Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole have considered the matter to them referred, and have passed the Bill, "An Act Further to Amend the Education Act," without amendment.

Report received. Ordered read a third time on tomorrow.

Second reading of Bill, "An Act Further to Amend the Exploits Valley (Closing Hours) Shop Act."

MR. MURRAY: Mr. Speaker, this amendment is a very simple one and is done purely for the purpose of practical convenience. In the section as it stands, the section has to do with governing the hours of opening and closing of shops in the Exploits Valley and as the section stands when such an order is made it must be for a specific period. That means when the period expires the same thing has to be gone through again, and published in the Gazette. Under the proposed amendment an order may remain and apply generally and stay in existence whereas under the section as it stands an order when issued must be for a given period and when it expires the same procedure must be gone through again and the order gazetted. Under the amendment no period is set down, and the Act stays in existence until revoked.

On motion Bill read a second time. Ordered referred to Committee of the Whole House on tomorrow.

Second reading of Bill, "An Act Respecting the Prevention of Fire."

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Speaker, I beg to move the second reading of this Bill, which is a Bill, as the honourable members will see, to authorize the appointment of a fire commissioner. It provides that the Lieutenant Governor in Council may appoint an officer to be known as fire commissioner and also a deputy fire commissioner. Actually it is not the intention of the Government at the moment to appoint an assistant deputy, but provision is made for his appointment. I might say at the outset when we came into Confederation we found all the other provinces had fire commissioners, and we have been under considerable pressure from everyone to adopt a fire prevention act in Newfoundland. Actually we do not need an act here as much as in other places because we have in St. John's a government-owned and controlled fire department. But the scope of this Act is province wide, and the fire prevention authority will have jurisdiction over the whole country, and it will be the duty of the fire commissioner to investigate all fires over the whole province. He will have local advisers. In clause 4 his duties are set forth, and in clause 5 he has to keep a record of every fire. Now, at the moment that is undertaken in St. John's by the Chief of Police who submits them to the Fire Department.
As I have said at the moment we have no provision for a deputy at all, although while I am standing here it occurs to me that perhaps the Superintendent of the Fire Department of St. John's might well become his deputy.

The Act provides that the assistant should be in St. John's, the Chief of the Fire Department, or anywhere else where there is a fire department; The mayor of any municipality, where a fire station has been established, and such local assistants shall serve without pay.

Generally, Mr. Speaker, this Bill is a consolidation and an improvement on all the existing fire commissioners acts effective in the other provinces.

I move the second reading of the Bill. If there are any points that would call for discussion I would be very glad to try to give any information when we are in committee.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, I regret to say I have not had the opportunity to study this Bill or to make any comparisons with similar Bills of any of the other provinces.

MR. SMALLWOOD: If my honourable friend will allow me—perhaps we had better drop this matter now and come back to it—

MR. BROWNE: I was going to ask the Honourable the Attorney General before we adjourned if there was any specific Bill in Nova Scotia or any other place of which we could have a copy so that we could refer to it.

MR. CURTIS: I don't want to speak now, but to answer the question. This Bill is not exactly the same as that in the other provinces but it is very largely drafted by the office of the Fire Commissioners, an office in Ottawa presided over by a man whose name is C. A. Thompson, and this has come from his department. But, Mr. Speaker, I will communicate with the honourable member and tell him just where we did get it. In the meantime we will ask for an adjournment.

MR. SPEAKER: Moved and seconded this debate now adjourned.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I move the remaining orders of the day do stand deferred.

Motion carried.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I move that the House at its rising do adjourn until tomorrow, Monday, at 3:00 of the clock.

On motion the House at its rising adjourned until tomorrow, Monday, at 3:00 of the clock.

MONDAY, April 26, 1954.

The House met at three of the clock in the afternoon, pursuant to adjournment.

HON. J. R. SMALLWOOD (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I wish to make a statement about certain somewhat sensational events that have transpired within the past few days. In so doing I shall most carefully avoid saying anything that would be contempt of court if uttered outside this House. I shall be equally careful to say nothing that would prejudice the interests of the man whom I have charged with a very serious crime, and for whose arrest I personally made application, and for which I swore out a warrant. I am the man who came to have certain suspicious concerning Dr. Valdmanis. I am the man who started certain quiet, and even secret investigations and inquiries about him. I am the man who called the Royal Canadian Mounted Police about the matter. I am the man who gave the Royal Canadian Mounted Police the first practical facts concerning my suspicions. I am the man who requested the Royal Canadian Mounted Police to start a thorough investigation into these suspicions that I had formed. I am the man to whom the Royal Canadian Mounted Police reported after they had made their own investigations. I am the man who swore out the warrant for the arrest of Dr. Valdmanis. The only charges made against Dr. Valdmanis up to this very moment are the charges made by me. The only warrant sworn out for his arrest is a warrant sworn out by me. I think that these facts should be clearly understood by this House and by the people of Newfoundland.

I did not seek the advice of my colleagues in the Government. I did not even tell them of my suspicions. I did not tell them of my inquiries. I did not tell them of my having called in the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. It was only when I had received the report from the Royal Canadian Mounted Police that I called in the Attorney General and laid the situation before him.

He agreed with my belief that I should swear out a warrant for the arrest of Dr. Valdmanis, and he was present when I swore it out. Up to that moment I had not communicated with the Cabinet, and up to this moment I have not done so. Virtually all the members of the Cabinet are now, for the first time, hearing these statements of mine. Throughout this whole affair I acted as one person, quite alone in my decisions, and quite alone in my actions.

I and I alone am responsible for the fact that Dr. Valdmanis lies in jail awaiting a hearing of the charges I have made against him.

One of my reasons for making this situation so clear at this time is that the Honourable Leader of the Opposition has issued a public statement on behalf of the party that he leads. I am not disposed to pay much attention to this statement, but the statement contains one assertion that could not be ignored. It is as follows, and I quote the words exactly:

"The charges being made by the RCMP are very serious, in fact so serious are they that the resignation of the whole Smallwood Liberal Cabinet must automatically follow if the charges are substantiated."

False, malicious and dishonest are the only words I can find to describe this formal statement by the Leader of the Opposition.

MR. M. M. HOLLETT (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I rise to a point of order: "False," "Malicious" and "Dishonest": I must have these words retracted, Mr. Speaker.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I shall not retract them under any conditions, and I will go on and ask the Leader to make the same statement here, and then I will deal with the words and with him, if he will record, repeat here the words he gave in that statement. I ask him to repeat these words here and now, and I will deal with him. I challenge him to do that.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, I rise to a point of order: These words follow a statement which I have made, and according to the Honourable the Premier, have been described by him as "False, Malicious and Dishonest." I wish to point out, Sir, that according to "May" at any rate, and according to any rule of any House, I have ever read, these words are unparliamentary and should be retracted. I ask you, Sir, for your decision on the matter.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, to that point of order: These words I have quoted are words made by the honourable gentleman in his capacity as Leader of the Opposition on behalf of himself and his party, and made outside this House, and delivered to the world at large. And I say further it is quite clear they were clearly used to convey to the world the impression that somehow or other the Government have had charges made against them by the RCMP. If the Leader of the Opposition will repeat these words of his in the House I shall know what action to take with regard to them. I ask through you, Mr. Speaker, if the honourable gentleman will make the statement here in the House so that I can deal with them here. In the meantime I can only call them, malicious, false and dishonest words by the Leader of the Opposition as the Leader of his party.

MR. HOLLETT: On that point of order I am still waiting for a ruling, Mr. Speaker.

MR. SPEAKER: First, honourable members should not throw challenges at each other across the House. The statement to which the Honourable the Premier takes objection has been made in the public press outside the House, and the Premier is replying thereto stating categorical facts which he seemed to be prepared to prove, or ask otherwise to be disproved. I fail to see how the Chair can ask for a retraction of a statement concerning something made outside the House. The Honourable Leader of the Opposition has, of course, a means of defending himself.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I continue—

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, if I may ask you this: Is it parliamentary usage to call any statement by any honourable member dishonest? Is it correct for me to say the Honourable Premier is a dishonest man.

HON. M. P. MURRAY (Minister of Provincial Affairs): I will say yes.

MR. HOLLETT: I am on my feet. If you don't mind, sit down a little longer. Mr. Speaker, I made a statement to the press, the words I don't remember now, and the Honourable Premier has risen in this House to describe these words as "False, malicious, and dishonest." In other words the Honourable the Premier has described me as a dishonest man. 2556 Rules and Forms, May, Third Edition, 1943—

MR. SPEAKER: That would be "Beauchesne."

MR. HOLLETT: "The imputation of bad motives or motives knowingly misrepresenting the language of another or accusing him of in his turn misrepresenting, challenging him with falsehood or deceit; or contumacious or insulting language of any kind are unparliamentary and call for prompt interference."

Mr. Speaker, my words have been described as false, malicious and dishonest, and are unparliamentary and call for prompt interference. Mr. Speaker, I have interfered, and I crave your protection.

MR. SPEAKER: A little more than one slight paragraph would need to be read to clarify a point like that. If words were used here in the House, the statement made by one honourable member, and another classed it as false, then it would definitely be unparliamentary. The case here is not the same at all. The Honourable Leader of the Opposition has, according to the press—I have no evidence only what I have seen in the press and the Premier's explanation—has made a charge or suggestion against the Government. Surely it is the right of the Leader of the Government to deny this charge.

MR. HOLLETT: Yes, Sir, I have no objections to that.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, on that point, the statement made by the Leader of the Opposition is so unutterably false, so unutterably indecent, such a scandalously dishonest and unfair statement that words fail me to describe the viciousness of it. He knew the RCMP had made no charges. He knew the only man who had made charges was the Premier. He knew I called in the RCMP. Yet he made a public statement on behalf of his colleagues and himself that the RCMP are making serious charges, and he followed the words with a comma and a dash. Then “The Smallwood Liberal Government must automatically resign if these charges are substantiated.” If that is not meant to convey to the world that somehow the Government is under accusation by the RCMP I cannot then understand the English language.

I have charged Dr. Valdmanis with having defrauded the Government of Newfoundland of $150,000. This sum of money, so I allege, was secretly collected by Dr. Valdmanis from a company in Europe. This company had a contract with the Newfoundland Government to build the machinery for the gypsum plant now at Humbermouth, and to install and erect that machinery. Dr. Valdmanis negotiated the contract in question. My charge is that he selected this large sum of money for himself, and that he succeeded in getting it only by convincing the European company in question that they would never receive the contract unless they paid him this large sum of money.

I shall make another charge against Dr. Valdmanis, that he secretly collected another large sum of money from another European company with whom the Government had a contract. This was a contract to build, install and erect the machinery for the cement mill at Humbermouth. Dr. Valdmanis negotiated that contract too, and I shall charge him with having extorted large sums of money from that company by convincing them that they would never get the contract unless they agreed to pay him secretly a large sum in question.

I shall make this additional charge against Dr. Valdmanis. In short, all the charges I have made or shall make against Dr. Valdmanis concern the two contracts let by the Government for the building, installing and erecting of the machinery that went into the gypsum plant and the cement plant. And when I use the word “Extortion” or “Extort” I intended to mention that “Extort” is more genuinely understood than when the words “Kickback” are used.

I am glad to take this present opportunity to state that I have not the slightest scrap of evidence to give me the slightest suspicion that Dr Valdmanis collected one single cent from those new industries, or industrial plants established in Newfoundland these past two years or so by means of Government loans. That too is apart from the two I have already mentioned, the gypsum plant and the cement mill; and nobody else has any evidence, to the best of my knowledge and belief.

May I say a word about these new industries. The big factor about them is that they are new. That means that they must run into all kinds of difficulties and obstacles for the first few years of their existence. Their very owners are strangers in our midst, as are most of their key technicians. These new industries have been kicked and cuffed by unfriendly propaganda from the first day they were proposed to this very day, and the bitterest enemies of this Government will, of course, use the charges I have made against Dr. Valdmanis as still another excuse to blacken still more the prospects of these new industries.

The choice lay with me as to whether I should make the charges or drop the matter. I could have buried the whole matter. I could have smoothed my suspicions, shrugged them off or drugged my conscience. Had I done so nothing would have been heard of this whole business, nothing. Nobody else would have made charges because there was nobody else to do so. I knew that if I made the charges, if I called in the RCMP, if I swore out the warrant for his arrest, I would cause very great pain, and probably very great damage to others. I knew, of course, that I would lay myself open to the taunts of the bitterest of my opponents. This was the choice I had to make—To drop the whole matter, to bury it or, to force it out into the light of truth.

If there is any member of this House who thinks I did wrong I challenge him now to move a vote of want of confidence in me personally or in the Government as a whole. If such a vote is proposed I challenge any member of this House who believes that I have done wrong to vote for that motion.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, I believe I have the right to reply to a statement of this nature. Before I proceed may I have your assurance that I have?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, may I address myself to that point: It is my impression that the Honourable Leader of the Opposition has the right of offering brief comment only on a statement made by the Leader of the Government or any ministerial statement.

MR. SPEAKER: The honourable gentleman may make comment, ask questions for clarification of some point of which he wishes to be more certain—or does he wish to make a motion of non confidence in the Government? He does not necessarily have to pick up the challenge at the end of the Premier's statement. It is quite within his province to move a motion of want of confidence in the Government without being considered to be picking up the challenge laid down in the latter part of the Premier's statement.

MR. HOLLETT: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. My remarks shall be brief. You yourself have ruled on the matter which ruling I shall not question. But I wish to quote again the words which I used in a statement on Friday or Saturday, I don't know which day, the 23rd or 24th I believe, and a part of it to which the Honourable the Premier takes exception containing these words—"The charges being made by the RCMP are quite serious in fact so serious are they that resignation of the whole Smallwood Liberal Cabinet must automatically follow if the charges are substantiated for before the bar of public opinion, the real defendant must undoubtedly be the Premier and his entire Cabinet." Sir, I have been described as knowing that the Honourable the Premier alone knew of that Valdmanis affair.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I will not be misquoted a few minutes after I have spoken in the House. I said no such thing. I said the honourable gentleman knew that I, and I alone, had made the charges. I did not say that the honourable gentleman said I was the only one who knew. I said the honourable gentleman knew I was the one who made the charges.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, I said, and I repeat, that the Honourable Premier just stated he and he alone knew anything about this affair, he had not even confided in the Attorney General.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, to a point of order: Is it permissible for the honourable gentleman to stand in this House and deliberately or otherwise misquote what the Premier just said—That was in the statement issued by the Honourable Leader of the Opposition a few days ago and not a comment on what I just said in the House.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, I comment on the whole statement made by the Honourable the Premier in which statement is included this particular sentence which I myself made. I am responsible for that which appears in the press and on the news and I shall stand by it. Of course I am trying to state my reason for referring to the charges made by the RCMP.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, what charges—will the honourable member tell what charges they made?

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, I have been a magistrate for twenty-five years and have never yet known a man to be arrested and brought to trial in Newfoundland without somebody reading a charge to him, and all the press news from the Mainland assures us the RCMP did appear in St. Andrews and arrested that man.

MR. SMALLWOOD: "Made" or "read" charges?

MR. HOLLETT: Reading a charge is making it.

MR. SMALLWOOD: He said "made."

MR. HOLLETT: Well "made."

MR. SMALLWOOD: The honourable gentleman is so dishonest he is as crooked as a corkscrew.

MR. SPEAKER: Order—

MR. SMALLWOOD: I retract that statement.

MR. FOGWILL: I am not crooked and I am associated with the Leader of the Opposition.

MR. HOLLETT: I want, Mr. Speaker, to assure this House and the world at large that we on this side of the House do not intend to allow the Honourable the Premier to take away from public notice that thing which has happened. He is not going to turn the table on us in that particular way by saying—we are the ones who did this and are responsible for that and so on. If the Honourable the Premier alone knew about this, alone made the investigation on his own, and then had the RCMP make an investigation, if he alone did this and then gave instructions for this Director of Economic Development, Sir, to be arrested, who, Sir, for the past three and a half years has been Director of Economic Development—

MR. SMALLWOOD: Is the honourable gentleman permitted to debate my statement, take it up point by point and debate it in absolute defiance of all parliamentary rules? Is he going to debate it, Mr. Speaker?

MR. HOLLETT: No, I am not debating it. There is nothing there to be debated—nothing there to debate, Mr. Speaker—but I must make comment. I believe the Honourable the Premier has stated here in this House today that none of the members of the Cabinet except possibly the Attorney General knew anything about this until it was a fact accomplished—they knew nothing about it—the Cabinet knew nothing about this which is one of the most important things, I say, from the point of view of this country, which has happened in many a decade. We are a small province, Sir, and we have such a thing as a credit, we have credit in this world, and this thing, Sir, raises an issue, yet the Honourable the Premier did not consult, did not take into his confidence his Cabinet in this matter. That is all the comment I wish to make.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Move a vote of confidence.

MR. HOLLETT: I don't have to, I still have want of confidence.

MR. SMALLWOOD: You are afraid to move it.

MR. HOLLETT: I would not have to anyway.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I challenge you.

MR. SPEAKER: Order.

MR. HOLLETT: I did say, Sir, and I repeat it again—the charges being made by the RCMP, and I submit, Sir, a charge was made by them, read to this man, Valdmanis, at 2:00 o'clock in the morning in a little place called Chamcook two or three miles outside St. Andrews where his brother Oswald Valdmanis for the past two years more or less has been in charge of a defunct and delapidated—

MR. SMALLWOOD: I draw the honourable the Speaker's attention to the fact the honourable gentleman is out of order in debating the Honourable the Premier's statement. He has the right, if he wishes, to take action—the course is open to him to move a vote of want of confidence—that is the course, if he lacks confidence, if this House does, and if the people do, let him move it now—if we are crooked and dishonest, prove it.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, did I say the honourable gentleman or any of his Cabinet are dishonest? I do not remember saying that, Sir, at all.

MR. SMALLWOOD: You have not the guts to say it.

MR. HOLLETT: I was describing the place where this man was.

MR. SPEAKER: Order—I will remind the honourable member he must not make a speech, and must bear in mind that certain things may not be said here because the matter is sub judice and it may prejudice the case.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, in view of what has already been said by the Honourable the Premier about it when making his statements—some of them were sub judice.

MR. SPEAKER: No the Premier's statement merely said what is being done and why.

MR. HOLLETT: I remind the House, Sir, he did refer to other things as well. I submit the main thing I am interested in, Sir—I have been asked, and I must make comment on this—I have been challenged, I have been scorned because I won't do it, to move a vote of want of confidence. I ask you, Mr. Speaker, what would the point be? When the Premier arose to his feet to make a statement this evening he was applauded to the rafters by the members on the opposite side. Yet, Sir, none of them knew anything about this thing that had happened, they had not been taken into his confidence, but knew all about it enough to clap. I say, Sir, that it would be useless to move a vote of want of confidence, it would be useless to move it, and I am not altogether a fool although described so by the Honourable the Premier. I do take exception to the words used to refer to a statement I made, but if the House is agreed that these things may be said about an honourable gentleman then I have to bow to the House's ruling. I don't wish to say anything further in this matter, as it is undoubtedly sub judice—something which happened in 1951 has been brought up. I myself, Sir, in connection with the statement which has been made by the Premier remind this House that on Monday, April 13, 1953—that is over one year ago—I tabled a question on the Order Paper of April 12 or on Friday two or three days before—I have here, Sir, the proceedings of the House of Assembly, the Order Paper of the House of Assembly for April 13, 1953—and I would remind the House that on that date a question was on the Order Paper, No. 63—"Mr. Hollett to ask the Honourable the Minister of Economic Development to lay on the Table of the House the following information:

2. What was the cost of same?

3. What is the total expenditure to date on the Cement Plant and the total working capital advanced?

4. Explain the ex gratia award of $150,000 to Benno Schilde Atlantic Gypsum Ltd."

That was over one year ago, Sir, to which I received no reply and have not yet received a reply. In view of the remarks which the Honourable the Premier has made in his statement I submit it would have been wiser to have replied to that particular question at that particular time.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I won't be permitted after the honourable gentleman sits down to reply to that question. The answer to that question was tabled in this House and secondly I say they have no bearing whatsoever on the charges made against Dr. Valdmanis, none in the wide world. There is nothing improper about that—it is a perfectly ordinary business transaction. Mr. Speaker, it is a mere coincidence that the amount happens to be the same. They are completely different matters. One is honest and the other is accused of being dishonest. The one now referred to is a completely ordinary business transaction, but the amount happens to be the same as the other amount—there is no connection.

MR. HOLLETT: It is just a mere coincidence?

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is all—the coincidence being that both amounts are the same size, $150,000.

MR. HOLLETT: Yes, I hope, Mr. Speaker, that the Honourable the Premier does not think that this side of the House is entirely without some idea of what we are talking about, and some idea of questions raised in this House. We have certain information, Sir, and we have certain ideas on that information, but I don't wish to comment on that at this particular time. I do object strongly, Sir, to the fact, even though the Honourable the Premier has been allowed to repeat them, I do deplore the fact that he had to include such a cruel, unkind statement against the Leader of the Opposition—I am the Leader of the Opposition whether they like it or anybody likes it or not I am that—I am, as Leader of the Opposition, however many we have in Opposition, entitled to a certain degree of respect just as the Honourable the Premier as Leader of the Government is, and it is unkind, it is cruel, in my opinion, and in my opinion unpardoxial for any man, much less the Premier of this country, to rise to his feet and declare that the statement made by the Leader of the Opposition was false, malicious and dishonest.

I have no more to say on this statement, Mr. Speaker.

Presenting Petitions

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, I rise for the purpose of presenting from 663 electors in the District of St. John's West. "To His Honour the Lieutenant Governor in Council the petition—

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, to a point of order: Is the honourable member permitted to present to this assembly a petition to the Lieutenant Governor in Council or only those to the House of Assembly?

MR. SPEAKER: More properly to the House of Assembly. However, we may allow the honourable member to correct it in reading.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, the petition is either addressed to the House of Assembly or to the Lieutenant Governor in Council. Is a member permitted to take a petition to the Lieutenant Governor in Council, stand on this floor and change the address on the petition. The petition must have a prayer—in duty bound—and to the House of Assembly. Is he permitted to stand here—I heard a man broadcasting on the radio pretending to be somebody else, his brother to be exact, but I don't think that a member of the House of Assembly handing a petition—

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, I have very often seen petitions, presented from people here, not as formal as they might be. I have seen several presented in this session. I have another one to present here this afternoon. Many of the people presenting petitions are not quite sure to whom they must go. This one is addressed to the Lieutenant Governor in Council and perhaps has been—I beg the petition be presently laid on the Table of the House and referred—
MR. SMALLWOOD: Only when the petition itself is presented to the House of Assembly.

MR. BROWNE: I have seen the Honourable Minister of Public Works present a petition to come back to himself. If my honourable friend persists I will have to go back and get the people to sign it all over again.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Or just hand it to the people to whom it is addressed, apparently the Lieutenant Governor in Council.

HON. E. S. SPENCER (Minister of Public Works): To a point of privilege, Mr. Speaker, I would like to point out—the honourable member for St. John's West stated I presented a petition which had to return to me. Unless my memory is completely false, and fails me, which I don't think it does, I have not presented a petition to this House this year, and the honourable member has only been here this year.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, I am probably in error as regard this year, but last year according to the "Daily News" he did present a petition, and I think it will be admitted he has done so before now. Mr. Speaker, do you wish me to withdraw the petition?

MR. SPEAKER: I say the petition must of course be addressed to the House. As far as the Chair is concerned, if the honourable member has authority to make himself responsible for the petition—I don't see what objection there would be. The House certainly could not accept a petition for some other body.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It is for another body.

MR. SPEAKER: It would not be necessary to go back to the signatories to the petition—surely they had some one draw up the petition for them.

MR. BROWNE: I must accept responsibility for drafting it to be presented to the House of Assembly for reference to the Lieutenant Governor in Council—may I then, Sir, have permission?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, on that point: I must again repeat my objection as Leader of the House. I must, at least on some occasions, as far as within me lies make these objections and the petition as now read does seem to be debarred as one that is not meant for the House but is meant for the Lieutenant Governor in Council. The honourable member knows it is not addressed to this House, Mr. Speaker, and I doubt that any one in this House can speak for six hundred persons to say; I have their authority to change it from a petition to the Lieutenant Governor in Council to a petition to the House of Assembly. I doubt that even the honourable member has that right.

MR. SPEAKER: Has the honourable member a petition addressed to this House?

MR. BROWNE: Yes, Mr. Speaker; I have another here, but I did not examine it carefully. Yes, I see it now—I don't know what my honourable friend will do about this one: It is a petition from the people of Fairhaven for the road to Tickle Harbour station to the Government of Newfoundland and Honourable Members of the House of Assembly—

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is a bit nearer although not quite proper.

MR. BROWNE: These people prepared it themselves, and did not have assistance of any legal adviser, nor the assistance of their representative, the Honourable Minister of Finance, I presume since it refers to the House of Assembly, it was the intention of the people sending it that it would be presented here.

Fairhaven is a little fishing village in Placentia Bay with 150 residents, and with no road to Tickle Harbour station four miles away. For five years, I know, they have asked their representative to get them a road. They inform me they have been promised a road. I think the members in this House will easily understand the difficulty they have there. There is one cited here of a woman coming home from the hospital in Come-by-Chance after having given birth to a child, and when taken off the train at Tickle Harbour had to be put on a stretcher and brought by four men, herself and the baby, and it began to rain, and one of the men there had a roll of felt, he had to cut the felt and make a covering for the woman and baby, and carry her on their backs the four miles from Tickle Harbour.

These people are honest, hard-working people. It seems to me that the Minister should be very sympathetic in his consideration of a petition of this kind. I therefore ask it be laid on the Table and that it be referred to the Department of Public Works.

HON. G. J. POWER (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, on commenting on that petition I would like to say—if my memory serves me correctly—the road in question is included in this year's road-building programme. I have gone there on political campaigns, I have received their support, I think, one hundred per cent. I think in the 1949 election the honourable member opposite got no votes in Fairhaven, and I think I got 44 votes. So that no one could be more anxious to give the people of Fairhaven a road than I. The only reason why the thing has been delayed so far is that we felt that building a road to the railway station was not sufficient, as it was building a road from nowhere to nowhere. We were waiting to inaugurate our big road-building programme to build a road from Fairhaven to connect with the Cabot Highway. I think the Honourable Minister of Public Works will bear me out that that is included in this year's programme.

MR. SPENCER: Mr. Speaker, I would like to say just a word in connection with this petition, I am very glad it has been presented to the House. I might say that for three years we have been endeavouring to get this little question straightened out with regard to Fairhaven. The Honourable Minister of Finance has just clarified it to a certain extent. Whether or not the public will get it in that way I do not know. The request, as he has just said, was originally for a road, as the honourable member has just stated in presenting the petition, from Fairhaven on the North Side of Placentia Bay to the Railway, a distance of approximately four miles. That request was scarcely in our hands before it was added to requesting that the road would continue on to the highway, a distance of five miles I believe (speaking from memory) or a total of nine miles in all. The department wherein I work has, for the past two years, been endeavouring to get the survey made all the way through for that nine miles. It is very sincerely hoped that something may soon develop. I am very glad to say that I know exactly where it is, as I looked it up on the map. It has been under consideration in the department for the past two years at least, but the extension of the additional five miles unfortunately held up the whole thing longer than we would otherwise have wished.

Petition received—ordered referred to the department concerned.

Giving Notice of Questions
MR. HOLLETT—To ask the Honourable the Minister of Fisheries and Co-operatives to lay on the Table of the House the following information:

1. Table copies of the two separate Agreements made with the Northeastern Co-operative Fisheries Society Ltd. in 1950 relative to the guarantee of a Bank Loan of $35,000.

2. On what grounds or on what accounts were further expenditures totalling $27,648.24 made by the Government on behalf of said Society since March 31st, 1953? Was this amount a guaranteed loan, or did it consist of cash advances, and if so, for what purposes? Itemize the various payments making up this amount of $27,648.24.

MR. BROWNE—To ask the Honourable the Minister of Public Works to lay on the Table of the House the following information:

1. What is the rate of license fee for three ton trucks?

2. Is it correct that such trucks in the Bloomfield, Bonavista area have been licensed annually at a rate of $100.00 or $72.00 below the regular rate?

3. How many vehicles have been licensed below the regular rates and give the areas where such reduced rates have been applied.

4. How long has the practice of granting reduced rates been in force?

5. By what authority have such reduced rates been made?

Question No. 60: Question No. 61, Addressed to Honourable the Minister of Finance.

MR. POWER: Mr. Speaker, I think I shall have answers to all questions on tomorrow.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I know there are some questions addressed to me that I have not as yet answered. As I explained here in the House one day last week, I have for some time past been unusually busy. The House knows now that what I said then was probably very true. I have been very busy and pre-occupied, and up to this moment, if it were to save my life, I could not say what are the questions I have not answered as at this moment. When I receive the answers from the Treasury or whoever prepares the answers, I will gladly hand them over to the honourable gentleman who directed them at me.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, I rise for the purpose of asking leave to move the adjournment of this House to discuss a matter of urgent public importance. Naturally, in view of the arrest of Dr. Valdmanis, former Director General of Economic Development, charged with fraudulently obtaining from the Government of Newfoundland between January 20, 1951 and October 25, 1951 the sum of $150,000, and in view of the further grave accusations made public by the Premier against the said Director General, it is possibly both desirable and essential in the public interest that a Royal Commission presided over by a judge of the Supreme Court of Newfoundland should be immediately set up to make a thorough investigation into the methods used to establish new industries including the negotiations of contracts for the purpose of building such as the erection of factories or plants, the purchase and importation of supplies, and the evaluation of machinery, building material and equipment, needed for the erection and operation of said plants or factories, and generally an examination into the financial procedures followed.

MR. SPEAKER: Does the House give leave? I shall now put the motion which will be carried without debate. The House does not give leave.

MR. HOLLETT: May we have a division on that, Mr. Speaker?

Division:

Favour of the Motion: Mr. Hollett, Mr. Browne, Mr. Fugwill.

Opposing the Motion: Hon. the Premier, Hon. the Attorney General, Hon. Minister of Public Welfare, Hon. Minister of Finance, Hon. Minister of Education, Hon. Minister of Fisheries and Co-operatives, Hon. Mr. Lewis, Hon. Minister of Provincial Affairs, Hon. Minister of Labour, Hon. Minister of Labour, Hon. Minister of Public Works, Hon. Minister of Mines and Resources, Mr. Morgan, Mr. Button, Mr. Brown, Mr. Norman, Mr. Courage, Mr. Canning, Mr. Mercer.

MR. SPEAKER: The nays have it—19 to 3.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, before calling the Orders of the Day, I would like to rise on a question of privilege and for the purpose of making an explanation: The "Daily News" of April 24, in an article dealing with the Throne Speech Debate refers to the Attorney General—Reviews Government's Work—and in the first column it says, quoting Mr. Curtis: "Mr. Browne, the speaker continued, had expected to be recommended as a district judge after Newfoundland entered Confederation, and it was this statement that started the excitement. The P.C. Member rose to a point of order and said the original Confederation terms had provided for the appointment of district judges and this was the point he had made in a previous speech, without reference to himself as a possible judge." I think Mr. Speaker will agree with me that the position was this. The Terms of Union provided the Federal Government would pay the salary of the Lieutenant Governor, Supreme Court Judges, and District Court Judges. That was the position I took. There had to be interfering to prevent my receiving the salary of a district court judge because that was provided by the Terms of Union, and I know from correspondence with the Department of the Minister of Justice at Ottawa that interference took place. Now, Sir, I have another question of privilege:

In the House during that debate the Premier, for what reason I don't know, made a statement that I had gone to the Liberal Headquarters and offered myself to him as a Liberal candidate.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I did not say to me.

MR. BROWNE: Then I would like to know to whom. And a heading came out here in the “Evening Telegram” “Browne was willing to be Liberal Candidate.” Premier makes the statement. “It is a ridiculous lie,” said Browne.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It is ridiculous, but not a lie.

MR. BROWNE: Now, the Premier ought to be satisfied with the amount of publicity he has had during the last few days, and certainly what he has had today, and certainly ought now to grant me the right to make this correction. “It all came about when Mr. Curtis speaking on the Address in Reply charged that Mr. Browne following Confederation expected to receive an appointment as a Judge of the District Court.”

Once again, Mr. Speaker, I did not expect to receive any appointment. I had that and had had it for fifteen years. “Which Mr. Curtis considered to be ridiculous in view of Mr. Browne’s open and violent campaign against Confederation.”

I don’t remember the Attorney General using such an expression. If he did it is absolutely incorrect. I conducted no open and violent campaign. I did not conduct any “open” and certainly no “violent” one. “It was then things broke loose. The Premier declared there was no point of order, it was all done to make a speech. The debate reached such a state of confusion etc.” Then it goes on: “W. J. Browne, P.C. St. John’s West, came to the Liberal Headquarters and volunteered himself as a Liberal candidate under my leadership, Premier J. R. Smallwood told the House Thursday.”

“Mr. Browne branded this statement as the most fantastic lie ever told by anybody.”

Now, Mr. Speaker, I know that was unparliamentary, but when a provocative statement like that without any foundation is made, I think the Premier will agree it is very hard to keep from saying such things at the time. Now, Sir, that statement is untrue, and I expect the Premier to withdraw it. There is no foundation in fact for it whatsoever.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, in reply to the honourable member, I made the statement he just quoted me as having made, namely, that he had come to the Liberal Party Headquarters on Water Street and offered himself as a candidate, as a Liberal Party Candidate, under my leadership, that is to say as Provincial Party Leader. He now asks me to withdraw the statement. I would be quite happy to have a Select Committee of the House hear evidence of witnesses, because I would endeavour to prove the truth of my statement and produce witnesses that the honourable gentleman did offer himself as a candidate of the Liberal Party under my leadership, that is to say, the Provincial Liberal Party.

MR. BROWNE: When?

MR. SMALLWOOD: On an occasion when he visited it, and it was to Mr. Garland, the Liberal agent, he made the offer, and there was present when he entered a present member of this House of Assembly on this side of the House who was there in the office of the Liberal Association, or Liberal Party, when the honourable gentleman opposite entered and on the same occasion as when he made the offer of being a candidate for the Liberal Party. Possibly we made a serious error in not accepting the honourable gentleman's offer.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, this is no time for joking, as the Premier said. I have stated that that is absolutely incorrect, and I expect the Premier to withdraw it. It has been given in evidence here, just this minute I read it myself, the Attorney General said I conducted an open and violent campaign against Confederation, and certainly they were doing what harm they could by preventing me getting the salary due me from Ottawa—then the Premier said I went over and begged the dear Premier, would he be good enough to take me as a candidate. Mr. Speaker, the thing is patently absurd, incorrect and untrue, and I expect the Premier to take it back.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I will be sporty about it. As the honourable gentleman did not come to me personally, and as I don't know of my own knowledge that he offered himself as a Liberal Candidate, I will take it back, or, if he likes, we could have a Select Committee and produce the evidence and see who is right. Otherwise I am prepared to retract and say, of my own knowledge I don't know that he did make that offer.

MR. BROWNE: I accept the retraction, Mr. Speaker.

HON. L. R. CURTIS (Attorney General): I would like to say that one thing in reply to the honourable member. My honourable friend says I interfered with the payment by the Federal Government of the salary of the Judge of the Central District Court. I might say that what we did do was intimate to Ottawa that it was the intention of this Government to abolish that position, and that it would be foolish, therefore, for any salary vote to be made for a position that we had determined to abolish. As the honourable member knows the judge in the Central District Court is quite a different position from the judge of a County Court or District Court as such positions are found on the Mainland.

MR. BROWNE: I know nothing of the kind, neither do you.

MR. CURTIS: All I say is, if the honourable member was judge of that court for fifteen years, that was a very, very inferior court with a jurisdiction only up to $200 and with no criminal jurisdiction whatsoever, it was simply a small central district court confined to hearing civil cases only of a very small amount. Every magistrate in the country had greater jurisdiction, every magistrate in the country had more power, whereas the judges now of the district court, and the court that we envisaged have a lot of power and can hear criminal cases.

MR. BROWNE: Where are they?

MR. CURTIS: We have appointed them for St. John's and Corner Brook.

MR. BROWNE: Where is the one for St. John's?

MR. CURTIS: He will appear in due season. Mr. Speaker, when the honourable gentleman brings up a point does he think he can discuss everything under the sun. Where is he? Why is he? And this and that. Tell him to put a notice on the Order Paper. All I can say is this; any judge now operating under the District Courts Act has six or seven times the power of the Judge of the Central District Court. He has power to determine land cases.

MR. BROWNE: I know that. What has that got to do with it?

MR. CURTIS: I am trying to point out to the honourable member—but since he won't listen he might as well read the Act himself. I might say the jurisdiction that he had as Judge of the Central District Court was very limited. No one could conscientiously ask Ottawa to accept the responsibility of continuing to pay the salary for that.

MR. BROWNE: I wonder does the honourable gentleman remember, tell me, that the Premier had my successor picked?

MR. CURTIS: No, I do not remember.

MR. BROWNE: Well I do remember.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Was that the time the honourable gentleman selected his successor on a certain highroad?

MR. BROWNE: It was about two weeks before that, before I tried to have you arrested and brought before the court.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The honourable gentleman was just about as successful in that as he has been in everything else. Now that I know the name of the person to whom my honourable friend is referring as being his successor, may I tell him his leg was being pulled all the time.

MR. BROWNE: It was the Attorney General who said he knew who the gentleman was. I did not say it.

MR. SPEAKER: How long is this private conversation to go on.

Orders of the Day

Adjourned Debate on the Address in Reply to the Speech from the Throne:

MR. MURRAY: Mr. Speaker, as the Premier has said, since I moved the adjournment of this debate on Thursday, some events have transpired of a most sensational character. I am sure that all our minds are full of these events which are bound to colour our thinking, must of necessity colour whatever anyone else has to say immediately following in this debate.

I am quite well aware, Sir, of the impropriety of saying anything which would tend to prejudice a case while it is still sub-judice. Still on the other hand, Sir, I think it would be a most extraordinary position for me to take if I were to ignore altogether these sensational events that have taken place and go on with my speech just as if nothing had happened. The position, Sir, as I see it is a difficult one, and I can quite see the impropriety of saying anything which would in the least prejudice a case before it is brought to trial. On the other hand here are events of such importance that I don't think I should ignore them. The arrest of a former Director General of Economic Development, of a man who has played a key role in Newfoundland in the past few years is an event which cannot be ignored by the first speaker who rises immediately after such an event to speak on this address.

First of all, Sir, I would like to say; my own connection with the man in question was very slight indeed. Let me make myself clear, Sir, I am not trying to avoid any responsibility in that affair if there is responsibility. If Dr. Valdmanis had done something which redounded to the Government's credit, and he had—if he had done something which brought credit to us, I, myself, would be very glad in fact, to take my share of that credit and come in for whatever acclaim there is going. On the other hand if there is any responsibility attached to us, and I don't believe there is, I would not like to duck out from under it.

As the Premier has said, of the events leading up to Thursday's arrest, the members of his Cabinet knew nothing. We were just as surprised as I imagine were people all over the country. All I knew about the man was this: He was a man of great talents which brought him to a very high position in Europe at a very early age; a man who filled responsible positions in Canada before he came here at all and who came here highly recommended by some of the most responsible and highly placed people in Canada. Now, Sir, as I have said; the same man is under arrest, and it would be most improper, altogether improper, to discuss the pros and cons of the case before it comes up for trial. But, Sir, there is one thing I want to make clear and that is the position of the members of the Government as far as this case is concerned. As has already come out today in this House, a statement was made by the Leader of the Opposition in the press on Saturday last. The arrest of this individual was referred to and immediately afterwards in the statement was a further statement that automatically—automatically—if this man who was arrested was proven guilty—automatically—the Government should resign. Now, Sir, there is only one possible construction to be put on that, as far as I see it, one possible construction. The straight innuendo is there, the straight imputation that some members of the Government were implicated with the affairs and defalcations of this man; and, Sir, the imputation is if this man who has been arrested is proven guilty, "then," said the Leader of the Opposition, "the Government ought to resign." There is no other construction to my mind, Mr. Speaker, can be put on these words than that the Government were in collusion with that man, condoned the breach or concealed it. If that is the case, Sir, the Premier was completely and absolutely right in saying such statements were false, malicious and dishonest.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, I rise to a point of order—there was no such imputations—if the Honourable Minister wishes, of course, to impute that to me he can, of course do so—I say there was no such imputation. My imputation was, and I would like to explain it—that a Government who had allowed this man for three and a half years to conduct practically alone—

MR. SPEAKER: The honourable gentleman is not to make a speech.

MR. HOLLETT: To conduct the affairs, the economic affairs, up to twenty million dollars, surely must take some responsibility.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Who told the honourable gentleman—where did he get the information that the Director General of Economic Development had the control of twenty million dollars, of twenty cents? That is another false statement—in the formal statement of the honourable gentleman—

MR. SPEAKER: I think the honourable member for Ferryland had better continue his speech.

MR. MURRAY: I say, Sir, in answer to the honourable gentleman, that this statement is clearly and obviously capable of that. One would be justified in coming to the conclusions I stated here: A man is arrested and the Leader of the Opposition comes out and says: If such a man is found guilty then the Government must resign. Sir, what other construction would a logical man put on such a statement except that the members of the Government were implicated?

I say, Sir, that instead of being implicated that the members of the Cabinet knew nothing whatever about it. As far as the Premier is concerned he is highly to be complimented for the action he took. Sir, it could not have been a pleasant thing for the Premier to set this thing in motion. No one likes to be taken in nor nobody likes to confess that he was taken in. Mark Twain said: "I can eat crow, but don't hanker after it." The Premier knew he was exposing himself to taunts and jeers and he told us so. But, Sir, it was a thing from which any man might recoil, I say, and I say it is to the eternal credit of the Premier that he saw his duty and went through with it regardless of all personal feelings—I say that, Sir, the Premier is an enthusiastic man, and it is a good thing for Newfoundland that he is an enthusiastic man. But enthusiastic men sometimes can say things that more cautious men would not—the Premier, Sir, is a loyal man. We all know he is loyal to his associates and loyal to his friends. Perhaps that loyalty has been misplaced sometimes, perhaps at times he has given more loyalty than was deserved. But I say, Sir, that it is to his eternal credit that when he saw his duty in this affair, regardless of the personal embarrassment, and he exposed himself to a great deal, he went through with his duty without fear or favour. I say, Sir, again, that is eternally to his credit.

MR. HOLLETT: He took a long time to see it.

MR. MURRAY: Sir, let us clarify our thinking on this matter. If there has been wrong doing in the matter, and it is improper for me at this stage to say there has, it would not be the first time, Sir, that people have been taken in and it will not be the last time. If we hired a man who turned out not all it was said he should be, it won't be the first time people have been taken in, not the first time, nor it won't be the last time that unworthy instruments have been connected with good causes. Let us take an example Sir: If, unknown to the board of directors, a high official in a bank embezzles money and it comes to light, what follows? Would the directors have to resign if unknowingly an employee embezzled money? Or, to follow the argument of the Leader of the Opposition it would mean the whole system of banking is wrong.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, I rise to a point of order: I believe the statement just made by the honourable member for Ferryland is a little bit sub judice—he makes a statement that a certain man is unworthy—I think that man is to come on trial—he is insinuating the man is—

MR. MURRAY: I am stating a hypothetical case.

MR. SPEAKER: Order. I don't think there is a point of order there. It seems to me the honourable member who is speaking is merely giving his opinion here, and I think the honourable member who is a lawyer will be very careful not to prejudice the case of a man who is about to come up for trial. I think he was just giving a hypothetical instance. I might say while speaking, I have noticed a tendency for remarks from one side of the House to the other. Some of these might tend to generate heat in the debate and I must rule them out of order. I would like the Honourable Minister of Provincial Affairs to be heard in silence.

MR. MURRAY: Thank you, Sir. I can assure you, Mr. Speaker, I have no intention of—and I hope you will stop me if I do—of trying to prejudice a case still sub judice. I am merely trying to prove a point, if a dishonest employee is taken on by anybody it is not the first time in history it has happened. If the board of directors of a bank who are absolutely in charge set the law in motion to bring him to trial is not that proper and creditable and always done? But to give another example; Because a plant happens to employ someone in connection with it who turns out to be dishonest, must the management resign? Is that a proper conclusion to draw? If amongst the twelve apostles a Judas is found does that mean the whole idea of Christianity is wrong? I state again, Sir, a hypothetical case: If a Government nurses a viper in its bosom and the malefactor is brought to book, does it follow that the Government is responsible?

MR. HOLLETT: May I?

MR. SPEAKER: Not unless the honourable member yields.

MR. HOLLETT: I would like to ask who is the viper?

MR. MURRAY: Mr. Speaker, I have made it quite clear to anyone that I am citing a hypothetical case—to anyone who wants to understand that, it is amply clear, perfectly obvious to anybody.

MR. SPEAKER: Order. The honourable member will continue to be heard in silence, otherwise I shall take a very dim view of it. These remarks tend to generate heat, are completely out of order and are not funny.

MR. HOLLETT: If the honourable member is to be heard in silence, then why in the course of my speech was I interrupted about fifty times?
MR. SPEAKER: I know nothing about that. I am in the Chair, and will uphold its dignity, and I hope the Honourable Leader of the Opposition is not casting any reflection on the Chair or the Speaker in the Chair at that time. I do not wish to interrupt again nor to have to call order.

MR. MURRAY: I don't want to be interrupted. I have only one thing to say—is all this time to be taken out of the time I have to speak? In that case I won't be able to yield any more. I have no objection whatsoever, Mr. Speaker, to exchanging pleasantaries with the honourable gentleman over there, but as the Premier has pointed out, this is a most serious affair, this is one of the most serious things that any government in Newfoundland was confronted with, and I think the time is very inopportune and does not lend itself to an exchange of pleasantaries across the House.

Mr. Speaker, as to the events leading up to what happened on Thursday last, to seek the causes we would have to go back a very long way. I think, Sir, it would not be out of place to review the whole situation with regard to industrial development in Newfoundland.

Sir, every government that came into power in Newfoundland, and particularly every Liberal Government, has been driven inevitably and inexorably to the conclusion that it had to go all out at whatever cost to create industries in Newfoundland. What was the alternative if we did not look for industries? What was the alternative? We would have to resign ourselves forever to a dependence on a single industry, an industry which at the very best could only keep people at the bare level of existence, and this single industry vulnerable to every economic wind that blew, an industry which was subject always to periods of depression, which even in successful periods could not keep people at a meager level of existence. Sir, every government, particularly every Liberal Government had to go out and look for industry. They either had to develop our industries or had two alternatives before it, either to develop industry or to resign ourselves forever to a precarious, vulnerable, rickety economy. Obviously the situation which faced every government which came into power was an economy based on the work of a few thousand fishermen spread out over four or five thousand miles of coastline in over a thousand little settlements, and depending upon inadequate industry. On such a basis, Sir, no country could be built up. No country with such a basis could live in a modern world, could support the trappings of a modern government. An economy dependent solely on a couple of hundred thousand quintals of salt fish could not provide proper government, could not provide proper social services, nor proper support for young people. So, Sir, every government that came along, and particularly as I have said, every Liberal Government was driven to these conclusions:

It had to go out and bring industry in regardless of cost, and the cost, Sir, in most cases was very heavy. We had to have a railway. We had to have mines. We had to have secondary industries or we would perish. So, Sir, governments had to go out and bring these things in to entice people to come in whatever the cost, even at the cost of concessions, terrific concessions of the public domain.
The Attorney General on Thursday last got up and said in this House that when we came into office five years ago practically all of the public domain had been alienated and practically all our waterpower gone. Why? Because every government faced inevitably and had inevitably to come to this conclusion: Whatever we gave industries we had to get them in, tax exemptions, or concessions over the public domain, whatever it was, we had to give it to bring them in or depend on a few thousand little fishermen and starve and slowly dwindle away. Sir, that was the alternative facing all governments, up to the present government, that ever took office in Newfoundland. And, Sir, the baneful effects of that policy (and I am not saying it was wrong, I am saying that was no alternative) are still being left today. Our public domain had all been alienated when we came into power. Only the other day out in Corner Brook (where you can still see the effects of that policy of past governments) I was trying to collect for the Government the 3% social security taxation and what did I find? Sir, the great company of Bowaters are exempt completely from all taxation, the Avalon Telephone Company is exempted. In Grand Falls you find the same thing, Sir, huge slices of the public domain given to that company. I am not saying it was wrong to give it. The Government had to entice industries in here. The same thing applies on Avalon, there was not one industry ever set up previous to the coming into office of this Government that did not receive support in one form or another; the rope walk, the tobacco factory, clothing factory, whatever we had in the way of industry, our mines and our mills, everything was brought in and set up by huge concessions and by exemptions from taxation. Sir, the total of these exemptions come to many, many times more than twenty million dollars, much more, hundreds of million of dollars and the effects are still being felt because rights were given away in perpetuity, and, Sir, the government of these days had to do that. There were two alternatives, as I said, either do that or resign ourselves forever to what we could do if we had no more than a couple of hundred thousand people depending on the fishery.

Sir, when this Government took over the same pressure was on it, the same inexorable pressure of events was operating for this Government, in our case perhaps with even more intensity. Why? Because after Confederation the immigration barriers were down and young men and young women could take off to the Mainland where they felt better opportunities awaited them. Unless something was done, and done quickly, Newfoundland would find itself a collection of old people waiting for old age pension cheques to come from Ottawa. The first thing that had to be done, Sir, was to persuade young people that this was a fit place to live, a good place to live, a place in which they could start housekeeping and raise families. That was the first task which faced this Government, not wishful thinking nor hair-brained enthusiasm but bold inexorable logic was brought to persuade this Government that an industrial programme had to be embarked upon and that without delay and should be done immediately.
Sir, in our case fortunately, very fortunately we were in a better position than governments that proceeded us. We had money, we had the surplus, but other governments had not, other governments had to give away concessions over the public domain, had to give away exemptions from taxation which were very hard to give away, rights over taxation and give away the public domain, but they had to do it. The same cruel dilemma, Sir, did not face us. We had money and could start to launch out on an industrial programme by orthodox financing. We had money and could lend it or guarantee it in the full hope of getting back the principal and interest. We, Sir, were in a much, much more fortunate position than any government that ever preceded us. But, Sir, we were driven just the same as any other government to the conclusion that we had to industrialize. Everything piled up on us to persuade the Government that was so. We had the demand in that our young people might go, they had the opportunity and the means at hand, etc., and there was urgency behind it. So, Sir, this Government came to the conclusion that we had to launch out on a great industrial programme. There is no question whatever, Sir, none whatsoever, in anyone's mind, that that decision was right, in fact it was inevitable. Now, Sir, when once that decision was arrived at what did we have to do? We had money but that was not enough. We could not wave a wand and see hundreds and scores of new industries springing up all around us. We had money but that was not enough. We had to provide the means, to set up the system to create these industries. A new department was set up, Sir, the Department of Economic Development. That department had to be staffed, careful plans had to be made, expert advice had to be sought, expert advice, Sir. Where could a man be found—here was the problem—with the imagination and experience and energy and financial acumen and knowledge, where could such a man be found to put such a gigantic programme into effect? Obviously there were not too many men of such calibre drifting around, it was obvious to anybody that a man who had the proper qualifications to inaugurate and put into effect such a programme was not drifting around for a penny. A man of more than ordinary qualifications, Sir, had to be found to put into effect these gigantic schemes. Now, the Premier went to look for such a man, went to the Mainland and sought some business advice. A man was recommended to him who seemingly had every qualification, a man who seemed eminently suitable for the job on hand. He was recommended, as I have said, by some of the most responsible and highly placed people in Canada, people who should know, who were in the know and able to judge a man's qualifications for such a job and recommended the man to the Premier, and he took him on and, as I say, Sir, at the time the man seemed eminently suitable, a young man, still active, highly educated and more than that along the line and in the field the job required; a man who held down some of the biggest executive jobs in Europe, a man of unusual, of more than ordinary talents and knowledge. Sir, the Premier took him on and he came here and took on the job. Everyone must admit he went into it with great energy and enthusiasm, and Sir, we were delighted—everyone was delighted—he cause it seemed here was a man tailor-made for the job, made for the purpose. It seemed if we had combed Europe or America we could not come across a man more eminently suitable. The only angle that our friends over opposite could put up against him at that time was that he was a foreigner. That is all they could say about him. That, of course, has been the line of argument followed by the Opposition all the time. Well, Sir, here was such a man and the Premier was delighted. The very man we were looking for—the Premier praised him, he was enthusiastic perhaps it may be that he was over-enthusiastic. But, Sir, there was a great deal to be enthusiastic about. Let us not, Sir, get our thinking out of focus because of these events which happened in the past few days, sensational as they were, there was and is a great deal to be enthusiastic about—fourteen new industries were planned, Sir, as the Premier announced here in the House in his speech the other day—three are working full time, six are working at part time capacity and five have not yet started. The three working full time and the six working part time will employ twenty-one hundred full-time workers, 760 part-time workers and have a wage bill of four and a quarter million dollars a year, and in a month or two when some of those part time become full-time employees—it is very conservative to look forward to five million dollars in wages and three thousand full-time workers. Sir, that is something to be enthusiastic about, I think, and that is what the Honourable Leader of the Opposition called an escapade in the paper the other day—a programme which provided work and wages for three thousand people and bringing five million dollars in to our workers' pockets—an escapade—I say, Sir, if ever a government did anything that is right and was inevitable and statesmanlike it was launching out on this industrial development policy, and, Sir, people, unbiased people, people whose job it is to know about this sort of thing, say the same thing. I have here, Sir, a memorandum from the Federation of Labour to the Provincial Government. I wonder what have they to say about our industries? The Federation of Labour's unbiased opinion on the industries does not call it an escapade or anything of that sort. I have here, Sir, a submission of the Newfoundland Branch of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, to the Premier and members of the Newfoundland Government. Both the employers and employees give full credit to the Government. They say that increased industrial development has brought additional work opportunities. Everyone, Sir, capital, labour, everyone but the Opposition had a good word to say for it and they have never had anything good to say about it from the day it was first announced, everybody but the Opposition, and since the first moment our industrial development policy was announced they have done nothing else but cry "Ruin and disaster," nothing else. Sir, if a man fires a lot of buckshot into a flock of birds and brings one down that is not much credit to his marksmanship nor reason to congratulate himself. There has been blanket condemnation of our industrial programme by the Opposition ever since the day it was announced. They have attacked every man who ever came from the other side of the water and particularly every man who ever came from the other side of the Rhine. Men have come here with great industrial skill, with great industrial know-how, with technical education. Some other countries are very glad to have them and certainly they can do us no harm in Newfoundland. God knows we want new industrial skill and new technical knowledge. Why, Sir, from the Opposition you would think it was the second coming of Attila the Hun. Sir, before a yard of concrete was poured or a nail driven the Opposition blasted and assailed them. If there was a mechanical breakdown they thought they had won a major victory, if a seasonal layoff occurred they clapped their hands. The other day there was a seasonal layoff in a plant in there and they thought they had won a major victory. That was their approach, Sir, to industrial development programme in Newfoundland.

Sir, I say again, if ever a policy was justified this was—if an unworthy instrument has been found to bring it about, unless there was wrong doing and the Government condoned it, as I have said, or had any part in it or concealed or conceived it we are responsible, but if not, Sir, if as soon as we suspected wrong doing and that was brought to book we should be highly complimented for it, Sir.

Sir, the Leader of the Opposition in his statement to the press the other day said we are not on trial, he said—I suppose the Opposition is on trial too—the Opposition and the Government are on trial before the bar of public opinion. All right, Sir, let us take that position. Let us imagine ourselves lined up before this bar—here is the Government on this side and the Opposition on that side. In the past five years what have we done and what have they done? What can we point to and what can they point to. Mr. Speaker, in the past five years this Government has built more hospitals, more nursing stations, more schools, more roads, more bridges, more fish plants than any other previous Government. In the past five years this Government has revamped our legislation, changed the old and obsolete thing that passed for a labour law and brought in labour legislation as modern as anything in the world today. That is what this Government has done in the past five years. This Government attacked the housing problem in a way no other government even dreamed of doing. We have gone into partnership with Central Mortgage and Housing, and set up co-operative housing, started slum clearance, put in water supplies and sanitation—things undreamed of.

MR. FOGWILL: And increased taxation.

MR. MURRAY: Will the honourable gentleman inform me how these things can be done without taxation. I have heard the honourable gentleman get up in this House the other day and made the most extraordinary statement a man ever made. He said—Old Age Pensions, Unemployment Insurance etc. are very good things. He said this, a labour man; "But there is one terrible thing about it, Mr. Speaker, taxation, they are paid for by taxation."

MR. FOGWILL: To a point of order, Mr. Speaker: I did not say that in this House.

MR. MURRAY: Would you mind saying what you did say.

MR. FOGWILL: I did not say that in this House—if the honourable gentleman is going to quote me—
MR. MURRAY: The honourable gentleman most definitely made reference to Old Age Pensions and Family Allowances and Unemployment Insurance. The honourable gentleman referred to them. Then he told us he was an anti-confederate, and he said the thing wrong with them was taxation. Mr. Speaker, we have had some sensational events in the last couple of days, but if the honourable gentleman would come out and tell us how these things could be had without taxation, then we would have something really sensational—they are very good, but taxation, let us cut out the taxation—very sound "Tory" thinking, Sir, I don't know if even the "Tories" believe that. That was Torism in the time of Queen Victoria.

MR. FOGWILL: Mr. Speaker, lower taxation.

MR. MURRAY: And less benefits, and fewer benefits. Cut out Old Age Pensions, cut out Family Allowances, Dependent's Allowances, cut out Blind Allowances?

MR. FOGWILL: Nobody said that.

MR. MURRAY: Sir, cut out all these things.

MR. FOGWILL: Is the honourable gentleman quoting me now about cutting out Old Age Pensions and Blind Pensions etc.? If he is he is not telling the truth. I hope the honourable gentleman is not quoting me now.

MR. MURRAY: I am quoting a way to cut out taxes. If we cut out these benefits we very well can cut out taxes.

MR. FOGWILL: I never said we were to get all these for free from the Mainland.

MR. MURRAY: We would never have had anything if you had your way. The gentlemen over there opposed Confederation, therefore they opposed Old Age Pensions and Family Allowances.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, I must intervene now. Because we opposed Confederation does not mean we opposed Old Age Pensions and Family Allowances.

MR. SMALLWOOD: No?

MR. BROWNE: We don't agree it was sufficient but we had an Old Age Law on the statutory books for twenty years.

MR. MURRAY: That was a good thing, $5 a month.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, I did not oppose Family Allowances but tried to introduce it through the Commission of Government in 1940. I tried to get the Commission of Government to introduce Family Allowances in 1940.

MR. MURRAY: Mr. Speaker, last year in social benefits, in these things the honourable gentlemen are so much in favour of—

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order: Does the honourable gentleman pay any attention to a point of order? I said I did not oppose them.

MR. MURRAY: I am asking the honourable gentleman how we could bring them about. Mr. Speaker, who is speaking, am I or is the honourable gentleman? Is this taken out of my speaking time?

MR. SPEAKER: You asked me for a ruling. The honourable gentleman stated certain facts he had deducted from an honourable gentleman’s speech, which may or may not be true. I maintain it is impossible for anyone to say if his deductions are correct or not.

MR. BROWNE: Obviously.

MR. SPEAKER: That might very well be, but it is not out of order.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Do it all over again.

MR. MURRAY: Last year twenty-five million dollars came into this Province in social benefits. The honourable gentleman said that under Responsible Government he wanted these things. Can he show me or any member of the House any Responsible Government in Newfoundland who could ever provide twenty-five million dollars for social benefits?

MR. BROWNE: Do you want me to do that now, because I can do it if you let me, and I will do it when I get the chance.

MR. MURRAY: We are supposed to be, Sir, before the bar of public opinion. The Leader of the Opposition said we are. And they are Sir. We both are. You are the ones that called for a bar of public opinion, and you are just as much at it as we are. When it comes to accomplishments in public welfare, housing and everything else, what do you point to? You are before the bar of public opinion too.

MR. SPEAKER: Order. Would the honourable member, when I ask the honourable member to be seated, do so. The honourable member is now making a direct attack on certain honourable members on the other side of the House, which is entirely out of order. Will the honourable member please address himself to the Chair.

MR. MURRAY: We are, Sir, before the bar of public opinion, as the honourable gentleman opposite said, and you are, we say.

MR. SPEAKER: That is exactly what I warned the honourable member not to do. The honourable gentleman does not have to pick up every little interruption.

MR. MURRAY: Sir, the honourable member opposite stated in the paper the other day that we are before the bar of public opinion, and so, I say, are they, the honourable members over opposite, before the bar of public opinion. Now, Sir, in the last five years we have a lot to point to, a definite record of accomplishment which I just went through. How have the honourable gentlemen contributed to this? We can say quite honestly, and any unbiased opinion will back us up, in the past five years more constructive work has been done in Newfoundland, more gigantic strides forward have been made in Newfoundland than has ever been done not alone in any five years, but from the time Newfoundland was first settled from the first year up to the last five years. That is a gigantic record of accomplishment. That is what we have done. How have the honourable gentlemen opposite contributed? I say, Sir, as their contribution we had a few jeers and a few sneers and a couple of wisecracks—that is their contribution to Newfoundland’s development and advance in the past five years. That is the way they hope to win public opinion when they stand before the bar. We can point to accomplishment in every field. All they can do is make a few cracks and stay home nights figuring out a few wisecracks. Sir, we can show how we fulfilled our duties. How have they fulfilled theirs? What is the duty of an Opposition anyway? Is it the duty of an Opposition to just hurl tirades of abuse at the Government and think up a few sneers and wisecracks? What is the duty of the Leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition, a position which receives special remuneration from the taxpayer? Is it to make wisecracks and think up new jokes against the Government? I don't think it is, and I don't think the public thinks so. And if you appeal to the bar of public opinion, as you did two or three times, you will find out what the bar of public opinion thinks.

Sir, I have listened to the honourable gentleman over there opposite—all of you—I have listened to you all on the Address in Reply, and you spoke, I say, a total of five or six hours, and, Sir, in all that mass of verbage, five or six hours of statements, I did not hear one constructive thought emerge, not one, and I don't think anyone else did either—no wonder I was asleep. Did you hear me snoring? I was asleep when the honourable gentleman was speaking and who would blame me.

Sir, what principles do the honourable gentlemen entertain, what policy have they, what programme have they outlined? You know when you appeal to a bar of public opinion you must say what you are for at least. That is not too much to tell the public what you are for when you appeal to them. But we have never heard what the honourable gentlemen are for, Sir. We heard what they are against. Sir, there is a story about an Irishman who in time of trouble went to New York and had to fill out an entry form to get in. He was asked what form of Government he was for, and his answer was: ‘What, is there a Government out here too, if there is I am against it.’ Now, that is exactly the policy of the honourable gentlemen—against Smallwood—that is all they have to offer—and, Sir, they appeal to the bar of public opinion.

Sir, this is a Speech from the Throne which I would say, if ever there was a Speech from the Throne that gave opportunity for such constructive thinking or some evidence of statesmanship, if there is any statesmanship in them, this Speech from the Throne was it. Here we see outlined policies in this Speech from the Throne which can affect this Province for generations to come. We see in this Speech from the Throne a commission being set up on forestry led by one of the most competent men in the world, a world authority, General Kennedy, and the gentlemen over opposite don't even deign to notice it. An agricultural commission headed by eminent men in their field.

MR. BROWNE: These were set up last year.

MR. MURRAY: These men are here this year. Dean Shaw, is there any joke about Dean Shaw the man who built up Western Canada, down here to apply himself to our problems, and I say, Sir, the honourable gentlemen over opposite did not have a word to say about it—is that statesmanship or constructive? Get off a few more wisecracks about BRINCO, call it BUNKO, and think you earn your salary. Sir, in this year we are setting up a committee to study the Terms of Union under Term 29. Under Term 29 a Royal Commission will be set up to consider the Terms of Union and this committee was set up, and we are rather proud of the personnel of that committee, Sir. We got the best men available, and I don't think we can overrate this committee's importance to our future, yet the gentlemen over opposite did not deign to say a word about it in all that five or six days talk.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, I rise to a point of order—the honourable gentleman is making very broad and sweeping statements not justified by the facts. There has been reference made to all the things I referred to—I don't think he can talk in that fashion. I don't remember making reference to things of that kind—nobody seems to pay any attention to it—but it is not true.

MR. MURRAY: Sir, as to passing references—I listened to the Honourable Leader of the Opposition for exactly three and a half hours, I believe a record of endurance for the young lady in the box at any rate, Sir.

MR. SMALLWOOD: And for us.

MR. MURRAY: In the Address in Reply to the Speech from the Throne his reference to the fishery policy to be inaugurated this year, and no more important news could be outlined in the Speech from the Throne, and what did the honourable gentleman have to say about it? Practically nothing. I think he took eleven minutes on it out of the three and a half hours, and half of that was not worth talking about. What kind of an appeal would a Leader like that make to the bar of public opinion? I heard one of the honourable gentlemen over there the other day utter a statement that he was a profound disciple of Sir Stafford Cripps—Sir, it does not add up as far as I am concerned. I can tell you, Sir, something about socialism. Let me read this out: "It has been taken for granted that when workmen and employers should, as a rule, make free agreement and in particular should agree freely as to wages." What do you think of that, Sir, that seems to call for a labour conciliation, public relations act.

Sir, what I have just read is from the encyclical of Pope Leo and foreshadows just what we have done.

"Bingo" and "Bunco" which last year sent a shudder through us, but this year he refrained from comment. Sir, the honourable gentlemen over opposite remind me of a group of men that existed in the South after the Civil War, a type of men who sat down under their magnolia trees and drank gin julep and talked about the days that were gone, and were called unreconstructed confederates. To me, Sir, the honourable gentlemen opposite are unreconstructed confederates. We can see them, Sir, year after year as April 1st. rolls around hoisting black flags with their backs turned to the Gulf.
Labour Relations Acts, Workmen's Compensation, good wages, those un­ speakables over here, the untouchables, the communists, the socialists, have brought, in a labour policy advocated in 1881 by Pope Leo XIII.

MR. BROWNE: Did he say anything about building factories?

MR. MURRAY: Sir, I heard the honourable gentleman bring up that horrible thing, the Icelandic Boats. Everyone else had forgotten about them, but the honourable gentleman tried to give it a new twist. Sir, we had a startling announcement made the other day, very startling, Sir, the herring were there all the time when the Icelandic Boats were here. Oh, they knew. How did the honourable gentleman know? A man from Ship Cove told him, Sir. A great deal might have been saved if that man from Ship Cove had only spoken up, but he stood mute. But if the honourable member knew where the herring were, when the man from Ship Cove told him, to save four hundred thousand dollars he should have announced it.

MR. BROWNE: It was spent then.

MR. MURRAY: When did the man from Ship Cove tell the honourable gentleman? Anyway it was a bombshell firing into this House when the honourable gentleman came in here—the H for Herring Bomb. I heard the honourable gentleman make another startling announcement. He told us he founded the Federation of Fishermen, or he was responsible for founding the Federation of Fishermen.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, I did not say that—I said it was my idea.

MR. MURRAY: He must have told Sir William Coaker in 1910.

MR. BROWNE: That is not the same thing at all.

MR. MURRAY: Of course without the honourable gentleman the idea never would have occurred to anyone. But the honourable gentleman was the one responsible for it, he originated the idea, Sir. If the honourable gentleman believes he is the only man in Newfoundland who believes it. The Fishermen's Federation has grown up now from infancy to a lusty body.

The honourable gentleman also seemed to be looking for sympathy when he came in here. I don't know, but I don't think that is the way to appeal to the bar of public opinion, to come in and air personal grievances real or imaginary. He told us he could not go to the Corporation because there was an election on. Well, Sir, it is a pity the sacrifice was in vain, that is all I can say. Sir, the honourable gentleman could not understand how he could be defeated in an election—Sorcery, I say—Sorcery. How else could an electorate turn its back on such a man, so obviously qualified unless by witchcraft or black magic. That is the only way the honourable gentleman could have been defeated, that is the only possible way.

MR. BROWNE: I must, Mr. Speaker, protest against this line of argument. The honourable gentleman and his supporters are over there in great number, and it is all very well for them to smile and laugh. References of that kind have nothing to do with the business before the Chair, are offensive and likely to cause trouble.

MR. MURRAY: It is all very well for the honourable gentleman to try and interrupt me, and get in a wisecrack, but when he gets a taste of his own medicine back, the honourable gentleman is up on his feet.

MR. SPEAKER: I wonder if we could have five minutes recess.

Recess for five minutes.

MR. MURRAY: Mr. Speaker, I now propose to go on for what time is left me, to do what I had intended originally to do, which was to discuss the speech from the Throne and its effect in respect to the district I represent. Sir, as soon as the Speech from the Throne is read all of us, I suppose, and certainly anyone who represents a fishing district like myself, would turn automatically and immediately to see what policy the Government has in view with regard to the fisheries. I am sure, Sir, this year all of us are delighted to see reference to a fishery policy by the Government, and delighted also to hear that policy further amplified in the Address by the Premier and by the Minister of Fisheries and Co-operatives. Sir, as the Premier said, this is the fatal year for the fishing industry, this is the year of decision. As we all know the fishery in Newfoundland has been in rather a chaotic position for years. Nobody seems to know where we are. No definite set policy seems to be outlined. Therefore, Sir, as soon as this Government got into power one of the first actions of the Government was, in conjunction with the Federal Government, to appoint a committee to investigate and report back on the fisheries of Newfoundland. That committee under the chairmanship of Sir Albert Walsh has now made its recommendations. And now, Sir, the greatest task lies before us of putting these recommendations into effect.

It seems, Sir, in all this country there is no district in which fishery development has been awaited more eagerly than it has in Ferryland. I will say this: there is no district which lends itself more readily and more easily to an enlightened fishery policy than the District of Ferryland. There is no district where the output of a few dollars in fishery development would give such immediate and telling results as the District of Ferryland. This is a district, Sir, which because of its great natural advantages has attracted fishermen to its shores from the very day Newfoundland was discovered. Newfoundland was discovered in 1497, and a year or two later Gasper Corte-Real came from Portugal and put into harbour on the Southern Shore and that started the trade which went on with ships coming out in the spring of the year from all the ports of Brittany and Normandy to Bay Bulls and Trepassey. That traffic, Sir, started very early in the 1500's and has been going on ever since in one way or another.

There are splendid harbours in proximity to the greatest fishing grounds in the world and water supplies available. These have all acted as a magnet for the fisheries for centuries. The fishery up there has been exploited for centuries, and the supply, as we know, is still there as great as at the beginning. The supply is there, Sir, in limitless quantities, but the methods of harvesting are out of date and have to be changed. Mr. Speaker, I remember once in the month of August standing and looking out to sea off St. Shotts and seeing vessels from every part of the world: Portuguese, Spanish, Nova Scotian and American vessels fishing right off the land in sight of St. Shotts in seas teeming with fish. Yet, Sir, the extraordinary thing about it is that the men from St. Shotts, in the middle of August, had stopped fishing. They had caught possibly 60 or 70 quintals of fish, and that was all they could make, and they had to give it up for the summer with 60 or 70 quintals although their shores teemed with fish.
Unless fishery development comes to these settlements these men are just crippled, just as crippled as if they were handcuffed and had balls and chains on their legs. I remember, Mr.
Speaker, the little place of Brigus South one Sunday morning after Mass when you could see the codfish rolling in on the landwash and from the stagehead could see caplin and fish eating the rocks. That phenomenon takes place only in Newfoundland. Yet, Sir, the people in Brigus that fall when they settled up had barely enough to get through the winter. I have been in Portugal Cove South, and in caplin time the fish came in there in countless millions. I have seen young fishermen there actively engaged, so busy they did not have time to talk to you, working Sunday and Monday. I know one particular young, eager, active fisherman came in with a thousand quintals of fish and the extraordinary thing he ended up in the fall, thirty dollars in the hole, all their drudgery and toll useless. It would be better if the young men sat on the bank until development comes to Portugal Cove.

Mr. Speaker, if ever there is an area that calls for development here it is.
Here is food, Sir, in unlimited quantities. I remember once in the Old Colony Club there was a gentleman from Harvard University who was connected with food, Dr. Miller, and I heard him get up and say, at this very moment in the world tonight half the population of the world will go to bed hungry. Yet, Sir, up there all along the shore good food, high protein food is to be found in countless quantities. We have active and educated fishermen up there and intel­ gent. They have had good schools up there for decades, a good convent school, and the people are a bright and intelligent people and are capable of absorbing new ideas. They want modern ideas and modern thinking on fisheries and not the old traditional way. This will not do them.

Mr. Speaker, up in that area is one of the biggest per capita fishing areas in Newfoundland. Last year there were 666 fishermen and they got 66,000 quintals of fish, half light salted and half heavy-salted, a per capita catch of one hundred quintals a man, high by Newfoundland standards yet not high enough in this modern world. The fishermen know their industry will not provide them with an adequate living in the way it is carried on at the present day. It must be developed, Sir. Up in the Southern Shore, at any rate, it must be developed or it must perish. We need development up there, Sir—a small plant and a couple of breakwaters up in St. Shotts so that the fishermen will not have to stop fishing in the month of August when fishermen from all over the world carry on practically in their harbours.

At Portugal Cove, as I told you, there is simply an open beach and the fish swarm in in millions, yet when a breeze of wind comes in the middle of the trap time they have to haul up their skiffs. They need a break-water, and cold storage to hold salt fish, a storage that would hold fish in thirty or forty degrees. In Portugal Cove we need a fish plant. Bay Bulls and Witless Bay and that area is the highest per capita fish producing area in Newfoundland. In Cape Broyle last year 125 fishermen went fishing in an area where there is a good supply of potential power for hydro-electric development. If even there is a place waiting for development in the fisheries, it is Cape Broyle. In fact, Sir, the whole shore is waiting for fishery development to bring it to life. A beginning has been made up there at Fermose where a modern plant has been working, Sir, with men and women working all last winter in this fish plant, and with draggers bringing in fish, draggers financed by Government loans. Now a plant is under construction at Trepassey and it is hoped to see it in operation before the summer is out. It is one of the most modern plants in all the world, in North America at any rate, financed by Government money. We have great hopes, Sir, for this plant in Trepassey. There should not be an idle man in all that area when that plant gets into operation. It is not an exaggeration that Trepassey could very conceivably become the fishing capital of this country.

Sir, the people in my district of Ferryland are waiting for fishery development with almost bated breath. There is no area which would give such immediate returns. The man in St. Shotts, presently tied to his 60 quintals of fish a year, hopes to throw off his economic shackles. The people of Portugal Cove and Cape Broyle and all along the shore hope the day is just about to dawn when a decent day's pay can be gotten for a decent day's work, and there is one answer, Sir, development. Refrigeration and controlled marketing, these are the formulas that have worked out in Canada. Now if such formula can be worked out in Canada and can be applied to poultry and eggs and apples and the cheese industry, if that formula can work up there why can't that formula be applied to the fishery on the Southern Shore. Refrigeration (cold storage), price control, there, Sir, is the formula wherein lies our hope of the future and I don't see any reason in the world, Sir, why it very soon should not be put into effect up there.

Sir, the Speech from the Throne also refers to an Agricultural Commission. Upon the Southern Shore side by side with the development of our fisheries we have also got to expand our natural resources if we want to have a sound, well-balanced economy in Ferryland District. We have also to bring agriculture along concurrently with the fishery. I am going to try and get Dean Shaw to come up there, Sir. It has not too much to offer us in the way of agriculture any more than the rest of Newfoundland. Broken topography, the soil is stony and of low fertility but it is a very, very important adjunct to the people living up there. There are two types of agriculture in my district, Sir. The full-time small farmers in the Goulds and they unquestionably have had a very hard road to hoe in the past few years, but we hope that the new Commissioner Dean Shaw, Professor Drummond and the rest of them will be able to bring forward a policy with regard to the full-time farmers in the Goulds as well as the rest of Newfoundland which will maintain this valuable industry and place it on a sound basis, because, Sir, the small-time farmer (and there are about 15,000 engaged in it) is of tremendous importance to our economy. Sir, apart from these full-time farmers, more important, it seems to me, to my district is what I call supplementary agriculture. It is a great adjunct as everybody knows to a fisherman's economy when he can raise enough vegetables and have a cow and some poultry and a few sheep. That is the kind of agriculture they have been going in for and has been of the utmost importance to them in the past. In the bad times in the past it has been a most significant factor in health and well-being up on the Southern Shore as it has been in other places in Newfoundland. The pity of it is that type of agriculture has lapsed up the shore and everywhere else it has shown a sharp decline, and people are turning from their gardens to the can. This is a situation to be deplored, and I think a lot can be done for agriculture in my district. Up in St. Shotts there is as fine a sheep and beef cattle country as anywhere in the world. I have spent a winter, Sir, in the Welch Hills and Highlands of Scotland, and it seems to me the land up there is very similar to what you see in Wales and in the hills and highlands of Scotland. I don't know, but it seems to me there is a possibility for a terrific and wonderful sheep industry up there. That is one of the things specifically, when I go up with Dean Shaw, that I am going to ask his opinion on.

Sir, there is another great possibility for an industry up that shore, and I mean the blueberry industry which is assuming major importance in various parts of Newfoundland. They tell me, over around Conception Bay last year, something like eight hundred thousand dollars worth of blueberries were sent out of the country. That is a major contribution, Sir, to our economy. Up on the Southern Shore, provided we get refrigeration, the magic word for it all, if we get that, Sir, it will certainly bring along a great blueberry industry. But the magic formula is: refrigeration, price control and controlled marketing. We must have controlled industry, and side by side must come these amenities that go with development in this modern world, transportation and communications and we must have roads, telephones and lights.

Mr. Speaker, last year I happened to be President of the Canadian Legion in this Province, and last fall I think I was on every highroad in Newfoundland. We went around to visit our branches and travelled on eighteen highroads. Our highroad is outstanding. I will tell you why. It is the worst—we in Ferryland District have the distinction of having the worst highroad in Newfoundland. I have good news and the people of the Southern Shore will be delighted to know the road is going to be fixed up. A great deal was done last year but there is more to be done this year. And when my honourable friend goes up there again next election, as they go around every election time, they will be delighted, Sir, to have a good Liberal road to go over, and they will be delighted I know, because they have been very sorry about the road. I have seen gallons of crocodile tears shed about the condition of the Ferryland Road between nomination day and polling day. However, Sir, the Leader of the Opposition, when he goes up again—I know he is very interested in the fishery in the Ferryland District, I learned that from his very interesting and very informal talk. He told us, Mr. Speaker, what happened when he went up there last year. About the fishery in Ferryland I could give him a little advice for when he goes up again. Up there, Sir, they like to pull a man's leg, and when they see a fellow come in from St. John's with a tie and collar looking for something against the Government, and sees a man in a boat and asks: "Who owns that boat?" "Oh the Government." "How much do they pay you?" "Oh a hundred dollars a month." "How much fish have you?" "Oh no fish at all."

They are queer hands, Sir, and like to kid people, jocos,-

MR. HOLLETT: I rise to a point of order, Sir, I object that any people in this country should be called "Queer Hands." I would like to have the honourable gentleman take that back.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I think I can join in that point of order. The honourable gentleman when last in Renews discovered they were not "Queer Hands" up there.

MR. MURRAY: I say they are very intelligent, jovial people, Sir. They like a political practical joke. When a fellow comes up from St. John's they tell him what he wants to hear.

I will tell you one little thing about Ferryland District. When the campaign was on last year, there was a holier man than the Honourable Leader of the Opposition who went into a house and called a man into the front room, and took his black hat off and laid it on the organ, looked up to Heaven and down at the floor and said: "Mike, do you know what happened in Ferryland District. Do you know what Murray is doing?" Mike said, "No." "He is giving out rum." Mike said, "What! you come in here and say he is giving out rum and he has been in here five times and I never got a drop off him."

Mr. Speaker, I brought in a petition to this House the day it was opened. It was signed by every adult in Trepassey, by every adult in Renews, Fermeuse, Kingman's, Brigus, asking for lights. Here, as I said, is the oldest inhabited part of North America with the people going to bed by kerosene lamp and without telephones, and Sir, that is not all of it. Up on the Southern Shore, as I said on opening day, there are 40 or 45 thousand h.p. of electric current generated, and the people up there are without lights. Now I think something should be done about that. People have been given concessions, franchises over the public domain. For what? To provide the people with lights, and I say, Sir, if they don't live up to their obligations then their franchise should be cancelled. Call that socialism or what you like. It was given not for corporations to make hundreds of thousands of dollars nor for people to build up large personal fortunes. Exclusive rights are given to corporations so that they may provide adequate services for the people at a reasonable cost. And I say, if the people who have those concessions don't fulfill their obligations they should be taken from them. The Legislature gave it and they should take it away if they don't fulfill their obligations. If that is socialism anyone can make what they like of it. That is the way it is done in the great wealthy Province of Ontario.

Sir, during the Address in Reply to the Speech from the Throne there has been a great deal said about liquor in Newfoundland. The Opposition has had a great deal to say about it, nothing too constructive, but, Sir, I am going to say what I think, honestly and sincerely and based on experience. Sir, when I grew up in my father's house there was never any prohibition either. As I recall it there was a hot-tle of spirits in the house and produced when visitors came in or on special occasions like Christmas, St. Patrick's Day or the Day of the Races or something like that. Drunkenness, I never saw. Now, Sir, I think that state of affairs which existed in my own house was the state of affairs that existed up the Shore until a year or two ago. To hear people talk about wiping out liquor, to people like that is silly, just as silly as people trying to wipe out Christmas puddings. It was a small extravagance for social festivities, and not by any means a social problem. That was the way it was in my home and in a great many in Ferryland. A man would come to town in the spring or fall and bring a bottle home, for weddings, and Christmas they bought it, but it was no social problem. It was the sort of thing the economy could stand, and certainly there was no cause for condemnation about it.

But, Sir, that has changed in the last year or two. There is too much beer sold up there now, beer dished out to young men. And the economy, Sir, just can't stand it, just can't afford it, a fishing economy that averages in Ferryland a high of one hundred quintals a year, and can't stand beer at $7.40 a case. It is a horrible thing to see young men drinking beer at $7.40 a case in the trap time. I would say for the people concerned to use discretion, use moderation, or have the thing cut out altogether. It has no place, Sir, in a fishing economy.

Mr. Speaker, just as the Premier has unbounded faith and unbounded vision in this Province of ours as a whole, I have unbounded faith in my own district. As I said, Sir, I know of no place in Newfoundland where development can be of such immediate need and have such beneficial results. And, Sir, I believe that the day of development is not too far off. I believe, Sir, I will be representing that district for a long time to come, I firmly believe it, Sir. And when I do pass on, I do hope this sincerely, that I will leave it a little better than I found it. Sir, there has been good things happen in the past five years: Old Age Pensions, Veterans' Allowances, Family Allowances. These things are very good indeed. But, Sir, if we want to have a real, well-balanced economy we have got to develop and have the amenities which civilized people are entitled to all over the world—good roads, lights, good public utilities, good schools. Sir, I look forward to a day up on the Southern Shore, and I don't think it will be in the too far distant future, when the fishing industry up there will give adequate employment to every man and woman up there who wants it. I look forward to the time in my district when every child up there will go around well fed and clothed, over good roads to good schools run by good sisters, a good sound economy, Sir. That is what I am looking forward to, and with this economy based on the natural resources, all they need is a few dollars to bring it about. I look forward to the time when everybody up there can live in frugal comfort and Christian decency, as Pope Pius said, and I don't think that is too visionary or too far off in the future.

MR. MERCER: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of the debate.

Question No. 59:

What is the extent of the work presently being carried out on the Mount Pearl Road, how much grading and resurfacing is being done, what is the estimated cost? Is the work being done by the Department of Public Works or by contract, if by contract, who is the contractor?

Answer:

The work at present being done on the Mount Pearl Road is maintenance work only, that is, repairing the damage suffered by the road during the Winter months and during the Spring breakup. The work consists of applying road gravel which is being spread by a bulldozer. No grading or resurfacing is being done. The estimated cost of the present operation is $1,100. The work is being done by Department of Public Works' staff.

QUESTION NO. 60:

(1) November 14, 1952. Agent—Purchased directly by the Board.

(2) Total amount of duties—$1,491,357.16. This does not include duties paid at distilleries in Canada on goods shipped excise paid.

HON. G. POWER (Minister of Finance): Mr. Speaker, I would like to make a correction to my answer to Question No. 5. That answer was in connection with the agents who sold wine and beer and spirits to the Board of Liquor Control. We had Mr. J. M. O’Dea as agent. This should have been Mr. J. V. O’Dea. And Benedictine Liquors was not purchased through A. J. Dunne as agent, it was a direct purchase.

BOARD OF LIQUOR CONTROL

QUESTION No. 5—Mr. Hollett. (Part 3):

Total amount paid for Alcoholic Liquors, including Wine and Beers from April 1, 1953 to Feb. 28, 1954 .................................................. 3,555,380.81

Total value of Sales for Alcoholic Liquors, including Wine and Beers from April 1, 1953 to Feb. 28, 1954 .................................................. 6,036,277.95

QUESTION No. 5—Mr. Hollett. (Corrections):

(1) Brand Firm Agent No. Cases

Benedictine Liquors Benedictine (France) Direct 40
Bass Ale Export Bottlers Ltd. J. V. O’Dea 500
Guinness Stout A. Guinness & Sons Ltd. J. V. O’Dea 1100

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, if I may ask a question on that? When the honourable gentleman says: a direct purchase by the Board, is that made by the chairman or by some official appointed by him.

MR. POWER: Purchased by the Chairman of the Board.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, while I am on my feet—there are a number of questions which have not been answered, and soon, I think, the estimates will be brought down. We would like as soon as possible to have the answers to these questions.

MR. POWER: The answers to all questions that have been directed to me are in course of preparation.

Orders of the Day

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, before the orders of the day are called I wonder if the Honourable Minister of Economic Development has had his attention drawn to an article appearing in the issue of May 6th of the "Sunday Herald"—"Did Europeans run off with eight thousand dollars—Rumors have been sweeping the city." Does the Honourable Minister know anything about that?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I know that story appeared in the "Sunday Herald." Also that is all I do know about it. I don't think there is any truth in it, and certainly no public money is missing that we know of. And I have the gravest doubt, the gravest possible doubt that any public money is missing. I have the gravest possible doubt that anyone has run off with any money anywhere.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, there is another question I would like to address to the Honourable Attorney General—During the course of his speech on the Address in Reply he quoted extensively from the agreement between NALCO and JAVELIN. I believe it is customary when a minister quotes from a public document to table it. Is it so intended?

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Speaker, I was not quoting from the report but from a memorandum given to me by the president. I really don't know where it is, but could possibly get it. It was just a memorandum given to me by some official of the company. I was not quoting from the report. A full report of the NALCO has, I believe, been tabled, and I am pretty certain that the information I had given in that report—I speak subject to correction—it appeared in the daily press.

MR. BROWNE: Not the agreement. The honourable gentleman was quoting I believe, from the agreement.

MR. CURTIS: No, if I may reply, I was just quoting the effect. I don't believe I quoted the agreement. I am pretty sure I did not.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask another question. On a portion of the proceedings which took place here yesterday there was a tape recording evidently of the proceedings of the House. Was that done with the knowledge of the government?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I don't feel called upon to answer the question.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, may I address it to you?

MR. SPEAKER: In the beginning—these questions may not be addressed to Mr. Speaker. I know of no tape recording having taken place in the Chamber yesterday.

MR. BROWNE: Well, apparently, Mr. Speaker, one was present and a recording was made. I did not hear the recording as it was broadcast, but from the report I received it was not an accurate account of all that took place during the discussion broadcast.

MR. SPEAKER: Since the Honourable gentleman has mentioned that I want to call to the attention of the House, there was a report given to me last night to the effect that some person was present in the gallery with a tape recorder, but it could not be ascertained if the machine was working or not. Such an action would certainly be contrary to the privilege of the House. But I had no knowledge that any recording was made in the House. The honourable member might have a recording made outside the House. I have no knowledge of that either.
Third Readings:

Third reading of Bill, "An Act to Amend the Solemnization of Marriages Act."

On motion read a third time, ordered passed and title be as on the order paper.

Third reading of Bill, "An Act to Amend the Education Act."

On motion read a third time, ordered passed and title be as on the order paper.

Committee of the Whole:

On Bill:

"An Act Further to Amend the Mothers' Allowances Act."

"An Act Further to Amend the Exploits Valley (Closing Hours) Shop Act."

MR. SPEAKER: Leave was given yesterday for this Committee to sit again. I do now leave the Chair.

"An Act Further to Amend the Mothers' Allowances."

Clause 1 read, carried. Clause 2 read:

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, in the last paragraph there, what is the meaning of:

"An allowance may be paid to a woman who is resident in Newfoundland and has resident with her one or more orphan children. (i) under the age of seventeen years; or (ii) over the age of seventeen years but under the age of twenty-one years where such child or children are incapacitated or in need of financial assistance because of continued attendance at school or college or in need of financial assistance for other reasons, and is the guardian or foster mother of such child or children and has not adequate means to care properly for such child or children without the assistance of an allowance."

Does that mean she is not the mother but she is the guardian or foster mother?

MR. CURTIS: If orphaned a child has no mother obviously.

MR. BROWNE: We speak of "Orphans" when one parent is dead.

HON. F. W. ROWE (Minister of Mines and Resources): I think that is usually meant to apply to someone appointed guardian of the children by the Family Court or the Child Welfare.

MR. BROWNE: Does it apply to these foster homes where children are placed?

MR. CURTIS: I might say when I called this order the Honourable Minister of Public Welfare was here. But he had to go to the airport to meet some individuals. If the honourable member would like to have the committee just hold up that clause? In fact we might hold up the whole committee stage.

MR. BROWNE: We could leave this clause until he comes.

Clause 2 stand.

"An Act Further to Amend the Exploits Valley (Closing Hours) Shop Act."

Clause 1, read, carried.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the Minister how many communities does that apply to?

HON. M. MURRAY (Minister of Provincial Affairs): In the Exploits Valley, sir, the order applies to Botwood, Bishop's Falls, Grand Falls and Windsor.

MR. BROWNE: These are very substantial communities. Is there any amalgamation between them or any arrangement about closing time. It seems to me a very minor matter for the Legislature to have to make orders about what time the shops close. Have they not got town councils there to arrange that?

MR. MURRAY: It is the responsibility of the Department of Municipal Affairs. What usually happens is that requests come from an area for certain changes. We get in touch with the unions and it is usually by mutual consent after consulting both sides, and orders are issued. The idea of the amendment is that as the Act stands orders have to be made for specific periods. But under this amendment the order will stand until revoked.

MR. BROWNE: I would just like to repeat the question: is it not desirable that these people should be responsible themselves?

MR. MURRAY: It could be.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Well, Mr. Chairman, the fact of the matter is it would involve the repeal of the legislation. The legislation provides it be done in this way. These people are acting under an Act directed at them to cover these cases. Now there is another Act, I believe, of a more general character. Then on top of that again there is still another Act applying each of them to one particular community. Well, if there is a particular Act inaugurated some years ago affecting these communities, surely any change must be made in this House. If the people out there preferred to cease to be under the Act under which they now come, and would rather come under the General Act, I have no doubt that the government would be quite happy and would ask this House to repeal the present legislation and would ask the House to create an Act at the request of the people out there. But that request has not come, and we are following along in the position of the Act obtaining now for six or seven years. After all it is not as bad as the situation the honourable gentleman was familiar with, in the past four years where thousands of divorce cases were discussed in Parliament. We do not get very many requests to amend this Act.

MR. BROWNE: Well, Mr. Chairman, the point I am making is that it seems to me that matters of this kind should be decided in the community where they apply. We are not going to make much progress in democratic government unless they can decide for themselves what time the shops should open and close. I think it is within the jurisdiction of the Act dealing with the organization of local communities—if the minister would suggest that whenever it is feasible and possible those people should assume these responsibilities for such small matters.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Except that what the honourable gentleman is now saying would be much better said, and more legitimately said, at second reading. He is now discussing the principle of the Bill, which I think has been agreed to by this House in recent days at second reading.

Clause 2 carried. Bill passed without amendment.

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Chairman, I move the committee rise and report having passed the Bill without amendment.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole have considered the matter to them referred and have passed the Bill "An Act Further to Amend the Exploits Valley (Closing Hours) Shop Act, without amendment.

Report received. Ordered read a third time on tomorrow.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole have considered the matter to them referred and have made progress on the Bill, "An Act Further to Amend the Mothers' Allowances Act," and asks leave to sit again.

Report received—Ordered sit again at a later hour this day.

Second Reading of Bill, "An Act to Amend the Water and Sewerage Corporation of Greater Corner Brook Act, 1951."

HON. S. J. HEFFERTON (Minister of Municipal Affairs and Supply): Mr. Speaker, in the parent Act incorporating the Water and Sewerage Corporation of Greater Corner Brook there was an omission of a definition of the word "Land." This amendment merely gives this definition. I move the second reading of the Bill.

On motion Bill read a second time, ordered referred to a Committee of the Whole House on tomorrow.

Second Reading of Bill, "An Act to Amend the Public Libraries Act."

HON. J. R. CHALKER (Minister of Education): Mr. Speaker, the Public Libraries Board made representation to the Government pointing out that it would be more satisfactory if a small annual grant were made to the Public Libraries Board somewhat as is done in the case of Jubilee Guilds. That would give the board freedom of decision on the salary scale etc.—instead of having every action of the board submitted to the Minister the library be given a fixed amount for five years subject to the annual report.

The Civil Service Act is to apply to the person holding the post of Secretary Librarian at the date of this new legislation and in addition to the pensionable service done by that person when this section comes into force the years of service done by him after this section comes into force shall be counted as pensionable service, but this sub-section shall not apply to any person occupying the post of Director of Public Library Services after the retirement of the person holding the post of Secretary-Librarian at the date of enactment of this section.

I move the second reading of this Bill.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, this is one of the more important Bills because it embodies a change in the way the Government is going to treat the Public Libraries Board. It is not readily apparent however, from examination of this Bill that it involved any change, as the Minister explained it. The Bill, it seems to me, deals with a good many points in regard to the administration of the Board and in particular deals with the question of the Secretary-Librarian. I would like to ask the Minister if he would show me the section in which the change he has mentioned is, I cannot see it.

MR. CHALKER: Mr. Speaker, the changes made in this Bill are the powers vested presently in the Department of Education and which are now to a great extent to be vested in the Public Libraries Board, in as much as they themselves would not have to be coming for every proposed change or procedure necessary in the operation of the Public Libraries Board. The other clauses regarding the civil servants. I believe the holder of the job at present, Mr. Newell, is the only civil servant on the Public Libraries Board at the present time. The other members of the Public Libraries Board do not come under the Civil Servants' Regulation, and are not so treated to any degree in respect of the increases granted by the Government. The Public Libraries Board are asking that they themselves be given the power to name salaries for these employees. Most of the sections of the Bill are taken up to explain the powers of the Lieutenant Governor in Council and pass them over to the Public Libraries Board. That is practically all the changes.

On motion Bill read a second time. Ordered referred to a Committee of the Whole House on tomorrow.

Second Reading of Bill, "An Act Respecting the Supreme Court of Canada and the Exchequer Court of Canada."

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Speaker, the Exchequer Court Act, Revised Statutes of Canada, Chapter 98-1952 provides in section 50 as follows: (1) Where the Legislature of any Province of Canada has passed an Act agreeing that the Exchequer Court has jurisdiction in cases of controversy, (a) between Canada and such province, (b) between such Province and any other Province or Provinces that have passed a like Act, the Exchequer Court has jurisdiction to determine such controversies. The section further provides that an appeal lies in such cases from the Exchequer Court to the Supreme Court.

Now then as at the present date Newfoundland has not passed an Act and the passage of this Act will therefore give the Exchequer Court jurisdiction in cases between Canada and the Province of Newfoundland — whereas now at this moment no such jurisdiction exists. The Supreme Court Act session 62 of the Revised Statutes of Canada 1952 ch. 259 provides simply where the legislature of any province of Canada has passed an Act agreement and providing that the Supreme Court has jurisdiction in any of the following cases, i.e. of suits, actions or proceedings in which the parties thereto by their pleading have raised the question of the validity of an Act in the Parliament of Canada, when in the opinion of a judge of a court in which the same are pending such question is material: (b) of suits, actions or proceedings in which the parties thereto by their pleadings have raised the question of the validity of an Act of the Legislature of such province, when in the opinion of a judge of the court in which the same are pending such question is material: The judge having decided that such question is material shall at the request of the parties, and may without such request, if he thinks fit, in any suit, action or proceeding within the class or classes of cases in respect of which such Act so agreeing and providing it has been passed, order the case to be removed to the Supreme Court for the decision of such question, whatever may be the value of the matter in dispute, and the case shall be removed accordingly. The Act further provides the Supreme Court shall thereupon hear and determine the question so raised and shall remit the case with a copy of its judgment thereon to the court or judge whence it came to be then and there dealt with as to justice appertains. (c) There shall be no further appeal to the Supreme Court on any point decided by it in any such case, nor, unless the value of the matter in dispute exceeds $500, on any other point in such case. (4) This section applies only to cases of civil nature.

The effect of this legislation, Mr. Speaker, is to provide that the clauses in both Exchequer Court Act and the Supreme Court Act will become applicable to Newfoundland. I would move the second reading of this Bill.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the Attorney General a question. He stated that the Exchequer Court Act gave power to a legislature to have a dispute between Canada and Newfoundland heard by the Exchequer Court. It also mentioned between provinces. Is it not the intention to have that included in this Bill? Did the Attorney General omit that deliberately or why is it not included here?

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, there is just one point that I would raise. I wonder if in the Supreme Court of Canada and in the Exchequer Court are there any provisions there to take care of such a controversy as might arise between Canada and Newfoundland over the Terms of Union for instance. If there is no such provision in either of these courts in my opinion by passing this Act you delegate to the Supreme Court of Canada the right to decide any controversy over these Terms, the settlement of these Terms of Union. I just raised the point. Certainly I don’t know enough about the Supreme Court of Canada Act or the Exchequer Court Act—the Honourable Premier seems to laugh but I am quite sure he knows less about it than I do.

MR. SMALLWOOD: That is not possible.

MR. HOLLETT: His laughing does not affect me any, but I see as it reads here, Sir, you transfer to the Supreme Court the right to settle all controversy between Canada and Newfoundland, and as long as the fact that we are to have something in the very near future I raise that point so that the Attorney General may tell the Premier and myself something about it.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, the only contribution I wish to make to this particular debate is to make this one observation. I notice particularly that when the honourable gentleman from St. John's West who is a lawyer asks the Attorney General a question the Attorney General merely nods meaning he will answer when he closes the debate, whereas upon the Leader of the Opposition debates with himself—if he were to speak now or forever hold his speech on this subject, therefore he spoke. Now it seems to me if by any chance Professor Einstein were a member of this House on this side and were piloting a Bill on a most obstruse scientific theory imaginable, the Leader of the Opposition would get up and offer his opinion on it. So in the same sense he has offered his opinion now, at least if not his opinion has posed some questions. I would like to see an experiment tried, the experiment of having an entire afternoon devoted to highly intricate and highly scientific matters only and see how many times the honourable and learned Leader would take part.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, I rise to a point of order; I believe second reading is given to discussion of the principle of any Bill and not personal criticisms with regard to Professor Einstein or Malcolm Hollett or Joseph R. Smallwood or anybody like that. I believe it has to do with the principle of this particular Bill and if the Honourable Premier has no better competition to offer than he has then I would say he should keep his mouth shut.

MR. SPEAKER: The honourable gentleman has rather spoiled his point of order by being out of order himself in his closing remark therefore I shall make no comment. I might add however, the Honourable Premier has a perfect right to discuss relativity or any other thing.

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Speaker, I would be most happy to answer the two questions that have been addressed to me by my honourable friends opposite. First with regard to the question as to extending the effect of this Act to enable some province to sue Newfoundland or to be sued by Newfoundland, I may say, we deliberately left out that section of the Act because at the moment the other province we might have a case against or who might have a case against Newfoundland has not passed a similar Act. In other words the only provinces in Canada that have passed this Act at the moment are the Provinces of Ontario, Manitoba and Saskatchewan and British Columbia. I could not imagine that Newfoundland would have any litigation with either of these four provinces. Therefore I was not prepared to recommend to the Government that we extend the jurisdiction to all the provinces of Canada until the province with whom we might become involved had passed a similar legislation. So that I deliberately, Mr. Speaker, left out the provision that provided for giving either the Exchequer Court or the Supreme Court of Canada jurisdiction to adjudicate matters as between Newfoundland and the other provinces.

Now, this is really a very important Act because if it were not for this Act we could not go to the Supreme Court of Canada and ask for an interpretation of the Terms of Union nor for the determination of any point which might arise between us and Canada, such as, for instance the freight rates case, or the determination of the interpretation of the Terms of Union. The passage of this Act will enable Newfoundland on the one hand to apply to the Supreme Court of Canada for an interpretation of the Terms of Union or to take action against Canada in either of the courts, and of course vice versa, the passage of this Act will enable Canada in its turn to take action against us either civilly or to determine the interpretation of the Terms of Union.

It is legislation I think, which we should have. One thing can be said I suppose, if we don't like it we can always repeal it.

I would move the second reading of this Bill.

On motion Bill read a second time, ordered referred to a Committee of the Whole House on tomorrow.

Second Reading of Bill, "An Act Respecting the Evidence Act."
MR. CURTIS: Mr. Speaker, I beg to move the second reading of this Bill. This is a Bill which we have been asked to pass by the Federal Government. It deals entirely or to all intents and purposes entirely with the rights of officers in the Canadian Forces situated in Newfoundland to take affidavits. At the moment we have provision only in our Act whereby officers employed in the Canadian Forces can take affidavits from their troops, but this Act is a little fuller. It was found, by the Department of National Defence that all the provinces had different legislation enacted dealing with this matter, and the Federal Government has therefore asked all the provinces to get together and have the legislation uniform. With that same result in mind the committee on the uniformity of legislation has met and has drafted a Bill, of which the Bill before us is practically a verbatim copy. We have made one or two minor changes just to suit local conditions, but this Bill as it is before us now will bring our legislation in line with the legislation which either has been or will be passed by the other provinces. I do not think I need go into details of the Bill, Mr. Speaker. If there are any questions that arise from this reading I will be glad to answer some when we get into committee.

On motion Bill read a second time, ordered referred to a Committee of the Whole House on tomorrow.

Second reading of Bill, "An Act Respecting the Prevention of Fires."

MR. SPEAKER: The motion on second reading of this Bill was adjourned at the request of the Honourable Member for St. John's West.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, since the last day I have had an opportunity of studying this Bill and making a comparison between this Bill and the Acts in two other Provinces—the Province of Ontario and the Province of Manitoba, I think it was, which are similar. In the Province of Ontario they call the official the "Fire Marshal" as I think the official designated here was formerly called, but I think his name is apparently going to be changed.

MR. SMALLWOOD: If the honourable gentleman will allow me—I think that is being done all across Canada, making a uniform title for the job.

MR. BROWNE: The Act seems to have been in force for a number of years in other places. I don't know whether the Attorney General would say we have suffered by not having it, but as one who has many times held inquiries into the cause of fires, I am very strongly of the opinion that much good could come from a Bill of this kind, and having the investigations centralized. If I may be permitted, Mr. Speaker, to speak from my own experience—I remember having an inquiry in St. John's when I was ex officio stipendary magistrate and did the work of a magistrate as well as of a judge, and a greater amount of work I think than all the other magistrates in Newfoundland put together.

MR. CURTIS: That is right.

MR. BROWNE: At that time, I think the Attorney General knows that I am not far out in what I say, I remember holding inquiries into every fire that took place within the jurisdiction of this district and I can assure this House it had a very beneficial effect whether because of the publicity given to the cases or not, fires for that period when I was personally taking an interest in them, diminished considerably. Now I know that within recent years with the introduction of the use of oil fuel in oil stoves which were probably converted and which were not of good design, a great many fires arose on that account. I do believe that an investigation into every fire of any considerable importance has a beneficial effect of making everyone careful, and it certainly would be a great deterrent to any one of those who might have any criminal intent to set fire to a building for the purpose of collecting insurance. I believe that the records of the courts show that for a good many years now there has been very few cases of arson. I also feel quite sure that careful investigation into the cause of all fires would have the effect practically of eliminating arson altogether.

Now the point that strikes me as being different from that contained in other Acts of this kind is contained in the last sentence in the last paragraph, No. 25, where there is a conflict between the authority of the fire commissioner and that of an official of any municipal area where the authority of the fire commissioner shall prevail.

I am not sure, Mr. Speaker, that that is a good policy to follow. That means to say when all the extensive provisions of that Act are taken into consideration that the fire commissioner will have authority in St. John's in regard to granting permits for construction of buildings or alterations in buildings. Now the Municipal Council has an engineering staff and building inspectors, wiring inspectors, and therefore is well qualified from the point of view of safety for any hazard that might arise to decide whether the type of construction is suitable or whether any danger is involved. I don't believe that in a city of the size of St. John's it should be necessary to give the fire commissioner authority over the Municipal Authority so that his opinion would prevail over the engineer and the staff that is under him. At the present time I believe the engineering department of the Municipal Council in St. John's is better equipped than ever it was to deal with such questions, and therefore, the authority of the fire commissioner should not be extended to include places of this kind. I don't know how far they are able to resolve these questions in other communities outside the City of St. John's, but I do feel, within the City of St. John's he should not have that power.

Now, before I sit down I should like to pay a tribute to the Fire Department in the City of St. John's. As most people know there is a special tax levied upon the citizens of St. John's through the fire insurance companies, collected from the people who insure their homes, for the purpose of contributing towards the expenses of the fire department. It is certainly desirable that in all the larger towns there should be a fire department. I don't know if any arrangements of that kind are possible, but if there are, I think it should be extended to them, so that they may have the advantage of an up-to-date fire department.

I would like to pay tribute to the Fire Department in the City of St. John's. I have been closely associated with them for many years. I believe that they are very brave and able in the carrying out of their duties. I have known fires here in the City of St. John's which were of such a nature that it was extremely dangerous for the firemen to go into the building concerned. But nothing seems to deter them. They are full of spirit and dash and very eager to get at their work and stop the fires. They are a fine group of men, especially Supt. Codner now retired. He was very efficient, a very devoted man to his duty. I know his successor who is also a very intelligent man and also filled with spirit and keenly interested in the work, the difficult work which he has to perform.

In concluding I would say, I think there are several questions which I would like to ask, and some further things I would like to say. I think this Bill, whilst it is beneficial and should prove useful, also has some sections which I think might be changed from what they are at the present time. I have much pleasure in supporting the second reading.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I think it would be somewhat regrettable if this particular Bill were to pass second reading with a minimum of debate. It happens to be in some ways one of the most important pieces of legislation to come before this House in the present session. It was requested legislation of this type and particularly the appointment of a fire marshal, as the House is aware, by quite a number of organized bodies in the Province including notably the Newfoundland Federation of Labour and notably the Newfoundland Board of Trade, and I believe still other important bodies. The Bill, in fact creates virtually a province-wide code with regard to the prevention of fires. It creates a code and philosophy and a system for the control of fire. It is most sweeping in its jurisdiction. It does more than merely appoint a fire marshal or a fire commissioner. In section 5 of the Bill the way in which the authority is to be created and exercised is quite sweeping—the fire commissioner shall, under the direction of the Minister—that is to say, I believe under the direction of the Attorney General—keep a record of every fire reported to him with such facts and statistics and circumstances as may be required by the Minister, and he shall investigate and hold inquiries respecting the cause, origin, extent, and circumstances of fires in such areas as may be prescribed by the Minister from time to time (this is province-wide) inspect any property or community with a view to determining whether precautions against fire and the spread of fire and the means of exit in case of fire or the alarm of fire are adequate and satisfactorily maintained, with a view to directing such alterations or additions to be made and such precautions to be taken as he may deem necessary for the safeguarding of persons and property; and the fire commissioner shall review plans and specifications for the construction, alteration or repair of structures with a view to determining that proper precautions are taken against fire and the spread of fire; submit to the Minister on or before the thirty-first day of December in each year a detailed report in such form as the Minister may prescribe, setting forth particulars of all fires, fatalities or injuries by fire, investigations of fires, investigations of any precautions for arson or attempted arson, and a summary of the administration and the fire prevention and fire protection activities of the office of the Fire Commissioner, and any other information required by the Minister; render advice and make recommendations to the Minister and to Town Councils, (this means the St. John's Municipal Council, a Town Council, a Rural Council or a local government area), with respect to the establishment of fire brigades and departments and the necessary organization and equipment for such brigades or departments; for provision of adequate water supply for fire fighting purposes; the installation and maintenance of fire alarm systems and fire extinguishing equipment; the storage, sale or disposal of combustibles, explosives or other inflammable material—thus it goes on and on, I have read about half or hardly half of the matters with which the Act deals and which gives authority for the Fire Marshal under the Minister to deal with.

Now touching on the points mentioned by my honourable and learned friend, the newly elected member for St. John's West, as to interference with the City Council of St. John's: I think it cannot be denied the City Council has in recent years built up a quite satisfactory service in these matters, not perhaps completely adequate, but satisfactory as far as it goes but I see no necessity for confidence. I hope the Act provides for the appointment by the Minister or by the Commissioner as the case may be of an official of the City Council of St. John's or an official of the town councils or community councils or such local bodies as a deputy of the fire commissioner and assistant to the fire commissioner in much the same way as, for example, the Government of Canada frequently appoints provincial government officials to be Federal Government Officials for the carrying out of certain federal responsibilities. Similarly the government of a province frequently, or sometimes at least, appoint federal government officials to be provincial government officials for the carrying out of certain provincial government responsibilities. So likewise, I suggest, and I hope, it is provided for in this Act that the fire commissioner or the minister, as the case may be, might well use the existing machinery in the matter of fire prevention and fire fighting and fire alarms and all the rest of such functions. We feel that if a machinery already exists, if the City Council of St. John's has officials specifically trained in these matters, why should their services become redundant?—Why should there be any overlapping or why should there be any jealousy? Why should not the two, the provincial authority which is created under this Bill, be integrated with the various local authorities in the field of fire detection and alarms and prevention and extinction.

Mr. Speaker, it may well be that this Act, if it passes into law, will save scores and possibly hundreds (who can say) over a period of time possibly thousands of lives. If this Bill had been an Act eight or ten years ago when they had the Hull fire it is extremely doubtful if the Hull fire would have occurred. If this Act had been in force at the time many such fires should not have occurred. Because surely the fire marshal or fire commissioner exercising all these tremendously wide powers, armed with the authority of this Act or through city council officials acting as his deputies would have seen to it that the terrible state of affairs that existed with regard to that building would not have existed and would have been remedied so that a fire would have been very much less likely to break out in the first place, or having broken out would not be in the terrible danger in which it was on that lamentable occasion. I could go back still further to the time of the terrible holocaust, the terrible disaster of the K. of C. fire on Harvey Road. Now I know that no matter what laws you pass, and no matter how efficient your officials be, there will still be fires and there always will be. But surely if some decent system had existed that Knights of Columbus fire would not have been the utter disastrous thing it was when human beings were trapped. As I recall a heap of burned bodies were found underneath a window where evidently they were trapped and climbing on each other in a raging inferno, trying to get out through the window, but perished.

Mr. Frank Ryan is being appointed as fire marshal or fire commissioner. I think we are lucky to have such a man as Frank Ryan. He is a man who has taken a particularly keen interest in the matter of fire prevention and fire extinction. I believe that he actually, at his own expense, and out of sheer interest he had in the matter took a course of instructions during the war. I believe he volunteered for a considerable amount of war service in that field in the City of St. John’s during the late war. I believe he has the distinction of being the only non-professional fire fighter ever in history to come in person and address the great American Fire Association, I forget their exact name. An all-American organization comprising the fire chiefs, sheriffs and fire marshals of America, of the whole United States. A very distinct honour for such a body of professional men to accord to a non-professional such as Mr. Ryan. Now I am delighted personally that again it should have been our good fortune on this side of the House to have introduced this piece of legislation. Mr. Speaker, when the history of this period is written, I think, looking back about fifty years from now, and there are people in this Chamber who will, please God, be living and in good health fifty years from now. —It won’t be the Leader of the Opposition and myself. Fifty years from now we may conceivably be living but I doubt that we will be in the best of health, but there are undoubtedly people in this Chamber at this moment—And as they look back over the period of the first five or eight or ten years of Confederation in this country. I think, what will stand out above everything else is the fact that it was a golden time, a rich, fruitful time for new thinking, new legislation, a revolutionary period, a period when people’s minds were ripe for, were susceptible for, entirely new and fresh ideas, and I think they will be forced to admit this particular government never lagged behind the public in that field, but was in the very vanguard of reform, of progress, led the public of Newfoundland in this House, in this Legislature, and this Bill today is in this class, a distinctive piece of legislation.

I am delighted to hear that the honourable gentleman from St. John’s West is giving the Bill his blessing, and I have no doubt all the members of the Opposition will do likewise. It is one Bill in the present session that will meet the undivided approval of all my honourable friends on the Opposition, and I am all the more pleased on that account.

MR. FOGWILL: Mr. Speaker, of course the Opposition does support all legislation which comes into this House, which in our opinion is for the public good. This is a piece of legislation which in our opinion at least is for the public good. However, Sir, this is going to cost the province considerable money, and in fact, regardless of what the Premier has just said projecting his new view fifty years hence, I think it is quite possible it will be fifty years hence, according to all the different clauses of the Bill, before they can be all properly enforced, because the Bill is so far-reaching and has so many different things in it that it is going to take a considerable staff of people to look after and do the things required to be done. One thing in particular I want to mention is that part in connection with the installation of electricity. I, of my own knowledge, do know we have quite a capable person, Mr. Browne, who is the electrical inspector in the City of St. John's, and has been for the past nine or ten years. He is a quite capable person, Mr. Speaker, and is doing a fine job. However, he himself will be the first to admit, within his jurisdiction and authority it is impossible for him to look into and inspect electrical installations in some of the older buildings. I would like to point out that in these buildings quite a lot of the electrical installations are not up to standard and are quite a lot below it. Perhaps the fire commissioner could inspect these.

There is one further matter, Mr. Speaker, I would like to mention in supporting this Bill: I want to bring attention to Section 24 (f) regulating the sale, installation and maintenance of electrical equipment used or intended for use in or upon any structure or property.

I don't know how the fire marshall or fire commissioner will regulate the sale of all electrical appliances coming into the Province and put on sale in the various shops throughout the Province, because although I don't travel very much—members of the Opposition don't of course—but here in St. John's you can go into any store in the city, of any size, and buy electrical appliances of any nature which require a lot of current to operate nevertheless fitted with plugs which are so small in value that the capacity of the plugs are only half the value of the size of the appliances themselves. You can go into any shop here today and buy them. Whether they are inspected before they come in to the province or not I do not know. I have been into shops and more or less just asked the price, and asked the clerk if the plug operated the equipment successfully, and have been told, yes, which I know is wrong, because it is not in accordance with the Canadian National Electrical Code. There are many other things like that, Mr. Speaker, going on from day to day. As I have said, this is going to cost the Province quite a lot of money if it is put into effect, with the idea in mind that all clauses and regulations made under the Act are to be fulfilled within a period. They will certainly have to have quite a staff to carry out this legislation. Nevertheless, Sir, I do support the Bill.

Mr. Hollett: Mr. Speaker, it is not my intention to make any world-shaking announcement in regard to this Bill at all. After all I am not the man to make such a statement. Mr. Speaker, the Honourable the Premier has referred to this Act in a very expansive manner. I hope the commissioner would not be allowed to come in here, or at least would not be able to come in here and put out the so-called fires to which he referred. I find on page 18 of the Bill that he has within his power to make the regulations apply to structures or property owned by the Crown. I strongly suspect that he would have under this Bill, the authority to come in and put out the fires of doubtful origin and from doubtful (sometimes) causes.

 Doubtless, this is a good Bill, Sir. There are some things here which we shall bring up in committee. I think we should give some little attention to the point referred to by my honourable friend from St. John's West, the conflict of authority between the various councils throughout the country and the fire commissioner. Incidentally, Mr. Speaker, I have found through my short life-time, and incidentally I may live that fifty years the Premier referred to, but I have always found the more commissioners and more highly paid higher-ups appointed, then the job is not done, shall I say, as good in many cases as it is done before you appoint various commissioners and higher-ups. In a good many cases when it is on the shoulders of one man the job is well done. Here you have to set up a staff to carry out the various things subscribed in this Act.

 There is also another matter in regard to Section 13 “Where the Fire Commissioner deems it necessary he may direct the owner or occupant of any structure or property or both the owner and the occupant to comply with any order and may designate the person who shall bear the expense of carrying out the order or any part of the expense.”

 It seems to me there is no appeal there, and the Commissioner may make pretty well any order. I find there is an appeal from Section 17 under Section 18, but there is no appeal to anybody under this section, at least I have not seen it. It may be wrapped up somewhere in another section. I doubt, Sir, if that is good. As I have said here several times before—I was a magistrate for 25 years. During that time I had to hold many inquiries into fires all across the country or help others to do it. I think the Minister will still have to appoint the magistrate to do it; heretofore they have done it automatically.

 We believe on this side it is a very excellent Act. With regard to the Honourable the Premier’s statement to the people fifty years hence looking back upon this age of enlightenment, the golden age, that is a very apt phrase—the golden age—I heard something the other day about some man worth his weight in gold to this country. Gold is something of which the Government, Mr. Speaker, is very fond. They like the colour of gold. But this is a golden age, and all the Acts brought in here will be looked upon in the next fifty years as those which were performed in this golden age. I could recite some of these Acts, Mr. Speaker, alongside of this one here, which perhaps even those who live fifty years hence would not subscribe to an age which might be called golden. I could refer to the Seigheim Act and to various Acts with regard to the industrial programme, and there is the NALCO Act, which I believe is a heartache—

 MR. SPEAKER: The honourable gentleman is wandering.

 MR. HOLLETT: The golden age—and all the credit, of course, would come back to this particular day in which we are now living when this particular Government held office. Of course the Honourable the Premier expands very greatly when he refers to the Government. We don’t blame him for that. There have been some achievements too in connection with welfare. Yes, there have been some achievements, but I would point out, Sir, there were Acts which were passed in years gone by, to which we can look back, and we on this side can stand and look up at the honourable gentleman on the wall, with the belief that some Acts were passed which have been very beneficial to the people of this country. The Act to set up the Newfoundland Railway, the Act to set up the A.N.D. Company.

MR. SMALLWOOD: All Liberal Acts.

MR. HOLLETT: Very Liberal Acts in the strictest sense of the word—there was the Bowaters Act.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Another Liberal Act.

MR. HOLLETT: Well, if they were "Liberal"—I wonder if they were Liberal—I wish we had a Liberal Government today. I do wish we had a Liberal Government today, there is no question about that. We on the Opposition side would love to belong to a Liberal Government because our ancestors were Liberal. But there is such a thing as people who come in, Sir, and interlopec and more or less grab up—

MR. COURAGE: Mr. Speaker, to a point of order: I think the honourable member is wandering too far away from the Bill altogether.

MR. SPEAKER: The point of order is well taken. Resume your speech, please.

MR. HOLLETT: I don't wish to wander any further, Mr. Speaker. If the honourable member for Fortune Bay wishes to shut me up I will shut up and sit down.

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Speaker, in closing the debate, it is so long since I heard the Bill discussed that I almost forget the various points that have been raised. However, I would, I think, like to say just one or two things. The first is that I do not anticipate this Bill is going to call for the organization of a large staff. The Bill itself calls for the appointment of a fire commissioner, and we have the fire commissioner, and the appointment of an assistant commissioner whom we have not named, and whom, I may say, we have no intention of naming at the moment. The Act is just permissive. We can appoint such a man as and when we feel there is need. On the other hand the Minister may appoint any chief of any fire department of any municipality where a fire department is established, or it may name any municipal area with a local assistant. Of course, Mr. Speaker, in addition to those who will not be paid there will be both the R.C.M.P. and the local police and any other assistance that would be necessary.

Now with regard to the one question which the last speaker referred to—the question of appeal—I think if he will refer to Section 17, he will find that there is an appeal from Section 13, and there is a further appeal from the Minister to the Supreme Court under Section 18. So, I think that my honourable friend may satisfy himself the Minister is the appeal first and then the Supreme Court.

MR. HOLLETT: Where?

MR. CURTIS: Perhaps I am wrong. Mr. Speaker, or perhaps I can't read. I do know, Section 17 reads: "On application made to him by any interested party, before the expiration of fourteen days after the order was made, the Minister may review any order made under this part by the Fire Commissioner or by a local or special assistant to the Fire Commissioner and may amend, revoke or confirm the order.

Any decision made by the Minister on application to him under this section may be enforced under this Act in the same manner as an order of the Fire Commissioner."

That is conclusive and it goes back to Section 10. Everything from Section 10 on, is subject to appeal, every decision made by the fire commissioner or by his deputy or by anyone else on his authority is appealable, to the Minister. The Minister's decision is in turn appealable to the Supreme Court—if my honourable friend will read Section 18.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I am not going to give my honourable friend a course in interpreting Bills, I think my honourable friend to his right can do that.

MR. HOLLETT: You are perfectly right there.

MR. CURTIS: Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker, I feel relieved. The other point was raised by the Honourable Member for St. John's West with reference to Section 25. That is an interesting point, and frankly I would like to give the matter a bit of thought between now and the time we get into committee, to see whether or not decisions that have been made on the Mainland in other cases should apply here. Somebody must be in charge, and I think perhaps that somebody should be the person whose sole job it is to determine these questions. I am quite aware the Municipal Council here in St. John's has accumulated quite a staff, but I think my honourable friend will agree that in all cases they refer their fire problems to the fire department. I think you will find that is the position, and the Superintendent of the Fire Department now will be an assistant to the commissioner we appoint under this Act. I recommend this Bill to the House, Mr. Speaker, and would ask for second reading.

On motion Bill read a second time. Ordered referred to a Committee of the Whole House on tomorrow.

Second Reading of Bill, "An Act Relating to the Protection of Plants and to the Prevention of the Spread of Insects, Pests and Diseases Destructive to Vegetation."

DR. ROWE: Mr. Speaker, in rising to move second reading of this Bill I wish to make a few comments on it. I don't know if I should explain or not that the pests and insects have no political connotation at all. I don't know whether it has ever occurred to very many people that in the isolation which Newfoundland enjoyed by virtue of her being an island there were both advantages and disadvantages. I think perhaps we have not thought too much about the advantages of our isolation. When sometime in her geological history Newfoundland got separated from the Mainland of Canada, in fact I believe it has been separated many times—the Honourable the Premier reminds me he has had some little part in joining it up again, however not geographically. For instance we have, I believe, thirteen species of animals in Newfoundland of which ten or eleven belonged here always. As you know the other two or three have been brought in, but we have many species of animals right on the Mainland (again I lay myself open) which are not to be found here or never had been here on this Island, and it is a good thing. Just ten miles across the Straits of Belle Isle we have porcupine, for example, doing immense damage to the spruce trees, and we have no porcupines here. So I could go on. We have no squirrels, no chipmunk, no skunks here.

The background of this piece of legislation is very simple. We had some similar legislation prior to 1949 but at the time of union with Canada that legislation automatically was repealed. The Federal Government does have what might be called complimentary legislation applying to all Canada, but it is customary for the various provinces to have other legislation which applies specifically to the province itself and is peculiar to the province itself and applies to the province more than does the general federal legislation.

This Act called the "Protection Act" for short is designed to prevent the bringing in, and assuming that some diseases have been brought in, as far as possible, control of the spread of the new disease affecting plants, vegetables or any form of vegetation. This is seen to be necessary when it is borne in mind that there are a number of diseases of a fungus and parasitical nature which are well known on the mainland but which have never been known here. In fact only recently has a certain disease, I believe it is ring rock, but I am not sure, during the past year or two has come into prominence in Newfoundland and could very well, if not controlled as quickly as possible, become serious. A very good example is in our moose. When the Newfoundland Government introduced moose in 1904 they broke the cycle of a serious moose parasite. The Liberal Government did it, but purely by accident they broke a cycle, and as a result the four or five moose that were brought to Newfoundland were free of that disease, and all their descendants are free, so that today our Newfoundland moose are still free of disease that may have helped to destroy the moose in the State of Maine and to some extent in New Brunswick and other parts of Canada.

This legislation is enabling legislation, it gives us the control and the authority we need right now and in future, I might say this has been drawn up in collaboration with the Federal officials of the appropriate department. There may be some points that I think we can best deal with in Committee. Mr. Speaker, I don't think I need say anything more. I move second reading of the Bill.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, I have not had the opportunity of studying this Bill, but I am a bit surprised at seeing a Bill like this being introduced. My honourable friend the Minister says legislation of this kind was on the statute books before 1949, because I do remember hearing Mr. H. A. Butler, who for many years had been recognized as our prominent entomologist and I think he is still engaged in work of that kind—

DR. ROWE: Yes, with the Federal Government.

MR. BROWNE: Yes, particularly with regard to preventing ravages by the spruce bug. But I notice this afternoon this is not so much for preventing diseases—when the Minister is replying at the end of the debate maybe he will say something about the spread of diseases which are here. I remember a couple of years ago, the Minister of Agriculture, in the House of Commons in Ottawa, drawing to my attention that our potatoes were not suitable for seed potatoes because of the fact we have been suffering from canker in our potatoes in this country. Now, I remember years ago meeting agriculturists, who came to the country, at Corner Brook and on the West Coast at the time looking for seed stock, and gave the opinion the further north you go the better quality of seed you obtain. That is, better seeds can be found in the northern climates than can be found further south, certainly therefore, it is a very bad thing for our farmers if the potatoes cannot be rid of this canker. Now, there must be a great problem in this connection, it is not one with which I am expert but the Minister may know whether in his department something is being done and I would like him when he replies to tell us something about it.

As regards to the principle of the Bill, I have no objection to it. I think it is necessary and it is surprising that it has not been introduced before as it was automatically repealed after Confederation. It is desirable that there should always be on the Statute Books a Bill of this kind. As the Minister says it is principally an enabling Bill to protect against any outbreak of disease which might occur in any of the other provinces.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, this is a very interesting piece of legislation actually, because it is a Bill, which if it becomes law will give sanction to pass Acts to protect Newfoundland from Acts passed elsewhere in the world. I will give the House an example of that; about two years ago or maybe three years ago the farmers of Newfoundland were deeply worried about the low price they were then getting for potatoes due to the fact that potatoes could be imported at that time from the Mainland of Canada at lower prices than the lowest one they could get for the local potatoes, and these even lower prices on imported potatoes tended, of course, to bring down the already low price obtained for the local potato. Apparently something had to be done and I became quite alarmed about the situation which confronted Newfoundland at the time. So I held a conference in my office, this was made up of all the people who imported potatoes into Newfoundland. I personally telephoned to every importer of potatoes, Canada Packers, Swift Canadian, Wilsils, Steer’s Limited, Frank McNamara, T. & M. Winter, George Neal Limited, etc. quite a large gathering of importers. I told them very frankly that Newfoundland was extremely lucky in many ways in that she was an island and one of the advantages was that our soil was pretty clean and healthy, that I was not so sure that the soil of the neighbouring provinces or Canada was as pure and wholesome as our own and that I was really much afraid that diseases might be brought in to contaminate our good Newfoundland soil. Therefore I propose to have the Government of Newfoundland institute a system of close and very careful inspection of all potatoes that might be brought into this province, for the prevention of the contamination of our good Newfoundland soil.

Now, actually there was no Act on our Statute Books at that time. I told those importers we would christen our own baby first; that we had an extremely limited number of inspectors and we just could not afford to appoint an army of inspectors; that we would have only two or three or maybe four inspectors in all and that they would have to inspect every barrel and every bag before these potatoes could be offered for sale or moved around for the purpose of being offered for sale. In other words before any traffic could be had in potatoes they would have to be inspected and a stamp of approval of the Government of Newfoundland placed on these potatoes. They wanted to know if we would not be prepared to accept the stamp of approval of the Government of Nova Scotia. I said, of course not; we insisted on inspecting them ourselves. Then they wondered, if we had only two, three, or four inspectors, how long it would take to have potatoes inspected. I told them I did not know, but guaranteed that by Christmas they would be. One man said; but I bring them in by the trainload. Well, I said, I can't help that. You can continue to import your train load of potatoes, but dare not sell one until our inspectors inspect them, and puts the certificate of health and cleanliness of the Government of Newfoundland on these potatoes. He said, “If I have to wait until Christmas to have them inspected they will go bad.” I then told him it was for him to decide whether he would care to take those risks. The result was that the Government amply protected the soil of Newfoundland in that year. We protected the soil from any contaminated or diseased Mainland potatoes. But the point is, Mr. Speaker, we had not the legislative authority to do it, and it would have been necessary, had our action been challenged, to call the House together, and invite the House to pass the legislation which is now before it today.

MR. BROWNE: This does not read that way.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I think the honourable gentleman will find us a resourceful government, armed with the authority of this Act and with the implacable determination to protect our good Newfoundland soil from the contamination being brought in here; insofar as it is scientifically feasible we will do so. If a bird happens to perch on a farm in New Brunswick, and gets monkeying around with diseased potatoes, and happened to fly down here and brings disease with it, we cannot legislate against that situation. Such legislation would be useless. But we can legislate against things coming in now, things other than birds.

Now, Mr. Speaker, fortunately agriculture is a matter of concern both federally and provincially. Under the constitution of our country and the British North America Act, such jurisdiction is the jurisdiction of the parliament of Canada and also the jurisdiction of the legislature of the province concerned. It is unlike fish, which is entirely a federal jurisdiction. As property, fish is a provincial jurisdiction because property and civil rights are, of course, a provincial jurisdiction. But fisheries are a federal jurisdiction, as distinct from agriculture which is of concurrent jurisdiction. If agriculture were not of concurrent jurisdiction we would not have this Bill before the House today. Now there is not any doubt in the world of the constitutional validity of this Bill. We have the authority under the Constitution of Canada, to introduce this Bill, and having introduced it, if it is passed into law, we then have the authority to carry out its provisions. If we carry them out with grim determination and with vision, particularly with vision and imagination, I am quite sure that on more than one occasion the Minister will have all the necessary authority to protect the good soil of Newfoundland repeatedly against possible contamination that might be brought in here by mainland potatoes or other crops which sometimes unfortunately are flooded in here by way of dumping. That is to say, when prices of potatoes on the Mainland fall too drastically they have a very powerful tendency to flood Newfoundland with their surplus potatoes by way of frank and admitted dumping.

If the honourable gentleman, having made his own speech, would allow his leader to make up his own speech I would be able to speak without the continual undertone of conversation now going on. I think the Honourable Leader of the Opposition can make his own speech. I know they have been much improved since he has his new follower to advise him, but it ought not to be so open. They ought to do it when the House is not in session, and not quite so obviously. Yes, I am happy to see the Leader improve since he now has an adviser at his elbow there, because I like to see the tone and standards of this House raised and the Honourable gentleman is doing that since his new follower and adviser has come into the Chamber.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I do hope that my honourable friend, the Leader of the Opposition, who I know is itching to speak, will support the Bill, because it is an innocent Bill, and it has been brought in here, I assure him, with a sincere desire to help the farmers of Newfoundland, and he dare not oppose it, because if he does he will incur the displeasure of his colleague on his immediate left who represents good farmers and good people, and indeed the displeasure of his colleague on his right who represents farmers and, if he only knew, would incur his own displeasure because he too represents some farmers.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, after all that I deem it my duty, sir—But before I say that—It never dawned on me that I would be asked so soon after union with the great mainland of Canada to support a Bill to keep out insects and pests from the mainland. Insects and pests it is, sir, of all types we are told by the honourable minister. The Honourable Premier went so far as to say the little bird perching on the trees over on the mainland might fly here and deposit something of a germy nature. I may say it is an unexpected pleasure to me that in the new golden age of confederation I am invited by the Honourable the Premier, Father of Confederation, to stand on my hinders and support a Bill to keep out Canadian Insects and Pests.

But, sir, I think this Bill is aimed not only at Canadian Insects and Pests, I hope it is also aimed at insects and pests from all over the whole wide world, European Insects for instance. I see my honourable friend the Member for Ferryland who lives in around the Housing Area raise his head, because he knows as well as myself that people living in around there are pestered with the European insect or pest, with six or eight legs, sir—I am not referring to any pests with two legs. But we have European pests, sir, around the Housing Area that came from the Mainland. How they get to the Mainland of Canada I don’t know but they are called European Pests, sir. That brings me to the point on which I wish to speak: Ever since Confederation the Federal Government has been sending inspectors to try to control or wipe out these European Earwigs, as they call them. The place in around the Housing Corporation which I believe the government owns, is pestered to death with these European Travellers. They fill up basins, kitchens, dining-rooms and fill up your bed, and you find them on your clothing when going around town. I am doing my best to bring them in my hat and drop them on Water Street. I am sure the Honourable the Premier will be glad I am putting pests on Water Street. I am sure there must be some constructive ideas between the Federal and Provincial Governments. I believe the control of pests comes under the Federal Department. I know there are inspectors here, and I wonder how much conflict there will be between the inspectors to be set up by the Honourable Minister of Mines and Resources and the Minister of Agriculture at Ottawa? I expect this will be one of the cases to be decided by the Supreme Court of Canada under the Bill brought in here by the Attorney General today. That there will be conflict I have no doubt whatsoever.

Yes, sir, this is a good Bill, but as I remarked on another Bill which was brought in here today, it sets up another division, almost a department. I can visualize next a Director of Pests, and I have no doubt whatsoever that the government on the opposite side will have no difficulty whatsoever in finding a director of Pests, they have so many of them. Lately, they are trying to eliminate them, looking them up, turning them down, doing all sorts of things. European Earwigs, European Pests, Mainland Pests, and I am sure the Honourable the Premier will have no trouble to get a Director of Pests, and I have no doubt he will set up an army of inspectors to go all over the country watching little birds and getting specimens to be collected and put in the museum for generations to come or at least fifty years.

These pests have come in from the Mainland after our little Island was joined to the Great Dominion by the Honourable the Premier. After all, he did it. He alone is responsible for the pests and insects, he did it, and he did not tell the people about it five or six years ago, about the canker in potatoes brought in here or about the difficulty in marketing our potatoes. Incidentally there was something the Honourable the Premier did say about potatoes I don’t think I had better repeat, and I think he should have said it—I think it is infringing upon the Federal rights and the rights of all provinces to carry goods from one province to another.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Not diseased goods. All we are doing—we can’t prevent them coming in, but we wish to inspect them to see they are not diseased, that is all.

MR. HOLLETT: You have just brought in the Act. If he had the proper authority to do what he did there would be no need of this Bill. But May to December is a long time to inspect potatoes, and armed with that arbitrary authority which is possessed, I think wrongly by the government, the Premier or the Government took this responsibility. But I visualize a period very shortly when somebody in the opposite side will probably be sitting in the seat occupied at the present time by the Honourable the Premier who will not delegate unto himself arbitrary powers.—So I think we are wise in passing this Act, which is a good Act, and I appreciate the honourable minister's bringing it in.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Two good actions in one day.

DR. ROWE: Mr. Speaker, in closing the debate on this Bill, there are just two points: The honourable member for St. John's West referred to diseases in certain potatoes. I would like to assure him that is something which has been occupying the attention of the particular division of agriculture for some time. As a matter of fact, if there is one specific reason for this Bill more than anything else, it is diseases amongst seed potatoes. We hope with the introduction of this Bill, and with the regulations that will be made almost immediately after the passing of the Bill, we will be able to control some of the diseases which are being spread around by seed potatoes. One point of interest is that it has been found recently that certain types of potatoes are almost immune or practically immune to certain diseases such as canker, and perhaps we might find it necessary to insist that only that type of potatoes will be used for seed in this Province. That is of course something which would have to come later. This whole business, as the Premier has intimated, of inspection at the point of entry or before it arrives in Newfoundland, is something to which this Province has to give more and increasing attention, even if it involves, which I do not visualize at the moment, a great army of inspectors. But nevertheless we have to give some special attention to it.

An incident came to my attention in the past week in connection with the control and inspection—I mention it now, and don't think I am out of order—it was an incident in connection with the control and elimination of bovine tuberculosis. One of our dairy farmers had his herd examined and a number were found to be infected with bovine T.B. and were destroyed. The farmer co-operated one hundred per cent. He was compensated and bought and imported new dairy stock only to find three of the animals he had imported from a supposedly T.B. free area on the mainland, after they were brought here, were found to have bovine T.B. Three of the new herd he brought in! I cite that example now to show how important this inspection is from our standpoint. We can not always depend, I am afraid, on the other provinces to be over particular on vegetables or animals to be exported to Newfoundland. I regret to have to say that, but it is the case. In any case accidents can happen, and it is our business to try and anticipate those and anticipate the possibility that our farmers will be penalized in the ways I have suggested.

MR. BROWNE: You said three. That was out of how many?

DR. ROWE: A small group of cows. I don't know the exact number.

MR. BROWNE: Was there any follow up or any action taken on that?

DR. ROWE: Oh definitely! Yes, there was a follow up. The honourable member is referring to three animals which were recently brought in in a group and were found to be infected with T.B. These animals came from a supposedly disease free area on the Mainland. I may say that is being followed up. Not only has representation been made to the provincial Government but also very energetic representation has been made to the Federal Government, the Federal Department of Agriculture.

MR. HOLLETT: That has nothing to do with this Act.

DR. ROWE: No, I stated it as an example, and have elaborated in answer to a question asked by your honourable colleague.

Mr. Speaker, I think I have covered the principle of this Bill, and I move second reading.

On motion Bill read a second time, ordered referred to a Committee of the Whole House on tomorrow.

MR. CURTIS: Might we revert, Mr. Speaker, to the Committee of the Whole on Mothers' Allowances? Leave was given earlier for this committee to sit again.

On motion the House went into Committee of the Whole on Bill, "An Act Further to Amend the Mothers' Allowances Act."

MR. CHAIRMAN: I may say this Act has been read. The first and second clauses have been read and the first clause passed. The second clause was permitted to stand.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, the purpose of having this section stand was on account of a question I wanted to ask the Honourable Minister. Now that he is here in the House I would like to ask him if he would intimate what the cost of this is going to be. I did compare this with similar provisions in Ontario, and I notice their age limit is eighteen, and don't go beyond. I notice here it goes to 21 years. That is one question. The other question deals with the expression "Financial Assistance for other reasons" in sub-clause (f). It also appears in subparagraph 2 of paragraph 7. Then I wanted to ask if this provision of sub-section 2 applies to foster homes in which children have been recently placed?

HON. H. L. POTTLE (Minister of Public Welfare): Mr. Chairman, I shall have to ask the honourable member again to cover the points because I can't remember all the points just raised.

First with regard to cost: The whole series of amendments considered, the main difference arises out of the application of the proposed amendments having to do with incapacitated husbands—I pointed out in second reading that there is an anomaly at present, in that, within the two legislations we have Mother's Allowances and Dependents' Allowances and under the Mothers' Allowances the incapacitated husband receives only five dollars as a child, whereas under the Dependents' Allowance actually he could receive a basic amount of $25 and a possible additional amount of $20 making a maximum of $45. Now, in view of other changes we anticipate in the course of time, relating to our total legislation, we thought we should wipe out that anomaly. In other words there is a penalty in the Mothers' Allowance Act now with regard to incapacitated husbands—there are 1,384 such—and our thought is, to raise the allowance from five dollars to ten dollars a month, to provide for dressings and medical services which incapacitated husbands definitely should have. Now, if every incapacitated husband under the Act were eligible the total increased cost would be $8,000 a year.

The honourable member will note that it is anticipated that sometime in the very near future there will be Federal Legislation relating to permanently incapacitated people. If that should come into effect and if we should enter into an agreement the saving would be $60,000 a year, if we were to enter into a Dominion-Provincial Agreement.

There were four hundred and fifty children of normal parents, under the Mothers' Allowances Act that were taken off the list during the past year because they had reached the age of 17 years. I would like to make clear a point here, which the honourable member raised on second reading, or still earlier, the question of this being a money Bill. He raised that point in relation to the age being 17 years as against 16 years in earlier legislation. I presume he had only the Consolidated Statutes on hand. There has been a Bill passed since consolidation, No. 11, 1952, which raised the age from sixteen to seventeen years right across the board.

Now, to return to my point: There were 450 children last year taken off this list because they reached the age of 17 years and we anticipated maybe ten per cent of these might have to be kept on because we are expanding the cause of benefits. If ten per cent are kept on about $2,700 a year will be spent.

With regard to foster children, there are only 314 allowances of that kind paid. With respect to that point, some ten or fifteen per cent, probably not more than ten or fifteen per cent all together of that 314 would be eligible under that amendment and the total would be less than one thousand dollars a year. Now, that leaves the matter of cost—now I wonder if the honourable member could just repeat the other questions?

MR. BROWNE: The other questions were, whether they applied to those in foster homes where children are placed, and are they kept there above the age of 17 years? Does this section apply to a woman who is regarded as a foster mother? Or as a guardian?

DR. POTTLE: That applies not to boarding homes where the Director has put them but to a family where the feminine head of the household is not the mother of the child necessarily, it may be the guardian of the child or it may be the aunt.

MR. BROWNE: Thank you.

Clause carried.

On motion the Committee rose and reported having passed the Bill without amendment.

Report received. Bill ordered read a third time on tomorrow.

First Readings:

Of Bill, "An Act Further to Amend the Public Utilities Act." Read a first time, ordered read a second time on tomorrow.

MR. CURTIS: I move, Mr. Speaker, the remaining orders of the day do stand deferred, and that the House at its rising do adjourn until tomorrow Wednesday at 3:00 of the clock.

MR. BROWNE: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, is the address in reply going to be continued?
MR. SMALLWOOD: The honourable gentleman who moved the adjournment of the debate is unfortunately absent as he was detained in court today, and was not therefore able to be present and make his speech. I believe he is the last member of the House who wishes to speak in the debate, in which case he will close the debate probably tomorrow.

MR. BROWNE: If the Minister of Finance were here I was going to ask if he could give us any information as to when the estimates will be ready?

MR. SMALLWOOD: My honourable colleague has just gone out of the Chamber for the moment. My understanding from him is that he hopes to bring down his budget, since it is our practice to bring the budget and estimates simultaneously to the House together with estimates within two or three weeks. I don't know, Mr. Speaker, if I am a little out of order, I fear I am, but I don't know how long the interim supply is for or how near we are to the exhaustion of that amount. Maybe we will have to ask the House for a little additional interim supply, depending on how long we have to go before the estimates and budget are ready. I have no doubt after the estimates are brought down it will be three or four weeks before they are adopted and the appropriation Bill passed for Royal Assent, and it would not be until Royal Assent was given that any further money would become available to the Government for carrying on, in which case it might become necessary in the meantime to apply to the House for some additional interim supply. But I don't know, because frankly I don't remember now the period for which it was asked and how much of that has passed and how much time remains of that period. It seems to me at the moment to be a little doubtful that the appropriation Bill can be passed unless the members on the opposite side of the House don't intend to debate the budget. But I hope my honourable friends, in the interest of good, healthy debate on the estimates will give us a little interim supply if necessary, as the commitments of the Government must be carried out.

On motion: The House at its rising adjourned until tomorrow, Wednesday, at 3:00 of the clock.

WEDNESDAY, April 28th, 1954.

The House met at three of the clock in the afternoon, pursuant to adjournment.

Presenting Petitions

HON. J. R. CHALKER (Minister of Education): I beg leave to table a petition re the Pentecostal Assembly and ask consent that this petition be referred to the Department concerned.

HON. J. R. SMALLWOOD (Prime Minister): I rise to give my unqualified support to the prayer of this petition. In Newfoundland, for a great many years, we have had in our school system what is generally known as the denominational idea or the denominational system. Before anyone in this building was born, that denominational system was introduced into Newfoundland—indeed, before anyone now living, I believe, in Newfoundland was born, the denominational system was introduced into the school system of this island. That is the system and inevitably, inexorably and undeniably the moment any denomination—certainly unanswerable.
tainty any Christian denomination (and possibly non-Christian)—but certainly any Christian denomination comes to have a considerable number of citizens adhering to it, believing in it, then that denomination, if there is any logic, if there is any democracy, is fully entitled, as of right, as of justice, fully entitled to the same rights precisely as in any other denomination.

Now in Newfoundland, I know of no priority of rights for any religious denomination. I think the principle and practice is to have equality of rights as between the religious denominations. There are people elsewhere who look askance at that principle which is exemplified here. I think that the practical experience of Newfoundland is that the best way to remove denominationalism and sectarianism from the field is to give all denominations their full rights. No more, or less—absolute equality before the law. I do not see how any Newfoundlander can argue against that. I have heard powerful arguments against the denominational system, as such, but given the system—once you have the system, you must be logical about it. You must be consistent about it. You cannot say, "We will pick and choose the denominations to whom we, as legislators, can give rights."

And so, Mr. Speaker, I have great pleasure in supporting the prayer of this petition.

HON. L. R. CURTIS (Attorney General): I come from a district where Pentecostal Assemblies are very largely represented. Indeed, in some sections they constitute the only religious denomination; and I have received from the District and neighbourhoods, many requests to support this petition presented by the Honourable the Minister of Education.

I am sorry I did not know that this petition was coming up today, because I would have liked to have brought along the various telegrams and letters I received, asking my support; but if the facts are as alleged, then in simple justice to these people who signed the petition I have no alternative than to commend their petition to the Government, and I heartily support it.

HON. F. W. ROWE (Minister of Mines & Resources): Mr. Speaker, I rise to support the petition tabled by the Honourable Minister of Education. There are two or three comments I would make. First of all I feel it is long overdue. My views, as a matter of fact are a matter of record, because I believe I was the first, at least in our own denomination, to advocate that our Pentecostal friends should have representation on the board. I believe I said something about that in 1943 and that Pentecostal teachers should be employed, and the Superintendents of Education concurred with my views. As a result we did employ Pentecostal teachers. But that was only a fractional measure. I have always felt that there has been some injustice here in this situation. As the House knows, I have made a fairly detailed study of our education in Newfoundland, and I cannot find any similar case of discrimination. This matter of discrimination, Mr. Speaker, which has existed in the past in future I sincerely hope will be eliminated—for example, if I may recall to the House, it was in 1843 we first had a division in education, until then there was just two, Roman Catholic and Protestant and in 1874 after almost twenty years and prolonged debate here in this House, sometimes almost violent, a straight denominational system was adopted. Now in order to implement Act a census was taken and showed the population of Newfoundland divided denominationally into Roman Catholic 64,000 (rough figures), Church of England 69,000, Methodists 37,000 and Presbyterian 1,000 and Congregational 416. It is interesting to note, in spite of the very small proportion of Presbyterian and Congregational citizens their educational rights were recognized by this very House of Assembly. As a matter of fact they were given the right to create their own academy right here in St. John's, and it existed right down to comparatively modern times. Then again in 1892 this Legislature recognized the existence of the religious body, the Salvation Army, and its educational rights were granted by this House. So that, as the Premier has stated, we must be consistent. As far as the Pentecostal Assemblies are concerned I know of not better citizens in the province—and I happen to have in my own district several communities which are all Pentecostal, one on the Labrador to which I have already referred to in this House, also Happy Valley and Port Hope Simpson have large communities. But the educational work on the Labrador is suffering, as it does, I am sure, in certain other districts in Newfoundland because our Pentecostal friends do not enjoy educational rights and privileges. They have a tremendous amount of energy and interest—nobody can dispute that, which should be mobilized in the cause of education, yet partly because of technical difficulties that interest is not being made use of. I don't think I need to labour the point any more, Sir, except to say I give this my unqualified support.

HON. DR. H. L. POTTL (Minister of Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I am interested in the petition which has been presented to the House by my friend the Minister of Education, and supported by certain of my colleagues. From my several years of experience in the Department of Education, both as an executive officer and as Commissioner for Home Affairs and Education, I have some first-hand experience of how awkward it is and how inefficient it is for the denomination concerned not to have any direct representation in the department, and be recognized there for the distribution of educational funds by their own hands, especially when the denomination in question represents such a large proportion of our people as are in fact represented by the Pentecostal Assemblies of Newfoundland.

I do not wish to add indefinitely to the remarks already made except to say that in the district which I represent there is a very large concentration of Pentecostal Assemblies, particularly in the community of Victoria near Carbonear, where there is in fact one of the largest concentrations of that denomination outside of St. John's. They have petitioned me to endorse the petition on behalf of their denomination which might at any time be presented to this House, and that I gladly do, and I am expressing that support in the words which I have just spoken to the House.

MR. M. HOLLETT (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I just want to add my support to this petition presented by the Honourable Minister of Education. I would not have known just exactly what he wanted us to do had I not received a brief which apparently accompanied the petition just a few moments ago, and I merely had to glance at it to give it my support, and I feel, Sir, the support of the whole Opposition. I want the House to bear with me for one minute while I read one or two paragraphs: "Our early contacts with schools in Newfoundland were vile and very distressing. Teachers were put out of schools because they no longer belonged to the denominations running the schools, members turned off boards of education for the same reason, and the same applies today where like situations arise, schools are closed, not because of lack of schools or school children but because Pentecostal children were involved. That means that for some years we had to supply our own teachers without help from the Department of Education."

We all know, Mr. Speaker, that is wrong. I am glad to pay a tribute to a departed friend of all of us here, a friend of Newfoundland, and of education. This statement says, Sir, the situation pertaining was worse until the late Mr. I. J. Samson, then Chief Executive Officer for Education cut across all red tape and set conventions and in the name of common sense and fair play permitted us to build with support at Windsor and later Salt Pond." Since I have seen that much, Sir, I have no hesitation in assisting these people to gain proper recognition from the Department of Education, particularly in view of the fact there are so many here. Of course it is quite obvious the Government can't set up separate boards of education for every small religious body that comes into the country, but I believe when they have grown to a certain size they must have some representation on the Board of Education. We on this side of the House, Sir, support this petition.

Incidentally, before I sit down, I might say, Sir, this is not politics at all, but we are very happy that we have in our West End District the Headquarters of this religious body, so I give an invitation to all the members of the Government to come along to service sometime. I am quite sure they would be glad to see us up there.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I have already been there.

MR. B. MORGAN: Mr. Speaker, in supporting this petition I would like to point out that in the District of Green Bay we have some fifteen Pentecostal Assemblies, that is you will find fifteen settlements in the district with branches of this Faith. I know something of their difficulties in trying to get their children into schools, and I also know about some of the work which they have done towards the building of the schools, rebuilding of old schools, yet without any say in the management of these schools.

Like the Honourable the Attorney General I have had a number of representations made to me from these settlements to support this petition, and I very gladly and wholeheartedly do so.

HON. C. H. BALLAM (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, I would like to associate myself with the previous speakers in supporting this petition on behalf of the various Assemblies in Humber District. We have several Assemblies there, one quite large one in Deer Lake. I, like the previous speakers, have had several requests in the form of letters etc. asking me for my support of this petition presented by the Honourable Minister of Education, and I go along with the pre-
HON. W. J. KEOUGH (Minister of Fisheries and Co-operatives): Mr. Speaker, I have nothing of substance to add to the discussion. I merely rise to indicate my support of the petition. Here we have a very serious matter referred to this House, a religious denomination in Newfoundland of a considerable congregation. Apparently from a matter of conscience with them now as citizens of this Province they have every right to approach their elected representatives on any issue, but when the representatives in this House are approached by those whom they do represent on a matter of conscience, then we must naturally give it careful scrutiny and very mature and balanced consideration. Today the only action that the House can take is to refer the petition to the department concerned. When the department concerned moves to examine the prayer of the petition with a view to making recommendations to the Government, undoubtedly it will take note of the very serious considerations that the petition has had in this House. Of course the department concerned will also be obliged to look at the administrative implications of the prayer of the petition, and how the present denominational structure would be affected if the prayer of the petition were granted. However, the final say in the matter will not rest with the department concerned, but will go back to the Government for consideration and those concerned may have every assurance when it comes back to the Government for decision it will have the consideration every elected Government must give to every matter of conscience referred to it by the people it is elected to represent.

MR. M. BUTTON: Mr. Speaker, I rise, Sir, to give my support to the petition brought before this House by the Honourable Minister of Education. I beg leave, Sir, to give my full support to this petition, due to the fact that I have in my district also Pentecostal Assemblies—at Sunnyside and Hans Harbour and New Chelsea. I give the petition my full support.

MR. I. MERCER: Mr. Speaker, it is quite evident that this is a non-partisan issue, and I am very glad to see and to hear the Honourable Leader of the Opposition supporting this petition. I too rise to support it. I feel it is non-partisan and provincial, because I also have received representations asking my support of this petition not only from my own district but from several other districts in the country. They are beyond doubt an established religious order in Newfoundland. Therefore there is absolutely no reason why they should not be represented in their educational efforts. I would presume, Sir, with all the support which has come from both sides of this House to the Honourable Minister of Education, that he will do his best to see that this denomination is given due recognition.

MR. G. JANES: Mr. Speaker, my thoughts, Sir, on denominational education in Newfoundland, I think, are... pretty well known to this House. In the meantime I am going to support this petition presented here today by the Honourable Minister of Education. I do so, Sir, on a matter of principle. I think the principle was set forth by the Honourable the Premier himself when he stated that as long as we did have denominational education in Newfoundland, every denomination in Newfoundland has a right to be represented. Today it is the Pentecostal Assemblies, of which we only have two in the District of Fogo, two small Assemblies. Tomorrow it will be the Jehovah Witnesses and the next day the Baptists and the next day it could be the Christian Scientists and probably some will gather in the name of Billy Sunday and ask here for schools, and this House of Assembly, Sir, would have no alternative but to hear the petition and give it serious consideration for that reason, and on a matter of principle. If we are to give denominations already here the right to operate schools I think we have no alternative other than to give that support and that right to every denomination which is prepared to bring in a petition here.

On motion petition tabled and referred to the department concerned.

Giving Notice of Motion

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the Honourable Minister of Health, who I see happily is present—I thought he was still ill and in bed, I give notice I will on tomorrow ask leave to introduce a Bill entitled "An Act to Amend the Health and Public Welfare Act."

MR. HEFFERTON: Mr. Speaker, I give notice I will on tomorrow ask leave to introduce a Bill, entitled, "An Act Relating to the St. John’s Memorial Stadium."

I give notice I will on tomorrow ask leave to introduce a Bill, "An Act to Empower the St. John’s Municipal Council to Raise a Loan by the Issue of Bonds for the Purpose of Financing the Erection of a Stadium Building in the City of St. John’s."

Giving Notice of Question

(69) MR. BROWNE (St. John’s West)—To ask the Honourable the Minister of Labour to lay on the table of the House the following information:

1. Who are the members of the Workmen’s Compensation Board?
2. What was the date of their appointment, and what is the present salary of each?
3. What was the age of each member of the Board on his appointment?

(70) MR. HOLLETT—To ask the Honourable the Minister of Economic Development to lay on the table of the House the following information:

1. Give an itemized list of equipment and machinery shipped to Newfoundland by the German firm of MIAG, for the various new industries, including that shipped for the Cement Plant, and the Gypsum Plant, together with invoice values of said machinery and equipment.
2. What rate of insurance was charged on said machinery, and what was the amount of insurance premium on each shipment of machinery and/or equipment.
3. Name the Company or Companies who carried said insurance and also the persons or Companies to whom insurance was paid by the Government.

Answers to Questions

Question No. 66:

MR. SMALLWOOD: (1) J. R. Smallwood; Hon. L. R. Curtis; Hon. E. S. Spencer; Hon. C. H. Ballam; Dr. Alfred Valdmanis; Managing Director Mr. Ernest Leja.

(2) No change has been made since that date except that Dr. Valdmanis ceased to be a director of the company or a member of the Board.

(3) I regret that I did not notice until now the fact that was asked, but the answer is that when he handed me his resignation in writing as Chairman of the Board of NALCO he included his resignation as a member of the Board of the Atlantic Gypsum, which was some five or six or eight weeks ago. If the honourable gentleman still wants the actual date I can get it for him.

(4) Gustof Carl Weis, and it is German, and of course the German “W” is pronounced “Y” and Dr. Oswald Wyss, a Swiss. Dr. Wyss is a banker, Mr. R. Hanhardt of Switzerland. J. T. Hacker of Montreal of International Building Products of Montreal and Dr. Valdmanis.

(5) The Company informs me the answer is no. I think perhaps the House will not have difficulty in realizing that certain events were quite recent and that whatever may follow it is a little early at the moment to expect anything to follow in that regard, if not impossible, the board could not have held a meeting. Two of the directors are in Switzerland, one in Montreal, so that the Board cannot have had a meeting recently.

(6) Yes. Mr. Braun Wogan, Director of Hanning Electric, and Mr. Ludwig Grube, a director of the Superior Rubber Company. I don't know, Mr. Speaker, that I am called upon to answer a question such as this which might be any three or four names drawn at random. I don't know that I am required to give the answers. However, in view of the situation, and not creating any precedent, so long as it is understood clearly that the Opposition has not the right at any time it feels like it to pluck any five or eight or ten names out of a telephone directory or newspaper and fling them at the Government and say: “Will the Government tell us where these people are?” Provided it is understood in answering I create no precedent I am quite happy to give the information. Dr. Rothe is here in the City of St. John's. He arrived here this morning from Corner Brook. He went to Corner Brook some days ago from St. John's to attend to business connected with the cement plant and returned here today and will be here for some days, and then will go to Montreal.

Mr. Max Braun Wogan spent six or eight weeks in the General Hospital at St. John's suffering from a disease which some six or eight or nine doctors were not able to diagnose. He then flew to Germany, to Munich, and spent some two months in hospital where his disease was diagnosed and curative treatment was successfully given so that a few weeks ago he was released from the hospital and has since been convalescing in Switzerland, but is now at this moment en route to Holyrood to resume his duties. His health, I am glad to say, is virtually fully restored. Mr. Braun Wogan, I may say, was as close to death as a human being can very well come and not die. He went away to a mere shadow of himself. He is a big built man and he went away to a veritable skeleton, going for weeks and weeks on end without eating or drinking. However, I am glad to say he is restored virtually to full health.

Mr. Grube is due to arrive in St. John's the day after tomorrow. He is the owner of the Superior Rubber Company, and his knowledge of English is still limited. Mr. Braun Wogan, one of whose parents was English and whose father was a banker in London for a good many years, speaks perfect English, with hardly a trace of an accent. He is Mr. Grube's right-hand man. As soon as Mr. Braun Wogan is able to return to his duties Mr. Grube is coming out for a few days or a week to help to get the operation moving more swiftly at Holyrood than it has been during the absence of both these gentlemen.

May I say, Mr. Speaker, in this connection that some pretty foul and contemptible things are said and done in Newfoundland as elsewhere. And one of the foulest ones, one of the most contemptible ones is the rumour that has been circulated to which my honourable and learned friend, the member for St. John's East, has referred in this House—Yes, a pretty contemptible thing, and I don't know if there is any defense against it.

I suppose we shall have to resign ourselves to it. But we will survive it. We will live through it. These industries will prosper in spite of it.

(7) Who is the President of the Canadian Machinery Holding Trust and who are the Directors of said Company?

The President is Mr. Paul Hagenback and Mr. Walter Buchler is a Director. I am not saying these are the only ones. They are the only ones of whom I have knowledge. I am inclined to doubt that there are others. I could not say that there are not.

MR. SPEAKER: I would like to comment that the Chair has the right to delete improper questions or refer them back to the questioner. Question 6 already referred to was permitted to stand, although strictly speaking, the Chair has jurisdiction to rule against it. This question seemed analogous and it was up to the Minister concerned to answer it or not.

Question No. 67—In course of preparation.

Question No. 68—

MR. CURTIS: I wish to table a report of the Commission of Public Utilities. I may say I have at the office copies for every honourable member.

Question No. 64—In course of preparation.

Question No. 65—

MR. SMALLWOOD: The Minister is absent and will be absent until Saturday; I ask that the questions standing in his name be allowed to stand.

HON. G. J. POWER (Minister of Finance): I beg leave to table answer to Question No. 61, also Sections 1 and 8 of Question No. 24. Other sections of this question have been referred to the Department of Economic Development.

QUESTION NO. 24:

(1) To Government by Canadian Machinery Holding Trust—$200,000.
To North Star Cement by Canadian Machinery Holding Trust—No information in our records.

(2), (3), (4), (5), (6) & (7). These should be directed to the Honourable the Minister of Economic Development.

(8) (a) $97,000. With reference to this amount, the relevant Clauses of the Indenture and Agreement read as follows:

(Indenture) —"... the Mortgagor will:

1. Insure and keep insured against loss by fire to their full value with a reputable fire insurance company those parts of the plant hereby mortgaged which might be endangered by fire and to make the loss thereunder payable to the Mortgagor and to produce upon demand the receipts for all premiums payable in respect thereof; it is hereby agreed that the buildings themselves need not be insured under this covenant except the office building, the laboratory and the garage."

(Agreement) —"9. The Company will insure those parts of the plant which are liable to loss by fire to their full insurable value and will pay the premiums therefore and make the loss payable to the Government or as it may direct."

Attention is drawn to the fact that the plant is completely constructed of concrete and steel.

(b) Bowring Brothers Limited.

(c) Yes.

MR. SMALLWOOD: In reply to another question directed to me by the honourable member for St. John's East—the member who is not a lawyer and who is momentarily absent from the Chamber; it is No. 55 on the Order Paper of Tuesday, April 20th. It took a little while to get it from the Department of Finance. I received it this forenoon. The question is: "What is the number of trips made by the Premier since April 1st, 1952? When were these trips made and how long did they last? Give the names of the places visited, the purpose for which each such trip was undertaken, and the cost of each trip?"

I am assuming this refers only to trips made outside the Province. The number of trips made is 18, from April 1, 1952 to date. In May, 1952, I visited Montreal and elsewhere—(20 days); in July—New York and Washington—(16 days)—and 1 may add, Ottawa and Montreal. In August, same year, I visited Europe—a half-dozen countries—(62 days)—November, same year—visited Europe—(23 days); in December visited New York—(4 days). And so the number of trips in 1952 was five. In 1953 the number of trips is 11—4 trips to Ottawa; one to Halifax; one to London for the Coronation and back via Toronto (36 days); 5 trips to New York. I may say, Mr. Speaker, that the costs are also shown here.
This includes the expenses of my wife who accompanied me—our steamship passage to and her steamship passage back, and my passage back here.

I might explain that the amount involved depends on the length of time. On the whole of this travelling, since I have been in office, I have travelled nearly one-quarter million miles, and I am out of pocket on my own expenses, at least $3,000. The Treasury has paid for travelling, $3,000 less than it cost me; the rest came out of my salary. That is the case of any Minister and indeed with any civil servant. I am out of pocket a very considerable amount.

HON. W. J. KEOUGH (Minister of Fisheries and Co-operatives) Tabled answer to No. 58.

Question—What experiments were made in each year since 1949 with various types of fishing vessels owned or leased by the Newfoundland Government or jointly with the Federal Government?

Answer—1949-50—No Experimental Fishing.

1950-51—Government contracted with the firm of Huginn Ltd. for the carrying out of exploratory herring fishery for a two month period. The costs of chartering the vessel and purchase of herring nets amounted to $7,593.

1951-52—Government chartered two Labrador vessels, the "Ruby L. M. Smith," and the "Hubert G. Smith" for the purpose of converting them for long lining and Danish seining.
The Matthew II was also operated as an experimental multi-purpose fishing vessel. Her operations included exploratory fishing and demonstrations in long lining and Danish seining. This vessel also served as a training ship for fishermen interested in gaining experience in the aforementioned methods of fishing.

1952-53—The Matthew was chartered to a private commercial fishing company who, in addition to operating the vessel commercially, undertook to carry out exploratory fishing with Government undertaking to guarantee 60 per cent of the net loss on the entire operation. Government was not called upon to implement its guarantee.

1953-54—No experimental fishing was carried out.

Question—Give the cost of purchase or hire of each boat with the value of returns if any.

Answer—No vessels were purchased for experimental fishing. The cost of construction and equipment of the "Matthew II" was $36,683. The costs of chartering the "Hubert G. Smith" and the "Ruby L. M. Smith" were $3,750 and $1,750 respectively.

It is not in the public interest that the details of the returns from experimental fishing be made public, as such information might be construed as being the actual returns from commercial operations of these vessels which would convey an entirely erroneous impression of the practicability of commercial operation with such vessels and methods of fishing.

Question—How many long liners have been used and what was the cost of each and what was the value of the returns of each?

Answer—Three vessels were used: The "Matthew II," and the "Hubert G. Smith" and the "Ruby L. M. Smith." The cost of the "Matthew II" was $36,683 fully equipped. The costs of the "Hubert G. Smith" and the "Ruby L. M. Smith" are unknown. Government operated these vessels under charter. As stated in the reply to the question immediately above the disclosure of returns from the operation of these vessels is not in the public interest for the reasons stated.

MR. BROWNE: On Wednesday, April 7, I tabled a question asking the Honourable the Minister of Economic Development to lay on the table of the House all bills, invoices, receipts, vouchers and payrolls concerning (a) the construction and (b) the equipment of the plant for the manufacture of hardwood products at Donovan's (Newfoundland Hardwoods Ltd.) The Honourable Minister promised to bring it down and then discovered the bills were not up-to-date. I understood these bills and vouchers were available at the Department of Finance but they were not. At least, I attended at the Minister of Finance's office and the clerk on hand produced the bills that were there. As a matter of fact, there were a small number of bills there—there was a balance of $2,800,000 not shown. Some of the documents were just stubs of cheques without any voucher or authority to show for them. These bills or vouchers must be in the Department somewhere and I wonder if the Honourable Minister would make enquiries?

MR. SMALLWOOD: In connection with the matter mentioned by my honourable and learned friend, I am very sorry to have to say that this forenoon I received a most unpleasant report from the Department of Finance.
regarding the visit of my honourable and learned friend to the Department last night. I had informed my honourable and learned friend that he would be welcome to go to the Department and to examine the microfilms of the records they had there in connection with his question regarding the Newfoundland Hardwoods Ltd. Just what they had there I do not know. The Department of Economic Development has no accounting system. We operate through other Departments as far as accounting is concerned. I am informed that my honourable and learned friend, accompanied by the Leader of the Opposition went to the Department of Finance. Whether the honourable and learned member was there first and the Leader turned up later, I do not know; but at any rate they both turned up at the Department, accompanied by a stranger who is not a member of this House. No invitation was ever extended to the honourable gentleman to bring along strangers or non-members to look at the records in the Department of Finance; and no intention exists for the Government to extend any such invitation. But, our honourable friends, without invitation, brought with them a stranger, a member of the general public, who sat in and began to examine the documents. The clerk who was left there to show them what was there, was, at the time, manipulating a microfilm machine—an outfit that shows each form on a long film which magnifies on a screen—and the clerk had occasion to leave the room to go to another room and as he was about to leave the room, so he says, the honourable and learned gentleman began to manipulate the machine which contained the film that contained the microfilm records. Just what it did have in there or what it had to do with the matter, I do not know or care. I do know that the honourable gentleman took over the operation of the machine and he began to view records that had no bearing either good, bad, or indifferent on the Newfoundland Hardwoods; and that clerk in question expostulated with the honourable gentleman and asked him to desist. He refused to do so, whereupon the clerk dismantled the machine so that the honourable and learned gentleman could no longer manipulate it and he further refused to leave the room to bring in any further material. I have the report that the clerk refused to leave the room because the honourable and learned gentleman insisted upon operating the machine; he persisted in examining records which had no bearing on the matter which he was invited to see. I take a very serious view of this. We have positively nothing to hide. What is done is done by due process of the law; but we will not have members bringing strangers up there—members on either side—and still less non-members taking charge of government records. Before anything further is done, I will look into that.

MR. BROWNE: I am replying to the statement made by the Honourable the Premier about my bringing in a stranger. I felt, as I wanted to see thousands of bills in connection with the question which I tabled here, I should bring along someone familiar with accounting and I asked permission of one of the members of the Department to do so.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Was it a responsible official?

MR. BROWNE: You can find that out. You can put it before a Standing Committee. The honourable gentleman will do me the honour of accepting my statement as being correct.
The Premier stated that the clerk informed him that when he, the clerk, left the room—

MR. SMALLWOOD: I said "when about to leave the room."

MR. BROWNE: I said to the clerk, "How do you work this machine?" and at the same time I put my hand on the lever. I told him he was a very good clerk to be able to do it; and very properly so. It was curiosity that prompted me to turn the lever; the machine was going so fast I could not see anything and although the light was on, I did not see a thing. I saw absolutely nothing other than vouchers to which I have referred. What I am interested in is seeing copies of these bills and vouchers in the amount of $3,000,000. They are not there. The Premier says they are not in the Economic Development Department. Where are they?

MR. SMALLWOOD: The honourable gentleman does not know how many are in the Finance Department. I am informed that the clerk wanted to leave the room to bring in more material. I am further informed today by the Comptroller of the Treasury that the bulk of the material is in possession of the Auditor General. I am Minister of Economic Development. I do not lug around tens of thousands of records. They are not kept in the custody of my Department. They are where they belong. They are in the possession of the Auditor General and I will not consent to have these removed. The Auditor General was requested by me to make an audit of the affairs of the building of the plant and the costs of it and all the vouchers were turned over to him. I will not consent to have them removed; I will, however, extend an invitation to the honourable gentleman to go to the office and if the Auditor General will arrange, after office hours, I will order them laid open to the whole of the Opposition; and, in office hours, if the Auditor General is agreeable, also after office hours; but not to strangers. If the honourable gentleman thinks there is any graft, any robbery or embezzlement, the thing to do is to move that a Royal Commission be set up.

I have sufficient confidence in the honesty with which this thing was done to believe there is to be no need of a Royal Commission. When I think there is need of a Royal Commission I will see there is a Royal Commission. When I see the need of an R.C.M.P. Investigation, I get the R.C.M.P.

MR. BROWNE: And when you don't see?

MR. SMALLWOOD: When I don't see—I am the Leader of the Administration until the people fire me out.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, I have been brought into these unpleasant statements made relative to the honourable member for St. John's West and myself.

MR. SPEAKER: Before the honourable gentleman proceeds let me say this—The honourable and learned member for St. John's West asked a question in reply to which the honourable the Premier made a certain statement. The House in turn listened to the explanation of the honourable the Premier made a certain statement. The House in turn listened to the explanation of the honourable member for St. John's West; and it is my opinion the House is satisfied with what has been offered by the honourable the Premier and the explanation offered by the honourable member for St. John's West. Therefore, there is no point of debate.
before the Chair. I merely say that for the guidance of the honourable members of the Opposition.

MR. HOLLETT: I thank you, Mr. Speaker. I then rise to a point of privilege on the statement just made by the Honourable the Premier, since my name, as Leader of the Opposition, was brought into it. Now, how contemptible the Honourable the Premier wishes to show the Opposition in the eyes of the public, I don't know. The statement which was made by the Honourable the Premier would tend to show that the honourable member for St. John's West and myself are contemptible curs.

Sir, I arrived at that place last night, and shall never go there again, and shall not accept the invitation of the Honourable the Premier to see these accounts for myself. I arrived there at about a quarter to eight o'clock and my honourable friend was there and persons to assist him were already there, as also a clerk, and I say this also, I thought he was a most reliable officer. He produced a handful of cheque vouchers. We examined them. We were only given, Sir, the vouchers showing purchases from Chester Dawe Limited. We were told they were not available and he said he thought they would be up at the Auditor General's Department. Then this clerk took the honourable member and myself and the other person out to the other room to show us his machine and what was in it. He said he had something in these machines and I stood up while he was opening this machine, and I said what was that—I did not have my glasses at the time. I asked him to wait just a minute while I put on my glasses, and I saw "D. Jamieson." He turned it off quickly and I did not get a chance to see anything else, and I for one don't want to see—that is the true story. If anybody told any story differently he is a contemptible cur and liar. Neither the honourable member nor myself would attempt to do the thing described there this evening, and I deplore very much that the Honourable the Premier had to get up and say such a thing.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I said this incident was reported to me by the Assistant Deputy Minister of Finance and what the clerk reported to the Deputy Minister of Finance was what I reported to the House, what Mr. Channing told me, the clerk reported to him. He passed it on to me and I passed it on to the House.

MR. HOLLETT: I take it, Mr. Speaker, that is not sufficient evidence to damn an honourable member of this House. I deplore very much that the Leader of the Government should stoop to such a thing, and I throw it back in his teeth.

MR. SPEAKER: Order:

Adjourned debate on the Address in Reply to the Speech from the Throne.

MR. MERCER: Mr. Speaker, I had the honour to move at the opening of this House that a committee be appointed to draft an address in reply to the Speech from the Throne. The debate ensued and a large number of this House, both from the Opposition and Government side, took part. I have now, Sir, the honour to close that debate. In doing so, Mr. Speaker, I intend to enter into the debate myself. I sincerely hope, Sir, that I do not too seriously offend certain reporters of the daily press who have complained that it was monotonous and repetitious to hear so many members of the Government side of the House speaking on the debate. I can only say this, Sir, that it is not my intention to be very long. At the same time you cannot blame the members on the Government side of the House for so few people on the Opposition you will have to go back to 1951 and blame the people of the country for electing so few of them.

In entering this debate I cannot, even with the fear in my mind of being called boring and repetitious, do other than refer again to the very opening day of this House. Mr. Speaker, I am sure that all will agree that the opening session of this honourable House in the past and I sincerely hope in the future it will continue to be a rather solemn, dignified and even friendly occasion, an unpartisan occasion, an occasion when the only people in the House outside of the members of the Government and the members of the Opposition; the only people admitted to the House are by invitation. First of all these invitations are to members of Church and State and after that to perhaps wives and relatives and friends of the members on both sides of the House. That, too, Sir, has long been recognized and practised. It is an occasion when there is no debate. This time, at the opening of this session, I had the honour to move the address in reply, or that a committee be appointed to draft the address in reply. My honourable colleague, the member for Burgeo and LaPoile, had the honour to second the motion. There were only two other speakers following upon the seconding of the motion, the honourable Leader of the Opposition who makes a brief comment on the Speech from the Throne, and, as usual, congratulates the mover and seconder. Following that the Premier, or Leader of the Government speaks. Now at that time nobody can make or challenge any statement made by any person nor reply to any challenge, yet, sir, that was the very time when the honourable Leader of the Opposition chose to throw a sling shot at me. He said, after very politely congratulating me on moving the address in reply, "I wonder when I was introducing the honourable and learned member for St. John's West to this House of Assembly (which he had done just prior to my moving the address in reply) I wonder what the honourable member for the District of Port de Grave thought when I brought him in here on the other side of the House?"

Now, Mr. Speaker, in accordance with the dignity accorded this House I could not get up to reply, I could not answer that question, and I have never had an opportunity to answer that question until now. Having had Church and State dignitaries here crowding this House, and wives and relatives and friends—Surely this House knew, at the time when the honourable Leader of the Opposition made that crack, that in 1949 I was associated in politics with the honourable and learned member for St. John's West. So the crack was made but goes unanswered. The government did not know at that time that I could not answer it. At that time I did not want to disturb the dignity of the House, as apparently the honourable leader of the Opposition wished to do. I waited until now to answer.

MR. SPEAKER: I don't think that remark is quite right. If the honourable member will forgive me, I take it the honourable member just said that the honourable leader of the Opposition wished to disturb the dignity of the House.
MR. MERCER: Mr. Speaker, I said "Apparently."

MR. SPEAKER: I think that might be better phrased.

MR. MERCER: Mr. Speaker, I don't know how I could rephrase it. It was so miserably low, in my opinion, that I do not know how to rephrase it, and I have thought it over considerably since.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I will answer the honourable gentleman's question: I thought the same thing of the honourable and learned member for St. John's West when the honourable leader of the Opposition brought him in here and introduced him to this House at the opening of the House. I thought the same then as I did in 1949.

MR. HOLLETT: Will the honourable member allow me? I believe, Sir, what I said was, I wonder how the honourable member for Port de Grave felt when he saw me bring in my honourable friend. If I am allowed an explanation, I was referring to the fact the honourable member for Port de Grave had acted as a solicitor for the person whom I had brought in—That was the purpose of my remark at that time.

MR. MERCER: I know nothing about that, Mr. Speaker—whom I defended, there was nothing about that. That may have been the intention behind the honourable member's remark.

MR. HOLLETT: I tell you it was.

MR. MERCER: I am telling you, Mr. Speaker, I thought exactly the same thing about the present honourable and learned member for St. John's West at the opening of this session when he was introduced here as I did in 1949. And I said publicly in 1949 that I thought he was a good man, when I introduced him as a member for the riding of St. John's West, at his first public appearance as a "Tory" candidate in the C.I.B. Armoury. I said then that I thought he was a good man, that I thought he was the right man. I still think he is a good man, as a matter of fact. I don't think, Mr. Speaker, that the "Tories" can possibly get any better man.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Hear! Hear! A good man.

MR. MERCER: Now as to what I might think of him as a Liberal Member of Parliament, that may be altogether different. We have a very high standard over here on the Liberal side. Mr. Speaker, I only just made it to get in myself, barely did it. The honourable member, the Leader of the Opposition, also mentioned that he wondered what I thought was the purpose behind the remark, as to what I thought of the honourable and learned member for St. John's West coming into this House on the Opposition side while I was sitting on the Liberal side. What I thought of it was that since 1949—

MR. HOLLETT: Yes, I wondered how you felt.

MR. MERCER: Well, it is quite obvious, Mr. Speaker, the honourable Leader of the Opposition is not a lawyer. A lawyer acts for many, many people that he may not prefer to act for. In fact it makes strange bedfellows. You know there are people today acting for people who would not be inclined to be too friendly a few months ago.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Well said.
MR. HOLLIE: Not members of this House.

MR. MERCER: I am not mentioning any names. I merely point out, Mr. Speaker, it is possible for you to be acting for people that you may not be associated with otherwise at a later date or even at the time you are acting for them.

Now, Mr. Speaker, many members on the Government side have spoken in this debate, and despite certain reporters, I am very, very glad to see so many members speak on this debate because this has been one of the most important debates on a Speech from the Throne and I am glad to see so many interested in speaking in the debate. And I was very sorry to see that one of the few who could not, and I am very sorry that he personally is not here at the present time, Mr. Speaker—the honourable Speaker himself who has not because of his position in this House been able to speak to the debate. But I am sure, Sir, and I believe the Opposition will endorse this; that although he is in such a position in this House that he is unable to speak on behalf of his district—I am sure the Opposition will endorse me when I say, we sincerely hope, in fact we know, that the Government will not pay any less attention to his district as compared with other districts on that account.

MR. HOLLIE: Hear! Hear!

MR. MERCER: Now, Sir, another thing strikes me in this debate, and that is the attitude of the Opposition. There was, and I say this without any fear of contradiction, there was just a continual flow of criticism against all and sundry of any policy of the Government or anything we have done. That attitude was even carried outside this House by an honourable member of the Opposition. In fact I was very much surprised to hear last Saturday night on one of the "Tory" Radio Broadcasts—Oh yes! I have listened for the last three Saturday nights—

MR. HOLLIE: Where is the "Tory" one? Let us know.

MR. MERCER: To hear the honourable and learned member for St. John's East speaking very augustly on the radio. I am very sorry he is not present. There is nothing I would like better than to have him interject when I say this—He said to the people of Newfoundland—"All during the debate on the Speech from the Throne many, many members of the Government have spoken and with each speech they criticized the Opposition for not having a policy". And he said, (and I can really see him now at the radio)—"Ladies and Gentlemen, now you must realize that it is not the duty or purpose of an opposition to have a policy." He said: "That is the duty of the Government to have a policy. The Opposition is not supposed to have it. The only obligation the Opposition has is to criticize whatever the Government does, criticize the Government."

Now, sir, the same honourable member has been in this House exactly the same length of time as I have. And during that time at least I have learned this much: that I can see that the duty of the Opposition is first of all, certainly, to have a policy. Because they would not be able to be in the House at all unless they were elected, and they could not have been elected without some sort of a policy. Apparently the Opposition considers they have no policy, never had a policy and it is not their responsibility to have one.
Secondly, in addition to having a policy, some kind of a policy, something to ask the people to vote for, in addition to that then, I think, that they should not, as the honourable and learned gentleman put it, condemn the Government, but constructively criticize the Government's policy, and offer any suggestions they think may be a help to the administration of that policy. But when you listen in to the various speeches which have been made by all members of the Opposition, if you just ask yourself this question: What have these contributed to the debate? What have they contributed? I say, Mr. Speaker, the answer is absolutely nothing. In my view they have made a number of statements, they have for example, made such a statement as this (and I am going to read them because I took them down as they were said), "We should never have gone into Confederation with Canada." "It was a fraud to the public."

Now it was in 1949 that we went into Confederation with Canada, and in 1954 the Opposition are saying it was a fraud on the public, and we should never have done it. Now, Mr. Speaker, I ask a question—What is the benefit to the country, supposing it is true that we should never have gone into Confederation, even if it were true that it was a fraud, what benefit did it do to be alone in 1945. Five years later for the Opposition to make that statement? What benefit is it to the fishermen, the miners, the trappers, the agriculturists, what benefit is it to Water Street or to anybody?

MR. HOLLETT: What did you say in 1949?

MR. MERCER: The same thing.

MR. SMALLWOOD: In 1949 not in 1954.
candidate. Now, could you tell the people any more plainly than that? Was that a fraud? Yet, Mr. Speaker, although the Opposition knows that very well they have kept on repeating that. Why? I say, Mr. Speaker, because they know of nothing better to say.

Now, they go on to make another statement of theirs: "The Government has done nothing for the fisheries." Now, Mr. Speaker, I have thought that during the past two years this Government has done a considerable amount for the fisheries. There was nothing very tangible, nothing that you could shout about, done with regard to the salt fish industry, until last fall when the Government had to help subsidize the thing, and then later get it back from the Federal Government.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Not subsidize.

MR. MERCER: Well make sure they would not get a price less than they got the year before. But one big thing was done for the salt fish industry, and with this, Mr. Speaker, I believe every fisherman in this country will agree. The only thing that could be done and the best thing that was ever done was done by this Government when they said we cannot and shall not rush into this thing overnight. Now we know that for four hundred years every Government has been making mistakes, and the fisheries have not improved—instead the fisheries have gone down. Even during the seventeen years of Commission of Government, an unelective body that could pursue its own ends, ways and means and do as it wished without being accountable to the people, and supposed to be experts, it was not able to do anything benef-ficial for the salt fish industry. So then the Government, realizing this, said that we feel that we are not supermen, therefore we will appoint a commission to find out what we should do. "If that commission has to take a year or two years we will wait to get that report." I think that was the best thing that was ever done for the salt fishermen of this country. But then, Mr. Speaker, in addition to that—and I really had to laugh on many occasions in this House during the past week or two, to hear we have never done anything for the fisheries. I was quite surprised to hear that statement because I did not hear, until the past three or four or five years I have not heard of a fresh fish industry going on at Gaultois, with a lot of local capital involved where last year these fishermen received a million dollars returns for the fish. I had information from business people in Gaultois to me directly only in the past few weeks where they had operated fishing boats and bankers for the past fifty years, and this year unless that fresh fishing industry had started they would have had to go out of business, and they at one time had forty bankers. The Government supplied a loan to the Gaultois Fisheries Limited with the help of private capital to get them going. Had the Government not supplied that loan that would have never been there. In addition to a million dollars coming in now to the people of Gaultois and the near vicinity, had the Government not done that there would be no fishery there at all, but the Government would have to supply dole as there was no other industry there. All this was in just one place. I have heard the Opposition criticize and ask questions about how this money was loaned to the Northeastern Fish Industries Ltd? How much was loaned to the North Atlantic Fisheries Limited? How much was loaned to the Bonavista Cold Storage? How much was loaned to Fishery Products Limited, etc?

How much is it costing to put fresh fish plants into places like Trepassey, Harbour Grace and St. John's; and up on the West Coast and at Grand Bank and at Fortune? It seems to me that the Government has done a considerable lot for the fishermen, because had not the money been advanced to those private industries, had not loans been made during this period, we would not have had fresh fish plants.

Another statement offered by the Opposition was made with the implication that members of this Government were all liquor vendors. I think the public realizes that this is a lot of nonsense. In fact the Premier challenged the Leader of the Opposition when he made the statement that we were interested in beer parlours. But it means very little benefit to the fisheries or any other industry to say that the members are beer vendors. It will never help to make the new industries succeed. Nevertheless the implication was there that all members of the Government are in the liquor business and that that is how we make a living. The public does not believe it and I am not interested in answering it, but it does go to show that the Opposition apparently has nothing else to talk about.

Another statement of the Opposition—(I am just summarizing the whole seven or eight or nine hours' debate)—was that the Director of Tourist Development was allowed by the Premier to speak publicly for the Liberals in the last Federal election in 1952. Now, Mr. Speaker, I am sure that there is nothing very up-lifting mentally and nothing very helpful to the programme of economic development in this statement.

MR. BROWNE: May I make a correction? I said officials of this House were taking part in the campaign; other officials were working publicly in that campaign.

MR. MERCER: Well, I suppose the Director of Tourism is in the same boat as the others. I have not gone into the matter, but, supposing there is some law against it—I know of none; even supposing there is a gentleman's agreement to that effect—

MR. BROWNE: Supposing there is a tradition.

MR. MERCER: Supposing there is a tradition then, that they should not have come out and they have done so, can we say in the first instance that these two or three or four people defeated the honourable gentleman? If so, I should be glad to have them in my campaign in the next election.

MR. HOLLETT: You will need them.

MR. SPEAKER: Conversation seems to be going back and forth across the House too much.

MR. MERCER: As I was saying, supposing there is a tradition as the honourable member says and supposing they did help to defeat the same honourable gentleman, what benefit, what help can it be to the House of Assembly in a debate on the policy of economic development proposed by this Government? What help can it be to anyone to talk about it in the debate on the Speech from the Throne?
MR. BROVNE: Even the Premier has spoken of the high regard he had for the traditions of the House. That is one tradition—that civil servants must not take any part in politics.

MR. MERCER: Another statement made was that Mr. Power who was a civil servant was allowed to resign from the Department of Justice and run as an opponent of his.

MR. BROVNE: He was forced, not allowed.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Trash!

MR. SPEAKER: Order!

MR. MERCER: I was wondering if the Government could be accused of allowing Mr. Power to win the election.

The Honourable the Leader of the Opposition remarked, a moment ago, that I would need someone to work with me in the next election. I have no doubt that the Honourable Leader of the Opposition is thinking, perhaps, about a report made by a certain reporter that one person told him he was in my office to see me about getting a job. I asked him his name; how old he was; how many children he had and I told him I would try and get him a job. He waited for a couple of months and came back. This person said that I had forgotten all about it and asked him the same questions again. That report was made by a paid reporter from Bay Roberts, to the Daily News.

MR. HOLLETT: I rise to a point of order.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Sit down!

MR. HOLLETT: I state that I made no reference whatever to the statement the honourable member is making. I never referred to it and I demand that it be withdrawn.

MR. SPEAKER: I think that, rather than rise to a point of order, the honourable member should ask the other honourable member to correct it or allow him to put it right.

MR. MERCER: The point I want to get across is that he said I would require help in the next election; and I am now giving the House what a paid reporter gave the Daily News. But out of four thousand voters there was only one disgruntled Tory, apparently; and that was the only one a paid reporter could dig up. That same reporter is now secretary for the C.C.F.

I have to say, to the credit of the Opposition that they did—at least the honourable gentleman from St. John's West did mention a couple of interesting topics. For example, I am sure the honourable gentleman said that there should be paved roads in St. John's and on the Avalon Peninsula.

MR. BROVNE: I said Grand Falls and Corner Brook, too.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The original statement was “all highroads out of St. John’s.”

MR. MERCER: Even that, I must not agree with, because it is almost impossible to have all paved roads. I wish he had said a great deal more about the roads on the Avalon Peninsula. I sincerely hope the Opposition will back me up in what I have to say about roads. I realize that in talking of roads on the Avalon Peninsula I may not have everyone agreeing with me—not even the Premier who represents a district off the Avalon Peninsula—but I do say that the roads, generally speaking, on the Ava-Ion Peninsula, during the last five years, and maybe for many years preceding, generally speaking, the roads on the Avalon Peninsula, particularly sections where there are link roads connecting the settlements to the main highway, have been sorely neglected. Now I do not blame this Government for all of that. This Government has been doing a considerable amount of road work in places where road work had been neglected for the past fifty years; they have done road work in places where it had never been attended to before, and after all, there are eighteen districts off the Avalon Peninsula and those eighteen districts certainly helped to elect the Government. You could not blame the Government for saying that it has nothing to do with political patronage. Some of those people say "we cannot get from here to the hospital; if a breeze comes up, we cannot take to the dory. You have roads in St. John's but we cannot get roads." We could not blame the Government for saying "we will give them roads from here to there. It will help the country." Therefore, I agree with the Government policy. I agree that some people on the north east, north west and south west coasts have not got nearly enough roads. They are still entitled to more and more and this Government is entitled to give them more and more. At the same time, some sections which have not been getting much attention for twenty-five years will get, I believe, during this year, some attention.

And, speaking of roads on the Avalon Peninsula, the district of Port de Grave has more mileage of semi-highways and secondary roads than any other district in the country. For example, we have a road from Spaniards Bay to Tilton, a branch of which goes to New Harbour, Trinity Bay; there is a road from Shearstown running through my district and up to Clarke's Beach; there is a road from Bay Roberts to Shearstown and towards Hodgewater; there is Hoylestown Road going into North River; and again into the farming district, you have Coley's Point Road and Port de Grave Road running through the centre of Port de Grave; you have Cupids Road; you have Brigus Road, connecting with the main highway; you have South River Road; you have Roache's Line and others. Now all these roads run from six, seven and eight to fifteen and twenty miles in length and every one of these roads supports the people of the district. Take for example, last year, 1953, the blueberry industry in Newfoundland brought assistance to Newfoundlanders in the sum of one million dollars. One million dollars was earned by the Newfoundland people in the blueberry industry and that does not include the profit made by the exporter—the people who invested the capital? The berry-pickers, the truckmen, the loaders and the handlers earned one million dollars, and eighty per cent of that was earned in Conception Bay.

Now you can imagine that those roads built many years ago, built in those districts were built not because of politics but because of the localities in which people lived—our fishing districts and farming districts, but when the roads were built many years ago, they were built for the horse and cart. Nothing was done with the roads since the horse and cart days to provide for the heavy trucks transporting over those roads the products of the fishing and the farming of those settlements. In order to provide for the heavy trucks transporting over those roads the products of the fishing and the farming of those settlements, in order to provide for the heavy traffic, those roads need to be widened and ditched and graded.

I suggest, Mr. Speaker, that the Government would be well justified, this year, in spending large sums of money upon ditching, and widening the roads to take care of the traffic, not only for the industries over there now, but for the other industries when they come.

Another question asked by the Opposition—and I, for one, wished they had said more about it—was the Tourist Industry. They asked what happened to the Tourist Industry which was proposed by the Minister of Economic Development in 1949. And again I sincerely hope the Opposition will endorse me in what I have to say. The tourist industry can be one of our very largest industries. We have in Newfoundland what I would call, from my own experience of the salmon fishing, and from my reading of sports magazines about the United States and Canada, we have one of the finest places on the North American Continent for salmon fishing, with the exception perhaps of British Columbia and places north which are inaccessible at least financially inaccessible to the great majority of anglers. We have the finest moose hunting grounds on the North American Continent, again with the sole exception of far Northern Canada which is physically inaccessible to people at the present time. We have the finest caribou hunting grounds in North America, again with the exception of Northern Alaska and Northern Alberta which again are largely inaccessible.

Now, having sports fishing and the two biggest game animals in North America, is there any wonder that I say we can make this country a very large tourist resort, and make a very large industry and earn a very large income from the tourist industry? Then apart from fishing and caribou and moose hunting, I don't think any one will disagree that as far as the camera addict and the artist is concerned we have as good scenery for them to paint or "shoot" as anywhere else in North America.

Therefore I submit that this Government should be prepared to spend large sums of money on the tourist industry, because we cannot earn these dollars from the tourist industry unless the Government is prepared to spend money on serving the various tourists, on nursing these things along and on even spending money to help private enterprise to provide accommodations for tourists. Mind you, it requires money and a lot of money, but I do feel, and I suggest to the Government that they should be prepared to undertake it because I know that in a very short time it could become one of our biggest income earners.

The other subject I wish to speak of at this time is the fisheries. I do not know, Sir, of any person in this House who has a keener interest in the fisheries than I have. I was born and brought up in a fishing settlement where they did not use any cod traps—it was all cod nets. These nets were hauled out of 120 fathoms of water. That, Mr. Speaker, is 720 feet. I have often for two or three summers hauled 180 fathoms of cod nets from a depth of 720 feet. It is not light work—you gall your hands, you get what a fisherman calls salt water.
welps. That fishery has been carried on for the past three or four hundred years, absolute slavery, and at the end absolute starvation. You can well realize, therefore, Sir, why I should say I don't think there is any person in this House on either side for that matter who has a keener interest in the fisheries than I have. That is why I am so glad to see the Government, as soon as they received that report spoken of in the Speech from the Throne, as soon as they had read that and as soon as the Government had their caucus with the Federal Government they were prepared and are now about to put something into force to see what can be done. I feel, Sir, that drastic actions are required. Maybe we shall have to go out of the salt cod fishery all together. Because we have heard reports which go back to 1932, I believe, when experimental stations for drying codfish artificially were begun at Bay Bulls. It was burned down but I think by that time they were quite satisfied they could not make a success of it. Now it has been started over again since, and maybe we will be able to do it. But we do know this much, Sir, the salt fishery is a very precarious industry at its best. We do know that there are only certain markets to which we can export it. We do know that those markets are never terrifically rich, rather most of them are genuinely poor, but they have their ups and downs, and the prices have their ups and downs. We do know that fishermen must be dependent upon whether the fish are there this year or not. They may be plentiful this year and scarce next year. They are dependent on temperature, and tide, etc., and if they get the fish they have to depend on the sun to dry it, and might get a good week this week and it might be fine or raining for the rest of the season. We do know that if they get the fish and have good weather to make it the markets may be down. There are so many things, so many influences at work upon the salt cod fishery, much more than upon any other industry I have ever heard or read about. If the Government or the Governments to come within the next ten years can solve the problem they will be doing a terrific job. In the meantime I sincerely hope that this Government will, while on the programme for the fishery development, concentrate to a great extent in addition to the salt cod fishery on the expansion of the fresh fish industry. Because I personally believe that if we could get a limitless market for fresh codfish that is where our fortune lies.

Now, Sir, to conclude, may I say that I consider it the duty of this House—and when I say the duty of this House—I mean the combined Opposition and the Government—it is their duty to serve the public both present and future generations, to serve and help to lay the foundation of services for future generations. In addition to our current plans we have to plan to build more and better schools, more and better hospitals, help to service and build more and better roads, more and better industries, develop the fishing industry. We have to do all these things as a service for many generations to come—in addition to serving our present generation. Sir, this, I believe, is something which has not been brought up in this House, and which I am bringing up entirely on my own. I do not think that this generation should have to pay for services which we now supply and plan for future generations to come. If we have to build in our day the Trans Canada Highway, if we have to widen all those roads and finish them and resurface them, and build them up from forty years ago to modern day usage not only in Port de Grave District but all over the country. If we have to spend some millions of money on a fishing industry to try and bring it up to modern usage, to see whether or not it can support the people and be a factor in our economy, if we have to supply better schools, more and better hospitals and service these, Sir, and supply more and better public services, then I say this Government, and I suggest it to this Government, and sincerely hope I shall be endorsed by the Opposition—this Government should do it in such a way, Sir, that future generations will pay their equal share with us. That, Mr. Speaker, can be done only one way, and that is by the Government of the day getting loans on the security of the province. There is absolutely no reason in the world why we should try to build up services for future generations for which we now pay and they now pay. Future generations will be only glad to pay for them, but they can only pay by the present generation getting the loans on the security of the province, and doing the work and doing it well. It is a great privilege, Mr. Speaker, to me to close this debate.

MR. SPEAKER: The honourable member has now concluded the debate on the Address in Reply to the Speech from the Throne. I shall now put the question—

Moved and seconded the report of the select committee appointed to draw up an address in reply to the Speech from the Throne be adopted.

Motion adopted.

MR. SPEAKER: I shall inform the House of the date of the presentation to His Honourable the Lieutenant Governor.

Third Readings:

Third Readings of Bill, "An Act Further to Amend the Mothers' Allowances Act."

On motion read a third time, ordered passed and title be as on the order paper.

Third reading of Bill, "An Act Further to Amend the Exploits Valley (Closing Hours) Shop Act."

On motion read a third time, ordered passed and title be as on the order paper.

Second Reading of Bill, "An Act to Amend the Wild Life Act."

DR. ROWE: Mr. Speaker, in moving second reading of this Bill, I would point out there are only two minor changes involved here in this amendment. The first one; in the past it has been customary for us to give to U.S. Servicemen in the Province the right to a resident’s license. That is in respect to salmon fishing, after six months in the Province. However, it has been found that that has placed extremely heavy pressure on certain areas of Newfoundland on the rivers and streams, in consequence of which it has been felt necessary to change that six months back to what it would have ordinarily been anyway, twelve months, so that this amendment is made.

The other one is also perhaps an unnecessary one, we were not sure, and legal advice will be consulted. In section 8 of the Bill, in the last line we have added—perhaps I had better read that section.
3. Paragraph (b) of subsection (1) of Section 5 of the said Act is repealed and the following substituted therefor:

"(b) (i) to provide the issue of licences or permits to fish for, take or kill any fish and for the issue of badges to be worn by the holders of such licences or permits; and

(ii) to prescribe the fees to be paid by applicants for any such licences or permits; and the fees prescribed under this paragraph may be varied in respect of different areas and different classes of applicants and different periods or any of them."

Presently the fees prescribed under this paragraph vary in respect of different classes, originally that is how it was. That gave the province the right to charge a resident one amount and a non-resident another amount, and that has always been done. But the added phrase is--also of different areas--this the province probably had before, we are not sure. This will of course give the province the authority which it of necessity should have, if the time should come, when it might be desirable or in the interests of the public to charge fishermen coming into the Province from outside an extra amount for an unusually attractive stream and a lower rate for another stream, which we would then be able to do. We are not sure that we had the authority to do that, therefore, we added--different areas which would have that additional charge. The reason for section 4 is purely a literal one. In the previous Act there was some anomaly and the Department of the Attorney General advised us we should change it so as to change the lettering of the section amended in the proper way.

I move the second reading of the Bill, Mr. Speaker.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, the Almighty God gave to this Island a long time ago some great natural resources, and we are trying hard now to find some of them because they are not to be seen, they are underground, minerals and perhaps oil, and these natural resources exclusive, of course, of timber and water powers, include also trout and salmon in our rivers and streams, lakes and ponds. It seems to me that the people of Newfoundland including the Government of Newfoundland, have been terribly stupid in recent years in connection with that precious heritage which the Almighty God gave to all of us. We have been terribly stupid in the way in which we have handled these resources, both our Newfoundlanders and visitors in Newfoundland, in our outlook and our attack upon these natural resources, these trout and these salmon. It seems to me, from what I have heard, that the end of the salmon resources of Newfoundland is in sight, that if nothing is done, if nothing drastic is done, if nothing seriously drastic is done we will live to see the disappearance of salmon from the rivers of Newfoundland.

All of us here in this House, most of us at any rate have already lived to see the disappearance of most of the trout on the Avalon Peninsula. Today there are virtually no trout compared with twenty or twenty-five years ago. As a boy I trudged along the road where the birch plant lies today from the city here with other boys to go fishing at the "Studies" as we used to call it, and which I later knew more properly as the “Steadies.” I did my trouting as a little boy where the birch plant lies today. I went with my father when he went grousing as they used to say, in Buckmaster’s Field, shooting snipes. I remember as a boy picking up empty cartridges to be commonly found in Buckmaster’s Meadows. But now on the Avalon Peninsula, except in a few rare places, there are no trout left. This glorious heritage of our going trouting where you like is a heritage which is disappearing. The truth of the matter is, that situation is over-spreading the face of this Island. Shortly, and by shortly I mean five, eight or ten years hence, there will be no trout in Newfoundland unless drastic steps are taken about the situation, and perhaps even sooner than that, no salmon.

Now my honourable colleague, the Minister of Mines and Resources, has taken this matter to heart, and I personally have taken it to heart. I confess, more I believe than most of the Government have done, although they have, but I have perhaps more than any other because personally and frankly I don’t want to have it said of me ever, that while I was leader of the Government, I allowed the precious natural resources of ours to diminish, that I allowed any serious wastage of those precious natural resources. I would hate to have that said of me, or of the administration or of the Government I had led. So that I welcome heartily here now the introduction of these amendments by the Honourable Minister of Mines and Resources. I welcome them but I have an uneasy feeling that it does not go far enough. I have that uneasy feeling because I have a feeling of foreboding about the trout and salmon in Newfoundland. I hope the Opposition will support this Bill, which will be No. 8 meriting their support in the present session.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, I can say at the outset I do not support this Bill, one particular section at any rate. I don’t know about my colleagues as I have not discussed it with them. As the honourable member spoke I was reminded of a piece of poetry I learned when I was a boy, I suppose, for after all I was a boy once also. “I remember the house where I was born, where the sun used to come creeping in at morn.” That was when the Honourable the Premier used to go fishing out in the steadies. The Honourable the Premier made an excellent appeal to the House for class distinction in trouting. I am surprised that the Honourable the Premier should be the first Liberal to do so, I have never known the Liberals to be interested in the preservation of class distinction, I take it it is an innovation—whether or not another new attribute is now to be tacked on to the Liberal Party, I don’t know. The Tories are always accused of class distinction and here we have a piece of legislation being introduced here under the guise of saving the natural resources—Class Distinction. Charge John Jones $20 and Bill Brown (not this Bill) $50 for a license. Mr. Pickersgill will probably get one for nothing.

MR. BROWNE: He is not allowed to fish.

MR. HOLLETT: If you are a “Liberal” you get one for nothing, and if you are a “Tory” you will probably get one for less, probably fish without a license anyhow. But I don’t like that, Mr. Speaker, and the fees prescribed under this section may be varied in respect of different areas and different classes of applicants and different periods, making flesh of one and fish another . . .

HON. E. S. SPENCER (Minister of Public Works): I believe the honourable gentleman is out of order—will the honourable gentleman yield?

MR. HOLLETT: No. I won’t yield unless it is a point of order.

MR. SPENCER: No.

MR. HOLLETT: I don’t believe, Sir, that the imposition of a different fee upon different classes of people will have any beneficial effect in increasing the trout population of Newfoundland. The trout, to my mind, are as plentiful as they were when the Honourable the Premier went out to the Steddies, if you know where to go and look for them. There is only one thing that is lacking and that is the neglect on the part of the Department of Natural Resources, in the way of doing something with regard to preservation by planting, if you like, of the seed necessary to provide food for these trout, as certain other things have destroyed the food the trout feed upon. I think it would be much better if the department introduced something of that nature.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Will the honourable gentleman allow one question? Would not the honourable gentleman agree that a larger fee ought to be charged to that class of applicant that comes on a visit from the United States or Europe and want to go salmon fishing—it is not the class of applicants, but the classifications of applicants, if the honourable gentleman would prefer it that way.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, yes, if the Government is prepared to amend that and put it that way. It does not say classifications, it says classes. “Different areas and different classes.”

DR. ROWE: That is not the amendment—that has always been there.

MR. SMALLWOOD: You read it wrong again.

MR. HOLLETT: If it has always been that way then it has been wrong.

DR. ROWE: That is not under debate, as I understand. May I rise to a point of order, Mr. Speaker—are we debating the Wild Life Act?

MR. SPEAKER: I think the honourable gentleman is quite in order. He conceivably might be mistaken but it does not follow he is out of order.

DR. ROWE: The words are not to be taken only in the way I used them.

MR. SPEAKER: The Honourable Leader of the Opposition is human and therefore prone to error, but it does not follow he is in error. The Honourable Minister may show that when he replies—will the honourable member resume his speech.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, I am going to ask, as it is getting near six o’clock—I think it might be wise for me to ask for an adjournment.

MR. SPEAKER: It will be five past six by that clock when it is six o’clock.
MR. HOLLETT: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, then I have five minutes.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The honourable speaker said the honourable gentleman has the right to be wrong.

MR. HOLLETT: Not only have I the right, Mr. Speaker, but I admit to being wrong on times—I am not the man that is perfect. I cannot say I am the man that never made a mistake. I cannot say I am the man who caught the trout out in the Steadies. I never did, but I may be wrong, Sir. I am the man who may be wrong, and have often been wrong, and I expect I shall be wrong again.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, indeed.

MR. HOLLETT: Yes, I suggest, when the Honourable the Premier will be sitting in some other place a year from now. I could be wrong there even.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Nineteen years.

MR. HOLLETT: Nineteen years is a long time to sit down. But let us get back to this Bill, Sir, I see here we have, when a Canadian citizen resided in the Province for a period of six consecutive months—there is a distinction there but I won't bother about that at the moment, but I am concerned over these things in this particular paragraph, section 1 of (5) which provides for the issue of a license or permit to fish for, take or kill any fish or—you see, Mr. Speaker, it is a pretty big business, this. They are going to be able to issue badges for you to wear, and if you get a class A license you will get a badge of a certain kind which will clearly distinguish you to the river protector when he comes along. This class A badge costs $20 so that you can catch that trout. Another chap has a class B badge. I don't know, but I wonder if the honourable gentleman will say where he wears this badge. Does he wear it on his cap or on his coat or where?

MR. SMALLWOOD: In the seat of his pants.

MR. HOLLETT: I shall not repeat that, Mr. Speaker. I shall not repeat that. I have no further objection to this. I don't like the word “classes.” I don't think there should be any distinction whatsoever between Newfoundlanders. We will include these people from the mainland who have resided here for six consecutive months, nor, Sir, do I see any reason why a person whether Latvian or German who has lived in this country six months consecutively, in the new industrial plants or what not should not be given a license to fish in our streams. The Honourable Minister of Welfare who looks very serious I believe, agrees that I am right, although he has not said so. I don't agree with that. None of us except a very few get any trout when we go fishing, but we go just the same, and set up our little camps and light our fires and boil our kettle and have pork and cabbage, perhaps, and some have fun, but we don't get any trout worthwhile. I don't think it is worthwhile to make any distinction whatever between the Honourable the Premier and the Honourable Leader of the Opposition. That is one place where I don't think there should be any distinction whatsoever.

MR. SMALLWOOD: We don't get any trout.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, as it is actually six o'clock, may I have the adjournment of the debate? I don't think I can move the adjournment.
DR. ROWE: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of the debate.

MR. SPEAKER: In fact all the honourable member has to do is to stand up and be told by Mr. Speaker, that it is 6:00 o'clock.

On motion debate adjourned.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I move all further orders of the day do stand deferred.

Motion carried.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I move that the House at its rising do adjourn until tomorrow, Thursday, at 3:00 o'clock.

THURSDAY, April 29, 1954

The House met at 3:50 of the clock in the afternoon, pursuant to adjournment.

MR. SPEAKER: Order. At 3:20 this afternoon the Lieutenant-Governor was graciously pleased to accept our Address in Reply to the Speech from the Throne.

Presenting Petitions

MR. DROVER: Mr. Speaker, I beg to present a petition from the people of Jackson's Arm in White Bay requesting a road be built from Jackson's Arm to Bowater's Tailors' Brook Road. The petition is signed by a hundred voters of the area of Jackson's Arm, and I have much pleasure not only in presenting it but also in supporting it, because for several weeks after navigation opens in most parts of Newfoundland that section of White Bay is often blocked with drift ice, and the people have no means of getting in supplies or even of getting water. It is also understood that Bowater's are extending their road from Tailor's Brook to Sop's Arm this year, and a few miles of road from Jackson's Arm to Sop's Arm will mean not only Jackson's Arm but also Sop's Arm and also Sop's Island will have communication with the Trans-Canada Highway, if arrangements can be made with Bowater's to use their road.

I beg leave to have this petition tabled, Sir, and forwarded to the department concerned.

Petition tabled, to be referred to the department concerned.

Presenting Reports of Standing and Select Committees

None.

Giving Notice of Questions

MR. BROWNE: To ask the Honourable the Minister of Public Works to lay on the table of the House the following information:

The number of contracts let for (a) heating; (b) plumbing; (c) electrical installation from April 1, 1953 to March 31, 1954, together with the names of persons or firms to whom contracts have been awarded. Were tenders called for in each case? What was the amount for which the contracts were awarded in each case and who was the successful tenderer? Was the tender which was accepted the lowest in each case, and if not, why was not the lowest tender accepted? In how many cases were contracts awarded without tenders being called?

Giving Notice of Motions

HON. L. R. CURTIS (Attorney General): Mr. Speaker, I give notice I will on tomorrow ask leave to intro-

HON. S. J. HEFFERTON (Minister of Municipal Affairs and Supply): Mr. Speaker, I give notice I will on tomorrow ask leave to introduce a Bill "An Act Further to Amend the Community Councils Act."

Answers to Questions

Question No. 69—Answer being prepared.

Question No. 70:

Hon. J. R. SMALLWOOD (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, in answer to that 70 (1) may I say that the only machinery shipped in to this Province by the German firm of MIAG was machinery for the cement mill at Corner Brook. None was shipped by them for any other plant or any other mill in this Province. With regard to the itemized list of equipment and machinery, that will take some little time to prepare. But it is being prepared and will be tabled by me as soon as it is handed to me.

As to 70 (2) the detailed answers to these questions are in course of preparation. I may say that my own recollection is that insurance was carried mainly by Lloyds of London, but that in one instance it was carried by the firm of Crosbie and Company of this City.

Question No. 67: Answer being prepared.

HON. F. W. ROWE (Minister of Mines and Resources): Mr. Speaker, I wonder if I might make this observation? In connection with the notice of questions given by the honourable member for St. John's West, it is my intention within the next two or three days to present a report, a comprehensive report, of the Farm Loan Board. Perhaps the honourable gentleman would wish to wait until he sees that report, and then there may be other questions he may wish to have answered.

MR. BROWNE: I agree, Mr. Speaker.

MR. SPEAKER: I understand then it is not the wish of the honourable member to have the questions appear on tomorrow's Order Paper?

MR. BROWNE: Yes, we could drop these questions now, if the Minister could tell me when he intends to table the report.

DR. ROWE: It was placed on my desk this morning, for submission to the Lieutenant-Governor in Council. This report should probably be tabled next week.

Orders of the Day

Committee of the Whole on Bill "An Act to Amend the Water and Sewerage Corporation of Greater Corner Brook Act, 1951."

"An Act to Amend the Public Libraries Act."

"An Act Respecting the Supreme Court of Canada and the Exchequer Court of Canada."

"An Act Respecting the Evidence Act."

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I wonder who is looking after this Bill "An Act to Amend the Water and Sewerage Corporation of Greater Corner Brook Act, 1951"?

MR. HEFFERTON: I am.

MR. BROWNE: Could I address a question then to the Minister. I notice that in Section 2 of the Water and Sewerage Act of 1951, which is not included in the Revised Statutes, wonder if these Acts should be included in the Revised Statutes.

MR. HEFFERTON: 1951 would be included in the Revised Statutes.

MR. BROWNE: I am just wondering whether private Acts of this kind or semi-private Acts would not be included in the Revised Statutes.

MR. HEFFERTON: No, but there is an appendix. Certain Acts are not included.

MR. BROWNE: Is this one?

MR. HEFFERTON: Yes, I believe it is.

MR. CHAIRMAN: If honourable members will excuse me, I don't believe the first clause has been read as yet.

Clause 1 read:

1. This Act may be cited as The Water and Sewerage Corporation of Greater Corner Brook (Amendment) Act, 1954.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I hoped that my suggestion would be accepted for what it is worth. It would be a great help to all members of the House if the section which was being amended could be printed on the opposite page. In discussion of these Bills very few members will be able to follow the debate because if they have not got the section to be amended they cannot get any sense in it. I know it involves a considerable amount of research to look up the appropriate Bill in every case and find the section to be amended. I make this suggestion in the hope the Minister will see something in it. It would be very helpful for all members of the House.

Now in this particular one here I was under the impression it might be in the Revised Statutes but it is not. So that I wonder if the Minister would tell me what is being changed.

MR. HEFFERTON: The section we are on now has no change at all.

MR. BROWNE: There is a new definition added.

MR. HEFFERTON: That is in Section 2.

MR. BROWNE: Speaking generally about the Act what changes are being made in it?

MR. CHAIRMAN: I think the honourable member might consider that we are discussing Section 1. When we are discussing Section 2 probably he might raise the point.

MR. BROWNE: If that is the only change, yes.

Clause 1 carried.

Clause 2 read:

2. Section 2 of the Water and Sewerage Corporation of Greater Corner Brook Act, 1951, the Act No. 79 of 1951, is amended by adding thereto as paragraph (e) the following:

"(e) 'Land' means lands, tenements, and hereditaments and any estate or interest therein and any right or easement affecting them and includes land covered by water."

MR. HEFFERTON: Mr. Chairman, in that connection there is no change whatever in the Act as it is at the present time, except this is added on to give an interpretation of the word "land" that is all.

MR. BROWNE: It has something to do with tax has it?
MR. HEFFERTON: That is right.

Clause 2 carried.

Clause 3 read:

3. The Act 21 Geo. V., Chapter 11, entitled "An Act Relating to the Establishment of a Water and Sewerage System at West Corner Brook" is hereby repealed.

MR. HEFFERTON: The water and sewerage system of Corner Brook which has been taken over under amalgamation.

MR. BROWNE: I wonder if the Honourable Minister could answer this question? I notice in the paper that the town manager has recently resigned—Has the Government anything to do with that?

MR. HEFFERTON: The appointment is an autonomous one because the Board itself is practically autonomous.

Moved and seconded the Committee report having passed this Bill without amendment.

A Bill "An Act to Amend the Public Libraries Act."

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I take it the present Secretary-Librarian will become the Director of Public Libraries Services and shall serve as secretary-treasurer, and that the purpose of this section is to enable the Board to make that appointment. I wonder if the Minister in charge could tell us what is the function of the public libraries which are to be different from now?

HON. J. R. CHALKER (Minister of Education): They are to be exactly the same.

MR. BROWNE: Is there to be an increase in salary?

MR. CHALKER: No, as I see it the salaries will remain the same as at the time the Act is passed, at which time they will be increased to the standard of civil service salaries, and in some cases may go even higher, because they are having difficulty in getting specialized help in the library.

MR. BROWNE: In Section 4, I wonder if the Honourable Minister could tell us what is taking place here. I presume that the Libraries Board will be dealing with the allocations in question, and will put in their recommendations to the Government. I notice that the Board consists of five or more persons, and one third of the members of a Regional Libraries Board will retire annually. If there are five that means only one will retire. So would it not be better to have six, but it does not make very much difference. How has the appointment of this Board been made up to this date?

MR. CHALKER: By the Lieutenant-Governor in Council. The change here in this particular section is that the retirement of members was not in the parent Act.

Section 4 carried.

Section 5 read:

5. The said Act is further amended by inserting immediately after Section 8 as Section 8A the following:

"8A. Subject to the approval of the Lieutenant-Governor in Council, the Board may make contributions either directly or indirectly towards pensions, annuities, retiring allowances and gratuities for employees of the Board and may prescribe the terms and conditions upon which such pensions, annuities, retiring allowances or gratuities may be paid."

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, that is a new clause and I wonder could the Minister tell us what is involved.

MR. CHALKER: Well, Mr. Chairman, it is more or less put there to enable the Board, if they so desire to establish a pensions scheme.

MR. BROWNE: Have they done anything about it?

MR. CHALKER: Nothing at the present time. They have not the legislative authority to enable them to do so. This legislation will enable them to do so, if they so desire.

MR. M. M. HOLLETT (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Chairman, what board is referred to in this section and the previous one—The Public Libraries Board or the Regional Libraries Board. I notice the definition of "Board" means Public Libraries Board, whereas in the other section the definition is not given.

MR. CHALKER: The Public Libraries Board referred to in this section received a contribution towards its secretary, I believe. The Regional Libraries Board serves gratis in every case, or by contributions from the centre in which the Board is established. In Harbour Grace and Corner Brook the councils themselves may underwrite some services in connection with the personnel.

MR. BROWNE: I would like to say I am pleased to see that things have come to a point where some scheme of pensions will be arranged for the employees of the Public Libraries Board who I think are beyond question very courteous and obliging and give good service to the general public. I don't think you can find east of Montreal a library as useful and as efficiently operated as our Gosling Library. I think our scheme of libraries compares very well with library systems in any of the other provinces.

Moved the Committee report having passed this Bill without amendments.

"An Act Respecting the Supreme Court of Canada and the Exchequer Court of Canada."

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I raised the point the other day, and after hearing the Attorney General read from the Exchequer Court Act about other clauses that might have been inserted there in cases of a controversy between provinces . . .

MR. CURTIS: Yes, I thank my honourable friend for reminding me. I have been giving that matter some serious thought and I think that it would be wise to amend Section 2 in the Committee stage in that manner. It will now read: "The Supreme Court of Canada and the Exchequer Court of Canada or the Supreme Court of Canada alone, according to the provisions of the Supreme Court Act (Canada) and the Exchequer Court Act (Canada) have jurisdiction in any (a) controversy between Canada and Newfoundland; (b) Controversy between Newfoundland and any other Province of Canada that has passed an Act similar to this Act;"

And I think we should renumber the present section (b) as (c). I suggest that amendment, Mr. Chairman, and recommend it to both sides of the House.
Moved and seconded the Committee report having passed this Bill with some amendments.

The Committee of the Whole passed the Bill entitled "An Act Respecting the Evidence Act" without amendment.

Committee of the Whole on Bill "An Act Relating to the Protection of Plants and to the Prevention of the Spread of Insects, Pests and Diseases Destructive to Vegetation."

Clause 1 read:

1. This Act may be cited as "The Plant Protection Act, 1954."

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, when this matter was being discussed in second reading the other day I listened attentively to the explanation given by the Honourable Minister of Mines and Resources. But after he had sat down and the Premier arose I was very much astonished and surprised to learn from the Premier that this Bill is being introduced to enable the Government to hold up sales of potatoes, (now I did not gather what from the Minister's statement) imported into this Province. I am very surprised that a Bill of this kind does not indicate clearly so that one may readily see and understand why it should be introduced for the purpose of holding up the sale of potatoes—

MR. CHAIRMAN: If the honourable member will forgive me, this is the first clause we are on now.

MR. BROWNE: This is the purpose, the name and the purpose, and I believe it is the appropriate place to deal with the larger questions involved. There is no section dealing with this point at all, unless the Minister can indicate it. When I stated the other day that I would support this Bill I did not imagine for a moment that was the intention. It seemed to me from the Bill at the time the Minister made his statement he did not have this in mind nor any such subtle ideas as the Premier has stated. Now it seems to me, if it is the intention to keep out potatoes which are grown in other provinces that there should be a legitimate reason for it. The Premier told us how they only had two or three or four inspectors, and he was going to christen his own baby first, and therefore was going to inspect the potatoes produced in Newfoundland first and it might be Christmas before the potatoes imported here could be inspected.

Now, Sir, I doubt very much the legality of a procedure of that kind. The Premier was extremely anxious to bring the country into confederation and this is one of the hard conditions we have to face. And it seems to me that the idea to sell Newfoundland grown potatoes in preference to imported potatoes should be determined by other conditions.

MR. CHAIRMAN: If the honourable member would forgive me, I think the point might be more properly taken up under Clause 13. When we come to that perhaps the honourable gentleman might raise that point again.

MR. BROWNE: No, Mr. Chairman, I want to argue this out. This is very important.

MR. CHAIRMAN: I must remind the honourable member that I have given my ruling. I refer the honourable member to the fact we are on Clause 1, and this is the title. This is not where it should be discussed.

Clause 1 carried.
Clause 2 read:

2. In this Act

(a) “container” means any receptacle in which plants may be placed, stored, shipped, offered for sale or sold;

(b) “disease” means any disease or injury in plants caused by any insect, pest, virus, fungus, bacterium or other organism and includes such insect, pest, virus, fungus, bacterium and other organism;

(c) “inspector” means a plant pest inspector appointed under this Act and includes inspectors and other officers appointed to carry out the Destructive Insects and Pests Act (Canada);

(d) “Minister” means the Minister of Mines and Resources;

(e) “nursery” means a place where plants are grown, kept, packed, delivered or shipped for sale;

(f) “owner” includes the lessee, occupant or manager of any premises described;

(g) “plant” means any tree, shrub, or the fruit or seed thereof or vine or other vegetable growth any portion of any of them;

(h) “regulations” means regulations made under this Act.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, in regard to sub-section (3) may I ask the Honourable Minister of Mines and Resources now, at this stage, whether the officers appointed by the Federal Government are going to assist in carrying out the ideas of the Premier which he mentioned the other day?

DR. ROWE: Mr. Chairman, in reply to that question, I would say that is our hope. I may add that in preparation of this Bill we had some consultation with the Federal officials, and while of course we must take responsibility for the Bill, yet we have had, as I said, some consultations with them, and it was our hope that in the main the Federal inspectors who are appointed under the “Destructive Insects and Pests Act of Canada,” the Federal Act, would be able to assist us. In other words, that we could by a mutual agreement and understanding make use of them in the implementation of the provisions of our own legislation here. That is our hope. Yet we should have power to appoint but I can’t say at this time whether or not we might find it necessary to appoint inspectors of our own.

MR. BROWNE: Have we any at the present time?

DR. ROWE: My understanding is that the Federal Government does have inspectors here at the present time. I know they do. But we have no inspectors to my knowledge, as a province. I don’t see how we could have any inspectors as we have no authority to appoint inspectors.

MR. FOGWILL: Mr. Chairman, is it not a fact that the Government did inspect the vegetables coming into the Province on those grounds before they went on sale, and issue certificates? Is it not a fact the imported vegetables were held up because of lack of inspectors, and that locally grown were given certificates for sale first?

DR. ROWE: In answer to that I think there has been something done during the past several years, the details of which I am not too familiar with because it was decided on or worked out before my going into the department. But I believe that officers of our own Department of Mines and Resources have assisted in the matter of inspecting. What the honourable member for St. John's East has said may be very well true, I should think, but I do not know. I am not prepared to say, but if it comes to a choice between the inspection of locally produced vegetables in the fall of the year and vegetables brought in from the Mainland, I would expect. I would not say so, but would expect the locally produced and perhaps I would say I might hope that the locally produced vegetables would get the preference.

MR. FOGWILL: I quite agree with the Minister that the locally grown vegetables should be inspected first. But, Mr. Chairman, is it a fact that instead of being inspected the people concerned were given certificates to put on the bags themselves—is that a fact?

DR. ROWE: I am afraid, Mr. Chairman, I would require notice of such a question as that. It is a matter of detail which I don’t think I could be expected to answer instantaneously.

MR. FOGWILL: The Minister has no knowledge of it?

HON. DR. H. L. POTTS (Minister of Public Welfare): I do recall—As the honourable member knows we had no legislation at that time to deal with the matter of protecting our own vegetables, potatoes properly. And I want to say that if the validity of what had been done had been called into question we might have had to call the House together to legalize what had been done. But it was done in all good faith, and what was done was to protect our local products.

Clause carried.

MR. BROWNE: Now I find the section—Under inspection—it says all plants grown in or imported. Now under this section the Lieutenant Governor in Council may appoint (I take it at the present time there are no such inspectors in the department)—

DR. ROWE: That is so.

MR. BROWNE: Therefore it would be necessary, I take it, to set up a staff for the purpose of carrying out this section? Now the duties of an inspector seem to be very wide and very broad, and it seems to me that if an inspector discovers that there are farms where there are diseases, then his first duty should be to report to the Minister and not take it upon himself to decide what action should be taken. I think it would be very much wiser if he would do that. Here he is entitled to enter any farm where he suspects there are plants infected by or suffering from diseases, and make such inspection and examination as he deems necessary and order that precautions against the spread of diseases be taken. Under (c) he may inspect and examine all plants grown on or imported into the province for sale therein or for export therefrom and certify if so required to whom it may concern or to any person that the plants are diseased, and on instructions from the Minister order that they be destroyed—or destroy them himself.

Now, Mr. Chairman, the danger of disease is that it will spread. And it seems to me that the Minister should be informed so that he may make the provisions to see if these plants have already been taken off this farm and sold to other persons, because it is in that fashion the disease may be spread to other farms.
And these plants may be put in stores and bought and planted and passed around.

Now we are not dealing here with something that is impossible. Perhaps it is not going to happen every day, but it may happen. An Act of this kind, dealing with the prevention of pests and infections, should take into account, it seems to me, the wisest procedure that should be followed in case there are farms that have diseased plants on them. I am speaking from the experience which I have gained in connection with the outbreak of foot and mouth disease near Regina in Western Canada two years ago. Having studied the legislation in that respect, I recall the first duty of the person discovering the disease is to report it to the Minister. Unfortunately the Minister, in that instance, was the last person in the department to be informed, according to the evidence of other parties. If that had been brought to his attention perhaps he would have taken more prompt action than was taken. The chief inspector was away on his holidays at the time.

Now there are times when plants may appear to have a disease and may not have it, or any disease at all, but an inspector, and I don't think there are very many skilled ones to be engaged by the department, but an inspector should have some qualifications or some scientific advice as to what the nature of the disease is, whether it is dangerous or contagious or infectious, before taking action. But this section, it seems to me, empowers him to take action on his own say so, and we don't know whether he is to be a qualified inspector— as a matter of fact, we are told there are none at the present time. I think the Minister ought to give a little more consideration to that question.

DR. ROWE: Mr. Chairman, our Bill is based in part on the Federal Act, the “Destructive Insects and Pests Act” and also on similar legislation in other provinces, particularly in the Province of Saskatchewan. After due examination of all provincial legislation of that kind it was felt the most applicable. Going back for a moment to the point of inspectors' powers. Actually in the Federal Act—and I happen to have a copy here in front of me, and while the honourable member was speaking I looked it up again to refresh my memory—I find the Federal inspectors are invested with similar powers such as we propose to give. And I know also that in some provinces, in Alberta in all probability, these inspectors have that power which we propose giving our inspectors here. I could read it here from the Federal Act; “Where upon inspection, which are found to be infested with disease, in the presence of inspectors . . .”

We know such an Act is necessary—and due notice should be given to the owner. In actual practice I can assure the honourable member that inspectors would not abuse this or in no condition would the department tolerate any abuse of it. The natural practice would be that the Director of Agriculture would—

MR. BROWNE: Could we have a clause inserted to that effect? It would be very wise, it seems to me. There may be a very serious mistake take place and a disease spread which it may be possible to arrest if reported immediately.

DR. ROWE: I would have no objections whatever, Mr. Chairman, to putting in there what the honourable gentleman has in mind. It would certainly happen in practice anyway, and I would have no objections to inserting it there, in Clause (d) where destruction is involved.

MR. BROWNE: Order that precautions against the disease be taken and shall immediately report its findings and precautions taken to the Minister. Would you be willing to accept a clause of that kind?

DR. ROWE: In order to clarify the section I have no objections whatsoever, although it is not in other provincial legislation, but it does happen in practice. I have no objection whatsoever to having that slight addition put in there, that these things should be done after reporting to the Minister.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Would the committee like to have that clause stand so that the Honourable Minister could draft this sub-paragraph, and insert it later in the Bill?

MR. FOGWILL: Mr. Chairman, on the point raised by my honourable colleague, perhaps if a clause were put in specifying the qualifications of the inspector, it would not be necessary that inspectors would have to report to the Minister. That would be a round-about way to go about it. But if there were a clause put in there setting out the qualifications of the inspectors, a knowledge of diseases of plant, etc.—perhaps it could be done that way, and then the diseased plants could be destroyed immediately.

MR. CHAIRMAN: To save time probably it would be better to let it stand and refer back to it later.

Clause 4 read and carried.

Clause 5 read:

5. No person shall
(a) import or bring any plant grown in a nursery into the province from any other province; or
(b) cause any such plant to be brought into the province from any other province, unless the plant is accompanied by a certificate, signed by an official authorized by the government of that other province to issue such certificate, showing that the nursery in which the plant was grown is free from disease.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, this seems to be a very far-reaching section. I wonder if anything like that has been in existence up to the present time? There are a number of advertisements appearing in magazines telling how to get beautiful flowers for gardens, ten thousand blooms in six months and fifty thousand next year, and many trees and bulbs and things of that sort are on sale at various nurseries. Do they all now have to be examined by an expert before they can be bought and brought in. Is not this going to interfere a great deal with the sale of flowers, shrubs and trees?

DR. ROWE: Well, Mr. Chairman, on that point, I again appreciate the significance of what the honourable gentleman has said. But I don't see that we can fail to have these powers. I think we must have that power there. If you could think of such an extreme case—certainly we have no poison ivy in this province, and we hope we won't have—surely no person should have the right to send poison ivy down here and just plant it in his garden from where the seeds could easily be spread all over the province. That is an extreme case. But again I must repeat that other provinces have similar powers, and I have not heard they have worked any hardship in actual practice. I do think we should have the same powers. Any such powers after all must be administered and made use of in a discrete manner.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, while the discretion is always with the province, it seems to be very broad—for instance the definition of plant includes trees, shrubs, vines or other vegetables and growths of fruit or seeds thereof. Now take all the products which are brought in here, bananas, apples, oranges, plums, grapes—the definition of plants is very wide. There is every kind of vegetable imported into Newfoundland, hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of every kind.

MR. CHAIRMAN: If the honourable gentleman will forgive me—it is plants grown in nurseries.

MR. BROWNE: That is true, it applies more to flowers and nursery-grown plants and vegetables. Well, take tomatoes, there will be a great many of these, and cucumbers and fruits of that kind in any case. What is the practice now? Is there anything of that kind in existence at the present time?

DR. ROWE: It is inspected by the Federal authorities because most of this fruit comes from the United States. Speaking from memory now, Mr. Chairman, I am quite sure—and I have looked through this Federal Act and this Federal Government does have such powers. I imagine that in certain cases importation of ordinary fruit and such things, I should think it is almost a nominal thing, nevertheless I do think it is wise that that provision should be included, and the Federal Government should have such powers that can be applied if necessity requires it.

MR. HOLLETT: What I am asking the Honourable Minister—the honourable chairman has told us it does not mean a potato—what is the interpretation? We would like to have that information. After all the Honourable Minister must tell us—does it mean a potato or not?

MR. CHAIRMAN: I must also draw attention to repetition. The same arguments have been made over and over again.

MR. FOGWILL: Mr. Chairman, will the Honourable Minister give the Opposition the assurance that the purpose of this Act as he outlines it will be used only for that purpose, or that it will be used only for the stopping of diseases in plants within the province and the importation of these diseases into the province?

DR. POTTLLE: Mr. Chairman, I would like to address myself, if I may, to the point raised by the Opposition, namely, this Act in general and this clause in particular. The point I wish to make is that this Bill must work in collaboration with the Federal Act—The Destructive Insects and Pests Act—and on looking at these regulations which are made under the Federal Act both as they relate to nurseries, as they relate to plants or as they relate to the powers of inspectors, I can say, even as a layman, the powers and regulations therein are as sweeping as they are in this Act.

MR. BROWNE: Would the Minister indicate what the definition is in the Federal regulations—we want to be satisfied that what we are doing is something sensible.

DR. POTTLE: Plant means all members of the vegetable kingdom including—

MR. BROWNE: Nurseries? There is an exception right away.

DR. POTTLE: Except flower vegetables, and field crops, seed bulbs, mushrooms and seed potatoes.

MR. BROWNE: That is excepted from nursery stock—then that is not in keeping. Is there any exception there? There is no exception here at all. I suggest, Mr. Chairman, that we could save a lot of time if the Minister would agree to let this stand until tomorrow so that we can look up the matter and give us a reasonable chance to examine into it.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Does the committee agree that this clause stand?

Clause 5 stand.

Clause 6 read:

6. No person shall act as an agent, representative or salesman of a person operating a nursery situate outside the province unless he holds a valid and subsisting certificate of registration issued by the Minister.

MR. BROWNE: Now, Mr. Chairman, what does that mean? Does that mean that every agent or salesman—"No person shall"—now I have to go back again, Mr. Chairman, to the definition of nursery, because it is included in this Act.

"Nursery means a place where plants other than flowers, vegetable and field crop seeds and seed potatoes are grown, kept, packed, delivered or shipped for sale to be used for ornamental, propagation or cropping purposes."

So that a nursery has a very wide definition. It seems to me anyone who is selling vegetables or plants for someone outside this country has to be registered with the Minister. Has the Minister given personal consideration to this section?

DR. ROWE: Mr. Chairman, I don't know if I have given personal consideration to it. I have read it over and took note of what I think it denotes, and I understand it. It simply means that no person will be allowed to bring in or handle nursery articles unless he has a certificate. I don't think any person in, say Buchans for example, can bring in and on his own start in buying and bringing in articles and distribute them throughout the province without having a certificate—just as any member in any other occupation requires a certificate, or in certain occupations.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I am not raising these points just for the purpose of obstructing this legislation by any means, but I feel there is tremendous room for objection in the way it is being carried out. Any person in any of the twelve hundred settlements in Newfoundland can write away to a seed company and order seed or any storekeeper can take orders for his customers. But they can't do it any more. Who is to register every shopkeeper that is going to carry on that sort of business? They will have to be registered.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Not the ordinary person who, as my honourable friend suggests, writes away and orders seed—it does not affect him.

MR. BROWNE: Any person, it says.

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, not anyone for his own use.

MR. BROWNE: Well he is covered by the previous section, the one that stands.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Does this clause carry?

MR. HOLLETT: I am not sure this is properly clarified: "No person shall act as an agent, representative or salesman of a person operating a nursery situate outside the province unless he holds a valid and subsisting certificate of registration issued by the Minister." I think the honourable member for St. John's West is correct there. Mr. Speaker, I think this ought to stand over too until it is aired a little more.

Clause 6 carried.

Clause 7 read:

7. (1) The owner of every nursery shall register his nursery with the Minister and shall furnish him on a form which he shall provide particulars of
(a) the location of the nursery,
(b) the ownership and management of the nursery,
(c) the kinds of plants grown, kept and packed in and delivered or shipped for sale from the nursery,
(d) such other matters touching the operation of the nursery other than financial returns which the Minister requires, and on registration of the nursery the Minister shall issue a certificate of registration to the owner.

(2) The owner of every nursery shall display the certificate referred to in subsection (1) in a prominent plant in his nursery.

MR. FOGWILL: Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the Honourable Minister—does this mean every farmer in the country, big and small, would have to register under this section?

DR. ROWE: I don't see that at all.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, may I ask if this word "nursery" means inside or outside the province or both?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Inside.

MR. HOLLETT: It does not say so.

DR. ROWE: I don't see why a nursery in Manitoba, for instance, should have to be registered down here.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I take it this means that every person who operates a farm or garden growing any kind of vegetable or any kind of fruit must be registered with the Minister and pay a licence. I would suggest to the Minister that would be a very unpopular measure, and I believe it is a very unwise and unjust measure. I don't see the necessity of doing that at all, as it is putting people to a great deal of unnecessary inconvenience.
MR. HOLLETT: Not only unnecessary—don't forget nurseries mean gardens any place.

MR. SMALLWOOD: No it does not.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Order. The Honourable Leader of the Opposition has the floor.

MR. HOLLETT: Nursery means a place where plants are grown, kept, packaged or shipped for sale.

DR. ROWE: Yes, for sale.

MR. HOLLETT: They are all for sale.

MR. BROWNE: Once again, can't I suggest to the Minister that this is a lot of unnecessary red tape and there is no need of this at all.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, I know we personally buy potatoes from someone in Foxtrap, and have done so for quite a while. Will this mean that man has to be registered with the Minister, and will it mean that every other farmer in the country has to be registered, and certainly if so will have to pay something for it?

DR. ROWE: It seems to me, Mr. Chairman, that the honourable members on the opposite side are using their imaginations. I don't see that there is a lot of red tape any more than in the other Provinces of Canada. I can only say this has been examined by people in this field, and they do not regard it as red tape. No local farmer has to pay a registration fee, I think my honourable friend knows that is so.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, my honourable friend, the Minister of Mines and Resources, pointed out this is copied from Saskatchewan. I would point out that this does not obtain out there. There you have big farmers who grow perhaps a million dollars worth of grain and their product is confined to one or two things like oats, barley and wheat. whereas here we have a lot of kitchen gardens where a man will raise a few barrels of potatoes, a little lettuce, a few turnips and cabbage and beet and other garden vegetables of which they take no account whatsoever in Saskatchewan where nobody would bother about such. Out there their money is invested in millions of dollars worth of machinery for the purpose of growing wheat. It seems to me that the conditions which apply in Saskatchewan are completely different from what apply here. I suggest we let this stand over too. There is nothing to be gained by rushing it through, there is no great hurry about it, and let us give a little further study to this section of the Bill.

DR. ROWE: Mr. Chairman, I hasten to point out two things. One is that perhaps I did not make myself clear at the beginning. This legislation was prepared after an examination of all the provincial legislations in existence across the nation, and also, of course, after due examination of the Federal legislation to which I have already referred on several occasions. And it was done as a result of discussions and some collaboration with the Federal organization concerned. I do not mean to say that this is simply a copy of Saskatchewan legislation. I said, or at least I thought I said, that we had taken more from the Saskatchewan legislation. I said, or at least I thought I said, that we had taken more from the Saskatchewan legislation than from any other. I don't know the exact words I used, Mr. Chairman, on that, but it is not an exact duplication of the Saskatchewan legislation, rather it is based primarily. I would say, on the Saskatchewan legislation. I am sure we all agreed in the debate on the principle of the Bill that it was the sort of thing we are all anxious to bring into effect for the protection of our farmers, which is the principle involved here.

MR. CHAIRMAN: The honourable member may not discuss the principle.

DR. ROWE: Mr. Chairman, I was merely replying to the point raised here. What I would say is that we have no desire whatsoever to have this thing rushed through. I would be very happy, as a matter of fact, as I have already indicated my willingness, to have a clause inserted in section 3 which would elaborate a little more fully, and if some additions and deletions are indicated we could have them. There is no reason in the world why this should go through today or tomorrow or at any time as long as it goes through during this session.

Clause 7 stand.

On motion the Committee rose, reported progress and asked leave to sit again.

Report received, ordered read a third time on tomorrow.

First Readings:

The Honourable Minister of Fisheries and Co-operatives asks leave to introduce a Bill, "An Act to Establish the Newfoundland Fisheries Development Authority."

MR. SPEAKER: Before I put the question for leave on this item, I may tell the House that I have studied this Bill, and was somewhat puzzled by the question: "Was this a money Bill or not?" I searched for precedent, and I found conflicting authorities. However, I came to the conclusion that it may be regarded as not being a money Bill. That is based on a very close parallel which

I found enacted by this House on April 3, 1925, a Bill which set up the Highroads Commission. The similarity was that this Bill set up machinery and envisages the expenditure of possibly large sums of money which it seems will subsequently have to be voted by the House. A parallel case exists in the Highroads Commission Bill which called for the expenditure, as it turned out to be, of large sums of money, subsequently voted by parliament.

Therefore, I feel the House may proceed with this Bill.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, may I ask if you gave consideration to the fact that the Highroads Commission were men who received no salaries and were just citizens who were called the Highroads Commission?

MR. CURTIS: There were provisions in the Bill for salaries.

MR. BROWNE: I don't think they received any salaries.

MR. SPEAKER: I was just citing one. I have the Act here, and I might say there is another precedent which does specifically state salaries, and that was the Bill, the Adjudicature Constitution of the Supreme Court. I took those two into consideration in conjunction because this one is a very short Bill, "An Act Relating to the Constitution of the Supreme Court"—which reads—"The following salaries shall be paid." Which Act, it seems to me sets up statutory salaries. I have read the Hansard relating to both Bills, and on these two I base my decision that the present Bill might properly be considered as a non-money Bill.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, may I be allowed to ask something about the Supreme Court? It had already been established for a hundred years.
You gave a ruling, I think, that there is a Bill already in existence and as it is the purpose to make some amendments it could not be so considered, but this is a new Bill which is going to spend millions.

MR. SPEAKER: Might I point out to the honourable member, that while the courts were in existence yet the salaries were legally not in existence. As the Minister pointed out, in this particular Bill, this Bill is to make legal a practice which we had been following out, which really could be considered illegal, if it were not legal. I might say in fairness to the House, I am not happy about the decision, but there are so many precedents in handling Bills of this kind in this way that I feel we could handle it as a non-money Bill. I think I may say that the time has arrived—certainly we ought not to change horses in midstream, but when we should clearly define the practice to be followed in this House with regard to Bills which involve expenditure of money.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, if I may, I certainly abide by your judgment, but I must add this: That is a most important Bill, and as far as we can gather, involving the expenditure and consequently the collection of large amounts of money. We have not seen it, and it is probably lengthy. We were hoping it would be introduced as a money Bill to give us an opportunity to study it.

MR. SPEAKER: I can assure the House, however, that it would be quite safe to give the Bill first and second reading without, shall I say, forcing ourselves to carry on with it as a non-money Bill. The Attorney General can bear me out in that he studied the question also. In fact I called him in last night to get some legal evidence on the matter. I see nothing further we can do at this stage.

Has the Honourable Minister leave to introduce this Bill?

Answers to Questions
Question No. 71—In course of preparation.

Question No. 70:

HON. J. R. SMALLWOOD (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I answered that question yesterday, at least in part. With respect to the remainder of the question, the Comptroller of the Treasury who is also the Deputy Minister of Finance called upon me this morning to inform me that he is preparing answers with regard to the remainder of the question. It is a monumental task because it involves a number of lists containing the names of literally tens of thousands of items—nevertheless, it was asked for.

MR. M. M. HOLLETT (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, if the honourable member will allow me, is that in connection with the gypsum plant?

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, I said yesterday the only equipment they shipped into Newfoundland was equipment for the cement plant. That is the only transaction they had, and it is in connection with that the answer is being prepared.

MR. HOLLETT: In that connection, I don't require every item. Different classifications is all that I want.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Well, Mr. Speaker, it appears from the wording of the question that the honourable gentleman thought that MIAG had shipped to Newfoundland, machinery and equipment other than what they had shipped for the cement plant. The fact is that the only machinery and equipment they shipped was for the cement plant, and it was in connection with that machinery that that list was required and is being prepared, as is also the information with regard to the amount of insurance carried, the rates of premium payments and the names of the companies to whom the insurance was paid.

Question No. 69—In course of preparation.

Third Reading of Bill "An Act to Amend the Public Libraries Act." On motion read a third time, ordered passed and title be as on the Order Paper.

Third Reading of Bill "An Act Respecting the Supreme Court of Canada and the Exchequer Court of Canada." On motion read a third time, ordered passed and title be as on the Order Paper.
Third Reading of Bill "An Act to Amend the Evidence Act."

HON. L. R. CURTIS (Attorney General): Mr. Speaker, I ask leave to have this order deferred, also item No. 5 on the Order Paper, "An Act Respecting the Prevention of Fire."

Order deferred.

Committee of the Whole on Bill "An Act Relating to the Protection of Plants and to the Prevention of the Spread of Insects, Pests and Diseases Destructive to Vegetation."

MR. SPEAKER: This committee had leave to sit again. I do now leave the Chair.

MR. COURAGE: I believe the Committee had reached Clause 7.

MR. BROWNE: That was standing at the time.

Clause 8 read:

8. (1) The Minister may require the owner of a nursery to obtain a certificate of inspection from an inspector, who is hereby authorized to give the certificate, certifying that the nursery has been examined and found to be apparently free from disease before sending out or permitting any plants to be removed from his nursery.

(2) A certificate issued under subsection (1) is valid for one year from the date of issue.

HON. DR. F. W. ROWE (Minister of Mines and Resources): Mr. Chairman, before going into it specifically I would like to point out one thing which was not clear at the beginning here, particularly to my honourable friend, the member for St. John's West, who has been absent from the Province a good deal during the past few years—this Bill is not meant for us to infringe in any way on our Vegetable Grading Act which concerns consumption of vegetables and looks after such things as inspection and grading consumable vegetables. This one is concerned with the spread of and prevention of certain diseases. I might say that right now we have some evidence that there might be a disease amongst potatoes which has never been in Newfoundland before, and which we are very anxious to get cracking on, and which could have very serious repercussions. It is a form of ring rot, I think they call it, which represents roughly to the potato, what "foot and mouth" disease would be to cattle, or cholera to swine. Having said that, Sir, I will now say that we have taken due notice of the various comments which have come from the other side, and we have made several modifications which, I think, will eliminate the criticisms which have been expressed. The first of these will be in the definition. I feel that the definition for nurseries and for plants could be modified without in any way offsetting the purpose we had in mind. I may say, I had expert advice on the preparation of this matter, in fact I spent almost the entire evening and last night working on this so that we could come to some agreement on the Bill.

I have a copy of the definition of nursery here if my honourable friends would care to have it. "Plants include all members of the vegetable kingdom and any part or product thereof where the plant or product is used for reproduction purposes."

These are the two definitions we agree to over here, Sir.

Now, Sir, I have several others involving other sections relevant to comments made by my honourable friends on the other side. Before going on to them I presume the Chair would wish to deal with this section.

MR. CHAIRMAN: The honourable member, I take it, now wishes to delete these two items and substitute the amendments here given.

DR. ROWE: That is correct, Mr. Chairman.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Does this clause as amended carry?

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, I wish to ask one or two questions. Do I understand that there is a disease known as ring rot at the present time being brought in here?

DR. ROWE: Mr. Chairman, I said there is some evidence to show, from advice I have had, that there may be some ring rot in Newfoundland at the present time.

MR. BROWNE: In Newfoundland?

DR. ROWE: Yes, but it has not been definitely proven as yet. But there is some fear that there may be. If so then immediate precautions are absolutely necessary. That is one of the reasons why we should have this thing go through so that every possible means will be brought to bear to cope with it in the event that such a situation does exist.

MR. BROWNE: I appreciate the interest shown and the attention which the Minister has given to this, and I am very pleased to see he has made these alterations, which correspond, I think, very closely with the definition and regulations put out by the Federal Department of Agriculture relating to the destructive pests and insects Act. But I think there is a difference in the definition of plant—including all members of the vegetable field. What I want to know is what does the products thereof mean? For instance if we are dealing with seed potatoes, is that covered under this definition, or cut-up seed, or certain plants which, I suppose could be divided?

DR. ROWE: As a matter of fact I notice that same phrase occurs in the other definition in the Federal Act as well, and I don't know what the technical interpretation would be. I presume it is meant to cover any part of a vegetable when it may be used for reproduction purposes, such as shrubs which can be separated.

MR. BROWNE: I have one other question before I sit down. I would like to ask if there is an understanding with the Federal Department of Agriculture that they will assist in regard to the inspection, and have they been advised as to the provisions incorporated into this Act. The reason I ask is because under the British North America Act, Section 95—In each Province the Legislature may make laws in relation to agriculture in the Province, and it is hereby declared that the Parliament of Canada may, from time to time, make laws in relation to agriculture in all or any of the Provinces, and any law of the Legislature of a Province relative to agriculture shall have effect in and for the Province as long and as far only as it is not repugnant to any Act of the Parliament of Canada.
DR. ROWE: Mr. Chairman, I may say in answer to that—only this morning officials of the Federal Department were consulted in regard to this, and they have been consulted all through. My honourable friend will be interested in this: I won't give it in detail—it occurred some years ago that the Federal Government did have an Act, (probably the same one as it has today) and Prince Edward Island did not have any Provincial Legislation. Arising out of the Federal Act, prosecution took place and an appeal was made to the Supreme Court of Canada, and the Supreme Court of Canada reversed the judgment. As a result of that it was afterwards decided that each Province, in order to make the Federal Act fully operable, should have complementary legislation. It was from this decision that the Provinces then brought in their own complementary legislation of a nature as is envisaged here. I might say also, Mr. Chairman, apropos of this matter of inspectors, we have no inspectors of our own as a Province. The Federal Government has inspectors here and their work is in close contact with our Department. We do not envisage, and certainly not in the immediate future, the appointment of any provincial inspectors here.

Clause 7 carried. Clause 8:

DR. ROWE: Mr. Chairman, I wonder if I could have your indulgence again, Sir, and revert to Clause 3, which I am not sure was allowed to stand?

MR. CHAIRMAN: There were several clauses allowed to stand. We may take them now if you wish. Committee reverts to Clause 3.

DR. ROWE: Mr. Chairman, the possibility was pointed out by one speaker that the powers given inspectors here appeared to be very wide. Personally I did not envisage any inspector taking any drastic action without reference to his Minister. Nevertheless we have put in a slight amendment here, which I would like at the moment to consider again. I have a copy here for my honourable friends. (b) as it originally in Section 3 will be deleted, and the amendment that I submitted will be put in in its place. (c) will be deleted and the amended paragraph put in in its place. That, I think, covers the point.

MR. BROWNE: Will (b) be deleted?

DR. ROWE: No, I don't think so, Mr. Chairman.

MR. HOLLETT: That is the one we are interested in.

MR. BROWNE: Yes, it should be (d) rather than (c).

DR. ROWE: Yes, (b), (c) and (d) are deleted.

(ii) order that plants referred to in sub-paragraph (j) shall not be removed except to such place and under such conditions and whether for the purpose of destruction thereof or otherwise as he specifies in the order;

(c) inspect and examine all plants grown in or imported into the Province for sale therein or for export therefrom and certify, if so required, to whom it may concern or to any person that the plants are diseased, and on instructions from the Minister order that they be destroyed or destroy them himself.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, in regard to this new provision, which I think is necessary, as it does not put such power in the hands of the inspectors. Suppose for instance there is a shipment of potatoes. Up to a thousand bags are not inspected immediately and are held up for some time, perhaps two or three weeks or a month or two months and they go bad (it would not be surprising if they did go bad). Is there going to be compensation to the people who own these potatoes? It seems to me to be a very serious thing, if they are to be held up, and I think the Government will run into trouble and be liable to action. I have here today with me some of the certificates which appear on the bags which come in from Prince Edward Island. It must be remembered the potato business in Prince Edward Island is more important than the fishery to Newfoundland, and when Prince Edward Island gives a certificate like this, it is supposed to be the hallmark of quality and compares with any potatoes grown in the world. If these potatoes are held up and go bad, somebody will have to pay compensation, as these potatoes have this certificate upon them in every case. I think Canadian farmers have a wonderful reputation. It is the principal industry in Canada, and it would be a serious thing by inference to make an attack upon either their ability to grow potatoes or their ability to inspect them. I believe the case to be that in potato growing areas they have a great number of inspectors who inspect the crops at different times during the growing season, and right up to the harvesting they are under constant inspection and supervision, and are accordingly qualified for this grading as a No. 1 variety. Therefore, I think the Minister ought to bear in mind that if any drastic actions are taken against them it may render the Government liable to action.

Amendment carried.

DR. ROWE: Mr. Chairman, the next one which we have—I am not sure that anybody has commented on this yet—But after due consideration of the Federal Act we are suggesting a change to Section No. 5. I have a copy of the change here, which I can pass along. We are suggesting an amendment to clause 5 in this way: "The Minister may require that every person who imports or buys or causes any plant to come into the province from any other province shall obtain a certificate signed by an official authorized by the Government of that province to issue such certificate showing that the plant is apparently free from disease."

I notice that is only permissive—"The Minister may . . ." But we feel, in the light of experience, the amendment is a desirable one.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, are not these certificates good enough, certificates re the produce of New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island, which run into millions of bushels of potatoes, and the certificate is on each bag with initials and numbers so that they can be traced. Can we put up higher standards of certification for them than we require from our own people?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Chairman, it is not necessarily a question of whether we can call for a higher standard. It may be that we wish to call for a different standard. It is not because they have a certain standard in other provinces that we must be bound by their standards.

MR. BROWNE: These are Federal.
MR. SMALLWOOD: Even Federal. If the occasion arises when even Federal regulations and Federal certificates, which are satisfactory to the Government of Canada, might nevertheless be unsatisfactory to the Government of Newfoundland. We had a very good case of it in point in Canada within recent days in the outbreak of the "Foot and Mouth" disease in the Province of Saskatchewan, when that Province refused point blank to permit the importation, across their border from that Province and certain Provinces of the west, of any beef, hogs, originating in these provinces—they refused, and that was that. What are you going to do about it? Now the time might come when we might wish to take exactly the same steps.

DR. ROWE: Mr. Chairman, I would also like to add that my honourable friend is now debating the Vegetable Grading Act which is designed to look after vegetables, and where he suggests the situation might arise—I don't think it would arise in regard to this Act—This is for the prevention and spread of diseases.

MR. CHAIRMAN: The amendment is that Clause 5 as it now stands be deleted and the clause as amended be inserted—Amendment carried.

DR. ROWE: Mr. Chairman, I may say these are all the amendments which we propose. We have examined this thing almost with a microscope with the appropriate officials and aided by our legal advisors as well, and we are satisfied that the objections raised by our honourable friends on the other side have been met by these amendments. We do not see that there should be any further amendments.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Does the Committee wish to consider Clause 7 now?

MR. BROWNE: We have considered it, Mr. Chairman, but the Minister still insists on going ahead with it.

DR. ROWE: The change in the definition might change it. I understood the objections were based more on the definition. I think we have met the objections there.

MR. BROWNE: Yes, all right.

Clauses 7 to 11 read and carried.

Clause 12:

12.—(1) Where disease exists or is supposed to exist on any plant the Minister may direct an inspector or some other competent person to make an examination and inspection, and may order that any plant so infested, or such part as he deems advisable, shall be immediately destroyed by burning, either by the person appointed to make the inspection or by the person owning or having possession of the plant, or some other person so directed in writing, and the person carrying out the order shall report to the Minister in writing as to the nature and extent of the work so performed, together with a fair estimate of the value of the plants destroyed.

If, in a nursery, orchard or collection of plants, an inspector finds disease on plants located in several parts of the nursery, orchard or collection and decides that it is advisable in the public interest to destroy all the plants in the nursery, orchard or collection, or in any part thereof, and so reports to the Minister, the Minister may direct that an inspection or examination be made by an additional inspector whom he may appoint and upon the advice in writing of both the inspectors he may direct that all the plants in the nursery, orchard or collection or any part thereof shall be destroyed without requiring that every plant therein shall be first examined.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, with regard to this section: I notice that the last line or so of Clause 12, sub-paragraph 1... And the person carrying out the order shall report to the Minister in writing as to the nature and extent of the work so performed, together with a fair estimate of the value of the plants destroyed.

Now in that respect, a farmer may have diseased plants on his premises and it may spread to the farm of somebody and all his plants have to be destroyed. Is there any provision for compensation to the man whose plants are destroyed? That section seems like it was taken from an Act where compensation was being considered, otherwise what is the purpose of making a fair estimate of the value of the plants destroyed? I think in the Federal Act there is provision for compensation.

DR. ROWE: I think the honourable member will probably find that has been covered under section 16, when we come to the regulations. If it is proper to refer to that? "The Lieutenant-Governor in Council may make such regulations..." "(e) providing for the compensation that the Lieutenant-Governor in Council on recommendation of the Minister may, in his discretion, pay on account of the destruction of plants or containers in accordance with this Act, such compensation not to exceed two-thirds of the value of the plants or containers destroyed."

Clauses 12 through 14 carried.

Clause 15 read:

15.—(1) The Minister shall collect a fee of one dollar for every certificate of registration issued pursuant to Sections 6, 7 and 14.

(2) Every certificate of registration issued pursuant to Sections 6, 7 and 14 expires on the thirty-first day of December in the year in which it is issued.

MR. HOLLETT: The Minister shall collect a fee of one dollar for any certificate—if I may refer back to clause 14—No person shall carry on the business of selling nursery plants or as agent or representative of a nurseryman unless he holds a subsisting certificate of registration issued by the Minister." That refers to nurseries inside and agents outside the country, is that right?

DR. ROWE: Yes.

MR. HOLLETT: I was just wondering if the payment of that one dollar might not be a hardship upon our own people inside the country who have nurseries. I can clearly see why we have to charge a dollar for registration—if the Minister would like to make some remarks—

DR. ROWE: I don’t think, Mr. Chairman, it would be a hardship. After all it is a small amount compared with the registration fees persons carrying on certain types of business have to pay. I think most of the nurseries could find that dollar. It is just a small fee to cover some of the clerical expenses.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Chairman, there are only half a dozen, or perhaps twenty nurseries in the country. Why go to the trouble to collect this amount. It seems ridiculous and an annoying thing.

DR. ROWE: I think it is customary everywhere.

MR. HOLLETT: Yes, it is customary to have a dollar on everything now.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, (h) says, prescribing the terms and conditions for the production and sale of seed potatoes. I wonder what is meant there? There is another comment I would wish to make: Is there any provision regarding the tabling of regulations. I have not seen any regulations tabled this year. I am sure there must have been some made during the past year, and there ought to be some provision to bring these regulations into the House so that we will know what has been passed.

DR. ROWE: Mr. Chairman, in regard to control, we feel it is necessary to provide in the final analysis that absolute control be exercised over seed potatoes. We might have to exercise discretion sometimes, but the time might come when we need to exercise ultimate control.

Most regulations I have had any cause to make have been gazetted and published.

MR. BROWNE: Nobody sees them apart from a handful of lawyers, and a handful of government officials unless some reporter is active enough to dig them up. I propose to ask that at an early date, the government lay on the table of the House all regulations made during the past year.

DR. ROWE: I don't think this side of the House will object to our laying the regulations on the table of the House.

MR. SMALLWOOD: As a matter of fact, Mr. Chairman, I think virtually all the legislation we have asked the House and that this House has passed in the past five years contained authority for the Minister or the Lieutenant Governor in Council to make regulations, and required also, that within fifteen days after the House opens, regulations so made shall be tabled in the House. I know I pretty well always circulate amongst my colleagues each year before the House opens reminding them of this provision and asking them to get together any regulations or reports which, under their own particular Acts, they are supposed to table. The fact that there is no such clause in this Act rather surprises me. I think, Sir, the omission has not been deliberate.

HON. DR. H. L. POTTLLE (Minister of Public Welfare): The regulations under the Mothers' Allowances Act, for instance, have already been tabled here without any questions about them being raised.

HON. W. J. KEOUGH (Minister of Fisheries and Co-operatives): The regulations under the Fishery Loan Board Act also have been tabled during this session.

MR. BROWNE: I expect what happened is that they were tabled very quietly, and I did not get a chance to see them.

Clause 16 carried.

Clause 17 read:

17. Every person who
(a) contravenes any provision of this Act or the regulations or any certificate issued or order made or given pursuant to this Act, or
(b) fails to comply with or neglects to carry out or offers any hind-rancé to the carrying out of any provision of this Act or the regulations or of any order or direction made or given pursuant to this Act, or is guilty of an offence and liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding two hundred dollars or in default of payment to imprisonment for a term not exceeding three months or to both such fine and imprisonment.

(c) fails to comply with any condition attached to any certificate issued pursuant to this Act.

MR. BROWNE: I notice that this penalty clause carries a maximum but no minimum fine. This is very good, because I was thinking that sometimes a man may voluntarily commit an offense—We must bear in mind that regulations are going to be made which sometimes may not be drawn to the attention of the person who commits the offense. So that often in these cases it is put in—every person who wilfully contravenes any provisions of this Act or wilfully neglects to comply—Actually as it stands, I think, it may be passed because there is no minimum penalty. I draw that to the attention of the Minister—It is someone who wilfully does something who is really responsible.

Now are you going to add something there about laying regulations on the table of the House?

DR. ROWE: If the Chairman would allow me, I would suggest that the section included in other legislation be added to section 16 as subsection (2).

MR. CHAIRMAN: We could pass clause 17 and then revert to clause 16.

Clause 17 carried.

MR. CHAIRMAN: I move the committee revert to clause 16. Motion carried.

DR. ROWE: The motion is, Mr. Chairman, that sub-section 2 be deleted and that sub-section 3 of Clause 24 of the Act Respecting Prevention of Fire be inserted, "Regulations made under this section shall have effect from the date of publication in the Newfoundland Gazette or from such earlier or later date as may be prescribed in the regulations, and all regulations shall be laid before the Legislature within fifteen days after they are made, if the Legislation is then in session, and if not, then within fifteen days after the commencement of the next ensuing session."

Clause as amended, carried.

On motion the committee reported having passed this Bill with some amendments.

Report received: Amendments read first and second time.

Bill ordered read a third time on tomorrow.

Second reading of Bill "An Act Further to Amend the Wild Life Act."

MR. SPEAKER: The debate on second reading was in progress, and the honourable and learned member for St. John's West adjourned the debate.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, I had a marked copy. I did not think we would be going ahead with that one. I am sorry to delay the House.

MR. CURTIS: While we are waiting could we go on to first readings, Mr. Speaker?

Hon. the Attorney General asks leave to introduce a Bill, "An Act Respecting Policies of Fire Insurance."
On motion this Bill was read a first time, ordered read a second time on tomorrow.

Honourable the Minister of Municipal Affairs and Supply asks leave to introduce a Bill "An Act Further to Amend the Community Councils Act."

On motion this Bill was read a first time, ordered read a second time on tomorrow.

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if, with the consent of the House, we could consider a small Bill of which notice has not been given, but just to formalize things, I would give notice and I ask leave to present a Bill "An Act to Amend the St. John's Municipal Loan Act, 1953." It might facilitate the honourable members, Mr. Speaker, if in giving notice I just said this: This is a Bill which deals with an issue of bonds which last year we gave the St. John's Municipal Council permission to issue. The Bill is purely a formal one enabling the signatures of the Mayor and the City Clerk to be lithographed on the bonds instead of handwritten. I understand the bonds have been printed. We would like to have the amendment put through immediately so as to facilitate the sale of the issue. So that I will give notice, Mr. Speaker—the Bill has been distributed, and perhaps, with the indulgence of the House, we could have it introduced immediately and passed through all stages.

On motion Bill read a first time, ordered read a second time.

HON. S. J. HEFFERTON (Minister of Municipal Affairs and Supply): I don't know, Mr. Speaker, whether I can add much to what the Honourable the Attorney General has just said. The amendment deals with giving authority for lithographing signatures of the Mayor and the City Clerk. The matter is concerning the sinking fund, and that over a period of twenty years they are enabled to pay the sinking fund. The second amendment is to establish a sinking fund for the said bond. I move the second reading of the Bill.

On motion Bill read a second time. Ordered referred to a Committee of the Whole at a later hour this day.

Second reading of Bill "An Act Further to Amend the Wild Life Act."

MR. BROWNE: I believe, Mr. Speaker, at the previous sitting we were discussing this Act, and after having heard the statement made by the Minister and by the Premier about the danger to our salmon rivers owing to the depletion of the stock of salmon, I asked for an adjournment.

Now, I have been a salmon fisherman for a great number of years, and I regret to say the salmon rivers have deteriorated during that time. This has been due to a number of causes. In my opinion the chief cause of the depletion of the salmon stocks around the coast of Newfoundland is due to the intensive fishing which has been carried on for export of frozen salmon to Great Britain. I believe, during the war a tremendous amount of salmon was taken and put in cold storage and shipped to the other side. That might have been before the war, I am not quite sure, but I remember the astonishing amount of salmon taken and bought from the fishermen around the coast and I believe Labrador as well and sent to the other side. I notice that the size of the salmon began to get smaller and smaller. There are other causes, of course. One other cause has been due to the fact of wood being cut... along the river banks more than it should have been. When that happens you get a quick run-off and a big flood in the river when the salmon go up to the headwaters, or again the rivers dry up and all the salmon are left to die. The rivers have not a steady flow of cold water from the little streams that should percolate into them from the woods where the snow has been resting sheltered from the sun, such as was formerly the case. I don't think that the fishing around the coast is very intensive at the present time, but in some places they do have regulations. I am not sure how we stand here regarding the lifting of nets over the week-end. I think we did have it here at one time, but I am not sure it is in effect at the present time. But leaving the nets over the week-end and allowing quantities of fish to be left there with the nets not attended to until Monday is not a good idea.

Now we can protect the salmon in various ways. One is by having proper river wardens on the salmon rivers, which are desirable as places for fishermen to go and fish. When the Federal Government took over the administration of the policing of the rivers, it seems to me they adopted a very serious practice of having one man, with perhaps an assistant, do most of the rivers on the Avalon Peninsula on a flying column basis. They have taken the river wardens off particular rivers and have these men going around. That is not satisfactory. It is very much better to have men on the rivers themselves. It is certainly desirable to have good men on these rivers.

I have not seen any figures, and I don't know whether the Minister has any showing the number of salmon which were being caught in the various rivers in Newfoundland by those persons against whom this Bill is intended to legislate at the present time.

At the present time any person who has resided in the country for six consecutive months is entitled to take out a license for a resident. We have been told that the purpose is to prevent persons who have not been here twelve months, other than Canadians, but members of the U.S. Army if they are not here twelve months from taking out residents' licenses. They must take out the same kind as tourists. In other words, pay so much a day or a higher fee per week than they would have to pay if they had the privilege of taking out a resident's license. Now, I think we should know the number of people who are to be affected in this way, and how far that would improve the position on the salmon rivers, because I believe that this is a very trifling affair. I don't think it is worthy of the Government. I am not saying how worthy the Government is, but I don't think it is worthy of any Government to introduce such a thing for the reasons I propose to show.

Now, if a man is not entitled to take out a resident's license until he is here twelve months, it means a man coming here in September won't be able to take out a resident's license for eighteen months or twenty months because the fishing season does not begin for trout until January and for salmon until June. That means for twenty-one months he won't be able to fish. As it stands now with the six month period, as far as the salmon are concerned, if a person comes here at the end of August the season is practically over and he has to wait until the next June before fishing. That is nine months. Now, most of these American servicemen, are here, I believe, between twelve and eighteen months, so that most of them will not be eligible to take out a resident’s license at all.

MR. SMALLWOOD: They can still fish though.

MR. BROWNE: Yes, and pay the tourist license. Now, that is very generous indeed for the Government to say to these servicemen—what are they doing down here but protecting the North American Continent from invasion against our enemies, and in doing so spend hundreds of millions of dollars? The United States is recognized as the protector of the civilized world today, outside of the Communist countries—we owe a great debt to this country. Only the other day—

MR. SMALLWOOD: We don’t owe our salmon, we are not going to pay our debt by allowing our salmon to be—

MR. BROWNE: The Premier must be in a very bad mood today, when he picks up so small a point. The United States, let me go on, is the country to which we send our fresh fish. We want them to buy more fresh fish and send more fresh frozen fillets up to the United States of America. And American firms come down here. There was a gentleman here on opening day who was a very good friend of the Premier’s, an admirer of the Premier, and the Premier was an admirer of his. He was down here, and he established a fresh fish plant in Fortune. The Americans have proven in many ways that they are good friends of Newfoundland, and is it our return to say, yes we will get all we can out of you, and when it comes to fishing we will just treat you like any other tourists coming in here, even though you are here to protect us.

MR. SMALLWOOD: They are not here to protect us! They are here to protect themselves!

MR. BROWNE: Now, the Premier is certainly going to wing altogether today.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Why not get down and worship them.

MR. BROWNE: I think you might get down and worship them. I think we owe them a great deal.

MR. SMALLWOOD: We don’t owe them our salmon.

MR. BROWNE: I think that is the least we owe them. We owe them the privilege—and, Mr. Speaker, I asked the Minister to indicate if he could, how much this is going to improve the salmon situation. I doubt very much that it is going to improve it at all. It seems to me to be a very insignificant thing for the Government to do, a mean and miserable thing for the Government to do to the country to which we owe so much, and to whom we are going to look for so much and—

MR. SMALLWOOD: And who owe us a lot also, a great lot.

MR. BROWNE: The Premier has already spoken in this debate. He told us about his fishing experience as a small boy at the Steadies where the Donovans Birch Mill is at the present time. I hope that is not the reason he has the mill there. But we sell more than fresh fish to the United States. Our lobsters and frozen salmon, I believe, are sold there in considerable quantity. They are very good neighbours. The Buchans mine is owned by the American Smelt and Zinc Company and a good friend of the Premier has been exploring for oil over on the West Coast. I regret to say he does not seem to meet with the success he had hoped. At the same time he is an American citizen. Does not the Premier feel that actions of this kind are small things, and it is worthy to be taken into consideration whom we are dealing with when considering residents for the purpose of granting licenses.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Will my honourable friend yield for a moment?

Does not my honourable friend realize that the issue becomes extremely simple now. Nobody will have any salmon fishing in Newfoundland in another ten or twelve years, nobody at all, it is that serious. We have information on it. There was a conference in Ottawa the other day where we were represented, and we have information on this very disturbing information.

MR. BROWNE: Why are we not given that information?

MR. SMALLWOOD: It is this bad: The Government of Canada now want to make us a very special concession in this Province, that they will postpone by one year in this Province certain regulations they intend to bring in, because it is a Federal jurisdiction. In addition to sport salmon fishing it applies to salmon fishing in salt water, and that is a great concession. That is just how serious it is.

MR. BROWNE: The Premier, when speaking, should have told us all the circumstances reported to his Government. We should have been told when introducing this Act. I know the salmon fishery has gone down because of the extensive salmon fishing taking place. I am aware of that. But I ask the House seriously, how good and how effective is this provision? What effect is it to have? There are other ways in which the salmon fishery could be preserved, other than this one. Only yesterday morning in the "Daily News" I read: "Northern Area Command Personnel on Increase During 1954—Spending $871,000 in Newfoundland." This represents—

MR. SMALLWOOD: That has nothing to do with salmon.

MR. BROWNE: It represents an increase over the first quarter—

MR. SMALLWOOD: It might come from liquor—but they get free liquor, without paying any customs duty, not from the present Government, but because the Federal Government permits their liquor to come in free without paying any customs duty or excise tax.

MR. BROWNE: The Premier may be aware that is so, I am not. I don't think, Mr. Speaker, the arguments I have advanced today deserve the interruptions and sneers of the Government nor of the Premier. I am serious when I say he should not take that attitude with regard to this great country, such a friend to Newfoundland. I still feel that this clause is not going to help salmon preservation very much, and should be dropped from the Bill.

As for the provision to have different fees for different areas: In theory that is all right, but how is it going to work. The Minister has not stated that. When we get into the committee stage, he may be able to tell us how it will work. Today a man gets a license to go fishing for salmon, and may fish in Trepassey, Placentia, Salmonier or the Humber, or any other river in the country. Now, according to this provision, he has to get a different license for each river, or for some rivers a different license from what he has for another—it may work—but I must say that this thing can be magnified as far as the benefits are going to be to the country. I do know that on the Humber River people have had tremendous catches, which they should not be allowed to take. Now, the catch is reduced, I believe, to seven a day, and the effect upon the river has been very much less than expected. In former years some of them took twenty-five and thirty and forty salmon a day out of the river.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Would my honourable friend know how many have been destroyed by shots of dynamite?

MR. BROWNE: I don’t know.

MR. SMALLWOOD: There are certain visitors who do that. That is what they use.

MR. BROWNE: If the Government knows of anybody whether a visitor or resident, who used dynamite, he should be prosecuted and punished accordingly. I don’t think any magistrate would fail to take cognizance of that most unorthodox way of catching salmon. To my knowledge I have never seen it. I do, though, remember one occasion on the Codroy River finding dead salmon on the shore, and I was advised by my guide at the time that he believed dynamite had been used there.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Can my honourable friend make a guess as to how many caribou and moose have been machine-gunned to death by airmen on this Island? Literally thousands, as I happen to know.

MR. BROWNE: I don’t happen to know that. I am surprised. It is the first time I have heard it. I don’t remember ever seeing anything about it in print, and I very much doubt the figure is correct. However, once again, I know there is great difficulty about finding out who does those things, but if the culprits are caught they should be brought before the courts and punished accordingly. But I don’t see that that has anything to do with this provision here. This provision does not seem to me to be brought in because somebody used dynamite. There does not seem to be any justification for it. I must say, Mr. Speaker, I am opposed to the Bill.

MR. FOGWILL: Mr. Speaker, I oppose that section too. I don’t think it is going to aid or help the salmon fishery of Newfoundland at all. In fact I am not going to say much about it in any case, but I will say this in respect to the warden—the qualifications of the wardens are not up to the standard on some occasions. In fact, I was told last year, in one nearby river, a warden was sitting by the bank while an angler had the salmon fouled and he did nothing. He was watching the salmon fouled on the hook and he did not know it. Another thing is the pollution of the rivers which has more to do with the loss of our salmon going up to the ponds to spawn, and as has been pointed out here by my honourable friend, when there is little water in the river the salmon lie on the bottom. I know that some people also use nets at night. These things are all detrimental to the salmon. I suggest to the Minister there should be legislation so that if the river is in such condition that the salmon are lying on the bottom, and due to the lack of water it is difficult for them to get up the river, then the river should be closed for a week or ten days, to give the salmon a chance to go up. But this amendment Act, Mr. Speaker, is not going to help us save the salmon fishery rather it is the poaching and the pollution of rivers and such things that are destroying our salmon. There is one other thing. I took up the question of restocking our ponds and lakes with trout. That is one of the things done in practically every other province, restocking ponds and setting up hatcheries. The ponds and lakes of other provinces are restocked, and they take other means also to facilitate the increase of trout. The trout should grow a greater size in a shorter time if those other things were done.

But, Mr. Speaker, we are not going to save the salmon by putting a limitation on the length of time a person has to be in the province, whether six or twelve months. There are these other things, river pollution, low water and all the other things having to do with salmon going up to spawning places. I think that is what the department should take into consideration, and not the wearing of badges, no matter where they are worn.

MR. JANES: Mr. Speaker, I am not going to say all I could probably say, Sir, in regard to salmon fishing in Newfoundland, and with regard to this particular amendment which we have before us now. But I do want to refer to the arguments used by the honourable member for St. John's West when he stated that this amendment is aimed at making it more difficult for American servicemen to obtain salmon licenses here in Newfoundland. He added that we should not be doing this because of the fact that they are buying so much of our fish and are such friends of Newfoundland. I contend they buy fish because they like it, lobster because they like it and not because they are friends of Newfoundland. Do you think if I want a suit of clothes and buy it at Joe Goldstones it is because I want a suit of clothes and not because I like Joe Goldstone. So it is with people who buy our Newfoundland fish, and it has nothing at all to do with the amendment in the Act here today. The Americans are here. They are our good friends. We like them, and we hope that they like us. They are here to defend the North American Continent, and it is our job, in this Assembly, to defend the Newfoundland salmon.

In my own district of Fogo, we have the Gander River. I am told that a hundred years back it was not uncommon for settlers down there, to take out of the mouth of the Gander River, thousands of barrels of salmon each season, these they salted and put in barrels and exported. Today, Sir, it is difficult to get a salmon in the Gander River to eat even. One could leave Glenwood to go down the Gander River, which is a very beautiful trip, and you will see pole after pole on that river day after day for the whole salmon season. As a matter of fact, Sir, there are so many people fishing on that river today it is even difficult to get through in a canoe. Last time I went down there I had to pull out as I could not get through in a canoe, there were so many people fishing there. No river in the world can stand that, no river in Newfoundland can stand it. The Humber River is just about gone for exactly the same reason.
Salmon to Newfoundland is important for two reasons: It is important to our fishermen as a source of livelihood, and it is important to us in that it is a tourist attraction. It is important to us as individuals in that it gives us some little relaxation as well. But if the situation is desperate and serious, as we are told it is, Sir, then it is the duty of the Legislature and the duty of the House to introduce measures to protect the salmon fishery. This probably is not the best method, it does not go all the way. Probably there are other methods of conservation that could be used. Surely we cannot sit by while trying to build up a programme of conservation and allow the fishery to go altogether. Once it is gone how are we going to conserve it? This amendment at least will do one thing, reduce the number of people getting residents' licenses and the number of people who will fish the Newfoundland streams. If that can be done now while other programmes are being prepared, surely it is our duty to do it, rather than let the whole thing go. Personally, I don't know if I would like to see the Newfoundland rivers leased to private parties. I have not given the matter much thought. I feel if I want to go on a salmon fishing trip I should be allowed to go, with certain restrictions placed on me. But surely we are not going to allow the situation to develop to where we are all going to take up the boats and there is nothing left to any of us. This is designed to reduce the number of people salmon fishing, who have no interest whatsoever in the salmon fishery of Newfoundland, and take these people out. They are not tourists. They are not fishermen. They are people who are just passing through and have little or no interest and who are of little or no interest to the people of Newfoundland. Because of that, Sir, I support this amendment.

DR. ROWE: Mr. Speaker, assuming there is no one else who wishes to speak on this motion, I shall close the debate. When I moved second reading of this Bill a day or two ago I stated that there were two amendments (1) whereas in the past we had given American servicemen in Newfoundland, residents' licenses after six months residence in the Province, we now propose to extend that to twelve months, which incidentally would then coincide with the length of time they must spend here in order to obtain a big game hunting license. (2) the only other amendment in this Bill was the inclusion of the words "of different areas," but so that this would make sense we gave the relevant clause from the parent legislation. I did not know, and simply do not know how to put that more clearly. Yet our honourable friends, or at least some of them, on the other side have made it appear, and have been so reported on the radio and in the press, that we are now bringing in clauses discriminating, that we are now introducing badges to be worn and a number of other things taken from the clauses as they are given in this amendment here. I shall deal with the comments of the Honourable Leader of the Opposition. He said he was against class discrimination and distinctions such as envisaged in this Bill here. Mr. Speaker, we did not envisage class discrimination. The words and clauses which he read are not new in this amendment, but they are from the parent legislation and have been in existence in that form or another, ever since the first control over salmon ever existed in the Island of Newfoundland.

MR. HOLLETT: What do they mean?

DR. ROWE: They are the words which make it possible for my honourable friend to get a license for five dollars and for a man from Texas to get his for thirty dollars. That is what they mean. That is what they have done, and always have done. That is why they were put in there in the beginning. We did not do it. It is not new. We are not introducing it. The only amendment in the Bill is that of "Different Areas." I explained insofar as I was able, just the purpose of that, so that the Government, if it so desired, at any time would be able to charge different rates, issue different licenses, different charges for different areas of Newfoundland.

MR. HOLLETT: Will the Honourable Minister allow me to ask a question?

DR. ROWE: Mr. Speaker, I am not allowing the honourable gentleman to ask any questions or to interrupt in any way. I tried my best to set him right and he asked me to sit down when he was speaking, so that I am not yielding one fraction of a second. If he wants to speak to a point of order any time it is a different matter.

The honourable gentleman also cast ridicule on this, he thought was a novel thing, that is the wearing of badges. We are not introducing the wearing of badges, Mr. Speaker, because it has always been there, as far back as I can find it in any legislation, the wearing of badges is prescribed by the qualified officers who were appointed. There is no reference at all to trouters.

MR. HOLLETT: The trouters have to wear badges, is that it?

DR. ROWE: Our honourable friend also spoke about the lack of enforcement. He said the Department of Mines and Resources (I am paraphrasing what he said) are guilty of neglect by not enforcing the present regulations. I must confess I was astonished to hear that from the Honourable Leader of the Opposition. I thought he would know something that I thought was known by just about everybody in this Province, that is the Department of Mines and Resources of this Province was not responsible for enforcing the regulation, it is the Federal Department. We have no more say over the game wardens, no more control over the game wardens on Gander River, except through the recommendations we might make to the Federal Government, no more to say about them than we have to say with regard to Chiang Kai-Shek's soldiers on Formosa.

Our honourable friend, the member for St. John's West has offered some suggestions as to how we can improve the present situation, and what must be done, as has also his colleague from St. John's East. I take it both these honourable members have caught salmon, as I have myself, twice in my life, and they are only further proof of a phenomenon that I have noticed particularly in those last two years: Every man who has ever caught a salmon considers himself an expert on wild life matters, especially salmon matters. In the last three years I have heard many, many anglers give many reasons for what is happening to our salmon and our trout and to other game. I have heard hundreds of convincing arguments. The only trouble is that very seldom do any two of the arguments agree or coincide, so much so, as a matter of fact, that the analogy is this; the expert advice one hears about salmon reminds me of the expert advice one hears about education. Everybody is an expert when it comes to education or religion or rabbits or moose. Every man who ever shot a moose can tell me just what we should be doing about the moose in Newfoundland, and just why caribou are not in such a place where they were twenty-five years ago. So with the salmon. The fact of the matter is, Mr. Speaker, that this House seems to have forgotten a very simple fact to which some publicity has been given, that is that the advice which has been coming in to me as Minister of the Department of Mines and Resources has been so conflicting, so contradictory that last year I recommended to the Executive Government that I be authorized to contact and engage the services of some qualified authority in the wild life field. My colleagues agreed with me, so I contacted the former head of the fish and wild life services of the United States of America, the man who is now head of the largest institute of its kind in the world, a recognized authority. As a matter of fact, Mr. Speaker, he is considered the world's greatest authority on wild life. A man who has made surveys for nineteen states in the United States of America, not to mention surveys for other countries outside the United States. He has offered to come here without charge or remuneration, and bring his staff with him and make an impartial investigation of our wild life resources. He did come here and is due here again within the next two weeks, and will be here again next fall. A man who is one of the world's greatest authorities on wild life. I am sure his report will not solve the problems of our wild life. I am doubtful if anybody knows the solution to all of them. I don't believe there is one man in the world today, Mr. Speaker, who knows why there are fewer salmon in some of our rivers today. Who knows why on the Eagle River, for instance, on the Labrador where a few years ago you could get twenty pound salmon yet the average salmon caught there last summer, I am told was five pounds. It is not pressure of population. Nobody seems to know all the answers. Certainly in certain instances like on the Gander and the Humber common sense tells us there must be a limit to the number of salmon that can be caught. In Big Falls, for example, where I believe nine rods are supposed to be the maximum, either nine or eleven, and where only last year on one occasion seventy rods were counted at one time. Certainly pressure of that kind must make a difference in the number of salmon. But there are other factors, and nobody seems to know them all. I can cite one example: A few weeks ago the Maritimes made a representation to the Federal Government with regard to our west coast (that is Newfoundland's west coast) salmon fishery, which is carried out with nets because the fishermen were intercepting salmon on the way up through the Cabot Straits making their way to the rivers of Eastern Canada, where there are notably fewer salmon today than a few years ago. They blamed it, as I said, on our important, basic and commercial west coast fishermen. They can't explain how or why their rivers on the Mainland today, that once teemed with salmon, are not all they were. The salmon must be intercepted by our west coast fishermen. Somebody else will say the paper companies did it with wood in the rivers and pollution of the streams. My honourable friends know there are certain streams where there is never any recognizable pollution, yet the fish have declined in size and declined in quantity.

Our honourable friend from St. John's West is greatly perturbed over the injustice that we are perpetrating on our friends from the United States who are here protecting us from all the evils in the world. Mr. Speaker, I was in here in the Spring of 1941 when our friends from the United States actually came here. I worked with them actually for a few weeks when waiting for the University to open, and I have had close, friendly relations with them ever since. I have enjoyed their hospitality and have been very happy to have them enjoy mine. I fail to see how in the world our changing this from six months to twelve months, which is a normal thing anyway for anybody coming in who are just tourists—a bank manager who comes here in charge of a bank from Montreal. It happened last year such a man came from New Brunswick and had to wait twelve months before getting his resident's license.

MR. BROWNE: Six months.

DR. ROWE: But in cases where the salmon season has just begun, I fail to see how this can be considered to be an injustice. I said when I moved second reading that in certain areas pressure was very great, obviously areas such as in the vicinity of Stephenville where you might assume there are thousands of servicemen. The thing is this, Mr. Speaker, we have to make changes, and these changes we are recommending here might very well be in the interest of the American servicemen themselves. That has escaped the attention of my honourable friend. Then again there is the matter of the income to this Province from this, what used to be considered a great resource. It is interesting to note my honourable friend enjoyed getting the right to catch a salmon, and paid five dollars. It would cost him in 1949 five dollars or less, I am not sure of that, but not more than five anyway. That very year it cost the people of Newfoundland, when we took in a total of twenty-five thousand dollars because my honourable friend got his license for five dollars or less, and others like him, the ordinary people of Newfoundland, all the people, had to pay ninety thousand dollars for the protection of these very rivers. And we collected $25,000. This country then collected twenty-five thousand dollars and spent ninety thousand dollars of the people's money. It just did not make sense, not to me at any rate.

There is one other thing I want to say. First of all, we don't propose—and I am surprised at the amount of agitation this little Bill has brought forward—but we don't propose anything radical. I think some of our friends, or maybe I should not say friends, are a bit sorry we are not introducing the leasing of rivers. Then they would be able to say "I told you so." Of course now they say we had intended to do so but got frightened with everybody kicking up all over the Province. So, sir, perhaps I had better say here—

MR. BROWNE: Who referred to it?

DR. ROWE: Perhaps I had better say here that (and I need to say it) this Government has never considered formally or informally the leasing of rivers, never at any time.
My own department, which is the department responsible has never (as a department that is involving the Minister or the department) considered the leasing of rivers at any time during my connection with it, in spite of the fact that it has been made to appear that we have. The only thing that could ever be described as a consideration of it at all was the fact (and I did not even know at the time) that when the Director of Wild Life on one occasion was in the Maritimes on other business and had a little time to spare, he looked into the matter of the leasing of rivers as it applied to New Brunswick (he was not sent to do so by the department or myself) and rightly so. The Deputy Minister is now on the Mainland at Ottawa and has at least a dozen things I directed him to inquire into, and if he has time I hope he inquires into a dozen others, things I did not speak about. The Director of Wild Life did not bring back a report to me. As a matter of fact the first information I ever had that he had done so was when he said it to the press. I say now, as I said in the beginning, the fact that the Director of Tourist Development, who had every right to do it as Director of Tourist Development, expressed his personal opinion that rivers should be leased, he in no way committed the Government or indicated that the Government had given any consideration formal or informal to it.

MR. BROWNE: He can say what he likes? The Government does not take any responsibility for what he says?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Except during elections.

MR. BROWNE: Certainly then.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Full and complete then.

MR. MROWNE: As long as he is on the right side.

MR. SMALLWOOD: He is on the right side.

MR. BROWNE: As long as he speaks in favour of this Government.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Is not that obviously the right side. Look at your small numbers and the large number over here.

MR. SPEAKER: Order—The Honourable Minister has the floor.

DR. ROWE: My honourable friend seems to be disturbed, Mr. Speaker. This is not a panacea of all the ills in this Province. I did not anticipate that anybody would ever regard it as a panacea, as there are only two minor amendments. If they want at any time a full scale debate on wild life I would presume to oblige them. Let me say this: We have many serious wild life problems in this Province just as any other community has, and we are trying to get some advice on them. We hope to have a report on them this year or early next year, from Dr. Gabrielson.

I will say this in closing the debate, sir. We, as a Department and as a Government are fully aware of the seriousness of our wild life problems. We are not going to take any radical or drastic measures. We are not going to deprive our people of the traditional rights they have enjoyed down through the years by a wild life dictatorship at all. We are trying to do what appears to us to be sensible at this time. I move second reading of this Bill, Mr. Speaker.

On motion Bill read a second time.
Ordered referred to a Committee of the Whole on tomorrow.

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Speaker, if the House would now agree to go into a Committee of the Whole on the Municipal Act we read first and second time today?

MR. SPEAKER: Committee of the Whole on Bill "An Act to Amend the St. John's Municipal (Loan) Act, 1953." Leave was given earlier today for this Committee to sit.

Committee of the Whole:
Clause 1 read and carried.
Clause 2 read:
2. Section 3 of The St. John's Municipal (Loan) Act, 1953, the Act No. 33 of 1953, is amended by adding thereto the following:

"The signature of the Minister on the said bonds may be lithographed or otherwise mechanically reproduced."

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, may I ask a question? Is it customary to have it done in this way? Is it not necessary for the Minister to sign the bond formally?

MR. CURTIS: I think, Mr. Chairman, unless it is provided in the Bill itself it would be necessary for the Minister to sign it.

MR. HEFFERTON: Anybody who has had the job of signing a big issue of bonds can appreciate the usefulness of this.

MR. SMALLWOOD: This varies from one bond to another. Sometimes it is made a condition, each one be signed individually, but where it is not so provided they can be signed mechanically.

Carried.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Chairman, may I ask if the City Clerk still has to sign the bonds?

MR. CURTIS: Yes, there must be one signature, Mr. Chairman.

Clause 4 read and carried.

On motion the Committee rose and reported having passed the Bill without amendments. Report received. Ordered read a third time on tomorrow.

Second reading of Bill "An Act to Amend the Apprenticeship Act."

HON. C. H. BALLAM (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, in rising to move second reading of this Bill I may say that the apprenticeship plan of the Department of Labour, set up in January 1953 an Apprenticeship Board, and following upon our experience the following amendments are indicated:

Section 2 of the Bill deals with two points (1) it delegates under certain conditions of the Apprenticeship Board certain powers to the Director of Apprenticeship, and (2) it enables the board to make recommendations, subject to the approval of the Lieutenant-Governor in Council. In the second paragraph the Board may review the actions taken by the Director under his delegated powers.

The other section deals with the additions of certain cases, and actually the whole Bill is merely an amendment of sections of the Act by adding these sections, which we will review when we get into Committee stage. I move the second reading, Mr. Speaker.

MR. FOGWILL: Mr. Speaker, I am very interested, certainly, in the training of apprentices. I have been engaged, Sir, in a trade for the past 37 years, I believe, and I have had the pleasure, Sir, and I have had the privilege of working with many young men who came into the places where I was employed, to serve their term as apprentices. However, Sir, I cannot go along with the proposed amendments to the Provincial Act which we have before the House now. For one thing, Sir, it gives too much power to the director; although I am personally acquainted with the director, and have been for quite a number of years, and feel he is well qualified and quite competent to carry out the provisions of this Act. He is a very qualified machinist. I know him well, and he is a grand chap. However, Sir, the powers of the board are being delegated to the director insofar as the powers which may be delegated to him under Section 9 of the Apprenticeship Act.

There is a new clause 27, which says "No person between the ages of sixteen and twenty-one years, who is eligible to be an apprentice in any designated trade, and has not completed training as an apprentice, shall be employed in a designated trade for more than a total of three months in any one year unless the Board issues a permit authorizing him to be so employed, or unless he enters into a contract of apprenticeship."

In other words, it seems to me, Mr. Speaker, this clause 27 gives the director the right and the authority to decide for himself, whether a youth from 16 to 21 years of age, will work at a trade for any more than three months in any one year unless he accepts the director’s dictates and lends himself as an apprentice. Now, Sir, I say this situation interferes with the civil rights of the young man concerned and with the civil right of his parents, who I think are the first people who are to decide and the boy himself whether he should go and enter upon an apprenticeship or not. Now that is the section I disagree with, Mr. Speaker, and I certainly am opposed to it.

There is one other section I am opposed to and that is the new amending section where the Board would require any and all persons in any area, other than registered apprentices and persons who receive a permit under Section 27A, to hold a certificate of qualification, and prohibiting the employment of persons who do not hold such a certificate. This is qualified by the section which prescribes the terms and conditions under which certificates of qualification and permits may be issued. Under this new section, then, the Board may issue permits for those already engaged in a trade at the time of issuing the regulations, and allow them to continue in the trade. But after that period, Mr. Speaker, the Board may not or may issue a permit for people who worked at a trade. Mr. Speaker, we have many people working at trades in this Island, and of all those who work at trades there are quite a few who have worked as helpers, and I will say of many of these people, and I know them just as well as I know many apprentices, that quite a number engaged in the trades could be classed as designated tradesmen who had learned that trade just as well in the past. Any young man of eighteen or nineteen through circumstances perhaps in which he may find himself or his parents may find themselves, could enter a trade as a helper and after a number of years be well qualified to do any work that trade required. He would not have a certificate, that is true. I know situations where a number of apprentices working at a place have become qualified after their term of apprenticeship but others have not qualified. Because of the fact that a person is apprenticed to a trade it does not mean he will come out at the end of his years of service as a qualified man.

I know this Act here describes the terms and conditions under which qualifications may be issued, also there are sections requiring the payment and subscribing the amount of fees for examinations for certain qualifications.

Mr. Speaker, I cannot go along with the amendment Act because it is discriminatory and interferes with the civil rights of youth and interferes with the civil rights and privileges of parents or anyone who may be eligible to enter a trade. The powers of the Board are delegated to the Director under Section 27A, it may or may not be used, but at the same time it gives the director the power, and regardless of the fact that the director himself is a fine man, he may not always be there. If it becomes law nobody knows what is going to happen to the director or when we may have a different person. That, Mr. Speaker, I am opposed to. I object to it and think he should not have this power over any boy. It is interfering with civil rights of a boy and the civil rights of his parents. I oppose this amending Act, Sir.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, I was a little late getting up. I am sorry, but I just want to add a word. I know the Honourable Minister of Labour and my esteemed colleague on my left have much more knowledge of the requirement for an apprenticeship than even I may have. But on the face of it, Mr. Speaker, it does look rather arbitrary that the director whoever he may be has the power to require all persons in any area other than registered apprentices to receive a permit under Section 27A which reads:

“No person between the ages of sixteen and twenty-one who is eligible to be an apprentice in any designated trade and has not completed training as an apprentice shall be employed in a designated trade for more than a total of three months in any one year between the said ages unless the Board issues a permit authorizing him to be so employed or unless he enters into a contract of apprenticeship.”

Then it goes on in Section 27B. “The Lieutenant-Governor in Council on the recommendation of the Board and with the approval of the Minister may, by order, limit the application of this Act or regulations to any area or areas of the Province specified in the order.”

Now that may be all right as far as I know. But on the face of it and Sir, my whole argument is merely on the face of the Bill, because as I say I am not well acquainted, not as well acquainted as I should be, with the Apprenticeship Act. This section which was read by the honourable member for St. John’s East “27A” debars from employment anyone between the ages of sixteen and twenty-one. There is something there I saw a moment ago where an employer in certain areas may, on certificate from the director, be denied the right to engage such young men. I think in this little, small country of ours we don’t need to be so strict as probably they need to be in bigger centres like Montreal and Toronto and such places. I can see no reason for it. If the Honourable Minister can give me some cause why this should be absolutely essential in this country I would only be too happy to change my opinion. But I do support the remarks of my honourable friend from St. John's East who is a labour man of many years' experience, as is the Minister.

MR. BALLAM: Mr. Speaker, I think the first point is that my honourable friend, the member for St. John's East, mentioned the fact that we are granting too much power to the director. The Board itself has recommended that. This Board meets about once in three months or sometimes a little longer period of time in between their meetings. They have a lot of work that has to be done, and a lot of decisions to be made. Because of that they feel that they should give certain powers to the director to carry on these things in between periods of their meetings.

MR. FOGWILL: If the Honourable Minister will allow me? Mr. Speaker, under Section 9 in the first part of the section (a) to (i) I don't mind that amount being delegated to the director. These are only ordinary things which could come under his direction and he could do these things rather than have the board settle them. But it is the new section in the amending Act, Section 27A, and under the new sections (k) and (l).

MR. BALLAM: Mr. Speaker, the honourable gentleman then agrees with all the amendments up to 27A?

MR. FOGWILL: No, Sir. We can deal with that in Committee probably.

MR. BALLAM: Well, Mr. Speaker, regarding the point I was speaking on just now—The powers delegated to the director, you will see further on in the Bill that the Board has the power to review anything the director authorizes. You will also notice under 2 (b) "shall at the request of any person who feels aggrieved thereby made within sixty days of the exercise of the power or duty." If any person, therefore, be aggrieved by an Act of the director then they may, within sixty days, take up their case with the Board who would have it in its power to either change or review.

Now, the other point mentioned by my honourable friend, the member for St. John's East, was that he feels that we should not put such restriction on employment of certain persons. I may say that this is necessary, and it is not a restrictive measure altogether. It means that those employed or to be employed in a designated trade between the ages of 16 and 21 years should take up an apprenticeship course. Now these designated trades are agreed upon by the apprenticeship branch of the firms themselves, the firms in which those who would apply would be in agreement with the director, or the Board of Apprenticeship Training, and these terms the employers agree with. These advisory boards are made up by the employers and employees in the designated trades who have advised this sort of thing. It would not mean now that anybody coming in or wanting a job in a firm and who has had no contract of apprenticeship training, would be prevented or stopped from getting a job. The idea of the three months here is to provide work, if you like, for the students between the ages of 16 and 21 who just get a job in the summer time when not at school.

MR. FOGWILL: It does not say that.

MR. BALLAM: That is the point.
That is why that is put in there. That is the way out for such students to be employed during the summer, and there is nobody being prevented from getting a job.

MR. FOGWILL: There can be.

MR. BALLAM: There can not be. There is no idea or intention of preventing anybody from getting any job. The only thing is that we want to make sure that those between the ages of 16 and 21 who have a job in a designated trade will take the course of apprenticeship training. We know that that is necessary, and my honourable friend knows that it is very necessary. We have a shortage of skilled tradesmen in this country. The biggest trouble we have had in supplying the labour demands in this last few years is the shortage of and the lack of skilled men. The whole idea of the Apprenticeship Act is not to prevent a young man from getting a job, but to help him when he does get into a job to become proficient and to study as an apprentice, and to qualify himself for his future life. He would then, of course, as the Act says, be given a permit of qualification that he could present anywhere and demand his journeyman's job or pay.

There is nothing in this to keep anybody from having a job. It is well thought out and it is customary in all Apprenticeship Acts, I understand, and it is required by the Board. I certainly can't see how we can oppose it. If it should create a hardship I am sure that we can always change it. But I don't think it was ever intended that way, and the powers given to the director are limited. The regulations that we will make here will be done by the Lieutenant-Governor in Council. There is no great fear of anything happening that is harmful, as far as this is concerned. We are endeavouring to do good by the apprentices rather than to harm them.

I move the second reading of the Bill, Mr. Speaker.

On motion Bill read a second time, ordered referred to a Committee of the Whole House on tomorrow.

Second reading of Bill "An Act Further to Amend the Workmen's Compensation Act."

MR. BALLAM: Mr. Speaker, in rising to move second reading of this Bill "An Act Further to Amend the Workmen's Compensation Act," I may say that at the present time Section 1 of this Act merely says how this Act may be cited. Section 2 states that executives or directors of a corporation may have to pay duplicate assessments where they serve more than one company. In some cases directors may spend only a relatively small time on the premises of a company where they serve. Under this amendment they would be covered by the Act only on application for coverage which may be made under Section 4 of the Act. Now, I may say that Sections 3, 5, 7 and 9 in the Revised Statutes of Newfoundland 1952, the Workmen's Compensation Act, as it stood in 1952 were consolidated into one Act. In that revision some of the numbers in the original Act were changed in 1953 and amendments were made to the Workmen's Compensation Act. But when we look at it now some of the references to the Original Act are incorrect. This is due to the fact that the revision of the Statutes had not been completed when the 1953 amendments were passed. To simplify references we are repealing the 1953 amendments and incorporating them into Sections 3, 5, 7 and 9 of this new Bill, so that all of these sections are already covered in the last year's amendments which we are just repealing now and incorporating into this Act.

The other sections of the Bill are two points: The first point is that the Board may at some time put up a building of its own. They are now in a rented building that may be required of them at any time. It is customary for several boards to have their own building. If and when they do that this section of the Act will enable them to do so.

The second point is that it is intended or hoped to introduce a pensions scheme for the staff and members of the Board. The scheme would be a contributory one and subject to the approval of the Lieutenant-Governor in Council. Under this provision, Section 28 (b) the employees and the members of the Workmen's Compensation Board, as you know, who are not civil servants and have no pension scheme, and there is nothing in the present Act that would enable them to have such a scheme for themselves, will be enabled to have such a scheme.

The other points in the Act are most of them the amendments of last year that we are incorporating here. I don't think there is anything else. All these points will come up, Mr. Speaker, in Committee stage. I move the second reading of this Bill.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, there are only a couple of points I wish to refer to. I noticed from the Annual Report tabled here a few days ago, that the Board feels pretty badly about the office space, and requires larger accommodations. I noticed that they pay nine thousand dollars a year rent, I take it for the USO Building. It says the Board must of sheer necessity undertake the erection of its own building. I presume, therefore, the place is not big enough for the working staff there. I don't think the rent seems to be very exorbitant, besides it is a building owned by the Government.

MR. SMALLWOOD: By the University.

MR. BROWNE: The Department of Public Works has charge of it.

Then they go on to say the staff and the committee are energetically engaged in examining various contributory pension schemes with a view to adopting one most suitable. Now, I placed a question on the Order Paper because I read that and because I know the men who are appointed to the Board are and were great friends of the present Government, and passed the age when they would normally be engaged into the civil service. I am wondering if it is an orthodox procedure to provide pensions for men of that type. I have no complaint against the work they have performed. They have performed, in my opinion, a very excellent job. They started from scratch and in a short time have built up this tremendous fund. I think the time has come to reconsider the rates they are charging. But that does not enter into the picture here today. They have a large surplus of money, and feel very generous, and are going to do in a short time what other compensation boards took a very long time to get around to. And this authority to inaugurate this pension scheme has been passed over to them. The Minister did not seem to be quite aware of how much attention they have been giving to it. They seem to be ready now to come to a selection of the type of scheme they favour. It is true it is not going to cost the Government any money, but it is coming out of the money paid by assessment upon the employers and employees. I trust when they do make a scheme these points will be borne in mind and the scheme will be a competent one, suitable to the ability of the men that are there, and that they won't get any special favours because they were friends of the Government.

MR. BALLAM: Mr. Speaker—

MR. COURAGE: Mr. Speaker, I may say that nobody has asked me for my support of this Bill, and I have been approached by no member of the Workmen's Compensation Board or no employee of the Board. But I do know some of the people who work up there, and I can assure the House that they are not all old men. As a matter of fact quite a number of them are younger than I am, and I don't consider myself so very old. Some are men who worked in civil service jobs previously, and quite a number have served in the armed forces, and are forty years and younger. I would suggest that if a pensions scheme is going to come in, it is going to be contributory. This should be considered in their salaries. I noticed the other day when the honourable member's question which he referred to a moment ago asked for the scale of salaries, which are not very large up there. There are quite a number of people up there getting between $2,600 and $3,000, and people in the civil service who are doing comparative work are receiving salaries just as large as that and their pension scheme is not contributory. I would like to repeat that point again, Sir: They are not old men up there. Quite a lot of these people working up there are young people.

MR. BROWNE: Just an explanation, Mr. Speaker?

MR. SPEAKER: The honourable member has spoken.

MR. BROWNE: This is just an explanation of what the honourable gentleman has just said. I must interpret his remarks.

I was referring to members of the Board not to the services of the Board.

MR. SMALLWOOD: There are no old men on the Board. Two are quite young, and another is just middle age.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, I have nothing to say against this Act at all except this—I am looking at the report which came in the other day, and I am a bit concerned over the large amount of money that has been built up in such a short space of time by this Board. I believe, if my memory serves me right, that there is something like three million dollars and over that has been collected from the employers since the Bill was brought in, of which about one million dollars was paid out by way of compensation, and one million dollars or thereabouts invested in Canadian Government Bonds, and slightly over one million dollars invested in Newfoundland Government Bonds—I take it that was the bond issue of last year. So that I agree with my colleague on my right that some consideration ought to be given to the rates which they obtain, because after all you know, although you take it out of employers in a sense you take it out of employees as well. You can only take so much. I was wondering—and there is machinery, I think, in the Act to take up the matter of the rates.

MR. BALLAM: It is arranged that if the accident rate in any industry is down they adjust the rates down and make a refund to the firms. The rates are fairly comparable with the rates in industry all over.

MR. HOLLETT: The point I wish to make is that since 1950, (I think the Act was then set up) they have collected three million dollars and only one million has gone to compensation and the other two million has been invested in bonds. If that keeps on you can see what you are going to have, and that you are going to have some difficulty.

MR. BALLAM: I wanted to move the second reading here before six o'clock, but to the point that my honourable friend made regarding the building up of this big fund. You see, Mr. Speaker, the Board started from scratch and there are none, or very few continuing claims at the present time. The assessments are made from the firms and the funds are to be built up from these assessments. For instance if you have in an industry a fatal accident then a family has to be looked after for such time until the widow remarries or the children grow up and so on. When you have total disability payments you have to pay these forever until the person dies, and these snowball every year until say in about ten years time there won't be any surplus at all. It will be a sort of using up of the surplus that we have accumulated to pay the continuing cases.

Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of this Bill.

On motion Bill read a second time, ordered referred to a Committee of the Whole on tomorrow.

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Speaker, I move all further Orders of the Day do stand deferred.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I should like to inform the House this afternoon I made additional charges against Dr. Valdmanis, of defrauding the firm of MIAG of the sum of $360,000.

I now move that the House at its rising do adjourn until tomorrow, Monday, at 3:00 of the clock.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if I might ask the Attorney General what legislation we are going ahead with on Monday?

MR. CURTIS: Fisheries.

On motion House adjourned until tomorrow, Monday, May 3, at 3:00 of the clock.

The House then adjourned accordingly.

The House met at three of the clock in the afternoon, pursuant to adjournment.

HON. J. R. SMALLWOOD (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I wish to rise to a point of privilege about a statement published in the press. There does not, however, seem to be much point in making it at present and I wonder, if Your Honour would defer calling the House to Order for a few moments.
MR. SPEAKER: Order.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I rise to a point of privilege; to invite Your Honour's attention to a report that appeared in Saturday's Edition of the "Daily News," of the proceedings of this House on Friday afternoon. The headline is: "Holds Servicemen Slaughters Wildlife," and the opening paragraph reads as follows:

"Servicemen doing duty in Newfoundland are using dynamite and machine guns to slaughter wildlife in the Province. Premier Smallwood charged in yesterday's session of the House of Assembly."

Now, Mr. Speaker, I will admit that that is the only point in this account in the "Daily News" of Saturday last. In the rest of the statement there is no reference whatever to my having said what I am described in this paragraph of saying; namely, servicemen doing duty in Newfoundland are using dynamite and machine guns to slaughter wildlife in the Province. Premier Smallwood charged in yesterday's session of the House of Assembly.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I will admit that that is the only point in this account in the "Daily News" of Saturday last. In the rest of the statement there is no reference whatever to my having said what I am described in this paragraph of saying; namely, servicemen doing duty in Newfoundland are using dynamite and machine guns to slaughter wildlife in the Province. Premier Smallwood charged in yesterday's session of the House of Assembly.

The other point of privilege, Mr. Speaker is this:

I am informed that there has now been circulated widely through this city, and possibly outside this city, a rumor to the effect that it was only when the R.C.M.P. and/or the Income Tax Authorities of the Government of Canada came to me saying that either I prosecute Dr. Valdmanis or they would do so. That is the rumor: That it was only after the R.C.M.P. and/or the Government of Canada, the Income tax people, had come to me saying, if I did not lay charges they would. That is the
There is not a sentence of truth in it, not a word of truth in it, not a letter of truth in it. It is a lie. It is made up, invented. It is a fabrication, and invented rumor.

The R.C.M.P. knew less than nothing about Dr. Valdmanis until I called them in and made my charges. The income tax people may or may not have, I have not the foggiest notion. They never consulted me. What I did, I did absolutely voluntarily. Whatever the consequence may be it was exactly my own action, without any knowledge of anyone until I called in the R.C.M.P. myself.

Now, I think it is fairly obvious that rumor was not only invented by my political enemies, but I think the reasons are fairly obvious. But when the facts come out as they will these rumors will seem pretty petty, pretty trifling, pretty small, pretty unimportant. But at the moment it is important that I should clear them up and destroy them.

MR. M. HOLLETT (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, to that point if I may—I do hope the honourable the Premier is not including the Opposition as political enemies at this point, because the information the Honourable the Premier just gave to the House has come, to me at any rate, for the first time.

MR. SMALLWOOD: The honourable gentleman opposite, if they are political enemies of mine, are not the only ones.

MR. G. JANES: Mr. Speaker, I wish to present a petition addressed to the Honourable House of Assembly from some 360 residents of Seldom and Stag Harbour and also supporting their petition, by the residents of Fogo, Tilting and Indian Island—some 360 all together, requesting a road be built from Seldom to Stag Harbour.

Now, Sir, Stag Harbour is comparatively new as a community on Fogo Island. It is made up of residents who have moved in from Indian Island—one of three islands being deserted altogether, and they have founded a very nice community there in one of the best harbours probably north of Cape Freels. These people are only six or seven miles from Seldom, where the present highroad ends. They wish the extension of that road into Stag Harbour. By extending the road there, Sir, it would give these people the opportunity to get to hospital all winter. At present they have to tackle the job by boat and with ice in there these people have no transportation whatever. Anybody very well acquainted with Fogo Island knows how difficult it is, and what a stormy place it can be in winter. The extension of this road from Seldom to Stag Harbour would just about complete the necessary connecting roads on Fogo Island to the chief town of Fogo and Fogo Hospital in the centre of the island. I move the petition be tabled in this House and referred to the department concerned.

MR. W. J. BROWNE: To ask the Honourable the Attorney General to lay on the table of the House the following information:
1. Are any members of the Government Directors of Companies doing business with the Government? Are any members of the Government Directors of Companies which have received loans from or have had loans guaranteed by the Government? Are any members of the Government Directors of Companies which have been established by Government funds?

2. Give the names of any such Directors with the names of the Companies of which they are Directors, together with salary, if any, paid in each case.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, is that question in order?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, that question is out of order, and ought to be ruled out now. Does it not contain insinuations? Does it not assume the answer that members of the Government are directors of the company?

MR. BROWNE: Well you know they are, one is yourself.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, could we have your ruling on that?

MR. BROWNE: Before you rule, Mr. Speaker, I may say it seems to me a perfectly legitimate question wanting to know how many members of the Government are directors of the company?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, is that question in order?

MR. BROWNE: Well you know they are, one is yourself.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, could we have your ruling on that?

MR. BROWNE: Before you rule, Mr. Speaker, I may say it seems to me a perfectly legitimate question wanting to know how many members of the Government are directors of what companies and what salaries, if any are received.

MR. SMALLWOOD: It is directors of companies doing business with the Government, and assuming there are such companies.

MR. BROWNE: Yes.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Well it is a pretty big assumption.

MR. SPEAKER: I shall have to study the question at another time. At the present moment it is a notice.

Answers to Questions

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, before answering questions. There were no questions asked on the last day. Are we going into question before going on with the orders of the day?

MR. SPEAKER: That is right. Are there any answers to questions?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, in connection with Question No. 70 addressed to me as Minister of Economic Development by the Honourable Leader of the Opposition. I gave an answer here the other day, in which I said that the German Firm of MIAG had shipped machinery and equipment to Newfoundland to one firm and one firm only, to one plant and one plant only, i.e., the Cement Mill, but that they made no shipment to the gypsum plant or any other plant. That is to say they shipped no equipment and/or machinery and/or anything else to any other firm or plant or industry in Newfoundland, merely to the cement mill. The machinery and equipment for the gypsum plant were shipped to Newfoundland by the Firm of Beno Schilde.

Now, the question asks for an itemized list of equipment. The Department of Finance informs me, and the Controller of the Treasury informs me in a note today that the invoices and supporting documents relating to the shipments of this firm of MIAG to the Cement Mill are made up of over one thousand sheets of closely typed paper. The Controller of the Treasury in his note to me goes on to say it is clearly impossible to have these documents copied in time for tabling during this session. In the circumstances I can only suggest that, if the Opposition desire this information that members of that body could call at the Department of Finance during working hours where the invoices etc. have been segregated and are readily available for such inspection as the Opposition may desire.

Now the second part of the question concerns the rate of interest charged on the said machinery and what amount of insurance premiums were paid on each shipment of machinery and equipment. The answer is that goods were shipped C.I.F. and no data of the type requested is available. In short the government brought this equipment and paid for it as, and when, it was landed in Corner Brook so that it did not belong to the government until it was landed and was paid for by the government, but it did belong to the owners, to MIAG. MIAG owned it until delivered into possession of the government. They did their own insuring, paid their own freight, and it was their own goods until delivered into the government's hands; for that reason the insurance was entirely their own business and not the business of the government, indeed these are the terms, I believe of the contract. In other words this was done by the owners of the machinery in question. I said before, and repeat, virtually all of the insurance was carried by Lloyds of London, and in one instance I happened to know of, the insurance was carried by the firm of Crosbie and Company of St. John's, but all of that was done on behalf of the owner of the machinery and equipment, i.e., the firm of MIAG. It was MIAG insured, paid the premiums, and the government had nothing whatsoever to do with it until the machinery and equipment was received by the government on Newfoundland soil, and all insurance up to that point was the concern of the makers, shippers and vendors of the machinery and equipment.

HON. E. S. SPENCER (Minister of Public Works): I have here the answer to No. 65 asked by the Honourable Member for St. John's West on the Order Paper of Tuesday, April 27th, 1954.

1. Question: What is the rate of license fee for three ton trucks?

Answer: There is no license fee fixed for three ton trucks. Fees are fixed on the basis of maximum gross weight. What is normally called a three ton truck would have a maximum gross weight of from 16,000 to 20,000 pounds, depending upon the equipment of the vehicle, such as size of body, springs, tires, etc. Following is the relevant scale of fees:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Weight Range</th>
<th>Fee</th>
</tr> </thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>16,000-17,000 lbs.</td>
<td>$180</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>17,001-18,000 &quot;</td>
<td>210</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>18,001-19,000 &quot;</td>
<td>245</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>19,001-20,000 &quot;</td>
<td>280</td>
</tr> </tbody>

2. Question: Is it correct that such trucks in the Bloomfield, Bonavista area have been licensed annually at a rate of $100.00 or $72.00 below the regular rate?

Answer: No reduction in the set fees has been allowed in any part of the Province, nor has any special concession been made to any vehicle owner. The maximum gross weight for which a vehicle is licensed is the governing factor. If a vehicle were licensed for less than its possible capacity it would not be permitted to carry a load which would cause the maximum gross weight for which it had been licensed to be exceeded.
3. Question: How many vehicles have been licensed below the regular rates and give the areas where such reduced rates have been applied?

Answer: See answer to question 2.

4. Question: How long has the practice of granting reduced rates been in force?

Answer: See answer to question 2.

5. Question: By what authority have such reduced rates been made?

Answer: See answer to question 2.

"That does not mean there will not be heavier loads than 20,000 lbs. carried on the highway. That is the maximum grade load for which our roads and bridges are being prepared from now on. In fact for the past year or so that is the standard for the Trans-Canada Highway, the mean gross load or actual load of 20,000 lbs."

Orders of the Day

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, before the Order of the Day are called I would like to ask a question either of the Premier or the Attorney General. On Friday the Premier said a new charge was being made against Dr. Valdmanis for $360,000, I believe. It has been reported over the radio that the charge was reduced to $280,000. That is in order to enable Dr. Valdmanis to get bail more easily. Is there any truth in that statement, or any explanation as to why the charges have been reduced?

MR. CURTIS: Mr. Speaker, there is absolutely no significance in the amendment at all. The facts are that a certain charge was made against Dr. Valdmanis by the Honourable the Premier last Thursday, I think it was, or Friday, and when they checked it up they found that within the dates mentioned, I understand, that it was a lesser amount, and it was just reduced to that amount to bring it, I think, within the dates referred to in the application. I think I can tell the House that in fact the amount will be found to be the amount as mentioned by the Premier for which the warrant was prepared. We did not wish to prejudice the application for bail by having the amount larger by one cent than the amount actually involved, or was strictly within the compass of the dates in question. The amendment was made purely in Dr. Valdmanis's interest. We did not want to have it said we had blown up the amount prematurely, although I am satisfied that the amount as presented to the court is the true amount. But for the purpose of the bail application we did not wish it to appear greater than the period in question. I believe, Mr. Speaker, that is the explanation.

Orders of the Day

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, if I may, I would like to rise to a point of privilege in reference to Item 11 on the Order Paper (second reading of Bill, "An Act to Establish the Newfoundland Fisheries Development Authority"). Mr. Speaker, you will remember we did not have that Bill before us when Your Honour was referring to it on Friday. Since then, it has come to our notice and we are inclined to believe that it is definitely a Money Bill, and therefore should be brought in, in another manner, i.e., by resolution, and submitted to a Committee of the Whole House, for discussion.

If I may, I would like to quote the various rules and regulations which I, myself, have looked up in reference to this, Mr. Speaker. I refer first to standing order No. 46.

"If any motion be made in the House for public aid or charge upon the people, the consideration and debate thereof may not be presently entered upon, but shall be adjourned till such further day as the House thinks fit to appoint; and then it shall be referred to a Committee of the Whole House, before any resolution or vote of the House be passed thereupon."

Then, sir, I would refer the House to Section 54 of the British North America Act, which is the Bible now of us all, and of Canada as a whole:

Section 54 of the British North America Act, 1867: "It shall not be lawful for the House of Commons to adopt or pass any Vote, Resolution, Address or a Bill for the Appropriation of any Part of the Public Revenue or of any Tax or impost, to any purpose that has not been first recommended to that House by Message of the Governor-General in the Session in which Vote, Resolution, Address or Bill is proposed."

Following that, sir, I would like to refer the House to Page 163, Third Edition of Beauchesne Parliamentary Rules and Forms which states:

"All Bills providing for the payment of salaries or for any expenditure whatever out of public funds of the Dominion must be first considered as resolutions in Committee of the Whole. And all such resolutions necessary to the introduction of a Bill must first obtain the recommendation of the Governor General. It often happens that bills are introduced with certain clauses providing for salaries or other charges on the public revenue, and in that case the Bill may be introduced directly on motion while the clauses in question (which should be distinguished by italics or brackets), are considered in the shape of resolutions in Committee on the Bill. But this can only be done when the Money Clauses are merely a part of the Bill. Whenever the main object of the Bill is the payment of public money, it must directly originate in Committee of the Whole. The rule also applies to releasing or compounding any sum of money due to the Crown and to the imposition of any State tax upon the people but not the pecuniary penalties necessary to the operation of a Bill."

A Money Bill was defined as follows in Section 1 of the Parliamentary Act passed in the British House in 1911:

"A Money Bill means a Public Bill which in the opinion of the Speaker of the House of Commons contains only provisions dealing with all or any of the following subjects, namely, the imposition, repeal, remission, alteration, or regulation of taxation; the imposition for the payment of debt or other financial purposes of charges on the Consolidated Fund, or on money provided by Parliament, or the variation or repeal of any such charges; supply, the appropriation, receipt, custody, issue or audit of accounts of public money; the raising or guarantee of any loan or the repayment thereof; or subordinate matters incident to these subjects or any of them."

Now, sir, if I may, I would refer
Your Honour to Section 5—I don't know whether I would be allowed—

MR. SPEAKER : I am familiar with the contents of Section 5.

MR. HOLLETT : There is no need of reading it. Also, Sections 14 (b) 17, 24 and 25.

MR. SPEAKER : Yes.

MR. HOLLETT : Sir, this Bill is of such great importance and may have such repercussions, shall I say, upon the financial affairs of this country in the years to come and in the immediate year, that I felt we at all rate should raise this point. We do, of course, believe that the Bill should get all the discussion that is at all possible, and as Your Honour will understand this gives us an opportunity for more lengthy and fuller discussion on the principle and on the various sections of the Bill. This Bill provides not only for the payment of certain salaries but for the raising of money, involving a loan to the tune, if you like, of twenty-five million dollars. It is tantamount, sir, to a loan bill, and should be brought into the House in the proper manner relative to a loan bill. I am quite sure Your Honour will give the appeal I have made every consideration which it deserves.

MR. BROWNE : Mr. Speaker, my honourable friend, the Leader of the Opposition, has explained our position so well I don't think I need to elaborate except that there was sections to which I would draw Your Honour's attention: Beauchesne, 2nd Edition—Section 551 : I don't know whether you have that one, but it is probably contained in the Third Edition as well. In our standing orders and in the old Rules of the House of Assembly the same situation arises as was cited by my honourable friend here on my left, "If any motion be made in the House for any public aid or charge upon the people the consideration and debate thereof may not be presently entered upon, but shall be adjourned till such further day as the House thinks fit to appoint; and then it shall be referred to a Committee of the Whole House, before any resolution or vote of the House be passed thereupon."

MR. CURTIS : Mr. Speaker, I understood that this matter had been finally disposed of at our last sitting. The point my honourable friend has raised is an interesting one, but nobody overlooked the fact that the situation is not the same here now as it was when we had an Upper House. We have now no Upper House, and the difference between a money bill and any other bill is really more or less purely formal at the present time. The procedure in this House, I think, ought to be laid down once and for all, so that Members of the House will know just where they stand on matters of this kind. The other day we saw by reference to this Highway Act of 1925 there was a Bill introduced into this Legislature by the Government of the Day, and that Bill provided for the appointment of a Commission and for their compensation, and that commission was given the spending of millions of dollars. My honourable friend opposite will remember that was the time the Monroe Government of the day did spend $2,000,000 I think, which was then a huge amount on highways. I want to point out, that Bill, Mr. Speaker, was introduced as an ordinary Bill, and notice was given in the normal way. It did not go into committee first, but went right through as a normal bill, and that same year, as I pointed out in previous speeches in this House, a Bill went through similarly making statutory the salaries for Judges of the Supreme Court. Yet, Mr. Speaker, in those days, in 1925, there was both an Upper House and a Parliament. Now we have neither, no Upper House and no Parliament Act under which we are bound. I submit that this question is purely an academic one. Surely to do business intelligently, is it not better to follow the procedure quoted from Beauchesne which means that Bills calling for the provision of payment of salaries, etc., should have those clauses referring to such changes in italics, and should be dealt with when the House gets into Committee, at that stage, and not necessarily before the Bill is introduced. Imagine, Mr. Speaker, the ridiculous situation of initiating an important Bill of this nature in Committee? Why, what we would have to do would be that we would have to prepare resolutions taking in clauses 17, 25, 57 or whatever they be, or does my honourable friend think we should introduce the Bill in Committee of the Whole and introduce the whole bill by resolutions? I think this is the proper procedure we are adopting and the only sensible one. Here we are introducing the Bill in the normal way. If in Committee there are sections of the Act which might be looked upon as money sections, there surely will be ample time for us to pass the necessary resolutions or pass the sections in the form of resolutions.

I think, Mr. Speaker, you have already ruled on this matter, and had I known it would come up again I would have been ready to answer it in a more detailed manner. But I think the objections of my honourable friends are purely academic.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, if I may briefly reply to my honourable friend the Attorney General?

MR. SPEAKER: First may I ask if any other honourable gentleman wishes to speak to this point?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I think it is worth while drawing attention to at least one fact, that is the two bills to which my colleague the Attorney General referred, when he spoke of two bills being brought in here by the Monroe Government, that did almost precisely what the Bill now in question proposes to do, i.e., to set up an authority to spend large sums of money. That, was the Highroad Commission. This will be the Fisheries Development Authority, but it is in each case an authority set up by statute under the government to spend considerable sums of money. When these two Bills were passed at the request of the Monroe Government the Honourable gentleman recently elected for St. John's West was a strong supporter of that government and voted for it, and I doubt not, spoke in support of the measures in question. Then he was on the government side. That is a long time ago now. He is now on the Opposition side. What he thought was right and proper then he now appears to think is improper. Perhaps that is because he learned something in the four or five years spent in Ottawa, and now brings us the benefit of his superior knowledge. Certainly when he was in this House before, and sat over on this side in support of the government of that day, he saw nothing whatever wrong in introducing a Bill such as this in the way we now propose to introduce this Bill, not only one but two Bills of that kind in one session.

MR. J. R. COURAGE: Mr. Speaker, I did not wish to interrupt any honourable member while speaking, nor don't want to hurt any honourable member’s feelings now, but I submit this whole discussion is out of order from the very beginning. Unless my memory fails me, Your Honour gave his ruling on Friday, and Your Honour supported your ruling with appropriate references, and I submit that no member has any right, on either side of the House, to bring up that matter again, unless he did so in the proper way, and that would be to repeal Your Honour’s ruling.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, if I may, I did point out when I raised this point that the members of the Opposition had not seen the Bill at the time. If they had seen the Bill they would have raised the point at that time. I don’t believe for one moment that it was the Honourable Speaker’s intention to make a ruling on the matter, which the Opposition members were in full accordance with. I have every respect for the Chair, and I have found the Chair most respectful towards our feelings and towards our opinion, and I certainly would not rise here in my place to cast any aspersions on your ruling, Mr. Speaker, either now or on Friday or on any other day in the past, nor, as far as I know in the future.

But getting back to the point at issue: I have, Sir, quoted the various references to Bills of this nature which we regard as money bills. On that point I would like to point out to the Honourable the Attorney General that I fail to see that the existence or otherwise of an Upper House has any effect whatsoever on the point. The Bill at that time did not originate in the Upper House, and certainly there is no Upper House here to originate it in now. Therefore I say that point is null and void. To my point of order, Mr. Speaker, I meant to raise a point of order: I did not wish to cast any aspersions on any side of the House, but if there was a ruling, I submit, the ruling ought to be followed—and I submit this whole debate is out of order.

MR. SPEAKER: I did not understand the honourable member was making a point of order.

MR. COURAGE: Maybe I am wrong, but if your honour did give a ruling, I submit, this whole debate is out of order.

MR. SPEAKER: No, I did not make a firm ruling on Friday when the Bill came up for first reading purely because the Opposition had not seen the Bill I mentioned. I anticipated a debate similar to what occurred now, and gave as my opinion that the Bill was in a certain category.

MR. COURAGE: I thought Your Honour had given a ruling.

MR. SPEAKER: The honourable member’s point is well taken however.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, I was about to say that the mere fact that in 1925 a Highroads Commission Act, or whatever it was called, was passed and brought in by regular motion and not through resolutions, I fail to see where that has any bearing. As far as I know there is no comparison, look at the amount here, up to twenty-five million dollars—in that Act, and I have not read the Act for a long time, but I doubt very much whether any amount of money is mentioned in the Act. True it set up a commission, but I don’t think it authorized the Government or the commission or some authority that was to be set up to raise twenty-five million dollars. In my opinion this is definitely everything all in one, a loan Bill, a money Bill, a Bill which sets up an authority, and not only that; it states that they will receive certain remuneration. It does not state the amount of remuneration, but it states it will consider pensions for their officers after ten years, and not only that but pensions for their relatives if any one of the members should die. In the meantime I say it is definitely a Money Bill in our opinion. But, Mr. Speaker, we are prepared to abide by your ruling, but see no reason why a delay of a day or two in bringing in this legislation would in any way delay the future of the country or our fishermen. Surely we don't want to get off on the wrong foot on a Bill of this nature. That is all I have to say.

"We do regard it as a Money Bill, and do believe it should be brought in by way of resolutions.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, may
I have a word?

MR. SPEAKER: The honourable member has already spoken in the debate.

MR. BROWNE: Well I had not foreseen this statute was going to be referred to.

MR. SPEAKER: That is unfortunate. Now, it seems that the Chair is placed in the position where it has to decide whether this is a money bill or not. Such a condition ought not to occur in the House. It is, as the Honourable the Attorney General pointed out, time a clear-cut policy were laid down so that such a situ­ uation, which might be embarrassing, could not arise, as it certainly ought not to arise.

I listened with interest to the arguments offered by the Honourable Leader of the Opposition and his colleagues. But it does strike me that the paragraphs and sections quoted apply to a parliament in the full sense of the word. This is not, and cannot be held to be a parliament.
A Legislative Assembly is vastly different from a parliament such as the House of Commons either in Ottawa or at Westminster. Therefore, it would follow that you cannot take the rules, orders, customs and usages of a full­ fledged parliament and apply them to a provincial legislature. Some of them may be applicable but only, as I pointed out in earlier ruling, if the principle is in effect. Otherwise there would be repugnance between the legislation of this body and of the House of Commons at Ottawa, not necessarily in this Bill, but it could happen.

The sections quoted from "May" and "Beauchesne" both refer to the House of Commons, and you cannot adapt them to a provincial legislature merely by deleting the word "Governor-General" and substituting the words "Lieutenant Governor." I will have to hold that the presence or absence of an Upper House does have some effect.

The honourable member quoted section 54 of the British North America Act, and that one is especially designed for the House of Commons. But it must be remembered that prior to Commission of Government this was a House of Commons in the full sense of the word. By Term 14 of the Terms of Union the constitution of Newfoundland, in so far as it affected the Legislature, has been changed only in one degree, i.e., by the absence of an Upper House.
Therefore, and as I stated before, any usages and customs of the Newfoundland House of Commons may quite lawfully, under the Terms of Union, be applied to this House bearing in mind the principle "Mutatis mutandis" the Upper House does not exist any more. Certainly then, if a thing were done in 1925, in a session of parliament with an Upper House being disregarded, it may be done in 1954 when the Upper House does not exist. In other words the customs and usages of Newfoundland prior to Commission of Government are still in effect according to the Terms of Union; and Section 54 of the British North America Act does not apply. The Highroads Commission Bill contained an almost identical clause with regard to salaries and powers of the Governor-in-Council. True this Bill does make reference to loans, but the commission which it sets up, as I see it, will not be able to raise loans without the sanction and approval of this Assembly. I will not hold that it is a money bill, at the most I will say it is a hypothetical question. I will say here that it would be impossible to read all that has been written in "May," "Beauchesne" concerning money bills, but I will just cite this to give the honourable members some idea: "Although the principle purpose of a Bill might clearly involve a charge (a cash charge upon the people) yet it may require a machine to establish and administer it. For instance the creation of a new board or department which is relatively so important as to be considered subsequently the main purpose of such a Bill is held not to involve a charge, and the Bill referred to in this instance merely treats its money clauses as the clauses referring to money as money clauses."

For that I would say this Bill might possibly be given second reading, and I think the House might decide later on to treat these special clauses as money clauses, as the Honourable the Attorney General suggests.

Further I find, and my reason for mentioning it the other day was that it seems to me first, impossible to initiate this Bill by resolutions, and secondly, even if the impossible were attempted, it seems to me, it would choke off intelligent debate, and reduce the chances of the Opposition to discover what the Bill was all about and offer their comments. For when resolutions go into committee only the resolutions may be discussed.

Further, until the Minister piloting the Bill has explained the Bill, with all due deference to our own ability to understand the printed words, I really don't think the House is in a position to decide on the Bill, good, bad or otherwise. In short, I mean that when the Minister has moved the second reading of the Bill and he has then explained it to the House, and the House is in much better position then to criticize the principle of the Bill.

From our present Standing Orders from which the honourable member has quoted: These Standing Orders are taken almost word for word from previous orders of this House, and what I said about the constitution of Newfoundland relating to Legislative Assemblies still holds, regarding these Standing Orders. As I see it, and at the risk of contradiction I will say; giving this bill second reading, not as a money bill, does provide better opportunity for the Opposition to discuss it. And without prejudice to either side, apart from that, I do not see how this bill can be treated in any other manner than by first reading in the House and second reading and by being referred to a Committee of the Whole House. But the other day I was not happy about treating the entire bill in Committee of the Whole, and I did welcome the suggestion that certain clauses be regarded as money clauses.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, it is quite agreeable to the Opposition.

MR. SPEAKER: I shall go a step further, and perhaps this is too soon, but I do suggest, in view of what the Honourable the Attorney General said, the time has come when we do need a clear-cut policy. We discussed this in 1949, I and the then Leader of the Opposition who was a Queen Counsel, and we recognized something of the sort was needed. Shall we then take this as an indication of future policy in regard to bills in which clauses contain money matters? Otherwise we shall debate this on every bill that comes up. This has no effect, however, on the second reading of the bill as offered by the honourable minister concerned.

I will then call Item No. 11, Second Reading of a Bill, "An Act to Establish the Newfoundland Fishery Development Authority."

HON. W. J. KEOUGH (Minister of Fisheries and Co-operatives): The subject matter of this Bill is so comprehensive and the implications so far-reaching and the need to be precise is so obvious that I thought I should introduce it to the House from a prepared text in order that I might be more thorough and precise. I would crave the indulgence of the House for that procedure.

Mr. Speaker, in moving the second reading of this Bill, I desire to emphasize the creativeness of the purposes it is designed to serve. What is involved is not merely a question of regulation or of organization. Other voices than that of this House must be heard in matters concerning the regulation and organization of the fisheries of Newfoundland—the voices of the fishermen, of the processors and exporters, of the Government of Canada, and—not least important—of those who buy and consume the products of our fisheries.

May I, Sir, describe briefly the nature of the interests of these other parties, in order to show the pattern and the perspective into which the interests of this House and this Government must be directed. I would ask the indulgence of honourable members of the restatement of some facts and considerations, of which they are doubtless already aware, that form part of the whole body of information and reasoning upon which the requirements and provisions of this Bill are predicated.

Let us remind ourselves first of the interests of our fishermen, whose lives and whose labour contribute significantly to the social and economic well-being of this Province and of this nation.

They have been the victims and the supporters of a tradition of service in return for survival that has, until recent years, forbidden all but a very few of them to entertain ambitions of substantial economic progress in the occupation to which they were born.

They have, of course, shared in the general economic progress of this Province, but to a lesser extent than many engaged in other occupations. They have usually been among the first and hardest hit by general slumps, depressions and economic recessions, in addition to having to undergo the peculiar hazards and hardships of working in partnerships with a fickle Nature, whose "helping hand" as often as not gives her colleagues a black eye!

The last ten or fifteen years have brought changes in our fishing industry that have given many fishermen the opportunity to sell their catches fresh, or in saltdulk, who might otherwise have had to spend time, energy and money in making their fish. Nevertheless, there are still many who have not benefited appreciably from these developments—mainly, perhaps, because of their isolation in areas not hitherto found suitable for the successful operation of fish plants.

There has also been some progress in the utilization of species other than the dominant cod; except in a few limited areas, however, the contribution made by these other species to the fishermen's income has been small, albeit welcome.

On the other hand, in recent years, there have been substantial increases in the costs of articles that fishermen must have if they are to continue catching fish—not only articles of general consumption, such as food and clothing, but items of fishing and processing equipment and other special supplies such as fishery salt.

Many of our fishermen have found themselves caught in a squeeze between costs of their supplies and falling prices for their produce. They are not, perhaps, unique in this respect—other primary producers can doubtless tell a similar story—but our fishermen represent a much larger proportion of the people of this Province than the fishermen of other parts of Canada do in their respective provinces. They have, moreover, not received proportionately as much government assistance as primary producers in some other important fields. Their plight must be correspondingly of greater concern to us in view of our responsibility for the domestic affairs of this part of the Canadian federation, and, I would suppose, also to those elsewhere who are concerned with promoting the progress and well-being of that federation as a whole.

This Government has supported and encouraged the formation and growth of an organization through which the fishermen of Newfoundland should be able to speak for themselves in clear and precise statement of their needs and problems. This objective is gradually being attained, and our fishermen have already found their organization a practical and useful means of expression. Their voice is now being heard more effectively than ever before, although, perhaps, not yet as clearly as it should be.

To us, their elected representatives, their government, the custodians of their economic interests, the fishermen of Newfoundland are saying with increasing urgency that strong and even revolutionary measures must be taken to improve their situation—either to reduce their costs or to raise their income, or both.

And here the Newfoundland Fisheries Development Committee has come to our, and their, aid. The Report of that Committee tabled in this House last April, indicates the weakness, the faults and the shortcomings in production and handling that have to be eliminated in order to help the fishermen to secure the best advantage from their labour. But the Report goes further; it indicates positive measures that can contribute towards making that labour more successful, more rewarding. The programme of development is colossal in its implications for the reorganization of our fisheries. It comprehends improvements in ways of catching fish—the finding of the fish, the use of better vessels, gear and equipment for bringing it from its native waters to the places where it can most efficiently be transformed into a wholesale food product. The programme includes improvements in the treatment the fish receives when it is landed by the fishermen and during its subsequent processing. It envisages, too, improvements in the amenities of life that are or can be enjoyed by fishermen and their families in communities that can be developed to greater prosperity, with greater social and educational facilities.

All these things the fishermen rightly demand, and I have no doubt that they are prepared to exert themselves personally, in and with the industry and with governments, to obtain them.

Before discussing how this Government proposes to perform its duties in this regard to the fishermen, I would like, Sir, to refer to the other voices that, as I said at the outset, must be heard in matters concerning the regulations and organization of our fisheries.

The processors and exporters—and I refer, Sir, to the functions that are performed rather than to those who perform them—are as essential to the prosperity of the catchers of fish as the catchers of fish are to the prosperity of the processors and exporters. This Government is concerned with the success of both groups—we are concerned to see that fish is caught by methods that are efficient and economical—we are concerned to see that fish so caught is processed and exported by methods that are efficient and economical.

Honourable members are already aware of the steps that this Government has taken by way of loans and guarantees, to assist processors of both salt and fresh fish to establish and develop their operations. In all such transactions, the Government has studied closely the probable effects of such development upon the fishermen of the areas concerned, upon the industry generally and upon the economy of Newfoundland. While most of these transactions were entered into before the programme of development was defined for us by the Development Committee’s report, the practical aspects of development have always been in the forefront of our considerations.

Now, we propose that the steps we have already taken along this road shall be co-ordinated with those we must take in the future, so that progress shall be steady and general, rather than spasmodic and local.

In this co-ordination, provision must be made for the enterprise and exertion that processors and exporters can and will contribute to realizing the programme of development. The role of government in this section of the industry is most appropriately that of facilitating—with technical assistance, public works, research and financing—the orderly and effective development of the resources by private or co-operative enterprise.

The third voice I mentioned, Mr. Speaker, is that of the Government of Canada. It is a voice that is well able to speak for itself. This voice has already made known its owner's anxiety to make its special and appropriate contribution to fisheries development, and I should mention that where we can help to make that contribution more effective, by action within the scope of our responsibilities as the Government of the Province we shall strive to do so.

The Fisheries Development Committee indicated that we should pay particular attention to the fourth voice—the voice of those who buy and consume the products of our fisheries. This involves, of course, study and investigation of marketing of its procedures and objectives, of market conditions and consumer preferences.

Such study and investigation are, of course, primarily the responsibility of those who perform the functions of exporters; they are the most immediately concerned in finding customers abroad who are willing and able to pay remunerative prices for the products offered.

The functions of Government in such matters are both delicate and vital. The promotion of foreign trade on a sound basis is one aspect of the duties of the Government of Canada—on that it has accepted with zeal and imagination. Honourable members are aware of its recent decision to concern itself more closely with questions of salt codfish marketing, and to facilitate its operations in this regard by bringing them under the supervision of the Department of Trade and Commerce.

The scope within which the Government of Newfoundland can seek to study and investigate, and such other means as may be available to us, to assist in the solution of marketing problems and in improving overseas markets, is of necessity more limited. The great machinery of foreign trade, with all its financial, economic and mercantile accessories, does not, and cannot, lie under our hands. Our activities must be concentrated, then, on the products of our fisheries, between the time when the fish is landed on our coasts and the time when it leaves our ports on its journey to the foreign buyers. That is, indeed, a field big enough to call for a large measure of our energy and abilities, and this Bill, Sir, is a necessary step towards securing the machinery and skill that we must have at our command if we are to operate effectively and beneficially in that field.

We have surveyed briefly, Mr. Speaker, the interests of the four other principal voices that must be
The structure and production and processing methods of our fishing industry (apart from the recent innovations of the fresh frozen fish industry) have been subject to a minimum of changes since the early days of our history.

And not all of these changes have been for the best. Originally, the industry was not too badly organized for its period. There was a certain amount of specialization with fishing crews divided into separate groups—one responsible for production—and the other for work ashore—all under the supervision of a “Master of the fisheries.” The change to present day conditions in the salt fish industry was brought about in part by the fish merchants relinquishing the management of the fishing enterprise. They had found it more lucrative to become traders—which they are today—and to concentrate on the handling of supplies and provisions in exchange for the codfish.

With the passing of the processing function to the fishermen, his whole family—wife and children—was drawn into the picture as unpaid labour. This type of family enterprise, while rapidly declining—with nothing to take its place—remains almost peculiar to Newfoundland. Other producing countries have long since given up this practice.

The depressed state of the salt fish industry did not come about overnight. Crises have been recurrent for the last hundred years and in the present century our fishermen have enjoyed a modicum of prosperity only during and immediately after the two World Wars. In the interim their fishery earnings have been able to provide, at the best, only a bare subsistence level. In the thirties the fisherman’s earnings were unable to provide a subsistence level and over a quarter of the population was on relief for half the year. And in recent years deficiency payments have been necessary to give the fisherman something approaching a decent living standard.

The average cash income of an inshore skipperman’s family in 1950 was $1,100, of which only $700 was drawn from the fisheries. The balance was derived from supplementary operations, such as woods work and from other sources, such as family allowances. To say the least this average, which would be lower if the earnings of sharemen were included, is extremely low not only by general Canadian standards but by the standards of other industries in the Province. When we remember that three-quarters of the total number of fishermen in Newfoundland depend mainly on the production of salt fish we can appreciate all the more the plight of the industry.

As a result of these conditions there has been a steady decline in the number of fishermen since the first World War. At that time we had some 40,000 fishermen. In 1951 we had 19,500. Today, there are perhaps 15,000 or 16,000.

The withdrawal of a certain number of men from the fishery is, of course, not in itself a cause for alarm. To some extent it indicates an expanding and more developed and varied economy and as such should be welcomed. It is recognized by us all that a modernization of the industry which will bring about a substantial improvement in income and living standards will probably bring with it some decrease in the number of fishermen. At the same time, of course, there will be a substantial increase in the number of shore workers.

It was pointed out by the Development Committee that if the productivity of the fishermen were raised to that of the most efficient current operations, i.e., dragging and long-lining, the present annual catch of codfish of 500,000,000 pounds could be landed by 2,000 fishermen. A fish processing industry capable of handling this catch would absorb some 6,000 shore workers in addition to those now employed.

The situation today differs in two important respects from that of earlier years. Heretofore, when times were hard the fishermen had no alternative but to pull in his belt and put up with it. Today, while many are still immobilized through isolation there are others who can and are taking advantage of opportunities outside the fisheries.

But, what is more important, the Government today is taking vigorous and positive action to place our fishermen on a level with his brothers across Canada. It recognizes that, as a result of his labour, a fisherman is entitled to a decent standard of living for himself and his family, an education for his family, an opportunity for his wife to devote her attention to her home and her children and it is taking such action as seems called for on its part to cause such things to be.

In 1951 the Newfoundland Fisheries Development Committee was set up by the Government of Canada and the Government of Newfoundland to look into the whole problem of fisheries development in Newfoundland and to make recommendations. If I may restate its terms of reference they were these:

1. To examine into fisheries resources available to the Province of Newfoundland, with a view to the fullest utilization of known resources and the discovery and development of others.
2. To examine into the economics of existing methods of fishing and of other methods that may be applicable.
3. To examine into the economics of existing methods of processing and other methods that may be applicable.

These undertakings were for the purpose of recommending increased utilization of fishery resources through methods of fishing and processing based on sound scientific, economic and social considerations. In particular the Committee was to recommend a programme capable of implementation by both the Federal and Provincial Governments and those engaged in the fishing industry; and to suggest the share that each should take in carrying out the programme.

After an intensive study of the problems, covering a period of two years during which time the Committee had at its disposal the services of an expert research staff provided by other Governments, as well as expert advice from the fishing industry and trade in Newfoundland, it came up with a comprehensive plan for the development of the fisheries of the Province and the rehabilitation of its fishermen.

The programme developed by this Committee is the most revolutionary and far-reaching ever presented to a Government of Newfoundland. It affects the lives not only of all our fishermen—it touches the lives of all who live in this Province.

It might not, perhaps, be out of sequence if I were to divert attention at this time to a matter of constitutional jurisdiction about which some people appear to be in doubt. Actually, the truth of the matter may be stated, even if the doubt cannot be set at rest, by saying that the choice of the places where development will be undertaken and the scope and nature of the development rest with the Government of Newfoundland.

Constitutional jurisdiction over the civil and property rights of the people of a Province of Canada is vested in the Government of that Province. Thus, in matters respecting fisheries development the Government of Newfoundland exercises control over all property such as fish plants and other shore facilities as well as over roads, schools, water-power, municipalities and indeed over all the property factors bound up with the development of a fishing community—excepting the marine works which are the responsibility of the Government of Canada.

Since I have brought up the matter of constitutional jurisdiction it might be just as well if I went on to indicate the extent of the jurisdiction of the Government of Canada over fisheries—since not everybody appears to be quite clear with regard thereto. The Government of Canada has jurisdiction over fish while it is swimming in the sea. So the Government of Canada presides over the catching of fish. Mainly its responsibilities are these: to explore for new fish populations and experiment with new methods of fishing, to carry on research to find new and improved techniques of preparing fish for market, to institute adequate conservation measures to prevent over-fishing and consequent depletion of fish populations. At the other end of the scale the Government of Canada has jurisdiction over fish at the point where it becomes a product offered for sale—i.e., once it is inspected and packed for sale to another Province or to another country. May I note in passing that this means among other things that if this year our fishermen should have complaints to make to Government about the price of fish they should have complaints to make to Government about the price of fish they should be directed to Mr. Howe and Mr. Sinclair and not to Mr. Smallwood and Mr. Keough.

I have said that fish while it is swimming is Federal. Up to the point where it is landed the responsible Minister is Mr. Sinclair. I have said that fish at the point where it passes into trade outside Newfoundland is Federal. The responsible Minister is Mr. Howe. In between is the large area of responsibility concerned with civil and property rights. Fish, once it is landed, becomes property. It so remains until it is exported from the Province. While it remains in the Province it comes under the jurisdiction of the Government of Newfoundland. Thus this Government has the responsibility for the decision as to the kind of plants that will be licensed to operate and how they will be built and where they may be built. Further, no person can buy or sell or handle or transport or pack fish in Newfoundland without the consent of this Government, if, when and as the laws are passed by this Legislature and regulations are made under those laws to exercise such controls. Maybe I should repeat those words since many appear to be under the impression that this Government has nothing to do with fish per se, as an article of food that goes into world commerce. To repeat—"No person can buy or sell or handle or transport or pack fish in Newfoundland without the consent of this Government, if, when and as the laws are passed by this Legislature and regulations are made under those laws to exercise such controls."

There is of course nothing new about all this. It is the same in the other provinces of Canada, excepting Quebec, which has a special arrangement with Ottawa for administering her fisheries. The responsibilities of this Government cover all that affects fisheries between the catching and marketing of fish—which means that the responsibilities of this Government in respect of fisheries development extend to everything ashore except certain marine works that border on the sea and are the responsibility of the Government of Canada.

Now, to return to the Fisheries Development Committee. The Report of the Committee put its finger on the low productivity of our fishermen, and their isolation, as the hard core of the problems of the Newfoundland fisheries. So the programme recommended by the Committee calls for large new centralized fish plants, fish meal plants, artificial dryers, mechanical fish flakes, modern salt stores, community fish stages, new and more efficient boats, engines and gear, new methods of processing. It calls for the establishment of fishing towns with the more essential amenities of life, such as electric light, water, sew­erage and proper housing. All this is to be done in conjunction with the exploration of new resources, experimenting with new fishing techniques, the development and strengthening of new markets and the instituting of an adequate marketing system.

This is a gigantic task to be spread over the next ten to fifteen years—and one which we cannot undertake alone. The Government of Canada is aware of its obligations to Newfoundland in the development of its fisheries and undoubtedly recognizes that Newfoundland cannot come to enjoy the full benefits of Union unless its fisheries are fully developed. The Government of Canada in expanding its programme of fisheries exploratory and experimental work, will be dredging and also building breakwaters and breastworks and wharves and will provide the aids to navigation. It will contribute half the capital cost of constructing community operated plants in selected centres to gain experience, which may lead to Federal legislation providing for similar plants here and elsewhere. It will also build and operate a large experimental fish plant.

The Government of Newfoundland will enable the building of fish plants and other fishing establishments, both privately and community owned. It is responsible for community development with all its implications such as roads, water, sewerage. It is responsible for bringing about improvements in both production and processing techniques through the means of centralized operations and demonstration and training schools.

Because of the monumental proportion of the planning that had to be done to ensure a start in fisheries development in 1954, the Government felt justified in establishing the Authority by Order in Council pending the presentation of this Bill to the Legislature. The ambit of the Authority's authority herewith proposed is—"to take charge of the whole fishery development programme insofar as it is provincial in jurisdiction.

Since so large a responsibility would rest upon the Authority the choice of the persons who should compose it demanded most careful consideration. The Government realized that these persons must be men who were specially qualified in three main fields: finance, fisheries and social organization.

The Authority would obviously be called upon to handle very large sums of money, either in outright expenditure or in loans and other forms of investment. It was therefore necessary that the Authority should include a man of considerable experience in money matters and in the ways in which money can be most efficaciously used in the encouragement and development of industry. In a programme as comprehensive as that of our fisheries development, the old adage "penny-wise and pound foolish"—and its converse "pound-wise and penny foolish"—must be given equal regard: perspective and proportion are essential to the best use of financial resources that, while substantial, are not unlimited. Briefly, what was needed was a man with broad knowledge, backed by wide experience, of how dollars and cents can be most effectively made available in a speculative primary industry. The Government believes that it has found such a man in Mr. H. G. Dustan.

When Mr. Dustan came to Newfoundland 5½ years ago, as manager of the main branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia in St. John's, he had already spent twenty-one years in the service of that Bank—seven of them as manager of branches in Ontario and the Maritimes. In 1952, Mr. Dustan left the Bank in order to take a more direct part in the sea-born business of Newfoundland, as General Manager of Northlantic Fisheries Limited and Director of its associated companies. Having capped his banking career with this experience in activities directly stemming from our fisheries, he became an obvious choice for the job of Chairman of the Authority when, last summer, the decision to establish it was taken.

In fisheries matters, the choice was no less obvious; the Authority had to have the advantage of possessing vast and varied experience in all major branches of our fisheries; there had to be somebody in the Authority who knew the ropes—who could assess the value of an idea or a proposal with knowledge and sound judgment based on long and intimate acquaintance with what has been done, what can be attempted and what must be avoided. Our choice inevitably fell upon Mr. Ross Young. Mr. Young, a certified public accountant, has been long recognized as one of the ablest executives in Newfoundland; he served for many years in a key position with an organization whose operations in fisheries have been perhaps more diversified than those of any other concern in this Province. He has an unrivalled knowledge of the industry and of those engaged in it—a knowledge essential to the Authority in its tremendous task.

There we had two basic needs satisfactorily provided for; skill and understanding in finance and in fisheries, comprehending not only Newfoundland but the Mainland and a large part of the world beyond. The exercise of these skills, the use of these assets, must, however, involve consideration of its effect upon human beings—upon our fishermen and upon those whose livelihood grows from their labour. The development programme, after all, is not devised for the benefit of the fish, or of the buildings or of the machines; its single aim is the betterment of the industry for the sake of people—the people who, by serving the industry, establish their claim that it shall serve them.

The two members already selected were fully aware of this aspect of the matter: their concern for the people would certainly be no less because of their more specialized concern with the technical side of development. But they were entitled to be given some relief from that over-riding responsibility by having as an equal partner someone whose specialized concern should be with the human angles, with the social effects and with the personal considerations of the development programme. So there was need to have in the Authority somebody with a better than average understanding of human values, whose training and experience would enable him to take a rounded-out social view of fisheries development in the widest sense of the term.

Our choice here was Mr. Harry C. Winsor. Mr. Winsor, who was born in Musgrave Harbour, first served Newfoundland as an employee of the Newfoundland Fisheries Board; his ability and sincerity carried him thence into international service with the Combined Food Board in Washington during the war and, more recently, in Rome with the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations. He has, throughout, been particularly concerned with fisheries, and has gained knowledge and experience of world fisheries and the social problems connected therewith that is shared by very, very few individuals. That sincerity to which I have already referred has led him to undertake for us, in concert with his no less distinguished colleagues, this great endeavour of fisheries development upon which we are now embarked—the immensity of which cannot be comprehended at a glance—the realization of which must unfold slowly upon us and our fellow-Newfoundlanders. The Government is content to entrust to these three with confidence the carrying out of this programme that offers so great and perhaps the only hope and promise of betterment, happiness and prosperity for so many of our people.

The measure of the endeavour, of the responsibility and of the hope, must be the measure of the recompense to be given the members of the Authority: they will have hard work to do, hard decisions to make, hard knocks to take and hard facts to face; they will be exposed to criticism, to pressure and to anxiety commensurate with the importance of their duties; they may have to disappoint many for the benefit of more; they may have to incur displeasure—even enmity—in carrying out their functions properly and fairly; and they may have to resist efforts to modify their integrity and singleness of purpose. To be able to do all this, to be able to devote themselves with their whole hearts and souls to the service they have undertaken, they must be made to feel secure personally and in their private affairs. We have, therefore, given them complete economic security—the greatest immediate contribution we can make towards enabling them to do the job we have given them, and the least they are entitled to expect from us.

To give the House some idea of the magnitude of the task with which the Authority is confronted here are some of the projects upon which they are already engaged:

(1) The construction of a centralized salt fish plant with salt storage at Quirpon which will eventually be owned and operated by the community. In the meantime the Authority will be largely responsible for the successful operation of the plant while at the same time engaged in strengthening and equipping the community or organization, so that it will be in a position to take over full responsibility at the earliest possible date.

(2) A similar operation at Seldom but on a larger scale.

(3) A full-fledged community development at LaScie involving the erection and operation of a large scale salt fish plant, equipped with artificial dryer, cold storage, salt storage and pickling vats, a fresh frozen fish plant, bait storage, fish meal plant; town planning, housing, electric power, water and sewerage.

(4) Community development in Valleyfield, including housing, water and sewerage, in conjunction with the activities of the Federal Department of Fisheries who propose to erect a large scale salt fish plant there.

(5) Enabling the erection by private interests of a frozen fish plant at Bay de Verde.

(6) A small-scale community-operated plant for Merasheen for the centralized handling and processing of cod, herring and mackerel.

(7) Enabling the establishment in Joe Batts Arm of a plant to process both fresh frozen and salt fish.

(8) Enabling the establishment of a fresh frozen fish plant and a large fish meal plant in Twillingate.

(9) Enabling the establishing of a frozen fish plant at Change Islands.

(10) The administration of all agreements in respect of Government loans and Government guaranteed loans made heretofore for fisheries development.

The purpose of the Bill before the House is to incorporate the Authority and to provide it with the means successfully to carry through to completion these undertakings, and the many others large and small that must receive their attention in the years that lie immediately ahead.

I do not propose to deal at length with the provisions of the Bill, but I should like to highlight some of the more important items and to explain the reasons for their inclusion.

A section of the Bill provides for the constitution of the Authority as a Crown Corporation and defines its powers.

Here the question might be asked, “Why a Crown Corporation to implement fishery development? Why could not the Department of Fisheries and Co-operatives and other Departments of Government do what the Fisheries Development Authority is being set up to do?” Such questions are comparable to these questions. “Why does not the Department of Public Works for Canada directly administer the work of the Maritime Commission of the Board of Transport Commissioners—of the St. Lawrence Seaway Authority—of the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation? Why does not the United Kingdom Department of Agriculture and Fisheries directly administer the work of the White Fish Authority? Why does not the South African Government perform the functions undertaken by its Fisheries Development Corporation?

The answer is clear. It makes for better Government and it is better protection for political institutions to have established by legislative action, through an appropriate Minister of the Crown, an organization to undertake the functions which are not normally those of a department of Government. It is not the normal function of Government to assume responsibility, as of its Departments, to do the sort of things that development on the scale recommended by the Fisheries Development Committee requires. I take it that it will not be necessary for me to go into this matter further than to say that it is not a normal function of Government to build boats or plants, to supervise plant operations or do the many other specific acts that will be necessary to locate plants and other facilities at specific places in specific communities.

Another section of the Bill describes how the business of the Authority is to be conducted. The Authority is given powers, subject to the approval of the Lieutenant-Governor in Council, to make regulations. Honourable members will, I am sure, appreciate that it is well nigh impossible to anticipate every contingency and provide for it in this Bill. The Authority is entering a new field of endeavour as far as this Province is concerned and it is imperative that it not be handicapped by our failing to clothe it with sufficient powers. The Bill therefore provides the Authority with power to make such regulations as are necessary to proceed with the job, should it be found that inadequate or no provision is made in the Act.

Conditions are laid down under which the Authority may employ personnel and engage services. Persons employed by the Authority, do not by reason of such employment become Civil Servants.

As I said earlier, the Authority is charged with the full responsibility of implementing the revolutionary fisheries development programme which has been blue-printed by the Fisheries Development Committee, insofar as the responsibility is Provincial in jurisdiction. It goes without saying that improvements in fishing techniques, improvements in processing facilities, diversification of effort and so on, are not in themselves the ultimate goal. The end result of this development programme must be a decided betterment in our fishermen's way of life, with the resultant beneficial effects for the Province as a whole. To accomplish this, the first essential is a substantial increase in his income which can be brought about by a marked increase in his present productivity. This increase in productivity will go hand in hand with, and often as a result of, more efficient handling methods, improved and expanded processing facilities and a reorganization of our marketing structure. Even if it is possible to increase substantially the fishermen's income while he remains in his present state of isolation, scattered along several thousand miles of coastline, in hundreds of small communities, we shall not have reached our goal. The development of fisheries forms a part of a wider programme which will ensure not only a higher economic standard, but also a much higher social standard for our people engaged in the fisheries.

The programme, therefore, involves a co-ordination of all Government and community services within areas, and concentration of these services at places suitable for development such as LaScie. In addition to large scale salt and frozen fish plants, fish meal plants, salt and bait storage, we want these expanded communities to have good roads, modern houses, electric lighting, water and sewerage, good schools and recreational facilities for the children, hospital and medical services.

This is, of course, a long-term programme. In the meantime, thousands of fishermen must continue their operations in the traditional way. They do not have the necessary means of replacing their shore facilities or of acquiring the necessary equipment for the proper handling, processing and storage of their fish. To solve their problems the Authority, in some instances with financial assistance from the Federal Government, are bringing about minor centralization of curing operations of the type at Quirpon and Seldom. It is hoped that these operations will prove sufficiently successful to warrant the bringing down of Federal legislation to provide for financial assistance to small scale community operations.

It must be recognized that there are bound to be places—perhaps many places—where development would not be a practical possibility; where the best that the inhabitants could hope for would be to maintain themselves, without enjoying the improved facilities and circumstances that can and will be brought to more fortunately situated communities. We have to face this fact—and so do they.

The responsibility of saying which these places are is ultimately one that the Government must bear; the Government must shoulder also the responsibility of deciding how the welfare of the people of these places is to be safeguarded—whether they should be encouraged and assisted to move to other settlements, or whether they should be sustained if they choose to stay there and, if so, for how long.

The Government will look to the Authority for advice on these questions, advice that must be given with thorough knowledge and understanding of the problems of each settlement and must include recommendations supported by arguments that weigh justly every ascertainable factor that can have a bearing on the final decision.

The Authority will be responsible for screening all proposals for fisheries development, whether they originate inside or outside the Government and for putting into effect those proposals which the Government may accept.

We may expect—and indeed we hope—to receive proposals for development from many sources; from fishermen and their organizations; from communities, from business men, from plant operators, from our own officials, from all and sundry.

No proposal can be ignored or rejected without examination; all must be examined, not only on their own merits but also in relation to the whole development programme.

They must therefore all be brought before one body, one examining board, as it were—in fact, one authority—which must investigate each proposal and recommend to the Government what action should or should not be taken in each case.

The Authority itself must also consider and make recommendations on fishing settlements and development projects that are not covered by proposals received from other sources.

The Authority must be able to make such recommendations with reason and confidence, and declare them without fear or favour—whether the proposal originates with the Government, the fishermen, the trade, or anybody else.

The reason and confidence can be assured only if the Authority brings its unique knowledge and experience to bear on facts; wishful thinking, undue optimism—or pessimism, and inadequate information must not be allowed to cloud its view of essential facts. And to get facts—technical and scientific facts—the Authority must be free to seek expert advice, to engage the most highly-skilled services available—if the great professional and technical staffs of the Government of Canada, and our own, are unable to give the information and advice required.

The Authority will be responsible for the administration and enforcement of all agreements made heretofore between the Government and any other party for the development of the fisheries. This in itself is a sizable undertaking.

This Government has already made or guaranteed loans totalling more than $7,000,000 for fisheries development purposes, and we shall have to provide more millions in loans, guarantees and direct expenditures to carry out our part of the development programme.

We have to do this because there is not enough private capital readily available for the long-term investment that is essential to the great plan of development. The preference of large private investors for more liquid and rapidly productive forms of investment is not peculiar to Newfoundland, but it is magnified here by the growth of opportunity for merchandising and other short-term investment; it is strengthened in our fisheries industry by the all-too-familiar uncertainties of overseas marketing and by the daunting magnitude of the sum required to achieve any substantial progress in development.

So we have to provide a large part of the financing needed, on a scale far beyond the scope of the normal functions of a government department—even a Department of Finance.

Every dollar must be made to count—they cannot be spread about haphazardly, on the other hand, we cannot risk spoiling the ship for a ha'penny of tar. The financing of fisheries development that we have so far undertaken has not been either haphazard, parsimonious or unmethodical, but our future operations will be so much greater and more complex that co-ordinated and specialized supervision and control will be essential.

The Authority will therefore be made responsible for the management of all existing and future loans and other financing for fisheries development; it will be responsible for seeing that the funds are properly used, that repayment and other obligations are duly met, that government security is protected.
The Authority will, at my request, co-ordinate the work of all Government Departments which are concerned with the development of fisheries. This is of prime importance for the successful carrying on of community development schemes such as that for LaScie. In addition to the purely fisheries aspects of the problem—construction of plants, improvements in boats and gear—questions will arise of community organization, housing, roads, water power, education and the like—which are the responsibility of other branches of government.

Similarly our collaboration with the Federal Government, and agreements for the implementation of any part of the programme will be channelled through the Authority. I must add here that the Authority have already entered into a very effective working relationship with those Federal Government officials who are concerned with the fisheries of this Province.

While fisheries exploratory and experimental work are the responsibility of the Federal Government, the Authority will be called in from time to time to assist in the operations. The Authority will also undertake the demonstration of new fishing and processing techniques and the training of fishermen in the use of these techniques. This latter work will, of course, be undertaken in close collaboration with our own Department of Education and the Federal Department of Labour.

It is not necessary for me to dwell at length on the finances of the Authority, except to say that ample safeguards have been taken to protect the Treasury's position. Honourable members will notice that those functions presently performed for Government by the Department of Finance in respect of loans or guarantees to assist private enterprise in undertaking fisheries development, will be taken over by the Authority. However, it should be noted that a limitation is placed on the amount of funds which the Authority can use for this purpose.

The expropriation powers which are given to the Authority are most essential for the successful carrying out of its work. This is especially true for community development projects. These expropriation powers are similar to those contained in the Industries Act, Chapter 246 of the Revised Statutes of Newfoundland, 1952. The Authority will have the power to expropriate land on behalf of private industry as well as for community operated projects.

On the question of publications, the Authority may issue reports and other documents on the distinct understanding that it will not disclose information which it has received in confidence, unless it has the written consent of the persons who supplied the information.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, the Bill "An Act to Establish the Newfoundland Fisheries Development Authority," as now presented to this Honourable House, embodies a concept at once practical and idealistic in its design to serve the development of our fisheries for the benefit of the fishermen, the processors and our people generally—practical in its provision of the precise instrument that the Government of Newfoundland will use to carry out that design.

The design is to achieve, concurrently, in as short a time as possible, two gigantic undertakings; to bridge the gap in development of our fisheries by which they lay behind those of our sister provinces, and to project development into the future (with all that that implies of technical, scientific, sociological and economic progress) so that our fisheries shall be organized and operated in a manner that befits their world pre-eminence in tradition and resources.

I am confident, Sir, that this concept, this design, this instrument will find ready and whole-hearted approval among all people who have knowledge and understanding of the personal and national problems of Newfoundland's fisheries and who have the sincere desire to see those problems solved most effectively—I am confident that particularly will such approval be forthcoming from the members of this House. In that confidence, Mr. Speaker, I move the second reading of the Bill "An Act to Establish the Newfoundland Fisheries Development Authority."

MR. SPEAKER: Motion is this Bill be now read a second time.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, wonder if the honourable minister would consider postponing further debate until tomorrow?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Does the honourable gentleman wish to proceed tomorrow with the debate? If so, we would be quite agreeable to that delay.

MR. HOLLETT: Yes, I think we will go ahead tomorrow.

On motion by the Honourable Leader of the Opposition, seconded by the Honourable the Attorney General, the debate is adjourned.

HON. P. S. FORSEY (Minister of Health): Mr. Speaker, the principle of this bill is quite simple. Under the existing legislation, the Local Government Act, town councils are empowered to issue permits for digging of wells and the installation of septic tanks, etc. In some instances where this is being done it has been against the advice of the local medical health officer of the area. These medical health officers are responsible for the health of the people, and ultimately for any epidemic that might arise. It is felt that the power of a Town Council existing under the Local Government Act should be subordinated to the powers of the medical health officer such as they hold under this amendment. Mr. Speaker, I have great pleasure in moving second reading of this Bill.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, I have just seen this Bill this afternoon. I wonder if this debate could be adjourned, as we have just seen it now for the first time, and have not had a chance to read the Bill.

On motion debate adjourned.

Second reading of Bill, "An Act Further to Amend the Slum Clearance Act."

HON. S. J. HEFFERTON (Minister of Municipal Affairs and Supply): Mr. Speaker, during the last three or four years, particularly during the last year, several groups of co-operatives were enabled to start housing projects, mainly by reason of the fact that they were enabled to borrow some of the money from the Provincial Government in order to carry on their building. This was done on the understanding that when the houses were at a certain stage of construction they would be able to receive the money which had been advanced to them from the Central Mortgaging and Housing Corporation, who would take a mortgage for the money which had been refunded to the Government, and the Government would receive the money it had advanced the co-operative houses owners. The owners would then be given a period of time in which they would be able to amortize and pay off the monies, which, of course, in the first instance they had received from the Government. On completion of the House to a certain stage the money would be refunded to the Government by the Central Mortgage and Housing who would hold the mortgage. During last year that involved sums of money, during the year, in fact, it was somewhere around the neighborhood of half a million dollars. During the last six or seven months we have received some information that possibly ten, twelve or fifteen groups would be interested in trying to receive similar aid during this year. Even with ten groups averaging per group an amount of seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars outlay was involved, and the Government naturally tried to ascertain if it were possible to try and find some means of financing the co-operative groups without having to make the initial outlay for the period it was actually under the old undertaking. With this purpose in mind we explored the possibility of financing from the banks, and also explored the position with Central Mortgage and Housing. After some discussion we agreed with Central Housing and Mortgage that the co-operative building groups might be treated exactly the same as ordinary building contractors. This means, of course, that instead of waiting until the house has been completed before any refunds were made that there would be progress payments during the course of construction.

This Bill enables us to enter into an agreement with Central Mortgage and Housing so as to take advantage of the arrangement to which we have come. In each instance it means, of course that the outlay the Government will have to make at any one time would be considerably less than it was under the old arrangement. We still make the initial advances, but when it comes to the second advance we can get it from Central Mortgage and Housing.

That is the main purpose, Sir, of the amendments in this Bill. The second amendment, of course, merely deals with the registrations.

Mr. Speaker, I move the second reading of this Bill.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, I think the name of this Bill belies its purpose. I am not familiar with the original Act, but it does not seem to be an appropriate name to describe ventures of this kind of co-operative groups which have been operating in the City and the suburbs during the past couple of years. I don't know of any group of such people who could have been considered as slum dwellers before their groups were organized.

MR. HEFFERTON: They have not.

MR. BROWNE: Therefore, I wish a more appropriate name had been found to describe the Bill dealing with co-operative building in this fashion.

Now, Sir, if I may be pardoned for speaking in a personal way at this time, I may say that I have organized a building group back in 1937, I think it was, in connection with the civil servant association. We had at that time about ten in the group, and a person well qualified to instruct the members of the group who were to build their homes. At the time we were fortunate in having here two ladies from the United States, from the State of Maine who had been working with co-operative groups in Cape Breton, and who already had had considerable experience in assisting members of groups there to construct the houses at a place called Tomkinsville, I believe. The group at Tomkinsville was the first project in Canada to build houses on the co-operative basis. I remember very well the details of that project. Dr. Tomkins, celebrated highly in the co-operative movement and who has become famous throughout the whole world for the remarkable work that he has done, bought himself fifty acres of land and ten of these he distributed to ten members of a building group, and they proceeded in the fashion now recognized as the most practical method of carrying out a building project of this kind. They met two or three times a week, and discussed the plans of the building. Then these ladies assisted the wives as to the interior layout and decorations.

As I said, we formed this group here, and we were ahead of our time, I think, it will be appreciated. It was during the days of the Commission of Government, when money was very scarce, and actually we had a group at the Mental Hospital, a group of the workers there, who were ready to start building. For a site we had a piece of beautiful land, three acres which would provide an acre apiece for thirty men, which we could have obtained at a rate of one hundred dollars an acre. Those familiar with today's housing projects will realize how cheap that was. And although these gentlemen had the promise of assistance of their friends and of use of a cement mixer for the foundations, the Government of the day, the Minister of Finance especially, would not give them, the members of the group, individual credit for the work they would put in the scheme, and there it fell to the ground. The whole scheme depended upon the effort which the individual members of the building group put into it. I have heard men say that the value of their efforts, and the value of the efforts of their friends in the construction of these houses amounted to something like five or six thousand dollars, and it will be easily seen when Mr. Pinsent would not give credit for that effort they were unable to go further with the project. But I don't believe the effort we made then was lost. It was a pioneer movement of its kind, and there is no doubt that those who were concerned with it kept hold of the idea, and talked about it amongst their friends, and it has been brought to completion, I believe, at this time.
At this time, too I should give credit to Mr. James V. Ryan of the Railway Employees' Welfare Association of the Railway who organized the construction of over a hundred houses on the Topsail and Craigmillar Avenue.
That was a wonderful project by which men came to possess houses at small monthly payments. He was given assistance by Mr. Lodge, and I have no doubt that he was wise in approaching him rather than the Commissioner of Finance. Those houses may not be in the fashion that is more desired today of separate houses with gardens in front and at the rear and that sort of thing. Nevertheless they constituted a desirable change from the places where these sort of people had to live, and enabled a man to own his own home.

Therefore, Sir, it was a pleasurable thing for me, in the House of Commons at Ottawa, to advocate greater attention by the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation toward this question of co-operative building of houses. I was certainly glad to learn that here in this city several projects of that kind have been on foot during the past few years. As the honourable member for Green Bay, I believe it was, stated in his speech a little while ago, I was the moderator of a panel discussion on co-operation a couple of weeks ago on this very subject. Four members of housing groups in the city discussed the problems which they had to face and the ways in which they faced them at that time. One member of the panel had been a member of the housing group which had built houses. After studying how to proceed they built one house first, and I believe they drew lots as to which of the members should get it. But having built one house they saw themselves that the idea was practical, and that they could build the others, and so they did. It is inspiring, in my opinion, to meet members of a group of that kind, men who sit down and plan ahead a year or two as to how they are going to build a home. It is a most inspiring thing, and I congratulate all those in the Government who are responsible for encouraging the promotion of this idea.

I am glad to know now that the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation are going to be more generous in assistance which they are going to render to facilitate construction of houses along these lines. And I am certainly glad to know that there are so many groups in the city at the present time who have taken up this plan.

The work of the pioneer groups who have built houses in the past couple of years has certainly inspired a great many workers in this city and encourages them to obtain homes, when they recognize the tremendous savings they can make and also the important social work they do themselves by building such homes, and the pride and pleasure they will get in after years when they look back on what they have done. I think it is a major project, and I do not hesitate in giving all the praise that they deserve to the members of the Government who have promoted this project.

Now, it is a good thing to know that there are ten or twelve groups that have between them a hundred or a hundred and twenty people who are planning to build houses during this year or during the next two years. I have been in touch with a good many of these people, and know the care with which they have selected the land upon which they are going to build, and I know the type of land they have selected, and I believe they are going to be very happy in their surroundings, because having studied and planned this project together I believe that they will be happy as neighbours after their houses have been constructed. It gives this party very much pleasure in supporting this Bill today.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I hope I did not get the impression that the honourable gentleman was trying, even vaguely, even remotely, to claim any credit whatsoever for this legislation. Because he has had as much to do with it as the man in the moon. The credit for this legislation, not this particular Bill before us today, but the whole idea out of which this Bill grows belongs to my honourable colleague, the Minister of Fisheries and Co-operatives, entirely.

The honourable gentleman who has just spoken has as much to do with it as though he lived in Timbucktoo. The fact that he believed in co-operation is interesting. I am glad he does believe in the co-operatives. I know that he does. But the fact that he does has no bearing on this Act. The fact that some years ago he belonged to some group of a dozen or ten men has no bearing, not at all, not a scrap. He may have belonged to many various groups, some of them co-operative, but that has no bearing on this here today. It may have some bearing on it that the Minister of Co-operatives and his deputy at that time came to me on this matter, and they had my support. Now, I will tell the House that Mr. McLellan, the General Manager of the Bus Company, had a lot to do with it. He even acted as my personal agent in making approaches to the authorities in Ottawa on this very matter of co-operative housing. On more than one occasion he went especially to Ottawa to induce the Minister of the Government of Canada under whom housing comes, and to induce the head personnel of the Central Mortgage and Housing to agree to a much wider, much more generous treatment for co-operative housing. Mr. McLellan, I think, is due a great deal of gratitude for the progress of the co-operative housing, the progress it has made and is making in this province today. Quite a bit of it is due to me personally. I would not have bothered to say so, but for the extraordinary attitude taken by my honourable friend who tells us that somehow, some years ago, he was a member of a group, and he left in my mind at least the inference to be drawn that somehow therefore he was the father of this, because he was also the father, I understand, of the Fishermen's Federation. He believed in it, therefore he is the father of it. I, myself, took part in a broadcast forum in Ottawa at which the speakers were, amongst others, Mr. Winters, the Minister under whom housing comes, and I think it still comes, I believe he carried it with him into Public Works, if I am not mistaken—and I am very rarely wrong in such matters—indeed under whom it still comes, Mr. Winters. He was one of the participants as was Mr. Calwell. At the forum in the Chateau Laurier, which was broadcast on the network throughout the nation, I then demanded that the Government of Canada do something about co-operative housing, demanded it.

MR. BROWNE: When was that?

MR. SMALLWOOD: Two or three years ago.

MR. BROWNE: I was at it before that.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Will the honourable gentleman have a race to see who began the co-operative too? Although the honourable gentleman is older than I, I can assure him I could go back at least twenty years before him in my advocacy of the co-operative movement, yes twenty years, I joined my first co-operative in 1920. I joined it as a member, and I am still a member of that cooperative. Yes, in 1920. Newfoundland, as a matter of fact has taken the leading part in all Canada, of all the Governments of Canada, in inducing the Government of Canada and the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation to broaden and liberalize its scope with regard to co-operative housing—we have taken the lead, Newfoundland. We are not the pioneers. The pioneers were the Government of Nova Scotia, and my honourable friend when he spoke in the House of Commons referred to that. He then said that he had visited some of the housing in Nova Scotia. I read his speech. I had visited the same projects and was taken through them one after the other, and they were not by the St. Francis Xavier people. When I attended a convention they took me through that housing project. The Government of Nova Scotia were the pioneers, but this Government has gone further than Nova Scotia's Government was ever willing to go. We went to this point: We would put up enough money to enable a man to get his house covered in. We would virtually finance him to the point where Central Mortgage and Housing were willing to accept a mortgage and finance its completion. He was financed up to that moment. We were the only Government in Canada willing to do that. With the result that today it is the policy of the Government to lend almost entirely, overwhelming on co-operative housing. It is natural, it is common sense, it is logical, it is practical, and we would like to see those of our working people, working for wages, take advantage of this co-operative housing. I think we would be willing to spend a million dollars a year, and a million dollars a year from this Government would enable a great many thousands of houses to be built in the next few years. If the people would adopt this co-operative technique, especially now in the light of the legislation introduced by my honourable colleague, the Minister of Municipal Affairs, and this present Bill which carries it ahead some considerable steps from what it was before this. It is the essence of liberalism—co-operatives and liberalism, what is the difference? This grows out of a movement which is the essence of liberalism.

MR. HOLLETT: Socialism.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Now, my honourable friend is talking about socialism. If he wants to find two schemes more widely separated than socialism and the co-operative movement I would like to hear what they are. These two schemes are the antithesis one of the other—so my honourable friend, as usual, is wrong. But I do hope my honourable friend, the Leader of the Opposition, does not attempt to read this Bill. Because I have never known him once in this House since he came in to take up a Bill and read it, without making a mistake. He does not appear to be able to read a Bill without misunderstanding it.

MR. SPEAKER: Order.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, the honourable gentleman asked for it did he not?

MR. SPEAKER: One does not always get what one asks for.

MR. SMALLWOOD: No, Mr. Speaker, that is the irony of life. Look at me for instance. Do I get what I deserve? Do I? Do I get it from my honourable friends opposite?
MR. SPEAKER: I hope you do not provoke the Honourable Leader of the Opposition with that question.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I had not intended speaking about this Bill. But every time my honourable friend gets up and claims he is the father of the Fishermen's Confederation or the father of the Co-operative Housing, I propose to get up and answer him that he is not the father not even the stepfather. I don't know what other kinds of fathers there are, but I do know he had nothing to do with it. He was not even around, not even in the Province at the time, but was up in Ottawa. So that he does not get any credit for this Bill or any part of it.

MR. BROWNE: Mr. Speaker, on a point of personal explanation, I think the Premier once again has been unfair, and certainly ungenerous in his criticism. I did not claim to be the father of this Bill. I went, in fact, out of my way to congratulate all members of the Government in connection with it. But I do say that in the House of Commons I advocated every chance I could get the utilization of co-operative techniques in the building of houses and urged the Minister and the Government to help in every way they could. I feel that was apparent from what I had to say.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, I just rise to support the Bill. Of course everybody knows that the Act was very inadequate in its original form, and I support the amendment. I may say, Sir, in doing that, that the taunts and the insults thrown at me practically every day since this session opened by the Honourable the Premier have no effect whatsoever upon me. It is like water off a duck's back, runs off just as it falls. I might point out to the Honourable the Premier that it is sometimes very unwise to claim credit for anything in this world. I have heard people claim credit for doing a big lot for this country, bringing in all sorts of new industries, bringing in men, Sir. Why, we would not wish to be premier. It is not always wise to claim credit for this, that or the other thing. I would like to point out to my honourable friend that the matter of co-operative housing has been in being before he or my honourable friend on my right ever saw the light of day. I fail to see why either one of them would want to claim to be the first that ever thought about it. There is nothing new, Mr. Speaker, under the sun, and the man that gets up and says: I and I alone did it, is just a fool, Sir, that is all.

MR. FOGWILL: Mr. Speaker, I want to support this Bill too. Perhaps that is surprising to the Honourable the Premier, but maybe it is not. But I wish to say I am personally acquainted with several of the groups building homes. I know many of them, and I would like to say that of the two groups, that I am acquainted with most of the members. They are doing very fine work, and are very happy, I think, to get the chance, and have the means at their disposal to build homes for themselves. Because, today, Mr. Speaker, it is very difficult indeed for young people to build a home for themselves. When we realize the terrific cost of living and the cost of materials and the tremendous taxload the young people are carrying today—take the young people in the average wage group, between $3,000 and $4,000 a year, and the terrific taxload these people are carrying. I think we all realize that without something such as we have here in this Bill, something which would assist and aid these young people to build homes for themselves they would find it very difficult indeed. That is the reason the governments of the day must put forward and the provinces find it necessary to pass legislation to allow the people some means by which they can build homes for themselves.

There was one other point made by my honourable colleague, the member for St. John's West in respect to the R.E.W.A. who in the mid-thirties built houses. In the first instance it was the officials or directors who pledged personal credit at the bank to get the first money to build houses. I have nothing further to say, but I do support the Bill. Now it is useless for the Liberal members on the opposite side to take credit for everything. I was connected with the co-operatives twenty years ago, in the early thirties, and attended several meetings where the honourable member for St. John's West was present and gave us advice on how to start meetings—the next thing, Mr. Speaker, will be that they invented baseball.

On motion Bill read a second time. Ordered referred to a Committee of the Whole House on tomorrow.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, I move all further orders of the day do stand deferred, and that the House at its rising do adjourn until tomorrow, Tuesday at 3:00 of the clock.
expression of sympathy be forwarded to the relatives of the late Mr. Shea.

MR. M. HOLLETT (Leader of the Opposition): I too, on behalf of the Opposition, couple our regrets at the passing of the late Mr. Shea. He was a man who was well respected by all who came in contact with him and he was particularly respected by the people of Ferryland district whom he represented.

I am sure we all join in the expressions of sympathy to his family and I second the motion so well put by the honourable the Premier.

MR. BROWNE: As one member of the Alderdice Government when the late Mr. Shea was elected in 1932, I would also like to join in the expression of sympathy so ably expressed by the honourable the Premier and the Leader of the Opposition. As a director of Monroe Export Company, as the Honourable the Premier stated, he was thoroughly experienced in all phases of the fishing industry in this country. I remember in 1933 making a tour of the district of Ferryland with him and I can vouch for his popularity with all the fishermen down there.

I would like to join with the expression of sympathy already given to all the members of his family.

MR. SPEAKER: The Clerk will forward a copy of the resolution to the relatives concerned.

MR. SMALLWOOD: I should like to substitute the name of Honourable Myles P. Murray, Minister of Provincial Affairs and Solicitor General, for that of Honourable P. J. Lewis, Minister Without Portfolio, on the Committee of Privileges and Elections.

HON. DR. POTTLE (Minister of Welfare): I rise to a point of privilege. Yesterday I received a copy of the issue of the Western Star dated April 24, 1954 in which there is marked a special Stephenville edition. In the centre of the front page is carried a four column cut, "A Street in Stephenville," with the following sub-title:

"Newfoundland’s Welfare Minister, Dr. Herbert Pottle, is said to have described Stephenville as a shantytown huddled in filth and squalor on the fringe of Harmon Air Force Base."

There is a leading article on the front page of that issue written by James Browning Roe, editor of the Western Star. It reads:

"Today at noon a special train pulled in at Corner Brook’s Station bearing a troupe of youngsters smart in red and navy blue uniforms."

"Further on it says, "The young Tumblers are on their toes today because they are determined to show Corner Brook that Stephenville is not such a bad place after all."

Then it goes on, "Of course the Tumblers had planned to take part in the Sports Day Review event here long before Dr. Herbert Pottle’s controversial speech in which he suggested that Stephenville’s youngsters are ‘contaminated.’"

Then I read the concluding section as follows:

"Stephenville’s people deeply resent Dr. Pottle’s remarks in the Legislature on April 6th. They have been labouring widely to make Stephenville a fine progressive town. Their Council, only legally constituted for a year, is pressing at its town planning, utilities and street-paving. The Lion’s Club is about to open an $11,000 children’s playground which they expect to be a real show-piece.

They claim that they have not received any satisfactory replies to a number of protests they made to the various politicians interested for one reason or another in Stephenville. They want a retraction, but none has come. The Western Star hopes that the pictures and stories in this special edition will demonstrate that Stephenville most certainly is not, as Dr. Pottle said, 'a shack-town of 4,000 huddled in filth and squalor on the fringe of Harmon Air Force Base.'

Nor is that all. The special page in the back section of this issue carries pictures of various aspects of Stephenville life. One article is headed:

"Civic Leaders Guide Youthful Development."

"How would one expect children and young people to behave in Stephenville if they were 'contaminated' as Dr. Pottle said; and if our home-town were 'a shack-town huddled in filth and squalor.'"

Another article at the bottom centre reads:

"In his address in the House of Assembly earlier this month, Dr. Herbert Pottle, Newfoundland's Minister of Welfare, described a community that he left nameless at the time, as "a shack-town of 4,000 huddled in filth and squalor on the fringe of Harmon Air Force Base."

Another paragraph said, "Every adult in Stephenville and many of the kids, too, are perfectly aware that Dr. Pottle was referring to their Town in his speech. There is no community of 4,000 on the fringe of Harmon Air Force Base except Stephenville."

Still another paragraph says;

"The Western Star toured the school this week with Rev. Father P. J. Bromley, Parish Priest, as a guide. Surely, these bright-eyed youngsters were not 'contaminated' as Dr. Pottle suggested."

Then, each picture, is more or less tied up directly with my address to the House of April 6th.

Nor is that all: Here is another series of articles and pictures on Page 3 of the second section. These pictures are, likewise, pictures of Stephenville. In one of them, the editor of the Western Star seems to be presiding at a Meeting, or at least, he is seated at a table. A paragraph to the right of the picture says:

"All residents of the West Coast town described by Dr. Pottle as 'a shack-town of 4,000 huddled in filth and squalor on the fringe of Harmon Air Force Base' are now drawn together as a unified body by this insult to the Town's integrity and morals."

Now, Sir, I hope I have given enough to this House to indicate the seriousness of the matter to which I am drawing attention at this moment. This terrible thing was done by the Western Star, eighteen days after my original speech in this House in which I made no reference whatsoever to Stephenville.

This awful thing was done by the Western Star ten days after I had denied I had made any reference to Stephenville by a public statement in the Press and by the same statement over the radio.

This awful thing was done four days after I raised the question of privilege before this House because of unfair reporting by the Evening Telegram. On that occasion I read a transcript of my speech in which it was shown to the House once again that I made no reference to Stephenville. I added when I sent a copy of my speech to Stephenville, that no thought of Stephenville had even crossed my mind.

Yet, we are confronted with this terrible thing today. I saw it for the first time yesterday, in this House.

I was prepared, up until that time, to leave this matter in the hands of the Committee which had been set up by this House, qualified to deal with issues of this sort. But then, Sir, I saw this outrage was from the 24th April edition of the Western Star and I decided I would have to take other steps to safeguard my name and reputation in Newfoundland and outside Newfoundland as far as civil liberties of this land will allow. I am therefore instructing my solicitors to take action at once by way of instituting libel proceedings for $150,000 against the Western Printing & Publishing Ltd., publishers of the "Western Star" of Corner Brook; H. M. S. Lewin and all other Directors of the said Company; as well as James Browning Roe, Editor of said paper. I am also instructing my solicitors to proceed with libel action at once in the amount of $200,000 against "The Evening Telegram," the publishers of "The Evening Telegram" in St. John's; R. B. Herder, and all other Directors, C. E. A. Jeffery, Editor-in-Chief, and Harold Horwood, reporter of that paper.

MR. SPEAKER: Would the honourable member table a copy of the newspaper?

DR. POTTLE: I have pleasure in tabling any copy of the paper from which I quoted.

Giving Notice of Question

(72) MR. BROWNE—To ask the Honourable the Attorney General to lay on the table of the House the following information:

1. Are any members of the Government Directors of Companies doing business with the Government? Are any members of the Government Directors of Companies which have received loans from or have had loans guaranteed by the Government? Are any members of the Government Directors of Companies which have been established by Government funds?

2. Give the names of any such Directors with the names of the Companies of which they are Directors, together with salary, if any, paid in each case.

HON. L. R. CURTIS (Attorney General): I am wondering just what information the honourable member is looking for? "Are any members of the Government Directors of Companies doing business with the Government?" To get the answer to that, I would have to get in touch with the Minister of Supply. There is no date mentioned.

MR. BROWNE: I wonder if I could make an observation? I could drop that part?

MR. CURTIS: That is helpful. In the second part there, I would like to know if the honourable member wishes to know about Government Directors or is he interested in Directors who have financial interest in the Companies. I wonder what is meant by the second part. I myself am a Director of Bowaters for instance.

MR. SPEAKER: The last answer given was that the question was in the course of preparation.

Orders of the Day

Second Reading of Bill, "An Act to Establish the Newfoundland Fisheries Development Authority."

MR. SPEAKER: Second reading was moved by the Honourable Minister of Fisheries and Co-operatives, and the debate adjourned until today.

MR. M. HOLLETT (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, in rising to speak to the principle of the Bill, I believe I ought to express to the Honourable Minister who introduced the Bill my appreciation of the manner in which he delivered his address on presentation of the Bill. I am of course not offending anybody on the opposite side of the House if I say that the Honourable Minister of Fisheries is a most excellent speaker and debater. Although I have not heard him in debates I am sure he is probably tops on the opposite side of the House. At any rate I do congratulate him because he gave the introduction to this most important Bill in a very able and efficient manner.

Sir, I have to admit right at first that I find some difficulty in arriving at just what is the principle involved in this Bill. I have read it again and again. Whilst I remember hearing some opinion expressed on the Government side of the House as to my ability to read any Bill right, I do confess quite openly here that it is not easy to pin down any one prinprinciple in this Bill. There are several principles involved, and I propose, Mr. Speaker, to deal with them as they come up.

The title of the Bill: "An Act to Establish the Newfoundland Fisheries Development Authority" on the face of it is a quite innocent, quite an excellent thing for any government to do—to set up an authority or a board or a committee, as the case might be, to be known as the Newfoundland Fisheries Development Authority. I believe we have had a Newfoundland Fisheries Committee before. We have now advanced—to the stage of an "Authority." I read the newspaper reports of the Honourable Minister's speech of yesterday, and I do not say it reported the exact words which were used by the Minister. I note that the newspaper did say that some of the work, which the Authority is already engaged on, was outlined by the Minister. That included responsibility for such projects as the construction of salt and fresh fish processing plants at Quidi Vuit, Seldom, LaScie, Valleyfield, Bay de Verde, Joe Batt's Arm, Twillingate and Change Islands. In most of these places development will be along community lines involving the construction of homes, schools, roads, water facilities and electric power plants. I must confess I found no mention of that in the Bill whatever. It may be that it is possible to include that in this Bill, but there is certainly nothing in this Bill that we have to indicate that the Authority is, as a matter of fact already engaged on it. While I am on that point, Mr. Speaker, I would like to point out that we are asked to support this Bill to set up a fishery development authority which, according to the Honourable Minister yesterday, has been working ever since last June. They have been spending money ever since last June. I take it they have made considerable progress along the line of development which we, as a Legislature, know nothing at all about. As far as I can see Mr. Speaker, it sets up a Crown Corporation. It is an agent of the Government and is given the power to make contracts either in its own name or in the Name of the Crown, and can appoint its own agents. In one sense it is not a creature of this Legislature at all. It is a creature of the Lieutenant-Governor in Council set up last June and operating ever since. So that it is not really a creature of this House, and it is entirely irrelevant whether we on this side of the House or on the other side of the House support the principle involved here or not because it is an established fact. It is a fact accomplished. This three-man Authority is already involved on the work which it is supposed to do. I believe, Sir, that the Government has already, as far as I can gather from the Act, has already entered into an agreement with each of the three men on this Authority. Here again, although we don't know anything about the agreement, we are asked to sanction and agree to the principle of this Bill. We have been told by rumour (and only by rumour) that each of these three men is to get more or less fabulous sums, in the eyes of the Opposition although it is not so, I take it, in the eyes of the Government. We have been told, by rumour, that they are to get twenty or twenty-five thousand dollars a year each. I don't know whether that is correct or not, Sir. I must surmise that it is pretty nearly correct because it has already been stated here in this House and has not been contradicted.
We are also told that according to the agreement made apparently last June, that three-man Authority was given a contract which would last for a period of ten years. That they would get somewhere between twenty-two and twenty-five thousand dollars each for ten years, and at the end of ten years each will be eligible to a pension of five thousand dollars. That is the rumour, and also, if any of the Authority should die in the interval then their dependents would also receive a pension. Now how true exactly that rumour is I cannot say. Therefore I am not in a position to say whether or not I would agree that these men should get that amount or whether they should not. In one sense it is none of my business as to what the Government might pay, but on the other hand it is the people's business.

I note too that by regulation the Government requires us to vote authority for both these things they have already sanctioned, and having paid the salaries they are now asking us to sanction that. We were told yesterday by the Honourable Minister of Fisheries that the compensation of these three individuals should be commensurate with the magnitude of the task which has been set up. I think that is a very good statement and a correct principle on which to work. I think it would be a grand thing if everybody got paid according to the magnitude of the task being set. He also stated, Mr. Speaker, that the proposal of the Government was to make these three men economically secure. That is to say that they would have no more worries about their own affairs, their financial affairs, so that they would be able to devote full time to the task before them. That may or may not be a good policy. I doubt very much whether a definite surety of economic security is good for any man or any creature on this earth. I do not think it is the best thing for any of us that we should get the feeling that we are absolutely economically secure. I don't believe anybody could get the best work out of us if that were so. Take these three men: Supposing it is true they are getting twenty-five thousand dollars a year, that they will get a pension of five thousand dollars, I wonder is that a good thing? Is there anything to indicate just how far these men may or may not go with regard to performing this task which they have, and how far they may not go before they would have to forfeit such economic security?

I was speaking a moment ago about the task which was set me. I would like to ask before I go on to that, Mr. Speaker, (I made a note here Mr. Speaker) if this Newfoundland Fisheries Development Committee is a recommendation of the Walsh Report or is it a suggestion of the Federal Department of Fisheries? There has been no indication either in the Bill or in the Minister's introduction yesterday as to whether it was something which was laid down by the Fisheries Commission under Sir Albert Walsh or whether it was a recommendation which had been passed along from the Federal Department of Fisheries on account of the fact that the Federal Government was to co-operate with the Provincial Government in carrying out the work which Sir Albert Walsh had recommended. I don't know whether the Government is prepared to answer these two questions or not.

MR. SMALLWOOD: May I answer them? Regardless of who recommended or did not recommend the idea to the Government the fact is that the Government now recommends it to the House, and does it as its own proposal, and stands or falls on it.

MR. HOLLETT: I thank the Premier, Mr. Speaker, for his information. I can now dismiss these two questions from my mind. We must remember though, Sir, that the Walsh Report was set up and worked for two years. As I speak I am looking straight at Sir Albert Walsh on the opposite wall. This committee was set up and worked for two years, at a cost of many, many thousands of dollars. I don't know if we ever got the cost, but it is somewhere in the vicinity of $75,000, or something like that. I just forget the amount, at any rate many thousands of dollars. They made recommendations relative to the duties, or if I may not call it duties, to what they proposed the Provincial Government should do and the Federal Government should do and what industry should do, and what the fisherman should do. Now I find here an act is being brought in which has nothing whatsoever to do with any recommendations which were made by the Walsh Report. We all remember the Walsh Report and what its recommendations are. I remember trying to give a synopsis of them during the Speech from the Throne, but I was interrupted by somebody on the opposite side of the House. But I remember well what these recommendations were, and now we have here the task as outlined by this Bill, this authority of three men, Young, Dustan and Winsor, to examine into all proposals and suggestions touching the development of the fisheries and put them into effect, if the Government approves. They are to undertake research and investigations and to recommend projects for the development of the fisheries, again if the Government approves. They are to investigate existing and potential markets.

Now, Mr. Speaker, on that one: I think I must inject here that although that Authority must do these things, that has already been laid down as the particular obligation of the Federal Department of Fisheries, and the Federal Department of Trade and Commerce. I see no reason why there should be any dislocation of it, although there is nothing wrong with everybody, of course, trying to improve the markets and investigating the existence of potential ones.

They have to enforce any agreements here, by the Government or anybody, for the fisheries. I take it that it has to do with all the loans which have been made relative to the development of fisheries. I think that is the impression I got yesterday. I would say that would be a task which at any rate that two members of this committee would find they knew something about. I remember we were told yesterday that Mr. Dustan was a bank manager of the Bank of Nova Scotia and went from that to, I believe it was, the Bonavista Cold Storage. As you look at this list of loans which are to be taken over by that Authority and handled by them I find the Bonavista Fish Meals and Oils $40,500 as outstanding as the 27 February 1954, and I find Bonavista Cold Storage Limited $1,018,000 as the amount owed the Government by way of loans. I remind myself that Mr. Dustan was at one time a member of both these, at least of the Bonavista Fish Meals and Oils, and no doubt participated in the effort which he derived from such an expenditure of such a large amount of money loaned by the Government to that firm.

With regard to Mr. Young, we are told that he for many years worked with Messrs. Crosbie and Co., and as I look down the list I find that there are companies mentioned here which received loans upwards of six hundred and fifty thousand dollars, which were closely allied to Crosbie & Co. and which, no doubt, Mr. Young had something to do with in the administration thereof. So that all these loans here, and I total nine million in one place and seven million dollars in another, down through the years, all these are to be handed over for administration, for collection and paying off, by these very people who only a brief while ago were attached to the corporations to which these loans had been made. That is neither here nor there. I just pointed it out, Sir, in order to show that these two at least are well qualified to deal with the situation when it comes to getting these particular loans back to the Government, and that they would know how to proceed.

They are to enforce all agreements heretofore made by the Government to anybody for modernization of the fisheries. Now these things, Sir, they "Shall" do. They are mandatory. They have to do them. In addition, at the request of the Minister, they will attempt to co-ordinate the work of all Government Departments in so far as they relate to any agreement between the two Governments for fishery development, and on their own initiative they may make direct cash loans and guarantee loans to any person to build or establish processing plants or to acquire vessels or equipment. That, I believe comes under Section 14. Yes. Assist persons, directly or indirectly, with financial aid or otherwise in the establishment of processing plants and in the acquisition of vessels, equipment and installations that will contribute to the development of the fisheries. I find, Sir, they might do that on their own initiative. Apparently they do not even have to consult the Minister and do not have to consult the Lieutenant-Governor in Council, and even more important, Sir, I take it they never mention it to the Legislature at all until a year hence, as the case might be.

Now, Sir, that is one of the principles at any rate, involved in this Bill, to which we of the Opposition take a serious objection. The Authority may—these three men—may assist persons directly or indirectly with financial aid or otherwise in the establishment of processing plants and the acquisition of vessels, equipment and installations that will contribute to the development of the fisheries. I think, Mr. Speaker, you will see this importance as we proceed further into the heart of this Bill. Under that particular section they can do other things, of course—assist the operations of such enterprises of an exploratory or experimental character, and do other things there, a dozen other things, Sir, which are basically dependent upon that first one which I mentioned.

There is another significant thing there, Sir, which gives them the power, from time to time, to grant funds for the carrying out of the work—at least it gives the Government the power. In other words we are supposed here and now to give the Government the power from time to time to grant funds to these three men for the carrying out of work assigned to the Authority or which it may undertake on its own initiative.
I take it that authority, if granted here now by this legislation will go on for the period of ten years at least, if not for longer. I fail to see how the Government could expect the Legislature to grant that authority here now. We have no idea as to the amount which this three-man Authority may need to carry out the most important task which has been assigned to it. We have no idea as to what imagination they may have with regard to the effort being made so far on our fishermen—and, Sir, I will point out that we have men in this country today with imagination such as, I think, we have never had before. These people have imagined all sorts of things, imagined that men were coming in here with their millions and millions of dollars to invest in our great natural resources. These men may have the same idea in their minds, and they may step out and make us liable for large amounts of money, if we here and now vote the Government authority to carry out the work assigned to these men in that Development Authority.

Here, Sir, is another altogether new principle—the Authority may, with the approval of the Government (and that is not the Legislature) the approval of the Government—the Lieutenant-Governor in Council, borrow up to twenty-five million dollars to carry out their work. And is not this silly, Sir, the Minister of Finance, acting for the Government is empowered to pay off any loans of the Authority, and to guarantee as to principle and interest the repayment of any moneys borrowed by the Authority up to an amount of twenty-five million dollars. As I have pointed out, Sir, this is exactly the kind of power which we were asked to and did vote for NALCO: and Sir William Stephenson and NALCO we remember, Sir, how unattractive they found that to be to the investing public of North America. We remember how NALCO and Sir William Stephenson found it absolutely impossible to borrow even ten million dollars—and yet we are asked here to give this three-man board, this three-man Authority, Messrs. Dustan, Young and Winsor, authority to expend that amount and to borrow that amount from the Government, as the case might be, or from any other source. Not only can they borrow it from the Government but they can borrow it from any other source, up to twenty-five million dollars, and the Government is in duty bound to guarantee the payment thereof, and pay back the loan. I say, Sir, that is something, even though it is for the fisheries, on which I think we ought to have some sort of assurance, and some protection with regard to such matters. Even for the fisheries I don't believe even our most ardent fishermen would expect this House to abdicate its powers, its duties to the people of this country as a whole. I don't believe they would expect this House to give any three men in this country that amount of authority with regard to finances, which after all are taken from the fishermen's pockets and from everybody else's pockets.

MR. SPEAKER: May I interrupt the honourable gentleman here? I am not referring to his last comment, which is perfectly in order. I must admit it is difficult to discuss the principle of such a Bill as this without going into many matters, but it does seem to me that the honourable gentleman is anticipating the committee state. He is reading clause after clause through. He is not giving the numbers but he is reading the clauses and commenting thereon, but particularly these clauses which the honourable member himself yesterday identified with money clauses, and which the House agreed would be considered in the proper manner. Surely he is anticipating the debate of tomorrow on these clauses. I admit the point is a fine one, but I think I should suggest that point to the honourable member.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, I shall endeavour not to make the error again. I may say I have jotted down in my own words the contents of each section, and I am not reading the Bill, although it might appear that way, I must admit that, Sir.

In addition, of course, then the Authority is given the right to expropriate land, buildings, stages, in fact anything they want. They can expropriate, but actually I have no serious objections to that.

Now, Sir, as I said in the first instance, I find difficulty in pinning down the principle of this Bill—if the principle is to assist our fishermen to make a decent living then of course we are all for it, we are all for it. But I cannot see that there is anything in particular in this Bill which would indicate that that is the principal reason for this Bill. Although the Minister told us yesterday, Sir, that this Authority would supervise and superintend certain developments which are to take place at LaScie and Merasheen and Twillingate and other places, there is nothing in this Bill whatsoever to indicate that that is the principle. I have read at least extracts from the sections and it is very difficult to say just what the principle involved is, except, as I said, there are other principles apart from the main one involved, to which we on this side of the House find great difficulty in giving our support.

Would it be that the Government's aim is nationalization of the fishery? If it is the Government's intention to nationalize the fisheries, why did they not come out and say, "This is a nationalization Bill, we are going to take over the fisheries, we are going to run them"? Because, as I read this Bill, it is tantamount to nationalization.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Trash!

MR. HOLLETT: It is not trash. I went to the Black Book and I find this:

"The Department of Fisheries has legislative jurisdiction over all the fisheries of Canada. In the administrative field the Department has administrative authority over the public fisheries of the Maritime Provinces and British Columbia, where for administration purposes the Eastern and Western Fisheries Divisions are established.

The Eastern Division is in charge of a Chief Supervisor of Fisheries and is divided into three regions: Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island, each of which is in charge of a Regional Supervisor of Fisheries. Each region is divided into units as follows: Nova Scotia 8, New Brunswick 5 and Prince Edward Island 2. Each unit is in charge of a Senior Inspector and according to the intensity and importance of the fisheries of each unit a number of Junior Inspectors are employed. In many units, part time fishery guardians or wardens are employed for protective purposes.

Protection of the Eastern Sea Fisheries is maintained by six coastal patrol boats owned by the Department and 18 boats chartered for seasonal operation. The Department also operates a fisheries protection cruiser.

The fish culture branch provides a field service which operates 30 hatcheries, 6 rearing stations and 6 salmon retaining ponds in the Eastern Division. The object of this work is to maintain and increase fish stocks. Conservation is also achieved by regulatory action.

The Fisheries Research Board carries out investigations of practical and economic problems connected with marine and fresh water fisheries. It co-operates with other branches of the Department in providing advice and instruction to the fishing industry regarding the most efficient methods of fish handling and processing. Adult education in this connection is carried out at several centres.

The Board operates 7 scientific stations, 4 of which are located in Eastern Canada. The latter are: the Atlantic Biological Station at St. Andrews, N.B.; the fisheries Experimental Station at Halifax and Grand River P.Q.; and the Atlantic Salmon Investigation Station. There is a trained staff of scientists also employed. The Board is associated with other scientific committees such as the Joint Canadian Committee on Oceanography and the Canadian Committee on Food Preservation. The Board is also responsible for the direction and execution of the work of the Atlantic Herring Investigation Committee. This Committee was created in 1944 as a result of negotiations with Newfoundland and with the provinces of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island and Quebec.

The Province of Quebec is the only Province administering its own sea fisheries.”

The point I want to bring out is that once the fish is caught it comes under the legislative jurisdiction of the Government of Canada.

Section 9 of the Newfoundland Fisheries Development Authority says, the Chairman is the chief executive officer of the Authority, is charged with the general direction, supervision and control of the business of the Authority and has such other powers as may be conferred upon him by regulations. I say that this Fishery Authority is merely a duplication of effort—or triplication of effort. I see it will mean the setting up of another Department where hundreds of people will have to be employed and many other things will have to be attended to before it will go about its business.

Of course, if the principle of this Bill is that after five years of hedging by the administration, they have decided to do something about the fisheries, we will support them. We will give them credit for good intentions. If the principle of this Bill is to take the fisheries out of the hands of incompetents, the principle would be a good one. We have to admit that we have a very large staff in the Fisheries Department, a large staff. Some are being paid $15,000 a year at one time. I do not think they get that much now. These men were hired to do the very job that is now being assigned the Fishing Authority. Our fishermen have waited a long time for this. There were 28,000 fishermen when we came into union with Canada; today there are 10,000. They have waited for the promised land which was guaranteed us way back in pre-Confederation days. I do admit that in certain places it is im-important and high time that something was done to take control of the fisheries away from what I shall call “blood-thirsty” Commission Agents—blood-thirsty suckers that I have known. There was a time they were so numerous that they sucked each other’s blood; they were bloated blood suckers. Later on a certain number were given privileges and consequently they grew rich overnight.

I am wondering if the idea behind the Bill is to replace NAFEL. That may be one of the ideas to do with marketing. They are given the right to investigate existing and potential markets and marketing methods for products of the fisheries, and where necessary undertake such research promotion as it deems desirable to enlarge, improve and increase the markets available to those products. That, surely is one of the duties of NAFEL and is now given to this Fisheries authority. I do not know if I can go into the general discussion of fisheries in Newfoundland.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Why not?

MR. HOLLETT: I was born to fisheries, Mr. Speaker. I fished as a youngster, I fished when I should have been in school. We all fished—fathers and sons. Our mothers and sisters worked on the flakes. They all worked hard and I say now they were not too lazy to work. I say our people have never been too lazy to work. They could not have lived if they had been. Everybody worked hard. We put the fish out on the flakes in the early morning, turned it at 11 o’clock, turned it again at 3 o’clock and made it up in the evening. I was born in a fishing settlement; like a good many of my friends in this House. I was born in a place where there was a population of 96 families. Today I have to report to you not one family remains there and a study of that one community could give anyone the history of our fisheries. There are other places along that coast where the history of fisheries during the past 40 or 50 years could have been written. The people caught fish; they made fish; they deserved a living. When we were young not one man in the settlement in which I lived took Government relief. There was one extra poor man there but rather than allow that man to take the dole, the neighbours got together and gave him enough for the winter. They did not look for loans. They were cooperative too. If John Jones wanted to get married the neighbours helped him get the lumber for his house, helped him build it. He did not have hot and cold water, I grant you, but he had a nice comfortable home. The people all helped. They had private initiative and they worked hard. I am wondering now how far any Government of any country should go with regard to assisting people. I do know the fisheries are in a bad state and I do know that in some communities it would be better for the fishermen to take up their lines and go to some place which would give them a better opportunity to live.

I am wondering too if one of the ills of fishery failure is that the Government has been helping certain individuals more than others.

Let us look at this list of loans again—Alberto Fisheries Ltd.; Andrews Labrador Fisheries Ltd.; Arctic Fishery Products; Fishery Products Ltd.; North Eastern Co-operative Fisheries Ltd.; Bonavista Cold Storage Co. Ltd.; Trepassey Fisheries Ltd.; Gaultois Fisheries Ltd.; Blue Water Shipping Co. Ltd.; Geo. T. Dixon Ltd.;
Lake & Lake Ltd.; etc. Now what possibility is there for John Jones, an enterprising fisherman in places where these firms operate, to compete unless he too can get a loan; he has no incentive to continue. I submit we are on dangerous ground when we give these three men power to make loans and make other decisions with regard to fishery. Would not perhaps their past association with the merchants in question befit them to be trusted to do a better job of sharing the wealth than the Government had done in the past? Would they not perhaps pick out the same few merchants for assistance? I submit that the man who worked hard to make a success of the fishery is of much more value than the man to whom the Government grants a loan. We are on dangerous ground and we are turning away some of the best brains from the fishery. It seems to me that the success or failure of the programme to be carried out by this Bill depends on these three men. I do not question the background of these men. I do not know them well enough. I do know that Mr. Dustan came here with the Bank of Nova Scotia; then he went to Job's, from there he went to Bonavista and was associated with Mr. Russell. He is no longer there. He now heads this Fisheries Authority, I state these facts in order that we may not deceive ourselves. I submit that any man who has to head up this Authority has the biggest problem in the world, that is the rehabilitation of the fisheries. These men might be the best people in the world, but whether these three men are properly fitted to make all plans regarding fisheries is something which time and experience will show. I submit the extreme security of these gentlemen constitutes no safeguard whatsoever, that they will do a good job. I do not know whether the fishermen whom they are supposed to represent have been consulted about this Authority. We all remember in 1950 when the Fisheries Federation was set up. That was hoped to be one of the first steps towards rehabilitation of the fisheries. I wonder if they were consulted about this Fisheries Authority? I want to point out to the fishermen that whatever the system is that is being set up by this Authority, their lives and their future is at stake. No system can be perfect. There will always be sharks in the ocean just as there are pests in the soil. We belong to a system of free enterprise, or should I say "controlled free enterprise," where every man with the necessary intestinal fortitude worked as hard as his neighbour. That is the system which they have tried in the past. Are we now perchance going to give up this system for planned economy by the Fisheries Authority?

I am wondering if this planned economy in LaScie is in the best interest of the people. If you take away these men's spirit of independence, it will ruin the country and these men's lives. Give them the initiative and the ability to carry on as they see fit. If there are regulations to be made about curing, processing and marketing, very well. Our fishermen can catch more fish than they can sell. Our big job is to try and sell it for them. Therein lies the work of this Government, the Federal Government and every agency which has been set up.

I spoke to a man last night who told me that between himself and his two boys, they had caught 300 quintals of fish. He claimed that although the price was all right, he could not live on it. Why?
The cost of outfitting—I think I said here a short time ago, I cited that rubber clothes were sold here in St. John's for certain prices and around the bay for another, and sold at Bonavista for a much less price. These are things which the Government department should inquire into. I submit, Sir, that rather than a planned economy there should be some system of control, a half-way road between the two, the styles of living; that we still have in North America and the style they have behind the iron curtain. There their lives are planned, everything is planned for them. They have no private initiative, and if they have they are not allowed to exercise it. But on this side of the iron curtain are different, and nothing should be done in this little country of ours which would cramp the style of men who were brought up on private enterprises. Oh, I know the Premier will say how miserably they were brought up. That is true. Their lives were hard. They fished hard, worked hard, but they were honest.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Honest but hungry!

MR. HOLLETT: I did not get that. I have this to say on that remark, Sir—during my boyhood days, as a fisherman and mixing with fishermen, and mixing with fisherboys until I went away from home, I never saw, that I know of, a hungry child. I never saw a child who did not have enough clothes to wear. Now he might have the seat out of his pants, but most of us boys had these torn out. We had enough to eat, we did not have the kind of grub, and I will say it again "Grub"—we had in those days, food, good honest food from gardens and from the sea, and we did not have it in cans, unless we put it in bottles ourselves. But we were not hungry and our parents were not. But I do remember days when as a magistrate in Burin, acting as a relieving officer also, though Burin was one of the most propersous places in this country that there was sixty per cent on dole. It went that way, Sir, over a period of two years. Prior to that I don't suppose there was a hundred and fifty dollars spent altogether on Burin Peninsula in dole. These were the days of depression, Sir. These were the days when they had a depression in Canada, when they had people lined up on the streets for hundreds of yards in the United States, and all over the world. Sir, miners went hungry, farmers went hungry, clerks went hungry and everybody was hungry in those days. To ascribe that condition alone to Newfoundland is unfair. It is a greater libel, on this country, Sir, than any libel, which has been instigated herein this House this evening. Our people were not starved rats, they were men, and they produced men. True they did not have fine foods, oh no, they had a rough diet. That is in my day, which I am speaking of. But there were days, Sir, when people were hungry, and as I pointed out, they were hungry all over the world in those days, and you will also find hungry people today even in England, and I dare say in New York. But as a population, Sir, our people were not starved by any means. Yes, they had their hard times like every people in the world, and they are going to have them again, Sir. Don't let anyone run away with the idea that we are at last and forever more out of such danger. Oh no, we will be hungry again. The peoples of this world will be hungry again, and we need not fool ourselves on that particular point.
Unfortunately for our fishermen, Sir, very often they seem to be in a sort of a squeeze-pinch, a vise controlled by the thumbs of selfishness of people, of people who want to get rich quickly, e.g. certain commission agents which I knew even in my own boyhood days and squeezed and squeezed and made their pound of flesh, and so later became millionaires, some of them, in this country. You will find that in every country. That is something for the Government to occupy itself with, get after some of these.

I want also to raise this point, Sir: This Bill will set up a host of civil servants—a host of civil servants—and as you increase the number of civil servants and or paid Government services in any country you increase the cost of living. If you increase the cost of living you increase the cost of production whether it be fish or potatoes, and if you increase the cost of production, Sir, you price yourself out of the markets in Portugal or Spain or Italy or what not. I am not against this setting up of an Authority, Sir. But as it is outlined between the pages of this Bill it is going to set up more overhead which the Government will have to pay for, in addition to the twenty-five million dollars which these people are allowed to borrow. There is no doubt in my mind, Sir, that this is a central planning scheme. The Authority is to act as an economic dictator to my mind, in any area where they set up shop. That is to say in so far as the fishery is concerned. If they can do so in so far as the fishery is concerned in these communities they will do so in regard to anything else. They can, according to the Act, and as I see it, they will survey all the whole resources of the fishery both human and material in any community, and they will decide how those should be used, for the people and what should be done with the product. As I pointed out Soviet Russia is doing exactly that. Now understand, mind you, I am not accusing the Government of any Soviet or Communistic tendencies whatever. I am pointing out the trend.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Why not?

MR. HOLLETT: I have no evidence to prove it except this Bill, and I am not going to ascribe it. If the Honourable the Premier wishes to be ascribed as a Communist, it is his affair and not mine, Sir.

I say this Authority will have to decide where to put each plant, by whom the plant is owned or by whom the fish or drier, and what method of production is to be used, how many houses are to be built, the type of houses and where, and many such like questions. I perceive that the honourable the Premier is getting restless.

MR. SMALLWOOD: Not at all—if I had my pyjamas on I could have a nap.

MR. SPEAKER: Order: I don't think personal remarks are in order.

MR. HOLLETT: Has he any pyjamas, Mr. Speaker? He raised the pyjamas, I will lower them.

MR. SPEAKER: Order.

MR. HOLLETT: It is all very well, Mr. Speaker, they listen and lie in their pyjamas dreaming of the day in Newfoundland, but they must leave their pyjamas at home, they can't have them in this House.

MR. SPEAKER: Order. The debate is out of order—will the honourable member continue the debate.
MR. HOLLETT: Sir, I must insist the Honourable the Premier does not snore in his slumber while I make this announcement. While I will admit to the Honourable Minister of Fisheries that something needs to be done, something has to be done, something has to be done right quickly, but that is not being done—something has to be done immediately—and that is where I would like to see some action on the part of the Government. I will give the Government credit for what they did last year in the matter of the $1.50 per quintal. Leaving politics out of it altogether, I think that was the work of a man, and I congratulate the man who did it. It was needed and nineteen-tenths of our fishermen on the coast could not have survived without it—I congratulate the Government on that. Indeed I will point out, Sir, the twenty-five million dollars which this Authority will raise would do the same thing for all our fishermen who fished in Newfoundland for the next twenty-five years. I wonder if that Authority will spend it so wisely as that $1.50 per quintal was spent? That is a thought for the consideration of the Government.

We are asked to agree with this agreement drawn up between the Government and these three men on that Authority. We don't know what the agreements are. We know nothing about it at all. I am sure, Sir, I don't feel like subscribing to the principle of allowing the Lieutenant-Governor in Council to either loan or borrow unlimited amounts even for the fishery.

I don't wish to take up any more time, Sir, particularly as the Honourable the Premier on the opposite side of the House is so drowsy and his eyelids are drooping. I want to quote, Sir, if I may, an editorial from "Life Magazine," speaking on industry generally throughout the world, and in which the writer says; "In Italy, for example, the economic strait jacket designed by Mussolini still loads payrolls with unnecessary and underpaid workers, while the Government on private monopolies control everything from matches to bananas. But an increasing number of Italians are getting hep to what's wrong and are trying to do something about it. They were given new heart and direction by a recent speech of Don Luigi Sturzo, the founder of the Christian Democratic Party, who launched a basic attack on the whole philosophy of statism and called for new freedom, new private responsibility, new incentives, a new acceptance of risk. This speech, said Rome's II Tempo, is destined to become one of the most important and precious pages in the annals of the Italian Parliament." Maybe it will; as Don Luigi himself warned, "the time will come when we will all be civil servants, a host of irresponsible people."

Now that is no reflection on civil servants. If we were all civil servants then certainly we would be a host of irresponsible people. There are various other things, Sir, I could refer to. I think the other day when I referred to fishery places somebody did not know what I was quoting from at that time—but I can tell them now—

MR. SMALLWOOD: Mr. Speaker, to a point of order: I don't think the honourable gentleman is permitted to refer to a debate which took place earlier in the present session and which has been concluded.
MR. SPEAKER: The point is well taken. I may say again members speaking to a motion may not refer to something said in the House in a previous debate in the same session.

MR. HOLLETT: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

MR. SPEAKER: The honourable member still has the floor.

MR. HOLLETT: Mr. Speaker, we have already assured the House and the Government that we are most anxious to assist in every way and to help in anything relating to the fisheries. It is our bounden duty to refer to these things in this Bill which we do not like. I have referred to them, and I take it my colleagues will refer to them. I do not see it as the panacea for all of the ills attached to the fishery. I do not see it in this Fishery Authority which was not recommended by the Walsh Report, and we have already been told it was not recommended by the Federal Government, but is the brain-child of this Government, I take it, of the Minister of Fisheries. Whether that brain-child will grow into a man who has the experience and will be the champion of our fishermen is something that I could not say. I do say that as an Opposition we will do nothing to debar the Government from getting the best out of this committee, and out of any effort they make for our fisheries, because undoubtedly, Sir, we have to do something immediately. We have to do something more than just build a plant in LaScie or Mersheen or Twillingate or what not. We have to do more than that. As I pointed out before, in the last five years our fishing population, that is per fishermen, has gone from twenty-five thousand down to about ten thousand according to figures given by the Federation of Fishermen. Is there any reason to see, Sir, why they would not go lower than that if something is not done, something almost in the nature of that done by the Premier and the Government when they gave that $1.50 a quintal last year. They saw the need and gave the $1.50. I congratulate them on it. I think it was both wise and necessary. I don't think as a policy it would be good. Sir, we are most anxious to help, but there are principles in this Bill we object to, and we shall probably have to object to them again in Committee of the Whole. Apart from these objectionable things, we give the Government our blessing in trying to carry out and implement services such as in most of this particular Bill. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

MR. FOGWILL: Mr. Speaker, I would like to congratulate the Honourable Minister of Fisheries and Cooperatives on the able way he explained and went into the details of this, a new Bill, setting up a fishery Authority. In his usual manner, Sir, he did make some very good remarks with respect to this proposal, and in his usual grand manner. It is always a privilege and a pleasure to me to listen to the phraseology of the Honourable Minister. Although at the same time, Sir, I believe I did detect a note of caution or anxiety back of his words, and perhaps he may be a little alarmed at what the Government is proposing to do. I have listened to the Honourable Minister on many occasions, and on yesterday, Sir, his remarks were not as positive as remarks he has made in this House on many occasions before.

Now, Sir, in this country of Newfoundland we have been dependent upon the fisheries so much during the lifetime of the people of this island, and perhaps it might be in order if for a moment I say something about the people who earned their living at the fisheries. All throughout the past two or more centuries the people of Newfoundland have made a living, sometimes good, sometimes bad of course. People have made fortunes and people have lost fortunes in the fishery. People have had full bellies and empty bellies, that is those engaged actively, in the catching of fish. That, Mr. Speaker, is nothing new to any person who earns a living whether it be in the fisheries or those engaged in manufacturing, on the farms or any place where people are working for wages or working for a living.

If you go out throughout this island (I have not travelled very much. We of the Opposition have been accused of not being conversant with many of the settlements and villages where people fish) I have visited some, and I will say this; no matter where you go, what village or settlement you visit, you will find citizens who are honest, industrious, and you will find clean towns and villages and settlements, and above all, Sir, you will find the evidence of the Christianity of these people in their communities. These splendid churches they have erected throughout all the years in all of these villages and settlements, where these people who work at the fisheries reside. I know, Mr. Speaker, it has taken a lot of effort and hard work, much hard work, by these people to build these villages and settlements into what they are today—clean, decent, well-planned, good houses, clean houses, clean children and good law-abiding citizens. All of that, Mr. Speaker, has come from what they earned in the fisheries all through the years whether the fisheries were good or bad. They managed all through the years to set something by to build into the community in which they lived, something which I believe commands the respect of every person in this House or any person in this island or of the world. That is the character of the people, Mr. Speaker, which this Bill is proposing to deal with.

Now, Sir, all throughout the years, for this last ninety or a hundred years the total catch of salt cod in Newfoundland has been practically a million quintals which has been sold yearly. In good times it has been sold at good prices and in bad times, of course, returns were not so good. But there is one thing we must remember Mr. Speaker, and it is this: During the past fifty or sixty years the diet of the people who formerly ate much fish foods has been changing. This has come about with the advent of large cattle ranches in the South Americas, the United States and Canada and other places. I believe most members will agree with me that there has been a change brought about in the diet of people who formerly did eat more fish than they do today. Because ninety years ago, Sir, when we were one of the biggest salt fish producing centres in the world we could sell that million quintals at that time. At that time the people who purchased it had the money to pay for it. The populations of these places where they purchased so much of our fish foods have grown enormously, but you can see the pitiful amount of fish we have exported and what has been caught and exported by other countries shows that the consumption of fish foods has not increased comparatively with the increase in population of the people who formerly ate fish foods. I think, Sir, that is one factor which has some effect upon the marketing of our fish products.

Now, Sir, the Joint Committee on Fishery Development has made a very exhaustive investigation into all phases of the fishing industry, and their recommendations of course, Sir, are opinions. Whether or not what the Government proposes to do today is based entirely upon the opinions expressed by that Committee I do not know. But I believe the Premier pointed out that this proposal is a proposal from the Government and upon which the Government will stand or fall. Mr. Speaker, if you go into any of the large stores in St. John's and elsewhere I expect, in other towns, you will find fish products from many other countries on sale. You can find on sale here in the city fish products from Norway and Denmark and the United States, and you can find fish products from Canada—from New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and British Columbia. I wonder, why? Why it is that in Newfoundland where we catch so much fish and where we are so dependent upon the fisheries and so close to one of the greatest fishing ledges in the whole world that we have fish from other lands coming in here and underselling our own? I would like to point out just one instance in respect to one phase of the Newfoundland fisheries. We have on sale in St. John's, Sir, small cans of Newfoundland lobster, two and one-half ounce tins of lobster selling at 68c. a tin. Now, Sir, gold may be where I find it, and probably you may find gold in these cans. That is at the rate of 25c. an ounce, and if you want to buy it by small cans you pay over four dollars a pound for it. I understand, Sir, that the fishermen concerned, these people in the lobster business get anywhere from 25c. to 30c. a pound or 25c. a pound for lobster. But if you want to put it in two and a half ounce tins you pay over four dollars a pound for it.

Mr. Speaker, it is proposed, I believe, as pointed out by the Minister when he introduced this Bill yesterday, that most of the work which the Fishery Authority will do or proposes to do at once will be confined to the Northeast Coast. I would like to point out, Sir, that on the Northeast Coast the fishery season is limited. I don't know, I am not a fisherman and don't know how long the season is, but on the southern part of the coast it probably may run into seven months, and as we go north the fishing season becomes shorter, and probably at the tip of the island it may be limited to only perhaps four and or five months. If it is proposed, Sir, to spend twenty-five million dollars or a proportion of twenty-five million dollars in building plants, artificial dryers, cold storages and bait depots in those areas, I would like to ask, Sir, what are the people going to do when they stop fishing in the fall, in September or October, or at the latest in November? What are these people going to do in the meantime? They possibly may be in the same position as they are now, because the building of these facilities, Sir, is going to add an added burden to the cost of processing of fish.

I would like to point out here, Sir, one or two things which may be of interest, in respect of fishing supplies. I did not look up any items, but the most important item, I think, in respect to fishery supplies would be salt.

In 1935 the price of salt which cost the importer $2.50 a ton, had increased in 1945 to $7.90 a ton. In 1946 it was $9 a ton and in 1947 $9.01, and according to Mr. Abbott of the Newfoundland Federation of Fisheries, prices charged the fishermen were going up still faster and by the 1953 fishing season had reached an average level of over $7 a hogshead.

For the fiscal year ending 1935, our total exports were $27,229,000 and the total for fisheries exports was $8,289,000—29% of the total exports were products of the fishery. Nine years later, the total exports for fish were 40%. In 1944 and 1945 the percentage was 41%; in 1947 and 1948, the percentage was 37%. It is difficult to get the figures for later years because we have no Customs Returns now.

No matter what the Government does with regard to the fishing industry, I believe the Government, as well as the Opposition, must realize that Newfoundland's economy is vulnerable to what happens outside of this Island. We are still dependent on exports. If we do not export, we will suffer.

I think the most important thing the Government should consider in respect to the fisheries is this: lower cost of supplies and wider and better markets for our fishery products. For those people engaged in the fishery today, if they have to pay high prices for fishery supplies, they will find it difficult to compete or sell their product in places where the economy or standard of living is lower than our own.

There is not much more I am going to say; but it appears to me that this is an attempt at socialization of at least one part of the Island. It appears to me that the Newfoundland Liberals have now caught up with the C.C.F. If they make any attempt to socialize or nationalize the fisheries, they are going to make a great mistake. If they take away these people's independence, I do not think it will be to the good of the community—I think it will be, rather, a great loss.

MR. JANES: Would it be in order for me to adjourn this debate now?

MR. SPEAKER: If there is no further debate, I will put the motion.

MR. BROWNE: The honourable member moved the adjournment; it is necessary to have a seconder.

MR. JANES: I was intending to speak on this Bill tomorrow. I will withdraw the motion.

MR. HOLLETT: Let them all speak on the Bill.

MR. BROWNE: If the honourable member does not wish to go on with the debate and wishes to withdraw the motion, perhaps we can carry on. I can see that the desire of the Premier is to shorten the debate, but it is one that is deserving of expression—one of the most important measures—in fact, the most important measure that has come before us in many sessions. It is important for many reasons—it is important because it deals with industries that affect the lives of thousands of our people. It affects many more than those actually engaged in the fishery.

My honourable colleague has indicated the decline of the fishery over the past forty or fifty years. I believe the decline has gone back further than that. Our marketing picture had never looked too happy. A level of prosperity was reached during the Napoleonic war in the early 1800's and that was not again duplicated until the First World War brought about an all-time record for price levels and general buoyancy in the industry and this rapidly advanced. Then there followed a slump from which many firms and companies failed to recover.

I think we all know enough about Newfoundland to know the changes which have taken place during the last 50 years. We all know of the development of iron ore at Bell Island; the developments which took place at Bishop's Falls, Grand Falls and Corner Brook; the discovery of Buchans. A lot of fishermen or sons of fishermen gave up the fishing industry and went to work in these places. We all know something of the decline in the price for fishery products during the past 50 years. We remember that at the end of the second World War the Commission of Government had to ask the assistance of the British Government in the marketing of our codfish. After Confederation, things did not improve. We went into difficulties in 1949-50 when fish merchants had difficulty in marketing codfish. We know that the Fisheries Price Support Board had to come to Newfoundland's rescue and purchase thousands of quintals of fish which were dumped on farms for fertilizer.

The next year was a tragic year, when the price of fish sank lower than it had during the present generation and people were receiving as low as $3.40 a quintal for fish. It was then thought that an Organization should be set up to protect the fishermen. I do not think that anybody here can argue that the setting up of an Organization or Federation of Fisheries is sufficient unless it has a scheme for the training of new techniques; but I do not think any attempt should be made to change the independent way of life of fishermen. One of the outstanding things about their way of life is the religious, law-abiding upbringing it means to thousands of our people. The men work near their homes, sell the products of their toil, make a living for their families and they lead good clean family lives. If you begin to uproot that, you are on dangerous ground.
